*此中文译本译自意大利语原文

*书名翻译说明：

意大利语原文中，女主角的名字Belcolore，音译为贝尔科洛蕾，意为“漂亮的颜色”。在本书的英文译本中，想要保留这层意思，于是选择用Rosie Hues来表达。Rosie本身有“多彩的，玫瑰花般的”意思，而Hues是颜色的意思。本蒂韦尼亚·德尔·马佐的名字Bentivegna del Mazzo直译过来的意思是“欢迎疯男人”，英文版译为Willy Welcome，Willy是William（威廉姆）的简称，这个名字本身带着一些疯癫和幽默的味道，姓氏则直接选择了Welcome（欢迎）这个词，组成一个完整的名字。

一个叫安德鲁奇奥的佩鲁贾人在那不勒斯的历险故事 [1]

据说，在佩鲁贾有位名叫安德鲁奇奥·迪·皮耶特罗的小伙子，靠贩卖马匹为生。听说那不勒斯的马卖得非常实惠，他便带了五百枚佛罗林金币 [2]，与其他商贩一起奔赴那不勒斯了。这是他第一次离开家。周日晚上，将近晚祷的时候，安德鲁奇奥到达了目的地。他从旅馆老板那里打听到，第二天早晨就会有一个马市。马市上果真有许多马匹，安德鲁奇奥也看中了好几匹，就上前去跟商贩们讨价还价。为了让对方知道自己能买得起这些马，他就像那些土里土气的乡下人一样，每当有人经过，就把金币从包里掏出来显摆一下。但最终价格并没有谈好，所以他连一匹马都没有买到。

在商量价钱时，他的钱袋子吸引了旁边一位西西里女人的注意。虽然她长得漂亮，但是非常轻浮，为了几个小钱就能把自己随随便便交付给一个男人。趁安德鲁奇奥不注意，她偷偷地靠近了这个小伙子，偷瞄了一眼他的钱袋，心想：“要是我有了这些钱，谁还能比得上我呢？”然后，她就悄悄走开了。有一位老妇陪伴在这个女人的身边，她也是西西里人。当看到安德鲁奇奥后，老妇立刻激动地跑过去拥抱这位同乡，完全没有注意到女主人的离开，原来他们早就相识。安德鲁奇奥转脸看到老妇，热情地和她打了招呼，还邀请她有空去自己下榻的旅馆做客。两人没说几句话就各忙各的去了，但是那个女人却躲在一旁，偷听了这两位同乡的对话。

安德鲁奇奥继续逛马市，但始终没有买到马。那女人见他带了那么多钱，又看到他跟自己手下的老妇如此熟络，就仔仔细细地询问老妇关于安德鲁奇奥的情况：他是谁，从哪里来，到这里做什么，他们是如何认识的，一五一十地统统问了个遍，以便设计陷阱把他的钱弄到手。能把他所有的钱都弄到手自然是好，如果不行，能拿到一部分也是不错的。老妇一五一十地回答了主人的问题，事无巨细，就像是安德鲁奇奥本人在回答似的。老妇之所以如此了解安德鲁奇奥，是因为早年在西西里的时候，她曾在他父亲的手下干活，后来又跟他们一起去了佩鲁贾。她还把安德鲁奇奥住的地方以及他来那不勒斯的原因一并告诉了主人。

那女人掌握了安德鲁奇奥所有的信息，连他家人的名字都一清二楚。如此一来，她就能对安德鲁奇奥行骗，满足自己的贪心了。回家以后，她给老妇安排了很多工作，让她忙得一整天都出不了门，根本

没办法找安德鲁奇奥叙旧，她又派手下一名深谙此道的女佣，在晚祷时去安德鲁奇奥住的旅馆找他。

女佣在旅馆门口看到一名男子，便上前打听安德鲁奇奥的情况。碰巧的是，这名男子正是安德鲁奇奥。女佣把他拉到一旁，对他说：“先生，有位美丽的姑娘想见您一面，不知您何时方便。”安德鲁奇奥听了以后，上上下下打量了自己一番，觉得自己的确是个美男子，也许整个那不勒斯再也找不到一位如此英俊的小伙子了。他认为那位姑娘肯定是爱上他了。想到这里，他立刻跟女佣说自己随时都可以过去，便问她那姑娘想什么时候和他交谈。

女佣回答道：“先生，无论您何时过去，她都会在家恭候您。”

安德鲁奇奥一听这话，没有和旅馆打声招呼就对女佣说：“你在前面带路，我现在就跟你去见她。”

那女人家门前的道路叫“魔窟街”，一看这个名字，就知道这条街上的居民有多么“善良”了。但是安德鲁奇奥并不知道真相，也没有半点疑虑。他相信，在这片美好的土地上，他要找的那位姑娘一定天真而纯良。于是他跟着女佣走进了姑娘家。上楼时，女佣对女主人说：“安德鲁奇奥来啦！”安德鲁奇奥也看到了那位在楼梯口等他的姑娘。

她正值青春，身材修长，面容姣好，穿着优雅而得体。看到安德鲁奇奥来了，女人连忙下楼迎接。她张开双臂，紧抱住他的脖子，欲言又止，激动得说不出话来。随后，她潸然泪下，亲吻了他的额头，用近乎沙哑的声音对他说：“我的安德鲁奇奥啊！你知道我有多想见到你吗？！”

安德鲁奇奥没有料到会受到如此热烈的欢迎，一时惊讶不已，只好顺着姑娘的话回应道：“天哪！我也很想见到您！”

于是姑娘走到他身旁，牵起他的手，一句话也没有说，就带他走进了自己的闺房。她的房间里洋溢着玫瑰、橘子花和各种香料散发出的芬芳气息，闺床装饰华丽，床架上挂着许多华美的服装，还有很多精致的摆设。安德鲁奇奥还是第一次看到这些东西，这使他更加相信面前这个女人一定是位出身高贵的小姐。

女人请他坐在床边的一个箱子上，开口说道：“安德鲁奇奥，我知道我的热情和激动肯定吓着你了，毕竟你从未见过面，你也没有听说过我这个人。但听完我接下来给你讲的这件事，你一定会更加惊讶——我可是你的亲姐姐啊！谢天谢地，让我在死前还能亲眼看到我的弟弟！我是多么想见一见我的亲弟弟啊！不然我死也不会瞑目！你好像不知道这回事，那就让我来告诉你吧。我们的父亲皮耶罗曾在巴勒莫住过很长一段时间，我相信你肯定知道这事吧。他和蔼善良，所

以周围的人都十分爱戴他，直到今天也都很惦念他，其中最爱他的那个人就是我的母亲。我的母亲出身高贵，但当时正在守寡。她不顾父兄的威胁恐吓，放弃了自己的尊荣，选择与我们的父亲在一起。后来，我，也就是你面前的这个人，就出生了。再后来，由于突发情况，父亲离开了巴勒莫，去了佩鲁贾。当时我还只是个小女孩，他就抛弃了我们母女二人。我总觉得，他走后就把我们忘得一干二净了！如果他不是我的生身父亲，那我眼看着他如此对待我母亲，一定会怪他冷酷无情！怎奈是他生了我！抛开他辜负了我母亲的一片真情不说，我好歹也是他的女儿啊！更何况我母亲既不是有损他颜面的无知少女，也不是放荡轻浮的风尘女子。她对父亲一片痴心，但却没有看清他的本来面目，就把自己的一切都托付给他了。可是这换回了什么呢？往事说起来容易，但却很难挽回，何况事情已经这样了。他在巴勒莫抛弃我们时，我年龄还小，后来我慢慢长成了现在的模样。我的母亲毕竟是贵族出身，所以把我嫁给了杰尔真蒂 [3] 那边一位家境富裕的绅士。他深爱着我，也敬重我的母亲，所以搬到了巴勒莫与我们同住。他坚决拥护教皇派 [4]，所以和西西里的查理国王交往甚密。但腓特烈国王察觉了这一切，于是我们只好逃离西西里。那时，我马上就要被封为女骑士了，这种事在西西里岛上还是头一遭。于是我们带着不多的行李——即便‘不多’，其实也不少，只是就那时的家境而言‘不多’罢了，我们离开了那片土地，离开了我们的宫殿，逃到了这里。查理国王感念我们的笃诚，在那不勒斯给了我们田地和房产作为补偿，还一直寄很多钱给我丈夫，也就是你姐夫，这你以后就会看到的。就这样，我在这里住了下来。幸亏天主保佑，而不是拜你所赐，我才又见到了你，我的弟弟。”

说完，她又紧紧地抱住了安德鲁奇奥，亲吻他的额头，眼睛里充满了泪水。

安德鲁奇奥听完这个故事，觉得一切是那么合情合理，而且这个姑娘在讲故事时也没打一个磕巴。他又想起自己的父亲的确在巴勒莫住过一段时间，那时的父亲和自己现在一样年轻，当然也会贪恋女色。再看看面前姑娘眼含热泪，想想她的拥抱和那些真诚的亲吻，安德鲁奇奥将她说的话信以为真。等她不说话了，安德鲁奇奥开口说道：“您应该料到了我会大吃一惊。我的父亲从未提及过你们母女，或者说他曾经提起过，但我没有听到，所以我并不认识您，也不知道您的存在。然而能在那不勒斯找到姐姐，的确出乎我的意料，让我十分开心。没有哪位男士不想与您亲近，无论他的地位有多高，更何况是我这个小商贩。但是请您告诉我一件事情，您是怎么知道我在这里的呢？”

那女人答道：“是今天早上一个经常来我家的穷老太太告诉我的，也是她说起了我们的父亲。她告诉我，父亲在巴勒莫和佩鲁贾

时，自己一直在他家里做事。我听了这些话，早就想去找你了，可是我一个女人去陌生男子的住处有失体统，所以就把你叫到了这里。”

说完这些，她又询问起了家人的近况，还说出了他们的名字。安德鲁奇奥一一作答，并且越发相信她说的话了——尽管他不该相信。

他们就这样聊了很久。女人让下人端来了白葡萄酒和蜜饯，请安德鲁奇奥享用。安德鲁奇奥喝完酒，看着晚饭时间快到了，便起身告辞。姑娘却无论如何也不答应，还装作生气的样子，抱住他说：“哎呀！你走吧！我算是明白了，你根本就没把我当亲人！我怎么也想象不到，你刚刚见到了从未谋面的姐姐，还在她的家里，却要回旅馆吃饭！对，我的丈夫是没在家，我也很遗憾他不能陪你用晚餐，但我知道作为一个女人该如何招待你。”

听了这些话，安德鲁奇奥不知该如何回答，只好说：“我是把您当亲人的，就像您对我一样。但是如果我不回去，旅馆的人要等我一晚上才能吃饭，这未免失礼啊。”

女人这时说：“天哪！难道我就不能派家里的用人去趟旅馆，告诉他们不用等你了吗？既然你这么懂得礼数，那就该把旅馆的朋友叫来一起用晚餐。那样吃完饭后，你还可以和他们一起回去。”

安德鲁奇奥说，今晚不想请朋友来，但他非常愿意留下。于是女人假装派人告诉旅馆老板他不回去吃饭的事，又与他聊了很长时间，才吩咐用人上晚餐。晚餐十分丰盛，女人也故意拖延时间。直到夜幕降临，安德鲁奇奥起身告辞时，她仍旧坚持不让他走，说是因为在那不勒斯晚上不能出门随便走动，尤其是一个外地人。她还说，刚刚让人跟旅馆说他不去吃饭时，也交代过他不回去过夜了。安德鲁奇奥觉得这些话有道理，而且他很想和姑娘在一起，所以就又被她骗了。他们接着聊了好一阵——这当然也是女人故意而为的。夜深了，她让安德鲁奇奥到自己的卧室睡下，又留下了一个侍童伺候，看他不再需要什么了，便带着侍女们去了另一个房间。

天气十分炎热，安德鲁奇奥看房间里只剩他一个人了，就把裤子、袜子和内衣全部脱掉，放在了床头。过了一会儿，他想去方便，就问侍童厕所在哪里。侍童指着一扇门说：“进去吧，这里就是。”安德鲁奇奥毫无戒备地走进了那扇门，不料踏到了一块架空的木板上，连人带板一起摔了下去。幸亏天主保佑，虽然从很高的地方摔下，但他并没有受伤。只是掉下去的地方满是污秽，所以他浑身散发着恶臭。为了让你们明白我刚刚讲的内容，也为了方便你们理解接下来发生的事，我得在这里啰唆几句。他掉下去的那个地方其实在一个小巷子里，就像我们经常可以看到的那样：人们在对着的两个窗户间搭上两根细细的木棍，然后在木棍上架一块木板，人就坐在木板上方便。

安德鲁奇奥就是从这样一块木板上掉下去的。

安德鲁奇奥摔得很疼。他发现自己掉到了小巷子里，就连忙喊侍童。然而侍童一听到他掉下去的声响，就跑到女人那里报信去了。那女人赶紧去他房间，看他的衣服在不在。找到衣服后，从里面翻出了安德鲁奇奥的钱。原来他不放心把钱放到别处，都是随身带着。这位“巴勒莫的贵妇”，这位“佩鲁贾小伙子的姐姐”，拿到钱之后，就再也不管安德鲁奇奥的安危，关上了他方才走出去的那扇门。

安德鲁奇奥看待童没有回答他，就更大声地喊叫，但已然没有用了。这时他才感觉到有些不对，可是为时已晚。安德鲁奇奥翻过一道矮墙，到了大街上。他认识姑娘的家门，便过去不停地敲打，不停地叫喊，但还是没人理睬他。这时他才知道自己被骗了，哭着说：“哎呀！才这么一小会儿，我就丢了五百个金币和一个姐姐啊！”

哭了一阵子后，他又开始敲门喊人。邻居们受不了他的闹腾，纷纷起身。那家的一个女佣装作被吵醒的样子，朝窗外怒吼：“谁在下面敲门呢？”

“喂！”安德鲁奇奥说，“你不认识我了？我是安德鲁奇奥啊，菲奥达莉索夫人的弟弟！”

女佣回答他说：“你这个人！如果你喝多了，就先睡一觉，明早再过来吧！我既不认识安德鲁奇奥，也听不懂你说的话。请你走吧，让我们好生休息，拜托了！”

“怎么会？”安德鲁奇奥说，“难道你不知道我说的是什么吗？你绝对知道！就算你们西西里人对待亲戚都是转脸就忘，但至少让我把留在你们家的衣服拿走吧！我拿了衣服会立刻走人！”

女佣快要笑出声来了，说：“我看你这人是在梦游吧！”边说边缩回身子，关上了窗子。

安德鲁奇奥这才恍然大悟，原来自己被骗了，他气得快要发疯。但现在光靠嘴已经拿不回想要的东西了，于是他拿起一块大石头使劲砸门。他的动静更大了，吵醒了更多的邻居，惹得他们十分反感。邻居们相信他就是个骗子，编这些谎话来骚扰那位善良的夫人。于是他们都到窗边责骂安德鲁奇奥，就像是满街的狗对着一只新来的狗狂吠一样。“你这个时候来人家姑娘家，说这些不三不四的话，实在无礼！”“天哪！你走吧，好孩子，让我们睡觉吧，求你了！”“你要是真有事找她，就明天再来吧，今晚就别烦我们了！”

那位“好姑娘”的家里还住着一个恶棍。不过安德鲁奇奥在她家时既没有看到他，也没有听到他说话。听到邻居们这么说，恶棍放心了，于是走到窗前，粗声粗气地吼道：“是谁在下面？”

安德鲁奇奥听到这吓人的声音，抬起头来，隐隐约约地瞧见这个满脸黑胡子的人，看样子很厉害。只见他伸着懒腰，打着呵欠，像刚从床上爬起来似的。安德鲁奇奥见状，不免有些害怕地回答道：“我是这家女主人的弟弟。”

然而那人没等他说完，就打断了他，语气比之前还要凶：“我不知道我为什么还站在这儿，而不是下去给你一通乱棍，把你打到不能动弹为止。你这个醉鬼，你这个烦人的蠢驴，今天晚上因为你谁都睡不成觉了！”说罢便缩回身子，锁上了窗户。

一些邻居知道这个人的脾气，就低声劝安德鲁奇奥说：“求你了，好孩子，走吧！你不想今晚被他打死吧！走吧，这是为你好。”

安德鲁奇奥害怕那个恶棍，又被邻居们这么一劝，觉得他们也是好心，就离开了。一想到自己再也拿不回那些钱，他非常难过。安德鲁奇奥不知道去哪里，只好沿着女佣带他来时走过的路回旅馆。但是他身上很臭，想去海里洗一洗，就在路口往左拐，走进了一条叫作“卡塔拉纳”的街。他顺着坡往上走，突然看见两个提着灯笼的人向自己走来。安德鲁奇奥担心对方是巡警，也害怕又遇到坏人，于是看旁边有个小破屋，就悄悄地躲了进去。然而那两个人像是提前商量好了似的，径直走进了这间破屋子。其中一个人把背在肩上的铁家伙放了下来，和另一个人一起一一查看。

突然，其中一个人说：“怎么回事？我闻见了一股臭味，之前好像从来没在这儿闻见过。”他说完便举起灯笼，看到了可怜的安德鲁奇奥。这人吓了一跳，问道：“谁在那里？”

安德鲁奇奥没有出声，于是那两个人拿着灯笼走近了他，问他一身脏臭的在这里干什么。安德鲁奇奥就把事情的来龙去脉一五一十地告诉了他们。他们想了一下这件事发生的地方，自言自语地说：“那是布塔福科家，就是那个黑社会的小头目。”

其中一个人对安德鲁奇奥说：“可怜的家伙，虽然你把钱丢了，但你还算是万幸，因为你幸亏摔了下来，没再进那座房子。要是你没有摔下去，他们肯定等你一睡着就把你杀了，那样你连钱带命就都丢了。你现在哭有什么用呢？想拿回一分钱，比从天上摘星星还要难呢。而且，他们要是知道你把这件事说了出去，可能还会来杀你。”

他说完后，两个人商量了一会儿，又对安德鲁奇奥说：“你看，我们很同情你。现在我们正要去办点事情，如果你加入我们，那我们保证你能赚到比你丢掉的那五百个金币更多的钱。”

正走投无路的安德鲁奇奥立刻答应了。

原来那天是那不勒斯大主教菲利波·米努托洛神父下葬的日子。他

穿的华服上有许多价值连城的饰品，手上还戴着一枚红宝石戒指。光是那块红宝石就值五百多佛罗林，而那两个人想偷的也正是它。就这样，他们把计划告诉了安德鲁奇奥。

安德鲁奇奥的欲望战胜了理智，便和他们一起上路了。在去往主教堂的路上，安德鲁奇奥仍然一身臭气，于是他们中的一人说道：“我们不能找个地方让他稍微洗洗吗？免得他这么臭。”

另一个人回答说：“对，这附近有一口井，井辘轳上一直挂着个大木桶。我们赶紧去那里让他洗一洗吧。”

到了井边，他们发现绳子还在，但是木桶被人拿走了。于是那两人想着用绳子拴住安德鲁奇奥，让他下井清洗一下，洗好了晃绳子，他们再把他拉上来。就这样，安德鲁奇奥下井了。

他刚下去，就来了几个巡警。因为天气炎热，又刚刚追捕了一个犯人，所以他们口渴难耐，就来井边找水喝。那两个人一看到巡警来了，撒腿就跑，所以巡警并没有看到他们。

安德鲁奇奥在井底洗好后晃了绳子。看到绳子晃了，那两个口渴的巡警以为桶里的水满了，就把手里的木盾、武器和披风放在地上，往上拉绳子。安德鲁奇奥看到井沿后，就抓着井沿跳了上来。巡警看到从井里跳出来了一个人，吓得魂飞魄散，立刻松开了绳子，跑得要有多快有多快。安德鲁奇奥自己也大吃一惊，要不是抓住了井沿，他就可能摔到井底，也就可能受伤乃至丢了性命。他又看到了井边的武器，便更加疑惑了，因为他记得那两个同伴并没有带什么武器。

他心存疑虑，不知道发生了什么事情。于是什么都没碰，离开了那个地方，但又不知道去哪里。就这样走着走着，他突然碰见了之前的两个同伴。原来，他们想回去把安德鲁奇奥拉上来。看到安德鲁奇奥后，同伴们也十分惊讶，连忙问是谁把他拉上来的。安德鲁奇奥说自己也不知道，只把从井里上来的经过告诉了他们。两人相视一笑，明白了怎么回事，向安德鲁奇奥解释了他们为什么逃走，又是谁拉他上来的。这时夜已过半，所以大家就没有再多说什么，直接去主教堂了。他们很顺利地进了教堂，来到了大主教的棺材旁。这口棺材很大，而且是用大理石做的。他们用随身带的铁棍撬起了沉重的棺材盖，然后找东西撑住，留出来够一个人出入的空隙。

做好后，他们其中一人说：“谁进去？”

另一个人回答：“我不去。”

“我也不去，”那个人说，“安德鲁奇奥，你去。”

“我不会去的。”安德鲁奇奥说。

听了这话，那两人对安德鲁奇奥说：“你为什么不去？苍天在上，要是你不进去，我们就用这根铁棍打你的头，直到打死你为止。”

安德鲁奇奥很害怕，只好进去。他一边往里爬一边想：“他们让我进来，无非是想骗我。等到我把东西给了他们，要往外爬时，他们就会自顾自地跑了，而我什么也得不到。”因此他决定先把自己那份弄到手。安德鲁奇奥想起他们之前说的话，就把那枚昂贵的戒指从大主教手上摘了下来，戴在了自己手上。然后他把主教的权杖、僧帽、手套给了那两个人，跟他们说里面什么也没有了。的确，当时的主教身上只剩一件衬衣了。那两个人确定里面有一枚戒指，就让安德鲁奇奥再好好找找。安德鲁奇奥假装努力地找，一直跟他们说没有找到，让他们在外面等。谁知那两个人比安德鲁奇奥还要狡猾，不停地说他再找找，却趁机拿掉了撑着棺盖的东西，逃了出去，把安德鲁奇奥一个人留在了棺材里。我们应该可以想象出安德鲁奇奥当时的心情吧。

他用头和肩膀顶棺盖，尝试了许多次，但始终没有顶开。一阵绝望袭来，安德鲁奇奥昏倒在了大主教的尸体上。要是有人看见这一幕，一定分不清到底哪个是死人，也分不清谁是大主教，谁是安德鲁奇奥。醒来后，安德鲁奇奥不禁号啕大哭。他预料到，自己只会有两种结局：如果没有人来打开棺材，那他只能在这里面，在一堆蛆虫中饿死，或者被尸体腐烂的臭味熏死；如果有人来开棺，那么他就会被当作盗墓贼绞死。

就在悲痛万分地思考这些事情时，安德鲁奇奥突然听到有很多人边说话边走进了教堂。他认为这些人来这里，也要干那两个人干过的勾当。于是他更害怕了。但是等他们打开了棺盖，撑好之后，也遇到了派谁进去的问题。他们谁都不想进去，吵了很长时间以后，一位神父说：“你们有什么好怕的？觉得他能吃了你们？死人是不会吃人的。来，我进去。”说罢，神父把胸脯抵在棺材沿上，脸向外，将腿伸了进去。安德鲁奇奥一看到他，就马上站了起来，抓住他的一条腿，装作要把他拉下来的样子。神父感到有东西在拽自己，吓得大叫起来，立刻爬出棺材逃走了。其他人看到这番情形也都吓坏了，没把棺材盖合上就撒腿跑了，好像身后有千万个魔鬼在追赶他们一样。

安德鲁奇奥看到这些后喜出望外，赶紧爬了出来，沿着来时的路走出了教堂。天快亮了，安德鲁奇奥戴着那枚历经千难万险才得到的戒指，走到了海边，然后回到了旅馆。旅馆的店主和他的朋友们为他担心了整整一宿。安德鲁奇奥把这一夜发生的事情告诉他们后，店主建议他赶紧离开那不勒斯。于是他立刻出发，回佩鲁贾去了。安德鲁奇奥原本打算拿了五百枚金币买马，结果马没买成，却换来了一枚戒

指。

里卡尔多·钦齐卡失去了他的妻子 [1]

从前，在比萨有一位法官大人，名叫里卡尔多·迪·钦齐卡，虽然体力衰弱，但却十分聪明。法官很富有，想找一位年轻美丽的妻子。他觉得，对待妻子只需要拿出做学问的精力就可以了。他找得很慢，心想，如果帮自己拿主意也像帮别人拿主意一样简单，那他早就选好妻子了。最后，他如愿以偿地找到了一位年轻貌美的妻子——洛托·瓜兰迪先生把自己的女儿许配给了他。这位姑娘叫巴尔托洛梅娅，是比萨最美丽可人的姑娘之一。在比萨，毕竟没有几个人长得比吃虫子的蜥蜴更好看。法官举行了盛大的庆典迎娶姑娘，婚礼豪华而又隆重。新婚之夜，为了遵守惯例，他勉强与妻子做了一次爱，但是很快就招架不住了。第二天早上，本就瘦弱的他已然筋疲力尽，只能靠干白葡萄酒、滋补蜜饯和其他补品来恢复体力。

现在这位法官大人比之前更清楚自己的能力了，于是开始教妻子读一本历书。这本历书好像是在拉文纳出版印制的，很受孩子们的喜爱。 [2] 根据这本历书上的标注，每一天都会纪念一位圣人，甚至在一天之内要纪念好几位圣人。法官用了很多理由向妻子解释说，为了表示崇敬之心，男女在这些日子里都要禁欲，不能行房事。除了历书上规定的节日以外，他还增加了斋戒日、四季小斋、圣徒斋戒日，还有纪念千余位圣人的斋戒日，又添上了礼拜五、礼拜六和献给天主的礼拜日。除此之外，禁欲的日子还有整个四旬斋期间。里卡尔多还规定了上百个方位，一旦月亮移动到这些位置，男女就不可行房。此外，在其他一些特殊情况下，夫妻也要禁欲。他觉得，对待同床的女人，就像应对法律案件，没什么不同。这么一来，他的太太要吃不少苦头。里卡尔多一个月只碰她一次，而且把她盯得死死的，以防有人像自己教她什么是节假日那样教她什么是工作日。

夏天到了，天气炎热，里卡尔多大人想带妻子一起去蒙特内罗附近的庄园里住几天，避暑消遣。这一天，里卡尔多为了让太太开心，便带她去海上钓鱼。他和渔夫坐在一只船上，妻子和侍女们坐在另一只船上。大家一时兴起，一直驶向了深海，驶出了好几海里还未曾察觉。大家要么专心致志地钓鱼，要么聚精会神地观看。就在这时，突然驶来一艘大船，那是当时远近闻名的海盗帕伽尼诺的船。看到两只小船，帕伽尼诺径直地驶了过去。小船只能拼命地逃，但是海盗还是追上了法官太太坐的船。帕伽尼诺看到船上美丽的夫人，就想也不想要地要把她掳走了。这时的里卡尔多已经上岸，只能眼睁睁地看着海盗把

他夫人带上船，消失在茫茫大海上。法官本就心胸狭窄，连空气都要嫉妒，现在看到这一幕有多恼火，就不必我多言了吧。他到比萨控诉海盗的恶行，又去了其他地方，但最终也没能得知是谁抢走了妻子，又把她带到了哪里。

帕伽尼诺看巴尔托洛梅娅如此美丽，不禁心动。再加上他本就没有妻室，所以就想和她永远生活在一起。巴尔托洛梅娅大哭不止，帕伽尼诺就温柔地安慰她。夜幕降临，他解开了她的腰带。那本历书刚好从腰带上掉了下来，与此同时，每一个节日和节假日都从她的脑海中消失了。帕伽尼诺觉得实际行动比话语有效，就一直用行动安慰她。就这样，还没到摩纳哥，巴尔托洛梅娅就把法官和他的规定忘得一干二净，和帕伽尼诺过上了天下最快活的日子。帕伽尼诺把巴尔托洛梅娅带到摩纳哥后，不仅日夜宽慰她，还像对待妻子一样善待她。

过了一段时间，里卡尔多大人打听到了太太的下落，便迫不及待地想去找她。他觉得没有人知道该怎么做，于是亲自去找夫人，并且决定无论花多少钱都要赎回她。他乘船去了摩纳哥，见到了巴尔托洛梅娅。巴尔托洛梅娅也看到了里卡尔多，当晚就告诉了帕伽尼诺这件事，并且向他表明了自己的想法。第二天早上，里卡尔多看到帕伽尼诺后就过去和他套近乎。没过多长时间，两人就成了亲密的好友。其实帕伽尼诺认识他，并且知道他想做什么，只是没有表现出来。里卡尔多见时机成熟，就委婉地向帕伽尼诺解释了自己来这里的缘由，接着又央求帕伽尼诺，只要把妻子还给他，不管多少赎金他都会照付。

帕伽尼诺和善地回答道：“法官阁下，我很欢迎您的到来，所以我向您简单地解释一下，我家的确有位年轻的姑娘，但我并不知道她是您的太太还是其他人的太太。我不晓得您是谁，对她也不太了解，因为她住在我家没多长时间。我看您是位正直的绅士，就带您去见她吧。如果真如您所说，那她肯定认识您。如果她说的和您一致，并且想和您回去，看在您如此友善的分儿上，无论您给我多少赎金我都会放她走；如果她说的和您不同，那您就是存心来我这里抢她了。我是个年轻的男子，和其他人一样，也会保护自己的女人，尤其是她，因为我从未见过如此可爱的姑娘。”

里卡尔多说：“她绝对是我的妻子，你只要带我去见她就知道了。她一见我，就会立刻勾住我的脖子。你提的意见很好，我非常同意。”

“那么，”帕伽尼诺说，“我们走吧。”

于是两人来到了帕伽尼诺家，在客厅就座。这时，帕伽尼诺派人叫巴尔托洛梅娅过来。她穿戴整齐，从房里走出，来到了里卡尔多和帕伽尼诺所在的客厅。但她见了里卡尔多后，就像见了帕伽尼诺带回

家的一位陌生客人似的，只是打了声招呼，并没有多余的举动。法官原想着巴尔托洛梅娅见了自己会非常开心，所以看到这一幕后十分惊讶，自言自语道：“可能是我失去她后，太过悲伤痛苦，所以面容憔悴，以至于她认不出我了。”

于是他说：“夫人，带你去钓鱼让我付出了多么昂贵的代价啊！我从来没有像失去你之后这样痛苦过，而你却疏远我，好像不认识我了。你没看见吗？我是你的里卡尔多啊！我来这里是要带你回去，不管这家的主人要什么我都会给他。他也很慷慨，无论我付多少赎金都会把你还给我。”

夫人转向他，面带微笑地说：“先生，您是在对我说话吗？您仔细看看，不要把我认成别人了，因为我不记得曾经见过您。”

里卡尔多说：“瞧你说的什么话，你好好看看我，你要是愿意仔细回想一下的话，就会知道我是你的丈夫里卡尔多·迪·钦齐卡。”

夫人说：“先生，请您原谅我，按您说的，我仔细地看了看您，这好像不大礼貌，但不用仔细看，我也知道自己从未见过您。”

里卡尔多又想，她是因为害怕帕伽尼诺，才不敢在他面前承认认识自己。所以过了一会儿，他恳求帕伽尼诺，让他们两人单独在一个房间里谈一谈。帕伽尼诺说可以，前提是里卡尔多不能强行亲吻她。帕伽尼诺让巴尔托洛梅娅跟着里卡尔多去里屋，听听他想说什么，想怎么回答就怎么回答。

于是他们二人单独去了一间屋子里。一坐下来，里卡尔多就说：“啊！我的心肝，我的魂，我活下去的希望啊！现在你不认识爱你胜过爱自己的里卡尔多了吗？怎么能这样呢？我的样子变了那么多吗？啊，你美丽的眼睛啊，看看我吧，哪怕只看一小会儿也行啊。”

巴尔托洛梅娅开始大笑，没有让他再说下去：“您明明知道我没有失忆！我并非不知道您是我的丈夫里卡尔多·迪·钦齐卡大人，但是当我和您在一起时，您没有真正地理解过我。如果您像自己以为的那般聪明，那您就应该明白，我年轻活泼，朝气蓬勃，所以和其他少妇一样，除了吃穿外，还会想要别的东西，尽管我害羞说不出口。而您是怎么做的，您自己清楚。如果比起妻子，您更喜欢研究法律的话，那您就不应该娶亲。但我觉得您根本就不是什么法官，只是那些节日和斋戒日的鼓吹者罢了。我跟您说，如果您也让给您种地的农民们过您规定的那些节日，让他们也像您耕种我这块田地一样种田的话，那一粒粮食也收获不到。上帝看我年轻，怜悯我，让我遇到了他。我和他就睡在这间房里。在这里，没有人知道节日是什么。我指的节日就是您平时过的那些纪念日。您对上帝的虔诚超越了您对女人的爱。在这扇门里，我们没有礼拜五和礼拜六，没有斋戒日，没有四季小

斋，也没有那漫长的四旬斋。相反，我们从早到晚都在‘劳作’，把毯子都扯破了。今天一大早，我还爬到他身上了呢。我愿意和他在一起，趁着年轻好好‘劳作’。那些节日、朝觐和斋戒就留给我的晚年吧。我为您祝福，但请您赶紧离开吧，能多快离开就多快离开。没有我在身旁，您想过多少节日就过多少节日吧。”

里卡尔多听到这些话，感到一阵难以忍受的痛苦，看她停了下来，才说：“啊，我的魂啊！你说的这叫什么话？你现在就不能考虑一下你家人的声望和你的名誉吗？你情愿道德败坏地在这里做他的姘妇，也不想回比萨做我的太太吗？这个男人，当他对你厌烦时，会对你恶语相加，把你赶走的。而我会永远爱你，哪怕我死了，你也会是我家的女主人。为了这点荒淫的肉欲，你就要抛弃你我的名誉，抛弃爱你胜过爱自己生命的我吗？啊，我的亲爱的，我的希望啊！不要再这么说了，跟我回去吧。我知道你的欲望了，从今往后我会努力的。我的美人儿，你就改变主意，跟我走吧！我从来没有像你离开我之后那么伤心。”

巴尔托洛梅娅回答他说：“我的名誉只能把握在我自己手里，容不得他人说三道四。我再也不会像从前那般温柔恭顺了。如果能回到我父母把我嫁给你的那天，该有多好啊！当时他们没有顾及过我的名誉，现在我也不考虑他们的声望。如果我现在是个罪恶的‘白’，那您就是个没用的‘捣槌’。我已经不爱您了。我还要告诉您，在这里，我觉得自己是帕伽尼诺的妻子，而在比萨，我却觉得是您的姘妇。我要想着月亮的方位，研究几何学的规则，才能将我们的‘星体’结合在一起。但在这里，帕伽尼诺每晚都搂我入怀，紧紧抱着我，轻轻地咬我。他是怎么对待我的，就请天主替我告诉您吧。您还说您会努力，可您会努力做什么呢？您能在做完三次后，还能随时坚挺得像个鱼竿似的吗？我知道，在我不在您身边的这些日子里，您已经荣升为骑士了。所以您还是走吧，还是努力地活下去吧。我看您体弱多病，觉得您应该活得很累吧。我再跟您多说一句，即便那人离开了我——不过我觉得不会的，只要我想和他在一起的话——我也永远不会回到您的身边，因为不管我怎么挤，也不能从您身上挤出一滴‘汁液’。在您那里，我承受了惨痛的损失，现在我要在另一个地方收获利润。我再向您重申一遍，这里没有节日，也没有斋戒日，所以我想留在这里。您赶紧走吧，不然我就叫了，说您要强暴我。”

里卡尔多看情况不妙，只好痛苦万分地走出了那间屋子。直到那时他才明白自己有多无能，而娶一个年轻的妻子又是一件多么荒唐的事情。他又和帕伽尼诺说了很多话，但却无济于事。最后，他什么事也没做成，只能离开妻子，回比萨去了。由于太过悲痛，他已经神智不清，在比萨街头到处游走。无论谁向他打招呼，或者询问事情，他都只会回答说：“坏人是不过节的。”不久之后，他就一命呜呼了。

贝尔科洛蕾夫人与神父 [1]

正如你们中的一些人知道，或是曾经听说过的那样：在瓦尔隆戈，也就是离这儿不远的村子里，有一个身强体壮的教士，在服务女人时很能干。尽管学识浅薄，他每逢礼拜日都会在村里的榆树下，说很多好听的善言善语，让村民们开心。当男人们不在家时，他就去看望他们的女人，比以往任何一任神父都要热切，给她们带些宗教节日上的礼品，有时还把圣水和蜡烛头带到家里为她们祈祷。人们还从未见过像他这样的教士呢。

事情是这样的。在之前爱慕过的众多农妇中，他最喜欢的那人名叫贝尔科洛蕾，是农民本蒂韦尼亚·德尔·马佐的妻子。贝尔科洛蕾神采奕奕，的确是个讨人喜爱的农妇。她皮肤黝黑，健壮有力，推起磨来比其他女人更有劲。她还会敲铃鼓，唱《水流深谷》，跳力达舞和巴隆基奥舞，兴起时还会从手边拿起一块精致的小手绢舞动，十分俊俏美丽。教士大人喜欢这一切喜欢得不得了，对她着了迷。为了看她，教士整日在村子里逛来逛去。周日早晨，如果见她来了教堂，他就会在唱《慈悲经》和《三圣颂》时特别卖力，来表现自己优秀的歌唱才能，尽管他的声音像驴叫一样难听；如果没有看到她，他就唱得有气无力。尽管知道教士歌声的变化，本蒂韦尼亚·德尔·马佐却丝毫没有察觉到教士对妻子的喜爱，就连他身旁的贝尔科洛蕾也没有意识到这回事。为了和贝尔科洛蕾更亲近些，教士时不时地送她礼物：有时是一把新鲜的大蒜，那是他亲手在菜园里种出来的，也是这片教区中长得最好的蒜；有时是一小筐豆子；有时是一小束五月葱或是一小把斯卡洛尼葱。一有时机，他就用眼神和她打情骂俏。但贝尔科洛蕾对教士很冷漠，举止十分端庄，每次都假装没有看到他，所以教士始终不能如愿以偿。

有一天的正午时分，教士在教区里东走西逛，突然看到本蒂韦尼亚·德尔·马佐赶着一驾驴车迎面而来，车上载满了东西。于是教士过去和他打招呼，问他要去哪里。

本蒂韦尼亚回答他说：“尊敬的神父，我要去城里办点事情，把这些东西送给博纳科里·达·吉内斯特雷托大人。不知道为什么，一位刑事法官让手下的检察官发了张诉状，里面竟然提到了我。这件事刻不容缓，我想请吉内斯特雷托大人帮帮忙。”

教士高兴地说：“孩子，好好做！带上我的祝福出发吧，快去快

回。如果碰到拉普乔或者纳尔迪诺，别忘了跟他们说把我打谷棒上的皮带还给我。”

本蒂韦尼亚答应了他，就朝着佛罗伦萨的方向走了。教士想，是时候去找贝尔科洛蕾碰碰运气了，于是大步向她家走去。他边进门边说：“求天主为这家人赐福！家里有人吗？”

贝尔科洛蕾当时在阁楼里，听到教士的声音，答道：“神父，欢迎您！这么大热的天，您来这里做什么呢？”

教士回答说：“天主赐福于我，我看到你丈夫去城里了，所以过来和你待一会儿。”

贝尔科洛蕾从阁楼下来，坐下收拾丈夫刚打下来的卷心菜种子。教士开口说道：“你看，贝尔科洛蕾，你总是这个样子，是想急死我吗？”

贝尔科洛蕾笑了，说：“我对您做什么了呀？”

教士说：“你什么都没做，可是你不让我做我想做的事。那件事也是天主让我做的。”

贝尔科洛蕾说：“啊！您清醒一点，教士还做这种事吗？”

教士答道：“我们也做啊，为什么不做呢？我还告诉你，我们的功夫比别的男人还要好。你知道为什么吗？因为我们很少干这事，所以干起来更有劲。说实话，只要安安静静地让我施展，你是会占便宜的。”

贝尔科洛蕾说：“我能占什么便宜呢？你们这些比小气鬼还小气的人！”

于是教士说道：“我不知道你想要什么，所以你自己说吧。你是想要双鞋呢，还是想要个顶圈？或者是一块上好的羊毛料子？你想要什么都可以。”

贝尔科洛蕾回答道：“神父，您说得倒好听！这些东西我都有。但是，如果您真的喜欢我，就帮我个忙吧！帮了我的忙，您想做什么，我就让您做什么。”

于是教士说：“你想让我做什么就直说吧，我很愿意帮你。”

贝尔科洛蕾说：“周六，我要去趟佛罗伦萨，把我织好的羊毛交给别人，还要修一下我的纺车。如果您借我五里拉，我就能从放高利贷的人手里赎回我那片紫黑色的裙子，还有我那条当嫁妆带过来的腰带。要是没有裙子和腰带，我什么好地方都去不了，也不能去教堂了。我知道，您是有这个钱的。您要是借给我钱，让我做什么我都会做的。”

教士回答说：“求天主祝福我！我今天没有带那么多钱，但你相信我，周六之前我会给你的。”

“是吗！”贝尔科洛蕾说，“你们个个都是耍嘴皮子的，却从不履行诺言。您还想用对待毕廖扎的方式对待我，让我所有的期待都落空，然后灰溜溜地离开吗？毕廖扎因为这件事，还沦落成了妓女。我对天发誓，我是不会让您得逞的。所以，如果没有钱，那您就走吧。”

“啊！”教士说，“别让我现在回家拿钱了。你看，我难得那么走运，赶上你家里没人的好时候。要是我回家一趟，等我再回来时，可能就会有人打扰我们了。现在这么好的机会，我不知道要等到什么时候才能再碰上一回。”

贝尔科洛蕾说：“说得好听。如果您想回去拿钱，那就回去，不然您就忍着吧。”

教士看这样子，觉得如果不押给她点东西，她就不会让他做自己想做的事情，于是说道：“你看，你不相信我会给你钱，那我把这件深蓝色的披风押在你这里。这回你相信我了吧。”

贝尔科洛蕾抬头看了一眼说：“哦，这件披风啊。一件披风能值多少钱呢？”

教士说：“值多少钱？我要让你知道，这可是第戎 [2] 料子，甚至是‘第戎中的第戎料子’，还有人说它是‘特等第戎料子’呢。我从旧货商洛托那里花了整整七里拉才把它买下来，买回家还不到十五天。你知道，洛托最懂这种料子了，他还说我占了五索尔多 [3] 的便宜呢。”

“哦，这样吗？”贝尔科洛蕾说，“天主保佑，我之前真不敢相信一件披风居然值这么些钱。但是你得先把它给我才行。”

教士大人感到弓已上弦，实在忍不住了，于是急忙把披风脱下来给了她。贝尔科洛蕾把它放好后，对教士说：“大人，请您来棚屋里，这儿不会有人来的。”于是他们去了棚屋。

在屋里，教士给她世上最甜蜜的吻，让她快活得飘飘欲仙。他从贝尔科洛蕾家离开时，像刚为别人主持完婚礼似的，只穿了教士袍，没有穿披风。

回到教堂后，教士想，就算收上整整一年的蜡烛头，连五里拉的一半都赚不到。于是他觉得自己做了件错事，后悔把披风留给了她，开始琢磨该怎么不费分文地把披风要回来。教士这人本来就挺狡猾，所以不一会儿就想出了要回披风的办法。正好第二天是个节日，教士就让邻居家的孩子去贝尔科洛蕾家，问她愿不愿意把石臼借给他，因为宾古焦·达尔·波焦和努托·布列蒂要和他一起用午餐，所以他想用石臼捣些酱汁。于是贝尔科洛蕾把石臼给了那孩子。

到了用午餐的时候，教士偷看到贝尔科洛蕾和丈夫本蒂韦尼亚·德尔·马佐在一起吃饭，便叫来手下的人，对他说：“你把这个石臼还给贝尔科洛蕾，然后跟她说‘大人非常感谢您，请您把那孩子上午押在您这里的披风还给大人。’”那人来到贝尔科洛蕾家，看到她正和丈夫一起吃饭，就放下了石臼，把教士交代的话说了一遍。

那贝尔科洛蕾听完正想回嘴，不料本蒂韦尼亚脸色阴沉地看着她说：“你敢拿神父大人的东西？我向基督发誓，我真想狠狠地揍你一拳。你这个混账娘们儿，赶紧把东西还回去！听着，无论神父大人要什么东西，哪怕是咱们家的驴，你也不能对他说一个‘不’字。”

贝尔科洛蕾嘟哝着站了起来，从床下的箱子里拿出披风，给了那个人，并且对他说：“你替我告诉大人：‘贝尔科洛蕾向天主祈祷，希望您再也不要再在她的“臼”里捣“酱汁”了。在这件事上，您已经失去了她的信任。’”

那人带着披风回去了，并且向教士转告了贝尔科洛蕾的话。教士听了后笑着说：“下次你见到她，就跟她说，她不借给我‘臼’，我还不借给她‘捣槌’了呢。一报还一报吧！”

本蒂韦尼亚听了这些话，还以为神父大人在责怪自己，就没往那件事上想，但贝尔科洛蕾对教士却是爱搭不理。直到收获葡萄的季节 [4]，教士恐吓她，如果再不理他，她会被魔王撒旦吃掉。贝尔科洛蕾很害怕，就在酿葡萄酒和炒栗子的季节 [5] 里，表面上与他和解了。后来，他们又一起寻欢作乐了很多次。为了补偿那五里拉，教士给她的铃鼓换了张新皮，又系了一个铃铛。贝尔科洛蕾这才开心了。

耐心的格里赛尔达 [1]

很久以前，桑卢佐有一个侯爵世家。家中的主人很年轻，名叫瓜尔蒂耶里，尚未娶亲。而且他每天只管打鸟狩猎，根本没有娶妻生子的念头。尽管人们都十分尊敬侯爵，觉得他机智过人，但他手下的人却颇有微词。他们几次三番求他成家，不然侯爵将后继无人，他们也就没有了主公。此外，他们还给侯爵找了许多与他们当户对的姑娘，希望他能喜欢。

侯爵对下属们说：“朋友们，你们逼我做的事，偏偏是我从来都不想做的事情。你们想一想，娶一位和自己志趣相投的妻子有多困难，而娶一个跟自己合不来的女人却是大有可能。要是娶了这么一个女人，日子该多不好过啊！你们真蠢，竟然以为，只要摸清姑娘父母的品性，就能找到让我满意的妻子。我不知道你们如何认识了她们父亲，也不知道你们如何窥探到了她们母亲的隐私。就算你们明白了姑娘父母的情况，又怎么保证她和父母一模一样呢？但既然你们执意要给我套上这道枷锁，我只能欣然接受。不过，我要自己选择妻子。就算之后事情进展得不顺利，我也用不着怪罪别人。我还要告诉你们，不管我最后选了谁，你们都要尊敬她。要是我按照你们的意愿，娶了一个自己不喜欢的女人，那我有多不爽快，就会让你们吃到多大的苦头。”他那些精明的手下立刻回答说，只要侯爵肯娶亲，无论娶谁，他们都会高兴的。

在附近的村子里，住着一个出身贫寒的姑娘。侯爵欣赏她的品性已经有很长一段时日了。而且他也十分欣赏姑娘的美貌，觉得与她一起生活应该会很开心。于是他就不再物色别人，直接挑明要娶她。侯爵派人把姑娘的父亲叫了过来，向他表明了心意。姑娘的父亲十分贫穷，所以立刻答应了这门婚事。

大家听到这个消息后都很兴奋，回答说，无论侯爵想要娶谁，他们都会欣然接受，并且在任何时候都会尊敬她，视她为自己的女主人。那之后，大伙很快就投入到这一庆典的准备当中，瓜尔蒂耶里本人也参与了筹备过程。侯爵让他们把婚礼办得豪华隆重，还邀请了所有亲朋好友以及周边地区的上层人士来参加庆典。此外，他还找来了一位与新娘身材差不多的姑娘，按照她的尺寸做了很多华丽的衣服，又置办了几条腰带、一枚戒指和一顶漂亮的王冠。总之，只要是新娘会用到的东西，他都准备好了。

到了婚礼那天，瓜尔蒂耶里一大早就上了马，要和他一起迎娶新娘的人也都到齐了。一切安排妥当后，手下人对侯爵说：“大人，是时候去接新娘了。”于是，侯爵在其他人的陪同下，朝着那个小村子出发了。到了之后，他们看到姑娘抬着刚从井里打来的水，急急忙忙地往家赶，周围还有几个同行的姑娘，大概是为了来看一眼侯爵的新娘。瓜尔蒂耶里看到她后，知道她名叫格里塞尔达，就叫了她一声，问她父亲在哪里。姑娘羞答答地回答道：“大人，他在家里呢。”

于是瓜尔蒂耶里下了马，让众人在外面等着，自己一个人走进了那个简陋的房子。见到姑娘的父亲贾努科雷后，侯爵对他说：“我来娶格里塞尔达回府，但是在此之前，我想当着你的面问她几个问题。”于是侯爵问格里塞尔达，结婚之后不管自己说什么话，做什么事，她会不会始终顺从于他，讨好于他。姑娘回答“会”。他又问了很多诸如此类的问题，格里塞尔达都做出了肯定的回答。

听到格里塞尔达的回答后，侯爵便牵起了她的手，把她带到了屋外，吩咐手下的人将她的旧衣裳脱掉，换上他备好的华服。很快，他们就打扮好了新娘，还梳理了她原本蓬乱的头发，为她戴上了王冠。在场的每一个人都为这一幕惊叹不已。于是侯爵说：“诸位，只要这位姑娘同意，她就是我要娶的妻子了。”接着他转过身来问姑娘：“格里塞尔达，你愿意让我做你的丈夫吗？”

格里塞尔达还是那么羞涩，不敢相信这是真的，怯生生地回答道：“大人，我愿意。”

于是侯爵说：“我也愿意让你做我的妻子。”就这样，侯爵在所有人的见证下娶走了她。他将她扶上一匹小马，风风光光地回了侯爵府。在府里，他们举行了盛大的仪式。就算是法国公主出嫁，也不过如此了。

换上新衣服后，年轻的新娘就像变了个人似的。我们刚才说过，她本就貌美如花，温柔贤淑，再经过这么一番打扮，就更加惹人喜爱了。现在的她宛若一位大家闺秀、贵族小姐，根本不像是农民贾努科雷的女儿，更不像是个放羊的姑娘了，这让之前认识她的人都惊讶万

分。而且她对丈夫也十分恭顺，时刻让他感到自己是世界上最快乐、最有福气的男人。除此之外，她对丈夫手下的人也非常和蔼宽厚。每个人都衷心地爱戴她，尊敬她，祈祷她身体健康，事事顺意。有些人之前说瓜尔蒂耶里娶这个女人是犯了糊涂，现在就连他们也说，瓜尔蒂耶里料事如神，是天下最聪明的男人，因为再也没有人能像他一样，透过乡下女子的粗布衣衫，窥探到如此高尚的品德。不久，格里塞尔达的名声不仅传遍了整个侯爵领地，还传到了其他各个地方。她证明了自己的价值和品德，也让之前反对侯爵娶她的人改变了主意。

和瓜尔蒂耶里一起住了没多久后，格里塞尔达就怀孕了。几个月后，一个女婴呱呱坠地。瓜尔蒂耶里十分高兴，然而没过多长时间，他心里就萌生了一个奇怪的念头。他想用一些常人无法忍受的事考验妻子的耐心，而且要考验她很长时间。瓜尔蒂耶里先是用语言打击她。他装出心神不宁的样子，对夫人说因为她出身寒微，所以下属们对她很不满意。特别是当她生孩子时，大家一看是个女孩，都很不高兴，一直在嘀咕。

听到这些话后，夫人镇定自若，连一点多余的举动都没有。她说：“大人，您想对我做什么就做什么吧。只要能对您的名誉有利，能令您高兴，那您对我做什么，我都会心甘情愿地接受。我知道，我没有您的下属重要，而且我本就配不上您对我的尊重。”这个回答很合瓜尔蒂耶里的心意，因为他从这些话里听出，妻子并没有因为自己和他人的尊敬而骄傲自大。

没过多长时间，瓜尔蒂耶里又向妻子暗示，下属们容不下她生的这个女儿。然后，他又叫来府上一个仆人，派他去夫人那里做件事。到了格里塞尔达面前，仆人面露难色地对她说：“夫人，我要是不按大人吩咐的做，大人就会杀了我的。他让我把您的女儿带走，让我……”他说到这里，就没再说下去了。

格里塞尔达听了这话，再看看这个仆人的脸色，想起侯爵之前说的话，便明白了丈夫是派他来杀女儿的。尽管心里悲恸欲绝，但她仍然面不改色，立刻把女儿从摇篮里抱了起来，在一番亲吻、祝福之后，把孩子给了仆人，对他说：“带她走吧！既然你的主人要你这么做，那你按他的命令照做就是了。但请你别让鸟兽吃掉孩子的尸身，除非大人命令你必须这么做。”仆人抱着孩子，把夫人说的话重复给了侯爵听。妻子坚强的意志让他感到十分惊讶，于是，他把女儿送到了博洛尼亚的一位亲戚那里，请亲戚悉心照料教导她，但永远不要让孩子知道自己的身世。

不久，夫人又怀孕了，这次生下了一名男婴。瓜尔蒂耶里十分喜欢这个孩子，但觉得之前做的还不够，想用更大的打击来考验妻子。一天，他又装作心绪不定的样子对妻子说：“夫人，自从你生了这个

儿子，我手下那些人知道我死以后，贾努科雷的外孙要做他们的主公，就一直闹得不可开交。我实在受不了他们了。要想不被他们推翻，我恐怕还得再对儿子做一次上次对女儿做的事情，不然最后还得离开你，再娶一个女人。”妻子耐心地听他讲完，只是回答说：“大人，请您按自己的意愿行事。您只管让自己开心就好，不用考虑我。因为如果看到您不开心，我做什么事情都不会开心的。”

没过几天，瓜尔蒂耶里又像当年送走女儿一样，送走了儿子。和上次一样，他假装把孩子杀掉，但其实还是送到了博洛尼亚抚养。而夫人也和上次送走女儿时一样，没流露出一丝多余的神情，也没说一句多余的话。瓜尔蒂耶里看到后震惊了，越发确信没有女人可以做到她这般隐忍。如果不是亲眼看到格里塞尔达与自己一样疼爱孩子的话，他还以为妻子根本没把孩子放在心上呢。而格里塞尔达也很聪明，让丈夫看出了自己对孩子的爱。侯爵的下属们以为他真的把两个孩子杀了，于是都强烈地谴责他，觉得他是个残忍无情的人，也都对夫人表现出了极大的同情。别人家的夫人看她失去了孩子，过来安慰她。但她只是说，如果孩子的亲生父亲想这么做，那么她也愿意这么做。

女儿长大后，瓜尔蒂耶里觉得考验妻子忍耐力的最终时刻到了。当着众多下属的面，瓜尔蒂耶里宣称，他再也忍受不了夫人了，还说当初娶她是因为年少无知，所以想请求教皇特许，让他离开格里塞尔达，再娶新人。很多下属反对他，但他却说自己只能这么做。夫人听说这件事后，想到自己要回娘家，像从前那样终日放羊，还要看着另一个女人与自己心爱的丈夫在一起生活，心里十分难过。然而，就像以前接受不公的命运时一样，这次她仍然隐忍不发，听从命运的安排。

没过多久，瓜尔蒂耶里就派人从罗马寄回几封伪造的信，让手下的人看到，教皇已经在信中特许他休掉格里塞尔达，另娶他人。接着，他派人把格里塞尔达叫来，当着众人的面对她说：“夫人，我获得了教皇的特许，可以把你休掉再娶了。我的祖上都是这里的达官贵人，而你家世代都是农民，所以我不想让你做我的妻子了，但你可以带着嫁妆回贾努科雷家。我也已经找到了一位适合我的妻子，过几天就会把她娶来。”

夫人听到这些话后，费了好大的劲才克制住女人的天性，把眼泪咽到肚子里，回答道：“大人，我知道自己出身卑微，配不上高贵的您。多亏了上帝的恩赐和您的宠爱，我才能和您在一起。尽管您给了我尊位，但我始终不敢把自己当成侯爵夫人，只觉得自己沾了您的光。既然您想收回送给我的东西，那么我也愿意将它们还给您。这是您娶我时用的戒指，请您收下吧。至于您让我把带过来的嫁妆带走，

这既不用您花钱找人来搬，也不用我叫牲口来驮，因为我还没有忘记，我嫁给您时，什么也没有带过来，连身上穿的衣服都是您给的。如果您觉得可行的话，我也可以赤裸着走出去，让大家都看看我这为您生了两个孩子的身子。但我是带着童贞过来的，现在已经带不走了，所以我求求您看在这分儿上，除了本就不存在的嫁妆之外，至少让我再穿走一件衣服吧。”

瓜尔蒂耶里感动得直想哭，但仍然板着脸说：“那你就穿件衣服吧。”

周围的人都求侯爵再给夫人件衣裳，别让相伴十三年的妻子只穿一件内衣，走得那么寒酸，那么不光彩。但他们怎么求侯爵都没有用，夫人还是辞别了众人，摘去头饰，身穿一件单衣，赤足走出了侯爵府，回到了父亲家。所有看到这一幕的人无不痛哭流涕。而贾努科雷从未相信过瓜尔蒂耶里是真心实意要娶女儿为妻，所以每时每刻都在等待这一天的到来。他还一直留着瓜尔蒂耶里娶亲时，女儿脱下来的衣服，等女儿回娘家时再给她继续穿。回家后，格里塞尔达还是像之前一样干些杂务活。尽管命运多舛，她还是凭借顽强的意志忍耐了下来。

瓜尔蒂耶里做完这些事后，便对他手下的人说，自己看中了帕纳戈一位公爵的女儿，让他们好好筹备婚礼，又派人把格里塞尔达叫来。格里塞尔达到了后，侯爵对她说：“我新看中了一个姑娘，想让她第一次进我家门时风光一番。你知道，办这么一场婚礼，需要有人收拾屋子，处理许多杂务，而我府上没有一个女佣能担得起这差事。你比其他任何人都熟悉这些事务，所以我派你来主持工作。除此之外，你还要把这附近该邀请的太太都请过来，最后像迎接女主人一样，迎接我的新婚妻子。办完这些事后，你就可以回娘家了。”

这些话就像刀子一样扎在格里塞尔达心上。曾经的好运让她拥有了深爱丈夫的权利，现在她已然失去了这份权利，但实在不忍心割舍这份感情。然而，她只是回答说：“大人，我准备好了。”于是她穿着粗布衣衫，又走进了那座不久前身穿单衣离开的府第，开始布置房间。她在床头挂上装饰品，给客厅铺好地毯，又收拾了厨房。事无巨细，她都亲自动手，就像一个卑贱的女佣。直到把所有东西都布置妥当，又以侯爵的名义邀请完附近府上的夫人之后，她才停下歇了歇，等待婚礼的到来。到了婚礼那天，她面带笑容，迎接了所有的女宾。尽管穿着破衣旧衫，但她举止大方，谈吐得体，如同一位贵族夫人。

侯爵之前把孩子送给了博洛尼亚的亲戚抚养，而亲戚的丈夫正是帕纳戈的伯爵。现在，瓜尔蒂耶里和格里塞尔达的女儿已经长到了十二岁，出落得亭亭玉立，宛若仙女一般。他们的儿子也已经六岁了。瓜尔蒂耶里写信给亲戚，请他把女儿和儿子送回桑卢佐，还拜托他派

阵势浩大的随从护送他们，告诉所有人，女儿将会嫁给瓜尔蒂耶里侯爵，但不要告诉任何人她的真实身份。这位亲戚按照侯爵的请求一一照做，带着姑娘、弟弟和随从们出发了。几天后，他们在午餐时分到达了桑卢佐。当地所有村民，以及附近村子里的人都在桑卢佐等候瓜尔蒂耶里侯爵的新娘。女宾们把姑娘迎到了府上，而在布好筵席的客厅里，格里塞尔达像往常一样，兴高采烈地迎上去说：“欢迎夫人！”其实女宾们早就求瓜尔蒂耶里，让格里塞尔达待在另一个房间里，或者给她些衣物，别让她在客人面前出这么大的丑，但瓜尔蒂耶里不答应。这时，她们只好就座，等待婚礼开始。每个人看了那姑娘后，都说瓜尔蒂耶里换夫人换得好，格里塞尔达也对姑娘和她弟弟赞不绝口。

瓜尔蒂耶里看到所有这些场景，觉得对夫人耐心的考验已经足够了。他看到格里塞尔达从不改变态度，始终恭顺谦卑，又知道她很聪慧，并不是由于智力缺陷才会如此，所以认为是时候解除她所有的痛苦了。他还知道，尽管她没有把这些痛苦表现在脸上，但一定藏在了心里。于是，瓜尔蒂耶里把格里塞尔达叫来，当着所有人的面，微笑着问她：“你觉得我的新娘怎么样？”

“大人”，格里塞尔达回答说，“我觉得她非常好，既美丽又聪慧。我觉得，您和她一起生活，一定会成为世上最快乐的人。但我求求您，不要像对待您上一位妻子一样对待她，叫她受到那么多伤害。您的前妻自小就饱受苦难，所以并无大碍；而她一向被娇生惯养，是忍受不了这些挫折的。”

瓜尔蒂耶里看到格里塞尔达如此坚信自己会娶这姑娘为妻，而且没有一句抱怨的话，于是让她坐在自己身边，对她说：“格里塞尔达，你忍耐了这么长时间，是时候让你得到回报，也是时候让那些说我残酷不义的人知道我这么做的目的了。我之所以这么做，是想要教会你该如何做一个妻子，并且让大家知道该如何对待我的妻子，好让我们的生活永远平安顺利。刚娶你时，我非常害怕你会不听我的话，所以才想方设法地试探你，甚至伤害你。然而，你说的每句话都顺我的心，做的每件事都合我的意。我觉得拥有你，就等于拥有了我期盼的所有宽慰和欣喜。现在，我想一次性弥补之前对你的亏欠，用我全部的温柔抚慰你受伤的心。来，高高兴兴地牵起这姑娘和这男孩的手吧，因为你相信我要娶的这位姑娘就是我们的女儿，而这男孩就是我们的儿子。他们两人就是你们以为被我残忍杀害的孩子。而我，是你的丈夫，我爱你胜过世间万物。我相信，现在我可以自豪地说，没有人能够像我一样，对自己的妻子如此满意。”

说罢，他拥吻了妻子。格里塞尔达喜极而泣，和丈夫一起站起来，向女儿走去。他们的女儿听完这些事情后又惊又喜，在场的众人

几天后，帕纳戈伯爵回到了博洛尼亚。瓜尔蒂耶里也把丈人贾努科雷接到了府里，让他不必再劳累度日，以安享晚年。他又把自己和格里塞尔达的女儿嫁给了一个富贵人家，而他自己则和格里塞尔达幸福地生活了一辈子。

现在，我们能说什么呢？高尚的灵魂也会降临到穷人家里，正如一些为人主公的贵族子弟只配去喂猪一样。除了格里塞尔达以外，还有谁能像她一样，在自己的丈夫做了那些残忍无比的事情后，不仅可以忍住不哭，还能面带笑意呢？如果换成另一个女人穿着单衣，被瓜尔蒂耶里赶出家门的话，那她就会去找别的男人，让他再给自己一身漂亮的新衣服。这听起来好像也没什么不对的。

Andreuccio da Perugia's Neapolitan adventures

I was told some time ago about a young man from Perugia called Andreuccio, the son of a certain Pietro and a horse-dealer by trade. Having heard that horses were trading well in Naples, he put five-hundred gold florins in his bag and went off there with some other merchants, never having previously been away from home. He arrived on a Sunday evening, about vesper time, got the necessary information from his innkeeper and was in the market square early the next morning. He saw a lot of horses, many of which met with his approval, and did a good deal of bargaining without being able to agree a price for any of them. But he was keen to show that he was there to do some buying and naively and imprudently pulled out his bag of florins several times before the eyes of people coming and going past him. It was while he was negotiating, with his bag in full view, that a young Sicilian woman walked past. She was very beautiful, but ready to give any man what he wanted for a small payment. He didn't see her, but she saw his bag and immediately said to herself, 'Wouldn't I be a lucky one if that money were mine?' Then she went on her way.

There was old woman with her who was also Sicilian. As soon as she saw Andreuccio, she let the girl go on and hurried over to give him an affectionate hug. The young woman noticed and, without saying anything, stopped and waited for her on one side. Andreuccio, who had turned round and recognized the old woman, greeted her with great warmth. She promised to come and see him at his inn, but didn't keep him talking for too long just then and soon left. Andreuccio went back to his bargaining, though he made no purchases that morning. After seeing first the bag and then the intimacy with the old servant, the young woman began to wonder if she might get hold of some or all of the money. She asked a few cautious questions about who the young man was, where he was from, what he was doing there and how she came to know him. The old servant gave her all the information she wanted, almost in as much detail as Andreuccio might have supplied himself, being able to do this because she had spent a long time with his father first in Sicily and then in Perugia. She likewise told her where he was lodging and why he had come to Naples.

Once the young woman was fully informed about his family and their names, she had the basis for playing a clever trick that would bring her what she wanted. Back at her house she made sure that the old woman was busy all day so that she couldn't go and see Andreuccio. She had a much younger servant- girl to whom she had given a very good training in the sort of work she had in mind, and towards evening she sent her to the inn where Andreuccio was staying. When she arrived, she found him by chance standing alone in the doorway. She asked for Andreuccio and he said that he was the very man. At which she drew him to one side.

'Sir,' she said, 'there is a noble lady in this town who would appreciate a conversation with you, if you were so inclined.'

Andreuccio thought carefully for a moment when he heard this. He decided that he was a good- looking lad and deduced that this lady must have fallen for him, as if there were no other fine young men in Naples just then apart from himself. He quickly said that he was up for it, and asked where and when this lady wanted to have a talk with him.

The young servant- girl replied, 'She's waiting for you in her house, sir, whenever you feel like coming along.'

'Well, you lead the way and I'll follow on,' said Andreuccio immediately, with no thought of letting anyone in the inn know.

So the girl led him to the Sicilian woman's house, which was in a district called Malpertugio, a name meaning Bad Passage, which gives a clear idea of just how respectable a district it was. But Andreuccio, knowing nothing of this and quite unsuspecting, thought he was going to a most respectable house to see a lady of some standing, and confidently followed the girl into the house. As they were climbing the stairs, she called out to her mistress, 'Here's Andreuccio', and he saw her appear at the top, waiting for him.

She was still young, with a full figure and a lovely face, and her clothes and jewellery were tastefully ornate. When Andreuccio was closer, she came down three steps towards him, her arms wide, and, flinging them round his neck, stayed like that for a while without saying a word, as if too overcome to speak. Then she tearfully kissed his forehead and said in a broken voice, 'O my precious Andreuccio, welcome to my house!'

Such a heartfelt reception amazed Andreuccio, and he replied quite dazed, 'Well, it's wonderful to meet you, my lady!'

After this she took him by the hand and led him into the main room, and from there, without saying another word, into her private chamber, which was redolent with the scents of roses, orange blossom and other flowers. Andreuccio noticed a splendid curtained bed, and an abundance of beautiful dresses arranged on hangers in the south Italian way, and many other fine and costly items. In his inexperience he was fully convinced by all this that the woman could be nothing but a great lady. Once they were seated together on a chest that was at the foot of her bed, she embarked on the following speech.

'I am quite certain, Andreuccio, that you are startled at being embraced and wept over by me in this way. After all, you don't know me and may never have heard my name mentioned. But in a moment you are going to hear something which will perhaps amaze you even more. The fact is, I am your sister. And I can tell you that, since God has granted me the enormous grace of letting me see one of my brothers before I die – though of course I want to see all of you – I shall not die unconsolated. Perhaps you have never heard a word of this. So I shall happily tell you all about it.

'As I think you may have been told, Pietro – that is, your father and mine – lived for a long time in Palermo. Thanks to his native goodness and appealing character he gained the affections of those who came to know him and still has a place in their hearts. But, among those most attached to him, there was someone who loved him more than anyone else, and that was my mother, who was a noble lady and recently widowed. She loved him so much that she put aside all fears of her father and brothers and any concern for her honour, and entered into intimate relations with him. As a result I was born into the world and am now the person you see before you.

'A little later, when a reason arose for Pietro to return to Perugia, he left me, still a very little girl, with my mother. From everything I heard, he never gave me or her another thought. If he had not been my father, I would be very critical of him, considering the ingratitude he showed to my mother – and let's leave aside the love he should have felt for me his daughter, and not by a servant-girl or some woman of easy virtue either. My mother was inspired by the truest form of love when knowing nothing of who he was, she put herself and everything she had in his hands. But there you are Wrongs of long ago are more easily criticized than pu right.

‘So he left me a little girl in Palermo. When I had grown into more or less the woman you see before you, my mother, who was a rich lady, married me to a man from Agrigento, an upstanding man of noble rank. Out of love for myself and my mother he moved to Palermo, and there, being very much on the Guelf side, he became involved in plotting with our King Charles. King Fred erick got wind of the plot before any of our plans could be acted on, and so we had to flee Sicily just at the moment when I was expecting to become the finest lady there had ever been on the island. We took with us wha few things we could – I mean few in comparison to al the possessions we had – and, leaving our lands and man sions behind, escaped to this city. We found King Charles very grateful. He partially compensated us for the losses we had suffered on his behalf. He gave us lands and houses, and he still gives my husband, your brother- in- law a substantial pension, as you'll soon be able to see. So that is how I came to be here, and how, thanks to God's grace, though not at all to you, I now see you before me my sweet brother.’

With this she clasped him to her again and kissed his forehead, still weeping tenderly.

She told her cock- and- bull story in a supremely coherent and convincing way, with not a hesitation or stutter. Andreuccio recalled that his father really had been in Palermo and he knew from his own experience what young men are like, and how prone they are to falling in love. What with the tender tears, embraces and decidedly unamorous kisses, he was convinced that what she said was more than true. When she finished, he made the following reply.

‘My lady, you must not be shocked by my own amazement. To be candid, either my father for some reason of his own never spoke about you and your mother, or if he did speak of you, not a whisper reached my ears. So I had no more knowledge of you than if you had never existed. But it's all the more precious to me to have found you, my sister, in this place, because I'm here all alone and this was the thing I least expected. And to tell the truth, I can't imagine your not being precious to the grandest businessman I can think of, let alone to a small- scale merchant like myself. But please, explain one thing for me. How did you come to know I was here?'

'I was told this morning,' she replied. 'And the person who told me is a poor woman who spends a lot of time here with me, the reason being that, from what she says, she was with our father for a long time in both Palermo and Perugia. If it hadn't seemed to me more honourable for you to come here to what is your house than for me to come and see you at someone else's, I would have been with you ages ago.'

After this she started putting precise questions to him about his relatives, identifying each one by name Andreuccio told her about them all, becoming more and more willing to believe what he should not have believed at all.

Since they kept on talking for a long time and it was very hot, she called for white wine and sweetmeats, and ensured that Andreuccio was duly served. He made to leave after this since it was now dinnertime, but she wouldn't allow it. Looking deeply distressed, she flung her arms round him, saying, 'Oh, poor me, I can tell I don't really matter to you! To think that you're here with a sister you've never seen before, in her house, where you should have come and stayed when you arrived, and you want to go off and have your dinner in an inn. No, you'll dine with me, and though my husband is not here, I'm very sorry to say, I'll do what little a lady is capable of to see you are treated with some degree of honour.'

Andreuccio could only come up with one reply.

'You do matter to me,' he said, 'as much as any siste should. But if I don't go, I shall keep them waiting fo me for dinner all evening, which would be really churlish.'

'Lord in heaven,' she said, 'do you think I've nobody in the house I can send to tell them not to expect you? Though you would be doing a finer thing, not to say your duty, if you sent a message to your friends inviting them to come and dine here. Then afterwards, if you were set on leaving, you and all the rest could go off in one big party.'

Andreuccio replied that he had no wish to see his friends that evening, and that, if this was how she felt, she should treat him as she pleased. She then made a show of sending a message to the inn telling them not to expect him for dinner. After this they talked on for a long time before sitting down to eat. They were served in a splendid fashion with a series of dishes, the woman cunningly prolonging the dinner well into the night. When they got up from the table, and Andreuccio expressed a desire to leave, she said that she could not possibly allow it. Naples was not a city for anyone to walk through at night, especially a stranger. She had sent a message to say he should not be expected for dinner and then she had sent another regarding where he was staying. He believed everything she said, and was delighted, in his deluded state, to stay on.

At her instigation conversation after dinner was prolonged and varied. Late into the night she left Andreuccio in her own chamber, with a young servant- boy to show him anything he needed, while she herself went off to another room with her maids.

It was very hot and as soon as he saw he was alone Andreuccio removed his jacket and peeled off his leg gings, which he left over the bedhead. Feeling nature calling him to lighten his stomach of the excess weigh within it, he asked the servant where one did that sort o thing. The boy pointed to a door in a corner of the room

'Go in there,' he said.

Andreuccio went insouciantly though the door. By chance he brought one of his feet down on a board, the other end of which was no longer attached to the joist on which it was resting. The result was that the board swung up in the air and then crashed downwards, taking Andreuccio with it. God was kind to him and he did him self no harm in the tumble, although he fell from a considerable height, but he was thoroughly covered in the horrible filth that the place was full of. To explain the arrangement in order to give you a clearer picture of wha I've just said and what follows, two narrow beams had been fixed over the sort of narrow alleyway we often see separating two houses, with some boards nailed to them and a place to sit on fitted. It was one of these boards which had fallen with Andreuccio.

When he found himself down below in the alleyway he was extremely upset at what had happened and began calling out to the boy. But, as soon as he had heard him fall, the boy had rushed to tell his mistress. She in her turn rushed into the bedroom, quickly looked to see if his clothes were there and found them. With them was the money, which, crazily, the ever suspicious Andreuccio always carried on his person. The Palermo tart, who now had what she had schemed for by turning into the sister of the visitor from Perugia, couldn't care less any more about Andreuccio. She went promptly over to the door which Andreuccio had passed through when he fell, and closed it.

When the boy didn't reply, Andreuccio started calling more loudly, but to no avail. He was now becoming suspicious and beginning, somewhat late in the day, to have an inkling of the trickery. He climbed on to the low wall separating the alleyway from the street and, once down on the other side, found his way to the door of the house, which he easily recognized. He stood there for a long time, vainly calling out and shaking and banging on the door. He could now see the full extent of his misfortune quite clearly, which reduced him to tears.

'Oh, poor me,' he began saying. 'How little time it's taken for me to lose five- hundred florins and a sister too!'

After a lot more of this he began again beating on the door and calling out. The result was that many people living nearby woke up and then, when the din became unbearable, got themselves out of bed. One of the lady's female servants appeared at a window, looking all sleepy, and called out in an irritated voice, 'Who's banging away down there?'

'Oh, don't you know me?' said Andreuccio. 'I'm Andreuccio, the brother of Lady Fiordiliso.'

The servant replied, 'My good man, if you've had too much to drink, go and sleep it off and come back in the morning. I don't know anything about any Andreuccio or anything else you're gabbling on about. Do us a favour please go away and let us get some sleep.'

‘What?’ said Andreuccio. ‘Don’t you really know wha I’m saying? Oh, you must do. But if family relations in Sicily are like that and get forgotten as quickly as this at least let me have back the clothes I left with you and I’ll be glad to go on my way with only the Lord for company.’

The servant almost broke out laughing.

‘Good man,’ she said, ‘I think you’re dreaming.’

And even before she finished speaking, she was back inside with the window shut.

Andreuccio was now fully aware of his losses and the pain of the realization made him so angry it almost drove him wild. He could not recover what he had lost through words and he resorted to physical violence. He picked up a big stone and began savagely beating at the door again only now with much more force. At this many of the neighbours who had been woken up and were out of thei beds started thinking that he was some no- gooder who was inventing the whole palaver to bother the good woman. When the banging got too much for them, they started calling out from their windows, as if they were the neighbourhood dogs barking all together at some stray intruder.

‘It’s an outrage,’ they said, ‘coming at this hour of night to respectable women’s houses with all this claptrap. Oh, go away, for God’s sake, and please let us sleep. If you have anything to sort out with her, you can come back tomorrow. Just don’t be such a blasted nuisance tonight.’

What they were saying perhaps encouraged the good Sicilian woman’s pimp, who was inside the house, though he had not been seen or heard till now by Andreuccio. He came to the window and in his best horrible and savage voice called out loudly, ‘Who’s that down there?’

Andreuccio looked up when he heard this and saw someone who, so far as he could tell (which was not much), had the air of a man to be taken seriously. He had a thick black beard and was yawning and rubbing his eyes, as if he’d just awoken from deep sleep.

‘I’m a brother of the lady of the house,’ replied Andreuccio nervously.

The man did not wait for him to go on.

'I can't think,' he said in an even more intimidating voice than before, 'why I'm stopping myself from coming down there and giving you such a thrashing you won't ever move again. An irritating drunk of a donkey, that's what you must be, not letting anyone round here get any sleep tonight.'

With that he turned back inside and bolted the window.

Some of the neighbours knew what sort of a man he was and whispered a few fearful words of advice to Andreuccio.

'For God's sake,' they said, 'go away, good man, don't get yourself murdered down there. Go away for your own good.'

Being already terrified by the ruffian's voice and appearance, Andreuccio saw every reason for accepting this advice, which he felt was motivated by simple goodwill. He was now as dejected as anyone could be and despaired of recovering his money. He set off towards the part of the city he had come from following the servant-girl earlier that day, aiming to get back to his inn, but with no idea of the way. Then, since the stench he could smell coming from him was disgusting, he decided to go towards the sea in order to wash himself down. But he turned leftwards and headed up a street called the Ruga Catalana, or Catalan Way. This was taking him to the higher part of the city, when he happened to see in front of him two figures coming towards him with a lantern. He was afraid they might be part of the official watch, or else just up to no good. He noticed an open building nearby and quietly crept in to try to avoid them. But it was as if they had been directed precisely to that spot. They too entered the building. One was carrying various tools round his neck, which he unloaded, and the two of them began looking the tools over and commenting on them.

At a certain point in their conversation, one of them said, 'What can it be? I can smell the worst stink I've ever smelt.' And then, lifting up the lantern a bit, they saw the miserable Andreuccio.

'Who's that there?' they asked, astounded.

When Andreuccio said nothing, they came over to him with the light and asked him what he was doing there in such a repulsive state. Andreuccio told them the whole story of what had happened to him. They guessed where it could have been and said to each other, 'It must have all happened at that villain Buttafuoco's.'

'My good lad,' said one of them, turning to Andreuccio, 'you might have lost your money, but you have plenty reason for praising the Lord that you happened to have that fall and then couldn't get back into the house. If you hadn't fallen, you can be sure that you'd have been murdered as soon as you dropped off to sleep, and then you'd have lost your life as well as your money. But what's the point of crying over it at this stage? You've as much chance of getting a penny back as of picking stars from the sky. You're likely to end up dead if that villain hears you've been blabbing away.'

Then, after some conferring together, they put a proposal to him.

'Look, we feel sorry for you,' they said. 'So, if you want to join us in a certain project we are en route to perform, we are of the definite opinion that your share of the profits will amount to much more than what you have lost.'

Andreuccio, in his desperate state, replied that he was ready and willing.

That day had seen the burial of a certain Archbishop of Naples called Messer Filippo Minutolo. He had been buried in elaborate finery with a ruby ring on his finger worth over five hundred gold florins. The two of them had in mind to detach it. They explained the scheme to Andreuccio, who let greed override good sense, and the three of them set off.

Andreuccio was still giving off a strong smell as they proceeded towards the cathedral.

'Can't we find a way,' said one of the two at a certain point, 'for this companion of ours to have a wash some where to stop him stinking so horribly?'

'Yes,' said the other, 'we're near to a well now. It's always had a pulley and a big bucket. Let's go over and give him a quick wash.'

When they reached the well, they found the rope was there but the bucket had been removed. So they decided to tie Andreuccio to the rope and lower him into the well. Once at the bottom, he would wash himself, and then when he had done, he would give the rope a shake and they would pull him up.

So they moved into action and lowered Andreuccio into the well. But it so happened that some of the night watch were feeling thirsty because of the heat and also because they had been chasing after someone. They were coming towards the well to get a drink when the other two saw them, and at once took to their heels, without any of the company coming after water seeing them. Down in the well, Andreuccio, having finished washing, shook the rope a few times. The thirsty watchmen, who had now unstrapped their bucklers, their weapons and their surcoats, began pulling on the rope, believing that it was attached to a big bucketful of water.

As soon as Andreuccio saw he was near the rim of the well, he let go of the rope and grabbed hold of the rim in his hands. The sight was enough to terrify the watchmen, who immediately, without a word, let go of the rope and ran off as fast as they could. Andreuccio was profoundly startled. If he had not kept a firm hold, he would have fallen back into the well and perhaps have hurt himself badly, or even finished up dead. Once he was finally out of the well, he found the abandoned weaponry, which he knew his companions had not been carrying, and was even more amazed. Nervous, unclear what was going on, bemoaning his misfortune, he decided to take himself off without touching anything and wandered away with no idea of where he was heading. He was going along like this when he bumped into his two companions, who were coming back to pull him up out of the well. They were astonished and asked him who had actually done that. Andreuccio replied that he did not know, but gave them a full account of what had occurred and of what he had found by the well.

His companions realized what had happened and explained, laughing, why they had run away and who the people were who had pulled him up. Then, without wasting any more words since it was already midnight they all went off to the cathedral. They got in quite easily and reached the tomb, which was marble and very large. They used their irons to lift the cover, which was enormously heavy, raising it just enough for a single man to get inside, and then they propped it up.

When this was done, one of them asked, 'Who's going to go inside?’

‘Not me,’ said the other.

‘Nor me either,’ said the first. ‘But let Andreuccio go in.

‘I’m not doing that,’ said Andreuccio.

Both of them turned on him.

‘What do you mean you won’t go in?’ they said. ‘By God, if you don’t go in, we’ll give you a bashing round the head with one of these iron poles and that’ll be the end of you.’

This put the wind up Andreuccio. He went inside thinking to himself as he did so, ‘These two are making me enter the tomb in order to trick me. When I’ve passed them everything and am getting myself out again, they’ll be off and I’ll be left with nothing.’

He decided first and foremost to pocket his own share. He remembered the precious ring he had heard them discussing and, as soon as he was in the tomb, he took it off the Archbishop’s finger and put it on his own. Then he passed them the crozier, the mitre and the gloves and stripped the body down to the shirt, passing them each item, saying that was all there was. They protested that the ring must be somewhere and told him to look everywhere. He replied that he couldn’t find it and pretended to go on looking, keeping them waiting for some time. But they were as canny as he was. They continued telling him to keep looking and then, picking their moment, they pulled away the prop supporting the lid of the tomb and ran off, leaving Andreuccio enclosed within. Anyone can guess how Andreuccio felt when he heard the lid fall.

He tried many times to push up the lid with his head and shoulders, but his efforts were useless. He was so overcome with the anguish of it all that he passed out, collapsing on the Archbishop’s dead body. And anyone who had seen the two of them would have had difficulty deciding which was the more lifeless, the Archbishop or Andreuccio. When he came to his senses, he broke into a flood of tears, foreseeing that he could not avoid one of two ends. If no one came to open the tomb, he was doomed to die of hunger and the stink among the worms from the corpse. Or else, if people came and found him inside the tomb, he would be hung as a thief.

With these bleakly distressing thoughts going round in his head, he heard movement in the church and many people talking. They were, he gathered, going to do what he and his companions had already done. This sharply increased his terror. But when they had opened the tomb and propped up the lid, they began to argue about who should go inside, which none of them wanted to do. At last, after much dispute, a priest said, 'What are you frightened of? Do you think he's going to eat you? The dead don't eat people. I'll be the one to go in.' With this he leaned over the edge of the tomb, turned his head outwards and swung his legs inside in order to lower himself down. Andreuccio saw what was going on jumped up and seized the priest by one of his legs and made as if to pull him down inside. When the priest felt himself being pulled, he let out an enormous shriek and scrambled out of the tomb as fast as he could. This terrified the rest of them. Leaving the tomb open, they took off as if they were being chased by a hundred thousand devils.

Seeing them go, Andreuccio clambered out of the tomb, happier than he could have hoped, and left the church by the way he had come in. It was almost daylight as he walked off, trusting to luck, with the ring on his finger. But he reached the seafront and finished up some how at his inn, where he discovered that the merchants he had come with and the innkeeper had been worrying about him all night. He told them what had happened to him and they all opined that he should take the inn keeper's advice and leave Naples immediately. He quickly did so and returned to Perugia, with his funds now invested in a ring, after having set out to do some horse- trading.

Ricciardo da Chinzica loses his wife

There was once a judge in Pisa with more brains than muscle called Messer Ricciardo da Chinzica, who may have thought that what worked well with his studies would satisfy a wife too. Being very rich, he was able to devote considerable time and effort to searching for a good- looking young lady to marry, whereas, if he had been able to give himself the sort of professional counsel he gave to others, good looks and youth were just what he should have run away from. And he managed it: Ser Lotto Gualandi gave him one of his daughters in marriage. She was called Bartolommea and she was one of the best- looking and most fanciable girls in Pisa, though admittedly there aren't many there who don't look like hairy spiders. The judge took her home with great razzmatazz, and the marriage- feast was magnificent.

When he finally geared himself up for the actual consummation, he just about brought it off. But being scrawny, wizened and not exactly spunky, next morning he had to have a glass of fortified wine, some sweet biscuits and other pick- me- ups before he could re- enter the world of the living. The experience gave the judge a better idea of his capabilities than he had had before, and he began teaching his wife a calendar of saints' days of the kind that schoolboys pore over looking for holidays which might have been made in Ravenna. As he now showed her, there wasn't a day that wasn't a saint's day or rather every day had a multitude of them. Reverence for these demanded, as he demonstrated on various grounds, that man and woman should abstain from acts of congress. Then he threw in fasts, the four Ember days evening vigils for the Apostles and hundreds of other saints, Fridays, Saturdays, the Lord's Day, the whole of Lent, certain phases of the moon and endless other special cases, no doubt assuming that the breaks from court- work he enjoyed from time to time applied just as much to women in bed. So this was how he managed things for a long time, with his wife becoming seriously depressed from being given at best a monthly treat, while he always kept a watchful eye on her just in case someone else gave her lessons about working days like the ones he had given her about saints' days.

Since the next summer was very hot, Messer Ricciardo found himself wanting to go off to a beautiful property he had near Monte Nero, where he could relax and enjoy the air for a few days. With him he took his lovely wife To give her some entertainment while they were there one day he organized a fishing trip. The two of them sailed out on small boats to watch the spectacle, he on one with the fishermen, she on the other with some ladies. They were so captivated that they drifted several miles along the coast almost without realizing it. But while they were gazing in rapt attention, a sloop suddenly came on the scene, belonging to Paganino da Mare, a celebrated corsair of the time. Once it sighted the boats, it set a course straight for them. They were unable to get away fast enough and Paganino caught up with the boat with the ladies in it. As soon as he laid eyes on Messer Ricciardo's beautiful wife, he stopped wanting any other booty, and whisked her into his sloop under the eyes of her husband, who was now on shore, and sailed away.

It doesn't take much to imagine how upset the judge was by the sight, given that he was so jealous he was fearful of the very air she breathed. In Pisa and elsewhere, he started fruitlessly complaining about the criminal behaviour of corsairs, but without discovering who had carried off his wife, or where they had taken her.

When Paganino took in how beautiful she was, he felt that he was on to a good thing. Not having a wife, he thought he might hang on to her permanently and began gently soothing her tears, which were copious. He had long ago thrown away saints' calendars and forgotten all about feast- days and holidays. That night he consoled her with some action, on the grounds that words had not helped much during the day. His consolations were so effective that the judge and his rules had gone entirely out of her head before they reached Monaco, and she began to have the time of her life with Paganino. And once he had got her there, he not only consoled her day and night, but honoured her as his wife.

After a while Messer Ricciardo got wind of the whereabouts of his good lady. Ardently desiring to do something and believing that no one else could manage to do what needed to be done, he made up his mind to go and get her himself, being prepared to pay out any amount of money to recover her. So he set to sea and sailed to Monaco. Once there he caught sight of his wife, and she caught sight of him, as she reported back to Paganino that evening, also informing him what his intentions were. When Messer Ricciardo saw Paganino the next morning he went up to him and quickly started an easy, friendly conversation with him, while Paganino pretended all the while not to recognize him and waited for him to get to the point. When he judged the moment had arrived deploying his best abilities in the most ingratiating way possible, Messer Ricciardo disclosed the reason why he had come to Monaco, begging Paganino to take as much money as he wanted and give him back the lady.

‘Sir,’ replied Paganino with a cheerful expression on his face, ‘you are very welcome here. My reply in brief is as follows: it is true I have a young woman in my house though I don’t know whether she’s your wife or someone else’s. I don’t know anything about her except what I’ve gathered from her during her stay with me. If you are the husband as you say, I’ll take you to her since you seem to me a likeable gentleman and I’m sure she’ll recognize you very well. If she says that the situation is as you say and wishes to go away with you, then, since I do love a likeable man such as you, you can give me the amount you yourself decide on for a ransom. But if the situation should be different, it would be indecent for you to try to take her from me, since I’ve got youth on my side and can hold a woman in my arms as well as any man, particularly one who is more attractive than any other girl I’ve ever seen.’

‘She certainly is my wife,’ said Messer Ricciardo, ‘as you’ll soon see if you take me to where she is. She’ll fling her arms round my neck straight away. So I won’t ask for the terms to be different from those you’ve thought up yourself.’

‘Let’s go then,’ said Paganino.

So they walked off to Paganino’s house and went into a reception-room, from where Paganino sent for her. She appeared from a chamber properly and neatly dressed and went over where Messer Ricciardo was waiting with Paganino. There she addressed only the sort of remarks to Messer Ricciardo that she might have made to any other stranger who had come with Paganino to his house. The judge, who was expecting to be given a rapturous welcome, was amazed.

‘Could it be,’ he began to wonder, ‘that depression and my protracted sufferings ever since I lost her have altered me so much that she doesn’t recognize me?’

‘Lady,’ he said, ‘taking you fishing has cost me dear No one has suffered as much as I have since I lost you and here you are seeming not to recognize me, given the unfriendly way you’re talking. Can’t you see that I’m your Messer Ricciardo, who’s come here to pay whatever sum is demanded by this fine gentleman in whose house we find ourselves, so that I can have you back and take you away from here? He’s being kind enough to restore you to me for a sum of my own choosing.’

The lady turned to him and gave him a faint smile.

‘Are you addressing me, sir?’ she asked. ‘You should check you’ve not mistaken me for somebody else. As far as I’m concerned, I don’t recall ever seeing you before.’

‘It’s you who should check what you’re saying,’ said Messer Ricciardo. ‘Look at me properly. If you’re willing to do a little serious recalling, you’re bound to see that I’m your very own Ricciardo da Chinzica.’

‘Sir, you’ll forgive me,’ said the lady, ‘but it’s not as right and proper as you imagine for me to give you a lengthy looking-over. All the same, I’ve looked at you enough to know that I’ve never seen you before.’

Messer Ricciardo imagined that she was acting in this way out of fear of Paganino and did not want to admit to knowing him in his presence. So, after a few moments he asked Paganino if he would be so kind as to let him speak with the lady alone in her chamber. Paganino said that he was happy to do so, on condition that he didn’t start kissing her against her will. Then he told the lady to go with him into the chamber, listen to what he wanted to say and give him whatever reply she felt like.

Once the lady and Messer Ricciardo were in the chamber by themselves and had sat down, Messer Ricciardo began entreating her. ‘Oh, heart of my life, my own sweet soul, my one hope, don’t you recognize your Ricciardo, who loves you more than he loves himself? How can it be? Have I altered so much? Oh, lovely darling girl, at least give me a little look.'

The lady broke out laughing and wouldn't let him go on. 'You are very well aware,' she said, 'that I've not such a bad memory that I don't know you are Messer Ricciardo da Chinzica, my husband. But you made a poor show of knowing me as long as I was with you. You're not as wise as you want people to think you are, and you never were. If you had been, you really should have had the wit to see that I was young, fresh and frisky, and then have consequently acknowledged that young ladies require something else apart from food and clothing, though modesty forbids them to spell it out. But you know how you managed all that.

'You shouldn't have married, if you liked studying law more than studying your wife. Not that I thought you were much of a judge. You seemed more like a crier calling out holy days and feast-days, you knew them so well, not to mention fast-days and overnight vigils. Let me tell you that if you had given as many days off to the labourers working your lands as you did to the one who should have been working my little plot, you'd not have har vested one grain of corn. By chance I've met with this man here, chosen by God, because he shows a compas sionate concern for my young age. And I stay with him in this chamber, where no one knows what a feast-day is I mean those feast-days that you celebrated one after another, piously serving the Lord in preference to the ladies. Saturdays don't pass through that door, neithe do Fridays, vigils, Ember days or Lent, which just goes on and on. No, it's all work, day and night, banging away all the time. As soon as the bell rang for matins this morn ing, there we were back at it, doing the same job again and again, as I know very well. So I intend to stay and work with him while I'm young, and keep feast-days and penances and fasts for when I'm old. Get out of here as soon as you can and good luck to you. Go and keep you saints' days as much as you like without me.'

Messer Ricciardo's distress at hearing her speak like this was unbearable.

'Oh, sweet soul of mine,' he said, when he realized she had finished, 'what are you saying? Aren't you bothered at all about your family's honour or your own? Do you want to stay here as this fellow's tart, living in mortal sin rather than be my wife in Pisa? He'll get fed up with you and throw you out in total disgrace. But I'll always hold you dear and you'll always be the lawful mistress of my house, even if I didn't want to be your husband. Oh please listen. Are you going to let this unbridled, immora lust make you forget your honour and forget me, when I love you more than my very life? Please, my dear love, don't say things like that any more, just come away with me. Now that I know what you want, I'll really make an effort from now on. So, sweetheart, change your mind, come away with me. I've been so miserable since you were carried off.'

'Now that there's nothing to be done about it,' said the lady, 'I don't see how anyone apart from me can be squeamish over my honour. I just wish my family had been a bit more squeamish when they gave me to you! But since they didn't bother about my honour then, I don't intend to bother about theirs now. If my sin's a mortar one, I'll stay stuck in it like a pestle. So don't you worry about me. And what's more, let me tell you that I feel like Paganino's wife here, while I felt like your tart in Pisa, what with lunar charts and geometric squarings having to align your planet and mine, while here Paganino has me in his arms all night, squeezing me, biting me, and the state he leaves me in God alone can tell you. Then you say you'll make an effort. Doing what? Waiting for something to happen? Straightening it by hand? I can tell you've turned into a redoubtable knight since I saw you last! Go on, do your best to come to life. But you can't manage it. I don't think you belong in this world, you look such a wasted, miserable little wimp. And another thing. If he leaves me – which I don't think he's inclined to do as long I want to stay with him – I've no intention of ever coming back to you. Squeeze you til you squeaked, and you still wouldn't produce a spoonfu of sauce. That meant that when I was with you I just los out and paid out. I'm after better returns somewhere else To go back to where I started, I tell you there are no feast- days and no vigils here, where I intend to stay. So leave as quickly as you can, and the Lord be with you. I you don't, I'll start shouting that you're forcing yoursel on me.'

Messer Ricciardo saw that the game was up, recogniz ing there and then the folly in marrying a young wife without the appropriate wherewithal. He left the chamber in a saddened, suffering state and spoke a lot of waffle to Paganino, which got him nowhere. In the end, he left the lady and returned empty-handed to Pisa. The blow affected his mind and, when he was walking around the city, if someone greeted him or asked him a question, he would only reply, 'A horrid hole hates a holy day.'

It wasn't long before he died. When Paganino heard knowing how much the lady loved him, he took her as his lawful wedded wife. Thereafter, with no thought for holy days or vigils or Lent, they worked their patch as much as their limbs would let them, and had a wonderful time together.

Mrs Rosie and the Priest

So, to begin, there's a village not far from here called Varlungo, as every one of you knows or will have heard from other people. It had once a valiant priest, a fine figure of a man who served the ladies well. He was not much of a reader, but every Sunday he would spout wholesome holy verbiage beneath the churchyard elm to refresh the spirits of his parishioners. When the men were off somewhere, he would come visiting their wives more solicitously than any priest they'd had before, sometimes bringing religious bits and pieces, holy water or candle-ends into their houses, and giving them his blessing.

Now among the women of the parish he took a fancy to, there was one he particularly liked, called Mrs Rosie Hues. She was the wife of a labourer by the name of Willy Welcome, and she really was a lovely ripe country-girl, tanned, sturdy, with lots of grinding potential. She was also better than any girl around at playing the tambourine, singing songs like 'The water's running down my river', and dancing reels and jigs, when she had to, waving a pretty little kerchief in her hand. With all these talents, she reduced the good priest to a quivering wreck. He would wander round the village all day trying to catch sight of her. When he realized she was in church on a Sunday morning, he would launch into a Kyrie or a Sanctus and struggle to come over as a virtuoso singer, though he sounded more like an ass braying, whereas, when he didn't see her there, he barely bothered to sing at all. At the same, he was clever enough not to arouse the suspicions of Willy Welcome or any neighbours of his.

From time to time, he would send Mrs Rosie presents in an effort to win her over. Sometimes it was a bunch of fresh garlic, since he grew the best in the region in a vegetable garden he worked with his own hands, sometimes it was a basket of berries, and now and then a bunch of shallots or spring onions. When he saw his chance, he would give her a hurt look and mutter a few gentle reproaches, while she acted cold, pretending not to notice and looking all supercilious. So the estimable priest was left getting nowhere.

Now it happened one day that the priest was kicking his heels in the noontime heat out in the countryside with nothing much to do, when he bumped into Willy Wel come driving an ass loaded up with a pile of things on it back. He greeted him and asked him where he was going

‘To tell the truth, Father sir,’ replied Willy, ‘I’m off to town on a bit of business. I’m transporting these materials to Mr Notary Bonaccorri da Ginestreto to get him to aid and assist with a fiddle-faddle on the legal side that the assessor is officializing to put the whole house in order at last.’

‘That, my son, is a good thing to do,’ said the priest, full of glee. ‘Go with my blessing and come back soon. And if you should happen to see Lapuccio or Naldino, don’t let it slip your mind to tell them to bring me those straps for my threshing flails.’

Willy said he would do that and went off towards Florence, while the priest decided the time had come for him to go and try his luck with Rosie. He strode out vigorously and did not stop until he reached her house. He went in, calling out, ‘God be with us! Is anyone here?’

Rosie was up at the top of the house. Hearing him, she shouted, ‘Father, you’re very welcome. What are you doing all fancy free in this heat?’

‘God help me,’ said the priest, ‘I’ve come to spend a little time with you, having just met your man on his way to town.’

Rosie was downstairs by now. She sat and began cleaning some cabbage seeds her husband had sifted out a short time before.

‘Well, Rosie,’ said the priest, ‘must you go on being the death of me like this?’

Rosie began to laugh.

‘Well, what am I doing to you?’ she said.

‘You’re not doing anything to me,’ said the priest, ‘but you don’t let me do what I’d like to do to you, which is love my neighbour as God commanded.’

‘Oh, get on with you,’ said Rosie. ‘Do priests do thing of that sort?’

‘Yes,’ said the priest, ‘and better than other men. And why shouldn’t we? I tell you, we do a much, much better job. And do you know why? It’s because we let the pond fill up before the mill starts grinding. And truly I can give you just what you need, if you’ll only stay quiet and let me do the business.’

‘What do you mean, just what I need?’ said Rosie. ‘You priests are all tighter-fisted than the devil himself.’

‘I don’t know,’ said the priest. ‘Just ask me. Maybe you want a nice little pair of shoes, or a headscarf, or a pretty woollen waistband, or maybe something else.’

‘That’s all very well, Brother Priest,’ said Rosie. ‘I’ve enough of that stuff. But if you’re that keen on me, you can do me a particular favour, and then I’ll do what you want.’

‘Tell me what you’re after and I’ll be glad to do it,’ said the priest.

‘I have to go to Florence on Saturday,’ said Rosie, ‘to give in the wool I’ve been spinning and get my spinning wheel mended. If you let me have five pounds (which I know you’ve got), I’ll get the pawnbroker to give me back my purple skirt and the decorated Sunday belt I wore when I got married. You know not having it has meant I can’t go to church or anywhere respectable. And after that I’ll be up for what you want for evermore.’

‘God help me,’ said the priest, ‘I haven’t the money on me. But trust me, I’ll make sure you have it before Saturday.’

‘Oh yes,’ said Rosie, ‘you’re all great at making promises. And then you don’t keep any of them. Do you think you can treat me the way you treated Nell the Belle, who was left with just a big bass tum to play with? You’re not going to do the same to me, by God. She ended up on the game because of you. If you haven’t got it here, go and get it.’

‘Oh, please,’ said the priest, ‘don’t make me go all the way back to the house. You can tell my luck is up, and there’s no one about. It could be that when I came back someone would be here to get in our way. I don’t know when it might next stand up as well as it’s standing up now.'

'That's all very fine,' she said, 'but if you're willing to go, go. If not, you'll just have to manage.'

He saw that she was only going to agree to his wishes when a contract was signed and delivered, whereas he was hoping for a bit of free access.

'Look,' he said, 'you don't believe I'll bring you the money. What about if I leave you this blue cape of mine as a guarantee? It's a good one.'

Rosie gave him a haughty look.

'This cape,' she said, 'how much is it worth?'

'What do you mean, how much is it worth?' said the priest. 'Let me tell you it's Douai cloth, double ply, maybe triple ply, and there are even people here who say it's got some foreply in it. I paid seven pounds at Lotto's second- hand clothes shop less than two weeks ago. It had five shillings knocked off, so it was a bargain, according to Bulietto d'Alberto, who you know is a bit of an exper in blue cloths.'

'Oh yes?' said Rosie. 'God help me, I'd never have believed it. But give it to me first.'

The good priest, who was feeling hard- pressed by his loaded weapon, unfastened his cape and passed it over.

'Well, Mr Priest,' she said, when she'd put it away, 'let'go down here to the shed. It doesn't get visitors.'

So off they went. And there he covered her in the slop piest kisses in the world, introduced her to God's holy bliss and enjoyed himself generally with her for a good while. He finally left in the uncaped state priests normally appear in only at weddings and went back to the church

There he reflected how all the candle- ends he picked up from his parishioners in the course of a year weren'tworth half a fiver, and felt he had made a mistake. Now regretting leaving the cape behind, he started thinking about how to get it back at no cost to himself. Since he was quite crafty- minded, he figured out a good way o doing so. And it worked.

The next day being a feast- day, he sent the son of a neighbour of his to Rosie Hues's house, with a request for her to be so kind as to lend him her stone mortar since Binguccio del Poggio and Nuto Buglietti were dining with him that morning and he wanted to make a sauce. Rosie sent it back with the boy. When it got to round lunchtime, the priest guessed Willy Welcome and Rosie Hues would be eating. He called his curate and said to him, 'Pick up that mortar and take it back to Mrs Rosie. Tell her, "The Father is immensely grateful and would like to have back the cape the boy left with you as a guarantee."' '

The curate went to Rosie's house with the mortar and found her with Willy at the table eating their meal. He set down the mortar and gave them the priest's message.

Rosie was all set to give her reply to this request for the cape. But Willy's brow darkened.

'So you need guarantees from our estimated father, do you?' he said. 'I swear to Christ, I could really give you a clout up the bracket. Go and fetch it right now, and get yourself cankered while you're at it. And watch out for him wanting anything else of ours. He'd better not be told no, whatever it is. Even if it's our donkey, our donkey he gets.'

Rosie got up grumbling to herself and went over to the linen-chest. She took out the cape and passed it to the curate.

'You must give that priest a message from me,' she said, 'Say, "Rosie Hues vows to God that you'll never again be sauce- pounding in her mortar. That last time you didn't do yourself any credit."' '

The curate went off with the cape and relayed Rosie's message to the priest, who burst out laughing.

'You can tell her next time you see her,' he told him 'that if she won't lend out the mortar, I won't lend her the pestle. The one goes with the other.'

Willy believed that his wife had spoken as she did because he had told her off and gave the matter no further thought. But coming off worst made Rosie fall out with the priest, and she refused to speak to him until the grape- harvest, when he terrified her by threatening to have her stuffed into the mouth of the biggest devil in hell. She made her peace with him over fermenting mus and roasting chestnuts, and after that the two of them had a good guzzle together on various occasions. To make up for the five pounds, the priest had her tambour ine re- covered and a dinky little bell attached, which made her very happy.

Patient Griselda

Years ago a young man called Gualtieri inherited the marquissate of Saluzzo as the eldest son of the family. Being unmarried and childless, he spent all his time hunting birds and beasts, without giving a thought to marriage or future offspring. He should have been considered a very wise man, but his subjects disapproved. They kept begging him to get himself a wife so that he should not die without an heir and they should not be left without a lord. They kept offering to find him one with a suitable father and mother, who would satisfy their hopes and who would make him very happy.

Gualtieri's response was as follows: 'My friends, you are forcing me into something I had been completely set on never ever doing, given how difficult it is to find someone with the right character and habits, how plentiful are the inappropriate candidates, and how hard life becomes for the man who ends up with someone he doesn't get on with. You claim you can tell the daughters' characters from how the fathers and mothers behave, and argue on that basis that you can provide me with a wife I'll be pleased with. That is rubbish. I don't see how you can know the fathers properly, or the mothers' secrets for that matter. Besides, even if you could, daughters are very often unlike their fathers and their mothers. But since you like the idea of tying me up in these chains, I'll try to satisfy you, and, in order not to end up blaming anyone but myself if things should go wrong, I want to do the finding myself. But I tell you that if you don't honour and respect whoever I choose, you'll learn to your cost how hard it's been for me to take a wife against my will just because you begged me to.'

His valiant subjects replied that they would be happy just so long as he could bring himself to get married.

Gualtieri had been impressed for a good while by the behaviour of a poverty-stricken young woman from a village near his family home. Since he also judged her to be beautiful, he calculated that life with her could be very pleasant. He looked no further and made up his mind to marry her. He had the father summoned and entered into an agreement with this complete pauper to take the girl as his wife.

That done, he called together all his friends in the area he ruled.

‘My friends,’ he said to them, ‘you have been eager for me to make my mind up about a wife for some time. Well I have made a decision, more out of wanting to comply with your wishes than from any desire to be married on my part. You know what you promised me – that is, to be content with the woman I chose, whoever she was, and to honour her as your lady. The time has come when I am about to keep my promise to you, and when I expect you to keep yours to me. I have found very near here a young woman after my heart. I intend to make her my wife and to bring her into my house in a few days. So arrange for the marriage-feast to be a fine one and to give her an honourable welcome. In that way I shall be able to say I am happy with how you have fulfilled your promise, and you will be able to say the same about me.’

His trusty subjects all replied that they were happy with this and that, no matter who she was, they would treat her as their lady and would honour her as such in every way. Then they all set about organizing a suitably grand and joyous celebration. And Gualtieri did his part too, arranging for a sumptuous and splendid marriage-feast, to which he invited a multitude of friends, relations, great nobles and other people from the surrounding area. In addition he had beautiful, expensive dresses made to fit a young woman who, he judged, had the same measurements as the girl he had decided to marry. Not only that, but he ordered belts, rings and a lovely, costly tiara, plus everything else a new bride should have.

Soon after sunrise on the day appointed for the wedding, Gualtieri mounted his horse, and all those who had come to honour him did the same. Everything needed was now in order, and he called out, ‘Gentlemen, it is time to go for the new bride.’

After which he set off along the road to the village with the whole company. When they reached the girl’s father’s cottage, they found her hurrying back from the spring with some other women in the hope of catching sight of Gualtieri’s bride. When he saw her, he called out to her by her name – that is, Griselda – and asked her where her father was.

‘My lord,’ she replied bashfully, ‘he is in the house.’

Gualtieri dismounted and, telling everyone to wait entered the poor cottage. Inside he found the father, a man called Giannucolo, to whom he said, ‘I have come to make your Griselda my wife, but first I want to learn something from her own lips in your presence.’

What he asked her was whether, when he took her as his wife, she would do everything she could to please him would not be upset by anything he might say or do, and would be obedient, together with many other questions of this sort. She replied yes to everything. Then Gualtier took her by the hand and led her outside, where, in the presence of his whole company and everyone else, he had her stripped naked. He ordered the clothing he had had made to be brought and immediately had her dressed and shoes put on her, and a tiara placed on her hair unkempt though it was. Everyone was amazed.

‘Gentlemen,’ he said, ‘this is the person I intend should be my wife, if she wishes to have me for her husband.’

Then he turned to her, standing there bashful and awkward, and said, ‘Griselda, do you want me for your husband?’

‘Yes, my lord,’ she replied.

‘And I want you for my wife,’ he said.

With that, before everyone present, he formally married her. Then he had her set on a charger, with attendants to do her honour, and took her home. The marriage- feast was grand and fine, and the festivities no different from what they would have been if he had married the daughter of the king of France.

The young wife’s character and behaviour seemed to change with her change of clothing. As I said earlier, she had a lovely face and figure. And now to her natural good looks she added enough charm, attraction and refinement to make you think she could not possibly have been Giannucolo’s daughter and a shepherd- girl, but the daughter of some noble lord. Everyone who had known her before was astounded. What is more, she was so ready to obey and serve her husband that he considered himself the most contented and satisfied man in the world. She was similarly so gracious and kindly towards her husband's subjects that every one of them loved her wholeheartedly and spontaneously honoured her in every way, asking God in their prayers to give her health, prosperity and greater glory still. If they used to say that Gualtieri had acted ill-advisedly in taking such a wife, now they said he was a paragon of wisdom and insight, arguing that no one else could have perceived the exceptional virtues concealed beneath the poverty of her peasant dress. Al in all, before much time had passed, she had people speaking of her good qualities and virtuous deeds throughout the marquisate and beyond, and completely turning round any negative comments about her husband that had been made when he married her.

She had not been with Gualtieri very long when she became pregnant, and in due course she gave birth to a little girl, much to Gualtieri's delight. But a little later a strange idea came into his head. He felt a need to test her patience by inflicting unbearable torments on her over a prolonged period of time. First of all he made cutting remarks, and gave an impression of being angry with her. He said that his men were badly put out by her low-class origins, all the more now that she was having children. The girl-child was a particular source of resentment, and they wouldn't stop muttering about her.

When his lady heard this, she kept her composure and gave no sign of being thrown off the virtuous course she had set herself.

'My lord,' she said, 'treat me in the way that most accords with your honour and your happiness. I shall be content with anything. I am aware I'm less than they are and that I didn't deserve the honour you have had the generosity to bestow on me.'

Her response was warmly received by Gualtieri, who recognized that any honour that he or anyone else had paid her had not made her feel in the slightest bit superior.

A little while later, after giving his wife the general impression that his subjects couldn't stand the little girl she had borne him, he had a word with one of the household staff and sent him to her. The man addressed her with a distressed air.

'My lady,' he said, 'I am obliged to do something my lord commands me to do, if I do not wish to die. He has ordered me to take this daughter of yours and . . .’

He stopped there. Hearing his words and seeing his face, the lady recalled what her husband had been saying and deduced that he had orders to kill the child. She quickly took her from her cradle, kissed her and blessed her. For all the immense pain in her heart, she again kept her composure and put the child in the man’s arms.

‘Take her,’ she said, ‘and carry out to the letter what your lord and mine has ordered you to do. Only do not leave her for animals and birds to devour, unless he told you to.’

The servant took the child away and passed on what his wife had said to Gualtieri, who was astounded by her constancy. He then sent the servant off with the child to a female relative of his in Bologna, with a request to bring her up and educate her with the utmost care, but not to let anyone know whose daughter she was.

The next thing to happen was that the lady became pregnant again. In due course she gave birth to a male child, which pleased Gualtieri immensely. But what he had done already was not enough for him. His criticisms became sharper and sharper, and one day, his face contorted with rage, he said this to her:

‘My lady, ever since you had this boy child, I haven’t been able to live with these men of mine. They are bitterly against some grandson of Giannucolo ending up their lord after me. If I don’t want to be hounded out of here I’m afraid I’m going to have to do what I did the other time, and then in the end I’m going to have to leave you and take another wife.’

The lady heard him out without flinching.

‘My lord,’ was all she replied, ‘think only of contenting yourself and following your own inclinations, and don’t worry at all about me. Nothing matters to me except whatever I see pleases you.’

A few days later Gualtieri sent someone for his son much as he had done as regards his daughter. After a similar show of having him murdered, he dispatched him to Bologna to be brought up there, like the little girl. What the lady said and showed in her face was no different from before, which stunned Gualtieri. He declared to himself that there wasn’t a woman anywhere capable of behaving like that. If he hadn’t seen her visceral attachment to the children as long as she had his approval, he would have thought she was glad to see the back of them, but he knew that there was sense and wisdom in her.

His subjects, believing he had had his children killed strongly condemned him for his cruelty and felt nothing but compassion for the lady. When other ladies sympathized with her for having lost her children in this way, she said only that what pleased her was precisely what pleased the man who had fathered them.

Some years after the little girl's birth, Gualtieri decided it was time to put her capacity for endurance to the ultimate test. He told many of his men that he just could not bear Griselda being his wife any more, and that it was clear to him that marrying her had been a bad juvenile error; he was now going to do all he could to obtain special dispensation from the Pope to take another wife and leave Griselda. Quite a few of his better men took him to task, but he only replied that that was how things had to be. When his lady heard the news, she found herself having to face the idea of going back to her father's house, and perhaps tending the sheep as she had done in the past, with the added prospect of some other lady taking possession of the man to whom she had given all the love she had. She was devastated. But she had borne all the other wrongs that fortune had done her, and she set herself to bear this one with similar fortitude.

A little later Gualtieri arranged for some counterfeit letters to be sent from Rome and gave his subjects to believe that in these the Pope had given him dispensation to marry again and leave Griselda. He had her summoned and addressed her before a crowd of onlookers.

'My lady,' he said, 'thanks to a special concession granted me by the Pope, I can take another wife and let you go. Since my ancestors were from the high nobility and the lords of these lands, whereas yours have always been labourers, I intend that you should no longer be my wife and should go back to Giannucolo's house with the dowry you brought me. After that I shall marry someone I've found who will be appropriate for my station.'

Hearing this, the lady had to make an immense effort one beyond women's natural capacities, in order to keep back her tears.

‘My lord,’ she replied, ‘I always knew my lowly origin in no way accorded with your own nobility. I was glad to attribute to God and to yourself the position I have enjoyed with you. I have never thought it something I had been given, or treated it as anything more than a loan. Your wish is to recover it. I must make it my wish to let you have it, and I am happy to do so. Here is the ring with which you married me. Take it. You order me to carry away with me the dowry I brought you. That’s not something for which you’ll need a banker, or for which I’ll need a bag or a packhorse. It does not escape me that you took me in naked. If you consider it decent for that body in which I carried the children you fathered to be seen by all and sundry, I shall go away naked. But I beg you that you let me have some payment for the virginity that I brought here and do not take away again by allowing me, over and above my dowry, to have a single shift to wear.’

Gualtieri wanted to weep more than anything else. But his face stayed as hard as ever.

‘So you go off with a shift then,’ he said.

Everyone round him begged him to make her the gift of a robe, and not let the woman who had been his wife for thirteen years or more be seen leaving his house penniless and utterly humiliated, which was what leaving in just a shift would mean. But their requests came to nothing. So it was in a shift, barefoot and bareheaded, that the lady commended them to God’s care, and walked out of her husband’s house and back to her father’s, amid the weeping and wailing of all who saw her.

Giannucolo had never been able to believe that Gualtieri really wanted his daughter as his wife, expecting every day something like this to happen, and had kept the clothes she was wearing on the morning Gualtieri married her. He brought them out and she put them on. Then she gave herself over to the menial tasks around her father’s house that she used to do in the past, valiantly bearing the savage assault that hostile fortune had inflicted on her.

Gualtieri’s next step was to pretend to his subjects that he had got himself a daughter of one of the Counts of Panago. In the course of the grandiose preparations for the marriage ceremony, he sent for Griselda to come and see him.

‘I’m bringing here as my bride,’ he said to her when she arrived, ‘this lady I’ve very recently promised to marry. My intention is to receive her with due honour when she comes here for the first time. You’re aware that I don’t have ladies in the house who can spruce up the rooms and do all the things required for a festive occasion of this sort. Since you know better than anyone else how this house works, sort out what needs to be done, and also invite a welcome party of ladies you think suitable, and receive them as if you were the lady in charge. Then once the marriage-feast is over, you can go back to your own house.

His words were so many knives in Griselda’s heart. She had never been able to abandon the love she felt for him in the way she had let go of her good fortune.

‘My lord, I am willing and ready,’ she said.

And so, in a makeshift dress of thick, rough cloth, she went back into the house she had left in just her shift no long before, and began sweeping the chambers and tidying them up, fixing hangings and drapes in the halls, and getting the kitchen ready, doing every single thing with her own hands as if she were nothing but a mere servant-girl. Nor did she stop till she had everything as neat and orderly as the occasion required.

Once she had had invitations sent out on Gualtieri’s behalf to all the ladies in the area, the only thing left for her to do was to await the coming festivities. When the day of the wedding-feast arrived, in spite of the poor clothes she had on, she gave every one of the ladies who came a joyful and dignified welcome.

Gualtieri had taken care the children should be properly brought up in Bologna by his female relative, who had married into the house of the Counts of Panago. The girl was now twelve and the prettiest creature ever, and the boy was six. Gualtieri had written to the relative’s husband, asking him to be so good as to bring his daughter and son to Saluzzo, accompanied by an appropriate guard of honour, and to tell everyone that he was bringing the girl to be Gualtieri’s wife, with no hint to anyone of who she really was.

This gentleman did as the Marquis asked and set off with the girl, her brother and the guard of honour. After some days, around the time of the morning meal, they arrived in Saluzzo, where they found all the local people and many others from round about waiting for this new bride of Gualtieri. The girl was greeted by the ladies and entered the hall where the tables were laid out. Griselda, dressed just as she was, went towards her happily enough, saying, 'My lady is welcome.'

The other ladies, who had repeatedly but fruitlessly begged Gualtieri either to let Griselda stay in one of the chambers or to lend her one of the robes that were once hers, so that she would not appear before the visitors looking as she did, were now assigned their places at the tables and began to be served. The girl was the object of everybody's attention and the general view was that Gualtieri had made a good exchange. One of those who was most lavish with her praises, both of the girl and of her little brother, was Griselda.

Gualtieri thought he had now had all the proof he could want of the patience of his lady. He could tell that it was not at all affected by events, no matter how bizarre they were, and, given the wisdom he knew was in her he was sure that dullness of mind was not a factor. He decided it was time to release her from the tortures he judged she must be suffering beneath her calm and steady exterior. He had her come forward and, before everyone who was there, gave her a smile and asked:

'What do you think of our bride?'

'My lord,' replied Griselda, 'I can only think very well of her. If her good sense is equal to her beauty, as I believe it must be, I have no doubt that living with her will make you the most most contented lord in the world. But I beg you with all my heart not to inflict on her the sort of wounds you inflicted on the other one, the one who was your wife before. I can't really believe that she could stand it. She's younger, and what's more she's been brought up in luxury, whereas the other had spent her childhood doing hard physical work.'

Gualtieri could see that she firmly believed that the girl was going to be his wife and yet still said nothing he could disapprove of. He sat her down at his side and then spoke and inhuman to acknowledge that what I did had a deliberate purpose. I wanted to teach you to be a wife, to teach my critics how to take a wife and to keep one, and to bring about for myself unbroken peace and quiet for as long as my life with you might last. This was something I was very afraid wouldn't happen when I first took a wife. It was to test if it were possible that I inflicted on you the wounds and torments you are all too aware of.

'Since I have never perceived you going against my wishes in anything you have said or done, I judge that I do indeed have from you the contentment I desired. I therefore intend to restore to you in one single moment what I took from you over the years, and to apply the sweetest possible medicine to the wounds I inflicted. So now, with joy in your heart, receive this girl you think is my bride, and her brother too. These are our children that you and many others have long thought I had brutally murdered. And I myself am your husband, who loves you more than anything else. I think I can rightly and honestly boast that no other man alive can be as happy with his wife as I am.'

After this speech he put his arms round her and kissed her. He then raised her to her feet and led her, weeping for joy, over to where their daughter was sitting, astounded by what she was hearing. They tenderly embraced the two children, and then told the girl and many other people there the truth of the situation. The ladies were delighted to get up from the tables and go with Griselda into one of the chambers. Expressing hopes of a better outcome this time, they helped her out of her rough clothing and dressed her in one of her noble robes. Then they led her back into the hall a courtly lady, which even in her rags she had retained the air of being. There followed a moment of marvellous celebration with the children, and everyone showed their joy at the way things had turned out. Then they plunged into fun and merrymaking, which went on for days.

Everyone judged Gualtieri to have shown great wisdom, though they judged the tests inflicted on his lady to have been too severe, indeed intolerable. Griselda they held to have shown more wisdom than anyone.

After some days the Count of Panago returned to Bologna and Gualtieri took Giannucolo away from his work. From then he was treated as a proper father-in-law, and lived very happily and much respected until a ripe old age. After finding a noble husband for his daughter, Gualtieri himself lived a long and happy life with Griselda and treated her with all possible honour.

What can be said here except that divine spirits descend from heaven even into poor houses and into royal houses come spirits which deserve more to look after pigs than be lords over men? Who else but Griselda could have borne the callous, unprecedented tests Gualtieri subjected her to, not just without tears but with what looked like cheerfulness? Perhaps it would have served him right if the woman he happened to pick had let another man shake her muff when she was driven from home in the shift, and that way got herself a decent dress.

泄密的心

对！神经质，我一直都患有严重的神经质；但是你们为什么要说我疯了呢？我的病并没有摧毁我的感觉力，没有使它变得迟钝，而是使它更加敏锐。尤其是听力异常地敏锐。我听得到天上和地下的所有声音。我听到地狱里的许多事情。试想，我怎么会是疯子呢？听吧！我来给你们把事情的来龙去脉讲一讲，看我讲得多么有条有理，心平气和。

不知道这个念头是什么时候钻进我的脑子里的；可是一旦形成，它就日没夜地缠着我。说起来没有任何目的，也没有任何冲动的情感。我喜欢那个老头儿。他从来没有亏待过我，从来没有侮辱过我。我也不贪图他的财富。我想是他的眼睛！对，就是这个！他有一只眼睛很像兀鹰的眼——一只浅蓝色的，上面蒙着一层薄翳的眼睛。每当这目光一落到我身上，我浑身的血液就变得冰凉；因此我渐渐地很慢很慢地下定了决心，要干掉那个老头儿，从而永远摆脱那只眼睛。

要害就在这里。你们以为我疯了。疯子什么都不知道。可是你们没看到我是怎么做的。你们没看到我干得多么漂亮！那样地小心谨慎、深谋远虑，那样巧妙地掩饰！在下手的前一个星期中，我对老头儿比什么时候都好。每晚午夜时分，我悄悄拨动他的门闩，推开门——哦，动作轻极了！然后，当门缝打开到我的头可以伸进去的时候，我先把一只黑灯笼塞进去，灯笼上下封得严严实实，没有一丝光线漏出，然后我把脑袋伸了进去。哦，你要是看到我当时的机灵样，一定会哈哈大笑的！我的动作很慢，慢极了，生怕把老头儿从睡梦中惊醒。我用了一个钟头的时间才把整个脑袋伸进门缝，使我能看到他躺在床上。哈！——一个疯子会这样聪明吗？然后，当我的头完全伸进屋里之后，我小心地打开灯笼——哦，那么小心——小心（因为铰链会吱呀作响）。只打开那么一点，让一丝细细的光线落在那只兀鹰般的眼睛上。就这样我一连去了七个晚上，每次都在午夜时分，可是那只眼睛总是闭着的，这样我就无法干那桩事。因为惹恼我的并不是那个老头儿，而是他邪恶的眼睛。每天早晨天一亮，我就大胆地走进他的房间，勇敢地和他攀谈，亲热地唤着他的名字，问他晚上睡得可好。所以你瞧，老头儿要能想到我在每天午夜时分趁他睡着的时候窥视他的话，那他可真是老谋深算了。

第八个晚上我开门的时候特别地小心。手表的分针都比我的手动得快些。那晚我第一次感觉到了自己的力量有多大，感觉到自己是多

么聪明。我几乎无法控制自己的得意。想想吧，我在那儿一点点地推门，而他做梦都想不到我秘密的行动和思想。想到这里我不禁窃笑了起来；可能听到了我的声音，床上的他突然动了一下，像是受了惊。你可能以为我会退缩——可我没有。他的房间漆黑一片，伸手不见五指（百叶窗紧紧地关着，因为怕有强盗），我知道他不会看见门开了，所以我继续稳稳地、稳稳地推动房门。

我把头伸进来了，正要打开灯笼时，我的手指不小心碰动了洋铁门，老头儿从床上腾地坐了起来，叫道：“谁在那儿？”

我不吱声，一动不动地站着。整整一小时我一块肌肉都没动一下，同时也没有听到他躺下。他仍旧坐在床上听着；就像我自己这样，整夜整夜地，听着墙中死神守望者的声音。

不多久我听到了一声轻微的呻吟，我知道这是人在极度恐惧下发出的呻吟。它不是疼痛或悲哀的呻吟。哦，不是的！它是在不堪恐惧的重压时，从灵魂深处发出的低沉而压抑的声音。我很熟悉这种声音。许多夜晚，午夜时分，全世界都在熟睡的时候，它也会从我自己的胸中涌出，带着可怕的回音，加深了那令我不安的恐惧。我说我很了解。我了解老头儿的感受，并同情他，尽管我在心里偷偷暗笑。我知道自从听到第一声微响，他在床上翻了个身以后，他就一直没有再睡着。他的恐惧在不断地增强。他试图想象它们是毫无根据的，可是不能够。他对自己说“那只是烟囱里的风，那只是一只耗子跑过去了”或“只不过是一只蟋蟀叫了一声”。是的，他试图用这些假说来安慰自己，可是都没有用，都没用，因为死神在悄悄走近他时，已经把自己的影子投在了他的身上，把他整个笼罩了。正是这无形的影子的悲惨影响使他感到了——尽管他既没有看到也没有听到——房间中我的脑袋的存在。

我非常耐心地等了很长的时间，还没有听到他躺下，于是我决定把灯笼打开一条缝，一丝极小极小的缝。我便这么做了，你想象不出我是多么小心翼翼，小心翼翼，终于，缝隙中射出一线微光，细若蛛丝，正好落在那只兀鹰般的眼睛上。

那眼睛睁着，大大地睁着，我凝视着它，不禁火冒三丈。我对它看得一清二楚，灰暗的蓝眼珠，上面还蒙着一层可恶的薄翳，它使我骨髓发凉；可是我看不到老头儿脸上或身体的其他任何部分，我好像是本能地把光线对准了那个该死的部位。

我不是说过被你们当作疯子的人只是感觉过于敏锐吗？现在，啊，我听到了一种低低的、沉闷而急促的声音，像是一只裹在棉花里的表在响。我对这声音也很熟悉。这是那老头儿的心跳。它加剧着我的愤怒，就像战鼓激发士兵的勇气一样。即使是这样我仍然克制住了

如果你认为我疯了，那么等我讲述了我藏匿尸体时的谨慎周全之后，你就不会再这么想了。黑夜在渐渐过去，我急促却无声无息地干着活。首先我把尸体肢解了，把脑袋、胳膊和腿切了下来。

接着我抽出了三块地板，把尸体全部塞入地板中间，然后把地板重新铺好，铺得那样聪明，那样巧妙，任凭谁的眼睛——就连他的眼睛——也看不出任何破绽。没有什么需要冲洗，没有任何污迹，半点血迹也没有。我非常机警，全部都接在一只盆里了——哈！哈！

当我干完时，约莫是四点钟的光景，天仍然黑得像半夜一样。正在钟打四点的时候，大门上响起了敲门声。我怀着一颗轻松的心去开门，现在有什么可怕的呢？进来了三个男人，十分和蔼地自我介绍说他们是警官。一个邻居在夜里听到了一声尖叫，因疑心有不轨行为，向警察局报了案，他们（这三个警官）奉命对屋子进行搜查。

我笑了，我有什么可怕的？我欢迎三位先生的来访。我说那声尖叫是我自己在睡梦中发出的。我提到那老头儿去乡下了。我领着客人视察了整幢房子。我请他们仔细地搜查。最后我把他们带到了他的房间。我让他们看他的财宝，样样安好，纹丝未动。我仗着自信头脑一热，干脆搬来了几把椅子，让他们就在这里歇一歇脚。我得意忘形，把自己的椅子正好搁在了安放死者尸体的那个地方。

警官很满意。我的态度打消了他们的疑心。我泰然自若。他们坐在那儿，我愉快地回答他们的问题，于是他们随便地闲聊起来。可是，没过多久，我感到自己脸色开始发白，希望他们快走。我的头疼了起来，耳朵里有个声音在响，可他们还坐在那里聊着。耳朵里的声

音清晰起来了，它继续响着，越来越清晰。我更起劲地说话，试图摆脱这种感觉；可是它仍然在响，而且更清晰了，直到最后，我发现那声音不是在我的耳朵里。

我的脸色现在一定非常苍白，可是我更流利地说话，并且提高了嗓门儿。然而那声音更响了，我能怎么办呢？那是一种低低的、沉闷而急促的声音，很像一只裹在棉花里的表发出的声音。我喘息着，然而警官们没听到它。我更快地说话，我更激烈地说话；可那声音在不断地增强。我站起来，打着激烈的手势，提高了调门为一些小事而争论，可那声音在不断地增强。他们为什么还不走？我迈着沉重的步子在地板上走来走去，仿佛被他们的话所激怒，可那声音在不断地增强。哦，上帝啊！我能怎么办呢？我口吐白沫，我胡言乱语，我发誓赌咒！我挥舞着我坐的那把椅子，把它在地板上碾动，可是那声音高过了这一切，而且不断地增强着。它越来越响，越来越响，越来越响！那几个人仍然愉快地聊着，而且微笑着。他们会不会没有听见？万能的上帝！——不，不可能！他们听到了！——他们怀疑了！——他们知道了！——他们在讥笑着我的恐惧！——我这样想，现在也还这样想。可是什么都比这种痛苦要强！什么都比这种嘲笑要好受些！我再也受不了这种虚伪的微笑了！我感到必须要大声尖叫，或者死掉！——来来——又来了！——听啊！越来越响！越来越响！越来越响！越来越响！——

“坏家伙们！”我尖叫道，“别装了！我招认！——扯开地板！——这儿，就是这儿！——是他那颗该死的心在跳！”

厄歇尔府的倒塌

| 你的心是敏感的弦琴，轻轻一触便发出幽鸣。

——德·贝朗热

那年秋季的一天，整个白天愁云惨雾，死气沉沉，听不见一点声音，黑压压的乌云低悬在空中。我独自骑着马，穿过一片特别阴郁肃杀的乡村，最后当黄昏渐至，夜幕四合的时候，终于看见了那座忧郁的厄歇尔府邸。我不知道究竟是怎么回事，但当我第一眼看见那所房子，就有一种感伤之情在我心头弥漫，令我无法忍受。我说无法忍受，是因为当人们目睹自然界最荒凉萧条、最阴沉恐怖的景象时，通常会产生一种因富有诗意而令人欣慰的情愫，而此刻我的感伤却没有因这种情愫而得到丝毫解脱。我凝望眼前的这幅景象，凝望那座孤零零的房屋，以及周围纯朴的地貌风景，凝望那惨白凄凉的墙壁，凝望那像眼睛一样惆怅失神的窗户，凝望那几排熏衣草，凝望那几棵枯树的白色树干，内心感到万念俱灰，我只能把这种心境比作瘾君子服用鸦片后大梦初醒、陷入庸常生活后的痛苦以及脱去伪装面纱时的恐惧，除此之外没有任何尘世的情怀所能比拟。这是一种冷彻骨髓的感觉，是一种越陷越深的感觉，是一种心灵深处的厌憎，是一种从未体验过的恐怖意识，无论怎样百般地刺激想象力，都无法体会到任何崇高之感。是什么——我凝神静思——是什么使得我在凝视厄歇尔府邸时感到如此忧郁惆怅？这是一个无法破解的谜。而且我在沉思时无法抓住那些逼近我的阴暗朦胧的幻觉。我不得不勉强地聊以自慰地这么判定：肯定是一些十分简单的自然物体结合在一起，对我们构成了如此强烈的震撼力，而对这种力量的分析则超出了我们的理解深度。我思忖道，只要把这幅景象中的特殊物体稍做调整，把画面的细节略加修改，就足以改变甚至消灭它那令人无限忧伤的特性。为了把我的这一思想付诸实施，我勒住缰绳使马慢下步子，来到一个漆黑可怖的山中小湖的陡峭岸边。这个小湖坐落在寓所旁边，闪耀着宁静的光泽。我朝下面望去，却猛地打了一个寒噤，我看到灰色熏衣草、模样狰狞的树干和眼睛般空洞的窗户在水中扭曲的倒影，比刚才更感到毛骨悚然。

尽管如此，我还是建议自己在这座阴郁的房子里逗留几个星期。房子的主人罗德里克·厄歇尔曾经是我儿童时代的一个玩伴，但是我们已经有许多年没有见面了。不过，最近他有一封信寄给千里迢迢之外

的我，其中以迫切的、不近情理的口吻，叫我务必亲自给他答复。信的手稿显示他的心情焦虑不安。写信人说到严重的身体疾病，说到一种令他忧虑的精神失常，还说到想见我一面的迫切愿望，因为我是他最亲，实际上也是唯一知心的朋友，他希望通过和我轻松愉快的交往，能够多少减轻他的疾病。他就是用这种口吻说到这些和其他许多事情的，他显然是以一片真心向我提出请求的，不允许我有半点迟疑。于是，我立刻服从了这一我仍然认为非常蹊跷的召唤。

尽管我们童年时代是十分亲密的玩伴，其实我对这位朋友了解甚少。他一向不爱说话，沉默寡言是他的习惯。不过，我知道他的渊源悠久的家族，多年以来一直因性情极为敏感而闻名。在久远的过去，这种敏感曾经通过许多杰出的艺术作品得到展现，而最近，这种敏感又通过不断慷慨而又谦逊的乐善好施得到体现，此外还有对复杂的音乐科学的全身心的热爱，这甚至超过对传统的、一目了然的美的羡慕。我还了解到这样一个惊人的事实，厄歇尔家族尽管多少年来深孚众望，但其根基上从未生长出常青不朽的枝蔓。也就是说，整个家庭代代一脉单传，除了十分个别、十分暂时的例外，总是人丁不旺。我一边思绪如潮地想着这座府邸的特色与厄歇尔的家族特征完全相符，想着在多少个漫长的世纪里，房屋可能对人产生的影响，同时想到，就是这种不足，这种也许属于次要问题的缺憾，以及由此产生的父亲将遗产和姓氏不偏不倚地传给儿子的做法，最终使得两者合而为一，把房屋原来的名字变成了“厄歇尔府”这个古怪而双关的称呼。这一称呼在使用它的庄户人看来，似乎既包含家族，又包含着家族宅屋的意思。

前面已经说过，我那多少有点孩子气的试验——在山中小湖边俯瞰——的唯一结果反倒是加深了最初的那种奇特印象。毫无疑问，我越是意识到迷信思想——为什么不能用这个词呢？——在我心中迅速泛滥，越是反而加速了它的泛滥。这就是基于恐怖的一切情感的荒谬法则，我很久以前就知道。也许正是仅仅由于这个原因，当我再次将目光从水中倒影中抬起，转而凝望宅屋本身时，心里便产生了一种奇特的幻想，这幻想是如此荒诞不经，我之所以提到它，只是为了说明当时困扰我的情感是多么鲜明强烈。我努力调动我的想象力，使自己真的相信，在这整个宅屋和领地上，笼罩着一种它们及毗邻地区所特有的气氛，这种气氛和空中的大气没有任何相似之处，它是从枯朽的古树、灰暗的墙壁和寂寞的小湖中散发出来的，是一种瘟疫般有害的、神秘诡谲的雾气，沉闷，迟滞，若隐若现，是一种沉甸甸的铅灰色。

我摆脱精神上那种如梦似幻的感觉，更加专注地审视那座宅屋的真实面貌。它最主要的特点似乎就在于极其古老。无数个岁月的风吹日晒使它剥蚀褪色。房子外部长满细小的菌类，像错综复杂的网一

样，从屋檐上悬挂下来。然而，这一切绝不能算特别破败凋敝。砖石结构的每一部分都完好无损，它各个部分依然十分协调，但每块石头已渐渐碎裂，这之间似乎存在某种狂乱的、自相矛盾的东西。这不由得使我想起华而不实的老式木结构建筑：在漫长的岁月里，某个被人忽视的拱顶由于长年不通风，正在渐渐腐烂。不过，这座房屋除了外表有大面积的破败以外，整体结构丝毫没有动摇欲坠之感。也许，某个一丝不苟的观察者会发现一道几乎不易察觉的裂缝，从正面的屋顶延伸下来，蜿蜒曲折地贯穿整个墙壁，最后隐入小湖的死水中。

我注意到了这些，便骑马穿过一条短短的堤道，来到宅屋前。一位等在那里的仆人把马接了过去，我则跨入门厅哥特式的拱廊。一个男仆迈着鬼鬼祟祟的步子，一言不发地领我穿过许多黑暗而曲折的甬道，来到他主人的书房。不知怎的，一路上目之所及，竟使我刚才描述过的那种无法言说的感觉更加强烈了。尽管周围的一切——天花板上的雕画、墙壁上阴暗的挂毯、漆黑的乌木地板，以及随着我的脚步嗒嗒作响、显得鬼影幢幢的盔甲纪念品，都只是，或类似于我童年时代就已然看惯的事物——尽管迟疑着不愿意承认我对这一切是多么熟悉，我依然惊异地发现一些普通的形象竟能在人心里激起如此陌生的幻想。在一道楼梯上，我遇见了这里的家庭医生。在我看来，他的脸上是一种夹杂着卑劣狡诈和困惑茫然的混合表情。他惊惶失措地向我打个招呼，与我擦肩而过。这时男仆猛地推开一扇门，示意我进去见他的主人。

进到里面，我发现这是一个非常宽敞和高大的房间。窗户又长又窄，棱角分明，而且高高地远离乌黑的栎木地板，人在房间里根本接触不到它们。透过格子结构的窗玻璃，照射进几缕微弱的深红色的光线，使得周围几件比较突出的物体清晰可见；然而，若竭力想要看清房间里最深远的角落，或拱形的回纹饰天花板的幽秘之处，则是白费气力。墙壁上挂着黑暗的装饰布。整个房间布置铺张奢侈，古色古香，却毫无舒适之感，而且已是破旧不堪。到处散乱地放着许多书籍和乐器，却没有使整个房间增添丝毫活力。我感到自己呼吸到的是一种忧伤的气息。到处都笼罩着、弥漫着一种冷峻、幽深、无法改变的阴郁气氛。

看到我进来，厄歇尔从他平躺着的沙发上站起身来，以一种兴高采烈的热情招呼我。我起初认为，这种热情中包含着许多做过了头的亲热劲儿——是一个厌世者在强颜欢笑。但是，当我一眼瞥见他的面容时，才相信他的热情完全发自内心。我们坐了下来，他有片刻没有说话，我便带着一种半是怜悯半是惊惧的心情凝视着他。确实，从未见过有人像罗德里克·厄歇尔这样，在如此短的时间内，产生了如此触目惊心的变化！我好不容易才强迫自己承认，眼前的这个男人就是孩提时代的玩伴。不过，他的面部特征倒一直都很鲜明独特。他脸如

死灰，大大的眼睛泪汪汪的，放射出无与伦比的光芒；嘴唇略微薄了一点，没有一丝血色，但曲线轮廓却精美绝伦；鼻子是典雅的希伯来式，但鼻孔极为宽大，这在类似的鼻形中是十分少见的；下巴线条精致，轮廓并不突出，这说明了他在精神上缺少活力；头发柔软、纤细，酷似蛛网。这些面部特征，再加上天庭极为饱满宽阔，使他的模样令人难以忘怀。此刻，他的面部特征和一贯流露的神情，只比过去略微显著一些，却使他产生了如此惊人的变化，我简直怀疑是不是在跟他说话。最令我震惊甚至恐惧的，是他此刻死一般惨白的脸色，和他此刻眼睛里放射出的奇异的光芒。柔软如丝般的头发，主人无暇以顾，任其杂乱无章地生长着，丝丝缕缕的细发不是垂落下来，而是在面颊上随意流淌，我尽管拼命努力，也无法把这种奇异的面部表情与正常的人的概念联系起来。

我立刻就注意到我这位朋友的一举一动都颠三倒四，很不协调；很快，我发现这是由于他在吃力地克制一种惯性的痉挛——一种极度的神经焦虑，却又怎么也克制不住。对他的这副模样，我倒是有心理准备，一是因为读了他的来信，二是因为对他童年时的某些特征记忆犹新，三是因为从他与众不同的体质和脾性可以得出这样的结论。他的动作一会儿充满生机，一会儿垂头丧气。他的声音也瞬息多变，忽而吞吞吐吐、闪烁其辞（这时他身体里的元气似乎一时荡然无存），忽而又干脆有力、斩钉截铁——嗓音果断、沉着，掷地有声，听起来似乎不太真实，那种沉稳、镇定、被运用得游刃有余的喉音，只有神志恍惚的醉鬼，或是不可救药的烟鬼在极度兴奋、神魂颠倒时，才能发得出来。

他就是用这种口吻谈到他邀我前来的目的，说他诚心地盼着我，希望我给他提供安慰。他还颇为细致地谈到他自认为他的病情属于何种性质。他说，那是一种先天性的家族遗传病，他对药物治疗已经不抱任何希望。接着他又补充说道，这只是一种神经性疾病，不久自会痊愈。该病的症状是他经常出现大量离奇古怪的感觉。他详细叙述这些感觉，其中一些令我既感到有趣，又感到疑惑，尽管这也许是他说话时的措辞和口气在起作用。一种病态的神经过敏使他备受折磨；他只能吃最寡淡无味的饭菜；只能穿某一种面料的衣服；所有鲜花的芬芳都令他窒息；他的眼睛即使在微弱的光线下也刺痛难忍；而且，只有一些特殊的声音和弦乐器奏出的音响，他听了才不会感到心惊胆寒。

我看出来，他完全陷于变态的恐惧中不能自拔。“我要死了，”他说，“我一定会在这可悲的疯狂感觉中送命。就那样，就那样死去，不会有别的出路。我对将来要发生的事情感到害怕，倒不是害怕这些事情本身，而是害怕它们带来的后果。一想到任何意外，哪怕是最微不足道的小事，都会令我这敏感焦虑的心灵受到震撼，我就感到不寒

而栗。说实在的，我倒不怕灾祸，怕就怕灾祸带来的绝对后果，它使我胆战心惊。在这种惶惶不可终日的状态下，在这种凄惨可悲的处境下，我感到那个时刻迟早都会到来，我定会在与恐惧这个狰狞幻影的一次抗争中，彻底放弃我的生命和理智。”

此外，我还不时从他那吞吞吐吐、含义模糊的暗示中，发现了他精神状态的另一个奇怪特征。他内心纠缠着许多迷信想法，都是关于他多年居住、从不敢擅自离开的那幢府邸——关于一种影响力，而他在谈到他所想象的这种影响力的能量时用词晦涩，使我在此无法复述——他说，由于常年忍受这幢府邸的形状实质上的某些特异之处，使他的精神受到了某种影响，那灰墙、塔楼，以及它们倒映其中的那一湖幽暗的死水，这所有的景象最终对他的生存状态产生了一种影响。

玛德琳小姐的病早就使那些医生束手无策。不可改变的冷漠倦怠，日渐消瘦的身体，再加上尽管转瞬即逝，却时常都要发作的强直性昏厥症，这些便是她的种种反常症候。她一直顽强地同病魔抗争，始终不甘心就此一病不起。但在我到达这里的当天晚上夜色渐浓时（她的哥哥在夜里失魂落魄地告诉我），她最终屈从于死神的淫威。我这才知道，我目送她背影的那匆匆一瞥，也许就是我看到她的最后一眼——那位小姐，至少在她弥留的时候，我是不会再见到她了。

世界的一切笼罩得一片昏暗。

我就这样独自陪伴厄歇尔府的主人度过了许多忧郁凝重的时光，这是我永生难以忘怀的。但是，我却说不清楚他缠着我、领着我读的是些什么书，做的是些什么事。一种极度亢奋、完全失常的胡思乱想，使一切都蒙上了一层硫黄的微光，他即兴奏出的大段大段的挽歌，将永远在我耳畔回响。其中，我格外痛楚地记得，他对冯·韦伯的那首狂放的《最后的华尔兹》做了奇特的变异和夸张。他凭借他精巧的想象构思的一幅幅画面，在他的笔触下变得模糊不清，令我不寒而栗，而我因为不知道自己为何颤抖，就更感到格外恐怖。这些绘画（如今历历在目，依然鲜明），尽管我费尽心机，也只能表达出原本就属于书面语言范畴的那一小部分。他用极为简单的构图，用完全袒露的笔触，吸引和震慑着别人的注意力。如果世上曾经有人把思想绘诸笔端，那个人一定是罗德里克·厄歇尔。至少对于处在当时那种环境中的我来说，看到这位抑郁症患者企图在画布上表现的纯粹抽象的东西，我就感到一种难以忍受的强烈的恐惧，以前我在端详富塞利那些色彩十分艳丽但造型过于具体的幻想构图时，也未曾有过这种恐惧的感觉。

在我这位朋友的那些幻影幢幢的构图中，有一个倒是不那么绝对抽象，可以勉强用文字描述一个大概。这是一幅小画，描绘了一个其长无比的矩形地窖或隧道的内部，内壁低矮，光滑，呈白色，没有间断，也没有装饰。从画面上的某些陪衬物可以看出，这个洞穴处于地底深处。长长的地道无限延伸，四周不见一个出口，也没有火炬和其他人造光源；但是却有一道耀眼的强光滚过整个空间，使一切沐浴在诡谲可怖、突兀怪异的光辉之中。

我在上文已经提到他病态的听觉神经，一切音乐都令他无法忍受，只有用弦乐器奏出的某些曲调例外。也许，正是因为他只能局限于摆弄吉他，所以才弹得那么如梦似幻，空灵怪诞。但是他那些即兴曲的狂热流畅，却不能归结于这个原因。他的狂想曲的那些音符，那些歌词（他经常一边弹琴，一边即兴唱出押韵的歌词），都肯定是，也确实是他情绪镇静、精神集中时的产物，而我前面已经委婉地提到，这种现象只有在他拼命强颜欢笑时才会出现。我很容易就记住了其中一首狂想曲的歌词。也许，他当初弹唱这支曲子时给我的印象最为强烈，因为我幻想自己从那潜在、隐秘的含义中第一次觉察出，厄歇尔已经充分意识到他那高高在上的理智正摇摇欲坠。这首《闹鬼的宫殿》的歌词大致如下，也许记录得并非完全准确：

幽幽溪谷一片绿色葱茏，

曾有仁慈天使聚居其中，
还有一座宫殿气势恢宏——
金碧辉煌，傲然耸向苍穹。
在“思想”统治的国度里，
那座宫殿挺拔屹立！
就连展翅高飞的仙女，
也从未领略如此的美丽。

二

黄色的旗幡金光夺目，
在宫殿屋顶迎风飘舞，
（这一切的一切皆成虚无，
归于一去不返的远古）
在往昔甜蜜的岁月里，
阵阵微风在欢闹嬉戏，
沿着宫殿那粉白的墙壁，
有一缕幽香悠然飘去。

三

游子来到美丽的溪谷，
透过两扇明亮的窗户，
看见精灵们翩翩起舞，
和着琵琶柔美的旋律；
中间有个帝王气宇轩昂，
威严端坐在宝座之上！

他威风凛凛，通体辉煌，
俨然是一副国君之相。

四

珍珠美玉闪耀着光芒，
镶嵌在华丽的宫殿门上，
一群群回声你来我往，
在宫门间穿梭、飘荡，
回音女神的唯一职责，
就是唱出甜蜜的颂歌，
用曼妙绝伦的歌喉，
赞美帝王的足智多谋。

五

但是有恶魔身披黑衣，
闯入帝王高贵的领地；
（呜呼哀哉，帝王命毙！ 让我们祝他永远安息）
昔日王宫的荣华富贵，
嫣红姹紫的夺目光辉，
如今随光阴一去无回，
宛若梦境萦绕在心扉。

六

如今游人来到这溪谷，

透过一扇扇猩红的窗户，
但见一些怪影狂野无主，
随着杂乱的旋律狂舞；
一群青面獠牙的鬼影，
像地狱之河湍急阴森，
穿过惨白无光的宫门，
不见笑容，只闻狂笑阵阵。

我清楚地记得，这首歌谣的意蕴曾引得我浮想联翩，厄歇尔的某个想法就在其中体现出来。我之所以提到这个想法，倒不是因为它新颖别致（其他人也有过类似的想法），而是因为厄歇尔始终对它执着不移。这种看法一般说来，就是认为花草树木皆有灵性。但是，在他狂乱的想象里，这种想法变得更加放纵，在某种特定的情况下竟拓展到了无机物的领域。我无法用语言来表达他对这一信条是何等执着，何等痴迷。但正如我前文所暗示的，他的信念与他祖先留下的这幢灰石房子有关。他想象着，那种灵性就具体表现在那些石头的排列顺序以及它们的安排规律上，在覆盖其上的大量苔藓上，在四周枯立的古树上，尤其表现在那种布局的永恒不变、始终如一之中，表现在那一湖死水的倒影之中。他说，在湖水和石墙周围逐渐凝聚着一团雾气，这便是证明——是那种灵性的证明，我听到这里，感到大为吃惊。他又补充说道，从那种寂然无声却又挥之不去的可怕的感染力上，可以见到那种灵性造成的后果，多少个世纪以来，这感染力主宰着他们家族的命运，并使他变成眼前这副模样——我所看到的这副模样。对这类看法无须评论，我也不想妄做评论。

正如人们所能猜到的，我们读的书与这种幻想十分吻合，许多年来，这些书对病人的精神状态起了不小的作用。我们一同聚精会神地研读格雷塞的《翠鸟》和《修道院》，马基雅弗利的《魔鬼》，斯韦登堡的《天堂和地狱》，霍尔堡的《尼古拉·克里姆地下旅行记》，罗伯特·弗拉德、让·汤达日涅和德拉·尚布尔各自所著的《手相术》，蒂克的《蓝色的旅程》，康帕内拉的《太阳城》。我们最喜欢的一本书是多明我会 [1] 教士艾梅里克·德·吉罗尼所著的八开本《宗教法庭手册》；而读了庞波尼乌斯·梅拉的有关古代非洲森林神和牧羊神的一些章节，厄歇尔经常会如痴如梦地呆坐几小时。不过，他最感兴趣的是一本极其珍贵的四开本哥特体孤本奇书——一座被湮没教堂的祈祷手册——《在马因斯教会礼堂追思亡灵》。

那天晚上，当厄歇尔突然告诉我玛德琳小姐已然过世，并说他打算把尸体先在府邸的一个地窖中存放十四天之后再安葬时，我便不由自主地想起这本奇书中的荒唐仪式，以及它可能对这位忧郁症患者造成的影响。但是，他采取这一奇特做法也有其世俗的原因，我觉得不便贸然提出反对。他告诉我，他之所以这么决定，是考虑死者的病情不同一般，考虑到她那些医生会提出某些唐突的、刨根究底的疑问，还考虑到家族墓地偏僻荒凉，无人照看。当时我回想起我刚到厄歇尔府邸的那天，我在楼梯上遇见的那个人脸上的一副阴险表情，所以就无意反对他的做法，我认为这至少是一个没有害处、绝不算违背情理的防备措施。

应厄歇尔的请求，我亲自帮助他安排临时的入殓工作。尸体已经装入棺材，我们俩单独把它抬到停放处。停放尸体的那个地窖已经多年没有打开，我们的火把差点被令人窒息的空气熄灭，这使我们无法把里面查看清楚。只记得那个地窖窄小、潮湿，没有一点缝隙，透不进一丝光线，深深地埋在地下，上面正是我睡觉的那个房间。看来，在遥远的封建时代，那地窖曾被当作牢房，后来又作为贮存火药及其他易燃物品的地方，因为一部分地板和我们经过的整个长长的过道都仔细包裹着黄铜。那扇厚重的铁门也曾受到同样的保护。铁门因为沉重，在铰链上旋转时发出异常刺耳的吱嘎声。

在那可怕的地窖里，我们把令人悲伤的棺材放在架子上，稍稍掀开尚未钉上的棺盖，瞻仰死者的遗容。我第一次注意到他们兄妹二人长得极为相似。厄歇尔大概看出了我的心思，喃喃地解释了几句，我这才知道他和死者是孪生兄妹，彼此之间有着一种简直难以理解的心灵感应。然而，我们的目光却不敢在死者身上久留，因为看了不免心生恐惧。疾病就这样夺去了这位妙龄女子的生命，她像所有强直性晕厥症患者一样，胸口和脸上泛着一抹似真似假的红晕，一缕令人生疑的微笑在她唇角逗留不去，看上去十分可怕。我们把棺盖重新盖好，钉上钉子，然后关好铁门，迈着沉重的步伐，回到几乎和地窖同样阴暗凄凉的地面。

在度过几个悲痛欲绝的日子之后，我的朋友精神错乱的一些特征出现了显著的变化。平常的那副举止消失不见了。平常所做的事情也被他搁置一边或忘到脑后。他迈着慌慌张张、踉踉跄跄的步子，漫无目的地从一个房间徘徊到另一个房间。苍白的脸色变得更加惨白吓人，而眼里的光芒却熄灭无踪了。以往那种不时沙哑的嗓音不再听到；现在他的声音习惯性地颤抖不停，仿佛内心充满极度的恐惧。确实，有的时候，我认为他那终日惶恐不安的心里藏着某个令他窒息的秘密，他正在拼命积蓄足够的勇气，把它吐露出来。而有的时候，我又不得不把这一切当成莫名其妙的疯狂的胡思乱想，因为我看见他一连几小时两眼聚精会神地凝视空茫，仿佛在倾听冥冥之中的某个声

音。也无怪他的这副状况令我害怕，令我也受到感染。我觉得他那种荒诞癫狂、动人心魄的迷信，正在缓慢而明确地潜入我的心头。

尤其是在我们把玛德琳小姐放置在地窖七八天后的一个深夜，我躺在床上更为真切地体会到这种情绪的影响。我辗转反侧不能入睡，而时间却在一小时一小时地流逝。我拼命排解，想驱散盘踞在我心头的紧张不安。我强迫自己相信，我的紧张多半（如果不是全部）是由于房间里沉闷的家具对我产生了令人惶惑的影响——由于那暗淡破旧的帷幔，随着即将来临的风暴的吹动，在墙上来回摆动，摩擦着床上的装饰布，发出骚乱不安的窸窣窸窣的声音。但是我的排解无济于事。一阵难以抑制的战栗渐渐传遍我的全身，最后，一种噩梦一般的无名的恐惧占据了我的心房。我喘着气，挣扎着摆脱出来，从枕头上抬起身子，仔细凝视漆黑一片的房间，屏息倾听——我不知道为何倾听，除非是受到本能驱使——倾听某种低微而模糊的声音，它在风暴暂停的间歇响起，却不知道从何处传来。我被一种不可名状、难以忍受的极度的恐惧所震慑，慌忙穿上衣服（我感到那天夜里我不能再睡了），开始在房间里匆匆地踱来踱去，努力想使自己摆脱那凄楚可怜的境地。

我就这样来回踱了几圈，突然附近楼梯上传来一阵轻微的脚步声，引起了我的注意。我很快听出这是厄歇尔的脚步声。紧接着，他轻轻敲了敲我的房门，端着一盏灯走了进来。他的脸色和平时一样惨白，但眼睛里却闪耀着一种疯狂的喜悦——一举一动都带着显然经过压抑的歇斯底里。他的这副神情令我毛骨悚然——但是，比起我独守长夜那份孤独来，什么都是好的，我甚至把他的光临看作缓解我孤独的救星。

“怎么，你还没有看见？”他一声不吭地四下盯视片刻，突然说道，“你还没有看见？——啊，等一等，你会看见的。”他一边说着，一边仔细把灯遮上，然后匆匆走到一扇窗户跟前，猛地将它推开，迎向外面的风暴。

一阵猛烈的强风刮进来，差点吹得我们站不稳脚跟。这一夜虽然狂风呼啸，却是异常美丽，是一个奇特的、交织着恐惧和美丽的夜晚。一股旋风显然已在附近聚集起力量，因为风向不时发生剧烈变化；沉重的乌云低低垂悬，仿佛压向府邸的塔楼；乌云尽管浓重，我们仍能看见云块从四面八方涌来，带着充沛的活力挤压碰撞，却并不飘向远方。我是说乌云尽管浓重，我们仍能看见这幅景象，但却不见月亮和星星，也不见闪电的影子。但是在大团大团翻滚涌动的云雾下面，在我们附近地面上的一切物体上面，闪耀着一种微弱而又清晰的雾气散发出的奇异的白光，这雾气笼罩着宅屋，像裹尸布一样把它覆盖。

“你不能看！你绝不能看！”我战战兢兢地对厄歇尔说，一边轻轻用力把他从窗口拖到一张椅子上。“这些使你迷惑的景象不过是普通的电光现象，也许是由于那小湖中瘴气弥漫所形成的。我们关上窗户吧。空气寒冷，对你的身体没有好处。这里有一本你最喜欢的传奇小说，我来念，你听着，我们就这样共同度过这个恐怖的夜晚吧。”

我随手拿起的那本旧书是劳斯洛特·坎宁先生所著的《疯狂的宴会》，我称它为厄歇尔最爱读的书，不过是无奈中的一句言不由衷的调侃。因为说实话，这本书语言粗俗，想象贫乏，故事拖沓，我这位品味高雅、精神世界丰富的朋友是不会对它感兴趣的。然而，当时手头只有这么一本书，我怀有一种侥幸心理，希望那些搅得这位忧郁症患者惶恐不安的激动情绪，能在我所读的荒唐透顶的故事中得到缓解（精神错乱的病史上有许多类似的奇特病例）。确实，如果我当时能从他听故事（或表面上在听）时那副紧张压抑的狂喜上做出判断，我就真可以庆幸自己妙计得逞了。

我已经读到人们所熟悉的那一段情节，宴会的主人埃瑟尔雷德千方百计想和平进入隐士的居所，却始终没有成功，便开始靠武力强行闯入。记得书里是这样叙述这段情节的：

埃瑟尔雷德性情本就刚烈勇猛。加之畅饮后酒性发作，就更加气势逼人，他不再同那顽固不化的歹毒隐士多费口舌。这时他感到雨点落在他的肩头，担心暴风雨就要来临，立时抡起钉头槌，狠狠砸了几下，转眼将门板凿了个窟窿，再把套着臂铠的胳膊伸进去，使劲一拉，那扇门顿时四分五裂，木板折断破裂时发出干

燥空洞令人心惊胆寒的声音，在森林里久久回荡。

念完这最后一句，我猛吃一惊，停住了。我仿佛听到（尽管立刻断定是我情绪激动产生的幻觉）——我仿佛隐隐约约地听到——从府邸中某个偏僻的角落传来一个声音，听上去和劳斯洛特先生格外详细描写的那破门的回声极为相似，只是更加沉闷、模糊。毫无疑问，正是这种巧合吸引了我的注意。在窗框啪嗒啪嗒的撞击声和外面一阵紧似一阵的狂风呼啸声中，这声音实在不算什么，不会使我感兴趣，也不会使我惶恐不安。我继续把故事念下去：

好汉埃瑟尔雷德破门而入后，却不见那个歹毒隐士的踪影，这使他既恼怒又惊讶。却只见一条满身鳞片、口吐火舌的巨龙，镇守着一座黄金建造、白银铺地的宫殿，墙上挂着一副闪闪发光的铜盾，上面镌刻着两行铭文：

进宝殿者成霸主；

屠巨龙者赢盾牌。

埃瑟尔雷德高高抡起钉头槌，一下击中龙头。龙头滚落在他脚下，喷出一口毒气，发出一声令人发指的尖厉刺耳的惨叫，埃瑟尔雷德只好用双手捂住耳朵，这声音实在是撕心裂肺，前所未闻。

念到这里，我又猝然停住，心中大为愕然——这次再也无法怀疑了。我确实听见（尽管我发现我很难说出这声音来自何方）一个微弱、遥远，但却尖厉刺耳的惨叫声或摩擦声，悠长不绝，诡谲离奇——我读着书中的描写，心里已然想象出巨龙的那声石破天惊的惨叫，而耳边听到的这个声音，正跟我的想象不差分毫。

这个无比怪异的声音，这种最最离奇的巧合，自然使我心头产生无数种互相矛盾的感觉，直压得我喘不过气来，其中最令我不堪忍受的是极度的惊愕和恐惧，但我仍然保持着足够的镇静，以免出言不慎，刺激了我这位朋友敏感的神经。我不敢肯定他是否听见这些声音，不过在刚刚几分钟内，他的举止确实发生了奇怪的变化。他原来坐在我对面，现在却已将椅子慢慢挪开，面对房门坐着。这样一来，我只能看到他脸的局部，只见他双唇颤抖不已，仿佛在无声地喃喃自语。他的脑袋耷拉在胸口，但我知道他并没有睡着，从侧面也能看到他两眼大睁，一眨不眨。他身体的动作也证明他没有睡着，他一直在不停地轻轻左右摇晃。我把这一切看在眼里，继续念劳斯洛特先生的故事，情节如下：

却说那好汉摆脱了巨龙的魔爪，猛然想到墙上的铜盾，想到要打破上面所附的魔咒，于是他搬开挡在前面的巨龙尸体，英勇无畏地踏过城堡的白银地面，走向挂着铜盾的那面墙壁。可实际上，没等他来到墙边，铜盾就掉落在他脚边的白银地面上，发出一声可怕的巨响，震耳欲聋。

我刚刚念出这几个字，仿佛在那一刹那，真的有一面铜盾重重摔落在白银地面上一样——我听到一阵金属撞击的声音，清晰，空洞，却又显得沉闷压抑。我大惊失色，一跃而起；厄歇尔却依旧坐在椅子上晃来晃去。我冲到他的椅子跟前，只见他双眼怔怔地凝视前方，整个表情像石头一般僵硬。但是，当我把手放在他的肩头时，他浑身一阵剧烈的震颤，嘴唇哆嗦着露出一个惨笑。我看见他颤抖着喃喃自语，声音又低又急，仿佛不知道我就在跟前。我弯腰向他靠近，终于听见了他话里的可怕含义。

“现在听见了吧？——是的，我听见了，我早就听见了。好久——好久——好久——好几分钟，好几小时，好几天以前，我就听见了——可是我不敢——哦，可怜可怜我吧，我是多么可怜啊！——我不敢——我不敢说啊！我们把她活埋啦！我不是说过我感觉敏锐吗？

现在我告诉你，她在空洞洞的棺材里最初发出的微弱响动我都听见了。我听见了——好多好多天以前——可是我不敢——我不敢说啊！现在——今天夜里——埃瑟尔雷德——哈！哈哈！——撞破隐士的房门，巨龙临死的惨叫，盾牌落地的巨响——唉，那还不如说是她棺材的劈裂声，她牢房里铁铰链的摩擦声，和她在包着黄铜的地窖走廊里拼命挣扎的声音！啊！我逃到哪里去呢？她不是很快就会上这儿来吗？她不是正在匆匆赶来责备我行事仓促？我不是已经听见她的脚步踏上楼梯？我不是已经听出她的心脏在沉重而可怕地跳动？疯子！”说到这里，他疯狂地一跃而起，仿佛拼足了全身的气力，尖声怪叫着说：“疯子！我告诉你，她此刻就站在门外！”

似乎他那蕴含超凡力量的叫喊中真的有一股魔力，只见他用手指着那道宽大古老的房门，在刹那间，那两扇沉重的乌木门扉竟然徐徐打开了。这一定是狂风将它吹开的。但是，就在那两扇门外，果真站着厄歇尔家玛德琳小姐那体形高大、裹着尸衣的身影。她那白色的尸衣上血迹斑斑，瘦骨嶙峋的身体的每一部分都有苦苦挣扎过的痕迹。她浑身颤抖着，摇摇晃晃地站在门槛上，然后，随着一声低幽的呜咽，重重地跌进屋来，倒在她哥哥身上，一阵剧烈的、临终前的挣扎，把他也拖拽到地上，成为一具死尸，成为他曾经预料过的恐怖的牺牲品。

一桶白葡萄酒

福图纳托对我一而再再而三的伤害，我都能忍就忍了，可是他竟然敢侮辱我，我便发誓要报仇雪恨了。你这么了解我的脾气禀性，肯定知道我不会公开发出威胁。我最后必定要报仇雪恨，这是板上钉钉的事——但是报仇绝不能带来任何风险，这也是确凿无疑的。我不仅要惩罚对方，还要让自己不受惩罚。如果修正错误的人受到惩罚，那错误就得不到修正。如果复仇者没有让自己感觉到已经惩罚了做坏事的人，那错误也得不到修正。

你必须明白，我在语言和行为上，都没有给福图纳托任何理由来怀疑我的善良愿望。我继续按我的老习惯冲他微笑，他没有看出，我现在的笑容里藏着置他于死地的想法。

这位福图纳托老兄有一个弱点——在其他方面他倒是个令人尊敬甚至让人害怕的男人。他很为自己在葡萄酒方面的鉴赏力感到得意。意大利人很少具有真正的大师气质。在大多数情况下，他们的热情都只是逢场作戏，骗骗那些英国和美国的百万富翁。在绘画和宝石的领域，福图纳托跟他的同胞一样，是个江湖骗子，但是在陈年佳酿的问题上，他的态度十分认真。我在这方面跟他没有本质的区别——我本人对意大利葡萄酒也很精通，只要有可能就大量地购买。

话说，这是嘉年华到达癫狂顶峰的一个傍晚，我和我的朋友不期而遇。他过分热情地跟我搭话，因为他当时已经喝了不少。这家伙身上的衣服像个大杂烩。紧身的条纹衫，头上是一顶圆锥形的帽子，上面还挂着许多小铃铛。我见到他太高兴了，紧攥着他的手怎么也不肯松开。

我对他说：“亲爱的福图纳托，碰到你真是太巧了。你今天看上去气色很不错。我得到了一大桶好货，据说是阿蒙蒂亚多白葡萄酒，但我对此心存疑虑。”

“怎么会？”他说，“阿蒙蒂亚多？一大桶？不可能！而且是在嘉年华期间！”

“我心存疑虑，”我回答道，“当时我头脑发昏，没有征求一下你对此的看法，就按阿蒙蒂亚多的价钱付了全款。我那时候找不到你，又担心丢了一笔好买卖。”

“阿蒙蒂亚多！”

“我心存疑虑。”

“阿蒙蒂亚多！”

“我必须让他们满意。”

“阿蒙蒂亚多！”

“既然你有事在身，我这会儿正要去找卢切里西，有评论家天赋的人非他莫属。他会告诉我——”

“卢切里西根本分不清阿蒙蒂亚多酒和雪利酒。”

“可是有些傻瓜竟然说他的品位跟你不相上下。”

“快，我们走吧。”

“去哪儿？”

“去你的地下室。”

“不行，我的朋友。我不能因为你脾气好就强人所难。我看出你有应酬。卢切里西——”

“我没有应酬——快走吧。”

“我的朋友，不行啊。不是因为应酬，是我发现你正遭受重感冒的折磨。而地下室里潮湿得令人无法忍受。墙壁上都结了硝石。”

“我们还是走吧。感冒没什么大不了的。阿蒙蒂亚多！你准是受骗上当了。至于卢切里西，他根本就分不清雪利酒和阿蒙蒂亚多。”

这么说着话，福图纳托一把抓住了我的胳膊。我戴上一个黑色丝绸面罩，用一件短披风把身体紧紧裹住，他一个劲儿地催着我去我的豪华寝宫。

家里没有侍者，他们都逃出去过节，去寻欢作乐了。我跟他们说，过我要次日早晨才回来，我还明确地命令他们不许离开家门。我心里很清楚，这些命令能有效地保证他们全都在我刚一转身就消失得无影无踪。

我从他们的烛台上拿了两根蜡烛，递了一根给福图纳托，前倨后恭地领他穿过几个套间，走向通往地下室的那道拱门。我走下一条长长的旋转楼梯，请求他跟上时多加小心。最后，我们来到了楼梯底部，一起站在蒙特雷索尔地下墓穴的潮湿的地面上。

我朋友的步子踉踉跄跄，帽子上的铃铛随着他的脚步叮叮作响。

“那桶酒。”他说。

“还得再往前走一点，”我说，“可是，你仔细看看这些洞穴墙壁上

的亮晶晶的网状物。”

他转向我，盯着我的眼睛，他两个浑浊的眼球上渗出了迷醉的泪水。

“硝石？”他终于问道。

“硝石。”我回答道，“你那样咳嗽多久了？”

“喀！喀！喀！……喀！喀！喀！……喀！喀！喀！……喀！喀！喀！……喀！喀！喀！喀！”

我可怜的朋友发现他好几分钟没法儿回答我的话。

“没关系。”他最后说道。

“走，”我果断地说，“我们回去吧，你的健康最宝贵。你富有，受人尊敬，受人景仰，受人爱戴。你是幸福的，就像我曾经一样。你是一个不可或缺的人。至于我嘛，根本不值一提。我们回去吧。你会生病的，这个责任我可负不起。而且，还有卢切里西——”

“够了，”他说，“咳嗽根本不算什么，要不了我的命。我不会因为咳嗽而丢了性命。”

“不错——不错，”我回答道，“其实，我也并没打算毫无必要地让你感到紧张——但是你应该保持适当的谨慎。喝一口这种梅多克红葡萄酒吧，它能帮助我们抵抗潮湿。”

说到这里，我从放在地面上的一长排酒瓶里抽出一瓶，敲掉了它的瓶颈。

“喝吧。”我说着，把葡萄酒递给他。

他也斜着眼睛，把酒端到唇边。他顿了顿，冲我亲切地点了点头，那些铃铛发出叮叮的声音。

“我敬这些在我们周围安息的死者。”他说。

“我祝你长命百岁。”

他又一次抓住我的胳膊，我们继续往前走。

“这些地下室，”他说，“规模很大。”

“蒙特雷索尔，”我说，“是一个庞大的、人丁兴旺的家族。”

“我忘记你们的纹章是什么了。”

“一只巨大的金色人脚，底色是天蓝色。人脚踏碎了一条凶猛的蛇，蛇牙扎进了脚后跟。”

“铭词是什么？”

“凡伤我者必受惩罚。” [1]

“很好！”他说。

葡萄酒在他眼睛里闪烁，那些铃铛叮叮作响。我自己的想象也因梅多克红葡萄酒而有了温度。我们经过长长的墙壁，墙边堆着骷髅，大大小小的酒桶混杂其间，然后我们进入地下墓穴的最深的凹处。我又停了下来，这次冒昧地抓住了福图纳托一只胳膊的肘部上面。

“硝石！”我说，“看见了吗？越来越多了。像青苔一样挂在拱顶上。我们是在河床的下面了。湿气凝成的水珠在骨头间流淌。快，趁现在还来得及，我们回去吧。你的咳嗽——”

“那不算什么，”他说，“我们继续往前走吧。但是先给我再来一杯梅多克葡萄酒。”

我停住话头，给他拿了一瓶“坟墓诱惑”。他一饮而尽。他的眼睛里闪着灼热的光。他哈哈大笑，把酒瓶往上一扔，那姿势我看着有点奇怪。

我惊讶地看着他。他又做了一遍那个动作——十分怪异。

“你不懂吗？”他说。

“不懂。”我回答。

“看来你不是兄弟会的。”

“这怎么讲？”

“你不是瓦匠会的。”

“我是，我是，”我说，“我是瓦匠会的。”

“你？不可能！你是瓦匠？”

“我是瓦匠。”我回答。

“给个证明，”他说，“给个证明。”

“这就是。”我回答，从短风衣的褶皱中掏出一把泥刀。

“你开玩笑。”他惊叫道，向后退了几步，“不过，还是让我们继续去找阿蒙蒂亚多吧。”

“好的。”我说，把泥刀塞回短风衣下面，又让他挽住我的胳膊。他把沉重的身体靠在我胳膊上，我们继续前进，去寻找阿蒙蒂亚多。我们经过一连串低矮的拱门，往下，继续往前，再往下，来到一个很深的地下墓穴，里面浑浊的空气使我们的两根蜡烛不再燃烧，只发出一点微弱的亮光。

在地下墓穴的最远端，出现了另一个面积较小的墓穴。四壁堆着人类的遗骨，依照巴黎的地下墓穴的式样，一直堆到上面的拱顶。这个内部墓穴，三面墙都按这种风格装饰。第四面墙的遗骨坍塌了下来，乱七八糟地倒在地上，在某一处形成了相当大的一堆。因为遗骨的坍塌，我们看见墙里面是另一个内部墓穴或密室，深约四英尺，宽三英尺，高六七英尺。它似乎本身没有什么特殊的用途，只是在两根巨大的柱子之间形成了间隔，这两根柱子和其他柱子一起支撑起整个地下墓穴的顶部，密室的后部是坚实的花岗岩围墙。

福图纳托举起手里黯淡的蜡烛，努力想窥探这间密室的深处，可是没有成功。烛光太微弱了，我们无法看清密室的尽头。

“继续往前，”我说，“阿蒙蒂亚多就在这里面。那个卢切里西——”

“他是个无知的人。”我的朋友打断了我的话，继续踉踉跄跄地往前走，我立刻紧紧地跟上。一眨眼，他就来到了密室的尽头，发现被岩石挡住，没法儿再往前走了，他就一脸迷惑，呆呆地站在那儿。片刻之后，我就把他拴在了花岗岩上。花岗岩的表面有两个U形铁钉，在同一高度，相距大约两英尺。一个铁钉上挂着一根短短的链条，另一根铁钉上有个挂锁。我把链条从他的腰部甩过去，只用了几秒钟就把锁牢牢地锁住了。他完全被惊呆了，根本无力抵抗。我拔出钥匙，从密室里退了出来。

“把你的手，”我说，“放在墙上，你会忍不住摸那些硝石。这里确实非常潮湿。我再一次恳求你回去。不回？那么我必须果断地离开你了。但是我首先必须尽我所能对你表示一些关注。”

“阿蒙蒂亚多！”我的朋友突然喊道，还没有从他的惊愕中醒过神来。

“没错，”我回答道，“阿蒙蒂亚多。”

我一边说这句话，一边让我自己置身于前面说过的那堆尸骨中间。我把尸骨拨拉到旁边，很快就发现了大量的建筑石料和砂浆。我在那把泥刀的帮助下，开始充满干劲地用这些材料堵塞密室的入口。

我刚砌好第一层石料，就发现福图纳托的醉意大大地消退了。关于这点，我得到的最初迹象是密室深处传来一声低低的、呻吟般的喊叫。这不是一个醉汉的喊叫。在这之后是很长时间的顽强的沉默。我砌上第二层石料，然后是第三层、第四层，然后我听见链条在剧烈地摇晃。这声音持续了几分钟，在这期间，我停下手头的活儿，坐在那些尸骨上，让自己听得更加心满意足。最后，金属的碰撞声平静下来，我重新拿起泥刀，一口气砌完了第五层、第六层和第七层石料。现在石墙差不多到我胸口了。我又停下来，把蜡烛举到石墙上方，让

几道微弱的亮光投向里面的那个身影。

一连串响亮而凄厉的尖叫，突然从那个被链条拴住的人影的嗓子里发出，像一记重拳把我打了回来。在那短短的一瞬间，我迟疑了，我颤抖了。我拔出我的长剑，开始用它在密室里探索，可是突然一个闪念，使我放下心来。我把手放在地下墓穴坚实的墙体上，心里感到很踏实。我再一次走近石墙，对那个拼命吵闹的人的叫嚷做出回答。我重复他的喊叫，给他推波助澜，在音量和力度上都超越他的喊声。我这么做了之后，里面的喊叫声就平静了下来。

时间已是午夜，我的任务快要完成了。我已经砌完了第八层、第九层和第十层石料。第十一层是最后一层，我也砌好了一部分，现在只要把最后一块石头填进去，再抹上砂浆，就大功告成了。我挣扎着搬起沉重的石料，把它的一部分塞进那个注定的位置。然而，此时从密室里传来一声低笑，吓得我头发都竖了起来。低笑之后，一个悲哀的声音说话了，我好不容易才辨认出那是高贵的福图纳托的声音。只听那声音说道：

“哈！哈！哈！嘿！嘿！嘿！真是一个很有意思的恶作剧——一个精彩的玩笑。我们可以在寝宫里喝着葡萄酒——嘿！嘿！嘿！——拿这件事情笑个够了——嘿！嘿！嘿！”

“阿蒙蒂亚多！”我说。

“嘿！嘿！嘿！……嘿！嘿！嘿！……没错，阿蒙蒂亚多。不过时间是不是很晚了？他们，福图纳托夫人和其他人，会不会在宫殿里等我们？我们离开吧。”

“好的，”我说，“我们离开吧。”

“为了上帝的爱，蒙特雷索尔！”

“是的，”我说，“为了上帝的爱！”

可是我没有听到对我这句话的回答。我失去了耐心，大声喊道：“福图纳托！”

没有回答。我再次喊道：“福图纳托！”

还是没有回答。我把一根蜡烛伸进最后那个缺口，让它落了下去。里面只传来一阵叮叮的铃铛声。我感到心里难受，这都是地下墓穴的潮湿造成的。我匆匆把手头的活儿干完。我把最后一块石料用力塞进去，用砂浆把它抹平。我把那些古老的尸骨重新垒在新砌的石墙边。半个世纪以来，没有一个活人过来打扰过它们。愿死者的灵魂安息！

‘Presently I heard

The Tell- Tale Heart

True! – nervous – very, very dreadfully nervous I had been and am; but why will you say that I am mad? The disease had sharpened my senses – not destroyed – not dulled them. Above all was the sense of hearing acute. I heard all things in the heaven and in the earth. I heard many things in hell. How, then, am I mad? Hearken! and observe how healthily – how calmly I can tell you the whole story.

It is impossible to say how first the idea entered my brain; but once conceived, it haunted me day and night. Object there was none. Passion there was none. I loved the old man. He had never wronged me. He had never given me insult. For his gold I had no desire. I think it was his eye! yes, it was this! He had the eye of a vulture –a pale blue eye, with a film over it. Whenever it fell upon me, my blood ran cold; and so by degrees – very gradually – I made up my mind to take the life of the old man, and thus rid myself of the eye forever.

Now this is the point. You fancy me mad. Madmen know nothing. But you should have seen me . You should have seen how wisely I proceeded – with what caution –with what foresight – with what dissimulation I went to work! I was never kinder to the old man than during the whole week before I killed him. And every night, about midnight, I turned the latch of his door and opened it – oh so gently! And then, when I had made an opening sufficient for my head, I put in a dark lantern, all closed, closed, so that no light shone out, and then I thrust in my head. Oh, you would have laughed to see how cunningly I thrust it in! I moved it slowly – very, very slowly, so that I might not disturb the old man's sleep. It took me an hour to place my whole head within the opening so far that I could see him as he lay upon his bed. Ha! –would a madman have been so wise as this? And then, when my head was well in the room, I undid the lantern cautiously – oh, so cautiously – cautiously (for the hinges creaked) – I undid it just so much that a single thin ray fell upon the vulture eye. And this I did for seven long nights – every night just at midnight – but I found the eye always closed; and so it was impossible to do the work; for it was not the old man who vexed me, but his Evil Eye. And every morning, when the day broke, I went boldly into the chamber, and spoke courageously to him, calling him by name in a hearty tone, and inquiring how he had passed the night. So you see he would have been a very profound old man, indeed, to suspect that every night, just at twelve, I looked in upon him while he slept.

Upon the eighth night I was more than usually cautious in opening the door. A watch's minute hand moves more quickly than did mine. Never before that night, had I felt the extent of my own powers – of my sagacity. I could scarcely contain my feelings of triumph. To think that there I was, opening the door, little by little, and he not even to dream of my secret deeds or thoughts. I fairly chuckled at the idea; and perhaps he heard me; for he moved on the bed suddenly, as if startled. Now you may think that I drew back – but no. His room was as black as pitch with the thick darkness, (for the shutters were close fastened, through fear of robbers,) and so I knew that he could not see the opening of the door, and I kept pushing it on steadily, steadily.

I had my head in, and was about to open the lantern, when my thumb slipped upon the tin fastening, and the old man sprang up in bed, crying out – ‘Who’s there?’

I kept quite still and said nothing. For a whole hour I did not move a muscle, and in the meantime I did not hear him lie down. He was still sitting up in the bed listening; – just as I have done, night after night, hearkening to the death watches in the wall.

Presently I heard a slight groan, and I knew it was the groan of mortal terror. It was not a groan of pain or of grief – oh, no! – it was the low stifled sound that arises from the bottom of the soul when overcharged with awe. I knew the sound well. Many a night, just at midnight, when all the world slept, it has welled up from my own bosom, deepening, with its dreadful echo, the terrors that distracted me. I say I knew it well. I knew what the old man felt, and pitied him, although I chuckled at heart. I knew that he had been lying awake ever since the first slight noise, when he had turned in the bed. His fears had been ever since growing upon him. He had been trying to fancy them causeless, but could not. He had been saying to himself – ‘It is nothing but the wind in the chimney – it is only a mouse crossing the floor,’ or ‘it is merely a cricket which has made a single chirp.’ Yes, he had been trying to comfort himself with these suppositions: but he had found all in vain. All in vain ; because Death, in approaching him had stalked with his black shadow before him, and enveloped the victim. And it was the mournful influence of the unperceived shadow that caused him to feel – although he neither saw nor heard –to feel the presence of my head within the room.

When I had waited a long time, very patiently, without hearing him lie down, I resolved to open a little – a very, very little crevice in the lantern. So I opened it – you cannot imagine how stealthily, stealthily – until, at length a simple dim ray, like the thread of the spider, shot from out the crevice and fell full upon the vulture eye.

It was open – wide, wide open – and I grew furious as I gazed upon it. I saw it with perfect distinctness – all a dull blue, with a hideous veil over it that chilled the very marrow in my bones; but I could see nothing else of the old man’s face or person: for I had directed the ray as if by instinct, precisely upon the damned spot.

And have I not told you that what you mistake for madness is but over acuteness of the senses? – now, I say, there came to my ears a low, dull, quick sound, such as a watch makes when enveloped in cotton. I knew that sound well, too. It was the beating of the old man’s heart. It increased my fury, as the beating of a drum stimulates the soldier into courage.

But even yet I refrained and kept still. I scarcely breathed. I held the lantern motionless. I tried how steadily I could maintain the ray upon the eye. Meantime the hellish tattoo of the heart increased. It grew quicker and quicker, and louder and louder every instant. The old man’s terror must have been extreme! It grew louder, I say, louder every moment! – do you mark me well? I have told you that I am nervous: so I am. And now at the dead hour of the night, amid the dreadful silence of that old house, so strange a noise as this excited me to uncontrollable terror. Yet, for some minutes longer I refrained and stood still. But the beating grew louder, louder! I thought the heart must burst. And now a new anxiety seized me –the sound would be heard by a neighbour! The old man’s hour had come! With a loud yell, I threw open the lantern and leaped into the room. He shrieked once – once only. In an instant I dragged him to the floor, and pulled the heavy bed over him. I then smiled gaily, to find the deed so far done. But, for many minutes, the heart beat on with a muffled sound. This, however, did not vex me; it would not be heard through the wall. At length it ceased. The old man was dead. I removed the bed and examined the corpse. Yes, he was stone, stone dead. I placed my hand upon the heart and held it there many minutes. There was no pulsation. He was stone dead. His eye would trouble me no more.

If still you think me mad, you will think so no longer when I describe the wise precautions I took for the concealment of the body. The night waned; and I worked hastily, but in silence. First of all I dismembered the corpse. I cut off the head and the arms and the legs.

I then took up three planks from the flooring of the chamber, and deposited all between the scantlings. I then replaced the boards so cleverly, so cunningly, that no human eye – not even his – could have detected any thing wrong. There was nothing to wash out – no stain of any kind – no blood- spot whatever. I had been too wary for that. A tub had caught all – ha! ha!

When I had made an end of these labours, it was four o'clock – still dark as midnight. As the bell sounded the hour, there came a knocking at the street door. I went down to open it with a light heart, – for what had I now to fear? There entered three men, who introduced themselves, with perfect suavity, as officers of the police. A shriek had been heard by a neighbour during the night; suspicion of foul play had been aroused; information had been lodged at the police office, and they (the officers) had been deputed to search the premises.

I smiled, – for what had I to fear? I bade the gentlemen welcome. The shriek, I said, was my own in a dream. The old man, I mentioned, was absent in the country. I took my visitors all over the house. I bade them search – search well. I led them, at length, to his chamber. I showed them his treasures, secure, undisturbed. In the enthusiasm of my confidence, I brought chairs into the room, and desired them here to rest from their fatigues, while I myself, in the wild audacity of my perfect triumph, placed my own seat upon the very spot beneath which reposed the corpse of the victim.

The officers were satisfied. My manner had convinced them. I was singularly at ease. They sat, and while I answered cheerily, they chatted of familiar things. But, ere long, I felt myself getting pale and wished them gone. My head ached, and I fancied a ringing in my ears: but still they sat and still chatted. The ringing became more distinct: – it continued and became more distinct: I talked more freely to get rid of the feeling: but it continued and gained definiteness – until, at length, I found that the noise was not within my ears.

No doubt I now grew very pale; – but I talked more fluently, and with a heightened voice. Yet the sound increased – and what could I do? It was a low, dull, quick sound – much such a sound as a watch makes when enveloped in cotton . I gasped for breath – and yet the officers heard it not. I talked more quickly – more vehemently; but the noise steadily increased. I arose and argued about trifles, in a high key and with violent gesticulations; but the noise steadily increased. Why would they not be gone? I paced the floor to and fro with heavy strides, as if excited to fury by the observations of the men – but the noise steadily increased. Oh God! what could I do? I foamed – I raved – I swore! I swung the chair upon which I had been sitting, and grated it upon the boards, but the noise arose over all and continually increased. It grew louder –louder – louder ! And still the men chatted pleasantly, and smiled. Was it possible they heard not? Almighty God! –no, no! They heard! – they suspected! – they knew ! – they were making a mockery of my horror! – this I thought, and this I think. But anything was better than this agony! Anything was more tolerable than this derision! I could bear those hypocritical smiles no longer! I felt that I must scream or die! and now – again! – hark! louder! louder! louder! louder !

‘Villains!’ I shrieked, ‘dissemble no more! I admit the deed! – tear up the planks! here, here! – it is the beating of his hideous heart!’

The Fall of the House of Usher

Son coeur est un luth suspendu;

Sitôt qu'on le touche il résonne.

de béranger

During the whole of a dull, dark, and soundless day in the autumn of the year, when the clouds hung oppressively low in the heavens, I had been passing alone, on horseback, through a singularly dreary tract of country; and at length found myself, as the shades of the evening drew on, within view of the melancholy House of Usher. I know not how it was – but, with the first glimpse of the building, a sense of insufferable gloom pervaded my spirit. I say insufferable; for the feeling was unrelieved by any of that half-pleasurable, because poetic, sentiment, with which the mind usually receives even the sternest natural images of the desolate or terrible. I looked upon the scene before me – upon the mere house, and the simple landscape features of the domain – upon the bleak walls – upon the vacant eye-like windows – upon a few rank sedges – and upon a few white trunks of decayed trees – with an utter depression of soul which I can compare to no earthly sensation more properly than to the afterdream of the reveller upon opium – the bitter lapse into everyday life – the hideous dropping off of the veil. There was an iciness, a sinking, a sickening of the heart – an unredeemed dreariness of thought which no goading of the imagination could torture into aught of the sublime. What was it – I paused to think – what was it that so unnerved me in the contemplation of the House of Usher? It was a mystery all insoluble; nor could I grapple with the shadowy fancies that crowded upon me as I pondered. I was forced to fall back upon the unsatisfactory conclusion, that while, beyond doubt, there are combinations of very simple natural objects which have the power of thus affecting us, still the analysis of this power lies among considerations beyond our depth. It was possible, I reflected, that a mere different arrangement of the particulars of the scene, of the details of the picture, would be sufficient to modify, or perhaps to annihilate its capacity for sorrowful impression; and, acting upon this idea, I reined my horse to the precipitous brink of a black and lurid tarn that lay in unruffled lustre by the dwelling, and gazed down – but with a shudder even more thrilling than before – upon the remodelled and inverted images of the gray sedge, and the ghastly tree- stems, and the vacant and eye- like windows.

Nevertheless, in this mansion of gloom I now proposed to myself a sojourn of some weeks. Its proprietor, Roderick Usher, had been one of my boon companions in boyhood; but many years had elapsed since our last meeting. A letter, however, had lately reached me in a distant part of the country – a letter from him – which, in its wildly importunate nature, had admitted of no other than a personal reply. The MS. gave evidence of nervous agitation. The writer spoke of acute bodily illness – of a mental disorder which oppressed him – and of an earnest desire to see me, as his best, and indeed his only personal friend, with a view of attempting, by the cheerfulness of my society, some alleviation of his malady. It was the manner in which all this, and much more, was said – it was the apparent heart that went with his request – which allowed me no room for hesitation; and I accordingly obeyed forthwith what I still considered a very singular summons.

Although, as boys, we had been even intimate associates, yet I really knew little of my friend. His reserve had been always excessive and habitual. I was aware, however, that his very ancient family had been noted, time out of mind, for a peculiar sensibility of temperament, displaying itself, through long ages, in many works of exalted art, and manifested, of late, in repeated deeds of munificent yet unobtrusive charity, as well as in a passionate devotion to the intricacies, perhaps even more than to the orthodox and easily recognisable beauties, of musical science. I had learned, too, the very remarkable fact, that the stem of the Usher race, all time- honoured as it was, had put forth, at no period, any enduring branch; in other words, that the entire family lay in the direct line of descent, and had always, with very trifling and very temporary variation, so lain. It was this deficiency, I considered, while running over in thought the perfect keeping of the character of the premises with the accredited character of the people, and while speculating upon the possible influence which the one, in the long lapse of centuries, might have exercised upon the other – it was this deficiency, perhaps, of collateral issue, and the consequent undeviating transmission, from sire to son, of the patrimony with the name, which had, at length, so identified the two as to merge the original title of the estate in the quaint and equivocal appellation of the ‘House of Usher’ – an appellation which seemed to include, in the minds of the peasantry who used it, both the family and the family mansion.

I have said that the sole effect of my somewhat childish experiment – that of looking down within the tarn – had been to deepen the first singular impression. There can be no doubt that the consciousness of the rapid increase of my superstition – for why should I not so term it? –served mainly to accelerate the increase itself. Such, I have long known, is the paradoxical law of all sentiments having terror as a basis. And it might have been for this reason only, that, when I again uplifted my eyes to the house itself, from its image in the pool, there grew in my mind a strange fancy – a fancy so ridiculous, indeed, that I but mention it to show the vivid force of the sensations which oppressed me. I had so worked upon my imagination as really to believe that about the whole mansion and domain there hung an atmosphere peculiar to themselves and their immediate vicinity – an atmosphere which had no affinity with the air of heaven, but which had reeked up from the decayed trees, and the gray wall, and the silent tarn – a pestilent and mystic vapour, dull, sluggish, faintly discernible, and leaden- hued.

Shaking off from my spirit what must have been a dream, I scanned more narrowly the real aspect of the building. Its principal feature seemed to be that of an excessive antiquity. The discoloration of ages had been great. Minute fungi overspread the whole exterior, hanging in a fine tangled web- work from the eaves. Yet all this was apart from any extraordinary dilapidation. No portion of the masonry had fallen; and there appeared to be a wild inconsistency between its still perfect adaptation of parts, and the crumbling condition of the individual stones. In this there was much that reminded me of the specious totality of old wood- work which has rotted for long years in some neglected vault, with no disturbance from the breath of the external air. Beyond this indication of extensive decay, however, the fabric gave little token of instability. Perhaps the eye of a scrutinising observer might have discovered a barely perceptible fissure, which, extending from the roof of the building in front, made its way down the wall in a zigzag direction, until it became lost in the sullen waters of the tarn.

Noticing these things, I rode over a short causeway to the house. A servant in waiting took my horse and I entered the Gothic archway of the hall. A valet, of stealthy step, thence conducted me, in silence, through many dark and intricate passages in my progress to the studio of his master. Much that I encountered on the way contributed, I know not how, to heighten the vague sentiments of which I have already spoken. While the objects around me – while the carvings of the ceilings, the sombre tapestries of the walls, the ebon blackness of the floors, and the phantasmagoric armorial trophies which rattled as I strode, were but matters to which, or to such as which, I had been accustomed from my infancy – while I hesitated not to acknowledge how familiar was all this – I still wondered to find how unfamiliar were the fancies which ordinary images were stirring up. On one of the staircases, I met the physician of the family. His countenance, I thought, wore a mingled expression of low cunning and perplexity. He accosted me with trepidation and passed on. The valet now threw open a door and ushered me into the presence of his master.

The room in which I found myself was very large and lofty. The windows were long, narrow, and pointed, and at so vast a distance from the black oaken floor as to be altogether inaccessible from within. Feeble gleams of encrimsoned light made their way through the trellised panes, and served to render sufficiently distinct the more prominent objects around; the eye, however, struggled in vain to reach the remoter angles of the chamber, or the recesses of the vaulted and fretted ceiling. Dark draperies hung upon the walls. The general furniture was profuse, comfortless, antique, and tattered. Many books and musical instruments lay scattered about, but failed to give any vitality to the scene. I felt that I breathed an atmosphere of sorrow. An air of stern, deep, and irredeemable gloom hung over and pervaded all.

Upon my entrance, Usher arose from a sofa on which he had been lying at full length, and greeted me with a vivacious warmth which had much in it, I at first thought, of an overdone cordiality – of the constrained effort of the ennuyé man of the world. A glance, however, at his countenance, convinced me of his perfect sincerity. We sat down; and for some moments, while he spoke not, I gazed upon him with a feeling half of pity, half of awe. Surely, man had never before so terribly altered, in so brief a period, as had Roderick Usher! It was with difficulty that I could bring myself to admit the identity of the wan being before me with the companion of my early boyhood. Yet the character of his face had been at all times remarkable. A cadaverousness of complexion; an eye large, liquid, and luminous beyond comparison; lips somewhat thin and very pallid, but of a surpassingly beautiful curve; a nose of a delicate Hebrew model, but with a breadth of nostril unusual in similar formations; a finely moulded chin, speaking, in its want of prominence, of a want of moral energy; hair of a more than web-like softness and tenuity; these features, with an inordinate expansion above the regions of the temple, made up altogether a countenance not easily to be forgotten. And now in the mere exaggeration of the prevailing character of these features, and of the expression they were wont to convey, lay so much of change that I doubted to whom I spoke. The now ghastly pallor of the skin, and the now miraculous lustre of the eye, above all things startled and even awed me. The silken hair, too, had been suffered to grow all unheeded, and as, in its wild gossamer texture, it floated rather than fell about the face, I could not, even with effort, connect its Arabesque expression with any idea of simple humanity.

In the manner of my friend I was at once struck with an incoherence – an inconsistency; and I soon found this to arise from a series of feeble and futile struggles to overcome an habitual trepidancy – an excessive nervous agitation. For something of this nature I had indeed been prepared, no less by his letter, than by reminiscences of certain boyish traits, and by conclusions deduced from his peculiar physical conformation and temperament. His action was alternately vivacious and sullen. His voice varied rapidly from a tremulous indecision (when the animal spirits seemed utterly in abeyance) to that species of energetic concision – that abrupt, weighty, unhurried, and hollow- sounding enunciation – that leaden, self- balanced and perfectly modulated guttural utterance, which may be observed in the lost drunkard, or the irreclaimable eater of opium, during the periods of his most intense excitement.

It was thus that he spoke of the object of my visit, of his earnest desire to see me, and of the solace he expected me to afford him. He entered, at some length, into what he conceived to be the nature of his malady. It was, he said, a constitutional and a family evil, and one for which he despaired to find a remedy – a mere nervous affection, he immediately added, which would undoubtedly soon pass off. It displayed itself in a host of unnatural sensations. Some of these, as he detailed them, interested and bewildered me; although, perhaps, the terms, and the general manner of the narration had their weight. He suffered much from a morbid acuteness of the senses; the most insipid food was alone endurable; he could wear only garments of certain texture; the odours of all flowers were oppressive; his eyes were tortured by even a faint light; and there were but peculiar sounds, and these from stringed instruments, which did not inspire him with horror.

To an anomalous species of terror I found him a bounden slave. ‘I shall perish,’ said he, ‘I must perish in this deplorable folly. Thus, thus, and not otherwise, shall I be lost. I dread the events of the future, not in themselves, but in their results. I shudder at the thought of any, even the most trivial, incident, which may operate upon this intolerable agitation of soul. I have, indeed, no abhorrence of danger, except in its absolute effect – in terror. In this unnerved – in this pitiable condition – I feel that the period will sooner or later arrive when I must abandon life and reason together, in some struggle with the grim phantasm, Fear.’

I learned, moreover, at intervals, and through broken and equivocal hints, another singular feature of his mental condition. He was enchained by certain superstitious impressions in regard to the dwelling which he tenanted, and whence, for many years, he had never ventured forth – in regard to an influence whose supposititious force was conveyed in terms too shadowy here to be re-stated – an influence which some peculiarities in the mere form and substance of his family mansion, had, by dint of long sufferance, he said, obtained over his spirit – an effect which the physique of the gray walls and turrets, and of the dim tarn into which they all looked down, had, at length, brought about upon the morale of his existence.

He admitted, however, although with hesitation, that much of the peculiar gloom which thus afflicted him could be traced to a more natural and far more palpable origin – to the severe and long-continued illness – indeed to the evidently approaching dissolution – of a tenderly beloved sister – his sole companion for long years – his last and only relative on earth. ‘Her decease,’ he said, with a bitterness which I can never forget, ‘would leave him (him the hopeless and the frail) the last of the ancient race of the Ushers.’ While he spoke, the lady Madeline (for so was she called) passed slowly through a remote portion of the apartment, and, without having noticed my presence, disappeared. I regarded her with an utter astonishment not unmingled with dread – and yet I found it impossible to account for such feelings. A sensation of stupor oppressed me, as my eyes followed her retreating steps. When a door, at length, closed upon her, my glance sought instinctively and eagerly the countenance of the brother – but he had buried his face in his hands, and I could only perceive that a far more than ordinary wanness had overspread the emaciated fingers through which trickled many passionate tears.

The disease of the lady Madeline had long baffled the skill of her physicians. A settled apathy, a gradual wasting away of the person, and frequent although transient affections of a partially cataleptical character, were the unusual diagnosis. Hitherto she had steadily borne up against the pressure of her malady, and had not betaken herself finally to bed; but, on the closing in of the evening of my arrival at the house, she succumbed (as her brother told me at night with inexpressible agitation) to the prostrating power of the destroyer; and I learned that the glimpse I had obtained of her person would thus probably be the last I should obtain – that the lady, at least while living, would be seen by me no more.

For several days ensuing, her name was unmentioned by either Usher or myself: and during this period I was busied in earnest endeavours to alleviate the melancholy of my friend. We painted and read together; or I listened, as if in a dream, to the wild improvisations of his speaking guitar. And thus, as a closer and still closer intimacy admitted me more unreservedly into the recesses of his spirit, the more bitterly did I perceive the futility of all attempt at cheering a mind from which darkness, as if an inherent positive quality, poured forth upon all objects of the moral and physical universe, in one unceasing radiation of gloom.

I shall ever bear about me a memory of the many solemn hours

I thus spent alone with the master of the House of Usher. Yet I should fail in any attempt to convey an idea of the exact character of the studies, or of the occupations, in which he involved me, or led me the way. An excited and highly distempered ideality threw a sulphureous lustre over all. His long improvised dirges will ring forever in my ears. Among other things, I hold painfully in mind a certain singular perversion and amplification of the wild air of the last waltz of Von Weber. From the paintings over which his elaborate fancy brooded, and which grew, touch by touch, into vaguenesses at which I shuddered the more thrillingly, because I shuddered knowing not why; – from these paintings(vivid as their images now are before me) I would in vain endeavour to educe more than a small portion which should lie within the compass of merely written words. By the utter simplicity, by the nakedness of his designs, he arrested and overawed attention. If ever mortal painted an idea, that mortal was Roderick Usher. For me at least –in the circumstances then surrounding me – there arose out of the pure abstractions which the hypochondriac contrived to throw upon his canvas, an intensity of intolerable awe, no shadow of which felt I ever yet in the contemplation of the certainly glowing yet too concrete reveries of Fuseli.

One of the phantasmagoric conceptions of my friend, partaking not so rigidly of the spirit of abstraction, may be shadowed forth, although feebly, in words. A small picture presented the interior of an immensely long and rectangular vault or tunnel, with low walls, smooth, white, and without interruption or device. Certain accessory points of the design served well to convey the idea that this excavation lay at an exceeding depth below the surface of the earth. No outlet was observed in any portion of its vast extent, and no torch, or other artificial source of light was discernible; yet a flood of intense rays rolled throughout, and bathed the whole in a ghastly and inappropriate splendour.

I have just spoken of that morbid condition of the auditory nerve which rendered all music intolerable to the sufferer, with the exception of certain effects of stringed instruments. It was, perhaps, the narrow limits to which he thus confined himself upon the guitar, which gave birth, in great measure, to the fantastic character of his performances. But the fervid facility of his *impromptu*s could not be so accounted for. They must have been, and were, in the notes, as well as in the words of his wild fantasias (for he not unfrequently accompanied himself with rhymed verbal improvisations), the result of that intense mental collectedness and concentration to which I have previously alluded as observable only in particular moments of the highest artificial excitement. The words of one of these rhapsodies I have easily remembered. I was, perhaps, the more forcibly impressed with it, as he gave it, because, in the under or mystic current of its meaning, I fancied that I perceived, and for the first time, a full consciousness on the part of Usher, of the tottering of his lofty reason upon her throne. The verses, which were entitled ‘The Haunted Palace’, ran very nearly, if not accurately, thus:

In the greenest of our valleys,
By good angels tenanted,
Once a fair and stately palace –
Radiant palace – reared its head.
In the monarch Thought’s dominion –
It stood there!
Never seraph spread a pinion
Over fabric half so fair.

ii

Banners yellow, glorious, golden,
On its roof did float and flow;
(This – all this – was in the olden Time long ago)
And every gentle air that dallied,
In that sweet day,

Along the ramparts plumed and pallid,
A winged odour went away.

iii

Wanderers in that happy valley
Through two luminous windows saw Spirits moving musically
To a lute's well-tuned law,
Round about a throne, where sitting (Porphyrogene!)
In state his glory well befitting,
The ruler of the realm was seen.

iv

And all with pearl and ruby glowing
Was the fair palace door,
Through which came flowing, flowing, flowing
And sparkling evermore,
A troop of Echoes whose sweet duty
Was but to sing,
In voices of surpassing beauty,
The wit and wisdom of their king.

v

But evil things, in robes of sorrow,

Assailed the monarch's high estate;
(Ah, let us mourn, for never morrow Shall dawn upon him, desolate!)
And, round about his home, the glory
That blushed and bloomed
Is but a dim- remembered story
Of the old time entombed.

vi

And travellers now within that valley,
Through the red- litten windows, see
Vast forms that move fantastically
To a discordant melody;
While, like a rapid ghastly river,
Through the pale door,
A hideous throng rush out forever,
And laugh – but smile no more.

I well remember that suggestions arising from this ballad, led us into a train of thought wherein there became manifest an opinion of Usher's which I mention not so much on account of its novelty, (for other men have thought thus,) as on account of the pertinacity with which he maintained it. This opinion, in its general form, was that of the sentience of all vegetable things. But, in his disordered fancy, the idea had assumed a more daring character, and trespassed, under certain conditions, upon the kingdom of inorganization. I lack words to express the full extent, or the earnest abandon of his persuasion. The belief, however, was connected (as I have previously hinted) with the gray stones of the home of his forefathers. The conditions of the sentience had been here, he imagined, fulfilled in the method of collocation of these stones – in the order of their arrangement, as well as in that of the many fungi which overspread them, and of the decayed trees which stood around – above all, in the long undisturbed endurance of this arrangement, and in its reduplication in the still waters of the tarn. Its evidence – the evidence of the sentience – was to be seen, he said, (and I here started as he spoke,) in the gradual yet certain condensation of an atmosphere of their own about the waters and the walls. The result was discoverable, he added, in that silent, yet importunate and terrible influence which for centuries had moulded the destinies of his family, and which made him what I now saw him – what he was. Such opinions need no comment, and I will make none.

Our books – the books which, for years, had formed no small portion of the mental existence of the invalid – were, as might be supposed, in strict keeping with this character of phantasm. We pored together over such works as the Ververt et Chartreuse of Gresset; the Belphegor of Machiavelli; the Heaven and Hell of Swedenborg; the Subterranean Voyage of Nicholas Klimm by Holberg; the Chiromancy of Robert Flud, of Jean D'Indaginé, and of De la Chambre; the Journey into the Blue Distance of Tieck; and the City of the Sun of Campanella. One favourite volume was a small octavo edition of the Directorium Inquisitorum, by the Dominican Eymeric de Gironne; and there were passages in Pomponius Mela, about the old African Satyrs and Ægipans, over which Usher would sit dreaming for hours. His chief delight, however, was found in the perusal of an exceedingly rare and curious book in quarto Gothic – the manual of a forgotten church – the Vigiliæ Mortuorum secundum Chorum Ecclesiæ Maguntinæ.

I could not help thinking of the wild ritual of this work, and of its probable influence upon the hypochondriac, when, one evening, having informed me abruptly that the lady Madeline was no more, he stated his intention of preserving her corpse for a fortnight, (previously to its final interment,) in one of the numerous vaults within the main walls of the building. The worldly reason, however, assigned for this singular proceeding, was one which I did not feel at liberty to dispute. The brother had been led to his resolution (so he told me) by consideration of the unusual character of the malady of the deceased, of certain obtrusive and eager inquiries on the part of her medical men, and of the remote and exposed situation of the burial- ground of the family. I will not deny that when I called to mind the sinister countenance of the person whom I met upon the staircase, on the day of my arrival at the house, I had no desire to oppose what I regarded as at best but a harmless, and by no means an unnatural, precaution.

At the request of Usher, I personally aided him in the arrangements for the temporary entombment. The body having been encoffined, we two alone bore it to its rest. The vault in which we placed it (and which had been so long unopened that our torches, half smothered in its oppressive atmosphere, gave us little opportunity for investigation) was small, damp, and entirely without means of admission for light; lying, at great depth, immediately beneath that portion of the building in which was my own sleeping apartment. It had been used, apparently, in remote feudal times, for the worst purposes of a donjon- keep, and, in later days, as a place of deposit for powder, or some other highly combustible substance, as a portion of its floor, and the whole interior of a long archway through which we reached it, were carefully sheathed with copper. The door, of massive iron, had been, also, similarly protected. Its immense weight caused an unusually sharp grating sound, as it moved upon its hinges.

Having deposited our mournful burden upon tressels within this region of horror, we partially turned aside the yet unscrewed lid of the coffin, and looked upon the face of the tenant. A striking similitude between the brother and sister now first arrested my attention; and Usher, divining, perhaps, my thoughts, murmured out some few words from which I learned that the deceased and himself had been twins, and that sympathies of a scarcely intelligible nature had always existed between them. Our glances, however, rested not long upon the dead – for we could not regard her unawed. The disease which had thus entombed the lady in the maturity of youth, had left, as usual in all maladies of a strictly cataleptical character, the mockery of a faint blush upon the bosom and the face, and that suspiciously lingering smile upon the lip which is so terrible in death. We replaced and screwed down the lid, and, having secured the door of iron, made our way, with toil, into the scarcely less gloomy apartments of the upper portion of the house.

And now, some days of bitter grief having elapsed, an observable change came over the features of the mental disorder of my friend. His ordinary manner had vanished. His ordinary occupations were neglected or forgotten. He roamed from chamber to chamber with hurried, unequal, and objectless step. The pallor of his countenance had assumed, if possible, a more ghastly hue – but the luminousness of his eye had utterly gone out. The once occasional huskiness of his tone was heard no more; and a tremulous quaver, as if of extreme terror, habitually characterized his utterance. There were times, indeed, when I thought his unceasingly agitated mind was labouring with some oppressive secret, to divulge which he struggled for the necessary courage. At times, again, I was obliged to resolve all into the mere inexplicable vagaries of madness, for I beheld him gazing upon vacancy for long hours, in an attitude of the profoundest attention, as if listening to some imaginary sound. It was no wonder that his condition terrified – that it infected me. I felt creeping upon me, by slow yet certain degrees, the wild influences of his own fantastic yet impressive superstitions.

It was, especially, upon retiring to bed late in the night of the seventh or eighth day after the placing of the lady Madeline within the donjon, that I experienced the full power of such feelings. Sleep came not near my couch – while the hours waned and waned away. I struggled to reason off the nervousness which had dominion over me. I endeavoured to believe that much, if not all of what I felt, was due to the bewildering influence of the gloomy furniture of the room – of the dark and tattered draperies, which, tortured into motion by the breath of a rising tempest, swayed fitfully to and fro upon the walls, and rustled uneasily about the decorations of the bed. But my efforts were fruitless. An irrepressible tremour gradually pervaded my frame; and, at length, there sat upon my very heart an incubus of utterly causeless alarm. Shaking this off with a gasp and a struggle, I uplifted myself upon the pillows, and, peering earnestly within the intense darkness of the chamber, hearkened – I know not why, except that an instinctive spirit prompted me – to certain low and indefinite sounds which came, through the pauses of the storm, at long intervals, I knew not whence. Overpowered by an intense sentiment of horror, unaccountable yet unendurable, I threw on my clothes with haste (for I felt that I should sleep no more during the night), and endeavoured to arouse myself from the pitiable condition into which I had fallen, by pacing rapidly to and fro through the apartment.

I had taken but few turns in this manner, when a light step on an adjoining staircase arrested my attention. I presently recognised it as that of Usher. In an instant afterward he rapped, with a gentle touch, at my door, and entered, bearing a lamp. His countenance was, as usual, cadaverously wan – but, moreover, there was a species of mad hilarity in his eyes – an evidently restrained hysteria in his whole demeanour. His air appalled me – but anything was preferable to the solitude which I had so long endured, and I even welcomed his presence as a relief.

‘And you have not seen it?’ he said abruptly, after having stared about him for some moments in silence – ‘you have not then seen it? – but, stay! you shall.’ Thus speaking, and having carefully shaded his lamp, he hurried to one of the casements, and threw it freely open to the storm.

The impetuous fury of the entering gust nearly lifted us from our feet. It was, indeed, a tempestuous yet sternly beautiful night, and one wildly singular in its terror and its beauty. A whirlwind had apparently collected its force in our vicinity; for there were frequent and violent alterations in the direction of the wind; and the exceeding density of the clouds (which hung so low as to press upon the turrets of the house) did not prevent our perceiving the life-like velocity with which they flew careering from all points against each other, without passing away into the distance. I say that even their exceeding density did not prevent our perceiving this – yet we had no glimpse of the moon or stars – nor was there any flashing forth of the lightning. But the under surfaces of the huge masses of agitated vapour, as well as all terrestrial objects immediately around us, were glowing in the unnatural light of a faintly luminous and distinctly visible gaseous exhalation which hung about and enshrouded the mansion.

‘You must not – you shall not behold this!’ said I, shudderingly, to Usher, as I led him, with a gentle violence, from the window to a seat. ‘These appearances, which bewilder you, are merely electrical phenomena not uncommon – or it may be that they have their ghastly origin in the rank miasma of the tarn. Let us close this casement; – the air is chilling and dangerous to your frame. Here is one of your favourite romances. I will read, and you shall listen; – and so we will pass away this terrible night together.’

The antique volume which I had taken up was the ‘Mad Trist’ of Sir Launcelot Canning; but I had called it a favourite of Usher’s more in sad jest than in earnest; for, in truth, there is little in its uncouth and unimaginative prolixity which could have had interest for the lofty and spiritual ideality of my friend. It was, however, the only book immediately at hand; and I indulged a vague hope that the excitement which now agitated the hypochondriac, might find relief (for the history of mental disorder is full of similar anomalies) even in the extremeness of the folly which I should read. Could I have judged, indeed, by the wild overstrained air of vivacity with which he hearkened, or apparently hearkened, to the words of the tale, I might well have congratulated myself upon the success of my design.

I had arrived at that well-known portion of the story where Ethelred, the hero of the Trist, having sought in vain for peaceable admission into the dwelling of the hermit, proceeds to make good an entrance by force. Here, it will be remembered, the words of the narrative run thus:

‘And Ethelred, who was by nature of a doughty heart, and who was now mighty withal, on account of the powerfulness of the wine which he had drunken, waited no longer to hold parley with the hermit, who, in sooth, was of an obstinate and maliceful turn, but, feeling the rain upon his shoulders, and fearing the rising of the tempest, uplifted his mace outright, and, with blows, made quickly room in the plankings of the door for his gauntleted hand; and now pulling therewith sturdily, he so cracked, and ripped, and tore all asunder, that the noise of the dry and hollow-sounding wood alarumed and reverberated throughout the forest.’

At the termination of this sentence I started, and for a moment, paused; for it appeared to me (although I at once concluded that my excited fancy had deceived me) –it appeared to me that, from some very remote portion of the mansion, there came, indistinctly, to my ears, what might have been, in its exact similarity of character, the echo (but a stifled and dull one certainly) of the very cracking and ripping sound which Sir Launcelot had so particularly described. It was, beyond doubt, the coincidence alone which had arrested my attention; for, amid the rattling of the sashes of the casements, and the ordinary commingled noises of the still increasing storm, the sound, in itself, had nothing, surely, which should have interested or disturbed me. I continued the story:

‘But the good champion Ethelred, now entering within the door, was sore enraged and amazed to perceive no signal of the malicious hermit; but, in the stead thereof, a dragon of a scaly and prodigious demeanour, and of a fiery tongue, which sate in guard before a palace of gold, with a floor of silver; and upon the wall there hung a shield of shining brass with this legend enwritten –

Who entereth herein, a conqueror hath bin;

Who slayeth the dragon, the shield he shall win;

And Ethelred uplifted his mace, and struck upon the head of the dragon, which fell before him, and gave up his pesty breath, with a shriek so horrid and harsh, and withal so piercing, that Ethelred had fain to close his ears with his hands against the dreadful noise of it, the like whereof was never before heard.’

Here again I paused abruptly, and now with a feeling of wild amazement – for there could be no doubt whatever that, in this instance, I did actually hear (although from what direction it proceeded I found it impossible to say) a low and apparently distant, but harsh, protracted, and most unusual screaming or grating sound – the exact counterpart of what my fancy had already conjured up for the dragon’s unnatural shriek as described by the romancer.

Oppressed, as I certainly was, upon the occurrence of the second and most extraordinary coincidence, by a thousand conflicting sensations, in which wonder and extreme terror were predominant, I still retained sufficient presence of mind to avoid exciting, by any observation, the sensitive nervousness of my companion. I was by no means certain that he had noticed the sounds in question; although, assuredly, a strange alteration had, during the last few minutes, taken place in his demeanour. From a position fronting my own, he had gradually brought round his chair, so as to sit with his face to the door of the chamber; and thus I could but partially perceive his features, although I saw that his lips trembled as if he were murmuring inaudibly. His head had dropped upon his breast – yet I knew that he was not asleep, from the wide and rigid opening of the eye as I caught a glance of it in profile. The motion of his body, too, was at variance with this idea – for he rocked from side to side with a gentle yet constant and uniform sway. Having rapidly taken notice of all this, I resumed the narrative of Sir Launcelot, which thus proceeded:

‘And now, the champion, having escaped from the terrible fury of the dragon, bethinking himself of the brazen shield, and of the breaking up of the enchantment which was upon it, removed the carcass from out of the way before him, and approached valorously over the silver pavement of the castle to where the shield was upon the wall; which in sooth tarried not for his full coming, but fell down at his feet upon the silver floor, with a mighty great and terrible ringing sound.’

No sooner had these syllables passed my lips, than – as if a shield of brass had indeed, at the moment, fallen heavily upon a floor of silver – I became aware of a distinct, hollow, metallic, and clangorous, yet apparently muffled reverberation. Completely unnerved, I leaped to my feet; but the measured rocking movement of Usher was undisturbed. I rushed to the chair in which he sat. His eyes were bent fixedly before him, and throughout his whole countenance there reigned a stony rigidity. But, as I placed my hand upon his shoulder, there came a strong shudder over his whole person; a sickly smile quivered about his lips; and I saw that he spoke in a low, hurried, and gibbering murmur, as if unconscious of my presence. Bending closely over him, I at length drank in the hideous import of his words.

‘Not hear it? – yes, I hear it, and have heard it. Long –long – long – many minutes, many hours, many days, have I heard it – yet I dared not – oh, pity me, miserable wretch that I am! – I dared not – I dared not speak! We have put her living in the tomb! Said I not that my senses were acute? I now tell you that I heard her first feeble movements in the hollow coffin. I heard them – many, many days ago – yet I dared not – I dared not speak! And now – to- night – Ethelred – ha! ha! – the breaking of the hermit’s door, and the death- cry of the dragon, and the clangour of the shield! – say, rather, the rending of her coffin, and the grating of the iron hinges of her prison, and her struggles within the coppered archway of the vault! Oh whither shall I fly? Will she not be here anon? Is she not hurrying to upbraid me for my haste? Have I not heard her footstep on the stair? Do I not distinguish that heavy and horrible beating of her heart? Madman!’ –here he sprang furiously to his feet, and shrieked out his syllables, as if in the effort he were giving up his soul – ‘Madman! I tell you that she now stands without the door!’

As if in the superhuman energy of his utterance there had been found the potency of a spell – the huge antique panels to which the speaker pointed, threw slowly back, upon the instant, their ponderous and ebony jaws. It was the work of the rushing gust – but then without those doors there did stand the lofty and enshrouded figure of the lady Madeline of Usher. There was blood upon her white robes, and the evidence of some bitter struggle upon every portion of her emaciated frame. For a moment she remained trembling and reeling to and fro upon the threshold, then, with a low moaning cry, fell heavily inward upon the person of her brother, and in her violent and now final death- agonies, bore him to the floor a corpse, and a victim to the terrors he had anticipated.

From that chamber, and from that mansion, I fled aghast. The storm was still abroad in all its wrath as I found myself crossing the old causeway. Suddenly there shot along the path a wild light, and I turned to see whence a gleam so unusual could have issued; for the vast house and its shadows were alone behind me. The radiance was that of the full, setting, and blood- red moon which now shone vividly through that once barely discernible fissure of which I have before spoken as extending from the roof of the building, in a zigzag direction, to the base. While I gazed, this fissure rapidly widened – there came a fierce breath of the whirlwind – the entire orb of the satellite burst at once upon my sight – my brain reeled as I saw the mighty walls rushing asunder – there was a long tumultuous shouting sound like the voice of a thousand waters – and the deep and dank tarn at my feet closed sullenly and silently over the fragments of the ‘house of usher’.

The Cask of Amontillado

The thousand injuries of Fortunato I had borne as I best could, but when he ventured upon insult I vowed revenge. You, who so well know the nature of my soul, will not suppose, however, that I gave utterance to a threat. At length I would be avenged; this was a point definitely settled – but the very definitiveness with which it was resolved precluded the idea of risk. I must not only punish but punish with impunity. A wrong is unre dressed when retribution overtakes its redresser. It is equally unre dressed when the avenger fails to make himself felt as such to him who has done the wrong.

It must be understood that neither by word nor deed had I given Fortunato cause to doubt my good will. I continued, as was my wont, to smile in his face, and he did not perceive that my smile now was at the thought of his immolation.

He had a weak point – this Fortunato – although in other regards he was a man to be respected and even feared. He prided himself on his connoisseurship in wine. Few Italians have the true virtuoso spirit. For the most part their enthusiasm is adopted to suit the time and opportunity, to practise imposture upon the British and Austrian millionaires. In painting and gemmary, Fortunato, like his countrymen, was a quack, but in the matter of old wines he was sincere. In this respect I did not differ from him materially; – I was skilful in the Italian vintages myself, and bought largely whenever I could.

It was about dusk, one evening during the supreme madness of the carnival season, that I encountered my friend. He accosted me with excessive warmth, for he had been drinking much. The man wore motley. He had on a tight- fitting parti- striped dress, and his head was surmounted by the conical cap and bells. I was so pleased to see him that I thought I should never have done wringing his hand.

I said to him – ‘My dear Fortunato, you are luckily met. How remarkably well you are looking today. But I have received a pipe of what passes for Amontillado, and I have my doubts.’

‘How?’ said he. ‘Amontillado? A pipe? Impossible! And in the middle of the carnival!’

‘I have my doubts,’ I replied; ‘and I was silly enough to pay the full Amontillado price without consulting you in the matter. You were not to be found, and I was fearful of losing a bargain.’

‘Amontillado!’

‘I have my doubts.’

‘Amontillado!’

‘And I must satisfy them.’

‘Amontillado!’

‘As you are engaged, I am on my way to Luchresi. If any one has a critical turn it is he. He will tell me –’

‘Luchresi cannot tell Amontillado from Sherry.’

‘And yet some fools will have it that his taste is a match for your own.’

‘Come, let us go.’

‘Whither?’

‘To your vaults.’

‘My friend, no; I will not impose upon your good nature. I perceive you have an engagement. Luchresi –’

‘I have no engagement; – come.’

‘My friend, no. It is not the engagement, but the severe cold with which I perceive you are afflicted. The vaults are insufferably damp. They are encrusted with nitre.’

‘Let us go, nevertheless. The cold is merely nothing. Amontillado! You have been imposed upon. And as for Luchresi, he cannot distinguish Sherry from Amontillado.’

Thus speaking, Fortunato possessed himself of my arm; and putting on a mask of black silk and drawing a roquelaire closely about my person, I suffered him to hurry me to my palazzo.

There were no attendants at home; they had absconded to make merry in honour of the time. I had told them that I should not return until the morning, and had given them explicit orders not to stir from the house. These orders were sufficient, I well knew, to insure their immediate disappearance, one and all, as soon as my back was turned.

I took from their sconces two flambeaux, and giving one to Fortunato, bowed him through several suites of rooms to the archway that led into the vaults. I passed down a long and winding staircase, requesting him to be cautious as he followed. We came at length to the foot of the descent, and stood together upon the damp ground of the catacombs of the Montresors.

The gait of my friend was unsteady, and the bells upon his cap jingled as he strode.

‘The pipe,’ he said.

‘It is farther on,’ said I; ‘but observe the white web-work which gleams from these cavern walls.’

He turned towards me, and looked into my eyes with two filmy orbs that distilled the rheum of intoxication.

‘Nitre?’ he asked, at length.

‘Nitre,’ I replied. ‘How long have you had that cough?’

‘Ugh! ugh! ugh! – ugh! ugh! ugh! – ugh! ugh! ugh! – ugh! ugh! ugh! – ugh! ugh! ugh!’

My poor friend found it impossible to reply for many minutes.

‘It is nothing,’ he said, at last.

‘Come,’ I said, with decision, ‘we will go back; your health is precious. You are rich, respected, admired, beloved; you are happy, as once I was. You are a man to be missed. For me it is no matter. We will go back; you will be ill, and I cannot be responsible. Besides, there is Luchresi –’

‘Enough,’ he said; ‘the cough is a mere nothing; it will not kill me. I shall not die of a cough.’

‘True – true,’ I replied; ‘and, indeed, I had no intention of alarming you unnecessarily – but you should use all proper caution. A draught of this Medoc will defend us from the damp.’

Here I knocked off the neck of a bottle which I drew from a long row of its fellows that lay upon the mould.

‘Drink,’ I said, presenting him the wine.

He raised it to his lips with a leer. He paused and nodded to me familiarly, while his bells jingled.

‘I drink,’ he said, ‘to the buried that repose around us.’

‘And I to your long life.’

He again took my arm, and we proceeded.

‘These vaults,’ he said, ‘are extensive.’

‘The Montresors,’ I replied, ‘were a great and numerous family.’

‘I forget your arms.’

‘A huge human foot d’or, in a field azure; the foot crushes a serpent rampant whose fangs are imbedded in the heel.’

‘And the motto?’

‘Nemo me impune lacessit.’

‘Good!’ he said.

The wine sparkled in his eyes and the bells jingled. My own fancy grew warm with the Medoc. We had passed through long walls of piled skeletons, with casks and puncheons intermingling, into the inmost recesses of the catacombs. I paused again, and this time I made bold to seize Fortunato by an arm above the elbow.

‘The nitre!’ I said; ‘see, it increases. It hangs like moss upon the vaults. We are below the river’s bed. The drops of moisture trickle among the bones. Come, we will go back ere it is too late. Your cough –’

‘It is nothing,’ he said; ‘let us go on. But first, another draught of the Medoc.’

I broke and reached him a flagon of De Grâve. He emptied it at a breath. His eyes flashed with a fierce light. He laughed and threw the bottle upwards with a gesticulation I did not understand.

I looked at him in surprise. He repeated the movement – a grotesque one.

'You do not comprehend?' he said.

'Not I,' I replied.

'Then you are not of the brotherhood.'

'How?'

'You are not of the masons.'

'Yes, yes,' I said; 'yes, yes.'

'You? Impossible! A mason?'

'A mason,' I replied.

'A sign,' he said, 'a sign.'

'It is this,' I answered, producing from beneath the folds of my roquelaire a trowel.

'You jest,' he exclaimed, recoiling a few paces. 'But let us proceed to the Amontillado.'

'Be it so,' I said, replacing the tool beneath the cloak and again offering him my arm. He leaned upon it heavily. We continued our route in search of the Amontillado. We passed through a range of low arches, descended, passed on, and descending again, arrived at a deep crypt, in which the foulness of the air caused our flambeaux rather to glow than flame.

At the most remote end of the crypt there appeared another less spacious. Its walls had been lined with human remains, piled to the vault overhead, in the fashion of the great catacombs of Paris. Three sides of this interior crypt were still ornamented in this manner. From the fourth side the bones had been thrown down, and lay promiscuously upon the earth, forming at one point a mound of some size. Within the wall thus exposed by the displacing of the bones, we perceived a still interior crypt or recess, in depth about four feet, in width three, in height six or seven. It seemed to have been constructed for no especial use within itself, but formed merely the interval between two of the colossal supports of the roof of the catacombs, and was backed by one of their circumscribing walls of solid granite.

It was in vain that Fortunato, uplifting his dull torch, endeavoured to pry into the depth of the recess. Its termination the feeble light did not enable us to see.

‘Proceed,’ I said; ‘herein is the Amontillado. As for Luchresi –’

‘He is an ignoramus,’ interrupted my friend, as he stepped unsteadily forward, while I followed immediately at his heels. In an instant he had reached the extremity of the niche, and finding his progress arrested by the rock, stood stupidly bewildered. A moment more and I had fettered him to the granite. In its surface were two iron staples, distant from each other about two feet, horizontally. From one of these depended a short chain, from the other a padlock. Throwing the links about his waist, it was but the work of a few seconds to secure it. He was too much astounded to resist. Withdrawing the key I stepped back from the recess.

‘Pass your hand,’ I said, ‘over the wall; you cannot help feeling the nitre. Indeed, it is very damp. Once more let me implore you to return. No? Then I must positively leave you. But I must first render you all the little attentions in my power.’

‘The Amontillado!’ ejaculated my friend, not yet recovered from his astonishment.

‘True,’ I replied; ‘the Amontillado.’

As I said these words I busied myself among the pile of bones of which I have before spoken. Throwing them aside, I soon uncovered a quantity of building stone and mortar. With these materials and with the aid of my trowel, I began vigorously to wall up the entrance of the niche.

I had scarcely laid the first tier of the masonry when I discovered that the intoxication of Fortunato had in a great measure worn off. The earliest indication I had of this was a low moaning cry from the depth of the recess. It was not the cry of a drunken man. There was then a long and obstinate silence. I laid the second tier, and the third, and the fourth; and then I heard the furious vibrations of the chain. The noise lasted for several minutes, during which, that I might hearken to it with the more satisfaction, I ceased my labours and sat down upon the bones. When at last the clanking subsided, I resumed the trowel, and finished without interruption the fifth, the sixth, and the seventh tier. The wall was now nearly upon a level with my breast. I again paused, and holding the flambeaux over the mason- work, threw a few feeble rays upon the figure within.

A succession of loud and shrill screams, bursting suddenly from the throat of the chained form, seemed to thrust me violently back. For a brief moment I hesitated, I trembled. Unsheathing my rapier, I began to grope with it about the recess; but the thought of an instant reassured me. I placed my hand upon the solid fabric of the catacombs, and felt satisfied. I re-approached the wall; I replied to the yells of him who clamoured. I re-echoed, I aided, I surpassed them in volume and in strength. I did this, and the clamourer grew still.

It was now midnight, and my task was drawing to a close. I had completed the eighth, the ninth and the tenth tier. I had finished a portion of the last and the eleventh; there remained but a single stone to be fitted and plastered in. I struggled with its weight; I placed it partially in its destined position. But now there came from out the niche a low laugh that erected the hairs upon my head. It was succeeded by a sad voice, which I had difficulty in recognizing as that of the noble Fortunato. The voice said –

‘Ha! ha! ha! – he! he! he! – a very good joke, indeed –an excellent jest. We will have many a rich laugh about it at the palazzo – he! he! he! – over our wine – he! he! he!’

‘The Amontillado!’ I said.

‘He! he! he! – he! he! he! – yes, the Amontillado. But is it not getting late? Will not they be awaiting us at the palazzo, the Lady Fortunato and the rest? Let us be gone.’

‘Yes,’ I said, ‘let us be gone.’

‘For the love of God, Montresor!’

‘Yes,’ I said, ‘for the love of God!’

But to these words I hearkened in vain for a reply. I grew impatient. I called aloud –

‘Fortunato!’

No answer. I called again –

‘Fortunato!’

No answer still. I thrust a torch through the remaining aperture and let it fall within. There came forth in return only a jingling of the bells. My heart grew sick; it was the dampness of the catacombs that made it so. I hastened to make an end of my labour. I forced the last stone into its position; I plastered it up. Against the new masonry I re- erected the old rampart of bones. For the half of a century no mortal has disturbed them. In pace requiescat!

吻

五月二十日傍晚八点钟，某炮兵后备旅的所有六个连，到露营地去的途中，在梅斯捷奇金村停下来过夜。他们那儿乱哄哄，有的军官在大炮四周忙碌，有的军官会合在教堂围墙附近的广场上听设营官讲话，这时候忽然从教堂后边闪出一个穿便服的男子，骑着一匹奇怪的马。那匹浅黄色的小马生着好看的脖子和短短的尾巴，一步步走过来，然而不是照直走，却像是斜着溜过来，踩着一种细碎的舞步，仿佛有人用鞭子抽它的腿似的。骑马的人走到军官们面前，抬了抬帽子说：

“本地的地主，陆军中将冯·拉别克大人请诸位军官先生马上赏光到家里去喝茶……”

马低低头，踩着舞步，斜着身子往后退去。骑马的人又抬了抬帽子，一刹那间，跟他那匹奇怪的马隐到教堂后面，不见了。

“鬼才知道这是怎么回事！”有几个军官嘟哝道，他们正在散开，要回到自己的住处去，“大家都想睡觉了这位冯·拉别克却要请人喝什么茶！什么叫作喝茶，我们心里可有数！”

所有六个连的军官们都清楚地记得去年的一件事在阅兵期间，他们跟一个哥萨克团的军官们，也像这样受到一位伯爵地主——一位退伍军人的邀请去喝茶。那位好客、殷勤的伯爵款待他们，请他们吃饱、喝足之后不肯放他们回到村里的住处去，却把他们留在自己家里过夜。所有这些当然都很好，简直没法儿希望更好的了然而糟糕的是那位退伍军人有这些年轻人做伴，高兴得过了头。他对军官们讲他过去的光辉事迹，领他们走遍各处房间，给他们看名贵的画片、古老的版画、珍奇的武器，给他们念大人物的亲笔信，一直忙到太阳东升那些疲乏厌倦的军官看着，听着，一心想睡觉，小心地对袖口打呵欠。临了，主人总算放他们走了，可是要睡觉已经太迟了。

也许这个冯·拉别克就是这种人吧？是也好，不是也好，反正也没办法了。军官们换上整齐的军服，把周身收拾干净，成群结伙地去找那个地主的家。在教堂附近的广场上，他们打听出来要到那位先生的家可以沿着下面的路走——从教堂后面下坡到河边，沿着河岸走到一个花园，顺一条林荫路走到那所房子；或者走上面的路也成——从教堂照直顺着大路走，在离村子不到半俄里 [1] 的地方就到了地主的谷仓。军官们决定走上面的路。

“这个冯·拉别克是什么人？”他们一面走一面闲谈，“就是从前在普列夫纳统率H骑兵师的将领吧？”

“不，那人不叫冯·拉别克，单叫拉别克，没有冯。”

“多好的天气啊！”

大路在第一个谷仓那儿分成两股：一股照直往前去，消失在晦暗的暮色里；另一股往右去，通到主人的房子。军官们往右拐弯，讲话声音开始放低……路的两边排列着红房顶的石砌谷仓，笨重而森严，很像县城里的营房。前面，主人宅子的窗子里灯光明亮。

“好兆头，诸位先生！”有一个军官说，“我们的猎狗跑到大家前头去了。这是说，他闻出我们前头有猎物了！……”

中尉洛贝特科走在众人前面，他生得又高又结实可是没长唇髭（他已经过二十五岁了，可是不知什么缘故他那保养得很好的圆脸上却连一根胡子也没有），善于远远地辨出前面有女人，因此在这个旅里以这种嗅觉出名他扭转身来说：

“对了，这儿一定有女人。我凭本能就觉出来了。”

冯·拉别克本人在正屋门口迎接军官们，他是一位仪表优雅、年纪大约六十岁的老人，穿着便服。他跟客人们握手，说他见到他们很高兴，很幸福，可是诚恳地请求军官先生们看在上帝的分上原谅他不留他们过夜有两个带着孩子一起来的姐妹、几个弟兄、几个邻居来看望他，弄得他一个空房间也没有了。

将军跟每个人握手、道歉、微笑，可是凭他的脸色看得出他绝不像去年那位伯爵那么高兴接待这些客人他之所以邀请这些军官，只是因为他觉得这是一种必要的礼节罢了。军官们自己呢，走上铺着柔软的毡毯的楼梯一面听他讲话，一面觉得他们之所以受到邀请，也只是因为他不好意思不请他们罢了。他们看见听差们匆匆忙忙点亮楼下门道里和楼上前厅里的灯，觉得他们好像随身把不安和不便带进了这个宅子。既然已经有两个带着子女的姐妹、弟兄、邻居大概由于家庭的喜事或者变故而聚会在这所房子里，那么十九个素不相识的军官的光临会受到欢迎吗？

到了楼上，在大厅门口，军官们遇到一位身材高大、匀称的老太太，长脸上生着黑眉毛，很像厄热尼皇后 [2]。她殷勤而庄严地微笑着，说她看到客人很高兴，很幸福，道歉说她丈夫和她这回不能够邀请军官先生们在这里过夜。每逢她从客人面前扭转身去办点什么事，她那美丽、庄严的笑容立刻就消失了。那么，事情很清楚：她这一辈子见过很多军官，现在她对他們不感兴趣，即使她邀他们到家里来，而且表示歉意，那也只是因为她的教养和社会地位要求她这样做罢

了。

军官们走进一个大饭厅，那儿已经有十来个人，男男女女，老老少少，坐在长桌的一边喝茶。在他们的椅子背后可以隐约看见一群男人笼罩在雪茄烟的轻飘的云雾里，他们当中站着一个瘦长的青年，正在谈论什么，他留着红色的络腮胡子，讲英国话，声音响亮，可是咬字不清。这群人的背后有一扇门，从门口望出去可以看见一个明亮的房间，摆着淡蓝色的家具。

“诸位先生，你们人数这么多，简直没法儿跟你们介绍了！”将军大声说，极力说得很快活，“自己介绍吧诸位先生，不要客气！”

军官们有的带着很严肃的，甚至很严厉的脸相，有的现出勉强的笑容，大家都觉得很别扭，就好歹鞠一个躬坐下来喝茶。

其中觉得最别扭的是里亚博维奇上尉。他是一个戴眼镜的军官，身材矮小，背有点伛偻，生着山猫样的络腮胡子。他的同伴们有的做出严肃的神情，有的露出勉强的笑容，他那山猫样的络腮胡子和眼镜却好像在说“我是全旅当中顶腼腆、顶谦卑、顶没光彩的军官！”起初他刚走进饭厅以及后来坐下喝茶的时候，无论如何也不能够把注意力集中在一张脸或者一个东西上。那些脸衣服、盛着白兰地的玻璃长颈酒瓶、杯子里冒出来的热气、有着雕塑装饰的檐板，这一切合成一个总的强大印象在里亚博维奇心里引起不安，使他一心想把脑袋藏起来他像第一回当众表演的朗诵者一样，虽然瞧见他眼前的一切东西，可是对看到的東西却不十分理解，按照生理学家的说法，这种虽然看见然而不理解的情况叫作“意盲”。过了一会儿，里亚博维奇渐渐习惯新环境，眼睛亮了，就开始观察。他既是一个不善于交际的、腼腆的人，那么首先引起他注意的就是他自己最不行的，也就是他那些新相识的特别大胆的人。冯·拉别克，他的妻子，两位上了岁数的太太，一位穿淡紫色连衣裙的小姐，一个留着红色络腮胡子的青年（冯·拉别克的小儿子），仿佛事先排演过似的，很灵敏地夹在军官们当中坐好，立刻热烈地争论起来，弄得客人不得不插嘴。那位穿淡紫色衣服的小姐热烈地证明，做炮兵比做骑兵或者步兵轻松得多，冯·拉别克和上了岁数的太太们的看法则相反。紧跟着，大家七嘴八舌地谈起来。里亚博维奇瞧着淡紫色小姐十分激烈地争辩她所不熟悉的完全不感兴趣的事情，冷眼看出她脸上时而出现在不诚恳的笑容，时而把笑容又收敛起来。

冯·拉别克和他的家人巧妙地把军官们引进争论中来，同时一刻也不放松地盯紧他们的杯子和嘴，注意他们是不是都在喝茶，是不是茶里都放了糖，为什么有人不吃饼干或者不喝白兰地。里亚博维奇看得越久，听得越久，他就越喜欢这个不诚恳的可是受过很好训练的家庭。

钢琴响了，忧郁的华尔兹舞曲从大厅里飘出敞开的窗口，不知什么缘故大家都想起来窗外现在是春天，五月的黄昏，人人都觉出空中有玫瑰、紫丁香、白杨的嫩叶的香气。在音乐的影响下，里亚博维奇喝下的那点白兰地正在起作用。他斜眼看着窗口，微微地笑，开始注意女人们的动作。他觉得玫瑰、白杨、紫丁香的气息好像不是从花园里飘来，而是从女人的脸上和衣服上冒出来的。

冯·拉别克的儿子请一位瘦弱的姑娘跳舞，跟她跳了两圈。洛贝特科在镶木地板上滑过去，飞到淡紫色小姐面前，带着她在大厅里翩翩起舞。跳舞开始了……里亚博维奇站在门旁，夹在不跳舞的人们当中，旁观着他这一辈子从没跳过一回舞，他的胳膊也从没搂过一回上流女人的腰。一个男人当着大家的面搂着一个不认得的姑娘的腰，让那姑娘把手放在自己的肩头，里亚博维奇看了总是很喜欢，可是他无论如何也不能想象自己会成为那样的男人。有些时候他嫉妒同伴们胆大、灵巧，心里很难过。他一想到自己胆小、背有点伛偻，没有光彩，腰细长，络腮胡子像山猫，就深深地痛心。可是年深日久，他也就习惯了，现在他瞧着同伴们跳舞，大声说话，不再嫉妒，光是觉得感伤罢了。

等到卡德里尔舞开始，小冯·拉别克就走到没跳舞的人们跟前，请两位军官去打台球。军官们答应了，跟他一块儿走出客厅。里亚博维奇没事可做，想参加大家的活动，就慢腾腾地跟着他们走去。他们从大厅里出来，走进客厅，然后走过一个有着玻璃顶棚的窄过道，走进一个房间。他们一进去，就有三个带着睡意的听差从沙发上很快地跳起来。小冯·拉别克和军官们穿过一长串房间，末后走进一个不大的房间，那里有一张台球桌子。他们就开始打台球。

里亚博维奇除了打纸牌以外从没玩过别的东西，他站在台球桌旁边，冷淡地瞧着打台球的人。他们呢，解开上衣扣子，手里拿着球杆走来走去，说俏皮话，不断地嚷出一些叫人听不懂的词。打台球的人没注意他，只是偶尔有谁的胳膊肘碰着他，或者一不小心，球杆的一头戳着他，才扭转身来说一声：“对不起！”第一局还没打完，他就厌倦了，开始觉得他待在这儿是多余的，而且碍人家的事了……他想回到大厅里，就走出去了。

在回去的路上，他遇到一桩小小的奇事。他走到半路上，发现自己走错了地方。他清楚地记得在路上应当遇见三个带睡意的听差，可是他穿过五六个房间，那几个带着睡意的人好像钻到地底下去了。他发觉自己走错了，就扭转身退回一小段路，往右转弯，走进了他到台球房间去的时候没见过的一个昏暗的房间。他在那儿站了一会儿，犹豫不决地打开一扇他的眼睛偶然看见的门走进一个漆黑的房间。他看见前面，正对面有一道门缝从那道缝里射进一束明亮的光。门外面传来隐隐约约的忧郁的玛祖卡舞曲的声音。这儿也跟大厅里一样，窗子敞开，有白杨、紫丁香和玫瑰的气味……

里亚博维奇迟疑地站住……这当儿，他出乎意料地听见匆匆的脚步声、连衣裙的沙沙声、喘吁吁的女人低语声：“到底来了！”有两条柔软的、香喷喷的、准是女人的胳膊搂住他的脖子，温暖的脸颊贴到他的脸颊上来，同时发出了亲吻的声音。可是那个亲吻的人立刻轻轻地惊叫了一声，抽身躲开他，而且里亚博维奇觉得她是带着憎恶躲开的。他也差点儿叫起来，就向门边的亮光跑过去……

他回到大厅里，心怦怦地跳，手抖得厉害，他连忙把手藏到背后去。起初他羞得不得了，生怕满大厅的人知道他刚刚被一个女人搂抱过、吻过。他畏畏缩缩，不安地往四下里看，可是等到他相信大厅里的人们跟先前一样平静地跳舞、闲谈，他就完全让一种生平从没经历过的新感觉抓住了。他起了一种古怪的变化……他的脖子刚才给柔软芳香的胳膊搂过，觉得好像抹了一层油似的。他左脸上靠近唇髭、经那个素不相识的人吻过的地方，有一种舒服的、凉酥酥的感觉，仿佛擦了一点薄荷水似的。他越是擦那地方，凉酥酥的感觉就越是厉害。他周身上下，从头到脚充满一种古怪的新感觉，那感觉越来越强烈……他情不自禁地想跳舞、谈话、跑进花园、大声地笑……他完全忘了他的背有点伛偻，他没有光彩，他有山猫样的络腮胡子，而且“貌不惊人”（这是有一回他偶然听到几个女人在谈到他的相貌时所用的形容词）。正巧冯·拉别克的妻子走过他面前，他就对她亲切而欢畅地笑一笑笑得她站住了，探问地瞧着他。

“我非常喜欢您这所房子！……”他说，正了一下眼镜。

将军的妻子微笑着，说这房子原是她父亲的。后来她问起他的父母是否还在世，他在军队里待得是不是很久，为什么他这么瘦……她的问题得到答复后，她便往前走。他跟她谈过话以后，他的笑容比先前越发亲切他觉得他的四周尽是些好人……

进晚餐的时候，里亚博维奇漫不经心地吃完给他端来的所有菜，自管喝酒，什么话也没听进去，极力要弄明白他方才遇到的究竟是怎么回事。这件奇事具有神秘的、浪漫的性质，可是要解释却也不难。一定是有个姑娘或者太太跟别人约定在那个黑房间里相会。她等

了很久，又烦躁又兴奋，竟把里亚博维奇当作她的情人了尤其因为里亚博维奇走过那个黑房间的时候迟迟疑疑地站住，仿佛也在等什么人似的，那么这就更近情理了……里亚博维奇就照这样解释他何以会受到那样的一吻。

“不过她是谁呢？”他瞧了瞧四周女人的脸想道，“她一定年轻，因为老太太是不会去幽会的。而且她是个受过教育的女人，这只要凭她衣服的沙沙声、她的香气、她的声调，就可以揣摩出来……”

他的目光停在淡紫色小姐的身上，他很喜欢她。她有美丽的肩膀和胳膊、聪明的脸、好听的声音。里亚博维奇瞧着她，希望那个不相识的女人就是她，而不是别人……可是她笑起来不怎么真诚，而且皱起她的长鼻子，这就使他觉得她显老了。然后他掉过眼睛去瞧那个穿黑色连衣裙的金发女郎。她年轻些，朴素些，真诚些，两鬓秀气，端起酒杯喝酒的样子很潇洒。现在里亚博维奇希望那个女人是她了。可是不久他又觉得她的脸平平常常，就掉过眼睛去瞧他身旁的那个女人……

“这是很难猜的，”他暗想，沉思着，“如若只要淡紫色小姐的肩膀和胳膊，再配上金发女郎的两鬓和洛贝特科左边坐着的那位姑娘的眼睛，那么……”

他暗自把这些东西搭配起来，就此凑成了吻过他的那个姑娘的模样。他希望她有那样的模样，可是在饭桌上又找不到。

晚餐以后，军官们酒足饭饱，精神抖擞，开始告辞和道谢。冯·拉别克和他的妻子又开始道歉，说是可惜不能留他们过夜。

“诸位先生，跟你们见面很高兴，很高兴！”将军说，这一回倒是诚恳的（大概因为人们在送走客人的时候总比在迎接客人的时候诚恳得多，也和蔼得多），“很高兴！希望你们回来路过的时候再光临！别客气！你们怎样走？你们要走上面的路吗？不，穿过花园走吧，下面那条路要近一点。”

军官们走出去，到了花园里。从充满亮光和喧闹声的地方走出来，花园里显得十分黑暗而宁静。他们沉默地一路走到花园门口。他们都有点醉意，兴致很好，心满意足，可是黑暗和静寂使他们沉思了一会儿。大概他们每个人都有着一种跟里亚博维奇相同的感触：将来是不是有一天他们也会像冯·拉别克一样有一所大房子一个家庭、一个花园，即使本心并不诚恳，也能欢迎人们来，请他们吃得酒醉饭饱，使他们心满意足呢？

他们一走出花园门外，就开始争着讲话，无缘无故地大笑。他们现在顺小路走着，那条小路通到下面河边然后沿着河岸向前伸展，绕过岸上的矮树丛、沟渠、枝条垂在水面上的柳树。河岸和小路都看不

大清，对岸完全沉没在一片漆黑中。黑色的水面上这儿那儿映着星星它们颤抖着，破碎了，只凭这一点才能推断河水流得很急空中没有一丝风。河对岸有些带着睡意的麻鹬在悲凉地鸣叫，在这边岸上一个矮树丛里有一只夜莺一点也不理会这群军官，仍然在放声歌唱。军官们在矮树丛四周站了一会儿，拿手指头碰一碰它，可是夜莺仍旧唱下去。

“这家伙可真了不得！”他们赞许地叫道，“我们站在它旁边，它却一点也不在乎！好一个坏蛋！”

在道路的尽头，小路爬上坡去，在教堂的围墙附近跟大路会合了。军官们爬上坡，累了，就在这儿坐下，点上纸烟。河对面现出一块暗红色的光亮。他们反正没事可做，就花了不少工夫推断那是野火呢，还是窗子里的灯亮，还是别的什么东西……里亚博维奇也瞧那亮光，他觉得那一块光在向他微笑，□眼，仿佛它知道那一吻似的。

里亚博维奇回到驻营地，赶快脱掉衣服，上了床。洛贝特科和美尔兹里亚科夫中尉（一个和气而沉静的人，在他那伙人中被看作很有学问的军官，他一有空就老是看《欧洲通报》，这份杂志他随便到哪儿去都随身带着）跟里亚博维奇住在同一所农民的小木房里。洛贝特科脱了衣服，带着还没玩畅的神情在房间里走来走去，走了很久，随后打发勤务兵去买啤酒。美尔兹里亚科夫上了床，在枕头旁边放一支蜡烛，专心看那份《欧洲通报》。

“她是谁呢？”里亚博维奇瞧着被烟熏黑的天花板暗想。

他的脖子仍旧好像涂了油似的，嘴角旁边也仍旧带点凉意，仿佛擦了薄荷水一样。淡紫色小姐的肩膀和胳膊穿黑衣服的金发女郎的两鬓和诚恳的眼睛、柳腰、衣服胸针，在他的想象中闪动着。他极力注意这些形象，可是它们跳动着，逐渐变得模糊起来，摇曳不定。等到这些影子在每个人一闭上眼睛就会看见的宽阔的黑色背景上完全消失，他就开始听到匆忙的脚步声、衣裾的沙沙声亲吻的响声，一种没来由的、强烈的欢乐就涌上他的心头……他正在尽情享受这种欢乐，却听见勤务兵回来报告，说是没有啤酒。洛贝特科气得要命，又开始走来走去

“嘿，是不是蠢货？”他不断地说，先是在里亚博维奇面前站住，后来又在美尔兹里亚科夫面前站住，“连啤酒都买不着，真是个十足的蠢货，笨蛋！对不对？嘿恐怕是个坏蛋吧？”

“在这一带当然买不到啤酒。”美尔兹里亚科夫说眼睛却没离开《欧洲通报》。

“哦？您是这样看的吗？”洛贝特科坚持自己的意见“主啊，我的上帝，哪怕你把我送到月亮上去，我也会马上给您找着啤酒和女人！”

好，我马上就去找来……要是我找不着，您骂我是混蛋好了！”

他用很久的工夫穿上衣服，蹬上大皮靴，然后默默地抽完烟，走出去了。

“拉别克，格拉别克，拉别克，”他嘴里念着，却在前堂里站住了，“我一个人不高兴去，真该死！您肯出去溜达吗？啊？”

他没听见答话，就走回来，慢腾腾地脱掉衣服，上了床。美尔兹里亚科夫叹口气，收起《欧洲通报》，吹熄蜡烛。

“哼！……”洛贝特科嘟哝着，在黑暗里点上一支烟。

里亚博维奇拉起被子来蒙上头，蜷起身子，极力想把幻想中那些飘浮不定的影子拼凑起来，合成一个完整的人，可是任凭怎么样也拼凑不成。他不久就睡着了，他的最后一个思想是：不知一个什么人，对他温存了一下，使他喜悦，一件不平常的、荒唐的，可是非常美好快乐的事来到了他的生活里。哪怕在睡乡里，这个思想也没离开过他。

等到他醒来，他脖子上涂油的感觉和唇边薄荷的凉意都没有了，可是欢乐的波浪还是跟昨天一样在他的心中起伏。他痴迷地瞧着给初升的阳光镀上一层金的窗框听着街上行人走动的声音。贴近窗子，有人在大声讲话里亚博维奇的连长列别杰兹基刚刚赶到旅里来，由于不习惯低声讲话，正在大声地跟他的司务长讲话。

“还有什么事？”连长嚷道。

“昨天他们换马掌的时候，官长，他们钉伤了‘鸽子的蹄子。医士给涂上黏土和醋。现在他们用缰绳牵着它在边上走。还有，官长，昨天工匠阿尔捷米耶夫喝醉了中尉下命令把他拴在一个后备炮架的前车上。”

司务长还报告说，卡尔波夫忘了带来喇叭上用的新绳和支帐篷用的木桩，还提到各位军官昨天傍晚到冯·拉别克将军家里去做客。话正谈到半中腰，窗口出现了列别杰兹基的生着红头发的脑袋。他眯着近视的眼睛瞧着军官们带着睡意的脸，跟他们打招呼。

“没什么事吧？”他问。

“那匹备了鞍子的辕马戴上新套具，把脖子磨肿了。洛贝特科打着呵欠回答道。

连长叹口气，沉吟一下，大声说：

“我还要到阿列克山德拉·叶甫格拉芙芙娜那儿去一趟。我得去看看她。好，再见吧。到傍晚我会追上你们的。”

过了一刻钟，炮兵旅动身上路了。这个旅沿着大道走，经过地主粮仓的时候，里亚博维奇瞧了瞧右边的房子。所有的窗口都拉下着百叶窗。房子里的人分明都在睡觉。昨天吻过里亚博维奇的那个女人也在睡觉。他极力想象她睡熟的样子。卧室的敞开的窗子，伸进窗口的绿树枝，早晨的新鲜空气，白杨、紫丁香、玫瑰的幽香，一张床，一把椅子，昨天沙沙响、现在放在椅子上的连衣裙，小小的拖鞋，桌上的小表，所有这些，他暗自描摹着，清楚而逼真，可是偏偏那要紧的、关键的东西，她的脸庞和梦中甜蜜的微笑，却从他的幻想里滑出去，就跟水银从手指缝中间漏掉了一样。他骑着马走出半俄里远，回过头来看：黄色的教堂、房子、河、花园，都沉浸在阳光里；那条河很美，两岸绿油油的，水中映着蓝天，河面上这儿那儿闪着银色的阳光。里亚博维奇向梅斯捷奇金村最后看了一眼，心里觉得很难过，好像跟一个很接近、很亲密的东西拆开了似的。

极可爱的牲口，驴子玛加尔，那是一个连长从土耳其带来的，它耷拉着耳朵挺长的脑袋，沉思着迈着步子。

里亚博维奇冷淡地瞧瞧前面和后面，瞧瞧人的后脑勺儿和脸。换了别的时候，他大概已经迷迷糊糊，要睡着了，可是现在他却完全沉浸在愉快的新体验到的思绪中了。起初在炮兵旅刚刚启程的时候，他想说服自己：那件亲吻的事，如果有趣味，也只因为那是一个小小的、神秘的奇遇罢了，其实那是没什么意思的，把这件事看得认真，至少也是愚蠢的。可是不久他就顾不得这些道理，想入非非了……他一会儿想着自己在冯·拉别克的客厅里，挨着一个姑娘，长得挺像淡紫色小姐和穿黑衣服的金发女郎；一会儿闭上眼睛，看见自己跟另一个完全不认得的姑娘待在一起，那人的脸相很模糊。他暗自跟她谈话，跟她温存，低下头去凑近她的肩头。他想象战争和离别，然后重逢，跟妻子儿女一块儿吃晚饭……

“煞住车！”每回他们下山，这个命令就响起来。

他也嚷着：“煞住车！”可是又生怕这一声喊搅乱他的幻梦，把他带回现实里来……

他们走过一个地主的庄园，里亚博维奇就隔着篱墙向花园里望。他的眼睛遇到一条很长的林荫路，像尺那么直，铺着黄沙土，夹道是新长出来的小桦树……他带着沉浸在幻想里的人的那份热情暗自想着女人的小小的脚在黄沙土上走着，于是突然间，在他的幻想中清清楚楚地出现了吻过他的那个姑娘的模样，正是昨天吃晚饭时候他描摹的那个样子。这个模样就此留在他的脑子里再也不离开他了。

中午，后面靠近那串货车的地方有人嚷道：

“立正！向左看！军官先生们！”

旅长是一位将军，坐着一辆由一对白马拉着的马车走过来了。他在第二连附近停住，嚷了一些谁也听不懂的话。好几个军官，里亚博维奇也在内，策动马，跑到他面前去。

“啊？怎么样？什么？”将军问，□着他的红眼睛，“有病号吗？”

将军是个瘦小的男子，听到回答，就动着嘴，好像在咀嚼什么。他沉吟一下，对一个军官说：

“你们第三尊炮的炮车辕马的骑手摘掉了护膝，把它挂在炮的前车上了，那混蛋。您得惩罚他。”

他抬起眼睛看看里亚博维奇，接着说：

“我觉得你们那根车带太长了……”

将军又说了几句别的乏味的話，瞧着洛贝特科，微微地笑了。

“今天您看起来很忧愁，洛贝特科中尉，”他说，“您在想念洛普霍娃吧？对不对？诸位先生，他在想念洛普霍娃！”

洛普霍娃是个很胖很高的女人，年纪早已过四十了。将军自己喜欢身材高大的女人，年纪大小倒不论，因此猜想他手下的军官们也有同样的爱好。军官们恭敬地陪着笑脸。将军觉得自己说了句很逗笑很尖刻的话，心里痛快，就扬声大笑，碰了碰他的车夫的后背，行了个军礼马车往前驶走了……

“我现在所梦想的一切，我现在觉得不能实现的、人们少有的一切，其实是很平常的，”里亚博维奇瞧着将军车子后面的滚滚尘土，暗自想着，“这种事平常得很，人人都经历过……比方说，那位将军当初就谈过恋爱，现在结了婚，有了子女。瓦赫捷尔大尉，虽然后脑勺儿很红很丑，没有腰身，可也结了婚，有人爱……萨尔玛诺夫呢，很粗野，简直跟鞑靼人一样，可是他也谈过恋爱最后结了婚……我跟大家一样，我早晚也会经历大家经历过的事……”

他想到自己是个平常的人，他的生活也平平常常，不由得很高兴，而且这给了他勇气。他由着性儿大胆描摹她和他自己的幸福，什么东西也不能束缚他的幻想了……

傍晚炮兵旅到达了驻扎地，军官们在帐篷里安歇里亚博维奇、美尔兹里亚科夫、洛贝特科围着一口箱子坐着吃晚饭。美尔兹里亚科夫不慌不忙地吃着，他一面从容地咀嚼，一面看一本摆在他膝头上的《欧洲通报》洛贝特科讲个没完，不断地往自己的杯子里斟啤酒。里亚博维奇做了一天的梦，脑筋都乱了，只顾喝酒，什么话也没说。喝过三杯酒，他有点醉了，浑身觉着软绵绵的，就起了一种熬不住的欲望，想把他的新感觉讲给他的同事们听。

“在冯·拉别克家里，我遇到一件怪事……”他开口说，极力在自己的声调里加进满不在乎的、讥诮的口吻，“你们知道，我走进了台球房……”

他开始详细地述说那件亲吻的事，过了一会儿就沉默了……一会儿工夫他已经把前后情形都讲完了，这件事只要那么短短的工夫就讲完，他不由得大吃一惊。他本来以为会把这个亲吻的故事一直讲到第二天早晨呢。洛贝特科是个爱说谎的人，因此什么人的话也不相信。他听里亚博维奇讲完，怀疑地瞧着他，冷冷地一笑。美尔兹里亚科夫动了动眉毛，眼睛没离开《欧洲通报》，说：

“上帝才知道这是怎么回事！……这女人一下子就搂住一个男人的脖子，也没叫一声他的名字……她一定是个心理变态的女人。”

“对了，一定是个心理变态的女人……”里亚博维奇同意。

“有一次我也遇见过这一类的事……”洛贝特科说，装出惊骇的眼神，“去年我上科甫诺去……我买了一张二等客车的票……火车上挤得很，没法儿睡觉。我塞给乘务员半个卢布……他就拿着我的行李，领我到一个人车室去……我躺下来，盖上毯子……你们知道，那儿挺黑。忽然我觉得有人碰了碰我的肩膀，朝我的脸上吹气我动一动手，却碰到了不知什么人的胳膊肘。我睁开眼你们猜怎么着，原来是一个女人！眼睛黑黑的，嘴唇红得好似一条新鲜的鲑鱼，鼻孔热情地呼气，胸脯活像一个软靠枕……”

“对不起，”美尔兹里亚科夫平静地插嘴，“关于胸脯的话，我倒能懂，可是既然那儿挺黑，你怎么看得清嘴唇呢？”

洛贝特科极力圆他的谎，嘲笑美尔兹里亚科夫缺乏想象力。这惹得里亚博维奇讨厌。他离开那口箱子，上了床，赌咒再也不向别人谈起这件事了。

露营生活开始了……日子一天天流过去，这一天跟那一天简直差不多。在那些日子，里亚博维奇的感情思想、举动都像是在谈恋爱。每天早晨他的勤务兵给他送水来洗脸，他用冷水冲头的时候，总想起他的生活里有了一件美好而温暖的事。

到傍晚，他的同事们一谈到爱情和女人，他就走近一点听着，脸上现出一种表情，仿佛兵士在听人述说他参加过的一个战役似的。有些天的傍晚，带着几分醉意的尉官们由“猎狗”洛贝特科领头到“城郊”去冶游，每逢里亚博维奇参加这类游乐的时候，他总是很难过，觉得深深的惭愧，暗自求“她”原谅……遇到空闲的当儿，或者失眠的夜晚，他回忆自己的童年、父亲、母亲，总之回想亲人的时候，他一定也会想起梅斯捷奇金村、那头怪马、冯·拉别克、他那长得像厄热尼皇后的妻子、那黑房间、门缝里漏进来的那一线亮光……

八月三十一日，他从露营地回去，然而不是跟整个炮兵旅，而是只跟其中的两个连一块儿走。他一路上梦想着，激动着，好像在回故乡似的。他热烈地盼望着再看见那匹怪马、那个教堂、冯·拉别克那个不诚恳的家庭、那黑房间。常常欺骗情人的那种“内心的声音”，不知什么缘故，向他悄悄说，他一定会看见她……他给种种疑问折磨着：他会怎样跟她见面？他跟她谈什么好呢？她忘了那回的亲吻没有？他想，就算事情真糟到这种地步，他竟不能再见到她，那么光是重走一遍那个黑房间，回想一下，在他也不失为一种乐趣……

将近傍晚，远远的地平线上出现了那熟悉的教堂和白色的谷仓。里亚博维奇的心怦怦地跳起来……他没听见跟他并排骑着马的军官对他说了些什么，他把一切都丢在脑后，眼巴巴地瞧着在远处发亮的那条河，瞧着那所房子的房顶，瞧着鸽子窝，在夕阳的余晖中鸽子正在

那上面飞来飞去。

他们走到教堂那儿，听说设营官指定宿营地的时候他时时刻刻巴望有一个骑马的人会从教堂的围墙后面走出来，请军官们去喝茶，可是……设营官讲完话，军官们下马，溜达到村里去了，那个骑马的人并没有来……

“冯·拉别克马上会从农民那儿听说我们来了，然后派人来请我们。”里亚博维奇想，这时候他走进农舍，不明白为什么一个同事点亮了一支蜡烛，为什么勤务兵忙着烧茶炊……

他心神不定。他躺下去，随后又起来，瞧着窗外看那骑马的人来了没有。可是骑马的人没来。他就又躺下去，可是过了半个钟头他又起来，压不住心里的不安就走到街上，向教堂走去。靠近教堂围墙的广场上又黑又荒凉……在下坡路那儿有三个兵士默默地排成一行站在那儿。他们一看见里亚博维奇，就挺起腰板，行军礼他回礼，开始顺着那条熟悉的小路走下去。

河对面，整个天空一片紫红色：月亮升上来了。有两个农妇大声说话，在菜园里摘白菜叶子。菜园后面有些小木房，颜色发黑……这边岸上的一切跟五月间一样：小路、矮树丛、挂在河面上的垂柳……不过那只勇敢的夜莺的声音却没有了，白杨和嫩草的香气也没有了。

里亚博维奇走到花园，往门里瞧，花园里黑暗而安静……他只看见近边桦树的白树干和一小段林荫路，别的东西全都化成漆黑的一团。里亚博维奇聚精会神地瞧着，听着，可是站了一刻钟工夫，既没听见一点声音，也没看见一点亮光，他就慢慢地往回走……

他走下坡，到了河边。将军的浴棚和挂在小桥栏杆上的浴巾，在他前面现出一片白色……他走到小桥上，站了一会儿，完全不必要地摸了摸浴巾，浴巾又粗又凉。他低下头看水……河水流得很快，在浴棚的木桩旁边发出勉强能听见的潺潺声。靠近左岸的河面上映着红月亮。小小的涟漪滚过月亮的倒影，把它拉长，扯碎，好像要把它带走似的……

“多么愚蠢，多么愚蠢啊！”里亚博维奇瞧着奔流的水，想着，“这是多么不近情理啊！”

现在他什么也不再盼望了，他这才清清楚楚地了解了那件亲吻的事、他的焦躁、他的模糊的希望和失望他想到他没有看见将军的使者，想到他永远也不会见到那个原该吻别人却错吻了他的姑娘，不再觉得奇怪了刚好相反，要是他见到了她，那倒奇怪了……

河水奔流着，谁也不知道它流到哪儿去，为什么流五月间它也像这样流，五月间它从小河流进大河，从大河流进海洋，然后化成蒸

汽，变成雨水，也许如今在里亚博维奇面前流过去的仍旧是原先的那点水吧……这是为什么？为什么呢？

里亚博维奇觉得整个世界，整个生活，都好像是一个不能理解的、没有目的的玩笑……他从水面上移开眼睛，瞧着天空，又想起命运怎样化为一个不相识的女人对他偶然温存了一下，想起他的夏天的迷梦和幻象，他这才觉得他的生活异常空洞，贫乏，没有光彩……

他回到他住的农舍里，没有碰见一个同事。勤务兵报告说，他们都到“冯特利亚勃金将军”家里去了，因为将军派了一个骑马的使者来邀请他们……一刹那间里亚博维奇心里腾起一股欢乐，可是他立刻扑灭它，上了床他存心跟他的命运作对，仿佛要惹它气恼似的，偏不到将军家去。

[2] 厄热尼皇后（1826—1920），拿破仑三世的妻子。

大沃洛嘉和小沃洛嘉

“放开我，我要自己赶车！我要坐到车夫旁边去！”索菲雅·利沃芙娜大声说，“车夫，你等一等，我要跟你一块儿坐在赶车座位上。”

她在雪橇上站着，她的丈夫符拉季米尔·尼基狄奇和她小时候的朋友符拉季米尔·米海雷奇抓住她的胳膊，免得她跌倒。那辆三套马的雪橇跑得飞快。

“我早就说不该给她喝白兰地，”符拉季米尔·尼基狄奇烦恼地小声对他的旅伴说，“你这个人啊，真是的！”

上校凭经验知道，像他的妻子索菲雅·利沃芙娜这样的女人在这种带点醉意的、疯疯癫癫的快乐过去以后，紧跟着照例就是歇斯底里的大笑，接着是痛哭。他担心过一会儿他们回到家里以后，他没法儿睡觉，而不得不忙着张罗冷敷布和药水。

“嘘！”索菲雅·利沃芙娜叫道，“我要赶车。”

她心里真是快活和得意。自从举行婚礼那天起，最近两个月来，总有一个想法煎熬着她，她觉得她嫁给亚吉奇上校是因为贪图富贵，而且像人们常说的那样，因为赌气^[1]；可是今天在城郊那家饭店里，她终于相信自己热烈地爱着他。尽管他已经五十四岁，却身材匀称，头脑机敏，动作灵活，擅长说俏皮话，给茨冈姑娘们伴唱真的，如今老头倒比青年可爱一千倍，仿佛老人和青年掉换了位置似的。尽管上校比她父亲还要大两岁，而她只有二十三岁，然而凭良心说，论精力和朝气，他却比她不知超出多少，那么，年纪大又有什么关系呢？

“啊，我亲爱的！”她暗想，“了不起的人！”

在那家饭店里，她还相信，她那旧日的感情已经连影子也没有了。对她小时候的朋友符拉季米尔·米海雷奇或者简称沃洛嘉，她昨天还爱得发疯，爱得要命，现在却完全淡漠了。今天整个傍晚，他觉得他无精打采，带着睡意，不招人喜欢，一无可取。他在饭店里照例厚着脸皮避免付账，这一回他的这种态度使她暗暗生气，好容易才忍住没对他说：“要是您没钱，就该坐在家里才对。”每次都是由上校一个人付钱。

也许由于她眼前不断地闪过树木、电线杆和雪堆吧，总之，各式各样的思想涌上了她的心头。她想起饭店的账单是一百二十卢布，另

外还付给茨冈人一百卢布。明天，只要她乐意，她可以随便挥霍上千的卢布，可是两个月以前，在她结婚以前，她自己连三个卢布都没有，随便买一点小东西都得向她父亲要钱。生活的变化是多么大呀！

她的思路千头万绪，她想起当初她十岁的时候，她现在的丈夫亚吉奇上校追求过她的姑母，全家人都说他把她害苦了，事实上，她姑母走出房来吃饭的时候确实常常脸上带着泪痕，而且老是坐上马车不知到什么地方去。大家讲起她来总是说：这个可怜的人休想得到安宁了。那时候他很漂亮，大受女人们的垂青。因此全城的人都知道他，大家说他似乎每天都要分头到那些爱慕他的女人的家里去一趟，就跟医生去给病人看病一样。现在呢，尽管他头发白了，脸上起了皱纹，戴了眼镜，可是他那张瘦脸，特别是从侧面看过去，有时候还是显得挺漂亮的。

索菲雅·利沃芙娜的父亲是个军医官，从前跟亚吉奇在同一个部队里共过事。沃洛嘉的父亲也是军医官从前也跟亚吉奇上校和她父亲在同一个部队里共过事沃洛嘉虽然常常闹出很复杂、很烦心的恋爱纠纷，可是学业优良，他在大学毕业的时候，成绩极好，现在选定外国文学作为他的专业，据说正在写论文。他住在他那做军医的父亲的营房里，虽然三十岁了，自己却没有钱索菲雅·利沃芙娜小时候和他同住在一栋房子里，虽然两家各有自己的一套住宅。他常来找她一块儿游玩，一块儿学跳舞，一块儿学说法国话。可是等到他长大，变成一个身材匀称、十分漂亮的青年，她见着他就怕羞了后来暗自发疯似的爱上他，直到最近嫁给亚吉奇为止他也很受女人们的垂青，差不多从十四岁起，他就善于博得她们的欢心，那些为他而对丈夫不忠诚的太太，总是借口沃洛嘉年纪还小而为自己辩白。不久以前有人讲起他，说他做大学生的时候，住在大学附近的公寓房间里每次有人去找他，敲他的房门，就会听见门里面响起他的脚步声，然后是低声的道歉：“对不起，我不是一个人在屋里。”^[2] 亚吉奇很欣赏他，夸奖他前途无量，就像杰尔查文^[3] 对待普希金一样，显然，亚吉奇喜欢他。他们两人往往一连几个钟头沉默地打台球或者玩“辟开”^[4]。亚吉奇如果坐上三套马的马车到什么地方去，总是把沃洛嘉带在身边，沃洛嘉也只把他论文的秘密讲给亚吉奇一个人听。当初上校比较年轻的时候，他们常常处于情敌的地位，可是彼此从来也不争风吃醋。在他们常常同去的社交场所，大家总是管亚吉奇叫作大沃洛嘉，管他的朋友叫作小沃洛嘉。

在雪橇上，除了大沃洛嘉、小沃洛嘉和索菲雅·利沃芙娜以外，还有一个女人，就是玛尔迦莉达·亚历山德罗芙娜，大家称呼她莉达。她是亚吉奇太太的表姐，一个三十岁开外的姑娘，脸色十分苍白，眉毛漆黑，戴着夹鼻眼镜，不停地吸纸烟，哪怕在天气严寒的时候也一样。她的胸前和膝盖上老是有烟灰。她说话带着鼻音，拖长每个字的

字音，性情冷僻，随便喝多少蜜酒和白兰地总也不会醉，时常懒洋洋而又乏味地讲些含意暧昧的掌故。她在家里从早到晚翻看厚本的杂志，弄得杂志上撒满烟灰，或者吃冰冻的苹果。

“索尼雅 [5]，别发疯了，”她用唱歌般的声调说，“真的这简直是愚蠢。”

在临近城门的地方，那三套马的雪橇跑得慢了点房屋和行人不断闪过去。索菲雅·利沃芙娜平静下来偎紧她的丈夫，专心想心事。小沃洛嘉坐在她对面。这时候，除了轻松快活的思想以外，又添上些阴郁的思想她暗想，坐在对面的这个人知道她爱他，他当然相信她是因为赌气嫁给上校的说法。她一次也没有向他表白过爱情，而且不希望他知道，总是隐瞒着她自己的感情可是从他的脸色看得出他十分了解她，这就伤了她的自尊心。不过在她的处境里最使她痛心的是，自从举行婚礼以后，这个小沃洛嘉倒忽然开始对她献起殷勤来，而这是以前从来也没有过的。他往往一连几个钟头默默地陪她坐着，或者谈些闲话，此刻在雪橇里他没有跟她谈话却微微地踩着她的脚，握握她的手。显然，他一心巴望她出嫁。他分明看不起她，她就像那种不规矩的坏女人那样在他心里只能引起某种性质的兴趣。当那种得意的感情和对丈夫的爱情跟屈辱的感情和受伤的自尊心在她心里混在一起的时候，她就不禁生出逞强的心，只想坐到赶车座位上去，嚷一阵，吹一阵口哨……

在他们的马车经过一个女修道院的当儿，院里那口一千普特 [6] 重的大钟敲响了。莉达在胸前画十字。

“我们的奥丽雅在这个修道院里。”索菲雅·利沃芙娜说，也在胸前画十字，身子哆嗦了一下。

“为什么她进了修道院？”上校问道。

“因为赌气，”莉达生气地回答说，显然暗指索菲雅·利沃芙娜和亚吉奇的婚姻，“现在这种因为赌气挺时行。它正向全世界挑战。她原是个爱说爱笑、极爱卖弄风情的女人，只喜欢舞会和舞伴，可是忽然间，她走了！弄得人人都吃了一惊！”

“这不是实情，”小沃洛嘉放下皮大衣的衣领，露出他那张漂亮的脸，说，“这跟赌气不相干，不瞒您说，这完全是由于遭了灾祸。她哥哥德米特利被流放去服苦役，如今下落不明。她母亲伤心而死。”

他又竖起他的衣领。

“奥丽雅做得好，”他声音低沉地接着说，“她处在养女的地位，况且又跟索菲雅·利沃芙娜那样的好人住在一起，这一点也得考虑到才是！”

索菲雅·利沃芙娜从他的声调里听出轻蔑的口气就想说几句话顶撞他，可是她没说出口。她又生出那种逞强的心情。她站起来，带着哭腔叫道：

“我要去做晨祷！车夫，往回走！我要去见见奥丽雅！”

雪橇往回驶去。修道院的钟声低沉，索菲雅·利沃芙娜感到这声音使人联想到奥丽雅和她的生活。别的教堂也在敲钟。等到车夫勒住那三匹马，索菲雅·利沃芙娜就跳下雪橇，独自一个人，也不要人陪伴，很快地往大门走去。

“劳驾，快一点！”她丈夫对她叫道，“时候已经不早了！”

她走进乌黑的大门口，然后顺着一条从大门通到大教堂的林荫路走去，积雪在她脚底下吱吱地响，钟声就在她的上空轰鸣，仿佛使她的全身震颤。她来到教堂门口走下三层台阶，然后穿过一道门廊，两旁都是圣徒的画像弥漫着刺柏和神香的气味。随后又是一道门，有一个穿黑衣服的人给她开门，对她深深地鞠躬……教堂里，晨祷还没开始。有一个修女在圣像壁旁边走动，点燃高烛台上的蜡烛，另一个修女点燃枝形烛台上的蜡烛。这儿那儿，圆柱附近和侧祭坛附近，有些黑色人影站着不动。“大概，他们现在这样站着，一直不离开，要到明天早晨才走吧。”索菲雅·利沃芙娜暗想。她觉得这儿又黑又冷，枯燥乏味，比墓园里还要乏味。她带着烦闷的感觉瞧着那些一动不动、呆若木鸡的人影，忽然她的心收紧了。不知怎的，她认出一个身量不高、肩膀窄小、头戴黑色三角头巾的修女就是奥丽雅，其实奥丽雅进修道院的时候长得挺胖，身量也似乎高一些。索菲雅·利沃芙娜不知什么缘故，心里十分激动，犹豫不决地走到那个见习修女跟前，从她肩膀上望过去，看清了她的脸，果然她就是奥丽雅。

“奥丽雅！”她说，举起两只手轻轻一拍，兴奋得说不出话来，“奥丽雅！”

那个修女立刻认出她来，惊讶地扬起眉毛。她那张刚洗过的、干净而苍白的脸高兴得放光，就连她那三角头巾下露出的白色包头布也似乎高兴得放光了。

“瞧，主赐的奇迹。”她说，也举起她那两只干瘦的白手拍了一下。

索菲雅·利沃芙娜紧紧地抱住她，吻她，同时又担心别冒出酒气来。

“刚才我们路过这儿，想起了你。”她说，喘不过气来好像刚才很快地跑过一段路似的，“你的脸色多么苍白啊上帝！我……我见着你高兴极了。哦，怎么样？怎么样？你觉得寂寞吗？”

索菲雅·利沃芙娜往四下里看一眼别的修女们，接着低声说：

“我们那儿发生了好多变化。……你知道，我嫁给亚吉奇，符拉季米尔·尼基狄奇了。你一定记得他。……我跟他在一块儿，很幸福。”

“好，感谢上帝。你父亲身体好吗？”

“好。他常想起你。你，奥丽雅，到了假日务必来看我们。听见了吗？”

“我会去的，”奥丽雅说，微微一笑，“我明天就去。”

索菲雅·利沃芙娜自己也不知道为什么，哭起来了她不出声地哭了一会儿，然后擦干眼泪说：

“莉达没有见到你，会觉得十分惋惜。她跟我们一块儿出来的。沃洛嘉也在。他们就在大门口。要是你能跟他们见面，他们会多么高兴啊！我们去找他们吧，反正祈祷还没开始。”

“那我们就去吧。”奥丽雅同意说。

她在胸前画了三次十字，然后跟索菲雅·利沃芙娜一块儿往门口走去。

“那么，索涅琪卡，你说你挺幸福？”她走出大门的时候问道。

“很幸福。”

“好，感谢上帝。”

大沃洛嘉和小沃洛嘉看见这个修女走出来，就跳下雪橇，恭恭敬敬向她问好。他们看见她那苍白的脸和黑色的修女服显然都感动了。而且，她还记得他们，出来向他们问候，两人心里暗暗高兴。索菲雅·利沃芙娜怕她冻着，就拿过一条车毯披在她身上，同时用她皮大衣的一块前襟把她裹住。方才的眼泪使她的心头轻松了一些，灵魂变得纯净了。她暗自欣喜，这个热闹的、不安宁的、实际上不纯洁的夜晚竟然出人意料，这样纯洁而温柔地结束了。为了要奥丽雅在她身边多留一会儿，她提议说：

“让她坐上雪橇兜一阵吧！奥丽雅，你坐上去，我们一会儿就回来。”

两个男人预料修女会拒绝，圣徒是不坐三套马的雪橇兜风的。可是使他们吃惊的是，她居然同意，还坐上了雪橇。这辆三套马的雪橇往城门那边跑去，大家都默不作声，只是极力让她坐得舒服点，暖和点，每个人都暗想她从前是什么样，现在又是什么样。现在她的脸缺乏热情，很少表情，冷淡而苍白，而且透明，好像她的血管里流

着的是水而不是血。不过两三年前，她却长得丰满，脸颊绯红，常常谈论那些追求她的男人，为一丁点儿小事而扬声大笑。

在城门附近，雪橇掉转头往回跑，过了大约十分钟在修道院门前停住，奥丽雅走下雪橇。钟楼上，钟声响得更急了。

“求主保佑你们。”奥丽雅说，照修女那样深深一鞠躬

“那么你一定要来，奥丽雅。”

“我会去的，会去的。”

她很快地走了，不久就消失在乌黑的大门里。这以后雪橇往回跑，不知什么缘故，大家心里都感到十分愁闷人人都沉默不语。索菲雅·利沃芙娜觉得浑身发软，心情沮丧。她觉得刚才逼着修女坐上雪橇，夹在一伙喝过酒的人当中，乘着三套马的雪橇兜风，未免荒唐、鲁莽而且几乎可以说是不敬。她的酒意过去了，欺骗自己的愿望也就随之而消失，她已经清楚地感到她不爱她的丈夫，而且也不可能爱他，这件事简直是胡闹、愚蠢。她嫁给他是由于贪图富贵，因为他，按她中学里的女同学的说法，“阔绰得不得了”；又由于她生怕自己像莉达似的做老处女；还由于她厌烦她那做军医的父亲，而且想气气小沃洛嘉。要是她出嫁前能够预料到生活会这样沉重、可怕、讨厌，那么，就是拿全世界的财富都送给她，她也不会同意结婚。然而现在已经无法挽回。只好听天由命了。

他们回到家里。索菲雅·利沃芙娜在暖和而柔软的床上躺下，盖好被子，于是想起那道幽暗的门廊、那种神香的气味、那些圆柱旁边的人影。她想到在她睡着以后，那些人将会始终站着不动，就不由得害怕。晨祷的时间很长，然后是念经，然后是弥撒，祈祷……

“可是要知道，上帝是有的，一定是有的，而我总会死的，那就是说，我早晚得考虑灵魂，考虑永恒的生活，像奥丽雅一样。奥丽雅现在得救了，她给自己解决了所有的问题。……可是万一没有上帝呢？那她的一生就会白白糟蹋了。可是怎么会是白白糟蹋呢？为什么就是白白糟蹋呢？”

过了一会儿又有些思想萦回在她的脑际：

“上帝是有的，死亡一定会来临，应当想到灵魂才对。如果奥丽雅此刻知道她马上会死掉，她也不会害怕她准备好了。主要的是她已经为自己解决了人生的问题上帝是有的……是啊……可是除了进修道院以外，难道就没有别的出路了？要知道，进修道院无非是放弃生活毁掉生活罢了……”

索菲雅·利沃芙娜有点害怕。她把脑袋埋在枕头底下。

“不应当想这些，”她小声说，“不应当。”

亚吉奇在隔壁房间里的地毯上走来走去，他的马刺轻轻地响着，他在想心事。索菲雅·利沃芙娜猛地想到这个人只在一点上使她感到亲切和可爱：他的名字也叫符拉季米尔。她从床上坐起来，柔声叫道：

“沃洛嘉！”

“什么事？”她丈夫应声说。

“没什么。”

她又躺下去。钟声响起来，也许就是修道院里的钟声吧。她又不由得想起那道门廊和那些乌黑的人影。那些关于上帝和不可避免的死亡的想法在她头脑里盘旋她就用被子蒙住头，免得听见钟声。她暗想，在衰老和不可避免的死亡来临以前，还有很长很长一段生活要过，她得每天忍受这个她所不爱的、此刻走进寝室里来睡觉的男子的亲近，她得扑灭她心里对另一个年轻迷人而且在她看来不平凡的男子的无望的爱情。她看一眼丈夫，想对他道一声晚安，可是没有说出口，却忽然哭起来。她恼恨自己。

“得，音乐开始了！”亚吉奇说，把“乐”字说得很重。

她哭了很久，一直到早晨九点多钟才平静下来。她停了哭，全身不再发抖，可是头痛欲裂。亚吉奇匆匆地赶着去做晚弥撒，在隔壁房间里抱怨帮他穿衣服的勤务兵。他到卧室里来取东西，马刺发出轻微的响声，后来又进来一趟，这一回已经戴上带穗的肩章和勋章了。他两条腿由于害风湿病而有点瘸。不知什么缘故，索菲雅·利沃芙娜觉得他的模样和步法像一头猛兽。

她听见亚吉奇在打电话。

“费心，请您接瓦西里耶夫营房！”他说。过了一会儿他又说：“瓦西里耶夫营房吗？劳驾，请萨里莫维奇医生接电话……”又过了一会儿：“是哪一位啊？是你吗，沃洛嘉？很高兴。亲爱的，请你父亲马上到我们家里来一趟，因为我的妻子昨天回来以后，觉得很不舒服。你是说他不在家？哦……谢谢。太好啦……非常感谢……谢谢 [7]。”

亚吉奇第三次走进寝室来，弯下腰凑近他妻子，在她胸前画个十字，伸出手去让她吻（凡是爱他的女人都吻他的手，他已经养成习惯了），说他吃午饭的时候回来他说完就走了。

十一点多钟，使女通报说，符拉季米尔·米海雷奇来了。索菲雅·利沃芙娜又疲乏又头痛，身子摇摇晃晃很快地穿上她那件用毛皮镶边、又新又漂亮的淡紫色家常便服，赶紧把头发好歹梳理一下。她觉得她的灵魂里生出一种无法形容的温柔感情，高兴得周身发抖，生怕

他会走掉。她只巴望看他一眼。

小沃洛嘉这次来访，装束整齐，穿着燕尾服，打着白领结。索菲雅·利沃芙娜走进客厅里，他吻她的手为她身体不爽而真诚地表示难过。后来他们坐下来，他就称赞她那件便服。

“昨天跟奥丽雅见过面以后，我心里很乱，”她说，“起初我感到害怕，而现在却羡慕她了。她好比牢不可破的山岩，谁都休想搬得动它。可是，沃洛嘉，难道她就没有别的出路了？难道活生生地埋葬自己才算是解决了人生问题？要知道，那是死而不是生啊。”

一提起奥丽雅，小沃洛嘉的脸上就现出感动的神情。

“您，沃洛嘉，是个聪明人，”索菲雅·利沃芙娜说，“请您指点我，好让我也能像她那样行事。当然，我不是个信徒，不会进修道院，不过我还是可以做些性质相似的事。我生活得不轻松啊。”她沉默一阵以后，接着说，“您指点我吧。……告诉我一种可以使我信服的办法。您哪怕只说一句话也好。”

“一句话？好吧：砰的一声响！”

“沃洛嘉，为什么您看不起我？”她痛心地问道，“您跟我讲起话来，原谅我这样说，总是用一种纨绔子弟的特别口气，不像是给朋友，对正派的女人讲话。您很有成就，您喜欢科学，可是为什么您从来也不对我谈科学呢？为什么？我不配吗？”

小沃洛嘉烦恼地皱起眉头，说：

“为什么您忽然需要起科学来了？也许您还需要宪法吧？或者需要鲑鱼肉烧辣根？”

“哦，好吧，我是个一无可取、渺小庸俗、品行不端、浅薄愚蠢的女人。……我干过许许多多错事，我心理变态，道德败坏，我活该受到轻视。可是话得说回来，您，沃洛嘉年纪比我大十岁，我的丈夫比我大三十岁。我是在你们眼前长大的，要是你们乐意，你们就可以随意把我培养成任什么样的人，哪怕培养成天使也未尝办不到。可是你们……”她的嗓音颤抖了，“这么可怕地对待我。亚吉奇年纪老了却跟我结婚，您呢……”

“哎，得了，得了，”沃洛嘉说，坐近一点，吻她的双手，“让叔本华去谈哲学，去证明他要证明的事吧，我们呢，还是来吻这两只小手的好。”

“您看不起我，但愿您能知道我为这种态度多么难过才好！”她迟疑地说，事先就知道他不会相信她的话。“但愿您知道我多么希望变个样子，开始过一种新的生活！我一想到这里就十分兴奋，”她说，

果然兴奋得流下泪来“我想做一个诚实纯洁的好人，不作假，有生活目标。”

“行了，行了，行了，劳驾，别装腔作势了！我不喜欢这样！”沃洛嘉说，脸上现出不痛快的神情，“说真的这简直像是演戏了。我们还是做普通人的好。”

她怕他生气走掉，就赶紧辩白，而且做出勉强的笑容来向他讨好，又讲起奥丽雅，讲到她一心想解决她的人生问题，开始做一个堂堂正正的人。

“砰的……一声……响……”他低声唱起来，“砰的……一声……响……”

猛然间，他搂住她的腰。她自己也不知道自己在做什么，把两只手放在他的肩膀上，一时间痴迷地，仿佛在雾里似的，瞧着他那张聪明而讥诮的脸、额头、眼睛、漂亮的胡子……

“你自己早就知道我爱你，”她对他承认道，痛苦地红了脸，甚至感到她的嘴唇由于羞耻而抽搐起来，“我爱你。可是你为什么折磨我呢？”

她闭上眼睛，热烈地吻他的嘴唇，吻了大约有一分钟之久。虽然她知道这不正派，连他都会指责她，而且可能有使女走进来，不过她无论如何也没法儿结束这一吻。……

“啊，你在怎样折磨我呀！”她又说了一遍。

过了半个钟头，他得到他所需要的一切以后，在饭厅里坐下来吃东西。她跪在他面前，贪婪地瞧着他的脸。他就对她说，她活像一条小狗，等着人家丢给它一小块火腿吃。后来他叫她坐在他的膝头上，拿她当小娃娃似的摇来摇去，嘴里唱着：

“砰的……一声……响！”

临到他准备告辞，她就用热烈的口气问他：

“什么时候？今天吗？在什么地方？”

她伸出两只手凑到他的嘴边，好像要用手去抓住他的答话似的。

“今天恐怕不方便了，”他沉吟一下说，“明天也许行。”

他们就分手了。午饭前，索菲雅·利沃芙娜坐上雪橇到修道院里去找奥丽雅，可是到了那边，人家告诉她说奥丽雅外出为死人念赞美诗去了。她从修道院里出来又坐上雪橇去找她父亲，也没在他家里碰到他，然后她就换一辆雪橇，毫无目的地串大街，走小巷，照这样坐车一直游逛到傍晚。不知什么缘故，她老是想起她那脸上带着泪痕、坐

立不安的姑母。

到晚上，他们又坐上三套马的雪橇，到城郊饭店里去听茨冈人唱歌。当他们再次路过修道院的时候，索菲雅·利沃芙娜想起奥丽雅，不由得心惊肉跳，因为她思忖对她这个圈子里的姑娘和女人来说，除了坐着三套马的车子不停地逛荡，说谎，或者索性进修道院去扑灭生机以外，就没有别的出路了……

第二天索菲雅·利沃芙娜去赴幽会，然后又孤身一人坐在街头的雪橇上跑遍全城，心里想着她的姑母。

过了一个星期，小沃洛嘉把她丢开了。这以后生活又照原样进行，仍旧那么没趣味，无聊，有时候甚至痛苦。上校和小沃洛嘉打了很久的台球和玩“辟开”，莉达懒洋洋地、乏味地讲那些掌故，索菲雅·利沃芙娜老是坐着街头的雪橇游逛，或者要求她丈夫带她坐着三套马的雪橇去兜风。

她几乎每天都到修道院去，惹得奥丽雅厌烦了。她对奥丽雅诉说自己难以忍受的痛苦，哭哭啼啼，同时又感到她一走进修道院，就随身带进一种不洁、可怜、陈腐的东西。奥丽雅呢，老是用背书的腔调不动感情地对她说：这些都没关系，一切都会过去，上帝会宽恕她的。

醋栗

从大清早起，整个天空就已经布满了雨云。那天没风不热，可是闷。每逢晦暗的阴天，乌云挂在田野的上空久久不散，看样子会下雨而又不下的时候，往往就会有这样的天气。兽医伊万·伊万内奇和中学教师布尔金已经走累了，依他们看来田野好像没有尽头似的。前面远处隐约可以看见米罗诺西茨戈耶村的风车，右边有一排高岗，伸展出去，越过村子，消失在远方。他们俩都知道那是河岸，那儿有草场、绿油油的柳树、庄园，要是站在一个高岗的顶上望出去，就可以看见同样辽阔的田野和电报线，远处的一列火车，像是一条毛毛虫在爬，遇上晴朗的天气，从那儿甚至可以看得见城市。如今，在没风的天气，整个大自然显得那么温和而沉静。伊万·伊万内奇和布尔金对这片田野生出满腔热爱，两人都心想：这个地方多么辽阔、多么美丽啊。

“上一次我们在村长普罗科菲的堆房里，”布尔金说，“您打算讲一个故事来着。”

“对了，当时我原想讲一讲我弟弟的事。”

伊万·伊万内奇深深地叹一口气，点上烟斗，预备开口讲故事，可是正巧这时候下雨了。过了大约五分钟，雨下大了，空中乌云密布，很难预测这场雨什么时候才会停。伊万·伊万内奇和布尔金站住，考虑起来。他们的狗已经淋湿，站在那儿，用后腿夹着尾巴，深情地瞧着他们。

“我们得找个地方避一避雨才好，”布尔金说，“那就到阿廖欣家去吧。离这儿挺近。”

“那我们就去吧。”

他们就往斜下里拐过去，穿过已经收割过的田地，时而照直走，时而往右拐，直到走上一条大道为止。不久就出现了杨树，园子，然后是谷仓的红房顶；有一条河，河水闪闪发光，顿时眼界豁然开朗，前面是一大片水，有一个磨坊和一个白色的浴棚。这就是阿廖欣所住的索菲诺村。

磨坊在工作，声音盖过了雨声，水坝在颤抖。有几匹淋湿的马垂着头，站在大车旁边。人们披着麻袋走来走去。这儿潮湿、泥泞、憋闷，看上去河水冰凉，凶险伊万·伊万内奇和布尔金已经觉得周身潮湿、不清爽不舒服，脚沾着烂泥而变得挺重。他们穿过水坝，爬上坡

往地主的谷仓走去，一路上都没讲话，好像在互相生气似的。

有一个谷仓里筛谷机轰轰地响。仓门开着，滚滚的灰尘冒出来。阿廖欣本人就在门口站着，这是一个四十岁光景的男子，又高又胖，头发很长，与其说像地主不如说像教授或者画家。他穿一件很久没有洗过的白衬衫，拦腰系一根绳子，算是腰带，下身没穿外裤，只穿了一条长衬裤，靴子上也沾满了泥浆和麦秸。他的眼睛和鼻子扑满灰尘，变得乌黑。他认出了伊万·伊万内奇和布尔金，显然很高兴。

“请到屋里去吧，两位先生，”他含笑说道，“我马上就来，用不了一分钟。”

这是一所两层楼的大房子。阿廖欣住在楼下两个带拱顶的房间里，窗子很小，从前原是管家们居住的。屋里陈设简单，有黑面包、便宜的白酒和马具的气味。楼上的正房他难得去，只有客人来了他才去一趟。伊万·伊万内奇和布尔金在房子里遇到一个使女，是个年轻女人，长得那么美，他俩不由得同时站住，互相瞧了一眼。

“你们再也想不出我看见你们有多么高兴，两位先生，”阿廖欣说，跟着他们一块儿走进前厅，“这可是万万没想到！佩拉格娅，”他对那使女说，“给客人找几件衣服来换一换吧。顺便，我也要换一换。只是我先得去洗个澡，因为我大概打春天起就没洗过澡了。两位先生，你们愿意到浴棚里去吗？也好让他们趁这工夫把这儿收拾一下。”

美丽的佩拉格娅那么殷勤，看上去又那么温柔，她给他们送来了毛巾和肥皂，阿廖欣就陪着客人到浴棚里去了。

“是啊，我已经很久没有洗澡了，”他一面脱衣服一面说，“你们看，我的浴棚挺好，这还是我父亲盖起来的，可是不知怎的，我总是没工夫洗澡。”

他在台阶上坐下，给他的长头发和脖子擦满肥皂，他四周的水就变成棕色了。

“是啊，我看也是……”伊万·伊万内奇瞧着他的头，意味深长地说。

“我已经很久没洗过澡了……”阿廖欣难为情地重说一遍，又用肥皂洗起来，他四周的水就变成深蓝色，跟墨水一样了。

伊万·伊万内奇走到外面去，扑通一声跳进水里冒着雨抡开了胳膊游泳。他把身旁的水搅起波浪，睡莲就在水波上摇晃。他游到河中央水深处，扎一个猛子过一分钟又在另一个地方钻出来，再往远处游去，老是扎猛子，极力想够到河底。“哎呀，我的上帝啊！……他反复说着，游得痛快极了。“哎呀，我的上帝啊！……他游到磨坊那

儿，跟几个农民谈了一阵，再游回来，到了河中央就平躺在水面上，让他的脸淋着雨。布尔金和阿廖欣已经穿好衣服，准备走了，可是他还在游泳，扎猛子。

“哎呀，我的上帝啊！……”他说，“哎呀，求主怜恤我！……”

“您也游得够了！”布尔金对他喊道。

他们回到房子里。等到楼上的大客厅里点上灯，布尔金和伊万·伊万内奇都穿上了丝绸长袍和暖和的便鞋在圈椅上坐下。阿廖欣本人也洗好脸，梳好头，穿好新上衣，在客厅里走来走去，显然因为换了干衣服、轻便的鞋子，身上温暖洁净而感到满足。一直等到俊俏的佩拉格娅不出声地在地毯上走着，温柔地微笑，用盘子端来加了果酱的茶，一直到了这时候，伊万·伊万内奇才开口讲他的故事，而且仿佛不光是布尔金和阿廖欣在听，就连藏在金边镜框里、严厉而沉静地瞧着他们的那些老老少少的太太以及军官也在听似的。

“我们一共弟兄两个，”他开口了，“我伊万·伊万内奇和弟弟尼古拉·伊万内奇，他比我小两岁。我学技术做了兽医。尼古拉从十九岁起就已经在税务局里工作了。家父奇姆沙·吉马莱斯基本来是个世袭兵^[1]，不过后来当上了军官，给我们留下世袭的贵族身份和一份小小的田产。他死后，那份小田产抵了债，可是，不管怎样，我们的童年是在乡间自由自在地度过的。我们完全跟农民的孩子一样，一天到晚在田野上，在树林里度过，看守马匹，剥树皮，钓鱼，等等。……你们要知道，谁一生当中哪怕只钓到过一次鲈鱼，或者在秋天只见过一次候鸟南飞，看它们怎样在晴朗凉爽的日子里成群飞过村庄，那他就再也不想做城里人了，他一直到死都会向往那种自由的生活。我弟弟在税务局里老是惦记乡下。一年年过去了，他一直坐在他那老位子上，老是抄写那些文件老是想着一件事：怎样才能回到乡下去。他的这种苦恼渐渐成为明确的渴望，化成梦想，只求找个靠河或者近湖的地方给自己买下一个小小的庄园才好。”

“他是个温和善良的人，我喜欢他，可是这种把自己关在自家小庄园里过一辈子的愿望，我却素来不同情人们通常说：一个人只需要三俄尺的土地^[2]。可是要知道需要三俄尺土地的是死尸，而不是活人。现在有人说要是我们的知识分子向往土地，盼望有个庄园，那是好事。可是要知道，这些庄园跟三俄尺土地差不多。离开城市，离开斗争，离开生活的喧嚣，隐居起来，躲在自己的庄园里，这算不得生活，这是自私自利，偷懒，这也算是一种修道主义，可又是不见成绩的修道主义。人所需要的不是三俄尺土地，也不是一个庄园，而是整个地球，整个大自然，在那广阔的天地中人才能够尽情发挥他自由精神的所有品质和特点。

“我的弟弟尼古拉坐在他的办公室里，梦想将来怎样喝他自己家里的白菜汤，那种令人馋涎欲滴的香气弥漫在整个院子里。怎样在绿草地上吃饭，怎样在太阳底下睡觉，一连好几个钟头坐在大门外的凳子上眺望田野和树林。农艺书和日历上一切有关农艺方面的意见给了他乐趣，成了他心爱的精神食粮。他还喜欢看报，可是他光看报纸上的一种广告，说某地有若干俄亩 [3] 田地，连同草场、庄园、小溪、花园、磨坊和活水的池塘等一并出售。他脑子里就暗暗描出花园的幽径、花卉、水果、棕鸟巢、池塘里的鲫鱼，总之，你们知道，诸如此类的东西。这些想象的图画因他看到的广告不同而有所不同，可是不知什么缘故，其中每一个画面都一定有醋栗。他不能想象一个庄园，一个饶有诗意的安乐窝里会没有醋栗。

“乡村生活自有它舒服的地方，’他常说，‘人可以在露台上坐着，喝喝茶，自己养的小鸭子在池塘里泅水，空中弥漫着好闻的气味，而且……而且醋栗成熟了。’

“他常描画他田庄的草图，而每一回他的草图上都离不了这几样东西：（一）主人的正房，（二）仆人的下房，（三）菜园，（四）醋栗。他生活节俭，省吃省喝，上帝才知道他穿的是什么衣服，活像个叫花子；他不断地攒钱，存在银行里。他成了财迷。我一瞧见他就痛心，常给他点钱遇到过节也总要寄点钱给他，可是他连这点钱也收藏起来。一个人要是打定了主意，那你就拿他没办法了。

“若干年过去了，他调到另一个省里去了。他年纪已经过了四十岁，却仍旧看报上的广告，存钱。后来我听说他结婚了。他仍旧存心要买一个有醋栗的庄园，娶一个年老而难看的寡妇，对她一点感情也谈不上，只是因为她有几个钱罢了。跟她结婚以后，他生活仍旧吝啬老是弄得她吃不饱，同时，把她的钱存在银行里，却写上他自己的名字。早先她嫁给一个邮政局长，跟他一块儿过活的时候，吃惯馅饼，喝惯果子露酒，可是跟第二个丈夫一块儿过日子，却连黑面包也吃不饱。过着这样的生活，她开始憔悴，不出三年就把灵魂交给上帝了 [4] 当然，我的弟弟根本也没想过她的死要由他负责。金钱跟白酒一样，会把人变成怪物。从前我们城里有个垂危的商人。他临死叫人给他端来一碟蜂蜜，把他所有的钱钞和彩票就着蜜一股脑儿吃到肚子里，叫谁也得不着有一回我正在一个火车站检查畜群，正巧有个马贩子失足摔在火车头底下，压断了一条腿。我们把他抬到急诊室里，血哗哗地流，样子真是可怕，可是他老是求大家找回他的腿，老是放心不下：原来那条压断的腿所穿的靴子里有二十卢布，他生怕那点钱丢了。”

“您岔到别的事情上去了。”布尔金说。

“我的弟媳死后，”伊万·伊万内奇沉吟了半分钟，接着说，“我弟

弟就开始给他自己物色一份田产。当然，尽管物色了五年，到头来仍旧会出错，买下来的东西跟所想望的迥然不同。我弟弟尼古拉托中人买了一个抵押过的庄园，有一百一十二俄亩，有主人的正房，有仆人的下房，有花园，可是单单没有果树园，没有醋栗，没有池塘和小鸭子。河倒是有，可是河水的颜色跟咖啡一样，因为庄园的一边是造砖厂，另一边是烧兽骨的工场 [5] 。”

“可是我的尼古拉·伊万内奇倒也并不十分难过，他订购二十株醋栗树，栽好，照地主的排场过起来了。

“去年我去探望他。我心想我要去看看那儿的情况怎么样。我弟弟在来信上称它为‘楚木巴罗克洛夫菜园，又称希马莱斯科耶’。我是在下午到达那个‘又称希马莱斯科耶’的。天很热。到处都是沟渠、围墙、篱笆、栽成一行行的杉树，弄得人不知道怎样才能走到院子里去，应该把马拴在哪儿。我往正房走去，迎面遇见一条红毛的肥狗，活像一头猪。它本想叫一声，可又懒得叫。厨娘从厨房里走出来，是一个光脚的胖女人，看样子也像一头猪。她说主人吃过饭后正在休息。我走进去看我弟弟他在床上坐着，膝上盖着一条被子。他老了，胖了，皮肉发松，他的脸颊、鼻子、嘴唇，全都往前拱出去，眼看就要跟猪那样呼噜呼噜叫着钻进被子里去了。

“我们互相拥抱，流下了眼泪，一半因为高兴，一半也因为忧郁地想到，从前我们都年轻，现在两人却白发苍苍，快要入土了。他穿好衣服，领我出去看他的田庄。

“‘哦，您在这儿过得怎么样？’我问。

“‘哦，还不坏，感谢上帝，我过得挺好。’

“他不再是往日那个畏畏缩缩的、可怜的小职员，而是真正的地主老爷了。他已经在这儿住熟，习惯，觉得很有味道了。他吃得很多，常到澡棚去洗澡，长得胖起来已经跟村社和两个工厂打过官司，遇上农民不称呼他‘老爷’，就老大地不高兴。他还带着老爷气派郑重其事地关心他的灵魂的得救，就做起好事来，然而并不是简简单单地做，却是摆足了架子做的。然而那是怎样的好事啊！他用苏打和蓖麻子油给农民治各种病，到了他的命名日就在村子中央做一回谢恩祈祷，然后摆出半桶白酒来请农民喝，自以为事情就该这么办。啊，那可怖的半桶白酒！今天，这位胖地主拉着农民们到地方行政长官那儿去控告他们放出牲畜来践踏他的庄稼，明天遇上隆重的节日，却请那些农民喝半桶白酒。他们喝酒，嚷着：‘乌拉！’喝醉了的人就给他叩头。生活只要变得好一点，吃得饱，喝得足，闲着不做事，就会在俄罗斯人身上培养出顶骄傲的自大。尼古拉·伊万内奇当初在税务局里自己甚至不敢有自己的见解，现在说起话来却没有一句不是真理，而且

总是用大臣的口气：‘教育是必不可少的，然而对老百姓来说，还未免言之过早。’总的来说体罚是有害的，可是遇到某些情形，这却是有益的，不可缺少的。’

“‘我了解老百姓，我会善于对付他们，’他说，‘老百姓都喜欢我。我只要动一动手指头，老百姓就会把我要办的事统统给我办好。’

“请注意，这些话都是带着聪明而善良的笑容说出来的。他把‘我们这些贵族’我以贵族的身份看来’反反复复说了二十遍。他分明已经不记得我们的祖父是个庄稼汉、父亲是个兵了。就连我们的姓，奇姆沙·希马莱斯基，实际上十分古怪，可他现在也觉着响亮、高贵十分中意了。

“可是问题不在他，而在我自己了。我要跟你们讲一讲我在他那庄园上盘桓了短短几个钟头，我自己起了什么变化。傍晚，我们正在喝茶，厨娘端来满满一盘醋栗放在桌子上。这不是买来的，而是他自己家里种的，自从那些灌木栽下以后，这还是头一回收果子。尼古拉·伊万内奇笑起来，对那些醋栗默默地瞧了一会儿，眼泪汪汪，激动得说不出话来。然后他拿起一颗果子送进嘴里瞧着我，现出小孩子终于得到心爱的玩具那种得意的神情，说： “‘多么好吃啊！’

“他贪婪地吃着，不住地重复道：

“‘嘿，多么好吃啊！你尝一尝吧！’

“那些醋栗又硬又酸，可是正如普希金所说：‘我们喜爱使人高兴的谎话，胜过喜爱许许多多的真理。’^[6] 我看见了一个幸福的人，他心心念念的梦想显然已经实现他的生活目标已经达到，他所想望的东西已经到手，他对他的命运和他自己都满意了。不知什么缘故，往常我一想到人的幸福，就不免带一点哀伤的感觉，这一回亲眼看到幸福的人，我竟生出一种跟绝望相近的沉重感。夜里我心头特别沉重。他们在我弟弟卧室的隔壁房间里为我搭好一张床，我听见他没有睡着，老是爬下床来，走到那盘醋栗跟前，拿果子吃。我心想：实际上有多少满足而幸福的人啊！这是一种多么令人压抑的力量！你们来看一看这种生活吧：强者骄横而懒惰，弱者无知而且跟牲畜那样生活着，处处都是叫人难以忍受的贫穷、拥挤、退化、酗酒、伪善、撒谎……可是偏偏所有的屋子里也好，街上也好，却一味地心平气和，安安静静。一个城市的五万居民当中竟没有一个人叫喊一声，大声发泄一下他的愤慨。我们看见人们到市场上去买食物，白天吃饭，晚上睡觉，他们说废话，结婚，衰老，心平气和地送死人到墓园去。可是那些受苦受难的人，那些在幕后什么地方正在进行着的人生惨事，我们却没看见，也没听见。处处都安静而太平，提抗议的只有那些没声音的统

计表：若干人发了疯，若干桶白酒喝光了，若干儿童死于营养不良……这样的世道显然是必要的，幸福的人之所以会感到逍遥自在，显然只是因为那些不幸的人沉默地背着他们的重担，而缺了这种沉默想要幸福就办不到。这是普遍的麻木不仁。每一个幸福而满足的人的房门边都应当站一个人，拿一个小锤子经常敲着门提醒他：天下还有不幸的人，不管他自己怎样幸福，生活早晚会向他伸出魔爪，灾难会降临——疾病啦，贫穷啦，损失啦，到那时候谁也不会看见他，谁也不会听见他就跟现在他看不见别人，听不见别人一样。可是却没有拿小锤子的人，幸福的人无忧无虑地生活下去，日常的小烦恼微微地扰动他，就跟风吹动白杨一样，真是天下太平。”

“我一清早就离开了我弟弟的家，从此我在城里住着就感到不能忍受。城里的那种和平安静压得我不舒服。我不敢看人家的窗子，因为这时候再也没有比幸福的一家人团团围住桌子喝茶的光景更使我难受的了。我已经老了，不适宜做斗争了，我甚至不会憎恨人了。我只能满心地悲伤，生气，烦恼，一到夜里，我的脑子里种种思想纷至沓来，弄得我十分激动，睡不着觉……唉，要是我年轻点就好了！”

伊万·伊万内奇激动得从这个墙角走到那个墙角，反复地说：

“要是我年轻就好了！”

他忽然走到阿廖欣面前，先是握住他的一只手，后来又握住他的另一只手。

“帕维尔·康斯坦丁内奇！”他用恳求的声调说，“不要心平气和，不要容您自己昏睡！趁您还年轻力壮，血气方刚，要永不疲倦地做好

事情！幸福是没有的，也不应当有。如果生活有意义，有目标，那意义和目标就绝不是我们自己的幸福，而是比这更伟大更合理的东西做好事吧！”

所有这些话，伊万·伊万内奇都是带着可怜的、恳求的笑脸说出来的，仿佛他本人为自己请求一桩什么事似的。

然后这三个人在客厅里挑了三张圈椅各据一方坐下来，沉默了。伊万·伊万内奇的故事既没满足布尔金也没满足阿廖欣。金边镜框里的将军们和太太们在昏光中显得像是活人，低下眼睛来瞧他们，在这样的時候听那个可怜的、吃醋栗的文官的故事觉得乏味得很。不知什么缘故他们很想谈一谈或者听一听高雅的人和女人的事。他们所在的这个客厅里，样样东西，蒙着套子的枝形烛架啦，圈椅啦，脚底下的地毯啦，都在述说如今在镜框里低下眼睛瞧他们的那些人，从前就在这房间里走动过，坐过，喝过茶，现在俊俏的佩拉格娅正在这儿没一点声音地走来走去，这倒比一切故事都美妙得多呢。

阿廖欣困得要命，他一清早两点多钟就起床干农活儿，现在他的眼皮粘在一起了，可是他生怕客人等他走后也许会讲出什么有趣的故事，就流连着没走。他并没细想伊万·伊万内奇刚才所讲的是不是有道理、正确，反正他的客人没谈起麦粒，也没谈起干草，也没谈起煤焦油，所谈的都是跟他的生活没有什么直接关系的事，他不由得暗自高兴，盼望他们接着谈下去才好……

“不过，现在该睡了，”布尔金说，站起来，“请允许我跟你们道一声晚安吧。”

阿廖欣道了晚安，走下楼回到自己的住处去。客人们仍旧待在楼上。他俩被人领到一个大房间里过夜，房间里安着两张旧的雕花木床，墙角有一个象牙的耶稣受难像的十字架。那两张凉快的大床由美丽的佩拉格娅铺好了被褥，新洗过的床单冒出好闻的气味。

伊万·伊万内奇一声不响地脱掉衣服，躺下。

“主啊，饶恕我们这些罪人吧！”他说，拉过被子来蒙上头。

他的烟斗放在桌子上，冒出一股浓烈的烟草的焦气。布尔金很久睡不着觉，不住地纳闷儿，想不出这股难闻的气味是打哪儿来的。

雨点通宵抽打着窗子。

“Good God . . .””

The Kiss

On 20 May, at eight o'clock in the evening, all six batteries of a reserve artillery brigade, on their way back to headquarters, stopped for the night at the village of Mestechki. At the height of all the confusion – some officers were busy with the guns, while others had assembled in the main square by the churchyard fence to receive their billetings – someone in civilian dress rode up from behind the church on a strange horse: it was small and dun-coloured with a fine neck and short tail, and seemed to move sideways instead of straight ahead, making small dancing movements with its legs as if they were being whipped. When the rider came up to the officers he doffed his hat and said, 'Our squire, His Excellency, Lieutenant- General von Rabbeck, invites you for tea and would like you to come now . . .'

The horse performed a bow and a little dance, and retreated with the same sideways motion. The rider raised his hat again and quickly disappeared behind the church on his peculiar horse.

'To hell with it!' some of the officers grumbled as they rode off to their quarters. 'We want to sleep and up pops this von Rabbeck with his tea! We know what that means all right!'

Every officer in the six batteries vividly remembered the previous year when they were on manoeuvres with officers from a Cossack regiment and had received a similar invitation from a landowning count, who was a retired officer. This hospitable and genial count had plied them with food and drink, would not hear of them returning to their billets and made them stay the night. That was all very well, of course, and they could not have hoped for better. But the trouble was that this retired officer was overjoyed beyond measure at having young men as his guests and he regaled them with stories from his glorious past until dawn, led them on a tour of the house, showed them his valuable paintings, old engravings and rare guns, and read out signed letters from eminent personages; and all this time the tired and weary officers listened, looked, pined for bed, and continuously yawned in their sleeves.

When their host finally let them go, it was too late for bed.

Now, was this von Rabbeck one of the same breed? Whether he was or not, there was nothing they could do about it. The officers put clean uniforms on, smartened themselves up and went off en masse to look for the squire's house. On the square by the church they were told that they could either take the lower path leading down to the river behind the church, and then go along the bank to the garden, or they could ride direct from the church along the higher road which would bring them to the count's barns about a quarter of a mile from the village. The officers decided on the higher route.

'Who is this von Rabbeck?' they argued as they rode along. 'Is he the one who commanded a cavalry division at Plevna?'

'No, that wasn't von Rabbeck, just Rabbe, and without the "von".'

'It's marvellous weather, anyway!'

The road divided when they reached the first barn: one fork led straight on and disappeared in the darkness of the evening, while the other turned towards the squire's house on the right. The officers took the right fork and began to lower their voices . . . Stone barns with red tiled roofs stood on both sides of the road and they had the heavy, forbidding look of some provincial barracks. Ahead of them were the lighted windows of the manor- house.

'That's a good sign, gentlemen!' one of the officers said. 'Our setter's going on in front. That means he scents game!'

Lieutenant Lobytko, a tall, strongly built officer, who was riding ahead of the others, who had no moustache (although he was over twenty- five there wasn't a trace of hair on his face), and who was renowned in the brigade for his keen senses and ability to sniff a woman out from miles away, turned round and said, 'Yes, there must be women here, my instinct tells me.'

The officers were met at the front door by von Rabbeck himself – a fine- looking man of about sixty, wearing civilian clothes. He said how very pleased and happy he was to see the officers as he shook hands, but begged them most sincerely, in the name of God, to excuse him for not inviting them to stay the night, as two sisters with their children, his brothers and some neighbours had turned up, and he didn't have one spare room.

The general shook everyone's hand, apologized and smiled, but they could tell from his face that he wasn't nearly as pleased to have guests as last year's count and he had only asked them as it was the done thing. And, as they climbed the softly carpeted stairs and listened, the officers sensed that they had been invited only because it would have caused embarrassment if they had not been invited. At the sight of footmen dashing around lighting the lamps in the hall and upstairs, they felt they had introduced a note of uneasiness and anxiety into the house. And how could any host be pleased at having nineteen strange officers descend on a house where two sisters, children, brothers and neighbours had already arrived, most probably to celebrate some family anniversary. They were met in the ballroom upstairs by a tall, stately old lady with black eyebrows and a long face – the living image of Empress Eugénie. She gave them a majestic, welcoming smile and said how glad and happy she was to have them as guests and apologized for the fact that she and her husband weren't able to invite the officers to stay overnight on this occasion. Her beautiful, majestic smile, which momentarily disappeared every time she turned away from her guests, revealed that in her day she had seen many officers, that she had no time for them now, and that she had invited them and was apologizing only because her upbringing and social position demanded it.

The officers entered the large dining- room where about ten gentlemen and ladies, old and young, were sitting along one side of the table having tea. Behind their chairs, enveloped in a thin haze of cigar smoke, was a group of men with a rather lean, young, red-whiskered man in the middle, rolling his 'r's as he spoke out loud in English. Behind them, through a door, was a bright room with light blue furniture.

'Gentlemen, there's so many of you, it's impossible to introduce everyone !' the general was saying in a loud voice, trying to sound cheerful. 'So don't stand on ceremony, introduce yourselves!'

Some officers wore very serious, even solemn expressions; others forced a smile, and all of them felt awkward as they bowed rather indifferently and sat down to tea.

Staff- Captain Ryabovich, a short, stooping officer, with spectacles and lynx- like side whiskers, was more embarrassed than anyone else. While his fellow- officers were trying to look serious or force a smile, his face, lynx- like whiskers and spectacles seemed to be saying, 'I'm the shyest, most modest and most insignificant officer in the whole brigade!' When he first entered the dining-room and sat down to tea, he found it impossible to concentrate on any one face or object. All those faces, dresses, cut- glass decanters, steaming glasses, moulded cornices, merged into one composite sensation, making Ryabovich feel ill at ease, and he longed to bury his head somewhere. Like a lecturer at his first appearance in public, he could see everything in front of him well enough, but at the same time he could make little sense of it (physicians call this condition, when someone sees without understanding, 'psychic blindness'). But after a little while Ryabovich began to feel more at home, recovered his normal vision and began to take stock of his surroundings. Since he was a timid and unsociable person, he was struck above all by what he himself had never possessed – the extraordinary boldness of these unfamiliar people. Von Rabbeck, two elderly ladies, a young girl in a lilac dress, and the young man with red whiskers – Rabbeck's youngest son – had sat themselves very cunningly among the officers, as though it had all been rehearsed. Straight away they had launched into a heated argument, which the guests could not help joining. The girl in lilac very excitedly insisted that the artillery had a much easier time than either the cavalry or the infantry, while Rabbeck and the elderly ladies argued the contrary. A rapid conversational crossfire ensued. Ryabovich glanced at the lilac girl who was arguing so passionately about something that was so foreign to her, so utterly boring, and he could see artificial smiles flickering over her face.

Von Rabbeck and family skilfully drew the officers into the argument, at the same time watching their wine glasses with eagle eyes to check whether they were filled, that they had enough sugar, and one officer who wasn't eating biscuits or drinking any brandy worried them. The more Ryabovich looked and listened, the more he began to like this insincere but wonderfully disciplined family.

After tea the officers went into the ballroom. Lieutenant Lobytko's instinct had not failed him: the room was full of girls and young married women. Already this 'setter' lieutenant had positioned himself next to a young blonde in a black dress, bending over dashingly as though leaning on some invisible sabre, smiling and flirting with his shoulders. Most probably he was telling her some intriguing nonsense as the blonde glanced superciliously at his well-fed face and said, 'Really?'

If that 'setter' had had any brains, that cool 'Really?' should have told him that he would never be called 'to heel'.

The grand piano suddenly thundered out. The sounds of a sad waltz drifted through the wide-open windows and everyone remembered that outside it was spring, an evening in May, and they smelt the fragrance of the young leaves of the poplars, of roses and lilac. Ryabovich, feeling the effects of the brandy and the music, squinted at a window, smiled and watched the movements of the women. Now it seemed that the fragrance of the roses, the poplars and lilac wasn't coming from the garden but from the ladies' faces and dresses.

Rabbeck's son had invited a skinny girl to dance and waltzed twice round the room with her. Lobytko glided over the parquet floor as he flew up to the girl in lilac and whirled her round the room. They all began to dance . . . Ryabovich stood by the door with guests who were not dancing and watched. Not once in his life had he danced, not once had he put his arm round an attractive young woman's waist. He would usually be absolutely delighted when, with everyone looking on, a man took a young girl he hadn't met before by the waist and offered his shoulders for her to rest her hands on, but he could never imagine himself in that situation. There had been times when he envied his fellow-officers' daring and dashing ways and it made him very depressed. The realization that he was shy, round-shouldered, quite undistinguished, that he had a long waist, lynx-like side whiskers, hurt him deeply. But over the years this realization had become something of a habit and as he watched his friends dance or talk out loud he no longer envied them but was filled with sadness.

When the quadrille began, young von Rabbeck went over to the officers who were not dancing and invited two of them to a game of billiards. They accepted and left the great hall with him. As he had nothing else to do, and feeling he would like to take at least some part in what was going on, Ryabovich trudged off after them. First they went into the drawing-room, then down a narrow corridor with a glass ceiling, then into a room where three sleepy footmen leapt up from a sofa the moment they entered. Finally, after passing through a whole series of rooms, young Rabbeck and company reached a small billiard- room and the game began.

Ryabovich, who never played any games except cards, stood by the table and indifferently watched the players, cue in hand, walking up and down in their unbuttoned tunics, making puns and shouting things he could not understand. The players ignored him, only turning round to say, 'I beg your pardon', when one of them happened accidentally to nudge him with an elbow or prod him with a cue. Even before the first game was over, he was bored and began to feel he was not wanted, that he was in the way . . . He felt drawn back to the ballroom and walked away.

As he walked back he had a little adventure. Halfway, he realized he was lost – he knew very well he had to go by those three sleepy footmen, but already he had passed through five or six rooms and those footmen seemed to have vanished into thin air. He realized his mistake, retraced his steps a little and turned to the right, only to find himself in a small, dimly lit room he had not seen on the way to the billiard- room. He stood still for a minute or so, opened the first door he came to with determination and entered a completely dark room. Ahead of him he could see light coming through a crack in the door and beyond was the muffled sound of a sad mazurka. The windows here had been left open as they had in the ballroom and he could smell poplars, lilac and roses . . .

Ryabovich stopped, undecided what to do . . . Just then he was astonished to hear hurried footsteps, the rustle of a dress and a female voice whispering breathlessly, 'At last!' Two soft, sweet-smelling arms (undoubtedly a woman's) encircled his neck, a burning cheek pressed against his and at the same time there was the sound of a kiss. But immediately after the kiss the woman gave a faint cry and shrank backwards in disgust – that was how it seemed to Ryabovich.

He was on the point of crying out too and he rushed towards the bright chink in the door.

His heart pounded away when he was back in the hall and his hands trembled so obviously that he hastily hid them behind his back. At first he was tormented by shame and he feared everyone there knew he had just been embraced and kissed, and this made him hesitate and look around anxiously. But when he had convinced himself that everyone was dancing and gossiping just as peacefully as before, he gave himself up to a totally new kind of sensation, one he had never experienced before in all his life. Something strange was happening to him . . . his neck, which just a few moments ago had been embraced by sweet-smelling hands, seemed anointed with oil. And on his left cheek, just by his moustache, there was a faint, pleasant, cold, tingling sensation, the kind you get from peppermint drops and the more he rubbed the spot the stronger the tingling became. From head to heels he was overcome by a strange, new feeling which grew stronger every minute. He wanted to dance, speak to everyone, run out into the garden, laugh out loud. He completely forgot his stoop, his insignificant appearance, his lynx-like whiskers and 'vague appearance' (once he happened to hear some ladies saying this about him). When Rabbeck's wife went by he gave her such a broad, warm smile that she stopped and gave him a very searching look.

'I love this house so much!' he said, adjusting his spectacles.

The general's wife smiled and told him that the house still belonged to her father. Then she asked if his parents were still alive, how long he had been in the army, why he was so thin, and so on . . . When Ryabovich had replied, she moved on, leaving him smiling even more warmly and he began to think he was surrounded by the most wonderful people . . .

Mechanically, Ryabovich ate and drank everything he was offered at the dinner table, deaf to everything as he tried to find an explanation for what had just happened. It was a mysterious, romantic incident, but it wasn't difficult to explain. No doubt some girl or young married woman had a rendezvous with someone in that dark room, had waited for a long time, and then mistook Ryabovich for her hero in her nervous excitement. This was the most likely explanation, all the more so as Ryabovich had hesitated in the middle of the room, which made it look as though he were expecting someone . . .

'But who is she?' he thought as he surveyed the ladies' faces. 'She must be young, as old ladies don't have rendezvous. And intelligent – I could tell from the rustle of her dress, her smell, her voice.’

He stared at the girl in lilac and found her very attractive. She had beautiful shoulders and arms, a clever face and a fine voice. As he gazed at her, Ryabovich wanted her, no one else, to be that mysterious stranger . . . But she gave a rather artificial laugh and wrinkled her long nose, which made her look old. Then he turned to the blonde in black. She was younger, simpler and less affected, with charming temples and she sipped daintily from her wine glass. Now Ryabovich wanted her to be the stranger. But he soon discovered that she had a featureless face and he turned to her neighbour . . . ‘It’s hard to say,’ he wondered dreamily. ‘If I could just take the lilac girl’s shoulders and arms away, add the blonde’s temples, then take those eyes away from the girl on Lobytko’s left, then .’ He merged them all into one, so that he had an image of the girl who had kissed him, the image he desired so much, but which he just could not find among the guests around the table.

After dinner the officers, well- fed and slightly tipsy by now, began to make their farewells and expressed their thanks. Once again the hosts apologized for not having them stay the night.

‘Delighted, gentlemen, absolutely delighted,’ the general was saying and this time he meant it – probably because people are usually more sincere and better- humoured saying goodbye to guests than welcoming them.

‘Delighted! Glad to see you back any time, so don’t stand on ceremony. Which way are you going? The higher road? No, go through the garden, it’s quicker.’

The officers went into the garden, where it seemed very dark and quiet after the bright lights and the noise. They did not say a word all the way to the gate. They were half- drunk, cheerful and contented, but the darkness and the silence made them pause for thought. Probably they were thinking the same as Ryabovich: would they ever see the day when they would own a large house, have a family, a garden, when they too would be able to entertain people (however much of a pretence this might be), feed them well, make them drunk and happy?

As they went through the garden gate they all started talking at once and, for no apparent reason, laughed out loud. Now they were descending the path that led down to the river and then ran along the water's edge, weaving its way around the bushes, the little pools of water and the willows which overhung the river. The bank and the path were barely visible, and the far side was plunged in darkness. Here and there were reflections of the stars in the water, quivering and breaking up into little patches – the only sign that the river was flowing fast. All was quiet. Sleepy sandpipers called plaintively from the far bank and on the near side a nightingale in a bush poured out its song, ignoring the passing officers.

The men paused by the bush, touched it, but still the nightingale sang.

‘That’s a bird for you!’ approving voices murmured. ‘Here we are, right next to him and he doesn’t take a blind bit of notice! What a rascal!’

The path finally turned upwards and came out on to the high road by the church fence. The officers were exhausted from walking up the hill and sat down for a smoke. On the far bank they could make out a dim red light and they tried to pass the time by guessing whether it was a camp fire, a light in a window, or something else . . . Ryabovich looked at it and imagined that the light was winking at him and smiling, as though it knew all about that kiss.

When he reached his quarters Ryabovich quickly undressed and lay on his bed. In the same hut were Lobytko and Lieutenant Merzlyakov, a gentle, rather quiet young man, who was considered well- educated in his own little circle. He was always reading the European Herald when he had the chance and took it with him everywhere. Lobytko undressed, paced up and down for a long time, with the expression of a dissatisfied man, and sent the batman for some beer.

Merzlyakov lay down, placed a candle near his pillow and immersed himself in the European Herald .

‘Who is she?’ Ryabovich wondered as he glanced at the grimy ceiling. His neck still felt as if it had been anointed with oil and he had that tingling sensation around his mouth – just like peppermint drops. He had fleeting visions of the lilac girl’s shoulders and arms, the temples and truthful eyes of the blonde in black, waists, dresses, brooches. He tried to fix these visions firmly in his mind, but they kept dancing about, dissolving, flickering. When these visions vanished completely against that darkened background everyone has when he closes his eyes, he began to hear hurried steps, rustling dresses, the sound of a kiss and he was gripped by an inexplicable, overwhelming feeling of joy. Just as he was abandoning himself to it, he heard the batman come back and report that there wasn't any beer. Lobytko became terribly agitated and started pacing up and down again.

'Didn't I tell you he's an idiot?' he said, stopping first in front of Ryabovich, then Merzlyakov. 'A man must really be a blockhead and idiot to come back without any beer! The man's a rogue, eh?'

'Of course, you won't find any beer in this place,' Merzlyakov said without taking his eyes off the European Herald.

'Oh, do you really think so?' Lobytko persisted. 'Good God, put me on the moon and I'll find you beer and women right away! Yes, I'll go now and find some . . . Call me a scoundrel if I don't succeed!'

He slowly dressed and pulled on his high boots. Then he finished his cigarette in silence and left.

'Rabbeck, Grabbeck, Labbeck,' he muttered, pausing in the hall. 'I don't feel like going on my own, dammit! Fancy a little walk, Ryabovich?'

There was no reply, so he came back, slowly undressed and got into bed. Merzlyakov sighed, put the European Herald away and snuffed the candle.

'Hm,' Lobytko murmured as he puffed his cigarette in the dark.

Ryabovich pulled the blankets over his head, curled himself into a ball and tried to merge the visions fleeting through his mind into one fixed image. But he failed completely. Soon he fell asleep and his last waking thought was of someone caressing him and making him happy, of something absurd and unusual, but nonetheless exceptionally fine and joyful, that had entered his life. And his dreams centred around this one thought.

When he woke up, the sensation of oil on his cheek and the minty tingling near his lips had vanished, but the joy of yesterday still filled his heart. Delighted, he watched the window frames, gilded now by the rising sun, and listened intently to the street noises. Outside, just by the window, he could hear loud voices – Lebedetsky, Ryabovich's battery commander, who had just caught up with the brigade, was shouting at his sergeant – simply because he had lost the habit of talking softly.

'Is there anything else?' he roared.

'When they were shoeing yesterday, sir, someone drove a nail into Pigeon's hoof. The medical orderly put clay and vinegar on it and they're keeping the horse reined, away from the others. And artificer Artemyev got drunk yesterday and the lieutenant had him tied to the fore- carriage of an auxiliary field- gun.'

And the sergeant had more to report. Karpov had forgotten the new cords for the trumpets and the stakes for the tents, and the officers had spent the previous evening as guests of General von Rabbeck. During the conversation, Lebedetsky's head and red beard appeared at the window. He blinked his short- sighted eyes at the sleepy officers and bade them good morning.

'Everything all right?' he asked.

'One of the shaft- horses damaged its withers – it was the new collar,' Lobytko answered, yawning.

The commander sighed, pondered for a moment and said in a loud voice, 'I'm still wondering whether to pay Aleksandra a visit, I really ought to go and see how she is. Well, goodbye for now, I'll catch you up by evening.'

A quarter of an hour later the brigade moved off. As it passed the general's barns, Ryabovich looked to the right where the house was. The blinds were drawn in all the windows. Clearly, everyone was still asleep. And the girl who had kissed Ryabovich the day before was sleeping too. He tried to imagine her as she slept and he had a clear and distinct picture of the wide- open windows, the little green branches peeping into her bedroom, the morning freshness, the smell of poplars, lilac and roses, her bed and the chair with that dress which had rustled the day before lying over it, tiny slippers, a watch on the table. But the actual features of that face, that sweet, dreamy smile, exactly what was most characteristic of her, slipped through his imagination like mercury through the fingers. When he had ridden about a quarter of a mile, he looked back. The yellow church, the house, the river and garden were flooded in sunlight and the river, with its bright green banks and its waters reflecting the light blue sky and glinting silver here and there, looked very beautiful. Ryabovich took a last look at Mestechki and he felt so sad, as if he were saying farewell to what was very near and dear to him.

But there were only long- familiar, boring scenes ahead of him. On both sides of the road there were fields of young rye and buckwheat, where crows were hopping about. Ahead, all he could see was dust and the backs of soldiers' heads; and behind, the same dust, the same faces. The brigade was led by a vanguard of four soldiers bearing sabres and behind them rode the military choristers, followed by trumpeters. Every now and then, like torchbearers in a funeral cortège, the vanguard and singers ignored the regulation distance and pushed on far ahead. Ryabovich rode alongside the first field- gun of the fifth battery and he could see the other four in front. These long, ponderous processions formed by brigades on the move can strike civilians as very peculiar, an unintelligible muddle, and non- military people just cannot fathom why a single field- gun has to be escorted by so many soldiers, why it has to be drawn by so many horses all tangled up in such strange harness, as if it really was such a terrible, heavy object. But Ryabovich understood everything perfectly well and for that reason he found it all extremely boring. He had long known why a hefty bombardier always rides with the officer at the head of every battery and why he is called an outrider. Immediately behind this bombardier came the riders on the first, then the middle- section trace- horses. Ryabovich knew that the horses to the left were saddle- horses, while those on the right were auxiliary – all this was very boring. The horsemen were followed by two shaft- horses, one ridden by a horseman with yesterday's dust still on his back and who had a clumsy- looking, very comical piece of wood fixed to his right leg. Ryabovich knew what it was for and did not find it funny. All the riders waved their whips mechanically and shouted now and again. As for the field- gun, it was an ugly thing. Sacks of oats covered with tarpaulin lay on the fore- carriage and the gun itself was hung with kettles, kitbags and little sacks: it resembled a small harmless animal which had been surrounded, for some reason, by men and horses. On the side sheltered from the wind a team of six strode along, swinging their arms. This gun was followed by more bombardiers, riders, shaft- horses and another field- gun – just as ugly and uninspiring as the first –lumbering along in the rear. After the second gun came a third, then a fourth with an officer riding alongside (there are six batteries to a brigade and four guns to a battery). The whole procession stretched about a quarter of a mile and ended with the baggage wagons, where a most likeable creature plodded thoughtfully along, his long- eared head drooping: this was Magar the donkey, brought from Turkey by a certain battery commander.

Ryabovich looked apathetically at all those necks and faces in front and behind. At any other time he would have dozed off, but now he was immersed in new, pleasant thoughts. When the brigade had first set off, he had tried to convince himself that the incident of the kiss was only some unimportant, mysterious adventure and that essentially it was trivial and too ridiculous for serious thought. But very quickly he waved logic aside and gave himself up to his dreams. First he pictured himself in von Rabbeck's drawing- room, sitting next to a girl who resembled both the girl in lilac and the blonde in black. Then he closed his eyes and imagined himself with another, completely strange girl, with very indeterminate features: in his thoughts he spoke to her, caressed her and leaned his head on her shoulder. Then he thought of war and separation, reunion, dinner with his wife and children . . .

'Brakes on!' rang out the command every time they went downhill. He shouted the command too, and feared that his own shouts would shatter his daydreams and bring him back to reality.

As they passed some estate, Ryabovich peeped over the fence into the garden. There he saw a long avenue, straight as a ruler, strewn with yellow sand and lined with young birches. With the eagerness of a man who has surrendered himself to daydreaming, he imagined tiny female feet walking over the yellow sand. And, quite unexpectedly, he had a clear mental picture of the girl who had kissed him, the girl he had visualized the previous evening during dinner. This image had planted itself in his mind and would not leave him.

At midday someone shouted from a wagon in the rear, 'Attention, eyes left! Officers!'

The brigadier drove up in an open carriage drawn by two white horses. He ordered it to stop near the second battery and shouted something no one understood. Several officers galloped over to him, Ryabovich among them.

‘Well, what’s the news?’ asked the brigadier, blinking his red eyes. ‘Anyone ill?’

When they had replied, the brigadier, a small skinny man, chewed for a moment, pondered and then turned to one of the officers: ‘One of your drivers, on the third gun, has taken his knee-guard off and the devil’s hung it on the fore-carriage. Reprimand him!’

He looked up at Ryabovich and continued: ‘It strikes me your harness breeches are too long.’

After a few more tiresome comments, the brigadier glanced at Lobytko and grinned. ‘You look down in the dumps today, Lieutenant Lobytko. Pining for Madame Lopukhov, eh? Gentlemen, he’s pining for Madame Lopukhov!’

Madame Lopukhov was a very plump, tall lady, well past forty. The brigadier, who had a passion for large women, no matter what age, suspected his officers nurtured similar passions. They smiled politely. Then the brigadier, delighted with himself for having made a very amusing, cutting remark, roared with laughter, tapped his driver on the back and saluted. The carriage drove off.

‘All the things I’m dreaming about now and which seem impossible, out of this world, are in fact very ordinary,’ Ryabovich thought as he watched the clouds of dust rising in the wake of the brigadier’s carriage. ‘It’s all so very ordinary, everyone experiences it . . . The brigadier, for example. He was in love once, now he’s married, with children. Captain Vachter is married and loved, despite having an extremely ugly red neck and no waistline. Salmanov is coarse and too much of a Tartar, but he had an affair that finished in marriage. I’m the same as everyone else . . . sooner or later I’ll have to go through what they did . . .’

And he was delighted and encouraged by the thought that he was just an ordinary man, leading an ordinary life. Now he was bold enough to picture her and his happiness as much as he liked and he gave full rein to his imagination.

In the evening, when the brigade had reached its destination and the officers were resting in their tents, Ryabovich, Merzlyakov and Lobytko gathered round a trunk and had supper. Merzlyakov took his time, holding his European Herald on his knees and reading it as he slowly munched his food.

Lobytko could not stop talking and kept filling his glass with beer, while Ryabovich, whose head was rather hazy from dreaming all day long, said nothing as he drank. Three glasses made him tipsy and weak and he felt an irrepressible longing to share his new feelings with his friends.

‘A strange thing happened to me at the Rabbecks,’ he said, trying to sound cool and sarcastic. ‘I went to the billiard- room, you know . . .’

He began to tell them, in great detail, all about the kiss, but after a minute fell silent. In that one minute he had told them everything and he was astonished when he considered how little time was needed to tell his story: he had imagined it would take until morning. After he heard the story, Lobytko – who was a great liar and therefore a great sceptic – looked at him in disbelief and grinned. Merzlyakov twitched his eyebrows and kept his eyes glued to the European Herald as he calmly remarked, ‘Damned if I know what to make of it! Throwing herself round a stranger’s neck without saying a word first . . . She must have been a mental case . . .’

‘Yes, some kind of neurotic,’ Ryabovich agreed.

‘Something similar happened to me once,’ Lobytko said, assuming a frightened look. ‘Last year I was travelling to Kovno . . . second class. The compartment was chock- full and it was impossible to sleep. So I tipped the guard fifty copeks . . . he took my luggage and got me a berth in a sleeper. I lay down and covered myself with a blanket. It was dark, you understand. Suddenly someone was touching my shoulder and breathing into my face. So I moved my arm and felt an elbow. I opened my eyes and – can you imagine! –it was a woman. Black eyes, lips as red as the best salmon, nostrils breathing passion, breasts like buffers! . . .’

‘Just a minute,’ Merzlyakov calmly interrupted. ‘I don’t dispute what you said about her breasts, but how could you see her lips if it was dark?’

Lobytko tried to wriggle out by poking fun at Merzlyakov’s obtuseness and this jarred on Ryabovich. He went away from the trunk, lay down and vowed never again to tell his secrets.

Camp life fell back into its normal routine. The days flashed by, each exactly the same as the other. All this time Ryabovich felt, thought and behaved like someone in love. When his batman brought him cold water in the mornings, he poured it over his head and each time he remembered that there was something beautiful and loving in his life.

In the evenings, when his fellow- officers talked about love and women, he would listen very attentively, sitting very close to them and assuming the habitual expression of a soldier hearing stories about battles he himself fought in. On those evenings when senior officers, led by ‘setter’Lobytko, carried out ‘sorties’ on the local village, in true Don Juan style, Ryabovich went along with them and invariably returned feeling sad, deeply guilty and imploring her forgiveness. In his spare time, or on nights when he couldn’t sleep, when he wanted to recall his childhood days, his parents, everything that was near and dear to him, he would always find himself thinking of Mestechki instead, of that strange horse, of von Rabbeck and his wife, who looked like the Empress Eugénie, of that dark room with the bright chink in the door.

On 31 August he left camp – not with his own brigade, however, but with two batteries. All the way he daydreamed and became very excited, as though he were going home. He wanted passionately to see that strange horse again, the church, those artificial Rabbecks, the dark room. Some inner voice, which so often deceives those in love, whispered that he was bound to see her again. And he was tormented by such questions as: how could he arrange a meeting, what would she say, had she forgotten the kiss? If the worst came to the worst, he would at least have the pleasure of walking through that dark room and remembering . . .

Towards evening, that familiar church and the white barns appeared on the horizon. His heart began to pound. He did not listen to what the officer riding next to him was saying, he was oblivious of everything and looked eagerly at the river gleaming in the distance, at the loft above which pigeons were circling in the light of the setting sun.

As he rode up to the church and heard the quartermaster speaking, he expected a messenger on horseback to appear from behind the fence any minute and invite the officers to tea . . . but the quartermaster read the billeting list out, the officers dismounted and strolled off into the village – and no messenger came.

‘The people in the village will tell Rabbeck we’re here and he’ll send for us,’ Ryabovich thought as he went into his hut. He just could not understand why a fellow- officer was lighting a candle, why the batmen were hurriedly heating the samovars.

He was gripped by an acute feeling of anxiety. He lay down, then got up and looked out of the window to see if the messenger was coming. But there was no one. He lay down again but got up again after half an hour, unable to control his anxiety, went out into the street and strode off towards the church.

The square near the fence was dark and deserted. Some soldiers were standing in a row at the top of the slope, saying nothing. They jumped when they saw Ryabovich and saluted. He acknowledged the salute and went down the familiar path.

The entire sky over the far bank was flooded with crimson; the moon was rising. Two peasant women were talking loudly and picking cabbage leaves as they walked along the edge of a kitchen garden. Beyond the gardens were some dark huts. On the near bank everything was much the same as in May: the path, the bushes, the willows overhanging the river . . . only there was no bold nightingale singing, no fragrant poplars or young grass. Ryabovich reached the garden and peered over the gate. It was dark and quiet and all he could see were the white trunks of the nearest birches and here and there little patches of avenue – everything else had merged into one black mass. Ryabovich looked hard, listened eagerly, and after standing and waiting for about a quarter of an hour, without hearing a sound or seeing a single light, he trudged wearily away . . .

He went down to the river, where he could see the general’s bathing- hut and towels hanging over the rail on the little bridge. He went on to the bridge, stood for a moment and aimlessly fingered the towels. They felt cold and rough. He looked down at the water . . . the current was swift and purled, barely audibly, against the piles of the hut. The red moon was reflected in the water near the left bank; tiny waves rippled through the reflection, pulling it apart and breaking it up into little patches, as if trying to bear it away.

‘How stupid, how very stupid!’ Ryabovich thought as he looked at the fast-flowing water. Now, when he hoped for nothing, that adventure of the kiss, his impatience, his vague longings and disillusionment appeared in a new light. He didn’t think it at all strange that he hadn’t waited for the general’s messenger or that he would never see the girl who had kissed him by mistake. On the contrary, he would have thought it strange if he had seen her . . .

The water raced past and he did not know where or why; it had flowed just as swiftly in May, when it grew from a little stream into a large river, flowed into the sea, evaporated and turned into rain. Perhaps this was the same water flowing past. To what purpose?

And the whole world, the whole of life, struck Ryabovich as a meaningless, futile joke. As he turned his eyes from the water to the sky, he remembered how fate had accidentally caressed him – in the guise of an unknown woman. He recalled the dreams and visions of that summer and his life seemed terribly empty, miserable, colourless . . . When he returned to his hut, none of the officers was there.

The batman reported that they had all gone to ‘General Fontryabkin’s’ – he’d sent a messenger on horseback with the invitation. There was a brief flicker of joy in his heart, but he snuffed it out at once, lay on his bed and in defiance of fate – as though he wanted to bring its wrath down on his own head – he did not go to the general’s.

The Two Volodyas

‘Let me go, I want to drive. I’m going to sit next to the driver,’ Sophia Lvovna shouted. ‘Driver, wait. I’m coming up on to the box to sit next to you.’

She stood on the sledge while her husband Vladimir Nikitych and her childhood friend Vladimir Mikhaylych held her by the arm in case she fell. Away sped the troika.

‘I said you shouldn’t have given her brandy,’ Vladimir Nikitych whispered irritably to his companion. ‘You’re a fine one!’

From past experience the Colonel knew that when women like his wife Sophia Lvovna had been in riotous, rather inebriated high spirits he could normally expect fits of hysterical laughter and tears to follow. He was afraid that once they got home he would have to run around with the cold compresses and medicine instead of being able to go to bed.

‘Whoa!’ Sophia Lvovna shouted. ‘I want to drive.’

She was really very gay and in an exultant mood. For two months after her wedding she had been tormented by the thought that she had married Colonel Yagich for his money or, as they say, par dépit. That same evening, in the out- of- town restaurant, she finally became convinced that she loved him passionately. In spite of his fifty- four years, he was so trim, sprightly and athletic, and he told puns and joined in the gypsy girls’ songs with such charm. It is true that nowadays old men are a thousand times more interesting than young ones, as though age and youth had changed places. The Colonel was two years older than her father, but was that important if, to be quite honest, he was infinitely stronger, more energetic and livelier than she was, even though she was only twenty- three?

‘Oh, my darling!’ she thought. ‘My wonderful man!’

In the restaurant she had come to the conclusion too that not a spark remained of her old feelings. To her childhood friend Vladimir Mikhaylych, whom only yesterday she had loved to distraction, she now felt completely indifferent. The whole evening he had struck her as a lifeless, sleepy, boring nobody and the habitual coolness with which he avoided paying restaurant bills exasperated her so much this time that she very nearly told him, 'You should have stayed at home if you're so poor.' The Colonel footed the bill.

Perhaps it was the trees, telegraph poles and snowdrifts all flashing past that aroused the most varied thoughts. She reflected that the meal had cost one hundred and twenty roubles – with a hundred for the gypsies – and that the next day, if she so wished, she could throw a thousand roubles away, whereas two months ago, before the wedding, she did not have three roubles to call her own and she had to turn to her father for every little thing. How her life had changed!

Her thoughts were in a muddle and she remembered how, when she was about ten, Colonel Yagich, her husband now, had made advances to her aunt and how everyone in the house had said that he had ruined her. In fact, her aunt often came down to dinner with tear- stained eyes and was always going away somewhere; people said the poor woman was suffering terribly. In those days he was very handsome and had extraordinary success with women; the whole town knew him and he was said to visit his admirers every day, like a doctor doing his rounds. Even now, despite his grey hair, wrinkles and spectacles, his thin face looked handsome, especially in profile.

Sophia Lvovna's father was an army doctor and had once served in Yagich's regiment. Volodya senior's father had also been an army doctor and had once served in the same regiment as her own father and Yagich. Despite some highly involved and frantic amorous adventures Volodya junior had been an excellent student. He graduated with honours from university, had decided to specialize in foreign literature and was said to be writing his thesis. He lived in the barracks with his doctor father and he had no money of his own, although he was now thirty. When they were children, Sophia Lvovna and he had lived in different flats, but in the same building, and he often came to play with her; together they had dancing and French lessons. But when he grew up into a well- built, exceedingly good- looking young man, she began to be shy of him. Then she fell madly in love with him and was still in love until shortly before she married Yagich. He too had extraordinary success with women, from the age of fourteen almost, and the ladies who deceived their husbands with him exonerated themselves by saying Volodya was 'so little'. Not long before, he was said to be living in digs close to the university and every time you knocked, his footsteps could be heard on the other side of the door and then the whispered apology: 'Pardon, je ne suis pas seul .' Yagich was delighted with him, gave him his blessing for the future as Derzhavin had blessed Pushkin, and was evidently very fond of him. For hours on end they would silently play billiards or piquet, and if Yagich went off somewhere in a troika, he would take Volodya with him; only Yagich shared the secret of his thesis. In earlier days, when the Colonel was younger, they were often rivals, but were never jealous of one another. When they were in company, which they frequented together, Yagich was called 'Big Volodya' and his friend 'Little Volodya'.

Besides Big Volodya and Little Volodya, and Sophia Lvovna, there was someone else in the sledge, Margarita Aleksandrovna – or Rita as everyone called her – Mrs Yagich's cousin. She was a spinster, in her thirties, very pale, with black eyebrows, pince-nez, who chain-smoked even when it was freezing; there was always ash on her lap and chest. She spoke through her nose and drawled; she was cold and unemotional, could drink any quantity of liqueur or brandy without getting drunk and told stories abounding in doubles entendres in a dull, tasteless way. At home she read the learned reviews all day long, scattering ash all over them; or she would eat crystallized apples.

'Sophia, don't play the fool,' she drawled; 'it's really so stupid.'

When the town gates came into view the troika slowed down; they caught glimpses of people and houses, and Sophia quietened down, snuggled against her husband and gave herself up to her thoughts. And now gloomy thoughts began to mingle with her happy, carefree fantasies. The man opposite knew that she had loved him (so she thought), and of course he believed the reports that she had married the Colonel par d  pit . Not once had she confessed her love and she did not want him to know. She had concealed her feelings, but his expression clearly showed that he understood her perfectly, and so her pride suffered. But most humiliating of all about her situation was the fact that Little Volodya had suddenly started paying attention to her after her marriage, which had never happened before. He would sit with her for hours on end, in silence, or telling her some nonsense; and now in the sledge he was gently touching her leg or squeezing her hand, without saying a word. Evidently, all he wanted was for her to get married. No less obviously, he did not think much of her and she interested him only in a certain way, as an immoral, disreputable woman. And this mingling of triumphant love for her husband and injured pride was the reason for her behaving so irresponsibly, prompting her to sit on the box and shout and whistle . . .

Just as they were passing the convent the great twenty-ton bell started clanging away. Rita crossed herself.

‘Our Olga is in that convent,’ Sophia Lvovna said, crossing herself and shuddering.

‘Why did she become a nun?’ the Colonel asked.

‘Par dépit,’ Rita answered angrily, obviously hinting at Sophia Lvovna’s marriage to Yagich. ‘This par dépit is all the rage now. It’s a challenge to the whole of society. She was a proper good-time girl, a terrible flirt, all she liked was dances and dancing partners. And then suddenly we have all this! She took us all by surprise!’

‘That’s not true,’ Little Volodya said, lowering the collar of his fur coat and revealing his handsome face. ‘This wasn’t a case of par dépit, but something really terrible. Her brother Dmitry was sentenced to hard labour in Siberia and no one knows where he is now. The mother died of grief.’ He raised his collar again. ‘And Olga did the right thing,’ he added dully. ‘Living as a ward, and with a treasure like our Sophia Lvovna, what’s more – that’s enough food for thought!’

Sophia Lvovna noted the contempt in his voice and wanted to say something very nasty in reply, but she said nothing. Once more euphoria gripped her. She stood up and shouted tearfully, ‘I want to go to morning service. Driver, turn back! I want to see Olga!’

They turned back. The convent bell had a dull peal and Sophia Lvovna felt there was something in it reminding her of Olga and her life. Bells rang out from other churches. When the driver had brought the troika to a halt, Sophia leapt from the sledge and rushed unescorted to the gates.

‘Please don’t be long!’ her husband shouted. ‘It’s late.’

She went through the dark gates, then along the path leading to the main church; the light snow crunched under her feet and the tolling of the bells sounded right over her head now and seemed to penetrate her whole being. First she came to the church door, the three steps down, then the porch, with paintings of the saints on both sides; there was a smell of juniper and incense. Then came another door, which a dark figure opened, bowing very low . . . In the church the service had not yet begun. One of the nuns was in front of the icon- screen lighting candles in their holders, another was lighting a chandelier. Here and there, close to the columns and side- chapels, were motionless, black figures. ‘They’ll be standing in exactly the same places till morning,’ Sophia Lvovna thought and the whole place struck her as dark, cold, depressing – more depressing than a graveyard. Feeling bored, she glanced at the motionless, frozen figures and suddenly her heart sank. Somehow she recognized one of the nuns – short, with thin shoulders and a black shawl on her head – as Olga, although when she had entered the convent she had been plump and taller, she thought. Deeply disturbed for some reason, Sophia Lvovna hesitantly walked over to the lay sister, looked over her shoulder into her face and saw it was Olga.

‘Olga!’ she said, clasping her hands and too excited to say anything else. ‘Olga!’

The nun recognized her immediately, raised her eyebrows in astonishment and her pale, freshly washed face (even, it seemed, her white kerchief visible under her shawl) glowed with joy.

‘God has performed a miracle,’ she said and also clasped her thin, pale little hands.

Sophia Lvovna firmly embraced her and kissed her, frightened as she did so that her breath might smell of drink.

‘We were just passing and we thought of you,’ she said breathlessly, as though she had just completed a fast walk. ‘Heavens, how pale you are! I’m . . . I’m very pleased to see you. Well, how are you? Bored?’ Sophia Lvovna looked round at the other nuns and now she lowered her voice: ‘So much has happened . . . you know I married Volodya Yagich. You must remember him . . . I’m very happy.'

'Well, thank the Lord for that! And is your father well?'

'Yes, he often remembers you. But you must come and see us during the holidays, Olga. Will you do that?'

'Yes, I'll come,' Olga said smiling. 'I'll come the day after tomorrow.'

Without even knowing why, Sophia burst into tears and cried in silence for a whole minute. Then she dried her eyes and said, 'Rita will be very sorry she didn't see you. She's with us too. And Little Volodya. They're at the gate. How pleased they would be to see you! Come out and see them, the service hasn't started yet.'

'All right,' Olga agreed. She crossed herself three times and walked out with Sophia Lvovna.

'So, you said you're happy, Sophia,' she said after they were past the gates.

'Very.'

'Well, thank God.'

When Big Volodya and Little Volodya saw the nun they got off the sledge and greeted her respectfully. They were visibly moved by her pale face and her nun's black habit, and they were both pleased that she remembered them and had come to greet them. Sophia Lvovna wrapped her in a rug and covered her with one flap of her fur coat to protect her from the cold. Her recent tears had lightened and cleansed her soul and she was glad that the noisy, riotous and essentially immoral night had unexpectedly come to such a pure and quiet conclusion. Then to keep Olga by her side longer, she suggested, 'Let's take her for a ride! Olga, get in. Just a little one.'

The men expected the nun to refuse – religious people don't go around in troikas – but to their amazement she agreed and got in. When the troika hurtled off towards the town gates, no one said a word; their only concern was to make her warm and comfortable. Each one of them thought about the difference in her from before. Her face was impassive, somewhat expressionless, cold, pale, transparent, as though water flowed in her veins instead of blood. Two or three years ago she had been buxom and rosy-cheeked, had talked about eligible bachelors and laughed loud at the least thing.

The troika turned round at the town gates. Ten minutes later they were back at the convent and Olga climbed out. The bells were ringing a series of chimes.

‘God be with you,’ Olga said, giving a low, nun- like bow.

‘So you will come then, Olga?’

‘Of course I will.’

She quickly left and soon disappeared through the dark gateway. After the troika had moved on everyone somehow felt very sad. No one said a word. Sophia Lvovna felt weak all over and her heart sank. Making a nun get into a sledge and go for a ride with that drunken crowd struck her now as stupid, tactless and almost sacrilegious. The desire for self- deception vanished with her tipsiness and now she clearly realized that she did not and could not love her husband, it was all nothing but silly nonsense. She had married for money because, as her ex- schoolgirl friends put it, he was ‘madly rich’, because she was terrified of becoming an old maid, like Rita, because her doctor father got on her nerves and because she wanted to annoy Little Volodya. Had she guessed when she was contemplating marriage that it would turn out to be so nasty, painful and ugly, she would never have agreed to it, not for anything in the world. But the damage was done now, she had to accept things.

They arrived home. As she lay in her warm, soft bed and covered herself with a blanket, Sophia Lvovna recalled the dark porch, the smell of incense, the figures by the columns, and she was distressed at the thought that these figures would still be standing there, quite motionless, all the time she was sleeping. Early morning service would be interminably long, and after that there would be the hours, then Mass, then more prayers . . .

‘But surely God exists? He certainly exists and I must certainly die. Therefore, sooner or later, I must think of my soul, eternal life, like Olga does. Olga is saved now, she has solved all her problems for herself . . . But what if there is no God? Then her life has been wasted. But how has it been wasted? Why?’

A minute later another thought entered her head. ‘God exists, death will certainly come. I should be thinking of my soul. If Olga could see her death this very minute she would not be afraid. She’s ready. But the most important thing is, she's solved the riddle of existence for herself. God exists . . . yes. But isn't there another way out apart from becoming a nun? That means renouncing life, destroying it . . .' Sophia Lvovna became rather scared and hid her head under the pillow. 'I mustn't think about it,' she whispered, 'I mustn't.'

Yagich was walking up and down in the next room, his spurs softly jingling; he was deep in thought. Sophia Lvovna thought that this man was near and dear to her only in one thing – he was called Volodya too. She sat on her bed and tenderly called, 'Volodya!'

'What do you want?' her husband replied.

'Nothing.'

She lay down again. There were bells tolling – from that same convent, perhaps – and once again she recalled the porch and the dark figures. Thoughts of God and inescapable death wandered through her mind; she pulled the blanket over her head to drown the sound of the bells. She expected, before old age and death came, that her life would drag on for such a terribly long time, and from one day to the next she would have to cope with the nearness of someone she did not love, and who had come into the room just at that moment and was getting into bed; and she would have to suppress that hopeless love for another – someone who was so young, so charming and apparently so unusual. She looked at her husband and wanted to say good night, but she suddenly burst into tears instead. She felt annoyed with herself.

'Well, we're off again,' Yagich said.

She did calm down, but not until later, towards ten in the morning. She had stopped crying and shaking all over; she developed a severe headache, however. Yagich was hurrying, getting ready for late Mass and in the next room he was grumbling at the batman helping him dress. He came into the bedroom once, his spurs softly jingling, took something, and when he came in a second time he was wearing epaulettes and decorations; he limped slightly from rheumatism. He gave Sophia Lvovna the impression he was a beast of prey, prowling and looking round.

Then she heard him on the telephone. 'Please put me through to the Vasilyevsky Barracks,' he said. A minute later he went on, 'Is that Vasilyevsky Barracks? Please ask Dr Salimovich to come to the phone.' Then, a minute later, 'Who am I speaking to? Volodya? Fine. My dear chap, please ask your father to come over right away, my wife is terribly off colour after what happened yesterday. What's that? He's out? Hm . . . thanks . . . Yes, I'd be much obliged. Merci.'

Yagich came into the bedroom for the third time, bent over his wife, made the sign of the cross over her, let her kiss his hand (women who loved him would kiss his hand, he was used to this), and said he would be back for dinner. And he left.

Towards noon the maid announced Little Volodya. Swaying from weariness and her headache, Sophia Lvovna quickly put on her stunning new lilac, fur-trimmed negligee and hurriedly tidied her hair. In her heart she felt inexpressibly tender and trembled for joy – and for fear he might leave. She wanted just one look at him.

Little Volodya was paying her a visit in formal dress –tailcoat and white tie. When Sophia Lvovna came into the drawing-room he kissed her hand, said how deeply sorry he was to see her so unwell. When they had sat down he praised her negligee.

'Seeing Olga last night has upset me,' she said. 'At first it was painful for me, but now I envy her. She is like an immovable rock, it's impossible to budge her. But was there really no other way out for her, Volodya? Can burying oneself alive really solve life's problems? You'd call that death, not life, wouldn't you?' At the mention of Olga, Little Volodya's face showed deep emotion. 'Now look, Volodya, you're a clever man,' Sophia Lvovna said. 'Teach me to be like her. Of course, I'm a non-believer and I couldn't become a nun. But couldn't I do something that would be just as good? I find life hard enough.' After a brief silence she continued, 'Teach me . . . tell me something that will convince me. Just one word.'

'One word? Okay. Ta- ra- ra- boomdeay.'

'Volodya, why do you despise me?' she asked excitedly. 'You speak to me in some special – if you'll forgive the expression – fancy language that one doesn't use with friends and respectable women. You're a successful scholar, you love your studies, but why do you never tell me about them? Why? Aren't I good enough?'

Little Volodya frowned irritably and said, 'Why this sudden passion for scholarship? Perhaps you want us to have a constitution? Or perhaps sturgeon with horseradish?’

‘Oh, have it your way then. I’m a mediocre, worthless, unprincipled, stupid woman . . . I’ve made thousands, thousands of mistakes. I’m not right in the head, a loose woman, and for that I deserve contempt. But you’re ten years older than me, Volodya, aren’t you? And my husband is thirty years older. You watched me grow up and if you’d wanted to, you could have made me anything you wanted, an angel even. But you . . .’ (here her voice shook) ‘treat me dreadfully. Yagich was an old man when he married me, and you . . .’

‘Well, enough of that. Enough,’ Volodya said, drawing closer to her and kissing both her hands. ‘We’ll leave the Schopenhauers to philosophize and argue about anything they like, but now we’re going to kiss these sweet little hands.’

‘You despise me and if only you knew the suffering it causes me,’ she said hesitantly, knowing beforehand that he would not believe her. ‘If you only knew how I want to improve myself, to start a new life! It fills me with joy just thinking about it,’ she murmured and actually shed a few joyous tears. ‘To be a good, honest, decent person, not to lie, to have a purpose in life.’

‘Stop it please! You don’t have to put on an act for me, I don’t like it,’ Volodya said, looking peevish. ‘Heavens, you’d think we were at the theatre! Let’s behave like normal human beings!’

To prevent him from leaving in a temper she began to make excuses, forced herself to smile – to please him – mentioned Olga again and that she wanted to solve the riddle of her existence, to become a real human being.

‘Ta- ra- ra- boomdeay,’ he chanted softly. ‘Ta- ra- ra- boomdeay!’

And then quite suddenly he clasped her waist. Barely conscious of what she was doing she put her hands on his shoulders and for a whole minute looked rapturously at his clever, sarcastic face, his forehead, eyes, handsome beard . . .

‘You’ve known for a long time that I love you,’ she confessed with an agonized blush and she felt that even her lips had twisted in a paroxysm of shame. ‘I love you. So why do you torment me?’

She closed her eyes and kissed him firmly on the lips. For a long time – a whole minute perhaps – she just could not bring herself to end this kiss, although she knew very well that she was behaving badly, that he might tell her off, or that a servant might come in . . .

Half an hour later, when he had got what he wanted, he sat in the dining- room eating a snack while she knelt before him, staring hungrily into his face. He told her she was like a small dog waiting for someone to toss it a piece of ham. Then he sat her on one knee, rocked her like a child and sang, ‘ Ta- ra- ra- boomdeay . . . Ta- ra- ra- boomdeay!’

When he was about to leave she asked him passionately, ‘When? Later on? Where?’ And she held out both hands to his mouth, as if wanting to catch his reply in them.

And they parted. Before lunch Sophia Lvovna went off to the convent to see Olga, but was told that she was reading the Psalter for someone who had died. From the convent she went to her father’s and drove aimlessly up and down the main streets and side-streets until evening. While she was riding, for some reason she kept remembering that aunt with the tear- stained eyes, who was fretting her life away.

That night they all went riding on troikas again and heard the gypsies in that out- of- town restaurant. And when they were once again passing the convent Sophia Lvovna thought of Olga and became terrified at the thought that there was no escape for girls and women in her circle, except perpetual troika- rides or entering a convent to mortify the flesh . . .

The following day she had a lovers’ rendezvous once again. She went for solitary cab- rides around town and thought of her aunt.

A week later Little Volodya dropped her. Then life reverted to normal and was just as boring, dreary – and sometimes just as excruciating as it had ever been. The Colonel and Little Volodya had long billiards and piquet sessions, Rita told her tasteless anecdotes in the same lifeless fashion, Sophia Lvovna kept driving in cabs and asking her husband to take her for troika- rides.

Almost every day she called at the convent, boring Olga with her complaints of intolerable suffering; she cried and felt that she had brought something impure, pathetic and shabby into the cell. Olga, however, as if repeating a well- learnt lesson parrot- fashion, told her that there was nothing to worry about, that it would all pass and that God would forgive her.

Gooseberries

The sky had been overcast with rain clouds since early morning. The weather was mild, and not hot and oppressive as it can be on dull grey days when storm clouds lie over the fields for ages and you wait for rain which never comes. Ivan Ivanych, the vet, and Burkin, a teacher at the high school, were tired of walking and thought they would never come to the end of the fields. They could just make out the windmills at the village of Mironositskoye in the far distance – a range of hills stretched away to the right and disappeared far beyond it. They both knew that the river was there, with meadows, green willows and farmsteads, and that if they climbed one of the hills they would see yet another vast expanse of fields, telegraph wires and a train resembling a caterpillar in the distance. In fine weather they could see even as far as the town. And now, in calm weather, when the whole of nature had become gentle and dreamy, Ivan Ivanych and Burkin were filled with love for those open spaces and they both thought what a vast and beautiful country it was.

‘Last time we were in Elder Prokofy’s barn, you were going to tell me a story,’ Burkin said.

‘Yes, I wanted to tell you about my brother.’

Ivan Ivanych heaved a long sigh and lit his pipe before beginning his narrative; but at that moment down came the rain. Five minutes later it was simply teeming. Ivan Ivanych and Burkin were in two minds as to what they should do. The dogs were already soaked through and stood with their tails drooping, looking at them affectionately.

‘We must take shelter,’ Burkin said. ‘Let’s go to Alyokhin’s, it’s not very far.’

‘All right, let’s go there.’

They changed direction and went across mown fields, walking straight on at first, and then bearing right until they came out on the high road. Before long, poplars, a garden, then the red roofs of barns came into view. The river glinted, and then they caught sight of a wide stretch of water and a white bathing- hut. This was Sofino, where Alyokhin lived.

The mill was turning and drowned the noise of the rain. The wall of the dam shook. Wet horses with downcast heads were standing by some carts and peasants went around with sacks on their heads. Everything was damp, muddy and bleak, and the water had a cold, malevolent look. Ivan Ivanych and Burkin felt wet, dirty and terribly uncomfortable. Their feet were weighed down by mud and when they crossed the dam and walked up to the barns near the manor house they did not say a word and seemed to be angry with each other.

A winnowing fan was droning away in one of the barns and dust poured out of the open door. On the threshold stood the master himself, Alyokhin, a man of about forty, tall, stout, with long hair, and he looked more like a professor or an artist than a landowner. He wore a white shirt that hadn't been washed for a very long time, and it was tied round with a piece of rope as a belt. Instead of trousers he was wearing underpants; mud and straw clung to his boots. His nose and eyes were black with dust. He immediately recognized Ivan Ivanych and Burkin, and was clearly delighted to see them.

'Please come into the house, gentlemen,' he said, smiling, 'I'll be with you in a jiffy.'

It was a large house, with two storeys. Alyokhin lived on the ground floor in the two rooms with vaulted ceilings and small windows where his estate managers used to live. They were simply furnished and smelled of rye bread, cheap vodka and harness. He seldom used the main rooms upstairs, reserving them for guests. Ivan Ivanych and Burkin were welcomed by the maid, who was such a beautiful young woman that they both stopped and stared at each other.

'You can't imagine how glad I am to see you, gentlemen,' Alyokhin said as he followed them into the hall. 'A real surprise!' Then he turned to the maid and said, 'Pelageya, bring some dry clothes for the gentlemen. I suppose I'd better change too. But I must have a wash first, or you'll think I haven't had one since spring. Would you like to come to the bathing- hut while they get things ready in the house?’

The beautiful Pelageya, who had such a dainty look and gentle face, brought soap and towels, and Alyokhin went off with his guests to the bathing- hut.

‘Yes, it’s ages since I had a good wash,’ he said as he undressed. ‘As you can see, it’s a nice hut. My father built it, but I never find time these days for a swim.’

He sat on one of the steps and smothered his long hair and neck with soap; the water turned brown.

‘Yes, I must confess . . .’ Ivan Ivanych muttered, with a meaningful look at his head.

‘Haven’t had a wash for ages,’ Alyokhin repeated in his embarrassment and soaped himself again; the water turned a dark inky blue.

Ivan Ivanych came out of the cabin, dived in with a loud splash and swam in the rain, making broad sweeps with his arms and sending out waves with white lilies bobbing about on them. He swam right out to the middle of the reach and dived. A moment later he popped up somewhere else and swam on, continually trying to dive right to the bottom.

‘Oh, good God,’ he kept saying with great relish. ‘Good God . . .’

He reached the mill, said a few words to the peasants, then he turned and floated on his back in the middle with his face under the rain. Burkin and Alyokhin were already dressed and ready to leave, but he kept on swimming and diving.

‘Oh, dear God,’ he said. ‘Oh, God!’

‘Now that’s enough,’ Burkin shouted.

They went back to the house. Only when the lamp in the large upstairs drawing- room was alight and Burkin and Ivan Ivanych, wearing silk dressing- gowns and warm slippers, were sitting in armchairs and Alyokhin, washed and combed now and with a new frock- coat on, was walking up and down, obviously savouring the warmth, cleanliness, dry clothes and light shoes, while his beautiful Pelageya glided silently over the carpet and gently smiled as she served tea and jam on a tray – only then did Ivan Ivanych begin his story. It seemed that Burkin and Alyokhin were not the only ones who were listening, but also the ladies (young and old) and the officers, who were looking down calmly and solemnly from their gilt frames on the walls.

‘There are two of us brothers,’ he began, ‘myself – Ivan Ivanych – and Nikolay Ivanych, who’s two years younger. I studied to be a vet, while Nikolay worked in the district tax office from the time he was nineteen. Chimsha- Gimalaysky, our father, had served as a private, but when he was promoted to officer we became hereditary gentlemen and owners of a small estate. After he died, this estate was sequestered to pay off his debts, but despite this we spent our boyhood in the country free to do what we wanted. Just like any other village children, we stayed out in the fields and woods for days and nights, minded horses, stripped bark, went fishing, and so on . . . As you know very well, anyone who has ever caught a ruff or watched migrating thrushes swarming over his native village on cool clear autumn days can never live in a town afterwards and he’ll always hanker after the free and open life until his dying day. My brother was miserable in the tax office. The years passed, but there he stayed, always at the same old desk, copying out the same old documents and obsessed with this longing for the country. And gradually this longing took the form of a definite wish, a dream of buying a nice little estate somewhere in the country, beside a river or a lake.

‘He was a kind, gentle man and I was very fond of him, but I could never feel any sympathy for him in this longing to lock himself away in a country house for the rest of his life. They say a man needs only six feet of earth, but surely they must mean a corpse – not a man ! These days they seem to think that it’s very good if our educated classes want to go back to the land and set their hearts on a country estate. But in reality these estates are only that same six feet all over again. To leave the town and all its noise and hubbub, to go and shut yourself away on your little estate – that’s no life! It’s selfishness, laziness, a peculiar brand of monasticism that achieves nothing. A man needs more than six feet of earth and a little place in the country, he needs the whole wide world, the whole of nature, where there’s room for him to display his potential, all the manifold attributes of his free spirit.

‘As he sat there in his office, my brother Nikolay dreamt of soup made from his own home- grown cabbages, soup that would fill the whole house with a delicious smell; eating meals on the green grass; sleeping in the sun; sitting on a bench outside the main gates for hours on end and looking at the fields and woods. Booklets on agriculture and words of wisdom from calendars were his joy, his favourite spiritual nourishment. He liked newspapers as well, but he only read property adverts – for so many acres of arable land and meadows, with “house, river, garden, mill, and ponds fed by running springs”. And he had visions of garden paths, flowers, fruit, nesting- boxes for starlings, ponds teeming with carp – you know the kind of thing. These visions varied according to the adverts he happened to see, but for some reason, in every single one, there had to be gooseberry bushes. “Life in the country has its comforts,” he used to say. “You can sit drinking tea on your balcony, while your ducks are swimming in the pond . . . it all smells so good and um . . . there’s your gooseberries growing away!”

‘He drew up a plan for his estate and it turned out exactly the same every time: (a) manor house; (b) servants’ quarters; (c) kitchen garden; (d) gooseberry bushes. He lived a frugal life, economizing on food and drink, dressing any- old- how –just like a beggar – and putting every penny he saved straight into the bank. He was terribly mean. It was really painful to look at him, so I used to send him a little money on special occasions. But he would put that in the bank too. Once a man has his mind firmly made up there’s nothing you can do about it.

‘Years passed and he was transferred to another province. He was now in his forties, still reading newspaper adverts and still saving up. Then I heard that he’d got married. So that he could buy a country estate with gooseberry bushes, he married an ugly old widow, for whom he felt nothing and only because she had a little money tucked away. He made her life miserable too, half- starved her and banked her money into his own account. She’d been married to a postmaster and was used to pies and fruit liqueurs, but with her second husband she didn’t even have enough black bread. This kind of life made her wither away, and within three years she’d gone to join her maker. Of course, my brother didn’t think that he was to blame – not for one minute! Like vodka, money can make a man do the most peculiar things. There was once a merchant living in our town who was on his deathbed. Just before he died, he asked for some honey, stirred it up with all his money and winning lottery tickets, and swallowed the lot to stop anyone else from laying their hands on it. And another time, when I was inspecting cattle at some railway station, a dealer fell under a train and had his leg cut off. We took him to the local casualty department. The blood simply gushed out, a terrible sight, but all he did was ask for his leg back and was only bothered about the twenty roubles he had tucked away in the boot. Scared he might lose them, I dare say!

‘But that’s neither here nor there,’ Burkin said.

‘When his wife died,’ Ivan continued, after a pause for thought, ‘my brother started looking for an estate. Of course, you can look around for five years and still make the wrong choice and you finish up with something you never even dreamt of. So brother Nikolay bought about three hundred acres, with manor house, servants’ quarters and a park, on a mortgage through an estate agent. But there wasn’t any orchard, gooseberries or duck pond. There was a river, but the water was always the colour of coffee because of the brickworks on one side of the estate and a bone- ash factory on the other. But my dear Nikolay didn’t seem to care. He ordered twenty gooseberry bushes, planted them out and settled down to a landowner’s life.

‘Last year I visited him, as I wanted to see what was going on. In his letter my brother had called his estate “Chumbaroklov Patch” or “Gimalaysky’s”. One afternoon I turned up at “Gimalaysky’s”. It was a hot day. Everywhere there were ditches, fences, hedges, rows of small fir trees and there seemed no way into the yard or anywhere to leave my horse. I went up to the house, only to be welcomed by a fat ginger dog that looked rather like a pig. It wanted to bark, but it was too lazy. Then a barefooted, plump cook – she resembled a pig as well – came out of the kitchen and told me the master was having his after- lunch nap. So I went to my brother’s room and there he was sitting up in bed with a blanket over his knees. He’d aged, put on weight and looked very flabby. His cheeks, nose and lips stuck out and I thought any moment he was going to grunt into his blanket, like a pig.

‘We embraced and wept for joy, and at the sad thought that once we were young and now both of us were grey, and that our lives were nearly over. He got dressed and led me on a tour of the estate.

‘ “Well, how’s it going?” I asked.

‘ “All right, thank God. It’s a good life.”

‘No longer was he the poor, timid little clerk of before, but a real squire, a gentleman. He felt quite at home, being used to country life by then and he was enjoying himself. He ate a great deal, took proper baths, and he was putting on weight. Already he was suing the district council and both factories, and he got very peeved when the villagers didn’t call him “sir”. He paid great attention to his spiritual wellbeing (as a gentleman should) and he couldn’t dispense charity nice and quietly, but had to make a great show of it. And what did it all add up to? He doled out bicarbonate of soda or castor oil to his villagers – regardless of what they were suffering from – and on his name- day held a thanksgiving service in the village, supplying vodka in plenty, as he thought this was the right thing to do. Oh, those horrid pints of vodka! Nowadays your fat squire drags his villagers off to court for letting their cattle stray on his land and the very next day (if it’s a high holiday) stands them all a few pints of vodka. They’ll drink it, shout hurray and fall at his feet in a drunken stupor. Better standards of living, plenty to eat, idleness – all this makes us Russians terribly smug. Back in his office, Nikolay had been too scared even to voice any opinions of his own, but now he was expounding the eternal verities in true ministerial style: “Education is essential, but premature as far as the common people are concerned” or “Corporal punishment, generally speaking, is harmful, but in certain cases it can be useful and irreplaceable”. And he’d say, “I know the working classes and how to handle them. They like me, I only have to lift my little finger and they’ll do anything for me.”

‘And he said all this, mark you, with a clever, good- natured smile. Time after time he’d say “we gentlemen ” or “speaking as one of the gentry ”. He’d evidently forgotten that our grandfather had been a peasant and our father a common soldier. Even our absolutely ridiculous surname, Chimsha- Gimalaysky, was melodious, distinguished and highly agreeable to his ears now.

‘But it’s myself I’m concerned with, not him. I’d like to tell you about the change that came over me during the few hours I spent on his estate. Later, when we were having tea, his cook brought us a plateful of gooseberries. They weren't shop gooseberries, but home-grown, the first fruits of the bushes he'd planted. Nikolay laughed and stared at them for a whole minute, with tears in his eyes. He was too deeply moved for words. Then he popped one in his mouth, looked at me like an enraptured child that has finally been given a long-awaited toy and said, "Absolutely delicious!" He ate some greedily and kept repeating, "So tasty, you must try one!"

"They were hard and sour, but as Pushkin says: "Uplifting illusion is dearer to us than a host of truths." This was a happy man whose cherished dreams had clearly come true, who had achieved his life's purpose, had got what he wanted and was happy with his lot – and himself. My thoughts about human happiness, for some peculiar reason, had always been tinged with a certain sadness. But now, seeing this happy man, I was overwhelmed by a feeling of despondency that was close to utter despair. I felt particularly low that night. They made up a bed for me in the room next to my brother's. He was wide awake and I could hear him getting up, going over to the plate and helping himself to one gooseberry at a time. And I thought how many satisfied, happy people really do exist in this world! And what a powerful force they are! Just take a look at this life of ours and you will see the arrogance and idleness of the strong, the ignorance and bestiality of the weak. Everywhere there's unspeakable poverty, overcrowding, degeneracy, drunkenness, hypocrisy and stupid lies . . . And yet peace and quiet reign in every house and street. Out of fifty thousand people you won't find one who is prepared to shout out loud and make a strong protest. We see people buying food in the market, eating during the day, sleeping at night-time, talking nonsense, marrying, growing old and then contentedly carting their dead off to the cemetery. But we don't hear or see those who suffer: the real tragedies of life are enacted somewhere behind the scenes. Everything is calm and peaceful and the only protest comes from statistics – and they can't talk. Figures show that so many went mad, so many bottles of vodka were emptied, so many children died from malnutrition. And clearly this kind of system is what people need. It's obvious that the happy man feels contented only because the unhappy ones bear their burden without saying a word: if it weren't for their silence, happiness would be quite impossible. It's a kind of mass hypnosis.

Someone ought to stand with a hammer at the door of every happy contented man, continually banging on it to remind him that there are unhappy people around and that however happy he may be at the time, sooner or later life will show him its claws and disaster will overtake him in the form of illness, poverty, bereavement and there will be no one to hear or see him. But there isn't anyone holding a hammer, so our happy man goes his own sweet way and is only gently ruffled by life's trivial cares, as an aspen is ruffled by the breeze. All's well as far as he's concerned.

'That night I realized that I too was happy and contented,' Ivan Ivanych went on, getting to his feet. 'I too had lectured people over dinner – or out hunting – on how to live, on what to believe, on how to handle the common people. And I too had told them that knowledge is a shining lamp, that education is essential, and that plain reading and writing is good enough for the masses, for the moment. Freedom is a blessing, I told them, and we need it like the air we breathe, but we must wait for it patiently.'

Ivan Ivanych turned to Burkin and said angrily, 'Yes, that's what I used to say and now I'd like to know what is it we're waiting for? I'm asking you, what ? What is it we're trying to prove? I'm told that nothing can be achieved in five minutes, that it takes time for any kind of idea to be realized; it's a gradual process. But who says so? And what is there to prove he's right? You refer to the natural order of things, to the law of cause and effect. But is there any law or order in a state of affairs where a lively, thinking person like myself should have to stand by a ditch and wait until it's choked with weeds, or silted up, when I could quite easily, perhaps, leap across it or bridge it? I ask you again, what are we waiting for? Until we have no more strength to live, although we long to and need to go on living?

'I left my brother early next morning and ever since then I've found town life unbearable. I'm depressed by peace and quiet, I'm scared of peering through windows, nothing makes me more dejected than the sight of a happy family sitting round the table drinking tea. But I'm old now, no longer fit for the fray, I'm even incapable of hating. I only feel sick at heart, irritable and exasperated. At night my head seems to be on fire with so many thoughts crowding in and I can't get any sleep . . . Oh, if only I were young again!'

Ivan Ivanych paced the room excitedly, repeating, 'If only I were young again!'

Suddenly he went up to Alyokhin and squeezed one hand, then the other. 'Pavel Konstantinych,' he pleaded, 'don't go to sleep or be lulled into complacency! While you're still young, strong and healthy, never stop doing good! Happiness doesn't exist, we don't need any such thing. If life has any meaning or purpose, you won't find it in happiness, but in something more rational, in something greater. Doing good!'

Ivan Ivanych said all this with a pitiful, imploring smile, as though pleading for himself.

Afterwards all three of them sat in armchairs in different parts of the room and said nothing. Ivan Ivanych's story satisfied neither Burkin nor Alyokhin. It was boring listening to that story about some poor devil of a clerk who ate gooseberries, while those generals and ladies, who seemed to have come to life in the gathering gloom, peered out of their gilt frames. For some reason they would have preferred discussing and hearing about refined people, about ladies. The fact that they were all sitting in a drawing-room where everything – the draped chandeliers, the armchairs, the carpets underfoot – indicated that those same people who were now looking out of their frames had once walked around, sat down and drunk their tea there . . . and with beautiful Pelageya moving about here without a sound – all this was better than any story.

Alyokhin was dying to get to bed. That morning he had been up and about very early (before three) working on the farm, and he could hardly keep his eyes open. However, he was frightened he might miss some interesting story if he left now, so he stayed. He didn't even try to fathom if everything that Ivan Ivanych had just been saying was clever, or even true: he was only too glad that his guests did not discuss oats or hay or tar, but things that had nothing to do with his way of life, and he wanted them to continue . . .

'But it's time we got some sleep,' Burkin said, standing up. 'May I wish you all a very good night!'

Alyokhin bade them good night and went down to his room, while his guests stayed upstairs. They had been given the large room with two old, elaborately carved beds and an ivory crucifix in one corner. These wide, cool beds had been made by the beautiful Pelageya and the linen had a pleasant fresh smell.

Ivan Ivanych undressed without a word and got into bed. Then he muttered, 'Lord have mercy on us sinners!' and pulled the blankets over his head. His pipe, which was lying on a table, smelt strongly of stale tobacco and Burkin was so puzzled as to where the terrible smell was coming from that it was a long time before he fell asleep.

All night long the rain beat against the windows.

一个人需要许多土地吗？

姐姐从城里来乡下看望妹妹。姐姐嫁了个城里商人，妹妹嫁了个乡下农民。姐妹俩喝着茶，谈着天。姐姐得意扬扬地吹嘘她在城里的生活：她的房子多么宽敞，衣服多么时髦，她的孩子打扮得多么漂亮，她吃得多么香，喝得多么美，她怎么乘马车兜风，上剧场看戏。

妹妹听了很生气，就竭力贬低商人的生活，美化农民的生活。

她说：“我可不愿拿我的生活换你那种生活。尽管日子清苦，我们却无忧无虑。你们过得阔气，有时大发其财，但有时亏个精光。常言道：赚钱、亏本是双胞胎。今天百万富翁，明天上街要饭。我们庄稼人要稳当得多。我们肚子里油水少，但是寿命长，我们发不了财，也饿不了肚子。”

姐姐说：“成天同猪牛打交道，肚子能吃得饱？你们不懂得文明，不知道礼貌！不论你们当家的怎样累死累活，一辈子泡在猪粪牛尿里，永远没有出头的日子，你们的孩子也一样。”

妹妹说：“是的，我们干的就是这样的活儿，但日子过得踏实，我们不求人，也不怕谁。你们在城里到处受诱惑：今天太太平平，明天就会碰上魔鬼，引诱你们当家的去赌钱喝酒，嫖妓宿娼，到头来一场空。难道没有这样的事吗？”

当家的巴霍姆这时躺在炕上，听着她们闲聊。

“说得对，”他说道，“我们庄稼人从小种地，脑子从来不胡思乱想。只对一件事烦恼——地太少！要是有足够的土地，别说人，就是魔鬼也吓不倒我！”

姐妹俩喝完茶，又谈了一通衣着打扮，收拾好杯盘，躺下睡觉。

不料魔鬼坐在炕后面，这番话他听得一清二楚。魔鬼感到高兴，因为农民老婆夸奖丈夫，说他要是有了土地，就连魔鬼也不怕。

魔鬼想：“好吧，让我来跟你较量一下。我给你许多土地，就用土地来制服你。”

二

附近住着一个不大富裕的太太。她有一百二十俄亩 ^[1] 地。原来

她跟农民相处得很好，她不欺负他们。后来她雇了一个退伍兵来当管家，他动不动就要罚农民款。尽管巴霍姆小心翼翼，还是常常出事，不是马冲进燕麦地，就是牛闯到花园里，再不就是牛犊践踏草地，他就只好被罚款。

巴霍姆付了罚款，就回家打骂老婆孩子。一个夏天，巴霍姆吃了这个管家许多苦。等到牲口圈起来过冬，他才放下心来，虽然得多费点儿饲料，但不用担惊受怕。

冬天，听说太太要出卖土地，大路上一家客店的老板想把它买下来。农民们听了都很恐慌。他们想：“要是客店老板买下这块地，他罚起款来一定比太太更厉害。我们不能没有这块地，我们都靠它过活。”农民们就一起来到太太那里，要求她别把地卖给客店老板而卖给他们，他们愿意多出点儿钱。太太答应了。农民们商量由村社买下整块土地。他们商量了一次又一次，但始终没有谈成。原来是魔鬼在其中作怪，使他们的意见不能统一。最后农民们决定各人根据自己的力量各买各的，太太也答应了。巴霍姆听说邻居向太太买了二十俄亩地，太太答应先收一半钱，其余一半一年后再付。巴霍姆很羡慕，想：“地都被买光了，弄得我一无所有。”他就同妻子商量。

他说：“大家都在买地，我们也得买十来俄亩。要不管家动不动就罚款，我们没法儿过日子。”

他们考虑怎样设法买地。他们有一百卢布存款，卖掉一匹马驹和一半蜜蜂，把儿子抵押出去当雇工，再向连襟借点儿钱，这样就能凑满一半地价。

巴霍姆凑齐钱，看中一块地，有十五俄亩，带一片小树林，就去同太太谈。他们谈成了这笔买卖，拍了板，付了定金。他们又进城，把地契过了户，付了一半款子，其余一半两年内付清。

这样，巴霍姆就有了自己的土地。他借了种子，播在他买来的土地上。庄稼长得很好。一年之内他就付清了太太的欠款，还了连襟的债。巴霍姆从此成了土地的主人：他耕种自己的地，在自己的地上割草，在自己的地上伐木，在自己的地上放牧牲口。不论翻耕自己的土地，还是观赏自己的作物或者草地，巴霍姆总是心花怒放。他总觉得他土地上的草长得特别茂盛，花开得格外美丽。以前他走过这片土地，觉得它同别的土地一样，但现在却觉得它与众不同。

三

巴霍姆这样过着日子，感到心满意足。只要邻居不来糟蹋他的庄稼和草地，就一切称心如意了。他恳求他们，但是没有用：一会儿牧人把牛放到他的草地上，一会儿夏天夜里放牧的马闯进他的庄稼地。

巴霍姆总是把牲口赶走，原谅主人。他一直忍着不去告状，但后来实在受不了了，就告到乡里。他知道邻居这样做并不是有意的，而是因为土地太少，但又想：“也不能听任不管，这样下去他们会把地糟蹋光的。得教训教训他们。”

他一次一次上法院告状，法院罚一两个农民赔偿。邻居们对巴霍姆就怀恨在心，一再故意糟蹋他的地。有一天夜里他来到树林里，看见有十棵椴树被砍倒剥去树皮。巴霍姆来到树林里，看见有样东西白乎乎的。他骑马跑近一看，地上横着几棵椴树，旁边露出几个树桩。要是只砍去边上几棵倒也罢了，可是那坏蛋竟砍个精光。巴霍姆看了大为生气：“哼，我要知道是谁干的，我就找他算账。”他想来想去，断定：“不是别人，准是谢苗。”他走到谢苗家去找，什么也没有找到，两人只对骂了一通。他告到法院，谢苗被传去审问。法院一再审查，谢苗进行辩解，也没有找到罪证。巴霍姆越发生气，他跟乡长、法官都吵了嘴。

“你们包庇小偷。要是你们大公无私，就不会开脱小偷了。”

巴霍姆跟法官和左邻右舍都吵了嘴。有人威胁要烧他的房子。巴霍姆的地虽然多了，但他的日子却更加难过。

当时盛传有许多人迁移到新的地区去。巴霍姆想：“我可不用离开我的土地，要是有人离开这儿，我们的地盘可以宽广些。我会把他们的地弄到手，把我的农庄扩大，这样日子就会更舒坦。要不总觉得土地太少。”

一天，巴霍姆坐在家，来了一个过路的农民。巴霍姆留他在家过夜，给他饭吃，同他谈天，问他从什么地方来。农民说，他从伏尔加河下游来，他在那里当雇工。谈着谈着，农民说，有许多人迁移到那里，他们就在那里定居，加入村社，每人分到十俄亩地。

他说：“那边的地很肥，种下黑麦，麦秆长得比马背还高，可茂盛了，五把就可以扎一大捆。有个农民很穷，去的时候只有一双手，如今已有六匹马、两头牛了。”

巴霍姆心动了。他想：“既然有好日子可过，何必在这里受穷？我把这里的地和房子都卖掉，到那边另起炉灶，大干一番。挤在这小地方真是活受罪。不过我得亲自去了解了解。”

他在初夏动身，乘轮船沿伏尔加河到萨马拉，然后步行四百俄里[2] 到达目的地。情况果然如此。农民的地很多，每人分到十俄亩，他们高高兴兴加入村社。谁要是有钱，除了份地外还可以买地，最好的地每俄亩只要三卢布，要多少可以买多少！

巴霍姆把情况了解清楚后，秋天回家把东西变卖一空。他带点儿

赚头卖掉土地，又卖掉房子和牲口，退出村社。开春就全家搬到了新地方去。

四

巴霍姆带着一家人来到新地方，参加了一个大村的村社。他招待村社长辈喝酒，弄到了各种证件。村社接受巴霍姆入社，分给他五十俄亩份地，分在几个地方，牧场是公用的。巴霍姆盖了房子，养了牲口。单是从村社分到的地就比原来的多两倍，而且都是种庄稼的沃土。日子过得比原来好十倍。饲料也很充裕，牲口要养多少就可以养多少。

巴霍姆在这里安顿下来，感到称心如意，但定居后，又觉得土地不够。第一年，巴霍姆在份地上种小麦，收成很好。他种小麦来了劲，但觉得地不够。刚种过的地不宜立刻再种。当地人在熟荒地和休闲地上种小麦，种了一两年就让土地休闲，长野草。这种地要的人很多，不够分配，为此常常发生争吵。有钱的自己种，穷人则把地租给商人，租金用来缴税。巴霍姆想多种些，第二年就去向商人租来一块地，一年为期。他种得更多，收成更好，但那块地离家太远，赶车得走十五俄里。他看到有些农民兼做买卖，自己有农庄，日子过得很阔气。巴霍姆想：“我要是也买点儿私地，办个农庄，就更称心如意了。”巴霍姆开始考虑怎样买私地。

巴霍姆这样过了三年。他租地种小麦，年年风调雨顺，小麦喜获丰收，钱越存越多。这样的日子本可以一直过下去，但他感到麻烦，因为年年得为租地奔走忙碌，什么地方有好地，农民就涌到那里，把地一抢而光。你去晚了，就没有地种。第三年，他同一个商人向农民合买一片牧场，农民已耕了地，可是有纠纷，农民们告到官府，地也就白耕了。他想：“如果那地是自己的，就不用向人打躬作揖，也不会有麻烦了。”

巴霍姆到处打听哪里可以买到私地。他遇到一个农民，向他买了五百俄亩地，那人破产了，所以卖得很便宜。巴霍姆同他讨价还价，谈了半天，最后以一千五百卢布成交，一半付现金。这事差不多已办成，不想有个商人路过他那里喂马。巴霍姆同他一起喝茶，谈天。商人讲到他从遥远的巴什基尔来。他说，他向巴什基尔人买了五千俄亩地，总共才花了一千卢布。巴霍姆就向他详细打听这事。商人说：“不过先得去巴结老人。我花一百卢布买了绸袍、地毯送给他们，再加一箱茶叶，把能喝酒的都请来喝酒。结果我就以每俄亩二十戈比的价钱成交了。”他出示地契说，“地都在河边，上面长满茅草。”

巴霍姆又详细打听了一番。

商人说：“那边的土地一年也走不到头，全是巴什基尔人的。巴

什基尔人像羊一样没有脑子，那里的地几乎可以白拿。”

巴霍姆想：“既然如此，我何必花一千五百卢布去买五百俄亩地，还要欠债！我拿一千卢布到那边可以买到多少地啊！”

五

巴霍姆问清了到那地方的路径。他送走商人就准备动身。他抛下家给妻子照管，自己带了一名雇工出发。他们来到城里，照商人的话买了一箱茶叶、礼品和酒。他们走啊走啊，一连走了大约五百俄里，第七天来到巴什基尔人的游牧地。一切就像商人所说的那样，巴什基尔人临河搭了毡帐篷，住在草原上。他们不种地，也不吃粮。草原上放着成群的牛马。马驹拴在帐篷后面，母马一天两次被牵来喂奶。他们挤马奶，做马奶酒。巴什基尔女人搅马奶酒，做干酪，男人只知道喝马奶酒，饮茶，吃羊肉，吹笛子。他们个个肥肥胖胖，快快活活，整个夏天就像过节一样不干活儿。他们愚昧无知，不懂俄语，但是和蔼可亲。

巴什基尔人一看见巴霍姆从帐篷里出来，就把他团团围住。他们找来一名翻译。巴霍姆对他们说，他是来看地的。巴什基尔人听了很高兴，把巴霍姆领到一个最好的帐篷里，让他坐在地毯上，又给了他羽绒靠枕。他们围坐在四周，请他饮茶，喝马奶酒。巴什基尔人还宰了一头羊，请他吃羊肉。巴霍姆从马车里取出礼品，分送给他们。巴霍姆送了巴什基尔人礼品，又把茶叶分给他们。巴什基尔人很高兴，彼此叽里咕噜地说了一通，然后叫翻译告诉巴霍姆。

翻译说：“他们说，他们喜欢你，我们这里的风俗是尽量让客人高兴，还要回赠礼品。你送了我们礼品，现在你说说，你喜欢我们这里什么东西，我们好给你还礼。”

“我最喜欢你们这里的土地，”巴霍姆说，“我们那里地少，而且种薄了，你们这里地多，而且很肥。这样好的地我还没见过呢。”

翻译翻译了他的话。巴什基尔人又交谈了好一阵。巴霍姆不明白他们在说些什么，但看出他们很高兴，又是叫，又是笑。随后他们安静下来，望着巴霍姆，翻译就说：“他们要我对你说，他们愿意给你土地来回报你的好意，你要多少给你多少。你只要用手点一点，那地就是你的了。”

他们又谈了一会儿，像是在争论什么问题。巴霍姆问他们在争论什么，翻译说：“有人说，土地的事得问问头人，没得到他的许可不行。也有人说，没得到他的许可也可以。”

六

巴什基尔人争论着，突然来了个戴狐皮帽的人。大家都不说话，站起来。翻译说：“这位就是头人。”

巴霍姆立刻拿出一件最好的绸袍送给头人，还给了他五磅茶叶。头人接受了礼物，在首席坐下。巴什基尔人立刻对头人说着什么。头人听着听着，点了点头，告诉他们不用再说下去。然后他用俄语对巴霍姆说话。

“好吧，”他说，“你喜欢什么地方，就拿什么地方。地多的是。”

“我怎么能把要的地都拿到手呢？”巴霍姆想，“总得有个保证啊。要不现在说是我的，以后又把地收回去。”

“谢谢你们的美意，”巴霍姆说，“你们的地很多，我要的不多。不过我要知道给我的地是哪一块。总得量一下，给我定下来。要不死生由命，现在你们这些好人给了我土地，但难保将来你们的子孙不收回去。”

“你说的有理，”头人说，“可以定下来。”

巴霍姆说：“我听说有个商人来过你们这儿，你们也给了他地，还写了契约，我也希望这样做。”

头人懂得他的意思。

“这都不成问题，”他说，“我们这儿有文书。我们到城里去一次，正式订个契约。”

“那么价钱怎么算？”巴霍姆问。

“我们这儿只有一个价：一千卢布一天。”

巴霍姆不懂他的意思。

“一天是多少啊？一天等于几俄亩？”

“我们不会算，”他说，“我们出卖土地用天计算；你一天能绕多少地，这些地就归你，价钱是一千卢布一天。”

巴霍姆感到惊讶，他说：“一天走下来，那地可多啦！”

头人笑起来。

“全部归你！”头人说，“但有一个条件：你要是当天不能回到出发的地方，你的钱就白花了。”

“那我怎么在走过的地方做记号？”巴霍姆问。

“我们将站在你看中的地方，你去绕一圈，随身带一把铲子，你要什么地方，就挖个坑盖上草做记号，我们再从一个坑到另一个坑犁

出一条沟。你要绕多大的圈子，就绕多大的圈子，但日落之前一定要回到出发的地方。你一圈绕下来的地方都归你所有。”

巴霍姆高兴极了。他们决定第二天一早出发。接着大家又谈天，又喝马奶酒，又吃羊肉，又饮茶，直到天黑。他们安排巴霍姆睡羽绒褥子，讲定天一亮就集合，日出前出发，这才各自回家。

七

巴霍姆躺在羽绒褥子上睡不着，心里一直在想：“我要弄到一大块地。我一天可以走五十俄里路。现在日长，五十俄里绕一圈地可多啦。以后我把坏地卖掉，或者让给农民，挑最好的地自己种。我要买两头公牛，雇两名工人。我要种五十俄亩地，其余的养草放牲口。”

“起来吧，到草原上去量地。”他说。

巴什基尔人纷纷起来，聚集在一起，头人也来了。巴什基尔人又喝马奶酒，还要请巴霍姆饮茶，但巴霍姆等不及了。

“要走就走吧，是时候了。”他说。

八

巴什基尔人集合起来，有的骑马，有的坐车，大家出发。巴霍姆跟他的雇工带了铲子，坐上自己的马车上路。他们来到草原上，朝霞刚刚出现。他们爬上一座小丘。大家下了车，下了马，聚在一起。头人走到巴霍姆跟前，用手指着说：“瞧，这片土地都是我们的，一眼望不到边。你随便挑吧。”

巴霍姆眼睛红了：这是一片熟荒地，平得像手掌，黑得像鸦片，洼地上野草丛生，长得齐胸高。

头人摘下狐皮帽放在地上，说：“瞧，这就是记号。你从这儿出发，再回到这儿。凡是你绕一圈走下来的地都归你。”

巴霍姆摸出钱放在帽子上，脱下长袍，只穿一件短袄，收紧宽腰带，把一袋面包揣在怀里，又把水壶挂在腰带上，拉拉靴筒，向雇工要了铲子，准备上路。他反复考虑走哪个方向，觉得到处都是好地。他想：“反正都一样，我朝太阳升起的地方走就是了。”他面对太阳站着，活动活动身子，等太阳从天边出来。他想：“不能浪费时间，要趁凉快赶路。”等太阳从地平线一出来，巴霍姆就背起铲子向草原走去。

巴霍姆走得不快不慢。他走了一俄里光景停下来站住，挖了一个坑，盖上草皮，这样醒目些。接着又向前走。他活动活动身子，加快脚步。他走了一段路，又挖了一个坑。

巴霍姆回头望了望。小丘在阳光下看得清清楚楚，人们站在那里，马车的轮子闪闪发亮。巴霍姆估计他已走了五俄里。他感到热，脱下短袄搭在肩上，继续往前走。又走了五俄里的样子。天气更热了。他望望太阳，已是吃早饭的时候。

“已经走了一程 [3]，”巴霍姆想，“不过一天能走四程路，回去还早。让我把靴子脱掉。”他坐下来脱下靴子挂在腰带上，继续走路。现在比较轻松了。他想：“让我再走五俄里，然后往左拐。这地方太好了，放弃可惜。越往前，地越好。”他又一直走过去。他回头一看，小丘隐约可见，小丘上的人像黑蚂蚁，还有一样东西在发亮。

巴霍姆想：“是啊，这个方向已走了不少路，得拐弯了。可把我渴死了，真想喝点儿水。”他停下来，挖了个更大的坑，盖上草皮，解下水壶，喝了个够，就陡然向左拐弯。他走啊走，草长得更高，天更热了。

巴霍姆走累了。他望望太阳，已是吃午饭的时候。他想：“好吧，让我歇会儿。”巴霍姆收住脚步，蹲下来。他吃了点儿面包，又喝了点儿水，但没有躺下。他想：“我一躺下就会睡着的。”他坐了一会儿，继续往前走。起初走得还轻松，因为吃了点儿东西，添了力气。天气越来越热，他直想打瞌睡，但他没有停下来，心里想，忍耐一时，享福一世。

他朝这个方向又走了许多路，正想向左拐，忽然看见一片水洼地，觉得放弃可惜。他想：“这里种亚麻很好。”他又一直向前走去。他走过水洼地，在那边挖了一个坑，拐了弯。巴霍姆回头望望小丘，那边热得雾气弥漫，仿佛空气也在颤动，隐约看得见小丘上的人，离他大约有十五俄里。巴霍姆想：“哦，那两边走得够多了，这边得少走些。”他加快脚步朝第三个方向走去。他望望太阳，太阳已到中

天，可第三个方向还只走了两俄里。距离出发的地方仍有十五俄里。他想：“不行，虽然这样我会弄到一块斜形地，但是必须笔直赶回去。我不要更多的地，现在已经很多了。”巴霍姆急忙挖了一个坑，拐弯笔直向小丘走去。

九

巴霍姆一直向小丘走去。他汗流浹背，两脚划破，浑身瘫软。他想歇一会儿，但是不能，日落之前要赶不回去的。太阳不等人，越来越往下沉，往下沉。他想：“哦，我是不是要的太多了？会不会来不及？”他往前望望小丘，望望太阳：离出发点很远，而太阳离地平线却不远了。

巴霍姆一直走着，越来越吃力，但仍不断加快脚步。他走啊走啊，离终点还是很远。他小跑起来。他抛下短袄、靴子、水壶和帽子，只拿着铲子当拐杖。他想：“唉，我太贪心，这下子全完了。日落以前我跑不到了。”他心里发慌，更加上气不接下气。巴霍姆跑得浑身大汗，衬衫衬裤都贴在身上，嘴巴发干。他的胸膛好像铁匠铺里的风箱一样拼命喘气，心上好像有一把铁锤在敲打，两腿失去知觉，好像散了架。巴霍姆感到害怕，心里想：“可别累死啊。”

他怕死，但又不愿停下来。他想：“已经跑了这么多，现在停下来，会被人家笑话的。”他跑啊跑啊，越来越接近终点，他听见巴什基尔人在向他大声叫喊，心里更加发慌。他拼出最后的力气向前跑去，太阳已接近地平线，落到迷雾中，它又大又红，像血染了一样，眼看就要落下去了。太阳离地平线很近，他到达出发点也不远了。巴霍姆已看见小丘上人们在向他招手，要他加油。他看见地上的狐皮帽，看见帽子上的钱；他看见头人坐在地上，双手按住肚子。巴霍姆想起了他的梦，同时想：“土地很多，但上帝是不是让我在上面过？唉，我把自己给毁了，我跑不到了。”

巴霍姆望望太阳，太阳已触到地平线，一半已隐没不见，只剩下一半。巴霍姆竭尽全力冲去，两只脚勉强跟上，使自己不致倒下。巴霍姆跑近小丘，天色突然黑下来。他回头一看，太阳已经落山了。巴霍姆大叫一声，想：“我白费力气了。”他想停下来，但听见巴什基尔人还在叫喊。他突然想到，他从低处看太阳已经落下，但从小丘上看太阳一定还没有落下。他拼着最后一口气跑上小丘。小丘上还很亮。巴霍姆跑上去，看见了帽子。帽子前面坐着头人，双手捧腹哈哈笑着。巴霍姆想起了那个梦，他惊叫一声，两腿一软扑倒在地，他的手伸出去够着了帽子。

“啊，真是条好汉！”头人叫道，“你得到了许多土地！”

巴霍姆的雇工跑过来，想把他扶起，但他口吐鲜血，躺在地上死

了。

巴什基尔人叹息不已。

雇工拿起铲子给巴霍姆挖了一个坑，从头到脚有三俄尺 [4] 长，就把他埋了。

人靠什么生活

我们因为爱弟兄，就晓得是已经出生入死了。没有爱心的，仍住在死中。（《新约·约翰一书》，第三章，第十四节）

凡有世上财物的，看见弟兄穷乏，却塞住怜恤的心，爱上帝的心怎能存在他里面呢？（同上，第三章，第十七节）

小子们哪，我们相爱，不要只在言语和舌头上，总要在行为和诚实上。（同上，第三章，第十八节）

爱是从上帝来的，凡有爱心的，都是由上帝而生，并且认识上帝。（同上，第四章，第七节）

没有爱心的，就不认识上帝，因为上帝就是爱。（同上，第四章，第八节）

从来没有人见过上帝。我们若彼此相爱，上帝就住在我们里面。（同上，第四章，第十二节）

上帝就是爱。住在爱里面的，就是住在上帝里面，上帝也住在他里面。（同上，第四章，第十六节）

人若说，我爱上帝却恨他的弟兄，就是说谎话的。不爱他所看见的弟兄，就不能爱没有看见的上帝。（同上，第四章，第二十节）

从前有个鞋匠，他带着老婆、孩子租了农民的一所小房子，住在那里。他没有自己的房子，没有土地，靠做鞋养家糊口。粮食贵，工钱贱，挣得的钱全部吃光。夫妻俩只有一件皮袄，而且这件皮袄也已穿得破破烂烂。鞋匠想买一块羊皮做件新皮袄，为此他已攒了一年多的钱。

到今年秋天，鞋匠已攒了一些钱；老婆箱子里藏着一张三卢布钞票，还有五卢布二十戈比是村里农民欠他的债。

一天早晨，鞋匠打算去村里买羊皮。他在衬衫外面穿上老婆的布棉袄，外面再套一件布长袍，口袋里放着那张三卢布钞票。他折了一根棍子，吃过早饭就动身。他想：“我从农民那里收来五卢布，再加上自己的三卢布，就可以买一块羊皮做新皮袄了。”

鞋匠来到村里，走进一个农民家，农民出去了，他老婆没钱，但答应一星期内叫丈夫送去。他去找另一个农民，那农民指天发誓说他没钱，只付了二十戈比修鞋费。鞋匠想赊一块羊皮，可是卖皮货的信不过他。

“拿钱来，”他说，“皮子随你挑，我可尝过讨债的滋味。”

结果鞋匠一事无成，只收到二十戈比修鞋钱，还有一双旧毡靴，那是一个农民要他拿回去用皮子码边的。

鞋匠垂头丧气，拿二十戈比全喝了伏特加，空着一双手回家。早晨，鞋匠感到寒冷彻骨，但喝了点儿酒，不穿皮袄也还暖和。鞋匠走大路回家，一手拿棍子敲着冰冻的地面，一手摇摇晃晃提着毡靴，嘴里自言自语：“我不穿皮袄也挺暖和。一杯酒下肚，浑身发热，皮袄都用不着了。我现在高高兴兴回家去。嗨，我就是这样一个人！有什么可烦恼的？没有皮袄照样活下去。我一辈子也用不着皮袄，可是老太婆会不高兴的。再说，你整天给人干活儿，却一个钱也拿不到，总叫人生气。哼，你要是不拿钱来，我就摘你帽子，真的，摘你帽子。要不这像什么话？一次只给你二十戈比！哼，二十戈比能干什么？只能喝一盅。他说他手头紧。你手头紧，我就不紧？你有房子，有牲口，什么都有。你有自己种的粮，可我得花钱买粮吃。不论怎么说，我光买面包每星期就得三卢布。我回去，家里没有面包，又得掏出一个半卢布去买。所以你得把欠的钱还我。”

这时鞋匠来到大路转角处的一座小教堂旁。他看见教堂那边有个白乎乎的东西。天已黑下来，鞋匠仔细看了半天，也看不清究竟是什么。他想：“石头吗？这里没有这样的石头。牲口吗？又不像牲口。脑袋有点儿像人，但怎么会是白乎乎的？再说，人怎么会待在那里？”

他走近些，看清楚了。真稀奇，的确是一个人，但不知是死是活，光着身子坐在那里，身子靠在教堂墙上，一动不动。鞋匠很害怕，心里想：“准是谁杀了他，剥去衣服，把他扔在这里。我要是再走近点儿，就脱不了干系啦。”

鞋匠从旁边绕过去，走到教堂后面就看不见那个人了。他走过教堂，回头一看，那人已不再靠着墙壁，身子在动，仿佛也瞧着他。鞋

匠越发害怕，心里想：“走过去，还是绕开？走过去，难保不出事，谁知道他是什么人？他落到这里准不是什么好事。要是走过去，他跳起来掐我的脖子，我就别想脱身了。即使他不掐脖子，你能拿一个光身子的人怎么办？总不能把自己身上最后一件衣服脱给他吧。上帝保佑！”

鞋匠加快脚步，眼看就要绕过教堂，但他的良心不答应。

鞋匠在路上站住。

“谢苗，你这算什么呀？”他自己对自己说，“人家遭难都快死了，你却害怕，想绕过去。难道你发了大财，怕人家抢你的钱吗？唉，谢苗，这样可不好！”

谢苗转身向那人走去。

二

谢苗走到那人身边，仔细一看，发现他年轻力壮，身上没有伤痕，但是几乎冻僵了。这可把他吓坏了。那人斜靠在墙上，眼睛不看谢苗，样子非常虚弱，连眼皮也抬不起来。谢苗走到他跟前，那人仿佛突然清醒过来，转过头，睁开眼睛，瞧了瞧谢苗。他的目光引起谢苗的爱怜。谢苗把毡靴往地上一扔，解下腰带放在毡靴上，然后脱下长袍。

“你不用说什么！”谢苗说，“快穿上！来！”

谢苗抓住那人的手肘，扶他站起来。那人站了起来。谢苗看到他身体细长、干净，手脚完整，相貌和蔼可亲。谢苗把长袍披在他肩上，可是他的手臂伸不进衣袖。谢苗把他的手塞进衣袖里，给他掩上前襟，束好腰带。

谢苗摘下破便帽，想给那人戴上，但自己头上感到冷。他想：“我的头全秃了，他却有一头长长的鬃发。”于是他又戴上帽子，“还是给他穿上靴子吧。”

谢苗让他坐下，给他穿上毡靴。

谢苗给他穿好衣服说：“好了，兄弟。你活动活动身子，暖和暖和。别的不我就管了。你能走吗？”

那人站在那里，温柔地瞧着谢苗，但说不出话来。

“你怎么不说话？总不能在这里过冬啊。得到有人家的地方去。喏，把我的棍子拿去，你身子虚，就拄着棍子走。打起精神来！”

那人就迈开步子。他走得挺轻松，没有落后。

他们在大路上走着，谢苗问：“你是哪里人？”

“我不是本地人。”

“本地人我都认识。你怎么会到教堂这儿来的？”

“我不能告诉你。”

“是不是有人欺负你了？”

“谁也没有欺负我。是上帝惩罚我。”

“当然，一切都是上帝的旨意，但你总得找个地方安顿啊。你要上哪儿去？”

“我都无所谓。”

谢苗听了觉得奇怪。那人不像个泼皮，说话也挺温和，可自己的事却绝口不谈。谢苗想：“天下什么怪事没有啊。”接着就对他说：“好吧，你就到我家去吧，哪怕去暖和暖和身子也好。”

谢苗向家里走去，陌生人跟在他旁边。起风了，谢苗穿着衬衫感到冷，他已酒意全消，身体都快冻僵了。他走着，吸着鼻子，掩紧身上的女短袄，想：“哼，买皮袄，买皮袄，回来连长袍都没有了，还带回一个光身男子。玛特廖娜准会不高兴的！”一想到玛特廖娜，谢苗就很担忧。他望望陌生人，记起那人在教堂旁的目光，心里感到一阵温暖。

三

谢苗的妻子一早就料理好家务。她劈了柴，打了水，让孩子们吃饱，自己也吃了点儿东西，坐着想心事。她在考虑，面包今天做还是明天做？家里还剩有一大块面包。

她想：“谢苗要是在那里吃了中饭，晚饭就吃不了多少，面包就够明天吃了。”

玛特廖娜反复掂着那块面包的重量，想：“今天不做面包吧。面粉只够烤一炉面包了，我们得熬到星期五。”

玛特廖娜收拾好面包，坐到桌子旁给丈夫补衬衫。她一面补，一边想着丈夫，不知他会买一块怎样的羊皮回来。

“他可别被卖皮的骗了。我男人实在是个老实人。他从来不骗人，可是连小孩子都会让他上当。八卢布不是个小数目，可以做一件好皮袄。就算不是熟皮，也总是一件皮袄。去年冬天没有皮袄可难过啦！去河边不行，去哪儿都不行。他出门把衣服都穿走，我就没有衣服穿了。他今天出门不算早，但也该回来了。我这个老头子总不会去

喝酒吧？”

玛特廖娜刚想到这里，台阶上就响起吱吱嘎嘎的声音，有人走进来。她把针插好，看见进来的有两个人：谢苗和一个汉子，那汉子光着头，脚上却穿着毡靴。

玛特廖娜立刻闻到丈夫身上酒气熏天。她想：“哼，真的喝过酒了。”她看见他身上没有穿长袍，只有一件女短袄，空着一双手，一声不吭，显出一副畏畏缩缩的样子，她的心都凉了。她想：“他准是把钱都喝光了，同这种浪荡汉鬼混，还把他带回家来。”

玛特廖娜让他们走进屋，自己也跟着进去。她发现这个陌生人年纪很轻，瘦瘦的，身上穿着他们家的长袍。长袍里没有衬衫，头上没戴帽子。他一进来，就垂下眼睛，一动不动地站着。玛特廖娜想，看来不是个正经人，这么鬼鬼祟祟的。

玛特廖娜皱起眉头，走到灶边，冷眼看他们怎么样。

谢苗摘下帽子，规规矩矩地坐到长凳上。

“哎，玛特廖娜，”谢苗说，“给我们吃晚饭吧！”

玛特廖娜低声嘀咕着。她一动不动地站在灶旁，一会儿看看这个，一会儿望望那个，不住地摇头。谢苗看到老婆不高兴，但他无可奈何。他装作没注意，拉起陌生人的手说：“坐吧，兄弟，我们吃饭吧。”

陌生人在长凳上坐下。

“怎么，饭还没做吗？”

玛特廖娜火冒三丈。

“做了，可不是为你做的。我看你是喝糊涂了。你出去买皮袄，可回来连长袍也没有了，还带来一个光身子的无赖。我这儿没有你们酒鬼吃的饭！”

“够了，玛特廖娜，别胡说八道！你得先问问他是个什么人……”

“你说说，钱到哪儿去了？”

谢苗伸手到长袍口袋里，掏出钞票，把它们摊开来。

“钱在这里，特里丰诺夫没给钱，他答应明天给。”

玛特廖娜特别生气的是，他没有买皮袄，把最后一件长袍给了一个光身子的人，还把他领回家来。

她一把抓住桌上的钞票，把它们藏好，说：“我没有晚饭。光身子的酒鬼太多了，喂不过来。”

“喂，玛特廖娜，别乱说。先听听人家……”

“酒鬼的傻话我可听够了。是的，我当初就不肯嫁给你这个酒鬼。妈妈给我的麻布被你喝掉了，这回买皮袄的钱又被你喝掉了。”

谢苗要向妻子解释他只喝掉二十戈比，他要说明他在哪儿找到这个人，但玛特廖娜不让他插嘴。她喋喋不休地说个没完，连十年前的旧账都翻了出来。

玛特廖娜说着说着，突然冲到谢苗跟前，抓住他的衣袖。

“还我的短袄。我只剩下这么一件衣服，你还要从我身上剥去，穿到自己身上。拿来，癞皮狗，叫你不得好死！”

谢苗从身上脱下短袄，把一个衣袖翻了过来，玛特廖娜一扯，把线脚都扯开了。玛特廖娜抓住短袄套到头上，走到门口。她想出去，但又站住。她怒气冲天，很想发作，但又想知道来的是个什么人。

四

玛特廖娜在门口站住说：“他要是个好人，也不会光着身子，可他连衬衫都不穿一件。他要是干的正经事，你也得说说从哪儿弄来这样一个花花公子。”

“对，我正要告诉你。我在路上看见这个人光着身子坐在教堂旁，完全冻僵了。又不是夏天，怎么能光着身子？上帝让我碰上他，要不他会冻死的。咳，叫我怎么办？天知道他会怎么样！我就把他拉起来，给他穿上衣服，带回家来。你别这样发火，玛特廖娜，罪过啊！我们都是凡人，有一天都要死的。”

玛特廖娜正要破口大骂，但看了陌生人一眼，就不作声了。陌生人坐在凳子边上，一动不动。他的双手放在膝盖上，头垂在胸前，眼睛闭着，眉头皱紧，仿佛喘不过气来。玛特廖娜没作声。谢苗说：“玛特廖娜，难道你心里没有上帝吗？！”

玛特廖娜听见这话，又瞧了陌生人一眼，她的心肠顿时软了下来。她从门边走到灶旁，端出晚饭。她把碗放在桌上，倒了一碗格瓦斯，拿出最后一块面包，又给了陌生人刀和匙子。

“您吃吧！”她说。

谢苗推了推陌生人说：“坐吧，年轻人！”

谢苗切了面包，把它撕碎，吃起来。玛特廖娜坐在桌子角上，一只手托着脑袋，望着陌生人。

玛特廖娜可怜陌生人，对他产生了好感。陌生人也突然高兴起来，不再皱眉头，抬眼望望玛特廖娜，微微一笑。

他们吃完晚饭，女主人收拾好餐桌，问陌生人：“你是哪里人？”

“我不是本地人。”

“你是怎么流落街头的？”

“我不能说。”

“是不是有谁抢劫了你？”

“是上帝惩罚我。”

“你就这样光着身子躺在那儿吗？”

“就这样光着身子躺在那儿，我冻坏了。谢苗看见我，可怜我，把身上的长袍脱下来给我穿上，叫我到这儿来。到了这儿，你也可怜我，给我吃，给我喝。上帝保佑你们！”

玛特廖娜站起来，从窗上取下她刚补好的谢苗的旧衬衫递给陌生人，还找出一条裤子给他穿。

“拿去吧，我看你身上没有衬衣。你穿上，爱睡哪儿就睡哪儿，睡阁楼也行，睡炕也行。”

陌生人脱下长袍，穿上衬衫和裤子，躺到阁楼上。玛特廖娜熄了灯，拿起长袍，爬到丈夫身边。

玛特廖娜拿长袍一角盖在身上躺下来，但是睡不着，脑子里一直想着陌生人。

她想到，最后一块面包让他吃掉，他们明天就没有面包了。她想到，她给了他衬衫和裤子，心里闷闷不乐。可她想到他的微笑，心里便高兴了。

玛特廖娜好久都没有睡着，她听见谢苗也没有睡着，把长袍往他那边拉。

“谢苗！”

“嗯！”

“面包都吃光了，可我没发面。我不知道明天怎么过。是不是去向邻居玛拉尼雅借一点儿？”

“活一天是一天，不会挨饿的。”

老婆又躺了一会儿，不再作声。

“看样子他是个好人，只是干吗不肯讲他的来历？”

“大概不便说吧。”

“谢苗！”

“嗯！”

“我们给人家东西，可是怎么没有人给我们东西啊？”

谢苗不知道怎么回答，他只说：“别啰唆了！”他转了个身，睡着了。

五

第二天早晨谢苗醒来，孩子们还睡着，妻子向邻居借面包去了。那个陌生人穿着旧裤旧衬衫独自坐在长凳上，眼睛向上望。他的气色比昨天好。

谢苗说：“朋友，肚子饿了要吃面包，身子光着要穿衣服。人得养活自己。你会干什么活儿？”

“我什么也不会。”

谢苗感到奇怪，就说：“只要肯学，什么都学得会的。”

“人家都在干活儿，我也要干。”

“你叫什么名字？”

“米哈伊尔。”

“那么，米哈伊尔，你不愿谈自己，这随你的便，但你得养活自己。你要是能照我的话做，我就养你。”

“上帝保佑你，我愿意学。你教我怎么干就行。”

谢苗拿起纱，把它绕在手指上捻。

“你瞧，这事并不难……”

米哈伊尔瞧了一会儿，也把纱绕在手指上捻了起来。

谢苗教他给纱线上蜡。米哈伊尔立刻懂了。谢苗又教他把鬃毛捻到纱线上，怎样上靴子。米哈伊尔也立刻学会了。

不论谢苗教他做什么，他都一学就会。第三天他开始独自干活儿，仿佛做了一辈子的鞋。他干活儿不休息，吃得又少。工作间歇，他不说话，眼睛望着天空。他不上街，不闲聊，也不开玩笑。

只有第一天晚上，玛特廖娜给他吃晚饭，他才微微笑了笑。

六

日子过了一天又一天，过了一周又一周，不觉已过了一年。米哈

伊尔仍在谢苗家干活儿。他的名声传开了：他做的靴子又挺括又结实，谁也比不上。附近一带的人都来找谢苗定做靴子，他的日子越过越富裕。

冬季的一天，谢苗和米哈伊尔正在干活儿，有一辆带铃铛的三驾雪橇向他家驶来。他们向窗外一望，看见雪橇在门口停下，一个汉子从驭座上下来，打开雪橇门。一位老爷身穿皮大衣，走下雪橇。他下了雪橇，走到谢苗家门口。玛特廖娜连忙起来打开门。老爷低下头走进小屋，又挺直身子，脑袋差点儿碰到天花板。他高大的身子把屋角都塞满了。

谢苗站起来鞠了一躬，看到老爷觉得很奇怪。他从没见过这样的人。谢苗自己筋脉毕露，米哈伊尔皮包骨头，玛特廖娜像一片木板，而这位老爷却像来自另一个世界：面色红润，体格魁梧，脖子粗得像公牛。他的整个身体就像用生铁铸成的。

老爷气喘吁吁，脱下皮大衣，坐在凳子上说：“谁是鞋匠老板？”

谢苗走过去说：“是我，老爷。”

老爷对他的跟班吆喝道：“喂，费杰卡，拿皮子来。”

跟班跑进来，拿来一个包裹。老爷接过包裹，把它放在桌上。“解开来。”他说。跟班解开包裹。

老爷用一根手指戳戳皮子，对谢苗说：“喂，听我说，鞋匠，你看见皮子了吗？”

“看见了，”谢苗说，“老爷。”

“那你知道这是什么皮子吗？”

谢苗摸摸皮子，说：“皮子挺好。”

“对，挺好！你这傻瓜还没见过这样的皮子吧。这是德国货，我花二十卢布买来的。”

谢苗吓了一跳，说：“我们哪里见过。”

“对了，一点儿不错。你能用这块皮子给我做一双靴子吗？”

“能，老爷。”

“这就对了。你要明白，你这是给谁做靴子，用的是什么皮子。我要你替我做一双靴子，穿上一年不走样、不开线。你能，就拿去裁；你不能，就别动。我把丑话说在前头：要是不到一年靴子开线、走样，我叫你坐班房；要是穿上一年不走样、不开线，我给你十卢布工钱。”

谢苗害怕了，不知道怎样回答。他回头瞧瞧米哈伊尔，用手肘推推他，低声问：“接不接？”

米哈伊尔点点头，说：“接。”

谢苗听了米哈伊尔的话，同意做一双一年不走样、不开线的靴子。

老爷唤来跟班，脱下左脚的靴子，伸直腿。

“给我量尺寸！”

谢苗缝了一个十俄寸 [1] 长的纸样，把它抚平，又跪下来，在围裙上仔细擦了擦手，以免弄脏老爷的袜子，这才动手量尺寸。谢苗量了鞋底，量了脚背，再量小腿肚，可是纸不够大。他的小腿肚粗得像圆木。

“注意，靴筒不要做得太紧。”

谢苗又缝了一个纸样。老爷坐着，动动穿着袜子的脚趾，环顾屋里的人。他看见米哈伊尔。

“这人是谁啊？”他问。

“他是我这里的师傅，靴子由他给您做。”

“留神啊，”老爷对米哈伊尔说，“记住，要一年穿不坏。”

谢苗回头看了看米哈伊尔，看见米哈伊尔根本不瞧老爷，却盯着老爷后面的角落，仿佛盯着什么人。米哈伊尔望着，望着，突然微微一笑，容光焕发。

“傻瓜，你龇牙咧嘴干什么？你还是留点儿神，到时候把靴子做好。”

米哈伊尔说：“到时候一定做好。”

“那就对了。”

老爷穿上靴子，掩上皮袄，向门口走去。他忘了弯弯腰，头在门楣上撞了一下。

老爷破口大骂，摸摸脑袋，坐上雪橇走了。

老爷走后，谢苗说：“哼，这可是个人物。这样的汉子棍子也打不倒。门楣都快被他撞倒了，可他却没事。”

玛特廖娜说：“过这样的日子怎么会不胖！这样的树墩连死神也搬不动。”

谢苗对米哈伊尔说：“活儿是接下来了，我们可别给自己惹麻烦。皮子很贵，老爷脾气又大，可不能出岔子。你来吧，你眼睛尖，手艺比我强。这是尺寸，你来裁，我来上靴头。”

米哈伊尔听从他的话，拿起老爷的皮子摊在桌上，折成两半，拿起剪刀动手裁剪。

玛特廖娜走过来，看米哈伊尔裁皮子，对他的裁法感到惊讶。玛特廖娜看惯鞋匠活儿，现在看见米哈伊尔不按鞋匠的规矩裁，而是剪成圆形。

玛特廖娜想说但没有说出来：“看来是我不懂怎样给老爷做靴子。米哈伊尔一定更懂行，我还是不要去干涉他。”

米哈伊尔裁好一双，拿起麻线缝，但不像一般做靴子那样用两根线，而是像做便鞋那样只用一根线。

玛特廖娜看见这情景感到奇怪，但还是没说什么。米哈伊尔则一直缝下去。到吃午饭的时候，谢苗站起来，看见米哈伊尔已用老爷的皮子做了一双便鞋。

谢苗大吃一惊。他想：“这是怎么搞的，米哈伊尔来了整整一年，还从未出过岔子，这回竟会闯下这样大的祸？老爷要做一双有延条的皮靴，他却做了一双不打底的便鞋，把皮子都糟蹋了。如今叫我怎样向老爷交代？这样的皮子上哪儿去找啊？”

他对米哈伊尔说：“朋友，你这是怎么啦？你这是要我的命！老爷定的是一双靴子，可你做了什么？”

他刚在责备米哈伊尔，门环响了起来，有人敲门。他们往窗外一看，看见一个人骑马跑来，正在系马。他们开了门，进来的是老爷的跟班。

“你们好！”

“你好！你有什么事？”

“太太派我来取靴子。”

“什么靴子？”

“靴子嘛！我家老爷已用不着靴子了。他归天了。”

“你说什么？”

“他离开你们，还没到家就死在雪橇上。雪橇一到家，我们要扶他下雪橇，可他已像口袋那样倒在雪橇里。他已经死了，身子都硬了。我们好不容易才把他抬下雪橇。太太就派我到这儿来。她说：‘你对鞋匠说，老爷向你们定了一双靴子，还留下皮子，现在他不要靴子’

了，你赶快拿皮子给他做一双死人穿的便鞋。’她还叫我等着，等你们一做好就把鞋带回家。所以我来了。”

米哈伊尔捡起桌上裁剩的皮料卷起来，拿起两只做好的便鞋拍了一下，又用围裙擦了擦，交给跟班。

跟班接过便鞋说：“再见，老板！祝你好运！”

八

又过了一年，两年……米哈伊尔住在谢苗家不觉已是第六个年头了。他还是那样过日子，哪儿也不去，多余的话一句也不说，脸上只出现过两次笑容：一次是女主人第一回请他吃晚饭，另一次是那个老爷来定靴子。谢苗对他这个工人真是再满意不过了。他不再问他从哪儿来，只担心他离开他们。

有一天，他们都在家。女主人正把锅子放在灶上，孩子们在长凳上嬉戏，眼睛望着窗外。谢苗在一个窗口里钉靴子，米哈伊尔在另一个窗口里钉鞋跟。

一个男孩儿从长凳上跑到米哈伊尔旁边，靠在他肩上，眼睛望着窗外。

“米哈伊尔叔叔，你瞧，老板娘带着几个姑娘到我们家来了。有一个姑娘是瘸子。”

男孩儿一说完这话，米哈伊尔就扔下活儿，转身往街上望。

谢苗感到奇怪。米哈伊尔一向不往街上望，现在却伏在窗口望着什么。谢苗也往窗外望了望，果然有一个女人向他家走来，衣服干干净净，手里拉着两个身穿皮袄、头包羊毛围巾的女孩儿。两个女孩儿长得一模一样，叫你没法儿分辨，只是一个女孩儿左腿有毛病，走路一瘸一拐的。

那女人上了台阶，走进门廊，摸到门，抓住把手，打开门。她让两个女孩儿走在前头，自己跟着走进屋里。

“你好，老板！”

“请进。有什么事啊？”

那女人在桌旁坐下。两个女孩儿伏在她的膝上，她们看到陌生人有点儿害怕。

“想给这两个姑娘做两双春天穿的皮鞋。”

“行，没问题。我们没有做过这样小的鞋，但我们能做。有延条的，没延条的，都行。我们这位米哈伊尔师傅手艺可好啦。”

谢苗回头望了望米哈伊尔，看见他放下活计坐在那里，眼睛盯住两个小姑娘。

谢苗觉得米哈伊尔很怪。他想，这两个姑娘确实长得不错：黑眼睛，红脸颊，胖鼓鼓的，她们身上的皮大衣也挺漂亮。但谢苗不明白，米哈伊尔为什么这样盯着她们，仿佛认识她们似的。

谢苗感到困惑不解。他同那女人讲价钱，讲好价钱，动手量尺寸。女人把瘸腿的女孩儿抱到膝上，说：“你替这姑娘量两个尺寸；给这只跛脚做一只鞋，给这只好脚做三只鞋。她们俩的脚一样大。她们是双胞胎。”

谢苗量了尺寸，指着瘸腿的姑娘说：“她怎么会弄成这样？这么好看的姑娘。生下来就是这样的吗？”

“不，是她母亲把她压坏的。”

玛特廖娜想知道那女人是谁，姑娘们又是谁的孩子，就问：“那你不是她们的母亲吗？”

“老板娘，我不是她们的母亲，也不是亲戚，我完全是外人，只是领养了她们。”

“她们不是你自己的孩子，你却这样疼她们。”

“我怎能不疼她们呢？是我用自己的奶把她们喂大的。我自己有过一个孩子，可是上帝把他召去了，我疼他还不如疼她们呢。”

“那她们到底是誰的孩子啊？”

九

那女人就把事情从头到尾讲了一遍：

“大概六七年前吧，她们的父母在一个星期里相继去世。星期二刚葬了父亲，星期五母亲也死了。父亲在这两个孤儿出世前三天就死了，母亲生下她们连一天也没有活满。当时我跟丈夫住在乡下种庄稼，跟他们是邻居，两家门挨着门。她们的父亲一个人在树林里干活儿。那一天一棵树倒下来，把他拦腰压住，内脏都压了出来。他被抬到家里，就把灵魂交给了上帝。他老婆就在那个星期生下双胞胎，就是这两个姑娘。贫穷，孤独，上无老，下无小。她孤独地生下孩子，孤独地死去。

“第二天早晨我去看望邻居，走进小屋，她这个可怜人已经僵了。她死的时候身子把这个姑娘压住。她就这样把她的一条腿压坏了。乡亲们走来，把她洗干净，换上衣服，装进棺材，把她埋了。都是好人帮的忙。只留下两个没爹没娘的娃娃。怎么办？当时村里只有

我一人奶娃娃，我正在喂养我那才八个星期的头生儿。我就把她们暂时带回家。庄稼人聚在一起，反复商量拿她们怎么办。他们对我说：‘玛丽亚，你先把这两个娃娃带回家去，我们再想想办法。’我用奶先喂没病的那个娃娃，却不喂腿被压坏的娃娃，我想她恐怕活不成了。但后来又想，怎么能亏待那个小东西呢？我也可怜她，我就一人喂三个——自己的一个再加上这两个！我当时年轻力壮，吃得又好。上帝开恩，奶汁多得直往外流。我常常同时喂两个，让第三个等着。等两个喂饱了，再喂第三个。上帝保佑，我把这两个喂大了，可自己那一个不满两岁就死了。上帝从此没再给我孩子，不过我们的日子越过越宽裕。现在，我丈夫在磨坊干活儿，工钱多，日子过得挺好，可我们没有自己的孩子。要是没有这两个姑娘，我真不知道日子怎么过！叫我怎能不疼她们呢？她们是我的心头肉！”

女人一手搂住瘸腿的姑娘，一手擦着脸上的眼泪。

玛特廖娜叹了口气，说：“常言说得好，没有爹娘还能过，没有上帝无法活。”

她们这样谈了一会儿，那女人站起来走了。主人两口子送她走，又回头望望米哈伊尔，只见米哈伊尔双手放在膝盖上，仰天微笑着。

十

谢苗走到他跟前说：“米哈伊尔，你怎么啦？”

米哈伊尔从长凳上站起来，放下活计，解下围裙，向主人两口子鞠躬说：“当家的，请你们饶恕我。上帝已经饶恕了我，你们也饶恕我吧。”

主人两口子看见米哈伊尔身上发出一道光。谢苗站起来，向米哈伊尔鞠了一躬说：“米哈伊尔，我知道你不是一个凡人，我不能留你，我也不能盘问你。只是请你告诉我：为什么当我发现你，把你领回家时，你神情忧郁，等我老婆给你端来了晚饭，你对她一笑，从此你就变得高兴了？为什么后来老爷来定做靴子，你又笑了一次，而且从此变得更开心？现在，那女人带了两个姑娘来，你第三次笑了，而且容光焕发，精神振奋。告诉我，米哈伊尔，为什么你身上会发光，而且笑了三次？”

米哈伊尔回答说：“我身上发光，那是因为上帝惩罚我，如今上帝饶恕我了。我笑了三次，因为我必须懂得上帝的三个道理，现在都懂了。那天你妻子可怜我，我懂得了第一个道理，因此第一次笑了。后来富人来定做靴子，我懂得了第二个道理，因此第二次笑了。现在我看见两个姑娘，我懂得了第三个道理，也就是最后一个道理，因此第三次笑了。”

谢苗又问：“告诉我，米哈伊尔，上帝为什么要惩罚你，上帝的那三个道理是什么。”

米哈伊尔说：“上帝惩罚我，因为我不听他的话。我原是天上的天使，但我不听上帝的旨意。

“两个娃娃就离开奶头。死人横在床上，压住了一个娃娃，把她的一条腿压坏了。我升到村庄上空，想把产妇的灵魂带给上帝，可是一阵风吹来把我的翅膀吹落，她的灵魂就单独去见上帝，而我就落到大路旁的地上。”

十一

谢苗和玛特廖娜这时才明白他们收留的人是谁，跟他们住在一起的人是谁，他们又惊又喜，不禁哭了起来。

天使说：“我就独自光着身子落在田野里。以前我不知道人们的贫困，不知道饥寒，这下我可成为人了。我肚子饿，身上冷，但不知道怎么办。我看见田野里有一座为上帝盖的教堂，就走到那儿，想在那里安身。教堂锁着，进不去。我坐在教堂后面避风。到了晚上，我又饿又冷，全身疼痛。忽然听见有人沿大路走来，手里拿着靴子，自言自语。我这是变人以后第一次看见一张凡人的脸，这脸使我害怕，我就转过身去。我听见这人在自言自语，盘算冬天用什么御寒，怎样养活老婆孩子。我想：‘我又饿又冷，现在来了一个人，可他只考虑怎样搞到皮袄给自己和妻子御寒，怎样弄到粮食充饥，他是不会帮助我的。’这人看见我皱起眉头，样子更加害怕，他从我身旁走过去。我绝望了。忽然我听见这人走回来。我朝他一看，简直认不出了：他的脸原来死气沉沉，如今变得生气勃勃，我从他脸上认识了上帝。他走到

我跟前，给我衣服穿，把我领回家。我走进他家，一个女人朝我们走过来，嘴里说着什么。这女人比男人更可怕，嘴里吐出一股死气，憋得我喘不过气来。她想把我赶到冰天雪地里，我知道，她要是把我赶出去，她准会死掉。她丈夫突然向她提到上帝，她的态度顿时变了。她给我们端来晚饭，眼睛瞧着我，我也看了她一眼，她身上的死气已没有了，变得生气勃勃，我又从她身上认识了上帝。

“我记起上帝的第一句话：‘人心里存在着什么。’我知道人心里存在着爱。上帝向我启示他交代的事，我感到高兴，第一次笑了。但我还没懂得另外两个道理。我不懂得人天生缺少什么，以及人靠什么生活。

“我在你们家里住了一年。有人来定做靴子，要能穿上一年不走样、不开线。我瞧了他一眼，忽然看见他背后有我的同伴死亡天使的影子。这个天使，除了我，谁也看不见，可我认识他，并且知道不等太阳落山这个富人的灵魂就会被取走。我想：‘这人要做一双可以穿上一年的靴子，却不知道自已已活不到晚上。’于是我想起了上帝说的另一句话：‘人天生缺少什么。’

“人心里存在着什么，我已知道了。现在我又知道了人缺少什么。人们不知道他们为了自己的肉体需要什么。我又一次笑了。我高兴的是因为看见了我的同伴死亡天使，上帝又向我启示了第二个道理。

“但我还不懂得第三个道理。我还不懂得人靠什么生活。于是我继续等待上帝向我启示最后一个道理。第六年出现了双胞胎姑娘和那个女人。我认出这两个姑娘，知道她们是怎样活下来的。我当时想：‘母亲为了孩子求我不要取走她的灵魂，她说没有爹妈孩子们活不成，我相信了她的话，可是另一个女人把她们喂养长大了。’当这个女人爱惜别人的孩子并且痛哭流涕时，我从她身上看到了活生生的上帝，我懂得了人靠什么生活。我懂得上帝向我启示了最后一个道理并且饶恕了我，我就第三次笑了。”

十二

天使光着身子，全身发光，肉眼无法逼视。他说话的声音越来越响，仿佛这声音不是出自他的嘴，而是自天而降。天使说：“我知道，一切人活着不是靠自私，而是依靠爱。

“做母亲的不知道她的孩子要活下去需要的是什么。那富人不知道他究竟需要什么。谁也不知道，到傍晚他需要活人穿的靴子，还是死人穿的便鞋。

“我变成了人，我活着不是依靠自己的打算，而是依靠一个过路

人和他妻子的爱心，他们怜悯我，爱我。两个孤女能活下来，不是依靠母亲的照顾，而是依靠一个陌生女人心中的爱，她怜悯她们，爱她们。一切人活着不是依靠自己的打算，而是依靠人们心中的爱。

How Much Land Does A Man Need?

An elder sister came from the town to visit her younger sister in the country. This elder sister was married to a merchant and the younger to a peasant in the village. The two sisters sat down for a talk over a cup of tea and the elder started boasting about the superiority of town life, with all its comforts, the fine clothes her children wore, the exquisite food and drink, the skating, parties and visits to the theatre.

The younger sister resented this and in turn scoffed at the life of a merchant's wife and sang the praises of her own life as a peasant.

'I wouldn't care to change my life for yours,' she said. 'I admit mine is dull, but at least we have no worries. You live in grander style, but you must do a great deal of business or you'll be ruined. You know the proverb, "Loss is Gain's elder brother." One day you are rich and the next you might find yourself out in the street. Here in the country we don't have those ups and downs. A peasant's life may be poor, but it's long. Although we may never be rich, we'll always have enough to eat.'

Then the elder sister said her piece.

'Enough to eat indeed with nothing but those filthy pig and calves! What do you know about nice clothes and good manners! However hard your good husband slaves away you'll spend your lives in the muck and that's where you'll die. And the same goes for your children.'

'Well, what of it?' the younger sister retorted. 'That's how it is here. But at least we know where we are. We don't have to crawl to anyone and we're afraid of no one. But you in the town are surrounded by temptations. All may be well one day, the next the Devil comes along and tempts you husband with cards, women and drink. And then you're ruined. It does happen, doesn't it?'

Pakhom, the younger sister's husband, was lying over the stove listening to the women's chatter.

'It's true what you say,' he said. 'Take me. Ever since I was a youngster I've been too busy tilling the soil to let that kind of nonsense enter my head. My only grievance is that I don't have enough land. Give me enough of that and I'd fear no one – not even the Devil himself!'

The sisters finished their tea, talked a little longer about dresses, cleared away the tea things and went to bed.

But the Devil had been sitting behind the stove and had heard everything. He was delighted that a peasant's wife had led her husband to boast that if he had enough land he would fear no one, not even the Devil. 'Good!' he thought. 'I'll have a little game with you. I shall see that you have plenty of land and that way I'll get you in my clutches!'

Not far from the village lived a lady with a small estate of about three hundred acres. She had always been on good terms with the peasants and had never ill-treated them. But then she had taken on an old soldier to manage her estate and he proceeded to harass the peasants by constantly imposing fines. No matter how careful Pakhom was, one of his horses might stray into the lady's oats, or a cow might sometimes wander into her garden, or some calves might venture out on to her meadows. Every time this happened he would have to pay a fine.

Pakhom would pay up and then he would go and swear at his family and beat them. All that summer Pakhom had to put up with a great deal from that manager, so he welcomed winter when it came and his cattle had to be kept in the shed: although he begrudged the fodder, at least he wouldn't have to worry about them straying.

That winter word got round that the lady wanted to sell some of her land and that the innkeeper on the highway was trying to agree on a price with her. The peasants took this news very badly. 'If that innkeeper gets his hands on that land he'll start slapping even more fines on us than that manager. But we can't survive without it, we all depend on it for our living.'

So a few peasants, in the name of the village commune, begged the lady not to sell any of her land to the innkeeper and to let them buy it, offering her a better price. The lady agreed. Then the members of the commune thought of buying the whole estate. They met once, they met twice, but no progress was made: the Devil had set them at loggerheads and there was nothing they could agree upon. In the end they decided to buy the land in separate lots, each according to what he could afford. The lady agreed to this as well.

One day Pakhom learned that one of his neighbours was buying about fifty acres and that the lady had taken half payment in cash, allowing the man one year to pay the balance. This made Pakhom very envious. 'They'll buy up all the land,' he thought, 'and I'll be left with nothing.' So he conferred with his wife.

'Everyone's buying land,' he said. 'We must get hold of twenty acres, or thereabouts. If we don't we won't be able to live, what with that manager bleeding us white with fines.'

So they racked their brains as to how they could buy some of the land. They had a hundred roubles saved up, so that by selling a foal and half their bees, by sending one of their sons out to work for someone who paid wages in advance and borrowing from a brother-in-law, they managed to scrape together half the money.

Then Pakhom took the money, chose about thirty acres of partly wooded land and went off to the lady to see if he could strike a deal. He managed to get the thirty acres, they shook hands on it and Pakhom paid a deposit. Then they went into town and signed the deeds, Pakhom paying half cash down and pledging to settle the balance within two years.

And so Pakhom now had land. He borrowed money for seeds and sowed the newly bought land; the harvest was excellent. Within a year he had repaid both the lady and his brother-in-law. Now he was a landowner, in the full sense of the word: he ploughed and sowed his own fields, reaped his own hay, cut his own timber and could pasture his cattle on his own land. Whenever he rode out to plough the land which was now his for ever, or to inspect his young corn and meadows, he was filled with joy. He felt that the grass that grew and the flowers that bloomed were different from any other grass and flowers. Before, when he had ridden over that land, it had seemed the same as any other. But now it was something quite

So Pakhom lived a landowner's life and he was happy. And in fact all would have been well had other peasants not trespassed on his cornfields and meadows. He spoke to them very politely, but they took no notice. Herdsmen let their cows stray on to his meadows, then horses wandered into his corn on their way home from night pasture. Again and again Pakhom drove them out without taking further action, but in the end he lost patience and complained to the District Court. He knew very well that the peasants weren't doing it deliberately but because they were short of land. But still he thought, 'I can't let this go on. Before long they'll have destroyed all I have. I must teach them a lesson.'

So he taught them a lesson in court, then another, making several of them pay fines. Pakhom's neighbours resented this and once again began to let their cattle stray on his land, this time on purpose. One night someone managed to get into Pakhom's wood and felled about ten young lime-trees for their bark. Next day, when Pakhom was riding through his wood, he suddenly noticed something white on the ground. He went nearer and saw tree-trunks lying all around, stripped of their bark, with the stumps lying nearby. 'If he'd only just cut one or two down, but that devil's left me with one tree standing and cleared the rest.' Pakhom seethed with anger. 'Oh, if I knew who did it I'd show him a thing or two!' For a long time he racked his brains and finally concluded, 'It must be Semyon, it can't be anyone else.' So off he went to search Semyon's place, but he found nothing and all the two men did was swear at each other. Pakhom was more convinced than ever that it was Semyon's work and he lodged a complaint. The magistrates sat for ages debating the case and finally acquitted Semyon for lack of evidence. This incensed Pakhom even more and he had a stormy session with the village elder and the magistrates.

'You are hand in glove with thieves,' he protested. 'If you were honest men you wouldn't let a thief like him off the hook.'

As a result Pakhom fell out with the magistrates as well as his neighbours, who threatened to burn his cottage down.

And so, although Pakhom had plenty of leg-room now, he felt that the commune was hemming him in.

Around that time rumours were in the air that many peasants were leaving to settle in new parts of the country. Pakhom thought, 'I don't really need to go away, what with all that land of mine. But if some of the villagers were to go there'd be more room for others. I could buy their land and make my estate bigger. Life would be easier then, but as things are, it's still too cramped here for my liking.'

One day a peasant who was passing through stopped at Pakhom's cottage. They let him stay the night and gave him food. Pakhom asked where he was from and the man replied that he had come from the south, from the other side of the Volga, where he had been working. Then he told how people from his own village had settled there, joined the commune and had been allotted twenty- five acres each. 'The land is so fertile,' he said, 'that rye grows as high as a horse and it's so thick you can make a whole sheaf from only five handfuls! One peasant arrived with a copeck and only his bare hands to work with and now he has six horses and two cows.'

Pakhom was terribly excited by this news. 'Why should I have to scrape a living cooped up here,' he thought, 'when I could be leading a good life somewhere else? I could sell the land and cottage and with the money I'd be able to build myself a house there and start a whole new farm. But here there's no room to breathe and I get nothing but aggravation. I must go and find out what it's like for myself.'

When summer came he was ready and he set off. He went down the Volga to Samara by steamboat, then walked the remaining three hundred miles to the new settlement, which was just as the visitor had described. All the men had plenty of space, each having been allotted twenty- five acres without charge and welcomed into the commune. Anyone who had the money could also buy as much of the finest freehold land as he wanted, at three roubles an acre – there was no limit!

Towards autumn, after finding out all he needed to know, Pakhom went home and started selling up. He sold the land at a profit, his home and all his cattle, resigned from the commune and waited until the spring, when he left with his family for the new settlement.

When he arrived with his family Pakhom managed to get himself on the register of a large village commune, having duly moistened the elders' throats. All was signed and sealed and Pakhom was granted a hundred acres (twenty for each member of his family, in different fields), besides the use of the communal pasture. Then he put up some buildings and stocked his farm with cattle. The allotted land alone was three times as much as at home and it was perfect for growing corn. He was ten times better off here, for he had plenty of arable land and pasturage, and he was able to keep as many cattle as he wanted.

At first, while he was busy building and stocking up, everything seemed wonderful. But no sooner had he settled down to his new life than he began to feel cramped even here. During the first year he had sowed wheat on the allotted land and the crop had been excellent. But when he wanted to sow more wheat he found he needed more land: the other land he had been allotted was not suitable for wheat. In the south wheat is sown only on grass or on fallow land. They sow it for one or two years and then leave it fallow until the land is overgrown with feather-grass again. This type of land was in great demand and there wasn't enough to go round, so that people quarrelled over it. The richer ones sowed their own, whilst the poorer ones had to mortgage theirs to merchants to pay their taxes. Pakhom wanted to sow more wheat, so the following year he rented some fields from a dealer for one year. He sowed a great deal of wheat and had a good crop. But the fields were a long way from the village and the wheat had to be carted more than ten miles. Then Pakhom noticed that some peasant farmers with large homesteads in the neighbourhood were becoming very wealthy. 'What if I bought some freehold land and built myself a homestead like theirs?' he wondered. 'Then everything would be within easy reach.' And he tried to think how he could buy some.

Pakhom farmed the same way for three years, renting land and sowing wheat. They were good years, the crops were good and he was able to save some money. But Pakhom grew tired of having to rent land, year after year, of having to waste his time scrambling after it. Whenever good land came up for sale the peasants would immediately fall over themselves to buy it and it would all be gone before he could do anything: he was never quick enough and so he had no land for sowing his wheat. So in the third year he went halves with a merchant in buying a plot of pasture land outright from some peasants. They had already ploughed it when someone sued the peasants over it and as a result all their work was wasted. 'If it had been my land,' Pakhom thought, 'I wouldn't have been under an obligation to anyone and I wouldn't have got into that mess.'

So Pakhom tried to discover where to buy some freehold land. He came across a peasant who, having purchased some thirteen hundred acres, had then gone bankrupt and was selling the land off very cheaply. Pakhom bargained with him. After much haggling they finally agreed upon fifteen hundred roubles, half cash down, half to be paid at a later date. The deal was all but signed and sealed when a passing merchant called at Pakhom's to have his horses fed. They drank tea together and got into conversation. The merchant said that he was on his way back from the far- off land of the Bashkirs, where he had bought some thirteen thousand acres for a mere thousand roubles. When Pakhom questioned him further the merchant told him, 'All I had to do was give the old men there a few presents – a hundred roubles' worth of silk robes and carpets, a chest of tea, and vodka for anyone who wanted it. I managed to get the land for twenty copecks an acre.' He showed Pakhom the title deeds. 'The land is near a river and it's all beautiful grassy steppe.'

Pakhom continued to ply him with questions.

'There's so much land that you couldn't walk round it all in a year. It all belongs to the Bashkirs. Yes, the people there are as stupid as sheep and you can get land off them for practically nothing.'

'Well,' Pakhom thought, 'why should I pay a thousand roubles for thirteen hundred acres and saddle myself with debt? To think what I could buy with the same money down there!'

Pakhom asked him how to get there and as soon as he had said goodbye to the merchant he prepared to leave. He left his wife behind and set off, taking a workman with him. First they stopped off in town and bought a chest of tea, vodka and other presents, just as the old merchant had advised. Then they travelled for miles and miles until, on the seventh day, they reached the Bashkir settlement. Everything was as the merchant had described: the people lived on the steppe, near a river, in tents of thick felt. They neither ploughed the soil nor ate bread, and their cattle and horses wandered in herds over the steppe. The foals were tethered behind the tents and the mares brought over to them twice a day. These mares were milked and from the milk kumiss was made. The women also made cheese from the kumiss and all the men seemed concerned with was drinking kumiss and tea, eating mutton and playing their pipes. All of them were cheerful and well-fed, and they spent the whole summer idling about. The Bashkirs were very ignorant, knew no Russian, but were kindly people.

The moment they spotted Pakhom, the Bashkirs streamed out of their tents and surrounded their visitor. An interpreter was found and Pakhom told him that he had come about some land. The Bashkirs were delighted and took Pakhom off to one of the finest tents, where they made him sit on some rugs piled with cushions, while they formed a circle and offered him tea and kumiss. Then they slaughtered a sheep and fed him with mutton. Pakhom fetched the presents from his cart, handed them round and shared the tea out. The Bashkirs were delighted. For a while they talked away amongst themselves and then told the interpreter to translate.

‘They want me to tell you,’ the interpreter said, ‘that they’ve taken a great liking to you and that it’s our custom to do all we can to please a guest and repay him for his gifts. You have given us presents, so please tell us if there is anything of ours that you would like so we can show our gratitude.’

‘What I like most of all here,’ Pakhom replied, ‘is your land. Back home there isn’t enough to go round and, what’s more, the soil is exhausted. But here you have plenty and it looks very good. I’ve never seen soil like it.’

The interpreter translated and then the Bashkirs went into a lengthy conference. Although Pakhom did not understand, he could see how cheerful they were, laughing and shouting. Then they all became quiet, glanced at Pakhom and the interpreter continued,

‘I’m to tell you that they would be only too pleased to let you have as much land as you like in return for your kindness. All you have to do is point it out and it will be yours.’

Then they conferred again and started arguing about something. Pakhom asked what it was and the interpreter told him, ‘Some of them are saying they should first consult the elder about the land. They can’t do anything without his permission, but some of the others say it’s not necessary.’

While the Bashkirs were arguing, a man in a fox- fur cap suddenly came into the tent, whereupon they all became quiet and stood up.

‘It’s the elder,’ the interpreter explained.

Pakhom immediately fetched his best robe and presented it with five pounds of tea to the elder, who accepted the gifts and then sat in the place of honour. The Bashkirs immediately started telling him something. After listening for a while the elder motioned with his head for them to be quiet and then spoke to Pakhom in Russian.

‘Well now,’ he said. ‘It’s all right. Choose whatever land you like, there’s plenty of it.’

‘How can I just go and take whatever I like?’ Pakhom wondered. ‘I must have it all signed and sealed somehow. Now they tell me it’s mine, but who knows, they might change their minds?’ So he told them, ‘Thank you for your kind words. Yes, you do have a great deal of land, but I need only a little. However, I would like to be sure which will be mine, so couldn’t it be measured and made over to me by some sort of contract? Our lives are in God’s hands and although you good people are willing to give me the land now, it’s possible your children might want it back again.’

‘What you say is true,’ said the elder. ‘We can have a contract drawn up.’

Pakhom said, ‘I’ve heard that you made some land over to a merchant not long ago, together with the title deeds. I would like you to do the same with me.’

The elder understood. ‘That’s no problem,’ he said. ‘We have a clerk here and we can ride into town and have the documents properly witnessed and signed.'

'But what about the price?' Pakhom asked.

'We have a set price – a thousand roubles a day.'

Pakhom did not understand.

'What kind of rate is that – a day ? How many acres would that be?'

'We don't reckon your way. We sell by the day. However much you can walk round in one day will be yours. And the price is a thousand roubles a day.'

Pakhom was amazed. 'Well, a man can walk round a lot of land in one day,' he said.

The elder burst out laughing. 'Well, all of it will be yours,' he replied. 'But there's one condition: if you don't return to your starting- point the same day, your money will be forfeited.'

'But how can I mark where I've been?'

'We'll all go to whatever place you select and wait until you've completed your circuit. You must take a spade, dig a hole at every turning and leave the turf piled up. Afterwards, we will go from hole to hole with a plough. You may make as large a circuit as you like, only you must be back at your starting- point by sunset. All the land you can walk round will be yours.'

Pakhom was absolutely delighted. An early start was decided on and after talking for a while they drank kumiss, ate some mutton and then had tea. This went on until nightfall. Then the Bashkirs made up a feather- bed for Pakhom and left. They promised to be ready to ride out to the chosen spot before sunrise.

Pakhom lay down on the feather- bed, but the thought of all that land kept him awake. 'Tomorrow,' he thought, 'I shall mark out a really large stretch. In one day I can easily walk thirty- five miles. The days are long now – just think how much land I'll have from walking that distance! I'll sell the poorer bits, or let it to the peasants. I'll take the best for myself and farm it. I'll have two ox-ploughs and hire a couple of labourers to work them. Yes, I'll cultivate about a hundred and fifty acres and let the cattle graze the rest.'

Pakhom did not sleep a wink that night and dozed off only just before dawn. The moment he fell asleep he had a dream: he seemed to be lying in the same tent and could hear someone roaring with laughter outside. Wondering who was laughing like that he got up, went out and saw that same Bashkir elder sitting there, holding his sides and rolling about in fits of laughter. He went closer and asked, 'What are you laughing at?' And then he saw that it wasn't the elder at all, but the merchant who had called on him a few days before and told him about the land. And just as Pakhom asked him, 'Have you been here long?' the merchant turned into the peasant who had come up from the Volga and visited him at home. And then Pakhom saw that it wasn't the peasant, but the Devil himself, with horns and hoofs, sitting there laughing his head off, while before him lay a barefoot man wearing only shirt and trousers. When Pakhom took a closer look he saw that the man was dead and that it was himself. Pakhom woke up in a cold sweat. 'The things one dreams about!' he thought. Then he looked round and saw that it was getting light at the open door – dawn was breaking. 'I must go and wake them,' he thought, 'it's time to start.' So Pakhom got up, roused the workman, who was sleeping in the cart, ordered him to harness the horse and went off to wake the Bashkirs. 'It's time to go out on the steppe and measure the land,' he said. The Bashkirs got up, assembled, and then the elder came and joined them. They drank some more kumiss and offered Pakhom tea, but he was impatient to be off. 'If we're going,' he said, 'let's go. It's time.'

So the Bashkirs got ready and left, some on horses, others in carts. Pakhom went to his little cart with him. They came out on to the open steppe just as the sun was rising. They climbed a small hill (called a 'shikhan' in Bashkir). Then the Bashkirs got out of their carts, dismounted from their horses and gathered in one place. The elder went over to Pakhom and pointed.

'Look,' he said, 'that's all ours, as far as the eye can see. Choose any part you like.'

Pakhom's eyes lit up, for the land was all virgin soil, flat as the palm of one's hand, black as poppy- seed, with different kinds of grass growing breast- high in the hollows.

The elder took off his fox- fur cap and put it on the ground.

'Let this be the marker: this is the starting point to which you must return. All the land you can walk round will be yours.'

Pakhom took out his money, placed it on the cap, took off his outer coat, so that he was wearing only a sleeveless undercoat, tightened his belt below the waist and stuffed a small bag of bread inside his shirt. Then he tied a flask of water to the belt, pulled up his boots, took the spade from his workman and was ready to leave. He could not decide which direction to take at first as the land was so good everywhere. Then he decided, 'It's all good land, so I'll walk towards the sunrise.' He turned to the east, stretching himself as he waited for the sun to appear above the horizon. 'There's no point in wasting time,' he thought. 'And it's easier walking while it's still cool.' The moment the sun's rays came flooding over the horizon Pakhom put the spade on one shoulder and walked out on to the steppe.

Pakhom walked neither quickly nor slowly. When he had gone about three quarters of a mile he stopped, dug a hole and piled the pieces of turf high on top of each other so that they were easily visible. The stiffness had now gone from his legs and he lengthened his stride. A little further on he stopped again and dug another hole.

When Pakhom looked back he could see quite clearly the small hill tyres of the cart- wheels. Pakhom guessed that he had covered about three miles. He was beginning to feel warmer, so he took off his undercoat, flung it over his shoulder and walked another three miles. It was hot, and a look at the sun reminded him it was time for breakfast.

'Well, that's the first stretch completed!' he thought. 'But there are four to a day and it's too early to start turning. I must take these boots off, though.'

So he sat down, took off his boots, stuck them behind his belt and moved on. The going was easy now and he thought, 'I'll do another three miles and then turn left. The land's so beautiful here, it would be a pity to miss out on any of it. The further I go, the better the land gets.' So for a while he carried straight on and when he looked back the hill was barely visible and the people on it looked like black ants; he could just glimpse something that glinted in the sun.

'Well,' thought Pakhom, 'I've walked enough in this direction, I should be turning now. Besides, I'm stewing in this heat and terribly thirsty.' So he stopped, dug a large hole, piled up the turf, untied his flask, drank and then turned sharp left. On and on he walked – the grass was higher here and it was very hot.

Pakhom began to feel tired. He glanced at the sun and saw that it was noon. 'Well,' he thought, 'I must have a little rest.' So he stopped, sat down and had some bread and water. He did not stretch out, though, thinking, 'Once I lie down I'll fall asleep.' After a few minutes he carried on. At first it was easy – the food had given him strength. But by now it was extremely hot and he began to feel sleepy. Still, he kept going and thought of the proverb, 'A moment's pain can be a lifetime's gain.'

He had walked a long way in the same direction and was just about to turn left when he spotted a lush hollow and decided it would be a pity to lose it. 'What a good place for growing flax!' he thought. So he carried straight on until he had walked right round the low-lying meadows, dug a hole the other side, and then he turned the second corner. Pakhom looked back at the hill: it was shimmering in the heat and through the haze it was difficult to see all the people there – they were at least ten miles away. 'Well,' thought Pakhom, 'I've made those sides too long, this one has to be shorter.' So he started the third side, quickening his step. He looked at the sun and saw that it was already half way to the horizon, but he had completed only about one mile of the third side. The starting-point was still ten miles away. 'No,' he thought, 'although it will make the land a bit lopsided I must take the shortest way back. It's no good trying to grab too much, I've quite enough already!'

Pakhom hastily dug another hole and headed straight for the hill.

On the way back Pakhom found the going tough. The heat had exhausted him, his bare feet were cut and bruised and his legs were giving way. He wanted to rest, but this was out of the question – he would never get back by sunset. The sun waits for no man and was sinking lower and lower. ‘Oh,’ he wondered, ‘have I blundered, trying to take too much? What if I’m not back in time?’ He looked towards the hill, then at the sun. The hill was far off, the sun was close to the horizon.

But Pakhom struggled on. Although it was very hard, he walked faster and faster. On and on he went – but there was still a long way to go. He started running and threw away his coat, boots, flask, cap, keeping only the spade which he used for leaning on. ‘Oh dear,’ he thought, ‘I’ve been too greedy. Now I’ve ruined it. I’ll never get back by sunset.’ His fear made him only more breathless. On he ran, his shirt soaking and his trousers clinging to him: his throat was parched. His lungs were working like a blacksmith’s bellows, his heart beat like a hammer and his legs did not seem to be his – he felt that they were breaking . . . Pakhom was terrified and thought, ‘All this strain will be the death of me.’

Although he feared death, he could not stop. ‘If I stopped now, after coming all this way – well, they’d call me an idiot!’ So on he ran until he was close enough to hear the Bashkirs yelling and cheering him on. Their shouts spurred him on all the more, so he summoned his last ounce of strength and kept running. But by now the sun was almost touching the horizon: veiled in mist, it was large and blood- red. It was about to set, but although it did not have very far to sink it was no distance to the starting- point either. Pakhom could see the people on the hill now, waving their arms and urging him on. He could see the fox- fur cap on the ground with the money on it; he could see the elder sitting there with his arms pressed to his sides. And Pakhom remembered his dream. ‘I’ve plenty of land now, but will God let me live to enjoy it? No, I’m finished . . . I’ll never make it.’

Pakhom looked at the sun – it had reached the earth now: half of its great disc had dipped below the horizon. With all the strength he had left Pakhom lurched forwards with his full weight, hardly able to move his legs quickly enough to stop himself falling. He reached the hill – and everything suddenly became dark. He looked round and saw that the sun had set. Pakhom groaned. ‘All that effort has been in vain,’ he thought. He wanted to stop, when he heard the Bashkirs still cheering him on and he realized that from where he was at the bottom of the hill the sun had apparently set, but not for those on top. Pakhom took a deep breath and rushed up the hill which was still bathed in sunlight. When he reached the top he saw his cap with the elder sitting by it, holding his sides and laughing his head off. Then he remembered the dream and he groaned. His legs gave way, he fell forward and managed to reach the cap with his hands.

‘Oh, well done!’ exclaimed the elder. ‘That’s a lot of land you’ve earned yourself!’

Pakhom’s workman ran up and tried to lift his master, but the blood flowed from his mouth. Pakhom was dead.

The Bashkirs clicked their tongues sympathetically.

Pakhom’s workman picked up the spade, dug a grave for his master – six feet from head to heel, which was exactly the right length – and buried him.

What Men Live By

We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. (I John iii, 14)

But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? (I John iii, 17)

My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue: but in deed and in truth. (I John iii, 18)

. . . for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. (I John iv, 7)

He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. (I John iv, 8)

No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us . . . (I John iv, 12)

God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. (I John iv, 16)

If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? (I John iv, 20)

Once there was a shoemaker who had neither house nor land of his own and who lived in a peasant's cottage with his wife and children, supporting them by what work he could get. Bread was expensive but his work was cheap and the little he earned was spent on food for his family. He and his wife had only one winter coat between them and even that was in a sorry state. For the past two years he had been saving to buy sheepskins for a new one.

By autumn he had scraped together a small sum: there was the three-rouble note that his wife kept in a little wooden box, as well as the five roubles and twenty copecks that some of the villagers owed him.

One morning he decided to go to the village to buy the skins. He put his wife's wadded twill jacket over his shirt and over that his own cloth coat. After breakfast he put the three-rouble note in his pocket, cut himself a walking-stick and set off.

'With the five roubles that one of them owes me,' he thought, 'plus the three I already have, I should have enough to buy the sheep skins.'

When he reached the village he stopped at a cottage, but the owner was out. His wife did not have the money, but she promised to send her husband over with it by the end of the week. So he called on another peasant who swore he was short of cash and that all he could manage was twenty copecks that were owing for some boot repairs. And then, when the shoemaker tried to buy the skins on credit, the dealer would not trust him.

'Bring me the money first,' he said. 'Then you can pick whatever skins you like. We all know how hard it is to collect what's owing to us!'

And so the shoemaker did no business that day, apart from twenty copecks for the repairs and a pair of felt boots that needed soling.

All this depressed the shoemaker and after spending the twenty copecks on vodka he set off for home without any skins. Earlier that morning he had felt a sharp nip in the air, but after a few vodkas he warmed up – even though he had no proper winter coat. As he walked down the road, striking frozen clods of earth with his stick in one hand and swinging the felt boots in the other, he started talking to himself.

'I feel quite warm without a coat,' he said. 'I've only had a drop, yet I can feel it rushing through every vein in my body. I don't need any sheepskins! I'm going home, with all my troubles behind me. That's the sort of man I am! Why should I worry? I can survive without a new coat – I won't need one for ages. Only, the wife won't be too happy. But it's really rotten when you do a job and the customer tries to string you along and doesn't pay up. You just wait – if you don't bring me the money I'll have the shirt off your back, I swear it! It's a bit much, what with a measly twenty copecks at a time. What can I do with twenty copecks? Spend it on drink, that's all. You say you're hard up. Well, what about me? You've a house, cattle, everything, but all I have is on my back. You grow your own corn, while I have to go out and buy mine. Whatever happens I must spend three roubles a week on bread alone. By the time I get home there won't be any left and I'll have to fork out another rouble and a half. So, you'd better pay up!

The shoemaker kept rambling on like this until he drew near the wayside chapel at the bend in the road where something whitish just behind it caught his eye. But by now it was growing dark and although he strained his eyes he could not make out what it was. 'There wasn't any stone there before,' he thought. 'Perhaps it's a cow? No, it doesn't look like one at all. From the head it looks like a man and it's all white. But what would a man be doing there?'

He went a few steps closer and could now make it out quite clearly. How amazing! It was a man sitting there, but he could not see if he were dead or alive, and he was naked and quite motionless, his back propped against the chapel wall. The shoemaker was terrified and thought, 'A man's been murdered, stripped naked and dumped. If I go any nearer I might get mixed up in all sorts of troubles.'

And so the shoemaker went on his way. He walked behind the chapel to avoid having to look at him again. After a short distance he turned round and saw that the man was no longer leaning against the wall, but was moving, as if trying to see who he was. The shoemaker felt even more frightened and thought, 'Shall I go back or simply carry on? If I go back something terrible might happen. Who knows what kind of man he might be? I bet he's up to no good. Besides, he might suddenly jump to his feet and start choking the life out of me – and there'd be nothing I could do about it. And if he doesn't throttle me I might get lumbered with looking after him. But how can I help a naked man? I couldn't let him have the last shirt off my back. Please God, help me!'

And the shoemaker quickened his stride. He had almost left the chapel behind when his conscience began to prick him. He stopped in the middle of the road.

‘How could you do such a thing, Semyon?’ he reproached himself. ‘That man might be dying miserably and you’re such a coward you’d leave him there to die. Or have you become so rich all of a sudden that you’re scared stiff he might steal all your money? You should be ashamed, Semyon!’

And he turned round again and went right up to the man.

After a close look Semyon could see that he was young and healthy. There were no bruises on his body: he was just chilled to the bone and terrified. There he sat, leaning forward without looking at Semyon and apparently too weak to raise his eyes. When Semyon was right next to him he suddenly seemed to wake as if from a trance. He turned his head, opened his eyes and looked straight at Semyon. That one look was enough to allay all Semyon’s fears. He threw down the felt boots, undid his belt, laid it over the boots and took off his cloth coat.

Then Semyon took the man under the arms and tried to lift him, but he got to his feet without any help. And then Semyon saw that his body was slender and clean, that his legs and arms bore no trace of any wounds; his face was mild and gentle. Semyon threw his coat over his shoulders, but the man could not find the sleeves, so Semyon guided his arms into them, pulled on the coat, wrapped it around him and fastened it with his belt.

Then Semyon took off his tattered cap, intending to put it on the naked man’s head, but he felt the cold on his own head and thought, ‘I’m completely bald, while he’s got long, curly hair.’ And he put it back on again. ‘It would be better to give him the boots,’ he thought.

So he made the man sit down again and put the felt boots on his feet, after which he said, ‘There you are, my friend. Stretch your legs a bit and warm yourself. Don’t worry, it will all be sorted out later. Now, can you walk?’

The man stood up, looked tenderly at Semyon, but was unable to say one word.

‘Why don’t you say something? Come on, we can’t spend all winter here, we must be on our way. Here, you can lean on my stick if you feel weak. Right, come on!’

And the man started walking – and he walked effortlessly, without lagging behind.

As they went down the road Semyon asked, ‘Where are you from?’

‘Not from these parts.’

‘I thought so – I know everyone round here. But how did you come to be there, by the chapel?’

‘I cannot tell you that.’

‘Did some men attack you?’

‘No, no one harmed me. It was God who punished me.’

‘Well, we are all in His hands. All the same, you must have somewhere to go. Where are you heading?’

‘Nowhere in particular.’

Semyon was amazed. The man did not strike him as a ruffian, he was so softly spoken, yet he revealed nothing about himself. ‘Anything can happen in this world,’ Semyon reflected and he told the man, ‘All right, come home with me, even if it is a bit out of your way.’

As Semyon walked down the road the stranger did not lag behind for one moment, but kept abreast. The wind got up and the cold air crept under Semyon’s shirt. The drink was beginning to wear off and he felt chilled to the marrow.

Sniffing as he went, he wrapped his wife’s jacket tighter around himself and thought, ‘So much for sheepskins! I go off to buy some and all I do is come home without even the old coat on my back, and with a naked stranger into the bargain! Matryona won’t be too pleased about that!’ And the thought of his wife depressed him. But the moment he looked at the stranger he remembered the look he had given him at the chapel and his heart filled with joy.

Semyon's wife had finished her chores early that day. She had chopped the wood, fetched water, fed the children, had a bite to eat herself and had then sat for a long time wondering when she should bake the bread – that same day or the next. There was still one thick slice left.

'If Semyon has his dinner in the village,' she thought, 'then he won't want much for supper and there'll be enough bread for tomorrow.'

She turned the slice over, 'I shan't do any baking today,' she decided, 'there's only enough flour for one loaf. But we can make this last till Friday.'

So Matryona put the bread away and sat down at the table to patch her husband's shirt. As she worked she thought of him buying the sheepskins for the new winter coat.

'I hope the dealer won't swindle him. He's so simple, that husband of mine. He'd never cheat a soul himself and even a little child could trick him. Eight roubles is a lot of money, enough to buy very good sheepskins. Not the best quality tanned ones perhaps, but still good enough for a nice coat. Last winter was so hard without a proper one! I couldn't even go down to the river, couldn't go anywhere. And when he left this morning he took all the warm clothes we have, leaving me with nothing to wear. Now, he didn't leave all that early. All the same, it's time he was back. I hope my old man hasn't gone drinking!'

These thoughts had just crossed Matryona's mind when the front steps creaked and someone came in. Matryona stuck her needle into the shirt and went out into the hall. There she saw two men – Semyon and someone in felt boots and without a cap.

Matryona immediately smelt the vodka on her husband's breath. 'So, I was right, he's been on the drink,' she thought. And when she saw him standing there, empty-handed and with a guilty grin on his face, wearing nothing but the jacket she had lent him, her heart sank. 'He's gone and spent all that money drinking with some good-for-nothing. What's more, he's got the nerve to bring him home.'

Matryona ushered them in and followed them into the living-room. Now she could see that the stranger was a thin young man and that he was wearing her husband's coat. She could see no shirt under it and he had no cap. Once inside he stood quite still and kept looking down. Matryona concluded that he was a bad lot, as he seemed so nervous.

Frowning, she went over to the stove and waited to see what they would do next.

Semyon took off his cap and sat down on the bench as if he had done no wrong.

'Come on, Matryona, let's have some supper!' he said.

Matryona muttered something to herself and stayed quite still by the stove. She kept looking first at one, then the other, shaking her head. Semyon realized that his wife was annoyed, but there was nothing he could do about it. Pretending not to notice, he took the stranger by the arm.

'Sit down,' he said. 'Let's have something to eat.'

The stranger sat on the bench.

'Well, don't you have anything?'

Matryona lost her temper. 'Yes, I do, but not for you. It seems you've drunk your brains away. You went out to buy some sheepskins and back you come without even the coat you left in. What's more, you bring some half-naked tramp back with you. I don't have any supper for a pair of drunkards like you!'

'Now that's enough of your stupid tongue-wagging, Matryona! You might at least ask who he is.'

'And you can tell me what you did with the money.'

Semyon felt in his pocket, took out the three-rouble note and unfolded it.

'Here it is. Trifonov wouldn't give me any money, but he promised to pay up in a day or so.'

Matryona grew even more furious: in addition to not buying the sheepskins, her husband had lent their only coat to some naked stranger. What's more, he'd brought him back home.

She snatched the note from the table and went off to hide it somewhere.

‘I’ve no supper for you,’ she told them. ‘You can’t expect me to feed every naked drunkard.’

‘And you mind your tongue, Matryona. First hear what he has to say . . .’

‘What sense will I get from a drunken fool like him? I was right in not wanting to marry an old soak like you! You sold all Mother’s linen for drink. And then, instead of buying sheepskins you spend the money on drink.’

Semyon tried hard to make his wife understand that all he had spent on drink was a mere twenty copecks and to explain where he had found the stranger. But she would not let him get a word in edgeways, rattling away nineteen to the dozen and even reminding him of things that had happened ten years ago. On and on she went, until finally she dashed over to Semyon and grabbed his sleeve.

‘Give me my jacket back, it’s the only one I have and you took it to wear yourself. Give it back, you flea-bitten dog. May you die of a fit!’

Semyon began taking the jacket off and turned a sleeve inside-out, but his wife tugged so hard that it came apart at the seams. Then she seized it, threw it over her head and made for the door. But then she stopped. Her heart seemed to melt and she felt that she wanted to banish all those spiteful feelings and to find out who that man really was.

As she stood there, quite still, Matryona said, ‘If he were an honest man he wouldn’t be going around without a shirt to his back. And if you’d been doing what you were supposed to you’d have told me where you picked up this fine young fellow!’

‘All right, I’ll tell you. I was on my way home when I saw this man sitting by the chapel, naked and frozen. Now, it’s not the kind of weather to go about naked! God must have led me to him, or he’d have perished. What could I do? Who knows what may have happened to him? So, I made him stand up, clothed him and brought him back here. Please don’t be angry, Matryona, it’s sinful. Don’t forget that we must all die one day.’

Matryona was about to give him a piece of her mind again, but then she looked at the stranger and became silent. There he sat, motionless, on the edge of the bench, his hands folded on his knees, his head drooping on his breast. His eyes were closed and he wrinkled his face as if something were choking him. Matryona still said nothing, but Semyon asked, 'Matryona, is there no love of God within you?'

At these words Matryona glanced at the stranger and her heart suddenly filled with pity. She came back from the door, went over to the stove, took out the supper, placed a cup on the table, poured out some kvass, brought out the last slice of bread and set out a knife and some spoons. Please eat,'she said.

Semyon nudged the stranger and told him, 'Come and sit at the table.'

Semyon divided the bread into small pieces and they started eating. Matryona sat at one corner of the table, her head on her hand, gazing at the stranger. And she was filled with pity and her heart went out to him. Suddenly, his face brightened, the wrinkles disappeared and he looked up at Matryona and smiled.

After supper Matryona cleared the table and began questioning him.

'Where are you from?'

'Not from these parts.'

'How did you come to be by the wayside?'

'I cannot tell you.'

'Who stole your clothes?'

'God punished me.'

'And you were lying there, all naked?'

'Yes, naked and freezing. And then Semyon saw me and took pity on me. He took off his coat, put it over me and insisted I came home with him. You have given me food and drink and shown compassion. God will reward you!'

Matryona got up, took from the window-sill the old shirt of Semyon's she had been patching and handed it to the stranger. Then she found him some trousers.

‘Here, I see you’ve no shirt, so put this on and lie down where you like – up on the sleeping- bench or over the stove.’

The stranger took off the coat, put on the shirt and trousers and lay on the sleeping- bench. Matryona blew out the candle, took the coat and joined her husband over the stove.

Matryona drew the skirts of the coat over herself and lay down. But she did not fall asleep, for she could not get that stranger out of her mind.

When she remembered that he had eaten their last slice of bread and that they would have none for tomorrow, and that she had given him the shirt and trousers, she became terribly dejected. But then, when she recalled his smile her heart leapt up. For a long time she lay awake and she noticed that Semyon was awake too, as he kept pulling the coat up.

‘Semyon!’

‘What is it?’

‘You two have eaten the last slice of bread and I haven’t prepared any more. I don’t know what we’re going to do tomorrow. Perhaps I can borrow some from our neighbour Malanya.’

‘Yes, we’ll get by, we won’t starve.’

Matryona lay silently for a while and then she said, ‘He seems to be a good man, only he doesn’t tell us anything about himself.’

‘I suppose he can’t.’

‘Semyon!’

‘What?’

‘We’re always giving, but why does nobody ever give us anything?’

Semyon didn’t know what to reply. All he said was, ‘Let’s talk about that another time,’ after which he turned over and went to sleep.

Next morning, when Semyon woke up, the children were still asleep and his wife had gone over to the neighbour’s to borrow some bread. Only the stranger was sitting on the bench, wearing the old trousers and shirt and looking up. His face was brighter than the evening before. Semyon said, 'Well, my friend. The belly needs food and the body clothes. We all have to earn a living, so what sort of work can you do?'

'I can't do anything.'

Semyon was amazed and replied, 'If a man has the will he can learn anything.'

'Yes, men work for their living, so I'll work too.'

'What's your name?'

'Mikhail.'

'Well, Mikhail, if you don't want to tell us about yourself that's your affair. But we have to earn our living. If you do as I tell you I'll see you have enough to eat.'

'God bless you! I'll learn how to work, just tell me what to do.'

Semyon took a piece of yarn, wound it round his fingers and twisted it.

'It's not hard, just watch . . .'

Mikhail watched and right away he caught the knack, winding the yarn and twisting it just like Semyon.

Then Semyon showed him how to wax it and Mikhail understood at once. Then he showed him how to draw it through and how to stitch. Again Mikhail immediately understood.

Whatever Semyon showed him he mastered right away and within three days was working as if he had been making shoes all his life. He would work without any let-up and ate very little. Only when one job was finished would he stop for a moment and silently look up. He never went out, only spoke when he really had to, and he never joked or laughed.

And in fact the only time they had seen him smile was on that very first evening, when Matryona had given him supper.

The days passed, weeks passed, and a year ran its course.

Mikhail was still living with Semyon and working for him. The word got round that Semyon's new workman could make boots better and stronger than anyone else. People from all over the district came to Semyon for new boots and he prospered.

One winter's day Semyon and Mikhail were sitting at their work when a three-horse carriage on sleigh runners drove up to the cottage, its bells gaily ringing. When they looked out of the window they saw it had stopped right outside. A boy jumped down from the box and opened the carriage door. A gentleman in a fur coat stepped out, walked up to the front door and climbed the steps. Matryona rushed to fling open the door.

As he came in, the gentleman had to lower his head and then straighten up. But still his head almost touched the ceiling and he filled a whole corner of the room.

Semyon stood up and marvelled at the gentleman: he had never seen anyone like him. Semyon himself was lean, Mikhail was skinny, while Matryona was as thin as a rake. But this visitor seemed like someone from another world: with his full red face and his bull's neck he seemed to be made of cast iron.

He puffed, took off his fur coat, sat on the bench and asked, 'Who is the master bootmaker here?'

Semyon stepped forward and said, 'I am, Your Honour.'

Then the gentleman shouted to his boy, 'Hey, Fedka, bring the leather!'

The boy ran in with a parcel, which the gentleman took and placed on the table.

'Untie it,' he said. The boy untied it.

Then the gentleman pointed at the leather and told Semyon, 'Now, listen to me, bootmaker. Do you see that leather?'

'Yes, I do, Your Honour.'

'Do you know what kind it is?'

Semyon felt it and said, 'It's very good quality.'

'I should say it's good quality! You fool, I bet you've never set eyes on leather like that. It's German and I paid twenty roubles for it.'

Semyon quailed and said, 'Now where would I see leather like that?'

'Yes, where indeed! Could you make me a pair of boots out of it?'

'It's possible, Your Honour.'

'I'll give you possible!' the gentleman shouted. 'Now, see you don't forget for whom you're making them and the quality of the leather you'll be using. I want a pair of boots that will last me a year without losing their shape or coming apart at the stitches. If you can do the job, take the leather and cut it up. But if you can't, you'd better tell me here and now. I'm warning you: if the boots split or lose their shape before the year's out I'll have you clapped in prison. But if they keep their shape and don't split for a year I'll pay you ten roubles.'

Semyon was quite afraid and did not know what to reply. He glanced at Mikhail, nudged him with his elbow and whispered, 'Well, shall I take it on?'

Mikhail nodded as if to say, 'Yes, take it on.'

So Semyon followed Mikhail's advice and undertook to make a pair of boots that would not lose their shape or split for a whole year.

Then the gentleman called the boy over to take off his left boot for him and stretched out his leg.

'Take my measurements!'

Semyon sewed together a strip of paper about seventeen inches long, smoothed it out, knelt down, wiped his hands thoroughly on his apron so as not to dirty the gentleman's sock and started measuring. He took the sole and instep measurements. But when he tried to measure the calf he found that the strip of paper was not long enough – the gentleman's calf was as thick as a log.

'Mind you don't make them too tight in the leg,' he said.

Semyon sewed another piece to the strip of paper, while the gentleman sat wriggling his toes in his sock and surveying the people in the room. And then he noticed Mikhail.

'Who's that over there?' he asked.

‘He’s my master craftsman, he’ll be making the boots.’

‘Now you watch out,’ the gentleman said, ‘remember they have to last a whole year.’

When Semyon turned towards Mikhail he saw that he was not even looking at the gentleman, but staring into the corner, as if someone was standing behind him. Mikhail kept staring until suddenly he smiled and his whole face lit up.

‘What are you grinning at, idiot?’ the gentleman asked. ‘You’d better see to it that the boots are ready on time!’

‘They’ll be ready whenever you want them,’ Mikhail replied.

‘Good.’

The gentleman put on his boots again, then his fur coat, which he wrapped tightly around him, and went to the door. But he forgot to lower his head and banged it against the lintel. He cursed and rubbed it. Then he climbed into the carriage and drove off.

As soon as he had gone Semyon remarked, ‘He’s as tough as nails! You couldn’t kill him with a mallet. Why, he nearly knocked the lintel out and still he hardly felt a thing!’

‘You’d expect him to be strong with the kind of life he leads,’ Matryona said. ‘Death itself couldn’t touch that iron girder!’

‘Well, we’ve taken on the work now,’ Semyon told Mikhail, ‘and I only hope it doesn’t land us in trouble. The leather’s very expensive and the gentleman’s short-tempered, so we’d better not slip up. Your eyes are sharper than mine and your hands are more skilled, so take the measure and start cutting the leather. I’ll sew the vamps later.’

Mikhail obediently took the leather, spread it on the table, folded it in two, took a knife and started cutting.

Matryona went over to watch Mikhail working and was amazed to see what he was doing. Naturally she knew all about boot-making and could see that instead of cutting the leather into the normal shape for boots Mikhail was cutting it into round pieces.

Matryona felt she should point it out, but then she thought,

‘Maybe I don’t understand how a gentleman’s boots should be made. Maybe Mikhail knows best, so I won’t interfere.’

When he had finished cutting Mikhail took some thread and started sewing the pieces together – not with two ends, as he should have done for boots, but with one end, as if for slippers.

Although Matryona was astonished by this as well, she did not interfere and Mikhail carried on sewing until midday.

When Semyon got up and saw that Mikhail had made a pair of slippers from the gentleman’s leather he groaned.

‘I don’t understand,’ he thought, ‘how Mikhail, who’s been with me for a whole year without making one mistake, should now go and make such a dreadful mess of things. The gentleman ordered welted high boots and he’s made slippers without soles and ruined the leather. How can I face the gentleman now? I can’t replace leather of that quality.’

And he told Mikhail, ‘What on earth have you done, my friend? You’ve ruined me! The gentleman ordered high boots and just look what you’ve made!’

And he was just about to give Mikhail a stern lecture when someone knocked hard on the front door with the iron ring. They looked out of the window and saw that someone had ridden up and was tethering his horse. When the door was opened in came the same young boy who had accompanied the gentleman.

‘Good afternoon to you!’

‘Good afternoon. What can we do for you?’

‘The mistress sent me about those boots.’

‘What about them?’

‘Just this: the master won’t be needing them. He’s dead.’

‘What did you say?’

‘He died in the carriage even before we got home. When we reached the house the others came to help him out, but there he lay, slumped like a sack of potatoes. He was already stiff, stone-dead, and we had a real struggle getting him out. So the mistress told me to come back here. “Tell that shoemaker,” she said, “that the gentleman who called and ordered some boots and left the leather won't be needing them and that instead he must make a pair of soft corpse- slippers as soon as he can." She told me to wait until they're ready. So here I am.'

Mikhail collected the offcuts from the table and rolled them up. Then he took the soft slippers he had already made, slapped them together, wiped them with his apron and handed them to the boy, who took them.

'Goodbye, masters! Good luck to you!' he said as he left.

Another year passed, then another, until Mikhail was in his sixth year with Semyon. He lived just as before, never going out, speaking only when he had to. And all that time he smiled only twice – when the old woman had first given him supper and then when the rich gentleman called. Semyon thought the world of his workman and no longer inquired where he was from. His only fear was that Mikhail might leave him.

One day they were all at home and Matryona was putting iron pots into the oven, while the children were scampering along the benches and looking out of the windows. Semyon was stitching at one window, while Mikhail was heeling a boot at the other.

One of the little boys ran along the bench to Mikhail, leant on his shoulder and looked through the window.

'Look, Uncle Mikhail! There's a lady with two little girls. I think she's coming here. One of the girls is limping.'

When the boy said this, Mikhail put down his work, turned to the window and looked out into the street.

Semyon was amazed: Mikhail had never looked out into the street before, but now he was glued to the window and staring at something. Semyon, too, looked out and saw that a well- dressed woman with two little girls in fur coats and thick woollen shawls were in fact coming towards the cottage. The girls were so alike it would have been impossible to tell them apart were it not that one had a crippled left leg and walked with a limp.

The woman climbed the steps, fumbled for the latch and opened the door. She let the little girls in first and then followed them.

‘Good day, everyone!’ she said.

‘Welcome! What can we do for you?’

The woman sat at the table while the girls, feeling shy with all those people in the room, snuggled against her knees.

‘I’d like some leather shoes for the girls, for the spring,’ she said.

‘That’s no problem. Although we’ve never made such small ones before we can do them – either welted or lined with linen. This is Mikhail, my master shoemaker.’

Semyon turned to Mikhail and saw that he had stopped working and was sitting there with his eyes fixed on the little girls.

Semyon was quite surprised. True, the girls were very pretty – plump, with black eyes and rosy little cheeks – and wore fine fur coats and shawls. Still, he could not understand why Mikhail should be staring like that, as if he knew them.

Semyon kept wondering and then started discussing the price with the woman. This was finally agreed and Semyon took his measure. The woman lifted the lame girl on to one knee and said, ‘Measure her twice and make one shoe for her lame foot and three for the sound one: they take exactly the same size, because they’re twins.’

Semyon took the measurements and inquired about the little lame girl.

‘What happened? Such a pretty little girl. Was she born like that?’

‘No, she was crushed by her mother.’

Just then Matryona joined in. She was wondering who the woman was and whose children they were.

‘You’re their mother, aren’t you?’

‘No, dear woman, I’m not their mother, nor am I a relative. They were complete strangers and I adopted them.’

‘They’re not your own and yet you seem so fond of them!’

‘How can I help being fond of them? I breast- fed them both. I did have a child of my own once, but it pleased God to take him. I didn't love him as much as these little girls, though.'

'So whose are they?'

And the woman proceeded to tell them the whole story.

'It all started about six years ago, when these little girls lost their father and mother the same week – the father was buried on the Tuesday and the mother died on the Friday. So, for three days they had no father and on the fourth they lost their mother. At that time my husband and I were farm- workers and our yard was right next door. The father was a lone wolf and worked as a woodcutter. One day when they were cutting down some trees they let one fall right on him and it crushed his insides. They had hardly got him back to the village when his soul went up to heaven and the same week his widow gave birth to twins – these little girls. She was a poor woman, all on her own, with no other women, young or old, to help her. Alone she gave birth and alone she died.

'The next morning I went to see how she was, but the poor thing was already stiff and cold. When she died she'd rolled over on to this little girl and twisted her leg out of shape. Then the villagers came, washed the body and laid it out. Then they made a coffin and buried her. Good folk they were. So the two little girls were left alone in the world, and who was going to look after them? I happened to be the only woman in that village who'd had a baby at the time and I'd been breast- feeding my first- born for about eight weeks. So I took care of the girls for the time being. The men thought hard about what to do with the orphans and in the end they told me, "You'd better look after them for now, Marya, until we manage to sort something out." So I breast- fed the girl who hadn't been harmed, but not the one who'd been crippled, as I didn't expect her to live. And then I thought to myself, "Why should that little angel be left to fade away?" I took pity on her too and started feeding her, so that in the end I was feeding all three of them – my own first- born and these two, at my own breasts! I was young, strong and well- nourished and God gave me so much milk that it filled my breasts to overflowing. Sometimes I'd feed two at a time, with the third waiting, and when one had had its fill, I'd put the third to my breast. But it was God's will that I should nurse these little girls and bury my own child before he was two years old. And God never gave me another one. But after that I became quite well off. My second husband's working for a corn merchant and we live at the mill. He earns good money and we live well. But as we've no children of our own I'd be terribly lonely without these two little girls. How can I help loving them? They are the apple of my eye!

The woman pressed the lame girl to her with one hand and wiped the tears from her cheeks with the other.

Matryona sighed. 'There's a lot of truth in the saying "You can live without mother or father, but you can't live without God." '

They chatted together for a while and then the woman got up to leave. Semyon and his wife saw them out and then they looked at Mikhail: he was sitting there, his arms folded on his knees, and he was looking up and smiling.

Semyon went over to Mikhail and asked, 'What is it?'

Mikhail rose from the bench, put down his work, took off his apron, bowed to Semyon and Matryona and said, 'Please forgive me, you good people. God has forgiven me, so please forgive me too.'

And the shoemaker and his wife saw a light shining from Mikhail. And Semyon stood up, bowed in turn and said, 'I can see you are no ordinary mortal and I cannot detain you any longer or question you. But please tell me one thing: why were you so miserable when I first found you and brought you home? And why, when my wife gave you supper, did you smile and from that time onwards brighten up? And why, when that rich gentleman ordered those boots, did you smile again and become even more cheerful? And why, when that woman brought those little girls here just now, did you smile a third time and become the very picture of joy? Please tell me, Mikhail. What is that light coming from you and why did you smile three times?'

'The light is radiating from me,' Mikhail replied, 'because I had been punished, but now God has forgiven me. And I smiled three times because I was commanded to discover three truths and I have discovered them. I discovered the first truth when your wife took pity on me – that is why I smiled for the first time. The second truth I discovered when that rich gentleman ordered the boots – and then I smiled again. And just now, when I saw those two little girls, I discovered the last of the three truths – and I smiled for the third time.’

‘Tell me, Mikhail,’ Semyon asked, ‘why did God punish you and what are those three truths, so that I too may know them?’

Mikhail replied, ‘God punished me because I disobeyed Him. I was an angel of the Lord and I disobeyed Him. Yes, I was an angel in heaven and the Lord sent me down to earth to take a woman’s soul. I flew down and saw the woman lying there. She was sick, all alone and had just given birth to twins, two little girls. There they were, crawling around their mother, but she was unable to put them to her breasts. When she saw me she understood that God had sent me to take her soul. She burst into tears and said, “Angel of the Lord! My husband has just been buried, killed by a falling tree. I have no sister, no aunt, no grandmother – no one to bring up my little orphans. So please don’t take my soul, let me suckle my babies, bring them up and set them on their feet. Children cannot live without father or mother!” And I did what she asked, pressed one little girl to her breast, put the other in her arms and ascended to heaven. I flew to God and told Him, “I could not bring myself to take the soul of a woman who had just borne twins. The father was killed by a falling tree and the mother had just given birth and begged me not to take her soul. ‘Let me suckle my children, bring them up and set them on their feet. Children cannot live without a father or mother,’ she pleaded. So I did not take that woman’s soul.” And then God said, “If you go down to earth and take that woman’s soul you will discover three truths: you will learn what dwells in man, what is not given to man and what men live by. When you have learnt these truths you shall return to heaven.” So I flew down to earth again and took the mother’s soul. The babies dropped from her breasts and her body rolled over on to one of them, crushing its leg. Then I rose above the village, wishing to return her soul to God, but I was seized by a strong wind and my wings drooped and fell off. And so the soul alone returned to God and I fell to earth, by the roadside.’

And now Semyon and Matryona realized whom they had been clothing and feeding and had taken in to live with them. And they both wept for joy and fear. And the angel said, 'I was alone and naked in that field. Never before had I known the needs of man, never had I known cold or hunger. But now I was an ordinary mortal, cold and hungry and not knowing what to do. And then I saw a chapel in the field, built for the glory of God. So I went to it to seek shelter. But it was locked and I could not enter. So I sat down behind it to shelter from the wind. Evening came and I was famished, freezing and in pain. Suddenly I heard a man coming down the road. He was carrying a pair of boots and talking to himself. For the first time since I became a man I saw the mortal face of man. It terrified me and I turned away. And I could hear this man wondering how to protect his body from the winter cold and feed his wife and children. And I thought, "I am perishing with cold and hunger, but here is someone whose only thought is how to find a warm coat for himself and his wife, and food for his family. I cannot expect any help from him." When the man saw me he frowned, looking even more terrifying, and he passed me by. I was desperate. But suddenly I heard him coming back. As I looked he no longer seemed the same man. Before, his face had borne the stamp of death, but now he had suddenly become alive again and in that face I could see God. He came up to me, clothed me and took me to his home. When we arrived a woman came out to meet us and she spoke. This woman was even more terrifying than the man. Her breath seemed to come from the grave and I was almost choked by that deathly stench. She wished to cast me out into the cold and I knew that if she did that she would die. Then suddenly her husband told her to think of God and at once she was transformed. When she had given us supper I returned the look she gave me and saw that death no longer dwelt in her, but life. And in her too I could see God.

'And I recalled God's first lesson: thou shalt learn what dwelleth in man . And now I knew that it is Love that dwells in man. I was overjoyed that God had begun to reveal what He had promised to reveal, and I smiled for the first time. But I did not know the whole truth yet. I did not yet know what is not given to man and what men live by.

‘And so I came to live with you and one year passed. One day a rich gentleman came to order a pair of boots that would last a year without splitting or losing their shape. When I looked at him I suddenly saw my comrade, the Angel of Death, standing behind him. No one but I could see that angel. And I knew that he would take the gentleman’s soul before sunset. And I thought, “Here is a man who wants to provide for himself for a year from now but does not know that by evening he will be dead.’ And so I remembered God’s second lesson: thou shalt learn what is not given to man .

‘What dwells in man I already knew. Now I knew that which is not given to man: it is not given to him to know his bodily needs. And I smiled for the second time. I rejoiced that I had seen my fellow angel and that God had revealed His second truth.

‘But still I did not know everything. I did not understand what it is that men live by. And so I lived on, waiting for God to reveal this last truth to me. In my sixth year that woman came here with the two little girls. I recognized the girls and learnt how they had stayed alive. After this discovery I thought, “The mother pleaded with me for her children’s sake and I believed what she said, thinking that children cannot live without father or mother. But the other woman had nursed them and brought them up.” And when I saw how much love this woman had for the children and how she wept over them I saw the living God in her and understood what men live by . And I realized that God had revealed His last lesson and had forgiven me. So I smiled for the third time.’

And the angel’s body was bared and it was robed in light, so that the eye could not look upon it. And the angel’s voice grew louder, as though it came not from him, but from heaven itself. And the angel said, ‘I have learned that men live not by selfishness, but by love.

‘It was not given to the mother to know what her children needed for their lives. Nor was it given to the rich man to know what his true needs were. Nor is it given to any man to know, before the sun has set, whether he will need boots for his living body or slippers for his corpse. When I became a mortal I survived not by thinking of myself, but through the love that dwelt in a passer-by and his wife, and the compassion and love they showed me. The two orphans' lives were preserved, not by what others may have intended for them, but by the love that dwelt in the heart of a woman, a complete stranger, and by the love and compassion she showed them. Indeed, all men live not by what they may intend for their own well-being, but by the love that dwells in others.

‘Previously I had known that God gave life to men and desired that they should live. But then I came to know something else.

‘I came to understand that God does not wish men to live apart and that is why He does not reveal to each man what he needs for himself alone. On the contrary, He wishes men to live in peace and harmony with each other and for this reason He has revealed to each and every one of them what all men need, as well as themselves.

‘And I understood that men only think that they live by caring only about themselves: in reality they live by love alone. He who dwells in love dwells in God, and God in him, for God is love.’

And the angel sang the Lord's praises and the hut shook with the sound of his voice. And the roof parted and a pillar of fire rose from earth to heaven. Semyon and his wife and children prostrated themselves; the angel's wings unfurled and he soared into the sky.

When Semyon came to his senses the hut was just as it had always been and there was no one there but him and his family.

“她决心教他说话，
而且没过多久，
他便会说： ‘好孩子！’
‘您的仆人，先生！’
‘万福玛利亚！’”

PENGUIN
LITTLE BLACK CLASSICS

欧班夫人的女仆费莉西泰，让蓬莱韦克那些好太太羡慕了整整半个世纪。

她一年的工钱也就一百法郎，却包揽了所有下厨房的事和家务活。她缝补，清洗，熨烫衣裳；套马，喂养家禽，炼制奶油。不仅如此，她对女主人也一直忠心耿耿，而我们得说，那女主人可不好相处。

欧班夫人嫁给了一位英俊而贫穷的年轻人。一八〇九年初，他过世了，留下她和两个年幼的孩子，以及一笔数额可观的债务。她只好变卖家产，仅留下图克和热福塞两处的农庄。这两处农庄一年能提供给她的租金收入，最多不过五千法郎。为了维持生计，她只好搬出圣梅兰的住宅，住进一栋相对便宜的房子。那房子本是她家族的，坐落在集市后面。

这栋房子有着石板瓦屋顶，在一条小巷和一条通往河边的窄街之间。房子里，地面高低不平，走在上面很容易被绊倒。一条狭窄的过道隔开了厨房与起居室。欧班夫人整日待在起居室，坐在平开窗前一张柳条编的扶手椅上。一排八张红木椅靠着白漆护壁板。晴雨表挂在墙上，下方是架古旧的钢琴。各种小包裹、纸板箱在钢琴上堆得高高的，像一座金字塔。两张铺着挂毯的简易椅，分别放置在路易十五风格的黄色大理石壁炉旁。一只钟，挂在壁炉上方的中央，设计得像座维斯塔神庙。整个房间散发着霉味，那是因为地面比花园低的缘故。

二楼，有一间“夫人”的卧室。那是一个很大的房间，装饰着暗淡的、带有花纹的墙纸。墙上挂着幅“老爷”的画像，他穿着在那时很时髦的奇特服装。卧室径直通往一个更小的房间，里面放着两张孩子的床，每张床的垫子都被移走了。再过去便是客厅，常年关闭，堆满了蒙着布罩的家具。最后，有一个过道通向书房。堆着书和纸的书橱，占据了三面墙，将一个很大的乌木书桌包围其中。书橱的侧板上贴满了素描画、水粉风景画，以及奥德朗的版画，让人想起已然逝去的美好时日，以及更奢华的品位。三楼是费莉西泰的卧室，被天窗所照亮。窗外，可以见到牧场。

费莉西泰总在天蒙蒙亮时起床，以确保能赶上弥撒。之后，她便一口气也不歇地劳作到晚上。晚餐结束后，她收拾好陶盘，紧实地门上门，用灰烬埋了柴火，便手拿念珠，在壁炉前睡去了。在讨价还价

时，没人能比她更固执。而论干净，她洗刷的平底小圆锅，足以让蓬莱韦克别家的女仆绝望。她从不浪费，吃得很慢，还会用手指把掉在桌上的面包屑沾干净。那面包是专为她烤的，足有十二磅，能让她吃上二十天。

无论遇上什么天气，她都披一条印花方头巾，用别针扣在后面，戴一顶完全盖住头发的女帽，穿一双灰色长筒袜、一条红色裙子，再在上衣外面罩着背带围裙，像医院护士穿的那样。

她的脸是瘦削的，声音是尖锐的。二十五岁时，人们以为她有四十岁。而在她五十岁生日过后，倒让人越发难以看出她的年纪了。她不怎么说话，身板挺直，步调僵硬，就像一位被发条驱使的、木头做的女人。

和别的女孩一样，她也曾恋爱过。

她的父亲是个石匠，从脚手架上跌下来摔死了。随后，母亲过世，姐姐们也各自谋生去了。一个农民收留了她。尽管她还很小，仍被派去牧场看顾牛群。她总是衣不遮体，冷得直哆嗦；趴在地上喝池塘里的水。她经常毫无缘由地挨打，最后被赶出了房子，说是她偷了三十苏^[1]，但她其实是无辜的。后来，她在别的农场找了份工作，饲养家禽。雇主喜爱她，却招来了朋友们的妒忌。

八月的一个晚上（那时她十八岁），她被拉去参加科勒维尔的乡村游园会。喧闹的提琴声、树上的彩灯、一件件绚丽多彩的衣裳、金色的十字架和丝带，以及那些随音乐跳动的人，一时间让她茫然不知所措。她独自站在一旁，怯生生的。一个看起来很有钱的年轻人，靠在农场马车的车轴上抽着烟斗。他走来，邀请她跳舞。他为她买了一杯苹果汁、一杯咖啡、一个蛋糕和一条丝绸围巾。他想着她已领会了他的意思，便提议送她回家。走到燕麦田边时，他将她推倒在地。她害怕地尖叫起来。他跑了。

不久后的一个晚上，她在前往博蒙特的路上遇到一辆大车。车子载着干草，缓慢笨拙地前行着。她想超过它。在挨着车轮走过去的时候，她认出车上的人是泰奥多尔。

他面无愧色地看着她，说她理应原谅他那晚的行为，毕竟他“那晚只是喝多了”。

她不知该如何作答，只想逃走。

于是，他转换话题，谈起了当年的收成，以及这个地区的各大人物。他说，他父亲已离开科勒维尔，在艾科特买了处农庄，也就是说，他们现在是邻居了。她回答说：“哦，这样啊！”他说，他父母希望他安定下来，但他不着急，更愿意在结婚前遇见那个对的女人。她听了，垂下双眼。他问，她是否正考虑结婚的事情。她笑了，说他那样取笑她可不好。“但我发誓，我不是在取笑你。”他说着，伸出左手，搂住了她的腰。她就这样让他搂着，继续往前走。现在，他们走得更慢了。微风徐徐，星辰闪耀。在他们面前，大马车上的干草来回晃动。四匹马艰难地踱步向前，起了片片尘土。未经任何指令，马儿向右转了。这时，他吻了吻她，而她在夜色里逃开了。

接下来的那周，泰奥多尔约她出来了几次。

他们在农家院子的角落里碰面，躲在墙后或一棵树下。费莉西泰并不像同龄的年轻姑娘那般懵懂无知。和农场牲口打交道，让她学到了很多。然而，她与生俱来的慎重，以及保持贞洁的本能，使她避免了屈从泰奥多尔的欲求。她这般推阻，让泰奥多尔很是泄气。为了满足欲望（或者，也可能是出于单纯的想法），他开始向她求婚。她不知道是否该相信他，而他则坚持说自己是认真的。

不久，他说起一件烦心的事：一年前，他父母花钱让人代他服兵役，但他仍有可能随时被征召。一想起有这种可能，他就害怕。费莉西泰将这种怯懦看成是爱的讯息，这让她更爱他了。夜里，她从房子里溜出来去见泰奥多尔，而他则用忧惧和哀求，向她发起进攻。

最终，他说他要亲自去市政府查探情况。他会在下个星期天的十一点至午夜间回来，告诉费莉西泰结果。

到了约定的时间，费莉西泰去见她的情人。

但她见到的并不是泰奥多尔，而是他的一个朋友。

他告诉她，她再也不会见到泰奥多尔了。为了确保不被征召入伍，他娶了图克一个有钱的老女人，勒胡塞太太。

费莉西泰很悲伤。她扑倒在地，号啕痛哭；她祈求上天的帮助，独自一人躺在田野里，哭到天亮。然后，她回到农场，说她决定要离开了。到了月底，她领了工钱，将几样东西用披巾包好，便前往蓬莱韦克了。

她来到一家客栈前，向一个戴寡妇帽的女人打听。正好她也在找一个厨子。这位年轻的姑娘对烹饪所知不多，但似乎很乐意学习，而且随时准备帮忙，于是欧班夫人最后说：“那好吧，就你了。”

一刻钟后，费莉西泰就在他家安置下来。

起初，她时常感到不安，因为这家人规矩很多，而对“老爷”的怀念似乎徘徊在所有事物之上。维尔吉妮和保罗，一个七岁，一个只有四岁，都像是某种珍贵的材料做的。她喜欢像马似的驮着他们，只在欧班夫人不许她老是亲吻他们时，才会让她觉得受了委屈。即使如此，她仍很快乐。新的环境很舒适，她早先的不愉快很快就消散了。

每逢周四，欧班夫人的朋友会来玩波士顿牌。费莉西泰事先备好了纸牌和暖脚炉。客人们总是八点准时到，十一点钟声响起时离开。

每周一早上，在小巷尽头有家店面的旧货商，会在人行道上摆出各种零碎的五金器件。整个城镇充满了嘈杂的声响，有马嘶、羊叫、猪哼，以及马车驶过街面的咔嚓声。正午左右，也就是集市最繁忙的

时候，一个老农会跨上台阶，前来拜访欧班夫人。他身材高大，鹰钩鼻，脑后面歪戴着顶帽子。他叫罗伯兰，来自热福塞农场。随之而来的，是图克农场的里埃巴。他又矮又胖，脸色红润，穿着一件灰夹克，长筒皮靴上绑着马刺。

他们俩都带着鸡或奶酪，想着办法让女地主能买下来。但无论耍什么把戏，费莉西泰总能赢过他们，他们也因此总是很尊敬她。

有时，欧班夫人也会接待她的叔叔，德·格莱芒维特侯爵。他因生活放纵，败光了所有的钱财。现在，住在法莱斯仅剩的一小块领地上。他总是在午餐时间来，带着一条惹人厌的小贵宾犬，它会在家具上涂满泥爪印。他表现得像一位绅士，每次提及“先父”，总会抬一下帽子。但终究恶习难改，很快他就会给自己倒上一杯又一杯酒，尽说一些下流的玩笑话。费莉西泰会礼貌地将他带到门边，说：“我想，今天差不多了，德·格莱芒维特侯爵！下回再来看我们吧！”说完，便把他关在了门外。

不过，她倒是很乐意迎接退休的律师布雷先生。他的白领带、秃脑门、衬衫前襟上的荷叶花边、宽大的棕色大衣、捏鼻烟时弯起胳膊的独特姿态——事实上，有关这个人的一切，都让费莉西泰心慌意乱，就像我们见到大人物时那样。

他替“夫人”照管产业，会连着好几小时和夫人关在“老爷”的书房里。他总担心名誉受损，对法院尊敬万分，并声称自己懂一些拉丁文。

他给孩子们买了一本带插图的地理书，因为他认为这将有利于他们从学习中得到乐趣。这本书描述了世界各地的场景：戴着羽毛头饰的食人族，一只诱拐年轻女孩的猴子，一群沙漠中的贝都因人，一条中了鱼叉的鲸鱼，等等。

保罗将所有这些插图仔细地讲解给费莉西泰听。实际上，这是唯一一次有人教她如何阅读一本书。

给孩子们上课的是居尤，那是一个着实可怜的家伙。他在镇公所工作，因写一手好字而出名，喜欢在鞋底磨砺他的笔刀。

一旦天气晴好，全家都会起得早早的，前往热福塞农庄消磨一整天。

院子坐落在斜坡上，农舍则在院子中央。从那里可以望见远处的海，像一条小小的灰色带子。

费莉西泰从篮子里拿出片片冷肉。他们在挨着牛奶房的房间里吃饭。那个房间是已然塌毁的乡村别墅中唯一残存的部分。墙纸剥落，垂了下来，随穿堂风摆动着。欧班夫人低着头，沉浸在往事里。这让

孩子们几乎不敢说话。她说：“你们去玩吧。”于是，他们就走开了。

保罗会爬上谷仓，捉小鸟，在池塘里打水漂，或用木杖敲打大木桶，发出轰隆轰隆的响声，像在敲鼓。

维尔吉妮会去喂兔子，或跑过牧场去采矢车菊。她跑的时候，会露出靓丽的绣花短裤。

秋天的一个晚上，他们穿过草地回家。

上弦月照亮了天空。薄雾飘移着，像纱一样蒙在图克河蜿蜒的水面上。有一群牛躺在草地中央，慵懒地看着他们路过。到了第三块草地，一些牛站起来，在他们面前围成一个圈。费莉西泰说：“不用怕！”她边往前走，边哼着引人沉思的小调。来到最近的动物旁，她轻轻拍着它的背脊。它走开了，其他的牛也一样。然而，刚穿过下块草地，他们就听到一声可怕的牛哞。那是一头隐藏在雾中的公牛。它开始朝那两位女士走来。欧班夫人想逃走。费莉西泰说：“不不，不能走得太快！”但她们却走得更快了。即使如此，她们仍能听到身后越来越近的公牛鼻息，以及牛蹄捶打青草的声响。她们知道它正飞奔而来。费莉西泰转身，面对公牛，从地上捡起土块，扔向它的脸。公牛低下头，晃着双角，颤抖着发出怒吼。现在，欧班夫人带着两个孩子，已到了草地边，急着想穿过树篱。费莉西泰则面对公牛，仍有条不紊地撤退，将一块草根土扔进它的眼睛里，一边还喊着：“快，快！”

欧班夫人下了沟底，相继推着维尔吉妮和保罗上去了。她爬堤岸时，跌落了几次。不过最终还是凭着股子意志力，成功地爬了上去。

公牛已将费莉西泰逼到一扇栅栏门前，喷吐的口水溅到了她脸上。下一秒，牛角就要顶到她了。在这危急时刻，她竟从两根木桩之间硬挤了过去。这庞大的家伙吓了一跳，愣在了原地。

多年以后，蓬莱韦克的人仍会谈起这桩历险。但费莉西泰并不引以为傲，也丝毫不觉得她的作为有什么英勇可言。

维尔吉妮占据了全部的心神。那场公牛带来的可怕经历，已影响了维尔吉妮的神经。普帕特医生建议她到特鲁维尔洗海水浴。

那时候，还鲜有人来这处风景胜地。欧班夫人四处打听，还请教了布雷先生，做了充分准备，仿佛是一场很漫长的旅程。

临行前一天，行李由里埃巴的农场马车送走了。第二天，他牵着两匹马回来。一匹有女士马鞍，带着天鹅绒靠背。另一匹马的背上放着一个斗篷卷成的坐垫。欧班夫人骑上马，跟在里埃巴后头。费莉西泰在另一匹马上照顾维尔吉妮。保罗骑的则是夏勒杜瓦先生的驴。借这头驴，有一个明确的条件，他们得精心照顾它。

路况很糟。五英里的路，他们走了两小时。马匹踩在泥地里，陷到踝骨。它们得猛然向前，才能自如地拔出脚来。它们的脚绊在车辙里，有时不得不跳一下。在路上的某些地方，里埃巴的母马突然不走了。里埃巴耐心等着，直到它再次走动。骑行时，他会说起住在路旁那些人的故事，并总是额外添加些许个人的评判。比如，到了图克镇中心，他们行经一栋房子，窗外围着簇旱金莲。他耸耸肩，说：“这里住着一位勒胡塞太太，她倒不挑年轻人，反而……”费莉西泰没有听到下文，因为这时马儿开始慢跑起来，驴也在前头跑了。他们下了条小道，一扇门开了，出来两位年轻的农场工人。他们就在农舍门外的肥料堆旁下了马。

里埃巴老夫人迎接女东家，一脸的欢喜溢于言表。午饭时，她摆出牛里脊、大肠、灌肠、奶油炖鸡块、泛着泡沫的果汁、水果馅饼、酒浸李子。全程都在说着恭维的话，说夫人看起来“气色更好了”，说小姐已长成一位“美丽的少女”，说少爷保罗是个多“壮实”的年轻人，还不忘提及他们过世的祖父母。里埃巴一家数代为他们服务，因此老一辈的人也都认识。这农场和里埃巴一家一样，透着股陈旧年代的味道。虫子蛀蚀了房顶的横梁，烟熏黑了墙面，尘土蒙上了窗玻璃。一个橡木架上堆着各种工具：水壶、碟子、锡盘、捕狼器、剪羊毛的大剪刀，以及一个让孩子们觉得格外逗乐的巨大的灌肠器。外面有三所院子，那里的每棵树都长着蘑菇，许多树枝中间生着槲寄生。有些树被风吹倒了，但在树干绽裂的地方又重新长出来。在果实的重压下，所有的树都弯了。茅草屋顶像是厚薄不一的棕色天鹅绒，倒是经受住了最猛烈的风，但马车房坍塌了。欧班夫人说，她会安排人去修的，接着就让人备马去了。

他们花了半小时，来到特鲁维尔。这支小小的旅行队伍，在来到文考尔——一座从船上方延展的悬崖时，不得不下了马。三分钟后，他们来到码头的一端，进了大卫老夫人的客栈“金色羊羔”的院子。

由于空气变换，以及海水浴的关系，维尔吉妮很快就康复了。她没有泳衣，是穿着衬衫下水的。她的女仆会在一间海关人员的简陋小屋帮她穿衣服，这间小屋也供淋浴的人使用。

下午，他们骑驴走过罗切斯-诺雷斯，去往恩克维尔。起初，小道在像公园草地般轻柔起伏的牧场间蜿蜒攀升。接着，便来到一片高原，那里是牧场和耕地。小道旁种植着冬青，与杂乱的树莓丛长在一起。一棵枯死的大树，其枝丫呈之字形，横亘在蓝天下。

他们总是在一块特定的草地停下休息。往下看，左边是多维尔，右边是勒阿弗尔。前方则是开阔的海。在阳光下，大海散发着微光，像镜面一样光滑。四周围很安静，几乎能听到海浪持续而低沉的声音。麻雀在附近吱吱叫着。巨大的天穹铺展在上方。欧班夫人坐在那

里，做着针线活儿。维尔吉妮坐在她身旁，编织着灯芯草。费莉西泰采摘一束束野生薰衣草。而保罗则很无聊，总想着早点上路。

别的时候，他们坐船渡过图克河，去找贝壳。退潮时，海胆、鲍鱼、水母被留在沙滩上。孩子们追逐风吹来的星星点点的泡沫。波浪从海滩一边到另一边，慵懒地破碎在沙子里。海滩延展着，没有边际，但在陆地那一侧，以沙丘为界，将它和跑马场似的玛黑大牧场分隔开来。他们穿过牧场，往回走向特鲁维尔——它就躺在山脚下，每走一步，这座小镇就大一些。各式房子错落开来，像花园里缤纷的花朵。

天气热的时候，他们便待在房间里。外面炫目的光透过百叶窗的缝隙，投进一道道光束。乡村里听不到一丝声响。没有一个人敢冒险来到大街上。占据一切的寂静，让万物显得更为平静。远处，传来船工的锤子在敲打船体的声音，而柏油的气息也随着倦怠的微风飘荡而来。

一天中最激动人心的事，发生在渔船归来的时候。一旦过了入口浮标，他们便开始迂回前进。他们的主帆降到桅杆的一半高，前帆膨胀，像巨大的气球。他们滑过飞溅的海浪，直达海港的中央，随后便突然抛锚。渔船被带到码头后，水手吊起他们的鱼，扔到岸上。鱼还是活的，轻微颤动着。一排马车早就等在那里了。戴着棉布帽的女人们冲向前，去拿篮子，亲吻她们的男人。

有一天，有个女人向费莉西泰走来。不久，费莉西泰便兴冲冲地回到客栈的房间。她找到了失散姐妹中的一个，这位纳斯塔西·巴奈特，也就是勒鲁夫人，紧随其后进了房间，怀里抱着一个宝宝。一个小孩握着她的右手，而她的左手边是一个小水手。他的手放在臀部上，贝雷帽扣到了耳朵上。

一刻钟后，欧班太太就让她走了。

但之后并没有摆脱他们。他们会刚好等在厨房外面，或者在她们外出散步时，尾随而来。至于那个丈夫，则一直没有现身。

费莉西泰倒是很依恋他们。她给他们买了一条毯子、几件衬衫，和一只炉子。他们很明显在利用她。欧班夫人对费莉西泰这种软心肠很是懊恼。她也反对那个外甥对保罗所表现出的亲密举止。再加上，维尔吉妮犯了咳嗽，天气也更恶劣了，她便返回了蓬莱韦克。

在为保罗选择一所好学校时，布雷先生提了建议。在康城有所公认是最好的学校。因此保罗就被送到了康城。他告别时很勇敢，为即将住在一个会有自己朋友的地方而心满意足。

欧班夫人只好任由她儿子离去，因为她知道他必将获得良好的教

育。维尔吉妮很快就适应了，倒是费莉西泰发现，没有他，房子变得太安静了。不过，很快地就有别的事吸引了她的注意力。圣诞节后，她每天得带着维尔吉妮去学习教理问答。

[1] 苏（sou），法国曾发行的一种铜币。——译者注

费莉西泰进门时，屈膝行了个礼，沿着教堂中堂高耸的天花板下方的过道一路走来，打开欧班夫人坐的教堂长椅的挡门后，自行坐下，环顾了一下四周。

孩子们已在唱诗班的席位入座，男孩在右，女孩居左。神父站在他们前面，靠近读经台。在后殿，一扇彩色玻璃上显示着圣灵在俯视圣母玛利亚。另一扇窗上，则是圣母跪在圣婴耶稣前面。神龛的背后是圣米迦勒屠龙的木雕。

神父开始讲起圣典的梗概。于是，费莉西泰的脑子里便满是伊甸园、大洪水、巴别塔、大火焚毁的城市、灭亡的种族，以及被推倒的偶像。这绚烂的叙事慢慢灌输给她，让她充满了对天父的尊崇，以及对天谴的极度恐惧。听到耶稣受难的故事，她哭了。他们为什么要将他钉在十字架上？既然他对孩子那么善良，他给饥饿的人以粮食，让盲人重见光明；既然他已被选中，出于温和的天性，选择降生于穷人家一座马厩的麦秆堆上。播种与收获，葡萄树上的果实，所有这些在福音书里提及的常见事物，也在她的生活里头出现。现在，有了与上帝的联系，这些事物更显神圣了。费莉西泰比以往更爱羊羔，因为她爱上帝的羔羊。而鸽子则会让她想起圣灵。

她发现很难想象圣灵到底是什么模样，因为他不仅是一只鸟，有时还是火，有时则是气息。入夜时，她看到在沼泽闪耀的，可能就是圣灵的光；或者是他的气息促使云朵飘过天空；或者是他的声音让教堂的钟声如此悦耳动听。她坐在那里，沉浸于对这些奇迹的敬仰之中，在石头墙的冰凉和教堂的平和里感到身心愉悦。

她丝毫不理解教义，也没有想过去理解。当神父站着给孩子们讲解，而孩子们重复着所学的时候，费莉西泰睡着了，直到孩子们离开教堂，木屐拍打着石头地面所发出的声响才将她惊醒。就这样，费莉西泰靠着听孩子们背诵，学到了她的教理问答，而这种宗教教育在她年轻时却被忽略了。此后，她便模仿起维尔吉妮的宗教戒律。她斋戒，她也斋戒。无论她何时去忏悔，她便跟着去。为了圣体瞻礼节，费莉西泰和维尔吉妮还一起做了个圣坛。

维尔吉妮初次领圣餐的前几天，费莉西泰为要准备什么而着急。她担忧她的鞋子，她的念珠，她的弥撒用书，她的手套。她帮着欧班夫人给维尔吉妮穿衣服的时候，手一直在抖。

整个弥撒期间，她都焦虑不安。唱诗班的一侧被布雷先生挡住了，她看不见。但在正对面，她能看见一群女孩，低垂着面纱，戴着白色花冠，看上去像是一片雪地。即使隔着一段距离，她仍能从那线条优美的脖颈、虔诚沉思的情态，认出她深爱的小维尔吉妮。钟声响了。他们全都在静默中低下头，跪了下来。接着，伴随着管风琴强而有力的演奏，唱诗班和教众唱起了《上帝的羔羊》。男孩们列队向前，女孩们随之站起身来。她们双手合十，祈祷着，缓慢地走向点着蜡烛的圣坛。她们一个接一个地跪在圣坛台阶上，领受圣餐，又以相同的顺序，返回到唱诗班的位置。轮到维尔吉妮时，费莉西泰倾身向前，以便能看到她。带着那种出于真爱的非凡想象，她觉得自己就是维尔吉妮本人，借用了她的表情，穿着她的衣服，用她的心在她的胸口跳动。维尔吉妮张开嘴时，费莉西泰闭上眼睛，几乎要晕厥过去。

第二天一早，费莉西泰前往圣器室，请求给予她圣餐。她带着应有的钦敬领受圣餐，但并没有体验到那相同的狂喜。

欧班夫人想要给女儿最好的教育。既然居尤不能教她英语或音乐，她决定将女儿送往翁弗勒的乌尔苏拉修女学校。

维尔吉妮对此没有意见，但费莉西泰却很不开心，觉得夫人过于严厉了。然而，她还是接受了，毕竟这件事并不是她所能决定的，而她的女主人可能最了解情况。

有一天，一俩老旧的马车来到门外。车上下来一位修女，她是来接小姐的。费莉西泰将行李放在行李架上，向车夫叮嘱了几句，便将六罐果酱、一打梨子和一束紫罗兰放在车座上。

就要离去时，维尔吉妮哭了。她紧紧抱着母亲，而母亲则亲吻她的额头，不断地对她说：“好了，好了，我们得勇敢些！”步梯拉上来了，马车出发了。

马车走后，欧班夫人的情绪失控了。那天晚上，她所有的朋友，劳尔曼夫妇、勒沙普图瓦夫人、洛赫弗耶姐妹、胡波维尔先生、布雷先生都来安慰她。

起初，女儿不在让她很伤心。但每周有三天，她都能收到女儿的信。其他几天，她则给女儿回信，在花园里散步、读书，以此打发时间。

每天早上，费莉西泰会习惯性地走进维尔吉妮的卧室，凝视着墙壁。她多想还能给她梳头，给她系鞋带，把她塞进被窝啊；多想能成天见到她那甜蜜的小脸蛋，握着她的手一起外出啊。为了找点事做，她试着做一些针线活儿。但她的手指太笨了，老是把线弄断。她没心思做任何事情，晚上也睡不着。她现在，用自己的话说，就是“体内空空的”。

为了能“有个伴儿”，她问欧班夫人能否允许她的外甥维克多过来看望。

维克多总在星期天弥撒过后那会儿来。他脸色红润，敞着胸，带着一股他刚刚走过的乡野的气息。她会立即为他摆好桌子。他们坐在桌子两头，面对面地吃午饭。为了节省开支，费莉西泰尽可能吃得少些，而维克多则吃很多，甚至吃到最后都睡着了。晚祷的钟声响了，她叫醒他，给他刷干净裤子，系好领带，然后靠在他的肩膀上，像一位自豪的母亲，向教堂走去。

他父母总是让他带点东西回去，一包糖、一块肥皂、一小瓶白兰地，有时甚至是钱。任何一件需要缝补的衣服，他都会带过来，而费莉西泰总是很乐意做这样的事情。一有机会，她就高兴地鼓励他再次过来。

八月里，维克多和他父亲一起到沿海一带捕鱼去了。

这时，暑假刚刚开始，孩子们回家了，这让费莉西泰有了些许的安慰。只是保罗变任性了，维尔吉妮也已大了，没法儿像对孩子那样待她了。这让他们之间的氛围变得尴尬，疏远。

维克多先后去了默尔克、敦刻尔克和布莱顿。每次航行回来，他都会带一份礼物给费莉西泰。第一次是贝壳做的盒子。第二次是一个咖啡杯。第三次是一个大大的姜饼人。他正长成一个英俊的年轻人。优美的身形，刚长出的一点胡髭，一副直爽开朗的表情，一顶总是戴在后脑勺上的小皮帽，让他看起来像是个领航员。为了逗费莉西泰高兴，他夹杂着水手的各种行话，给她讲故事。

一八一九年七月十四日，星期一（这是费莉西泰永远也不会忘记的日子），维克多说，他已签约受雇于一艘远洋轮船。两天后，他将从翁弗勒坐晚上的渡轮前往他的纵帆船，这艘船很快就会从勒阿弗尔启航。他这一去，也许要两年。

想到要分别这么久，费莉西泰极为伤心。为了能与她最后告别，星期三晚上，在欧班夫人吃完饭后，她便从蓬莱韦克到翁弗勒，穿着木屐跑了十英里。

到各他时，她没有朝左，而是向右走，结果在造船厂里迷了路，不得不原路返回。她向路人打听方向，那人告诉她得快点。一路上，她绕着满是船只的海港走着，碰到了各种缆索。突然，她脚下的地面似乎倾斜了，光束呈十字形交织在眼前。她看到空中有几匹马，心想自己一定是疯了。

码头边，马群因害怕大海嘶鸣着。它们被起重架吊起，放到船里。船上人满为患，在苹果酒桶、奶酪筐和谷袋间拥挤着，走动。

母鸡在咯咯叫，船长在咒骂。甲板上，有个水手似乎对周遭的一切丝毫都不在意，靠着船头站着。费莉西泰没认出他，正一遍遍地叫着“维克多”。他抬起头，她向前冲来，但就在这时，舷梯突然从岸上被抽走了。

船只离了海港，被一群女人拖拽向前。她们在做事的时候，会齐声唱着歌。船体咯吱作响，沉重的波浪拍打着船头。然后船帆掉转，将所有人都遮挡在视线之外。月光下，海面闪着银色的光泽，而航行其上的船看起来像是个黑点，越来越暗淡。最终，在远处被吞没，消失不见了。

回家的路上，途经各各他，费莉西泰突然想请求上帝怜悯所有她珍爱的人。她站在那里，祈祷了很长时间。她的双眼凝视着上方的云朵，眼泪滑落她的脸颊。整座城镇都睡了，除了那些海关的人。可以听见水从闸门的孔中流过，像是激流。钟声敲响了两点。

天亮前，女修道院是不会接待访客的。而费莉西泰也知道，如果她回来晚了，夫人肯定会很生气。因此，尽管她很想从维尔吉妮那儿得到一个小小的吻，但还是启程回家了。她踏进蓬莱韦克时，客栈的女仆才刚刚起床。

维克多太可怜了，他得在海上持续颠簸数月！她并不担忧他之前的航行，毕竟英格兰也好，布列塔尼也罢，都是可以回来的地方。但美洲，殖民地和安的列斯群岛，则迷失在世界另一边的未知领域里。

自他走后，费莉西泰无时不在想着她的外甥。天气炎热、阳光充足时，她担心他可能会渴了。暴风雨来临时，她害怕他可能会被雷电击中。听到风在烟囱里呼啸，将屋顶上的瓦片吹落，她则想象他正经受着同样的风暴，正紧紧抓住折断的桅杆顶端，身子向后，被抛掷在大海的白沫之中。别的时候，受她所记得的地理书上那些插图的刺激，她想象他正在被野人吃掉，在树林里被猿猴捕获，或者正死在一片荒凉的海滩上。但她从未将这些焦虑告诉任何人。

欧班夫人则在担忧她的女儿。

修道院的修女说，她是个情感丰富的孩子，只是太过敏感。哪怕一点点的情感波动都会影响到她。这让她不得不放弃弹钢琴。

她母亲坚持要她定期写信。有一天早晨，邮差没有出现，她几乎不能自制，在房间里的扶手椅和窗户之间，来回走个不停。实在太过分了！都四天没消息了！

费莉西泰想到自己的境况可能对女主人有所安抚，便说：

“但是夫人，我已经六个月没有收到消息了。”

“谁的消息？”

“哎呀，我外甥的消息呀。”费莉西泰温柔地回答。

“哦，你的外甥！”欧班夫人耸耸肩，又在房间里踱起步来，那似乎在说：“我想都没想过他！他关我什么事呢！只不过是这个小船员，一个乞丐。他不值得我焦虑。但像我的女儿那样的……想想看！”

尽管自小就受尽虐待，但费莉西泰还是被欧班夫人深深伤害了。不过很快，她就平复了。

毕竟夫人为她的女儿心烦意乱，是可以理解的。

对费莉西泰来说，两个孩子是同等重要的。他们因她的爱而连接在一起。而让他们享有相同的命运，看起来也是恰当的。

费莉西泰听药剂师说，维克多的船已到了哈瓦那。他是在报纸上读到这则消息的。

由于与雪茄有关，费莉西泰幻想着哈瓦那是这样的一个地方：人们除了抽烟，什么都不干。她想象着维克多正走在一群黑鬼之间，被烟雾笼罩着。“如果需要的话”，从哈瓦那可以走回来吗？那里离蓬莱韦克有多远？为此，她去请教了布雷先生。

他找来地图册，开始解说经纬线。费莉西泰听蒙了。布雷先生坐在她前面，沾沾自喜，好像他无所不知似的。最后，他拿出铅笔，在地图上一个椭圆形斑点的缺口处，指了指一个几乎看不见的黑点说：“就是这里了。”费莉西泰凑近看着地图。这些彩色的线条组成的网络压迫着她的双眼，但并没有告诉她任何事情。布雷先生问，她在迷惑什么。她说，他是否可以指出维克多现在住的房子。布雷先生举起手臂，打了个喷嚏，哈哈大笑，被自己遇到头脑如此简单的人逗乐了。费莉西泰没能理解他的笑点。毕竟，她理解力有限，她甚至期望能在那里看到一张她外甥的照片呢。

两周后，是里埃巴照常去集市的日子。他走进厨房，递给费莉西泰一封她姐夫的信。两人都不识字，费莉西泰只好拿给女主人看。

欧班夫人正在数一件织物的针脚。她将活儿放在一边，打开信，停顿了片刻，然后低沉着声音，严肃地说：“他们给你带来了……坏消息。你外甥……”

维克多死了。这就是那封信所说的。

费莉西泰倒在了椅子上，头抵着墙，眼皮紧闭，眼眶泛红。她僵在那儿，低垂着头，双手无力地垂在身旁，凝视前方，一遍遍地重复说：“可怜的孩子！可怜的孩子！”

里埃巴站在那里，看着她，叹了口气。欧班夫人轻轻颤抖。

她建议费莉西泰到特鲁维尔去看看她姐姐。

费莉西泰做了个手势，意思是那没有必要。

一片沉默。里埃巴老头觉得他最好离开。

他走后，费莉西泰说：“他们是不会在意的，一点都不会。”

她再次低头，坐在那儿，不时心烦意乱地玩弄着摆在桌上的编织针。

院子里走过一群女人，正推着一车湿漉漉的亚麻衣服。

透过窗户，费莉西泰看见了她们，突然想起要洗的衣服。昨天她用碱液泡过，今天该洗出来了。于是，她起身出了房间。

她的洗衣板和木盆都在图克河边。她将一堆内衣扔到岸边，卷起袖子，抓住棒槌。这捶打的声响，在邻居的花园里都能听到。牧场空落无人，风吹皱了河面。河床上长长的水草，随波漂流着，像死人的头发在水里向下漂移。费莉西泰很勇敢，克制着她的悲痛，一直到天黑。但当她独自一人在房间里时，还是没能忍住。她平躺在床垫上，将脸埋在枕头里，用拳头挤压着太阳穴。

很久以后，她从那艘船的船长那里得知维克多死时的情况。他得了黄热病，在医院里放了很多血。四个医生同时在给他治疗，而他立即死了。主治医生说：“上帝啊，又死了一个。”

维克多一直受父母苛待。费莉西泰不再乐意见到他们。他们也没有去联系费莉西泰。可能他们只是把她忘了，也可能是因为贫穷让他们生就了一副硬心肠。

维尔吉妮越来越虚弱了。

呼吸困难，咳嗽持续，高烧不断，脸上布满暗淡的红疹，所有这些都在显示某种隐晦的身心失调。普帕特医生建议她去普罗旺斯度假。欧班夫人听从了他的意见。如果不是蓬莱韦克的天气不好，她会立即将维尔吉妮接回家的。

她和一个出租马车的人达成协议，让他每周二带她去往修道院。修道院的花园里有一座露台，可以俯瞰塞纳河。维尔吉妮靠着母亲的手臂，踩着掉落的葡萄叶，上下来回地散步。她会望着远处的帆船，以及从唐卡维尔的别墅到勒阿弗尔的灯塔这一带的海岸。有时，太阳突然冲破云层，照得她直眨眼睛。之后，她们会坐在棚架下休息。她母亲弄来一小杯上等的马拉加葡萄酒。维尔吉妮会喝那么两口，一想到自己会喝醉就发笑。

她开始恢复元气。秋天缓慢地滑过。费莉西泰竭尽所能安慰欧班夫人。但有一天傍晚，她在镇里办完差事回来，发现普帕特医生的马

车停在门前。普帕特医生在大厅出口处，欧班夫人在系她的帽子。

“把我的脚炉、钱包和手套拿来，快！”

维尔吉妮患了肺炎，夫人怕她好不了。

“我确信没那么糟糕。”医生说。于是，两人一起爬上了他的马车。四周落着慌乱的雪。夜晚正在来临，天气异常寒冷。

费莉西泰猛冲进教堂，点了一支蜡烛后，就去追赶普帕特医生的马车了。过了整整一小时，她从后头跳上来，紧紧抓住马车的边。突然，她想起来：“院门没有关！万一小偷进来怎么办？”于是，她又从车里跳回了路上。

第二天，在最初的日光中，她来到医生家。医生回来过，但又去乡下探望病人了。她在客栈里等着，想着有人可能会捎信过来。最终，在早晨的朦胧光线里，她坐上了利雪来的公共马车。

修道院坐落在一条陡窄的街道底部。她从半途往下走时，听到修道院里传来的奇怪声响。那是丧钟的鸣响。“那一定是为别人敲的。”她想着，大声地叩着门环。

不久，她听到有脚步声拖拽而来，门开了些许，一个修女出现了。

这位善良的修女庄重地宣称“她刚过世”。就在这时，圣里奥纳多教堂的钟声响起，越发显得响亮。

费莉西泰来到三楼。

在门口，她看到维尔吉妮仰卧着，双手紧握，嘴巴张着，头向后仰。头上方，一尊黑色的受难像向她倾斜而来。她的脸，比她周边僵直地垂挂下来的帘子还要惨白。欧班夫人躺在那里，抱着床脚，疯狂地啜泣。院长站在她右边。三支蜡烛在五斗柜上闪着小小的红色光圈。外面，雾气蒙上了窗玻璃。几位修女来了，带走了欧班夫人。

整整两个晚上，费莉西泰都没有离开维尔吉妮的床边。她坐在那儿，不断重复着相同的祷词。她起身，将圣水洒在被单上，又回到椅子上，继续凝视这位死去的姑娘。第一天守夜结束时，她注意到她的脸变黄了，嘴唇变蓝了，鼻子变瘦了，而她的眼睛也凹陷了下来。不止一次，她亲吻她的眼睛。此时，如果维尔吉妮再次睁开眼，她也不会有丝毫的惊讶。对她这样的人来说，超自然的事情是很平常的。她将她放好，给她穿上寿衣，放入棺材，给她戴上花环，将她的头发铺展开来。她的头发很美，对她这个年龄的女孩来说，算是长的了。费莉西泰剪下一大卷头发，将其中一半放进怀中，打定主意，永不分离。

按欧班夫人的意思，人们将尸体运回了蓬莱韦克。欧班夫人坐在关得严实的马车里，尾随着灵车。

葬礼弥撒过后，要过三刻钟才能到达公墓。保罗领着队伍，哭泣着。布雷先生在他后面，随后是蓬莱韦克的各个名流，以及戴着黑面纱哭泣的女人，最后是费莉西泰。费莉西泰不禁想起她的外甥。想到不能给他这最后的荣耀，她感到了双重的悲伤，就好像他正随着维尔吉妮一同被埋葬了。

欧班夫人绝望了。

起初，她反抗上帝，认为他将维尔吉妮从她身边带走是不公平的，因为她从未做过错事，也没有什么事能让她内疚。然而，也许是有的。她应该带她去南方。别的医生会治好她。她自我谴责，希望能随女儿而去，并在睡梦中痛苦地呼叫。有一个梦特别折磨她。她的丈夫，打扮得像一个水手，从漫长的旅途归来，流着泪，哽咽着说，他收到指示，要带维尔吉妮走。接着，他们绞尽脑汁，想给她找一个躲藏的地方。

有一次，她失魂落魄地从花园回来。就在这之前（她指着一个地方），父亲和女儿依次出现在她面前。他们什么也没做，只是望着她。

有好几个月，她都待在房间里，无精打采的。费莉西泰温柔地劝说她，要她好好照顾自己，为了她的儿子，她过世的丈夫，以及出于对“她”的怀念。

“她？”欧班夫人说着，仿佛从睡梦中醒来。“哦，是的，你当然没有忘记她，你有吗？”她说的是公墓，那是欧班夫人绝不会去的地方。

费莉西泰每天都去那儿。

四点的钟声一响，她便走过一排房子，爬上山，打开门，来到维尔吉妮的墓前。墓上立着一根粉色的大理石柱，底下是块石板，一条链子将四周围成一个小花园。繁花几乎要淹没那张独立的花床了。费莉西泰给叶子浇水，换上新的沙子，然后趴在地上，除尽地面的杂草。如果欧班夫人最终能来，她会从中找到安慰，一种对痛失所爱的慰藉。

多年过去了，年岁间极为相似，无非是来来去去的年度教堂节日：复活节、圣母升天节、万圣节。反倒是日常中那些微小的事件，在数年后，会让她们想起某些特殊的日子。例如，一八二五年，两个装玻璃的工人粉刷过堂；一八二七年，屋顶的一部分掉落在院子里，差点砸死了路人；一八二八年夏天，轮到夫人给教区居民发放祝圣面

包，差不多就在这时，布雷先生神秘地离开了镇子。然后，一个接一个地，相识的熟人都离开了：居尤、里埃巴、勒沙普图瓦夫人、罗贝林，以及她那已瘫痪多年的老叔叔格莱芒维特。

有一晚，邮车的车夫来到蓬莱韦克，带来“七月革命”的消息。几天后，新的县长上任了：勒森尼耶男爵，曾经的美洲领事。他来到蓬莱韦克，带着他的妻子，以及他的小姨和三位年纪很大的小姐。人们经常看见她们，穿着飘逸的长罩衣，出现在她们家的草坪上。她们还有一个黑人仆从和一只鸚鵡。她们拜访欧班夫人，以表达敬意。她也回访。只要远远看见，费莉西泰就会跑来告诉欧班夫人，说她们已在路上了。但能唤起欧班夫人兴趣的只有一件事，那就是她儿子的来信。

他看似无法专注于任何事情，整日沉湎于酒馆。欧班夫人会支付他的账单，但新的账单很快就来了。她在窗旁织着毛衣，发出沉重的叹息。即使身在厨房摇着手纺车的费莉西泰也能听到。

两个女人经常一起沿着花园的格子墙漫步。她们仍会频繁地谈起维尔吉妮，想着她是否会喜欢某某事，或她对某某场合会说些什么。

她所有的东西仍保存在儿童房卧室的橱柜里。欧班夫人尽量避免往里查看。但在夏日的一天，她终究没能忍住，打开了。橱柜里飞出了好多蛾子。

维尔吉妮的连衣裙成排地挂在架子下，上面摆着三个玩偶、一些发箍、一副玩偶的家具和她的洗手盆。两个女人拿出所有的裙子、袜子和手帕，平铺在两张床上，再叠起来。这些可怜的东西躺在那儿，在一束阳光的照耀下，显出了所有的污渍，以及因维尔吉妮的身体运动弄出来的折痕。空气温暖，天空湛蓝，一只黑鸟在外面鸣唱，整个世界显得格外平和。她们找到一顶栗色的长毛绒帽，但已被飞蛾蛀蚀了。费莉西泰问是否可以将它作为纪念品留下来。两个女人看着彼此，双眼满是泪水。欧班夫人张开双臂，费莉西泰扑了过去。女主人和仆人相互拥抱着，在一个不分贵贱的吻里，联结起她们的悲伤。

她们是第一次这样做，之前从未发生过。因为就其天性而言，欧班夫人是非常矜持的。费莉西泰从未如此感激她，仿佛得了一份无价的礼物。自此之后，她更为溺爱女主人，像狗一般忠贞，像对待圣人一般虔诚。

随着时间的流逝，她本性中的善意越发凸显了。

有一天，她听到街上行军的鼓声，便站在门前，捧着一壶苹果酒，递给士兵喝。她帮着看护霍乱病人，照顾波兰的难民。有一个波兰人甚至说，想要娶她，但他们发生了很严重的争执。那是在一天早晨，她做完礼拜回来，发现他坐在她的厨房里，镇定自若地吃着一盘

色拉，而那是她为午饭准备的。

波兰人走后，她注意到了一个叫考尔米克的老人。传言他在一七九三年做过很残暴的事情。现在他住在河边一间破败的猪圈里。镇里的小孩经常从墙缝里窥看他，朝他扔石子。他躺在草垫上，咳得快呛住了。他有一头披散的长发，眼皮发炎了，手臂上长着一个比他的头还大的瘤子。费莉西泰给了他一些布，竭力打扫干净他简陋的住所。她甚至想，也许可以将他安置在外屋，一处不会打扰到夫人的地方。瘤子破了，她就每天都给他换衣服。有时，她会给他带来一小片蛋糕，或扶他出去，将他放在一捆麦秆上，晒晒太阳。这个贫穷可怜的人语无伦次，颤动着，以一种几乎听不见的低语感谢她，说害怕她走掉。见她要走，就会伸出双手。他死了，费莉西泰做了一场弥撒，让他的灵魂安息。

同一天，她收到一份极为美妙的惊喜。在她吃饭时，勒森尼耶夫人的黑人仆从来了，带着一只关在笼子里的鹦鹉，还有栖木、链子和挂锁。男爵夫人给欧班夫人带来一张字条，说她丈夫荣升省长了，晚上他们就要离开蓬莱韦克。她问欧班夫人，能否发善心收下这只鹦鹉，作为她们友谊的纪念，以及她表达敬意的象征。

很长一段时间，费莉西泰对这只鹦鹉心存好奇。因为它来自美洲，一个总能让她想起她的维克多的地方。她曾就这只鸟问过仆从。有一次，她甚至说“夫人若能照料它，会很开心的”。

黑人仆从就把这事说给他的女主人，而她反正也不能带走，于是很乐意抓住这次机会，将它脱手了。

四

这只鹦鹉叫露露。他的身子是绿色的，翼尖是粉色的，额头是蓝色的，而胸脯是金色的。

不幸的是，他有着很惹人厌的习惯：咬栖木，拔羽毛，到处抛洒粪便，还将杯里的水飞溅得满笼子都是。欧班夫人被惹怒了，就把他送给费莉西泰来照料。

她决心教他说话，而且没过多久，他便会说：“好孩子！”“您的仆人，先生！”“万福玛利亚！”她把他放在正门附近，路过的人都很惊奇，因为他竟对“波利”没有反应，而所有的鹦鹉都叫这个名字。有人说他更像火鸡，有人则叫他傻瓜。费莉西泰觉得这些嘲弄太伤人了。令人惊奇的是，露露有种奇怪的执拗：有人看他就拒绝说话。

但他无疑还是喜欢有人陪伴的。星期天，当洛赫弗耶姐妹、胡波维尔先生，欧班夫人的新朋友药剂师翁弗洛瓦、瓦林先生和马修船长来玩纸牌的时候，露露就会用翅膀拍打窗玻璃，发出剧烈的骚乱声，闹得人都无法听清在说什么。

显然，他觉得布雷先生的脸很可笑。一见到他，就会忍不住爆发出一阵笑声。他粗砺的声音回荡在院子四周。邻居们听到后，就会来到窗前，也随之大笑。为了不让他看见，布雷先生会将脸藏在帽子后面，沿着墙偷偷地走过房前。他走过河边，从后花园绕进屋里。他投向这只鸟的眼神，可不是很温柔的。

肉铺的伙计在露露想偷吃他篮子里的东西时，弹了弹他的脑门儿。自那以后，露露总想隔着衬衫啄他。于是，法布威胁说要扭断他的脖子。他倒不是天性残忍，只是手臂上的文身和那长长的络腮胡，可能会给人留下这样的印象。事实上，他很喜欢这只鹦鹉。为了逗乐，甚至想教他脏话。费莉西泰怕他沾上这些坏毛病，就把他移到了厨房里。链子也被拿掉了，他可以在房子里四处逗留。

下楼的时候，他会用嘴钩子顶在前面的台阶上，抬起右脚，接着是左脚。费莉西泰总担心这些奇怪的动作，会将鹦鹉弄晕。果然，他生病了，不能说话，不能吃东西。他的舌尖下生了溃疡，有时候母鸡也会得这种病。费莉西泰用指甲戳破他嘴里的肿块，治好了他。有一天，保罗少爷愚蠢地将雪茄烟喷到他的鼻子里。还有一次，劳尔曼夫人用伞尖逗弄他，他咬掉了金属箍。后来，他就不见了。

费莉西泰将他放在草地上，让他呼吸新鲜空气，然后便回了室内一会儿。回来时，鹦鹉就不见了。她在灌木丛、河边，甚至在屋顶上找着，也不顾女主人喊着说：“小心，你一定是疯啦！”随后，她找遍了蓬莱韦克的每一座花园，遇到路人就问：“你凑巧见过我的鹦鹉吗？”对不熟悉鹦鹉的人，她还会做一番详细的描述。突然，她似乎看到一个绿色的东西在山脚下的磨坊后面飞着。可到了山顶，却什么也没有。一个小贩说，不久前，他在圣梅兰区西蒙老夫人的店里见过它。费莉西泰就一路跑去，但没人知道她在说什么。最后，她回来了，精疲力竭，鞋子磨破了，意志消沉。她坐在花园的椅子中央，挨着夫人，说着她所做的事情。这时，有什么轻柔地落在肩上。是露露！他究竟去干吗了？也许只是绕着镇子走了走。

费莉西泰没能立即从惊吓中复原。如果知道真相，也可以说，她再也不能恢复了。

因为着凉，她患上了扁桃体炎。不久，耳朵也疼了。三年后，她全聋了，说话特别大声，即使在教堂里也是。她的罪过散播在教区的各个角落，即使这并非有损她的名声，也不冒犯他人，但神父仍然觉得，听她忏悔最好在圣器室内。

头脑中想象的嗡嗡声令她备受折磨。她的女主人经常说：“天啊，你多蠢啊！”费莉西泰会回答说：“是的，夫人。”然后，她四处打量，仍想要找寻这嘈杂声是哪里发出的。

她陷入越来越小的自我世界里。教堂的钟声、牧场上的牛哞，远远地离她而去了。所有的活物都如鬼魂，从旁静默地经过。现在唯一能抵达她耳朵的声音，便是鹦鹉的叫声。

像是有意给她解闷似的，他模仿起烤肉叉转动的咔嗒响、鱼贩子尖锐的叫声，或者街对面工匠的锯齿声。无论何时，门铃一响起来，他就会模仿欧班夫人说：“费莉西泰，门，门！”

他们彼此交谈。鹦鹉不断地重复着三个烂熟的短句。而费莉西泰呢，则用没什么意义但发自肺腑的话来回答。在她孤绝的世界里，露露几乎成了她的儿子，她溺爱他。而他则爬上她的手指，咬咬她的唇，挂在她的披肩上。有时，她的脸会挨着他的，摇晃着，就像护士对婴儿做的那样。帽子的两翼和鸟的翅膀一起颤动着。

乌云聚集，雷电轰隆作响的时候，鹦鹉就大声地叫着，显然是忆起了野生森林里的暴雨。下雨的声音，让他很不安。他满屋子疯狂地飞着，撞上天花板，撞倒了所有的东西，最后穿过窗户逃到花园里，泼溅着泥水。但他很快就会回来，高高地栖息在壁炉架上，跳上跳下的，晾干了羽毛，自豪地展示着他的尾巴或者嘴。

一八三七年那个可怕的冬日，有一天早晨，她见天冷，就把他放

在壁炉旁。这时，她发现他死在了笼子里。头下垂着，爪子抓着金属门闩。想必是死于中风吧，但费莉西泰却想，他可能吃了欧芹，毒发而死。尽管没有确切的证据，但她怀疑是法布干的。

她哭得很伤心，最终女主人说：“为什么不把他做成标本呢？”

费莉西泰咨询了药剂师，他对鹦鹉一向很好。

他写信到勒阿弗尔，一个叫弗拉切的接了这份活儿。考虑到公共马车有时会丢失包裹，费莉西泰决定亲自带着鹦鹉，前往翁弗勒。

道路向前延伸，两旁是无尽的苹果树，光秃秃的，没什么叶子。水沟里结着冰。她走过农场时，狗吠叫着。她的手缩在斗篷下方，篮子挂在手臂上。费莉西泰穿着黑色小木屐，在路中央快步走着。

她穿过树林，走上歇纳，最终来到了圣加蒂安。

这时，在她身后起了一团尘土，只见一辆邮车飓风似的，从山上疾驰而来。车夫看女人没有躲开的意思，便站起身，目光越过马车顶，朝外望去。他和车童都竭力叫喊着。他想要四匹马停下，但没有用。它们反而越来越快，朝着她奔来。他们经过时，前头的两匹马蹭过了费莉西泰。车夫猛地一拉缰绳，迫使马匹转向了路旁。盛怒之下，他举起手臂，挥鞭打去，从她的脸一直打到了上半身。她仰面倒在了地上。

醒来时，她所做的第一件事，就是看看篮子。还好，露露毫发无损。她觉得右脸一阵阵地灼痛，便用手摸了摸，看见手是血红色的。她正在流血。

她坐在石堆上，用手帕轻抚着脸，然后吃了点预先备好的面包。她看着鹦鹉，试图借此忘记伤口。

到了埃屈埃莫维尔的山顶，她便看见翁弗勒像是群星般闪烁的夜晚灯火。再过去便是大海，朦胧地延展向远方。突然，她感到一阵晕眩。悲惨的童年，初恋带来的失望之情，外甥的离世，维尔吉妮的亡故，所有这些都潮水似的，汹涌袭来，涌进她的体内，让她窒息。

她坚持要和船长当面说话，要他好好照顾这个包裹，尽管她没说这里面有什么。

弗拉切拖了很长时间，尽管他总说下周就会寄出来。六个月后，他才说将箱子寄出来了，但之后就再没有下文了。费莉西泰怕露露再也不会回来。她想：“他被偷了，我知道的。”

最终，他还是来了。他看起来也很棒，栖息在一根树枝上，用螺丝钉固定在桃木底座上。他抬着一只爪，头侧向一边，嘴里叼着一颗坚果。标本师为了添加一点华丽的质感，还给坚果镀了金。

费莉西泰将他安置在房间里。

她很少让人进入这个房间，里面放着各种宗教小摆件和杂七杂八的东西，像是小教堂，又像是集市。

门旁有个大衣橱，妨碍人开门。面向花园的窗户对面，有一扇能望见院子的圆形小窗。有一张没有弹簧的、朴素的床。床旁边是一张桌子，桌上放着一个水壶、两把梳子、一个带缺口的碟子——上面放着一小块蓝色的肥皂。墙上挂着念珠、纪念章、几幅圣母像、一个椰子壳做的圣水杯。五斗橱蒙着布，像是圣坛，上面放着维克多给她的贝壳盒子，还有一把喷壶、一个球、一些练习册、一本带插图的地理书和一双小小的短筒靴。镜子的挂钉上，挂着那顶小小的长绒帽！这些纪念品，对费莉西泰来说，都有着很深的意义。她甚至连老爷的一件礼服都留着。欧班夫人不要的东西，她都在房间里找地方放着，像五斗橱旁放着人造花，天窗里挂着阿图瓦伯爵的画像。

至于露露，则放在专为他准备的小木架上。那木架被固定在面向房间凸起的壁炉侧墙上。每天早上醒来时，她都会在晨光中看见他。她会想起那些过去的日子，那些微小的事件，直至想到各种细枝末节。想起这些，并不让她感到悲伤，反而充满了平静。

由于不能和人交流，她的生活像是在梦游。唯有圣体瞻礼节的游行，似乎还能将她带回到生活里来。她拜访邻居，收集烛台和垫子，用来装饰那些一般会放在街上的圣坛。

她来到教堂，坐下来，凝视着圣灵的画像。她发现圣灵和她的鹦鹉很像。这种相像在一幅埃皮纳勒版画上表现得尤为明显，上面画着我主受洗的情景。那鸽子有着深红的翅膀、祖母绿的身体，跟露露一模一样。费莉西泰将这幅画买回来，挂在阿图瓦伯爵画像挂的地方，这样她就能同时看到它们。在她的心中，两者联结在了一起。因着与圣灵的联结，鹦鹉更神圣了；而圣灵也因此更显生动，更有意义。上帝当然不会选中一只鸽子去言说，因为鸽子不能说话。那么，一定会选露露的先祖吧。费莉西泰望着圣灵那幅画祈祷时，不时会微微转头，看着鹦鹉。

她想过加入圣女姐妹团，但被欧班夫人劝阻了。

现在，发生了一件大事——保罗结婚了。

起先，他是法庭书记员，随后他去经商，在海关工作，在税务局做事，甚至还考虑过加入森林和水利部门。到了三十六岁时，仿佛受了神启似的，他突然发现了自己的天职——登记处办公室！事实上，他已展现出了这方面的天赋。一位检查官已将女儿许配给他，并答应动用他的影响力，助他晋升。

他正严肃地履行自己的职责，带她来见母亲。

她指摘蓬莱韦克的所有事情，期望自己能像皇族一样被人对待。她伤害费莉西泰甚深。见她走了，欧班夫人顿觉松了口气。

接下来的那周，她们听闻布雷先生死在了下布列塔尼的一家客栈里。谣传说，他是自杀的。很快，这就被证实了。人们开始质疑他的正直。欧班夫人检查她的账本，发现了一系列他的不法行为：盗用应收租金、没有申报树木所得、伪造收据，等等。他还有一个私生子，与“多聚莱的某人有着不正当的关系”。

欧班夫人很难过。一八五三年三月，她觉得胸口疼痛。舌头上覆着层灰色的苔衣。几次放血治疗都没能减轻她的呼吸困难。到了第九晚，她就死了，刚好七十二岁。

人们觉得她看起来要年轻些，因为她的头发是黑色的，还一束束地垂在两旁，裹着她苍白的麻脸。没什么朋友来哀悼她。她平素傲慢，让人对她保持了距离。

费莉西泰哭了，很少有仆人像她那样为主人哭。夫人先于她去世，让她怎么也想不通，觉得这违背了事物的自然秩序。无法接受，也不真实。

十天后，也就是从贝桑松赶来所费的时间，继承人来到了现场。欧班夫人的媳妇翻开了所有的抽屉，留了一些家具，剩下的全卖掉了。随后，他们便返回了登记处办公室。

欧班夫人的扶手椅、小桌子、暖脚炉和八张椅子都被运走了！墙上的画像也被拿掉了，只留下一块黄色的空当。他们还带走了两张小孩的床和床垫，以及橱柜里维尔吉妮的东西。费莉西泰在房间之间来回走着，心都碎了。

第二天，门上贴着一张告示。药剂师对着她的耳朵大声说，房子要卖掉了。

费莉西泰一阵晕眩，坐了下来。

一想到要搬出自己的房间，她就极为不安。对可怜的露露来说，那也是再合适不过的地方了。她满怀痛苦，凝视着他，祈求圣灵帮助。她跪在鹦鹉面前祈祷，养成了崇拜偶像的习惯。有时候，阳光透过小窗，落在鹦鹉的玻璃眼珠上，散发着明亮的光，将她带入了狂喜之中。

女主人给费莉西泰留了一笔三百八十法郎的退休金。花园可以供给她蔬菜。至于衣服，足够她穿到生命中的最后一刻。为了节省灯火，天一黑，她就上床睡觉。

她不怎么出门，免得走过二手商店时看见正摆着的那些旧家具。自被摔晕后，她就拖着一条腿走路。现在，她更虚弱了。最近，西蒙老夫人的杂货店破产了，她每天早晨都来为她劈柴打水。

她的视力越来越差。百叶窗也不再打开了。一晃多年，没人来租房，也没人来买。

费莉西泰怕被人赶走，从未让人来修房子。屋顶的木板条烂了，整个冬天，雨水打湿了她的长枕头。复活节过去不久，她咯血了。

西蒙老夫人叫来一位医生。费莉西泰想知道她怎么了，但她的耳朵全聋了，很难听到他们说什么，只捕捉到一个词：“肺炎”。她是知道这个词的。她平静地回答说：“哈！跟夫人一样。”跟随夫人的脚步，她觉得这很自然。

准备圣坛的日子临近了。

第一座圣坛照例放在山脚下，第二座在邮局外面，第三座在街道的半途。最后一座该放在哪儿，起了些争执，但教区的女人们最终同意放在欧班夫人的院子里。

费莉西泰呼吸更艰难了，发烧也更严重。不能为圣坛做点什么，让她很难过。至少她得在上面放点什么吧。于是，她想到了鹦鹉。邻居们反对说，这样并不合适，但神父却允许了。这让费莉西泰很快乐，要神父收下她唯一的财产露露，作为死前送出的礼物。

从星期二到星期六，圣体瞻礼节前夕，她的咳嗽加剧。到了晚上，脸绷得紧紧的，嘴唇粘着牙床。她开始呕吐。第二天一早，天蒙蒙亮，她感觉很不好，便请求见神父。临终涂油礼时，四周站着三位善良的女人。然后，她说要和法布谈谈。

法布穿着他星期天最好的衣服来了。如此忧伤的氛围，令他很不舒服。

“请你原谅我。”她说，用力朝他伸出手臂，“我还以为是你杀了他。”

她在说什么废话？她怎能怀疑像他这样的人是一个凶手！法布很生气，忍不住要发脾气。

“她头脑迷糊了，”她们说，“你肯定能看得出来。”

费莉西泰似乎不时地在同幽灵谈话。女人们走了，只有西蒙老夫人留了下来，在吃午饭。

不久，她拿来露露，靠近费莉西泰。“来吧，”她说，“和他道别。”

露露不是尸体，但也被蛆蛀食了。一只翅膀断了，填充物从肚子里露了出来。但费莉西泰眼睛已瞎，没能看到。她亲吻他的额头，让他贴着自己的脸颊。西蒙老夫人将他从她那里拿开，重新放在了圣坛上。

五

从牧场那里飘来夏日的气息。苍蝇在空中嗡嗡作响。阳光在河面闪耀，照暖了屋顶上的石板瓦。西蒙老夫人回了房间，正轻柔地打着盹睡去。

突然，她被钟声惊醒了。人们正做完晚祷出来。费莉西泰镇静了许多。她想到了游行，清晰地看到了所有的一切，仿佛就置身于其中。

所有的小学生、唱诗班和消防员，都走在了人行道上。街道中央，走在队伍前头的，是执戟的教堂守卫、捧着大十字架的教区执事、管理男孩的学校校长，以及母亲般盯着女孩的修女。三个最可爱的女孩，像头发卷曲的天使，正将玫瑰花瓣撒向空中。在她们身后，助祭张开双臂，正指挥着乐队；两个捧香炉的，每走一步，都会转过头看着圣体。圣体由穿着华丽长袍的神父捧着，由四个教区委员在其上举着顶红色的天鹅绒华盖护佑。在路上，在挂着白布的房墙之间，一大群人尾随而来，最终来到山脚下。

费莉西泰额前直冒冷汗。西蒙老夫人用布给她擦拭，对自己说，终有一天她也会这样走的。

人群的嘈杂声越来越响，有一瞬间特别响亮，然后又消退了。

一阵枪声震得窗户嗡嗡作响。那是骑马的人正在向圣体匣致敬。费莉西泰转动眼珠，费力地问：“他还好吗？”她还在担心鸚鵡。

费莉西泰正进入她的弥留时刻。她喘着气，短促而嘶哑，两肋艰难地起伏，嘴角聚集着泡沫，全身开始颤抖。

外面，街上传来乐器的嘟嘟声、孩子响亮的声音，以及男人低沉的声响。有那么一些时刻，一切都沉寂了，能听到脚步因散落的花瓣变得轻柔，像是羊群穿过牧场。

神职人员走进院子。西蒙老夫人爬上椅子，朝小窗外张望，正好能看到窗下的圣坛。

圣坛挂着绿色花环，镶着英式针织的花边。正中间有一个小小的方盒子，放着圣人的遗物。两边各有一棵橘子树。沿着圣坛摆放的是一排银烛台、瓷花瓶。花瓶里插着向日葵、百合、牡丹、毛地黄和绣球花。这串绚烂的色彩，从圣坛高处一路向下，延展至铺在鹅卵石上

方的毯子。花丛里，可以见到其他一些珍贵的装饰品：一个装饰着紫罗兰花环的镀银糖罐，在小片青苔上闪烁的阿朗松宝石耳坠，两扇描画着风景的中国屏风。露露掩藏在玫瑰花底下，只见到他额头上的那点蓝，像块青金石。

教区委员、唱诗班、小孩在院子的三面站好。神父缓缓走来，将那大大的闪光的球体放在圣坛的花边上。所有人都跪了下来，一片沉静。香炉随链子晃动来回摇摆着。

一道蓝色的烟升起，进入费莉西泰的房间。她张大鼻孔，以一种神秘的狂热品味着。随后，她闭上眼睛，唇间现出一抹微笑。她的心跳放慢了，越来越微弱、模糊，像泉水干涸，回音消逝。就在呼出最后一口气时，她仿佛看到，天国开启的地方，一只巨大的鸚鵡在头上徘徊，来接纳她。

‘She decided she would teach him to speak and he was very soon able to say,
“Pretty boy!”,
“Your servant,
sir!” and “Hail Mary!”’

For half a century, Madame Aubain's housemaid Félicité was the envy of all the good ladies of Pont- l'Evêque.

For just one hundred francs a year, she did all the cook-ing and the housework, she saw to the darning, the washing and the ironing, she could bridle a horse, keep the chickens well fed and churn the butter. What is more she remained faithful to her mistress, who, it must be said, was not the easiest of people to get on with.

Madame Aubain had married a handsome but impecunious young man, who had died at the beginning of 1809, leaving her with two very young children and substantial debts. Upon his death, she sold her properties, with the exception of the two farms at Toucques and Geffosses, which between them provided her with an income of no more than five thousand francs in rent, and she moved out of her house in Saint- Melaine to live in another which was less costly to maintain, which had belonged to her family and which was situated behind the market.

This house had a slate roof and stood between an alley and a narrow street leading down to the river. Inside, the floors were at different levels, making it very easy to trip up. A narrow hallway separated the kitchen from the living room in which Madame Aubain remained all day long, sitting in a wicker armchair close to the casement window. Against the wainscoting, which was painted white, there stood a row of eight mahogany chairs. A barometer hung on the wall above an old piano, piled high with a pyramid-shaped assortment of packets and cardboard boxes. Two easy chairs upholstered in tapestry stood on either side of a Louis- Quinze- style mantelpiece in yellow marble. The clock, in the middle, was designed to look like a Temple of Vesta, and the whole room smelt musty, due to the fact that the floor level was lower than the garden.

On the first floor, there was 'Madame's' bedroom, a very large room, decorated with pale, flowery wallpaper and containing a picture of 'Monsieur' dressed up in the fanciful attire that was fashionable at the time. This room led directly to a smaller bedroom which housed two children's beds, each with the mattress removed. Next came the parlour, which was always kept locked and was full of furniture draped in dust-sheets. Finally, there was a corridor leading to a study; books and papers lay stacked on the shelves of a bookcase which ran around three walls of the room and surrounded a large writing-desk in dark wood. The two end panels of this bookcase were covered in line drawings, landscapes in gouache and etchings by Audran, a reminder of better days and of more expensive tastes that were now a thing of the past. On the second floor was Félicité's bedroom, lit by a dormer window which looked out over the fields.

Félicité always rose at first light to make sure she was in time for mass, and then worked without a break until the evening. As soon as dinner was finished, the crockery cleared away and the door firmly bolted, she would cover the log fire with ashes and go to sleep in front of the fire-place, holding her rosary in her hand. No one could have been more persistent when it came to haggling over prices and, as for cleanliness, the spotless state of her saucepans was the despair of all the other serving maids in Pont-l'Évêque. She wasted nothing and ate slowly, gathering every crumb of her loaf from the table with her fingers, a twelve-pound loaf baked especially for her and which lasted her twenty days.

In all weathers she wore a printed kerchief fastened behind with a pin, a bonnet which completely covered her hair, grey stockings, a red skirt and over her jacket a bibbed apron like those worn by hospital nurses.

Her face was thin and her voice was shrill. At twenty-five, people took her to be as old as forty. After her fiftieth birthday, it became impossible to say what age she was at all. She hardly ever spoke, and her upright stance and deliberate movements gave her the appearance of a woman made out of wood, driven as if by clockwork.

Like other girls, she had once fallen in love.

Her father, a stonemason by trade, had been killed falling from some scaffolding. Following this, her mother died and her sisters went their separate ways. A farmer took her in and, even though she was still a very young girl, he would send her out into the fields to look after the cows. She was dressed in mere rags, she shivered with cold and would lie flat on her stomach to drink water from ponds. She was regularly beaten for no reason at all and was eventually turned out of the house for having stolen thirty sous, a theft of which she was quite innocent. She was taken on at another farm, where she looked after the poultry and, because she was well liked by her employers, her friends were jealous of her.

One evening in August (she was eighteen at the time) she was taken to the village fête at Colleville. She was instantly overcome, bewildered by the boisterous sounds of the fiddle music, the lamps in the trees, the array of brightly coloured clothes, the gold crosses and the lace all those people moving as one in time to the tune. She was standing on her own, shyly, when a young man, fairly well off to judge by his appearance and who had been leaning against the shaft of a farm wagon smoking his pipe, approached her and asked her to dance. He bought her a glass of cider, a cup of coffee, a cake and a silk scarf and, imagining that she understood his motive, offered to accompany her back home. As they were walking along the edge of a field of oats, he thrust her to the ground. She was terrified and began to scream. He ran off.

One evening a little later, she was walking along the road leading to Beaumont and was trying to get past a large hay wagon as it lumbered slowly along. As she was edging her way round the wheels, she recognized Théodore.

He looked at her quite unabashed and said she should forgive his behaviour of the other night; he 'had just had too much to drink'.

She did not know how to answer him and wanted to run away.

He immediately began to talk about the harvest and various important people in the district and told her that his father had left Colleville and bought a farm at Les Ecots, which meant that they were now neighbours. 'Oh, are we!' she said. He said that his parents wanted him to settle down but that he was in no rush and preferred to wait until the right woman came along before he married. She lowered her eyes. He then asked her if she was think-ing of marrying. She smiled and said that he was wrong to tease her. 'But I am not teasing you, I swear,' he said, and slipped his left arm around her waist. She walked on with his arm still around her. They were now walking more slowly. There was a gentle breeze, the stars were shining, the huge wagon- load of hay swayed from side to side in front of them and dust rose from the feet of the four horses as they plodded along. Then, without any word of command, the horses turned off to the right. He kissed her once more and she vanished into the darkness.

The following week, Théodore persuaded her to go out with him on several other occasions.

They would meet in a corner of some farmyard, behind a wall or beneath a solitary tree. Félicité was not naive like other young girls of her age; working with the farm animals had taught her a great deal. However, her natural discretion and an intuitive sense of honour prevented her from giving in to Théodore's demands. Théodore found this resistance so frustrating that, in order to satisfy his passion (or maybe out of sheer simple- mindedness), he proposed to her. She was not sure whether to believe him or not, but he insisted that he was serious.

He then announced something rather disturbing: a year ago his parents had paid for someone else to do his mili tary service but he might still be called up at any time. The prospect of serving in the army terrified him. Félicité took this cowardice as a sign of his affection for her and it made her love him all the more. She would slip out of the house at night to meet Théodore, who assailed her with his fears and entreaties.

Eventually, he declared that he would go to the Préfec ture himself and find out what the situation was. He would come back and tell Félicité the following Sunday between eleven o'clock and midnight.

At the appointed time, Félicité ran to meet her lover.

But instead of Théodore, it was one of his friends who stood waiting to meet her.

He informed her that she would never see Théodore again. In order to make sure he could not be called up, he had married a wealthy old lady from Toucques, by the name of Madame Lehoussais.

Félicité's distress was unbounded. She threw herself to the ground, weeping and wailing; she implored God to come to her aid and lay moaning, all alone in the fields, until daylight. Then she made her way back to the farm and announced that she had decided to leave. At the end of the month, having received her wages, she wrapped her few belongings in a shawl and left for Pont-l'Evêque.

Outside the inn she spoke to a woman wearing a widow's hood who, as it happened, was looking for a cook. The young girl knew precious little about cooking but she seemed so willing and so ready to oblige that Madame Aubain eventually said: 'Very well, you may work for me.'

A quarter of an hour later, Félicité was installed in her house.

At first she lived in a constant state of trepidation as a result of 'the sort of house it was' and the memory of 'Monsieur' which seemed to hover over everything! Paul and Virginie, one aged seven and the other barely four, seemed made of some precious material; she liked to give them piggyback rides and was mortified when Madame Aubain instructed her not to keep kissing them. Even so, she was happy. Her new surroundings were very pleasant and her earlier unhappiness quickly faded.

Every Thursday, a group of Madame Aubain's friends came to play Boston. Félicité would set out the cards and the foot-warmers in readiness. The guests always arrived punctually at eight and left as the clock struck eleven.

On Monday mornings, the secondhand dealer who had a shop at the end of the lane would spread his various bits and pieces of ironmongery out on the pavement. The town would be filled with the buzz of voices, with the sounds of horses neighing, lambs bleating, pigs grunting and carts rattling through the streets. At about midday, just when the market was at its busiest, an old peasant would present himself on Madame Aubain's front doorstep – a tall man with a hooked nose and with his hat perched on the back of his head. This was Robelin, the farmer from Geffosses. He would be followed shortly afterwards by Liébard, the farmer from Toucques, short, fat and red in the face, wearing a grey jacket and leather gaiters complete with spurs.

They would both come bearing chickens or cheeses which they hoped they might persuade their landlady to buy. But Félicité was more than a match for their banter and they always respected her for this.

Madame Aubain also received sporadic visits from the Marquis de Grémanville, an uncle of hers who had squandered his money in loose living and who now lived at Falaise on the last bit of property he could still call his own. He would always turn up at lunch time with a loathsome little poodle which left its muddy paw marks all over the furniture. Despite his efforts to behave like a gentleman, raising his hat every time he mentioned his 'late father', habit would soon get the better of him and he would pour himself glass after glass and start telling bawdy jokes. Félicité would politely show him to the door. 'I think you have had enough for today, Monsieur de Grémanville! Do come and see us again soon!' And she would close the door behind him.

But she was always delighted to welcome Monsieur Bourais, a retired solicitor. His white cravat and bald head, the flounces on his shirt-front and the generous cut of his brown frock-coat, the special way he had of bending his arm when taking snuff, indeed everything about his person prompted in Félicité the sort of agitation we always feel when in the presence of some great man.

He looked after the management of 'Madame's' properties and would shut himself away with her for hours on end in 'Monsieur's' study. He lived in constant fear for his own reputation, had an inordinate respect for the judiciary and claimed to know some Latin.

Thinking that it would help the children to derive some enjoyment from their studies, he bought them an illustrated geography book. It depicted scenes from different parts of the world, cannibals wearing feathered head-dresses, a monkey abducting a young girl, a group of Bedouins in the desert, a whale being harpooned, and so on.

Paul carefully explained all these pictures to Félicité. In fact, this was the only time anyone ever taught her how to read a book.

The children received their lessons from Guyot, a rather pitiful character who worked at the Town Hall, who was noted for his fine handwriting and who used to sharpen his penknife on the sole of his shoe.

Whenever the weather was fine, the whole family would get up early and spend the day at the farm at Geffosses.

The farmyard there was on a slope, with the farmhouse in the middle. One could just see the sea, a little streak of grey in the distance.

Félicité would take a few slices of cold meat from her basket and they would eat in a room adjoining the dairy. This room was all that now remained of a country house which had fallen into ruin. The paper hung in strips from the wall and fluttered in the draught. Madame Aubain sat with her head bowed, absorbed in her memories, the children hardly daring to speak. 'Off you go and play, she would say. And off they went.

Paul would climb up into the barn, catch birds, play ducks and drakes on the pond or bang the great farm barrels with a stick to make them boom like drums.

Virginie would go and feed the rabbits or run off across the fields gathering cornflowers, showing her dainty embroidered knickers as she ran.

One evening in autumn, they were coming back through the fields.

The moon, which was in its first quarter, lit up part of the sky, and a mist drifted like a scarf over the windings of the river Touques. A group of cattle, lying in the middle of a field, lazily watched them go by. When they came to the third field, a few of them got to their feet and stood in a circle in front of them. 'There's nothing to be frightened of!' said Félicité and, humming a wistful little tune as she approached, she went up to the nearest of the animals and patted it on the back. It turned away and the others did the same. But no sooner had they got through the next field when they heard a terrifying bellowing. It was a bull that had been hidden by the mist. It began to come towards the two women. Madame Aubain wanted to run. 'No, no, we must not move too quickly!' said Félicité. They walked more quickly, even so, and could hear the bull's loud breathing getting nearer behind them and the pounding of its hoofs on the grass. They knew it was now galloping towards them! Félicité turned round to face it, grabbed clods of earth from the ground and flung them into the bull's face. It lowered its muzzle, shook its horns and began to shudder and bellow with rage. Madame Aubain had now reached the edge of the field with the two children and was frantically trying to find a way of getting over the hedge. Félicité was still steadily retreating before the bull, throwing lumps of turf into its eyes and calling out, 'Hurry up! Hurry up!'

Madame Aubain got down into the ditch, pushing first Virginie and then Paul in front of her. She fell several times as she tried to climb the bank and at last, by dint of sheer determination, she succeeded.

The bull had driven Félicité up against a gate and was blowing slaver into her face. A second later and it would have gored her. In the nick of time she managed to squeeze herself between two bars in the gate. The huge animal was taken completely by surprise and stopped in its tracks.

People in Pont- l'Evêque talked about this adventure for years afterwards. But Félicité never boasted about it and hardly seemed to realize that she had done anything heroic.

Virginie commanded all her attention. The frightening experience with the bull had affected her nerves and Mon sieur Poupart, the doctor, recommended sea bathing at Trouville.

In those days, very few people visited the resort. Madame Aubain made enquiries, sought the advice of Bourais and made preparations as if for a long journey.

The day before they left, the luggage was sent off in Liébard's farm wagon. The next day he returned with two horses. One of them had a woman's saddle with a velvet backrest and the other had a cloak rolled up across its back as a makeshift seat. Madame Aubain sat on this behind Liébard. Félicité looked after Virginie on the other horse and Paul rode separately on Monsieur Lechaptois's donkey, which had been lent on the clear understanding that they took great care of it.

The road was so bad that the five-mile journey took them two hours. The horses sank up to their pasterns in the mud and lurched forward in order to pull themselves free. They lost their footing in the ruts and sometimes had to jump. At certain points on the road, Liébard's mare would suddenly stop dead. Liébard would wait patiently for her to move forward again. As they rode on, he would tell them stories about the people who lived along the way, always adding a few personal comments of his own for good measure. In the town centre of Toucques, for instance, as they were passing alongside a house with nasturtiums growing around the windows, he said, with a shrug of his shoulders, 'There's a Madame Lehoussais lives there and, rather than take a young man . . .' Félicité did not hear the rest, for the horses had broken into a trot and the donkey had run on ahead. They turned down a track, a gate swung open, two young farmhands appeared and they all dismounted beside the manure-heap right outside the front door of the farmhouse.

Old Madame Liébard greeted her mistress with effusive expressions of delight. For lunch she served a sirloin of beef, along with tripe, black pudding, a fricassee of chicken, sparkling cider, a fruit tart and plums in brandy, all accompanied by a stream of compliments to Madame who seemed 'in much better health', to Mademoiselle who had grown up into such 'a fine looking young woman', to Monsieur Paul who was such a 'strapping' young man, not forgetting their dear departed grandparents whom the Liébards had known personally, having been in service to the family for several generations. The farm, like the Liébards themselves, had an old-world feel to it. The beams in the ceiling were pitted with woodworm, the walls blackened with smoke the window panes grey with dust. There was an oak dresser, cluttered with all manner of implements – jugs, plates, pewter bowls, wolf-traps, shears for the sheep and a huge syringe which particularly amused the children. In the three yards outside, there was not a single tree which did not have mushrooms growing at its foot or clumps of mistletoe in its branches. Several had been blown down by the wind but had begun to grow again where the trunk had been split and all of them were bent beneath the weight of apples. The thatched roofs looked like brown velvet of unequal thickness and weathered the fiercest winds. But the shed for the carts was falling down. Madame Aubain said that she would arrange to have it repaired and asked for the horses to be reharnessed.

It took them another half- hour to reach Trouville. The little caravan had to dismount when they came to the Ecores, a cliff which jutted out over the boats below Three minutes later they had arrived at the end of the quay and turned into the courtyard of the Golden Lamb an inn run by old Madame David.

Virginie very quickly began to recover her strength as a result of the change of air and of bathing in the sea. She did not have a bathing costume and so she went into the water wearing a chemise. Afterwards, her maid would help her to get dressed in a customs officer's hut that was also used by the bathers.

In the afternoon, they would take the donkey and walk out beyond the Roches- Noires, towards Hennequeville. At first the path wound up between gently rolling meadows like the lawn in a park and then came to a plateau where there were grazing pastures and ploughed fields. The path was lined by holly bushes which grew amongst the tangles of brambles, and here and there the branches of a large dead tree traced their zigzag patterns against the blue of the sky.

There was one particular field in which they usually stopped to rest themselves, looking down towards Deau-ville to their left, Le Havre to their right and, in front of them, the open sea. It lay shimmering in the sunshine, as smooth as the surface of a mirror and so calm that they could barely hear the murmur of the waves. Sparrows twit-tered from somewhere nearby and the great dome of the sky lay spread out above them. Madame Aubain would sit with her needlework, Virginie would sit beside her, plaiting rushes, Félicité gathered bunches of wild lavender and Paul, utterly bored, would always be itching to move on.

At other times they would take the ferry across the Touques and go looking for shells. At low tide, sea urchins, ormers and jellyfish were left behind on the sand. The children would chase after flecks of foam blown about by the breeze. The waves broke lazily on the sand from one end of the beach to the other. The beach stretched as far as the eye could see but was bounded on the landward side by sand dunes which separated it from the Marais, a broad meadow in the shape of a racecourse. As they walked back through it towards Trouville, which lay at the foot of the hill, the town appeared to grow bigger at every step they took and, with its motley assortment of houses, it seemed to blossom like a flower garden in colourful disarray.

When it was too hot, they kept to their room. The dazzling brightness outside cast bars of light through the slats in the window blinds. There was not a sound to be heard in the village. Not a soul ventured out into the streets. The prevailing quiet made everything seem all the more peaceful. From far away came the sound of the caulkers' hammers beating against the hull of a boat and the smell of tar was wafted to them on the listless breeze.

The most exciting event of the day was when the fishing boats came in. Once past the entrance buoys, they would begin to tack from side to side. Their main sails would be lowered to half-mast and, with their foresail swollen like a great balloon, they would come gliding through the splashing waves right into the middle of the harbour and suddenly drop anchor. The boat would then be brought alongside the quay. The sailors would hoist their fish ashore, still live and quivering. A line of carts was ready waiting and women in cotton bonnets rushed forward to take the baskets and to kiss their menfolk.

One day one of these women came up to Félicité. A moment or two later, Félicité was back in the room at the inn, beside herself with excitement. She had found one of her lost sisters, and into the room walked Nastasie Barette, now Leroux, with a baby at her breast, another child holding her right hand and, on her left, a little ship's boy with his hands on his hips and his beret over one ear.

After a quarter of an hour, Madame Aubain asked her to leave.

But after that there was no getting away from them. They would wait just outside the kitchen or follow them when they went for walks. The husband always kept well out of sight.

Félicité became very attached to them. She bought them a blanket, some shirts and a cooking stove. They were obviously out to take advantage of her. Madame Aubain was annoyed that Félicité was not more firm with them. She also took objection to the familiar way in which the nephew spoke to Paul. So, because Virginie had developed a cough and the weather had taken a turn for the worse, she returned to Pont- l'Evêque.

Monsieur Bourais offered his advice on choosing a good school for Paul. The one at Caen was generally considered to be the best. So Paul was sent away to Caen. He said his goodbyes bravely, really quite pleased that he was going to live somewhere where he would have some friends of his own.

Madame Aubain resigned herself to her son going away, knowing that he must have a good education. Virginie quickly got used to being on her own, but Félicité found the house very quiet without him. Soon, however she had something else to occupy her mind. From Christmas onwards she had to take Virginie to catechism every day.

Genuflecting as she went in through the door, Félicité walked up the aisle beneath the high ceiling of the nave opened the door of Madame Aubain's pew, sat herself down and looked all around her.

The children were seated in the choir stalls, the boys on the right and the girls on the left. The priest stood in front of them beside the lectern. One of the stained-glass windows in the apse showed the Holy Spirit looking down on the Virgin Mary. In another, the Virgin knelt before the infant Jesus and behind the tabernacle there was a carving in wood representing Saint Michael slaying the dragon.

The priest began with a summary of the Holy Scriptures. Félicité's mind was filled with images of Paradise the Flood, the Tower of Babel, cities consumed by flames peoples dying and idols cast down. This dazzling recital of events instilled in her a wholesome respect for the Almighty and a profound fear of his wrath. She wept at the story of Christ's Passion. Why had they crucified a man who was so kind to children, fed the hungry, gave sight to the blind, and who had chosen, out of his own gentle nature, to be born amongst the poor on the rough straw of a stable? Seed-time and harvest, the fruits of the vine, all those familiar things mentioned in the gospels had their place in her life too. They now seemed sanctified by contact with God. Félicité loved lambs all the more because of her love for the Lamb of God, and doves now reminded her of the Holy Spirit.

She found it difficult to imagine what the Holy Spirit actually looked like because he was not only a bird but sometimes a fire and sometimes a breath. Perhaps it was the light of the Holy Spirit that she would see at night-time, flickering at the edge of the marshes, or his breath which drove the clouds across the sky, or his voice which made the church bells ring so beautifully. She sat rapt in adoration of these wonders, delighting in the cool-ness of the stone walls and the peacefulness of the church.

Of church dogma she understood not a word and did not even attempt to understand it. As the curé stood explaining it all to the children and the children repeated what they had learnt, Félicité would drop off to sleep, to be woken suddenly by the clatter of wooden shoes on the stone floor as the children left the church. And so Félicité came to learn her catechism by dint of hearing the children recite it, for her own religious education had been neglected when she was young. From then on, she copied the religious observances of Virginie, fasting when she fasted and going to confession whenever she did. For the feast of Corpus Christi, Félicité and Virginie made an altar of repose together.

For days beforehand, Félicité fretted over the preparations for Virginie's first communion. She worried about her shoes, her rosary, her missal and her gloves. Her hands trembled as she helped Madame Aubain to dress her.

All through the mass she was on tenterhooks. One half of the choir stalls was hidden from her sight by Monsieur Bourais, but straight in front of her she could see the flock of young girls all wearing white crowns over their lowered veils and looking like a field of snow. Even from a distance, she could recognize her beloved little Virginie by the delicate line of her neck and her attitude of reverent contemplation. The bell tinkled. They all bowed their heads and knelt in silence. Then, with a mighty flourish from the organ, the choir and congregation sang the Agnus Dei. After the boys had processed forwards, the girls stood up. With their hands joined in prayer, they moved slowly towards the candle-lit altar, knelt at the altar-step, received the Host one by one and returned in the same order to their place in the choir stalls. When it came to Virginie's turn, Félicité leant further forwards so that she could see her and, with that singular imagination that is born of true love, she felt she was herself Virginie assuming her expression, wearing her dress and with her heart beating inside her breast. As Virginie opened her mouth, Félicité closed her eyes and almost fainted.

The next morning, bright and early, Félicité went to the sacristy and asked to be given communion. She received it with due reverence but did not experience the same rapture.

Madame Aubain wanted the best possible education for her daughter and, because Guyot was unable to teach her either English or music, she resolved to send her to the Ursuline convent school in Honfleur.

Virginie had no objection to this plan but Félicité was most unhappy and felt that Madame was being too strict. However, she came to accept that it was not really for her to decide and that her mistress probably knew best.

Then one day, an old carriage drew up outside the door. Out of it got a nun who had come to collect Mademoiselle. Félicité loaded the luggage up on to the rack, issued some parting instructions to the driver and put six pots of jam, a dozen pears and a bunch of violets in the boot.

Just as they were about to leave, Virginie burst into tears. She clung to her mother, who kissed her on the forehead and kept telling her: 'Come, come, we must be brave!' The step was pulled up and the carriage drove away.

When it had gone, Madame Aubain broke down and that evening all her friends, Monsieur and Madame Lormeau, Madame Lechaptois, the two Rochefeuille sisters, Monsieur de Houpeville and Bourais, came round to comfort her.

At first, the loss of her daughter left her feeling very sad. But she received letters from her on three days each week and on the other days she wrote back to her, walked in her garden, read a little and so managed to occupy her time.

Every morning, out of habit, Félicité would go into Virginie's bedroom and gaze at the walls. She missed being able to comb her hair for her, tie her bootlaces and tuck her up in bed; she missed seeing her sweet little face always beside her and holding her hand when they went out for walks. For want of something to do, she tried to take up lace work. But she was too clumsy with her fingers and she kept breaking the threads. She could not put her mind to anything and was losing sleep. She was, in her own words, 'all empty inside'.

In order to provide herself with 'a bit of company', she asked Madame Aubain if her nephew Victor might be allowed to visit her.

He would always arrive on Sundays, just after mass, rosy cheeked, his shirt unbuttoned and bringing with him the smells of the countryside through which he had travelled. She straight away laid the table for him. They would eat lunch sitting opposite each other, Félicité taking care to eat as little as possible so as to save on expense and giving Victor so much to eat that he ended up falling asleep. As the first bell for vespers began to ring, she would wake him up, give his trousers a good brush, tie his tie, and make her way to church, leaning on his arm like a proud mother

His parents always told him to make sure he brought something back with him, a bag of sugar, a piece of soap a little brandy or even money. He brought with him any of his clothes that needed mending and Félicité always did the work willingly, glad of any opportunity of encouraging him to visit her again.

In August, Victor went to join his father on his sea trips along the coast.

It was the beginning of the school holidays and it was some consolation to Félicité to have the children back at home. But Paul had become rather temperamental and Virginie was now too grown-up to be treated as a little child, which created a sense of awkwardness and distance between them.

Victor's travels took him to Morlaix, to Dunkirk and to Brighton and after each trip he brought back a present for Félicité. The first was a little box made out of shells, the second a coffee cup and the third a big gingerbread man. He was growing into a handsome young man, with a fine figure, the first signs of a moustache, a frank and open expression and a little leather cap which he wore perched on the back of his head like a sea pilot. He would entertain Félicité by telling her stories laced with all sorts of nautical jargon.

One Monday, 14 July 1819 (it was a date that Félicité was never to forget), Victor announced that he had been signed on to the crew of an ocean-going ship and that in two days' time he would be taking the night ferry from Honfleur to join his schooner, which was due shortly to set sail from Le Havre. He might be away for two years.

The prospect of such a long separation left Félicité feeling very saddened. In order to say one final farewell to him, on the Wednesday evening, after Madame had finished her dinner, she put on her clogs and ran the ten miles from Pont-l'Évêque to Honfleur.

When she came to the Calvary, instead of turning left she turned right, got lost in the shipyards and had to retrace her steps. She asked directions from some passers- by, who told her she would have to hurry. She walked all the way round the harbour, which was full of boats, getting caught up in the moorings as she went. Suddenly the ground seemed to fall away beneath her beams of light criss- crossed before her eyes and she thought she must be losing her senses when she saw some horses in the sky overhead.

On the quayside, more horses were neighing, frightened by the sea. They were being hoisted into the air by a der rick and then lowered into a boat which was already crammed with passengers trying to squeeze their way between barrels of cider, baskets of cheese and sacks of grain. Hens were cackling and the captain was swearing. One of the deck- hands, apparently oblivious to everything around him, stood leaning against the cat- head. Félicité had not recognized him and was calling out 'Victor!' again and again. He looked up and she rushed forward, but just at that moment the gangway was suddenly pulled ashore.

The boat moved out of the harbour, hauled along by a group of women who sang in chorus as they went about their work. Its ribs creaked and heavy waves lashed its bows. The sail swung round and hid everyone from view. The surface of the sea shone like silver in the moonlight and on it the ship appeared as a black spot, growing paler as it moved away. Eventually it was swallowed up in the distance and vanished from sight.

Returning home, Félicité passed by the Calvary and was taken by a sudden desire to commend to God's mercy all that she held dear. She stood there praying for a long time, with tears running down her cheeks and her eyes fixed on the clouds above. The town was fast asleep; the only people about were the customs men. Water could be heard gushing through the holes in the lock- gate like a running torrent. A clock struck two.

The convent would not be open to visitors before day-break and Félicité knew that, if she arrived back late, Madame was sure to be annoyed. So, although she would have loved just one small kiss from Virginie, she set off back home. The maids at the inn were just waking up as she walked into Pont- l'Evêque.

So poor little Victor was to spend months on end being tossed around on the waves! His previous trips at sea had not bothered her. England and Brittany were places one came back from. But America, the colonies and the Antil-les were lost in some unknown region on the other side of the world.

From the day he left, Félicité could not stop thinking about her nephew. When it was hot and sunny, she worried that he might be thirsty and when there was a storm, she feared he might be struck by lightning. As she listened to the wind howling in the chimney and blowing slates off the roof, she pictured him buffeted by the same storm clinging to the top of a broken mast and being flung backwards into a sheet of foam. At other times, prompted by her recollection of the pictures in the geography book she imagined him being eaten by savages, captured by monkeys in a forest or dying on some deserted beach. But she never spoke about these worries to anyone.

Madame Aubain had worries of her own about her daughter.

The sisters at the convent said that she was an affectionate child, but over-sensitive. The slightest emotion unsettled her and she had to give up playing the piano.

Her mother insisted that she wrote home regularly. One morning, when the postman had failed to appear, she could scarcely contain her impatience and kept pacing backwards and forwards in her room between her arm chair and the window. This really was extraordinary! No news for four days!

Thinking that her own situation might serve as some comfort to her mistress, Félicité ventured:

‘But Madame, I haven’t received any news for six months!’

‘News from whom?’

‘Why, news from my nephew,’ Félicité gently replied.

‘Oh, your nephew!’ And with a shrug of her shoulders, Madame Aubain began pacing about the room again, as if to say, ‘I hadn’t given him a thought! And in any case, he’s no concern of mine! A mere ship’s boy, a scrounger; he’s not worth bothering about! But someone like my daughter . . . Really!’

Although Félicité had been fed such rough treatment since she was a child, she felt very offended by Madame Aubain. But she soon got over it.

After all, it was to be expected that Madame should get upset about her own daughter.

For Félicité, the two children were of equal importance; they were bound together by her love for them and it seemed right that they should share the same fate.

Félicité learnt from the chemist that Victor's ship had arrived in Havana. He had read the announcement in a newspaper.

Because of its association with cigars, Félicité imagined Havana to be a place in which the only thing people did was to smoke and she pictured Victor walking amongst crowds of Negroes in a cloud of tobacco smoke. Was it possible to return from Havana by land, 'if need be'? How far was it from Pont- l'Evêque? In order to find out, she went to consult Monsieur Bourais.

He reached for his atlas and launched into a disquisition on lines of longitude. Félicité was utterly bewildered. Bourais sat in front of her, beaming smugly to himself, like the know- all he was. Eventually, he picked up his pencil and pointed to an almost invisible black dot in one of the little indentations in the contour of an oval- shaped patch on the map. 'Here it is,' he said. Félicité peered closely at the map. The network of coloured lines was a strain on her eyes, but it told her nothing. Bourais asked her what was puzzling her and she asked him if he would show her the house in which Victor was living. Bourais raised his arms in the air, sneezed and roared with laughter, delighted to come across someone so simple- minded Félicité, whose understanding was so limited that she probably even expected to see a picture of her nephew could not understand what he found so funny.

It was a fortnight after this, at his usual time on market day, that Liébard came into the kitchen and handed Félicité a letter which he had received from her brother- in- law. As neither of them could read, Félicité showed the letter to her mistress.

Madame Aubain, who was counting the stitches on a piece of knitting, put her work to one side, opened the letter, gave a sudden start and then, lowering her voice and looking very serious, she said, 'They are sending you . . . bad news. Your nephew . . .'

Victor was dead. That was all the letter said.

Félicité sank down on to a chair and leant her head against the wall. Her eyelids closed and suddenly flushed pink. She remained there, her head bowed, her hands hanging limply at her side, staring in front of her and repeating over and over again, 'The poor boy! The poor boy!'

Liébard stood looking at her and sighing. Madame Aubain was shaking slightly.

She suggested that Félicité might go and see her sister at Trouville.

Félicité gave a wave of her hand to indicate that it was not necessary.

There was a silence. Old Liébard thought it best to leave.

When he had gone, Félicité said, 'It doesn't matter a bit, not to them it doesn't.'

She lowered her head again and sat there, now and then toying distractedly with the knitting needles that lay on the work-table.

A group of women passed by in the yard, wheeling a barrow-load of dripping linen.

Félicité caught sight of them through the window and suddenly remembered that she had washing to do herself. She had passed the lye through it the day before and today it needed rinsing. She got up and left the room.

Her washing board and her tub were on the bank of the Toucques. She flung her pile of chemises on to the ground beside the river, rolled up her sleeves and seized her battledore. The drubbing could be heard in all the neighbouring gardens. The fields lay deserted and the wind rippled the surface of the river. On the river-bed, long strands of weed drifted with the current, like the hair of corpses floating downstream in the water. Félicité managed to restrain her grief and was very brave until the evening, but when she was alone in her room she gave in to it, lying prone on her mattress with her face buried in the pillow and pressing her fists to her temples.

Much later, she came to learn the circumstances of Victor's death from the captain of his ship. He had caught yellow fever and had been bled too much in the hospital. Four separate doctors had given him the same treatment and he had died immediately. The chief doctor's comment was, 'Good, that's one more to add to the list!'

Victor had always been treated cruelly by his parents and Félicité preferred not to see them again. They did not get in touch with Félicité either; perhaps they had simply forgotten about her or perhaps poverty had hardened their hearts.

Virginie was now growing weaker.

Difficulty in breathing, a persistent cough, a constant high temperature and pale blotches on her cheeks all pointed to some underlying disorder. Monsieur Poupart had advised a holiday in Provence. Madame Aubain decided to follow his advice and would have brought Virginie back home immediately, had it not been for the weather at Pont- l'Evêque.

She had a standing arrangement with a job- master, who drove her to the convent every Tuesday. In the convent garden there was a terrace overlooking the Seine where Virginie would walk up and down over the fallen vine leaves, leaning on her mother's arm. She would look out at the sails in the distance and the whole sweep of the estuary from the chateau at Tancarville to the lighthouses at Le Havre. Sometimes the sun would suddenly break through the clouds and make her blink. Afterwards, they would rest under the arbour. Her mother had procured a little flask of the choicest Malaga wine, from which Virginie would take just two tiny sips, laughing at the thought of making herself tipsy.

She began to recover her strength. Autumn gradually slipped by. Félicité did all she could to reassure Madame Aubain. But one evening, on her way back from an errand in the town, she noticed Monsieur Poupart's gig standing at the front door. Monsieur Poupart himself was in the entrance hall and Madame Aubain was fastening her bonnet.

'Bring me my foot- warmer, my purse and my gloves! Hurry!'

Virginie had pneumonia and Madame feared she was beyond recovery.

'I'm sure it's not that bad,' said the doctor, and the two of them climbed into his carriage, with the snowflakes falling in great flurries around them. Night was drawing on and it was bitterly cold.

Félicité dashed into the church to light a candle and then began to run after Monsieur Poupart's gig. It was a full hour before she caught up with it. She jumped up behind it and clung to the fringe. Suddenly a thought occurred to her. "The gate to the courtyard was not locked! What if thieves should break in!" She jumped back down on to the road.

The next day, at the very first sign of daylight, she went to the doctor's house. The doctor had returned but had already left again to visit patients in the country. She waited at the inn, thinking that someone or other might arrive with a letter. Eventually, in the half-light of morning, she boarded the Lisieux stagecoach.

The convent was situated at the foot of a steep narrow street. When she was about half-way down the street, she began to make out strange sounds coming from the convent; it was the tolling of a death bell. 'It must be for someone else', she thought, and gave the door-knocker a loud rap.

After some considerable time, she heard the shuffle of foot steps, the door was inched open and a nun appeared

The good sister solemnly announced that 'she had just passed away'. At precisely the same moment, the bell of Saint- Léonard's began to toll even more strongly.

Félicité went up to the second floor.

She stood in the doorway of the bedroom and could see Virginie laid out on her back, her hands clasped together, her mouth open and her head tilted backwards. Above her head and inclined towards her was a black crucifix; her face was whiter than the drapes which hung stiffly around her. Madame Aubain lay hugging the foot of the bed and sobbing wildly. The Mother Superior stood beside her on the right. On the chest of drawers three candlesticks gave out little circles of red light; outside, the fog whitened the window panes. Some nuns came and led Madame Aubain away.

Félicité did not leave Virginie's bedside for two whole nights. She sat there, repeating the same prayers over and over again; she would get up to sprinkle holy water on the sheets, then come back to her chair and continue to gaze fixedly at the dead girl. At the end of her first night's vigil, she noticed that her face was beginning to turn yellow, her lips were turning blue, her nose had grown thinner and her eyes had become sunken. More than once she kissed her eyes and would not have been in the least surprised if Virginie had opened them again; to minds like hers, the supernatural appears perfectly ordinary. She laid her out, wrapped her in her shroud, put her in her coffin, placed a wreath upon her and spread out her hair. Her hair was fair and amazingly long for a girl of her age. Félicité cut off a large lock of it and slipped half of it into her bosom, resolv-ing that it would never be separated from her.

The body was brought back to Pont- l'Evêque, accord-ing to Madame Aubain's instructions. Madame Aubain followed the hearse in a closed carriage.

After the funeral mass, it took another three- quarters of an hour to get to the cemetery. Paul led the procession, sobbing. Monsieur Bourais walked behind him, followed in turn by various dignitaries from Pont- l'Evêque, the women, all wearing black veils, and lastly Félicité. Félicité could not help thinking of her nephew and, having been unable to offer him these last honours, she now felt an added grief, as if he were being buried along with Virginie.

Madame Aubain's despair knew no bounds.

At first she rebelled against God, thinking it was unjust that He should take her daughter from her when she had never done any wrong and when there was nothing for her to feel guilty about. But perhaps there was. She should have taken her to the South. Other doctors would have cured her. She blamed herself, wished she could follow her daughter to the grave and called out in anguish in the middle of her dreams. One dream in particular tormented her. Her husband, dressed like a sailor, had returned from a long voyage and, choking back his tears told her that he had received an order to take Virginie away. They then both racked their brains to think of a hiding place for her.

On one occasion she came in from the garden dis traught. Just a moment before (and she pointed to the spot), the father and daughter had appeared in front of her, one after the other. They were not doing anything; they were just staring at her.

For several months she remained in her room, totally listless. Félicité gently admonished her, telling her that she should look after herself for the sake of her son and her late husband and in memory of 'her'.

'Her?' said Madame Aubain as though waking from sleep. 'Oh yes, of course. You haven't forgotten her, have you!' This was a reference to the cemetery, which Madame Aubain had been expressly forbidden to visit.

Félicité went there every day.

On the stroke of four, she would walk past the row of houses, climb the hill, open the gate and approach Virginie's grave. There was a little column of pink marble standing on a stone base, with a small garden surrounded by chains. The separate beds could hardly be seen beneath the covering of flowers. Félicité would water the leaves, place fresh sand on the garden and get down on her hands and knees to make sure the ground was properly weeded. When Madame Aubain was eventually able to come to see the grave, she found it a source of comfort, a kind of consolation for her loss.

The years passed, one very much like another, marked only by the annual recurrence of the church festivals: Easter, the Assumption, All Saints' Day. It was only little incidents in their daily lives that, in later years, enabled them to recall a particular date. Thus in 1825 two glaziers whitewashed the entrance hall; in 1827 a part of the roof fell into the courtyard and nearly killed a passer-by. In the summer of 1828 it was Madame's turn to distribute consecrated bread to the parishioners. This was also about the same time that Bourais mysteriously left the town. One by one, all their old acquaintances went away: Guyot, Liébard, Madame Lechaptois, Robelin and old Uncle Gremenville, who had been paralysed for many years.

One night, the driver of the mail-coach arrived in Pont-l'Évêque with news of the July Revolution. A few days later, a new subprefect was appointed: the Baron de Larsonnière, who had previously been a consul in America. He arrived in Pont-l'Évêque accompanied not only by his wife but also by his sister-in-law and three young girls, all of them already quite grown up. They were often to be seen on their lawn, dressed in long, flowing smocks. They also had a Negro servant and a parrot. They called on Madame Aubain to pay their respects and she made a point of doing likewise. As soon as she spotted them approaching in the distance, Félicité would come running in to tell Madame Aubain that they were on their way. But there was only one thing that could really awaken her interest and that was her son's letters.

Paul seemed unable to settle down to a career and spent much of his time in the tavern. Madame Aubain would pay off his debts, but he immediately ran up new ones. She would sit at her knitting by the window and heave sighs that Félicité could hear even in the kitchen, where she was working at her spinning wheel.

The two women would often take a stroll together alongside the trellised wall of the garden. They still talked constantly about Virginie, wondering whether she would have liked such and such a thing or trying to imagine what she would have said on such and such an occasion.

All her belongings were still in a cupboard in the child's bedroom. Madame Aubain had avoided looking inside it as much as possible. Then, one summer day, she resigned herself. Moths came flying from the cupboard.

Virginie's frocks hung in a row beneath a shelf upon which there were three dolls, some hoops, a set of doll's furniture and her own hand-basin. The two women took out all the petticoats, stockings and handkerchiefs and spread them out on the two beds before folding them again. This sorry collection of objects lay there, caught in a beam of sunlight which brought out all the stains and the creases that had been made by the movements of Virginie's body. The air was warm, the sky was blue, a blackbird sang outside and the world seemed to be utterly at peace. They found a little chestnut-coloured hat made of long-piled plush, but it had been completely destroyed by the moths. Félicité asked if she might have it as a keepsake. The two women looked at each other and their eyes filled with tears. Madame Aubain opened her arms and Félicité threw herself into them. Mistress and servant embraced each other, uniting their grief in a kiss which made them equal.

It was the first time that this had ever happened, Madame Aubain being, by nature, very reserved. Félicité could not have been more grateful if she had been offered a priceless gift and from then on she doted on her mistress with dog-like fidelity and the reverence that might be accorded to a saint.

As time went by, Félicité's natural kind- heartedness increased.

One day she heard the sound of drums from a regiment marching along the street and she stood at the door with a jug of cider, handing out drinks to the soldiers. She helped to nurse cholera victims and to look after the refu-gees from Poland. One of the Poles even said he would like to marry her, but they had a serious argument when she came back one morning from the angelus to find him ensconced in her kitchen, calmly helping himself to a salad which she had prepared for lunch.

After the Poles had left, she turned her attention to an old man by the name of Colmiche, who was rumoured to have committed terrible atrocities in '93. He now lived down by the river in a ruined pigsty. The boys in the town used to spy on him through the cracks in the wall and throw stones at him as he lay coughing and choking on his straw bed. He had long, straggling hair, his eyelids were inflamed and on one arm there was a swelling bigger than his head. Félicité provided him with linen and did what she could to keep his hovel clean; she even hoped she might be able to install him in the outhouse, where he would not disturb Madame. When the tumour burst she changed his dressing every single day. Sometimes she would bring him a small piece of cake or help him outside on to a bundle of straw, where he could lie in the sun. The poor old wretch would splutter and shake and thank her in a barely audible whisper, saying he could not bear to lose her and stretching out his hands the minute he saw her preparing to leave him. He died and Félicité had a mass said for the repose of his soul.

On the same day, she received the most wonderful surprise. Just as she was serving dinner, Madame de Larsonnière's Negro servant arrived, carrying the parrot in its cage, along with its perch, chain and padlock. There was a note from the Baroness, informing Madame Aubain that her husband had been promoted to a Préfecture and that they were leaving Pont- l'Evêque that very evening. She asked Madame Aubain if she would be kind enough to accept the parrot as a memento of their friendship and as a token of her respect.

The parrot had been a source of wonder to Félicité for a long time, for it came from America, a word which always reminded her of Victor. She had already questioned the servant about it and, on one occasion, had even said that 'Madame would be delighted to look after it!'

The Negro had mentioned this to his mistress and, because she could not take it away with her, she readily seized this opportunity of getting it off her hands.

The parrot was called Loulou. His body was green, the tips of his wings were pink, the top of his head was blue and his breast was gold- coloured.

Unfortunately, he had the tiresome habit of chewing his perch and he kept plucking out his feathers, scattering his droppings everywhere and splashing the water from his bath all over his cage. He thoroughly irritated Madame Aubain and so she gave him to Félicité to look after.

She decided she would teach him to speak and he was very soon able to say, 'Pretty boy!', 'Your servant, sir!' and 'Hail Mary!' She put him near the front door and a number of visitors were surprised that he would not answer to the name 'Polly', which is what all parrots are supposed to be called. Some people said he looked more like a turkey or called him a blockhead. Félicité found their jibes very hurtful. There was a curious stubborn streak in Loulou which never ceased to amaze Félicité; he would refuse to talk the minute anyone looked at him!

Even so, there was no doubt that he appreciated company. On Sundays, when the Rochefeuille sisters Monsieur de Houpeville and some of Madame Aubain's new friends – the apothecary Onfroy, Monsieur Varin and Captain Mathieu – came round to play cards, Loulou would beat on the window panes with his wings and make such a furious commotion that no one could hear them selves speak.

He obviously found Bourais's face a source of great amusement. He only had to see it and he would break into fits of uncontrollable laughter. His squawks could be heard echoing round the yard. The neighbours would come to their windows and start laughing too. To avoid being seen by the parrot, Bourais would slink past the house along the side of the wall, hiding his face behind his hat. He would go down to the river and come into the house by way of the back garden. The looks he gave the bird were not of the tender variety.

The butcher's boy had once flipped Loulou on the ear for trying to help himself to something from his basket and, since then, Loulou always tried to give him a peck through his shirt. Fabu threatened to wring his neck although he was not cruel by nature, despite what the tattoos on his arms and his long side whiskers might have led one to believe. In fact, he was rather fond of the parrot and, just for the fun of it, he had even tried to teach him a few swear words. Félicité was alarmed at the thought of his acquiring such bad habits and moved him into the kitchen. His chain was removed and he was allowed to wander all over the house.

When he came down the stairs, he would position the curved part of his beak on the step in front of him and then raise first his right foot, followed by his left. Félicité was always worried that these weird acrobatics would make the parrot giddy. He fell ill and could not talk or eat due to an ulcer under his tongue, such as chickens sometimes have. Félicité cured him herself, extracting the lump in his mouth with her fingernails. One day, Mon-sieur Paul was silly enough to blow cigar smoke up his nose. On another occasion, when Madame Lormeau was teasing him with the end of her parasol, he bit off the metal ferrule with his beak. Then there was the time he got lost.

Félicité had put him out on the grass to get some fresh air. She went indoors for a minute and, when she came back, the parrot had disappeared. She searched for him in the bushes, by the river and even on the rooftops, oblivious to her mistress's shouts of 'Do be careful! You must be mad!' She then hunted through every single garden in Pont- l'Evêque and stopped all the people in the street, asking, 'You don't happen to have seen my parrot by any chance?' Those who did not already know the parrot were given a full description. Suddenly, she thought she saw something green flying about behind the mills at the bottom of the hill. But when she got to the top of the hill there was nothing to be seen. A pedlar told her he had definitely seen the bird only a short while ago in old Madame Simon's shop at Saint- Melaine. Félicité ran all the way there, but nobody knew what she was talking about. In the end she came back home, utterly exhausted, her shoes torn to shreds and feeling sick at heart. She sat down on the middle of the garden bench, next to Madame, and she was telling her everything that she had done when she suddenly felt something drop gently on to her shoulder It was Loulou! What on earth had he been up to? Perhaps he had just gone for a little walk around the town!

It took Félicité quite a while to recover from this shock If the truth were known, she never really recovered from it completely.

She caught tonsillitis, as a result of getting thoroughly chilled, and shortly afterwards developed pains in her ears. Within three years she was completely deaf and spoke in a very loud voice, even in church. Even though her sins could have been proclaimed in every corner of the diocese without bringing any discredit to her or causing offence to others, the curé decided that it would now be best to hear her confession in the sacristy.

Imaginary buzzing noises in her head added to her troubles. Her mistress would often say, 'Goodness me! You're just being silly!' Félicité would answer, 'Yes, Mad-ame,' still looking around her to see where the noises were coming from.

She became enclosed in an ever- diminishing world of her own; gone for ever was the pealing of church bells and the lowing of cattle in the fields. Every living thing passed by her in ghostly silence. Only one sound now reached her ears, and that was the voice of her parrot.

Almost as if he were deliberately trying to entertain her, he would imitate the clicking of the turnspit, the shrill cry of the fishmonger or the sound of sawing from the joiner's shop on the other side of the street. Whenever the front door bell rang, he would imitate Madame Aubain: 'Félicité! The door, the door!'

They would hold conversations with each other, the parrot endlessly repeating the three stock phrases from his repertory and Félicité replying with words that made very little sense but which all came straight from the heart. In her isolation, Loulou was almost a son to her; she simply doted on him. He used to climb up her fingers, peck at her lips and hang on to her shawl. Sometimes she would put her face close to his and shake her head in the way a nurse does to a baby, with the wings of her bonnet and the bird's wings all fluttering together.

When storm clouds gathered and thunder rumbled, the bird would squawk loudly, no doubt remembering the sudden cloud-bursts of his native forests. The sound of falling rain would send him into a frenzy. He would fly madly about the house, shooting up to the ceiling, knock ing everything over and finally escaping through the window into the garden to splash around in the puddles But he would soon come back, perch on one of the fire-dogs, jump up and down to dry his feathers and then proudly display his tail or his beak.

One morning in the terrible winter of 1837, when she had put him near the fireplace because of the cold, she found him dead in his cage, hanging head downwards with his claws caught in the metal bars. He had probably died of a stroke, but the thought crossed Félicité's mind that he might have been poisoned with parsley and, although there was no definite proof, her suspicions fell on Fabu.

She wept so much that her mistress eventually said, 'Well, why don't you have him stuffed?'

Félicité went to consult the chemist, who had always been kind to the parrot.

He wrote to Le Havre and a man by the name of Fel-lacher agreed to do the job. But, knowing that the mail-coach sometimes mislaid parcels, Félicité decided that she would take the parrot as far as Honfleur herself.

The road ran between endless lines of apple trees, bare and leafless. Ice lay in the ditches. Dogs barked as she walked past the farms. With her hands tucked under her mantlet and her basket on her arm, Félicité walked briskly along the middle of the road in her little black clogs.

She followed the road through the forest, passed Le Haut-Chêne and eventually reached Saint-Gatien.

On the road behind her, in a cloud of dust and gather-ing speed on its way down the hill, a mail-coach at full gallop came rushing towards her like a whirlwind. The coachman, seeing that this woman was making no attempt to get out of the way, stood up and looked out over the roof of the carriage and both he and his postilion shouted at her for all their worth. The four horses, which he was vainly trying to rein in, galloped faster and faster towards her and the leading pair struck her as they went by. With a sharp tug on the reins, the coachman forced them to swerve on to the side of the road. In his rage, he raised his arm and lashed out at her with his long whip as the coach lurched past. The blow struck Félicité full across her face and the upper part of her body, and with such force that she fell flat on her back.

The first thing she did when she regained consciousness was to open her basket. Fortunately, Loulou had come to no harm. She felt a burning sensation on her right cheek. She put her hand to her face and saw that her hand was red. She was bleeding.

She sat down on a pile of stones and dabbed her face with her handkerchief. Then she ate a crust of bread which she had brought with her in case she needed it and tried to take her mind off her wound by looking at the parrot.

As she came to the top of the hill at Ecquemaerville, she saw the lights of Honfleur twinkling in the night like clusters of stars and, beyond them, the sea, stretching dimly into the distance. She was suddenly overcome with a fit of giddiness and her wretched childhood, the disappointment of her first love affair, the departure of her nephew and the death of Virginie all came flooding back to her like the waves of an incoming tide, welling up inside her and taking her breath away.

She insisted on speaking personally to the captain of the ship and, although she did not tell him what was in her parcel, she asked him to look after it carefully.

Fellacher kept the parrot for a long time. He kept promising that it would arrive the following week. After six months, he announced that a box had been dispatched but that was the last they heard of it. Félicité began to fear that Loulou would never come back. 'He has been stolen, I know it!' she thought to herself.

But at last he arrived. And quite magnificent he looked too, perched on a branch which was screwed on to a mahogany plinth, with one foot held raised, his head cocked to one side and holding in his beak a nut which the taxidermist, in order to add a little touch of grandeur had gilded.

Félicité installed him in her room.

This room, which few were allowed into, was filled with a mixture of religious knick-knacks and other miscellaneous bits and pieces and resembled something between a chapel and a bazaar.

A large wardrobe made it awkward to open the door fully. Opposite the window that looked out on to the garden was a smaller circular window which looked out on to the courtyard. There was a plain, unsprung bed and beside it a table with a water jug, two combs and a small cake of blue soap on a chipped plate. Fixed to the walls were rosa-ries, medals, several pictures of the Virgin and a holy-water stoop made out of a coconut shell. On the chest of drawers, which was draped with a cloth like an altar, was the shell box that Victor had given her, a watering can and a ball, some handwriting books, the illustrated geography book and a pair of little ankle boots. Hanging by its two ribbons from the nail which supported the mirror was the little plush hat! These keepsakes meant so much to Félicité. She had even kept one of Monsieur's frock-coats. If there was anything that Madame Aubain wanted to get rid of, she would find a place for it in her room, like the artificial flowers beside her chest of drawers and the portrait of the Comte d'Artois in the window recess.

Loulou was placed on a little shelf made especially for the purpose and fixed to a chimney breast which protruded into the room. Every morning, as she woke, she would catch sight of him in the early morning light and would recall the days gone by, trivial incidents, right down to the tiniest detail, remembered not in sadness but in perfect tranquillity.

Being unable to hold a conversation with anyone, she lived her life as if in a sleepwalker's trance. The only thing that seemed capable of bringing her back to life was the Corpus Christi procession, when she would visit all the neighbours, collecting candlesticks and mats to decorate the altar of repose that was always set up outside in the street.

When she went to church, she would sit gazing at the picture of the Holy Spirit and it struck her that it looked rather like her parrot. The resemblance was even more striking in an Epinal colour print depicting Our Lord's baptism. The dove had wings of crimson and a body of emerald-green and it looked for all the world like Loulou. Félicité bought the picture and hung it in place of the portrait of the Comte d'Artois, so that she could see them both together at the same time. In her mind, the one became associated with the other, the parrot becoming sanctified by connection with the Holy Spirit and the Holy Spirit in turn acquiring added life and meaning. Surely it could not have been a dove that God had chosen to speak through since doves cannot talk. It must have been one of Loulou's ancestors. Félicité would say her prayers with her eyes turned towards the picture but every now and then she would turn her head slightly to look at the parrot.

She thought of entering the sisterhood of the Ladies of the Virgin but Madame Aubain persuaded her not to

There now occurred an event of considerable importance – Paul's wedding.

Having worked first as a lawyer's clerk, Paul had subsequently tried his hand at business, worked for the Customs and for the Inland Revenue and had even considered joining the Department of Forests and Waterways. Now, at the age of thirty-six, as if by divine inspiration he had suddenly discovered his vocation – the Registry Office! Indeed, he had displayed such a talent for the job that one of the inspectors had offered him his daughter's hand in marriage and had promised to use his influence to advance his career.

By now, Paul took his responsibilities seriously and he brought his intended to see his mother.

Not a thing at Pont-l'Évêque met with her approval. She expected to be treated like royalty and she hurt Félicité's feelings badly. Madame Aubain was relieved to see her go.

The following week, they learned of the death of Monsieur Bourais in an inn somewhere in Lower Brittany. Rumour had it that he had committed suicide. This turned out to be true and questions were raised about his honesty. Madame Aubain went through her accounts and the catalogue of his misdeeds soon became apparent: embezzlement of arrears of rent, undeclared sales of wood, forged receipts, and so forth. It was also discovered that he was the father of an illegitimate child and that he was having 'an illicit relationship with someone from Dozulé'.

This sordid business was a source of great distress to Madame Aubain. In March 1853, she began to feel pains in her chest. A grey coating covered her tongue. She was treated with leeches but this failed to improve her breathing. On the ninth evening of her illness, she died, aged just seventy- two.

People took her to be younger than this because of her dark hair, which she had always worn in bandeaux round her pale, pockmarked face. She had very few friends to lament her death; there was a certain haughtiness about her that had always kept people at a distance.

Félicité wept for her in a way that servants rarely weep for their masters. That Madame should die before her disturbed her whole way of thinking; it seemed to go against the natural order of things; it was something unacceptable and unreal.

Ten days later, just as soon as they could get there from Besançon, the heirs arrived on the scene. Madame Aubain's daughter- in- law went through all the drawers chose a few pieces of furniture for herself and sold what was left. Then they all went back to the Registry Office.

Madame's armchair, her little table, her foot- warmer and the eight chairs had all gone! On the walls, yellow patches marked the places where pictures had once hung. They had taken away the children's beds, along with their mattresses, and the cupboard had been cleared of all Virginie's things. Félicité went from room to room heartbroken.

The following day, a notice appeared on the front door. The apothecary shouted into Félicité's ear that the house was for sale.

Félicité's head began to swim and she had to sit down

What most upset her was the thought of having to move out of her own room; it was the perfect place for poor Loulou. In her anguish she would gaze at him and beg the Holy Spirit to come to her aid. She developed the idolatrous habit of kneeling in front of the parrot to say her prayers. Sometimes the sun would catch the parrot's glass eye as it came through the little window, causing an emanation of radiant light that sent her into ecstasies.

Félicité had been left a pension of three hundred and eighty francs by her mistress. The garden provided her with vegetables. As for clothes, she had sufficient to last her her lifetime and she saved on lighting by going to bed as soon as it began to get dark.

She hardly ever went out, because she disliked walking past the secondhand dealer's shop, where some of the old furniture was on display. Ever since her fit of giddiness, she had been dragging one leg and, as she was now grow-ing frail, old Madame Simon, whose grocery business had recently collapsed, used to come round every morning to chop her firewood and draw her water.

Her eyes grew weaker. The shutters were no longer opened. Many years passed. Nobody came to rent the house and nobody came to buy it.

Félicité never asked for any repairs to be done, because she was frightened she might be evicted. The laths in the roof rotted and for one whole winter her bolster was per-manently wet from the rain. Shortly after Easter, she coughed blood.

Madame Simon called for a doctor. Félicité wanted to know what was wrong with her. But by now she was too deaf to hear what was said and she only managed to catch one word: 'pneumonia'. It was a word she knew and she quietly answered, 'Ah! Like Madame', finding it quite nat ural that she should follow in her mistress's footsteps.

The time for preparing the altars of repose was drawing near.

The first of them was always placed at the foot of the hill, the second outside the post office and the third about half- way up the street. The exact position of this last altar was a matter of some rivalry, but the women of the parish eventually agreed that it should be placed in Madame Aubain's courtyard.

Félicité's breathing was getting worse and she was becom-ing more feverish. She fretted at not being able to do anything for the altar. If only there were at least something that she could put on it! And then she thought of the par rot. The neighbours objected, saying that it was not really suitable. But the curé gave his permission and this made Félicité so happy that she asked him to accept Loulou, the one treasure she possessed, as a gift from her when she died.

From Tuesday to Saturday, the eve of Corpus Christi her coughing increased. By the evening, her face looked drawn, her lips were sticking to her gums and she began vomiting. The following morning, at first light, feeling very low, she sent for a priest. Three good women stood round her as she was given extreme unction.

She then announced that she needed to speak to Fabu.

Fabu arrived dressed in his Sunday best and feeling very ill at ease in such sombre surroundings.

‘Please forgive me,’ she said, summoning all her strength to extend her arm towards him, ‘I thought it was you who had killed him.’

What was all this nonsense? How could she suspect someone like him of having committed a murder! Fabu was most indignant and was on the point of losing his temper.

‘Her mind is wandering,’ they said. ‘Surely you can see that.’

From time to time Félicité seemed to be speaking to phantoms. The women went away. Madame Simon ate her lunch.

A little later she went to fetch Loulou and held him close to Félicité. ‘Come on,’ she said. ‘Say goodbye to him.’

Although Loulou was not a corpse, he was being eaten away by maggots. One of his wings was broken and the stuffing was coming out of his stomach. But Félicité was now blind. She kissed him on his forehead and held him against her cheek. Madame Simon took him from her and went to replace him on the altar.

The smells of summer drifted in from the meadows. The air was filled with the buzzing of flies. The sun glinted on the surface of the river and warmed the slates of the roof. Madame Simon had come back into the room and was gently nodding off to sleep.

She was awoken by the sound of bells; they were coming out of vespers. Félicité grew suddenly calmer. She thought of the procession and saw everything as clearly as if she were there.

All the schoolchildren, the choristers and the firemen were walking along the pavements. In the middle of the street, at the head of the procession, came the church officer with his halberd, the beadle carrying the great cross, the schoolmaster in charge of the boys and the nun keeping a motherly eye on the girls. Three of the prettiest looking like curly headed angels, were throwing rose petals in the air. They were followed by the deacon conducting the band with arms outstretched and two censer-bearers turning round at every step to face the Holy Sacrament which was carried by Monsieur le Curé, clad in his magnificent chasuble and protected by a canopy of bright red velvet held aloft by four churchwardens. A great throng of people followed on behind as the procession made its way between the white sheets which draped the walls of the houses and eventually arrived at the bottom of the hill.

Félicité's forehead was bathed in a cold sweat. Madame Simon sponged it with a cloth, telling herself that one day she would go the same way.

The noise of the crowd gradually increased, at one point becoming very loud and then fading away.

A sudden burst of gunfire rattled the window panes. The postilions were saluting the monstrosity. Félicité rolled her eyes and, trying to raise her voice above a whisper, she asked, 'Is he all right?' She was still worrying about the parrot.

Félicité was now entering her final moments. Her breath came in short raucous gasps, making her sides heave. Beads of froth gathered in the corners of her mouth and her whole body began to shake.

From the street outside came the blaring of ophicleides, the high-pitched voices of the children and the deeper voices of the men. There were moments when all was quiet and all that could be heard was the tread of feet, cushioned by the scattered petals and sounding like a flock of sheep crossing a field.

The group of clergy entered the courtyard. Madame Simon climbed up on to a chair to look out of the little window and was able to see the altar directly below.

It was hung with green garlands and covered with a flounce in English point lace. Standing in the centre was a little square frame containing some relics and at each end there was an orange tree. Along the length of the altar there was a row of silver candlesticks and china vases containing a vivid display of sunflowers, lilies, peonies, foxgloves and bunches of hydrangea. A cascade of bright colours fell from the top of the altar down to the carpet spread out on the cobblestones beneath it. In amongst the flowers could be seen a number of other treasured ornaments: a silver-gilt sugar-bowl decorated with a ring of violets, a set of pendants cut from Alençon gemstones glittering on a little carpet of moss, two Chinese screens with painted landscapes. Loulou lay hidden beneath some roses and all that could be seen of him was the spot of blue on the top of his head, like a disc of lapis lazuli.

The churchwardens, the choristers and the children took up their places around three sides of the courtyard. The priest slowly walked up the steps and placed his great shining orb on the lace altar cloth. Everyone fell to their knees. There was a deep silence in which all that could be heard was the sound of the censers sliding on their chains as they were swung backwards and forwards.

A blue haze of incense floated up into Félicité's room. She opened her nostrils wide to breathe it in, savouring it with mystical fervour. Her eyes closed and a smile played on her lips. One by one her heartbeats became slower, growing successively weaker and fainter like a fountain running dry, an echo fading away. With her dying breath she imagined she saw a huge parrot hovering above her head as the heavens parted to receive her.

竹林中

樵夫答典史问

是啊，发现那具尸体的正是我。今天早晨，我跟往常一样去砍伐后山的杉树。没料到山后的竹林里，竟有这么一具尸体。地点在哪儿？离山科的驿路有那么四五町 [1] 光景。竹子当中夹杂着细小的杉树，那地方连个人影儿也没有。

尸体上身穿淡蓝色短褂，头上戴着有皱纹的京式乌帽，脸朝天倒在那里。想想看，这一刀刚好戳在胸口上，尸体周围竹子的落叶简直就像是浸透了苏枋 [2] 水般地染红了。不，已经不再流血了，伤口好像早就凝固了。那里一只马蝇紧紧地叮在伤口上，似乎连我的脚步声都没理会。

没有看见什么凶器吗？没有，啥都没有。只是旁边的杉树底下丢着一根绳子。另外——对，除了绳子还有一把梳子。尸体旁边只有这两样东西。可是周围的草和竹叶给踩得很厉害，看来那个汉子被害以前，还曾拼命搏斗过一番。什么，有马没有？那里根本进不去马，竹林后面的路才能够走马呢！

云游僧答典史问

不错，昨天我碰见过那个如今成了尸体的汉子。昨天晌午，地点是从关山到山科的路上。那个人跟着一个骑马的妇女朝关山这边走来。女人遮着面纱，我看不见她的脸，只看见了她身上那件夹衣的颜色——好像是红面蓝里子。马是桃花马，记得马鬃是剃光了的 [3] 。马有多高吗？总有四尺四寸吧。……不过我是沙门，不大懂得这种事。那个男子——不，既佩着大刀，也带着弓箭，而且在上上了黑漆的箭囊里插着二十来支箭，这我至今还清清楚楚地记得。

我做梦也想不到那个汉子会落到这么个下场。人生诚然是如过眼浮云。哎呀呀，我简直不知道怎么说才好，多么可怜！

捕役 [4] 答典史问

我抓到的那个人吗？他确实是个臭名昭著的强盗，名叫多襄丸。不过我逮他的时候，他正在栗田口的石桥上嗯嗯地呻吟着呢，大概是从马上摔下来的吧。时间吗？是昨天晚上初更光景。上回我差点捉住了他，被他逃掉了。那一回他穿的也是藏青短褂，腰里插着大刀。您

瞧，如今他除了刀以外，还带着弓箭呢。啊？原来那个被害的人携带的也是这些……那么杀人的无疑就是这个多襄丸了。缠着皮的弓，黑漆的箭囊，鹰翎的箭十七支——这都是那个被害人随身带的吧。对，正如您说的，马也正是那匹剃光了鬃毛的桃花马。准是因果报应，被这畜生用下来啦。它就在石桥过去一点儿的地方，拖着长长的缰绳，在吃路旁的青芒呢。

在洛中出没的强盗当中，多襄丸这家伙也是个好色之徒。去年秋天，有个好像是来进香的妇女和丫头一道在鸟部寺宝头卢的后山被杀，据说就是这家伙干的。男的被他杀了，骑桃花马的那个女人也不知道给带到什么地方去，后来怎样了呢。也许我不该多嘴，这一点也请您调查一下吧。

老嫗答典史问

没错，这就是我闺女嫁的那个男人的尸体。他不是京城的人，是若狭国府的武士。名字叫金泽武弘，二十六岁。不，他性情温和，绝不会招人忌恨的。

女儿吗？女儿叫真砂，今年十九岁。她性格刚强，几乎赛过男子。除了武弘以外，她不曾跟别的男人好过。小小的瓜子儿脸，肤色微黑，左眼角上有颗痣。

武弘昨天跟我女儿一道动身到若狭去，竟出了这样的事，真不知前世造了什么孽！女婿已然这样，也只好认命了，可我女儿怎样了呢？真把我急坏了。我这苦老婆子求求您啦，一辈子也忘不了您，哪怕上天入地，也恳求您务必找到我女儿的下落。不管怎么说，可恨的是那个叫作什么多襄丸的强盗。他不但害了我女婿，连我女儿也……（老嫗泣不成声）

多襄丸的供词

那个男人是我杀死的，可我没杀女的。她到哪儿去啦？这我可不知道。喏，慢着。再怎么拷问，不知道的也说不出来呀！而且事到如今，我不打算卑鄙地隐瞒什么了。

昨天刚过晌午，我碰见了那对夫妇。那时候碰巧刮了一阵风，撩起了那女人长长垂下的面纱，我瞅见了她的脸。可一眨眼的工夫，就又看不见了。一方面也是由于这个缘故吧，我只觉得那个女人长得像菩萨一样标致。我一时打定了主意，即使杀了那个男的，也非把女的抢到手不可。

咳，杀死个把男人，并不是像你们想的那样了不起的事。要抢女人，男人横竖是要给杀死的。只不过我杀人是用腰间佩的大刀，而你

们杀人不用刀，单凭权力，凭金钱，往往还仅仅凭了那张伪善的嘴巴就够了。不错，血是不会流的，人还活得好好的——然而还是给杀了。想想有多么罪孽呀！谁知道究竟是你们坏还是我坏呢？（嘲讽的微笑）

不过，要是能够不杀男人就把女人抢到手，倒也没什么不好。哦，那时候原是想尽量避免杀男人而把女人抢到手的。但在那山科的驿路上，说什么也办不到。所以我就想方设法把那对夫妇引到山里去。

这也不费什么事。我跟那对夫妇结伴走，跟他们说，对面山上有个古冢，我一挖，挖出了许许多多镜子和大刀，我悄悄地给埋在山后的竹林里了。谁要是想买，随便哪样，出几个钱就成。那个男的听了我的话，不知不觉地动了心——您瞧，贪欲有多么可怕啊。不到半个时辰，那对夫妇就跟我一道走上了山路。

到了竹林前面我就说，宝贝埋在这里呢，来看吧。男的利欲熏心，自然同意。可是那个女人连马都没下，说是就在那儿等着。看到竹林那么密，也就难怪她会这么说了。说实在的，这正合我意，就把女人留在那儿，跟男的一块儿走进了竹林。

竹林里起初净是竹子。走了十六七丈，才是一簇疏疏朗朗的杉树——为了达到我的目的，没有比这地方更妥当的了。我扒开竹枝，撒了个听起来好像很有道理的谎，说宝贝就埋在杉树底下。听我这么一说，男的就拼命朝着透过竹叶已经能够看到细小杉树的那个方向走去。这当儿竹子稀疏起来，并立着好几棵杉树——刚走到这儿，我就马上把对方按倒。那人不愧是个佩刀的，好像相当有力气。无奈我给他个措手不及，他怎么也招架不住，马上就给捆到一棵杉树脚下了。绳子吗？这是做贼的妙处，随时得翻墙越壁，所以腰间早就准备好了。当然，为了不让他喊出声来，就用竹子的落叶堵上他的嘴，此外就没什么麻烦了。

我把男的安排停当后，就又到女人那里去说，那个男的好像得了急病，要她快去看看。不用说，这一次也达到了目的。女的已经摘掉那个垂着面纱的市女笠，就那样被我拉着手走到竹林深处来了。到这儿一看，男的给捆在杉树脚上呢——女人一看到这幅情景，不知什么工夫从怀里掏出了小刀，闪亮亮地拔出了鞘。我从来还没见过那么烈性子的女人呢。这当儿只要稍微一大意，就会被她一刀戳破了肚皮。不，即使躲过了这一下，在她的乱刀下面，指不定会受什么样的伤呢。我毕竟是多囊丸啊，好歹连大刀也没拔，到底把她的小刀打落了。再怎么刚强的女人，没有了武器也就没办法了。我终于照原来想的那样，不杀害男人，就把女人弄到了手。

不杀害男人——是的，只要把女人弄到手，我并不曾打算要男人的命。可是正当我丢下伏在地上哭泣的女人，往竹林外头逃去的时候，那个女人突然像疯子一样抓住了我的胳膊，而且她断断续续地喊道，你也罢，我丈夫也罢，你们之间总得死一个。在两个男人面前丢丑，比死还痛苦。后来还气喘吁吁地说，不管是你们哪个活下来，我就情愿跟他。这时我猛地对那个男人动了杀机。（阴郁的兴奋）

我这么一说，你们一定会认为我比你们还要残酷。那是因为你们不曾看见那个女人的脸，尤其是一瞬间她那烈火般的眸子。我和这个女人眼光相遇时，心想就是天打雷劈，也要把她娶到手。我只有娶她为妻这么一个念头。这不是像你们所想象的那种下流的色欲。假若当时除了色欲之外什么愿望也没有，我就是把女人踢倒了，也非逃跑不可。这样，我的大刀也就不至于沾上男人的血了。但是我在阴暗的竹林中定睛看了看女人的脸。当时我就打定主意，不杀死男人，绝不离开这里。

但是杀男人嘛，我也不想用卑鄙的手段。我给他松了绑，要求跟他用大刀来决斗。（丢在杉树脚下的绳子，就是那时忘了扔掉的）那个男人依然煞白着脸，马上把大刀拔出了鞘。一眨眼的工夫，一声不响气冲冲地向我扑来——交手的结果怎样，那就不用多说了。第二十个回合，我的大刀把对方的胸膛刺透了。请不要忘记——是第二十个回合啊。直到现在，我对他这一点还是佩服的。因为他是天下唯一和我交手到二十回合以上的。（快活的微笑）

男人刚一倒下，我就提着血淋淋的大刀，回头去看女人。可哪里想到，女人已经无影无踪了。她逃到哪儿去了呢？我在那簇杉树中找了找，可是竹子的落叶上，连点可疑的痕迹也没有。竖起耳朵听了听，只传来了男子喉间发出的断气声。

也许我刚开始抡刀的时候，那个女人为了呼救，就钻出竹林逃跑了——想到这里，这下子我为了保全自己的性命，就拿了大刀和弓箭，立即又回到原来的山路上去。女人的马还在那儿静静地吃草呢。以后的事情就用不着去说了。只是在进京之前，我已经把大刀卖掉了——我的口供完啦。我这颗脑袋总有挂在苦楝树梢 [5] 上的一天，请处我以极刑吧。（气概昂然）

来到清水寺的女人的忏悔

那个穿藏青短褂的人把我污辱以后，就瞧着我那被绑起来的丈夫嘲笑起来。我丈夫该是多么气愤啊。可他不管怎么挣扎，浑身绑着的绳子只是越勒越紧。我不由得滚也似的跑到丈夫身边去——不，是想要跑过去。可是那个人马上一脚把我踢倒了。就在这当儿，我觉察到丈夫眼里有一种难以形容的光。难以形容的——直到现在，我一起

他那眼神还不禁发抖。丈夫一句话也说不出，在这一刹那间，用眼睛把他整个儿的心意传给我了。可闪烁在他眼睛里的，既不是愤怒也不是悲哀——只是蔑视我的冷冰冰的光呀！与其说是被那个人踢的，毋宁说是由于受了这眼光的刺激，我不由得喊了一句什么，就终于昏倒了。

后来我总算恢复了知觉。一看，那个穿藏青短褂的人已经不知去向。只剩下我丈夫被绑在杉树脚下。我从落满竹叶的地上勉强撑起身来，看了看丈夫的脸。但是丈夫的眼神跟方才丝毫没有两样。在冷冰冰的轻蔑之下，蕴藏着憎恶的光。羞耻，悲哀，愤怒——简直不知道怎么形容当时我心里的感觉才好。我摇摇晃晃地站起来，走到丈夫身边。

“你呀，事情已经是这样了，我再也不能跟你在一块儿啦。我打算一死了之。可是……可是请你也死掉。你看到了我的耻辱，我不能让你一个人就这样活下去。”

我拼命地说了这么几句。然而丈夫只是厌恶地盯着我。我按捺住几乎要破裂的胸膛，搜寻丈夫的大刀。大概是给强盗抢去了，大刀自不用说，竹丛里连弓箭也没有了。可是幸亏小刀还掉在我脚底下。我举起小刀，又对丈夫说了一遍：“那么，请允许我先要了你的命，我随后就来。”

丈夫听了我的话，好容易才动了动嘴唇。他嘴里塞满了竹子的落叶，声音当然是一点也听不见的。但是我一看见他的嘴动，马上就明白了他在说什么。他依然对我抱着轻蔑的态度，说了句：“杀吧。”我几乎像做梦一般朝着丈夫那穿着淡蓝色短褂的胸口扑哧一声把小刀戳了进去。

我这时大概又昏过去了。好歹恢复知觉后，四下里打量了一下，丈夫仍旧绑在那里，早已咽了气。透过交错的竹子和杉树，一道夕阳从天空里射到他那苍白的脸上。我忍着哭声，给尸体松了绑。于是……于是我怎样了呢？唯独这一点，我已经没有力气来说明了。横竖我怎样也没有能耐去死。把小刀往喉咙里戳也罢，投身到山脚下的池子里也罢，种种办法都试过了，可就是死不了。现在还这么活着，这也不是什么光彩的事。（淡淡的惨笑）像我这样没有骨气的人，说不定连大慈大悲的观音菩萨也不屑睬一眼了。可是，杀了丈夫的我，被强盗糟蹋了的我，究竟该怎么办才好呢？我究竟……我……（突然激烈地抽搭）

鬼魂借巫女之口所说的话

——强盗奸污完了我的妻子，就在那儿坐下来，用种种话来安慰她。我当然说不出话来，身子也给绑在杉树脚下，可是我多次给妻子

使眼色，想暗示她，不要把这个人话信以为真。要知道，不管他说什么都是一派谎言。可是我妻子沮丧地坐在竹子的落叶上，一个劲儿地望着自己的膝头。怎么看也像是在专心听强盗的话哪。我嫉妒得浑身发抖，可是强盗花言巧语地变着法儿讲下去，最后竟大胆地说出了这样的话：即便就被糟蹋这么一回，反正跟丈夫也很难再圆满相处了。与其跟这样的丈夫过下去，你有没有做我妻子的打算呢？我正因为疼你，才干出了这样一桩无法无天的事来。

听强盗这么一说，妻子竟然就心荡神驰地仰起脸来。我还从来没见过妻子像那个时刻那么美丽过。可是那个美丽的妻子，当着像这样被绑起来的我的面，怎么回答了强盗呢？尽管魂游冥世，每逢想起妻子的回答，就怒火中烧。妻子确实是这样说的：“那么，请你随便把我带到哪儿去吧。”（沉默良久）

妻子的罪过，还不止于此。要仅仅是这样，我也不至于在冥冥之中这么痛苦了。可是妻子犹如做梦一般被强盗牵着手往竹林外面走的当儿，脸色忽然变得刷白，指着杉树脚下的我，像发了疯般地喊了好几遍：“请你把那个人杀掉。只要他活着，我就不能跟你在一块儿。”“请你把那个人杀掉”——这句话像一股狂风，即使现在也好像要把我头朝下刮落到遥远、黑暗的深渊底下去。哪怕是一次，难道人的嘴巴曾吐出过这样可憎恶的话吗？哪怕是一次，难道人的耳朵曾听到过这样可诅咒的话吗？哪怕是一次，难道……（突然一阵冷笑）听了这话，连强盗也煞白了脸。“请你把那个人杀掉。”妻子边这么喊着，边拉住强盗的胳膊。强盗定睛看着我的妻子，不说杀也不说不杀……我刚这么一想，妻子一脚就给踢倒在竹子的落叶上了。（又迸发出一阵冷笑）强盗安详地抱起胳膊，向我看了看：“那个女人你打算怎么处置？是杀掉，还是饶她一条命？点一下头吧：杀掉吗？”——单凭这句话，我就想赦免强盗的罪孽。（再度沉默良久）

趁着我迟疑的工夫，妻子喊叫了一句什么，立即逃到竹林深处去了。强盗马上扑奔过去，可是好像连袖子也没抓着。我仿佛是在梦幻中看到了这幅情景。

妻子逃掉以后，强盗夺过我的大刀弓箭，把我身上绑的绳子割断一处。我记得强盗消失在竹林外面的时候，喃喃地说了句：“这回该轮到我了。”以后，周围寂静下来。不，还有什么人的哭声哩。我一边解开绳子，一边侧耳细听。呃，这不是我自己的哭声吗？（第三次沉默良久）

我很吃力地从杉树脚下抬起我那精疲力竭的身子。妻子落下的小刀就在我跟前闪着光。我把它拿在手里，朝着胸口一戳。一块带着腥味的玩意儿涌到嘴里来。我丝毫不觉得痛苦，只是胸口凉了以后，四下里越发寂然无声。哎呀，多么凄凉啊！连只小鸟也不飞到这山后的

竹林上空来啁啾，唯有几抹阳光寂寥地飘在竹子和杉树梢头。就连这阳光也逐渐暗淡下来，杉树和竹子都再也看不见了。我倒在那儿，笼罩在深沉的静穆之中。

这当儿有谁蹑手蹑脚地走到我身边来了。我想掉过头去看一看，但是不知什么时候我周围已经昏暗下来了。什么人——不知是谁，用看不见的手悄悄地拔掉了我胸口上的小刀。同时，鲜血又涌到我嘴里来。从此，我就永远沉沦在冥世的黑暗中了……

点鬼簿

我母亲是个狂人。我从未对母亲有过骨肉之情。我母亲用梳子把头发卷在头顶上，总是独自坐在位于芝 [1] 的娘家，咕噜咕噜地吸烟袋 [2]。她的脸小，身体也小。不知为什么，那张脸是灰色的，没有朝气。我曾经读过《西厢记》，读到“土气息，泥滋味”一语时，一下就想起了我母亲那张脸——消瘦的侧脸。

说这番话的我，从未被母亲照料过。有一次，养母带着我，特意到楼上去问候母亲，她竟然冷不防用烟袋打了我的脑袋。我对此事记忆犹新。不过，总的来说，我母亲是一位实在文静的狂人。我或我的姐姐迫使她画画的时候，她就在折成四折的日本纸 [3] 上为我们画。非但用墨笔画，还把我姐姐的水彩画颜料涂在她自己所画男男女女的衣服啦、草木和花上面。只不过这些画上的人物个个都长着活脱儿是狐狸的脸。

我十一岁那一年的秋天，我母亲去世了。与其说是生病而死，毋宁说是衰弱而死的吧。唯独她逝世前前后后的记忆却比较清晰地留在我的记忆里。

大概是由于接到了病笃的电报吧。在一个无风的深夜，我和养母同乘一辆人力车，从本所 [4] 赶到芝。迄今我还没使用过叫作围巾的玩意儿。然而，特别在这个夜晚，我记得围了一条画了南画 [5] 里一些山水风景的薄绸手绢儿。也记得那条手绢儿发出的叫作“蝴蝶花”的香水气味。

我母亲躺在二楼下方那间八榻榻米 [6] 的客厅里。我和比我大四岁的姐姐跪在母亲的枕畔，两个人都不断地号啕大哭。尤其是有人在我后边念诵“驾鹤西去，驾鹤西去”，当时我越发感到悲伤不禁涌上心头。然而，一直闭着眼睛、几乎是死者的母亲突然睁开双目，说了些话。我们尽管凄怆，却小声哧哧地笑起来了。

次日晚上，我依然在母亲的枕边坐到将近拂晓。不过，不知为何，这一晚我一滴眼泪也流不出来。我在几乎不停地嚎哭的姐姐面前觉得丢脸，于是拼命地假装哭泣。同时，我又相信既然自己哭不出来，母亲必定不会死。

第三天的夜晚，我母亲几乎没怎么痛苦就咽了气。死前大概清醒

过来了，凝视着我们的面孔，扑簌簌地落泪。不过，依然像平素那样什么话也不说。

入殓之后，我也不禁经常哭泣。有一位叫作“王子 [7] 的姑妈”的远亲说：“实在使人钦佩。”我当时唯一的想法就是，她是那种对玄妙的事感到钦佩的人。

我母亲出殡的那一天，姐姐拿着灵牌，我跟在后边，拿着香炉。两个人都是乘人力车去的。我有时打盹儿，总会在险些要把香炉掉下去的时候，突然惊醒。一直就这样，我们好像永远也到不了谷中 [8] 似的。相当长的送葬行列静悄悄地沿着秋季那总是晴朗的东京的大街前进。

我母亲的忌辰是十一月二十八日，戒名是“归命院妙成日进大师”。可是二十年后，我却不记得自己的亲生父亲的忌辰与戒名。多半是因为对十一岁的我而言，记住忌辰与戒名也是值得夸耀的一件事吧。

二

我有一位姐姐。尽管她身体多病，却成了两个孩子的母亲。想添加在我《点鬼簿》中的，当然不是这位姐姐的事，而是那位恰好在我出生前，突然夭折了的姐姐的事。据说，我们三姐弟中，她最聪明。

这位姐姐叫作初子，或许是由于她生为长女。我家的佛盒上至今有一张“小初”的相片，装在小小的镜框里。“小初”一点也不像是衰弱的孩子。长着小酒窝儿的两颊，就像熟杏子一般，圆溜溜的……

被父母过多地宠爱的终究是“小初”。他们把“小初”从芝的新钱座特意带到位于筑地 [9] 的萨姆纳夫人担任园长的幼儿园。然而，星期六至星期日，必定到我母亲的娘家——坐落在本所的芥川家过夜。像这样出门的时候，“小初”穿的是就连在明治二十年代 [10] 都够时兴的西装。我记得上小学的时候，得到了给“小初”做西装的下脚布料。我把它们裹在人造橡胶玩具娃娃身上。那些下脚布料无一例外，全都是进口的平纹细白棉布，上面点缀着细碎的印花或乐器花样。

一个早春的星期日下午，“小初”一边在院子里踱来踱去，一边跟坐在房间里的伯妈说话。（我当然想象着当时姐姐依然穿着西装）

“伯妈，这棵树叫什么呀？”

“哪一棵树？”

“这棵有花骨朵的树。”

我外婆家的院子里有一棵低矮的木瓜树。树枝耷拉到一口古老的

井里。估计梳着小辫儿的“小初”杏眼圆睁，当时正凝视着枝子带刺儿的木瓜树吧。

“这棵树的名字跟你的一样。”

偏巧“小初”未能理解伯妈的戏谑语。

“那么，这棵树就叫作‘傻瓜树’喽。”

至今，只要有人提到“小初”，伯妈就反复地说她们之间曾经怎样一问一答。实际上，此外，“小初”说过的话，一句也没留存。大概这之后没过几天她就进了棺材。我不记得刻在小小的灵牌上的“小初”的戒名。然而，“小初”的忌辰是四月五日。玄妙的是，我对此记忆犹新。

不知为什么，我对这位姐姐——素昧平生的姐姐，有一种亲密感情。倘若“小初”至今健在，已经四十多岁了吧。过了不惑之年的“小初”那张脸也许活脱儿像是在坐落于芝的娘家二楼茫然地抽烟的母亲的脸吧。我时常宛若幻想一般觉得：弄不清是我母亲还是姐姐的一位四十来岁的女人，不知从何处守望着我的一生。难道这是喝咖啡啦、抽烟啦搞得疲惫不堪的我，神经遭到摧残了吗？抑或是超自然的力量借着什么机会出现在真实的世界，并干出了这样的勾当吧？

三

由于母亲疯了，我刚生下来就到收养我的家来啦（那是舅父的家），所以对亲生父亲也冷淡。我父亲经营牛奶铺，似乎是一位有些成功的人。教给我认识在当时而言还蛮时髦的水果与饮料的也统统是父亲。香蕉、冰激凌、菠萝、朗姆酒——或许还有其他的。我记得曾在当时坐落于新宿的牧场外边那棵槲树的树叶阴影下喝朗姆酒的往事。朗姆酒是酒精极少、橙黄色的饮料。

我父亲劝幼小的我吃喝如此新奇的东西，试图把我从收养我的家庭弄回来。我还记得有一天晚上，在大森^[11]的鱼荣餐馆，父亲一边劝我吃冰激凌，一边露骨地说服我逃回到自个儿家来。说这番话的时候，我父亲发挥了巧言令色的本事。然而，遗憾的是他的劝说诱导一次也未奏效。因为我爱收养我的那一家的父母——尤其是舅妈。

我父亲还性急，屡次跟随便什么人吵架。我在中学三年级时，与父亲玩相扑，我用现代柔道的特殊招数巧妙地把她摔倒了。我父亲刚站起来就说“再来个回合”，并朝着我走过来。我再度没费什么力气就把他摔倒了。我父亲第三次一边说“再来个回合”，一边勃然变色猛扑过来。我的后母在观看——她是我母亲的妹妹，又是我父亲的继室——朝我使了两三个眼神。我与父亲较量了一番，故意摔了个四仰八叉。然而，倘若那时我没败给父亲，他必定要揪住我吧。

我二十八岁时——那时还在当教师，接到了“父住进医院”的电报，遂仓皇地从镰仓^[12]直奔东京。我父亲是由于患流行性感而住进东京医院的。我与收养我的舅妈和后母在病房的角落住宿了约莫三天。这当儿我逐渐感到郁闷了。正在此时，跟我有交情的一位爱尔兰新闻记者打电话来邀请我到筑地的一家酒馆去吃饭。我以那位新闻记者最近要赴美国为借口，丢下奄奄一息的父亲，前往筑地的那家酒馆。

我们跟四五位艺伎一道，愉快地吃了日本风味的饭。大概是十点左右吃完的。有人从背后招呼我：“先生。”我在中段止步，回头朝宽踏板的楼梯上边望着。一位恰好在场的艺伎聚精会神地俯视着我。我一言不发地走下楼梯。坐上停在正门外边的出租汽车。出租汽车立即开动了。然而，出现在我的脑海中的与其说是父亲，毋宁说是绾着娇艳的西式发髻的她的脸——尤其是她的眼睛。

我回到医院，只见父亲正等得不耐烦。不但如此，他让其他人全都离开，到两扇的屏风外边去。要么握住我的手，要么就抚摸它；谈起我不知道的往事——当年跟我母亲结婚时的事。左不过是与母亲出门去买衣柜啦，购买了寿司啦，一些琐碎的事罢了。不过，正说着的时候，我的眼睑不知不觉地灼热起来了。眼泪也沿着我父亲那消瘦的脸蛋流下来。

我父亲在次日早晨没怎么痛苦地驾鹤西去，死前好像发疯了，说什么：“来了一艘军舰，瞧那些飘扬着的旗子！大伙儿都喊万岁吧！”我压根儿不记得自己父亲的丧礼情况。不过，依然记得把父亲的遗体护送到他本人之家时，春季的一轮大月亮的光照耀在灵柩车上。

四

今年三月中旬我还揣着怀炉时，隔了好久才第一次跟妻子一道去上坟。已经过去了这么久——然而，小小的坟墓自不待言，就连将枝子伸到坟墓上的一株赤松也没有变化。

添加在《点鬼簿》里的三个人的骸骨都埋在谷中墓地的角落里——而且在同一座墓碑下面。我想起了母亲的棺材被静悄悄地降下这座墓碑下边时的往事。“小初”大概也是这样的。唯独我父亲——我记得父亲的骸骨发白、细碎，夹杂着金牙……

我并不喜欢上坟。倘若能忘掉，巴望把双亲与姐姐也忘记。然而，尤其是那一天，或许是身体衰弱的缘故，一边眺望早春的阳光中那座发黑的墓碑，一边思索：究竟他们三个人当中，谁幸福呢？

坟地外边

说实在的，我从来没有像这时那样，感到这么写的丈草 [13] 的心境逼近自己过。

傻子的一生

久米正雄君 [1]：

此稿可否发表，什么时候在哪儿发表，我愿意完全委托给你。

稿中所出现的人物你大概都知道。但是发表之际，希望你不要加上注解。

我目前生活在最不幸的幸福当中。但奇怪的是我并不懊悔。我只是对有了我这样的恶夫、恶子、恶父的亲人感到遗憾。那么，再见了。在此稿中，我至少还不曾有意识地替自己辩护。

最后再说一句：我之所以特地将此稿委托给你，乃是因为我相信你恐怕比任何人都更了解我。（一旦揭掉我这张城里人的皮）我在此稿中表现出的傻劲儿供你一笑。

昭和二年六月二十日
芥川龙之介

一 时代

那是某书店的二楼。年方二十的他登上靠在书架上的西式梯子，寻找新书。莫泊桑、波德莱尔 [2]、斯特林堡、易卜生、萧伯纳、托尔斯泰……

天色逐渐黑下来了。他却还热心地继续读书脊上的字。那里陈列的，与其说是书籍，毋宁说是这个时代 [3] 本身。尼采、魏尔伦、龚古尔兄弟 [4]、陀思妥耶夫斯基、霍普特曼 [5]、福楼拜……

他在薄暮中挣扎，数着他们的名字，可是书籍自然而然地淹没在阴郁的暮色中。他终于失去耐性，想从西式梯子上下来。他头上刚好悬着个秃灯泡，忽然亮了。他就立在梯子上，俯视在书籍之间移动的店员和顾客。他们显得怪渺小的，而且非常寒碜。

人生还不如波德莱尔的一行诗。

他立在梯子上，朝着这些人望了片刻。

二 母亲

疯子们都清一色地穿着灰衣服。宽阔的屋子因而越发显得忧郁。其中的一个对着风琴，热衷于弹赞美歌。同时，另外一个站在屋子正中间，与其说是跳舞，不如说是乱蹦着。

他和红光满面的医生一起看着这样的情景。十年前，他母亲也跟他们毫无二致。毫无——说实在的，他从他们的气味中嗅到了母亲的气味。

“那么，走吧？”

医生走在他的前面，沿着走廊进入一个房间。房间的角落里有个装满酒精的大玻璃瓶，里面浸着几副脑髓。他在其中的一副上发现了略微发白的东西，有些像是撒上了点蛋白。他同医生站着谈话，又想起了自己的母亲。

“这是××电灯公司的一个技师生前的脑髓。他一直认定自己是黑油油的大发电机。”

为了避开医生的视线，他就朝玻璃窗外面望去。除了插着空瓶碎片的砖墙以外，那里什么也没有。不过砖墙上长的薄薄青苔斑驳地泛着白色。

三 家

他住在郊外的一个二楼的房间里。由于地基松软了，这座房子的二楼有些倾斜。

他的姑妈常常跟他在楼上吵架。他的养父养母有时出面调解。可是他最爱这位姑妈。姑妈终身未嫁，当他二十岁的时候，她已接近六十岁了。

他在某郊外的楼上屡屡思索：莫非相爱的人就得彼此折磨吗？这当儿，他感到二楼歪斜得有点可怖。

四 东京

隅田川阴沉沉的。他从行驶中的小汽船窗口眺望向岛的樱树。在他眼里，盛开的樱花恍若一片败絮般令人忧郁。可是他在那些樱树中——江户时代以来的向岛的樱树中发现了他自己。

五 自我

他和他的前辈一起坐在某咖啡馆的桌边，不断地吸着纸烟。他不

大开口讲话，却热心地听着前辈的话。

“今天乘了半天汽车。”

“有什么事情吗？”

他的前辈手托着腮，漫不经心地回答说：“没有什么事，只不过想坐坐罢了。”

这句话把他自己解放到不可知的世界——接近诸神的“自我”的世界。他觉得有点痛苦，同时也感到欢乐。

那个咖啡馆很小。牧羊神的相框下面却有一棵栽在赭色盆中的橡树，肥厚的叶片耷拉着。

六 病

潮风不断刮来，他摊开《英语大辞典》，手指划着找词条。

Talaria：生了翼的鞋，或作Sandal。

Tale：故事。

Talipot：印度东部产的椰子。树干高达五十英尺至一百英尺，叶子可用于制伞、扇子、帽子等。七十年开花一次……

他凭想象清晰地描绘出这种椰子的花。他的喉咙从来没这么痒过，不由得往辞典上吐了口痰。痰？——那却不是痰。他想到短暂的生命，又一次想象着椰子花——在遥远的大海彼岸高高耸立的椰子花。

七 画

他突然地——实在是突然地……站在某书店的店頭翻阅梵·高的画集时，他突然地领悟了画这个东西。当然，梵·高的画集无疑是影印版。他从影印版中也感到了鲜明地浮现的大自然。

对这幅画的热情使他的眼界一新。他不知不觉间密切注意着树枝的弯曲和女人面颊的丰腴。

在一个下雨的秋日傍晚，他走过郊外的陆桥下面。陆桥对面的堤坝下停着一辆货运马车。他经过那里时，感到有人曾走过这条路。是谁呢？——无须问他本人。二十三岁的他，心目中浮现出一个割去了耳朵的荷兰人，叼着长烟斗，锐利的目光注视着这幅忧郁的风景画……

八 火花

他淋着雨，在柏油路上行走。雨下得相当大。在飞溅的雨水中，他嗅到了橡胶雨衣的气味。

眼前的一根架空线冒出紫色火花。他格外感动。他的上衣口袋里藏着准备在同人杂志上发表的原稿。他冒雨走着，再次仰望了一下后面的架空线。

架空线依然放出耀眼的火花。他展望人生，并没有特别稀罕的东西。但是只有这紫色的火花——只有这可怕的空中的火花，哪怕用生命来换取，他也想把它抓住。

九 尸体

那些尸体的拇指上都挂着穿上铁丝的牌子，上面记着姓名、年龄等等。他的朋友弯着腰，灵活地运用解剖刀，开始剥一具尸体脸上的皮。皮下布满了美丽的黄色脂肪。

他望着那具尸体。为了完成一个短篇——以王朝时代为背景的一个短篇，他非这么做不可。可是，像腐烂了的杏子一样的尸臭是难闻的。他的朋友皱起眉头，静静地动着解剖刀。

“近来尸体也不够用。”他的朋友说。

不知什么时候，他早已准备好了答复：“如果尸体不够用，我就会没有任何恶意地去杀人。”可是他当然只把这话放在心里。

十 先生

他在一棵大槲树下读着先生的书。槲树沐浴在秋天的阳光下，连一片叶子也不动。远处的空中有一架吊着玻璃秤盘的天平，刚好保持平衡——他边读着先生的书，边遐想着这样的情景……

十一 拂晓

天逐渐亮了。有一次，他在某街的拐角望着广阔的市场。市场上熙熙攘攘的人和车子都染成了玫瑰色。

他点燃一支纸烟，安详地走进市场。一条黑色瘦狗突然向他吠起来。可是他不惊慌。他甚至爱起那条狗来。

市场正中有一棵法国梧桐树，树枝向四面桡攀着。他站在树干下，透过树枝仰望高空。正好在他头顶上空，闪烁着一颗星星。

这是他二十五岁的时候——会见先生以后的第三个月。

十二 军港

潜水艇内部是阴暗的。周围都是机器，他弯着腰，透过小小的方镜望去。映在方镜里的是明亮的军港风光。

“那边还可以看到‘金刚’呢。”一个海军高级军官对他说。

他看着方镜上的小军舰，不知怎的，忽然想起了荷兰芹菜——每份三毛钱的牛排上也有荷兰芹菜，散发着清香。

十三 先生之死

雨后起了风，他在一个新车站的站台上走着。天刚蒙蒙亮。站台那面，三四名铁路工人一齐抢着镐，高声唱着什么。

雨后的风吹散了工人的歌声和他的感情。他拿着没有点燃的香烟，感到近于欢乐的痛苦。“先生病危”的电报揣在大衣兜里……

这时，从对面松山的背阴处，早上六点的上行列车拖着一缕轻烟，蜿蜒向这边驶来。

十四 结婚

婚后第二天他就数落妻子道：“刚来就浪费可不行啊。”然而，这种数落的话，与其说是他自己要说的，不如说是他的姑妈叫他“说”的。当然，他的妻子不但向他本人，也向他的姑妈赔了不是。为他买来的那钵黄水仙花就摆在她前面……

十五 他们

在大芭蕉叶的宽阔阴影下，他们和平地生活着——他们的家在从东京乘火车要足足一小时的海滨某镇上。

十六 枕头

他枕着散发玫瑰叶香的怀疑主义，读着阿纳托尔·法朗士的书。可是，他没有注意到枕中还有半人半马神。

十七 蝴蝶

在充满海藻气味的风中，一只蝴蝶在蹁跹飞舞。一眨眼的工夫，他感到这只蝴蝶的翅膀碰了一下他那干燥的嘴唇。可是沾在他嘴唇上的翅粉却在几年后还闪着光。

十八 月

他在某饭店的台阶上偶然遇见了她。就连在这样的白昼，她的脸也跟月光下一样。他目送着她（他俩素昧平生），感到从来没有过

的寂寞.....

十九 人工翼

他从阿纳托尔·法朗士转向十八世纪的哲学家去了，但是他没有接近卢梭。那或许是他本人的一面——容易感情用事的一面跟卢梭相近之故。他却去接近跟他本身的另一面——富于冷静的理智的一面——相近的《天真汉》^[6]的哲学家了。

对二十九岁的他来说，人生已经一点也不光明了。可是伏尔泰给了这样的他以人工翼。

他张开这人工翼，轻而易举地飞上天空。同时，理智之光照耀的人生的悲欢沉沦在他的眼底下。他向穷街陋巷投以讽刺与微笑，穿过一无遮拦的太空，径直飞向太阳。他似乎忘记了古代希腊人因这样的人工翼被阳光晒化而终于落进海里死去的事^[7].....

二十 桎梏

由于他要到某报社去工作，他们夫妇就跟他的养父养母同住在一座房子里了。他依靠的是写在黄纸上的合同。后来才知道，报社对这份合同不承担任何义务，只由他承担义务。

二十一 狂人的女儿

两辆人力车在冷冷清清的阴天的乡间道路上跑着。海风习习，这条路显然通向海边。他坐在后面这辆人力车上，边纳闷着为什么自己对这次的幽会兴致索然，边思索是什么把他引到这里来的。这绝不是恋爱。倘若不是恋爱——他为了回避这个答复，不得不想：总之，我们是平等的。

坐在前面那辆人力车上的是一个狂人的女儿。不仅如此，她的妹妹是因嫉妒而自杀的。

——事到如今，怎么也没办法了。

他对这个狂人的女儿——她只有强烈的动物本能——已经感到某种憎恶了。

这当儿，两辆人力车经过有咸腥气味的墓地外面。粘着蚝壳的矮树篱里面，有几座黑黝黝的石塔。他眺望着在那些石塔后面微微闪烁的海洋，不知怎的，忽然对她的丈夫——没能抓住她的心心的丈夫，感到蔑视.....

二十二 某画家

那是某杂志的插图。一只公鸡的水墨画表现出明显的个性。他向某友人打听这位画家的情况。

大约一周后，这位画家访问了他。在他的一生中，这是一件颇不寻常的事情。他在这位画家身上发现了谁都不知道的那一面。不但如此，还发现了连画家本人也一直不知道的画家的灵魂。

在一个微寒的秋日傍晚，他因看到一株玉米，蓦地联想起这位画家。长得高高的玉米，披着粗糙的叶子，培在根部的土里露出像神经那样纤细的根须。这无疑又是容易受伤的他的自画像。可是这样的发现只有使他忧郁罢了。

——已经晚了。可是到了节骨眼儿上……

二十三 她

某广场前面，暮色苍茫。他的身体发着低烧，在广场上踱步。晴空略呈银色，大厦林立，窗口灯火辉煌。

他在路边停下脚步，等候她到来。大约过了五分钟，她好像有些憔悴似的向他走来。她看到了他的脸，就微笑着说：“累啦。”他们并肩在依稀有些亮光的广场上走着。对他们来说，这是第一次。为了跟她在一起，他无论抛掉什么都在所不惜。

他们乘上汽车后，她凝视着他的脸说：“你不后悔吗？”他斩钉截铁地说：“不后悔。”她按着他的手说道：“我也不后悔。”这样讲的时候，她的脸好像沐浴在月光下。

二十四 分娩

他伫立在纸隔扇旁边，俯视着穿白色手术衣的一名接生婆在给婴儿洗澡。每当肥皂浸进眼里，婴儿就可爱地反复皱起眉头，还不断地大声哭。他一面觉得婴儿的气味有点像鼠崽子，一面不由得深刻地想道：“为什么这娃娃也出生了呢？生到这个充满俗世之苦的世界上来——为什么他命中注定要有我这个爸爸呢？”

而且这是他的妻子头胎生的男孩。

二十五 斯特林堡

他站在房间门口，看着开着石榴花的月光底下几个衣冠不整的中國人在打麻将。然后回到房间里，在矮矮的油灯下开始读《痴人的告白》。可是还没有读上两页，就不知不觉苦笑起来——斯特林堡在给情妇伯爵夫人的信中，写着和他差不离的谎言……

二十六 古代

彩色剥落了的佛像、天人、马和莲花座几乎使他为之倾倒。他仰望着它们，把一切抛在脑后。甚至忘记了他本人侥幸得以摆脱狂人的女儿……

二十七 斯巴达式训练

他同他的朋友在一条巷子里走着。一辆上篷的人力车径直迎面跑来。而且出人意料的是车上坐的正是昨晚的她。在这样的白昼，她的面容恍若沐浴在月光下。当着他朋友的面，他们当然连招呼也没打。

“真漂亮。”他的朋友这样说。

他望着巷子尽头的春天的山，毫不犹豫地回答说：“是啊，真漂亮。”

二十八 杀人

乡间道路沐浴在阳光下，散发着牛粪的臭气。他揩着汗，踏着上坡路走去。道路两旁飘着熟麦的香气。

“杀吧，杀吧……”他不知不觉间嘴里反复嘟囔着。杀谁呢？——这他是清楚的。他想起一个极卑鄙的留平头的男子。

黄色麦地的那面，不知何时露出了一座天主教堂的圆屋顶……

二十九 形象

那是一把铁制酒壶。这把细纹酒壶使他懂得了“造型”的美。

三十 雨

他在大床上同她聊着天。寝室窗外下着雨。在这场雨中，木棉花说不上什么时候就会烂掉吧。她的面容仍像是沐浴在月光下。可是同她交谈，他未免感到无聊。他匍匐着，静静地点起一支纸烟，想起同她一起生活已有七年了。

“我爱着这个女人吗？”他问他自己道。

“我还爱着。”——这个答复使注视着自己的他也感到意外。

三十一 大地震

那种气味和熟透了的杏子差不多。他在火灾后的废墟上走着，微微嗅到这样的气味，于是想道：炎天的腐尸，气味居然也不太难闻。可是当他站在尸骸累累的池畔望去的时候，才发现“鼻子发酸”这句话在感觉上绝不是夸张的。尤其使他动情的是十二三岁的小孩的尸体。他看着那具尸体，有点觉得羡慕。他想起“上帝所爱者不长命”这句

话。他的姐姐和异母兄弟的家都焚毁了，而且他的姐夫是犯了伪证罪而缓期服刑的……

他站在灰烬中，不由得深深地想道：人人都死掉才好呢。

三十二 打架

他同异母兄弟扭打起来了。他弟弟无疑由于他的缘故经常受到压迫。同时，他也因为弟弟而失掉了自由。他的亲戚一个劲儿地对他的弟弟说：“你要学他。”然而这不啻是把他本人的手脚都绑了起来。他们扭作一团，终于滚到廊子上了。他还记得，廊外的庭院中有一棵百日红，在酝酿着一场雨的天空下开着红彤彤的花。

三十三 英雄

不知什么时候，他从伏尔泰家的窗口仰望着高山。那挂着冰河的山上，连秃鹰的影子也看不见。可是有一个身材矮小的俄罗斯人在顽强地沿着山路攀登。

夜幕降临到伏尔泰家后，他在明亮的灯光下回忆着攀登山路的俄罗斯人的身姿，写了这样一首有教化目的的诗：

你比谁都恪守十诫，
又比谁都违反十诫。

你比谁都爱护民众，
又比谁都轻视民众。

你比谁都富于理想，
又比谁都了解现实。

你是我们东洋诞生的， 散发草花香气的电气机车。

三十四 色彩

三十岁的他不知什么时候爱上了某块空地。那里，长着青苔的地面上只散着一些残砖碎瓦。可是在他眼里这与塞尚 [8] 的风景画没有什么两样。

他忽然想起了七八年前他的激情。同时发现他在七八年前是不懂得色彩的。

三十五 假人

他打算过一种激烈到不论何时死去也不会后悔的生活。可是在养父养母和姑妈面前，他的日子依然过得很拘谨。这就使他的生活形成了阴阳两面。他看见立在某西服店里的一个人体模型，就想到究竟他自己在多大程度上像这个模型。但是意识之外的他——可以说是第二个他，早已把这样的心情写入一篇短篇小说里了。

三十六 倦怠

他同一个大学生在长满狗尾草的野地上行走。

“你们仍有旺盛的生活欲吧？”

“嗯……可是你也……”

“可是我没有了。只是有创作欲罢了。”

这是他的真情。说实在的，他不知不觉间已对生活失去了兴趣。

“创作欲也是生活欲吧。”

他没有回答。曾几何时，野地的红穗上清晰地映现出一座喷火山。他觉得有些羡慕这座喷火山。可是他自己也莫名其所以然……

三十七 过来人

他遇到了在才力上也能够同他匹敌的女人。可是他写了《过来人》等抒情诗，才摆脱了这个危机。这是一种百无聊赖的心情，宛如把冻在树干上的闪闪发光的雪拍了下来。

草笠随风舞， 飘摇落道旁；
我名何所惜， 但愿君名扬。

三十八 复仇

那是某饭店的阳台，周围满是刚萌芽的树木。他在那里画着画，哄一个少年玩。这是七年前分手的狂人的女儿的独生子。

狂人的女儿点燃纸烟，看着他们玩。他在心情沉重地继续描绘火车和飞机。幸亏这个少年不是他的儿子。可是，使他感到痛苦的莫过于这个少年叫他“叔叔”。

少年不知跑到哪儿去了，狂人的女儿边抽着烟，边带点媚态地对他说：“那孩子不像你吗？”

“不像。第一……”

“可是，还有胎教的说法呢。”

他默不作声，眼睛望着在一旁。可是他心里并非没有残忍的愿望，恨不得把他掐死……

三十九 镜子

他在某咖啡馆的一个角落里同朋友谈话。他的朋友吃着烤苹果，谈论着近来天气寒冷之类的话。他突然感到这样的话里有矛盾。

“你还是独身呀。”

“不，下个月就结婚。”

他不由得默不作声了。嵌在咖啡馆墙壁上的镜子映出他无数的形象。冷冰冰的，像威胁什么似的……

四十 问答

你为什么要攻击现代的社会制度？

因为我看到了资本主义所产生的罪恶。

罪恶？我还只当你分辨不出善恶的差别呢。那么，你的生活呢？

——他就这样同天使一问一答。当然是体体面面地戴着大礼帽的天使……

四十一 病

他患了失眠病，并且体力也开始衰弱了。好几位医生各自给他的病做了两三种诊断：胃酸过多、胃弛缓、干性肋膜炎、神经衰弱、慢性结膜炎、脑疲劳……

可是他知道自己病源。那就是对他自己感到羞愧，同时又害怕他们的心情。害怕他们——害怕他所蔑视的社会！

在一个要下雪的阴沉的下午，他在某咖啡馆的一个角落里衔着点燃了的雪茄烟，倾听对面留声机放出的音乐。乐声沁人心脾。等到那段音乐结束后，他就走到留声机前，看看唱片上贴的说明：《魔笛》——莫扎特。^[9]

他顿时领悟了。破了十诫的莫扎特也还是有过苦闷的。可是，该不至于像他这样……他垂着头，静静地回到自己的桌边。

四十二 众神的笑声

在春光明媚的松林中，三十五岁的他边踱步边回忆着自己两三年前写过的话：

我最同情的是神不能自杀。

四十三 夜

夜幕又快降临了。要闹天气了，半明半暗中，海上浪花滚滚。在这样的天空下，他同妻子第二次结婚了。这给他们带来了欢乐，同时又带来痛苦。三个孩子和他们一起看着海上的闪电。他的妻子抱着一个孩子，好像忍着眼泪。

“那边有一只船。”

“嗯。”

“桅杆断了船。”

四十四 死

他趁着独自睡觉的机会，把腰带挂在窗棂子上想自缢。可是把脖子伸进带子时忽然又怕死了。并不是害怕死的那一瞬间的痛苦。他第二次自缢时拿着怀表测试缢死的时间。稍感痛苦以后，神志就有些恍惚了。只要过了这一关，准会进入死境。他看了看表针，发现感到痛苦的过程为一分二十几秒。窗棂子外一片漆黑。从黑暗中传来了粗犷的鸡鸣。

四十五 Divan [10]

Divan即将再次给他的心灵倾注以新的力量。那是他所不知道的“东洋的歌德”。他看见超脱一切善恶，悠然站在彼岸的歌德，感到近乎绝望的羡慕。在他眼里，诗人歌德比诗人基督更伟大。在这位诗人的心中，除了阿克罗波利斯 [11] 和各各他 [12] 之外，还有阿拉伯玫瑰花在怒放。倘若多少有力量追踪这位诗人的足迹的话……他读完诗集，当极为激动的情绪平息以后，不禁深深蔑视自己，因为他在生活中就像宦官一样。

四十六 谎言

他姐夫的自杀猝然使他受了打击。今后连姐姐一家人也得由他来照顾了。至少对他来说，未来就像日暮那样昏暗。他对自己精神上的破产有一种近乎冷笑的感觉（他完全明白自己的罪孽和弱点），继续阅读各种书籍。可是连卢梭的《忏悔录》也充满英雄的谎言。尤其是《新生》 [13] ——他从来没有遇见过像《新生》的主人公那样老奸巨猾的伪善者。可是只有弗朗索瓦·维庸 [14] 浸透了他的心。他在几篇诗里发现了“美丽的男性”。

等待绞刑的维庸的形象出现在他的梦里。他几次差点儿像维庸那

样坠入人生的底层。但是他的境遇和体力不允许这样。他渐渐衰弱下去，恰似从前斯威夫特^[15]见到过的从树梢枯萎起来的树木那样……

四十七 玩火

她容光焕发，犹如晨光照耀下的薄冰似的。他对她抱有好感，但是没有恋爱的感觉，而且连碰也没碰过她的身体。

“听说你想死。”

“是——不，与其说想死，不如说活腻了。”

他们这样一问一答，约好一起死。

“这是精神自杀。”

“双双精神自杀。”

他对他自己这样镇静自若，不由得感到奇怪。

四十八 死

他没有同她一起死。至今连碰也没碰过她的身体这一点，似乎使他感到满意。她若无其事时常同他谈，并且把她带着的一瓶氰化钾递给他，还说：“有了这个，彼此心里都有仗势了。”

那确实使他心里有了仗势。他独自坐在藤椅上，看着柯树的嫩叶，不由得反复思索死亡将给予他的和平。

四十九 剥制的天鹅

他想尽最后的力量写自传。可是这对他来说竟然并不容易。那是由于他还残留着自尊心、怀疑主义和利害打算。他不得不轻蔑这样的自己。可是另一方面，他又不由自主地想：如果剥开一层皮来看，谁都是一样的。他总是想，《诗与真实》这个书名好像是一切自传的书名。他还清楚地知道，文艺作品不一定使人人都感动。他还产生了这样的念头：只有那些与他的生涯相近并且和他相似的人们才会为他的作品所感动。因此，他决定简短地把自己的《诗与真实》写出来。

他写完《傻子的一生》后，偶然在某旧家具店看见了剥制的天鹅。它伸长了颈立着，连发黄的羽毛也被蛀蚀了。他回想自己的一生，不禁热泪盈眶，发出冷笑。他的前途不是发疯就是自杀。他独自在日落的街上走着，决心等待慢慢把他毁灭的命运的到来。

五十 俘虏

他的朋友之一发疯了。他对这个朋友一向有某种亲近的感觉。因

为他比别人更深刻地理解这个朋友的孤独——快活的假面掩盖下的孤独。这个朋友发疯后他去看望过两三次。

“你和我都给恶魔附体了——给所谓世纪末的恶魔附体了。”

这位朋友曾低声对他这样说。听说两三天以后，这位朋友在去某温泉旅馆的途中，甚至吃起玫瑰花来了。这个朋友住院后，他想起了过去曾送给这个朋友一座赤陶半身像。那是这个朋友所喜欢的《钦差大臣》一书的作者的半身像。他想起果戈理也是发疯而死的，不由得感到冥冥之中有一股力量在支配他们。

他已筋疲力竭之际，偶尔读到拉迪盖 [16] 临终的话，又一次觉得听见了众神的笑声。那句话说：“神兵来捉我。”他想与他的迷信和感伤主义做斗争。可是从肉体上来说，他已经不可能进行任何斗争了。“世纪末的恶魔”无疑正在摧残他。他对虔信神的中世纪的人们感到羡慕。可是他终究不可能信神——信仰神的爱。连科克托 [17] 都是信神的啊！

五十一 败北

他执笔的手颤抖起来了，甚至还流了口水。除非服用零点八毫克的佛罗那 [18]，他的头脑没有一次清醒过，而且清醒也不过半小时或一小时。他只有在幽暗中挨着时光，直好像是将一把崩了刃的细剑当拐杖拄着。

The Life of a Stupid Man

N° 06

‘Ah, what is the life of a human being — a drop of dew, a flash of lightning?
This is so sad,
so sad.’

In a Bamboo Grove

The TesTimony of a WoodcuTTER under QuesTioning by The magisTraTe

That is true, Your Honor. I am the one who found the body. I went out as usual this morning to cut cedar in the hills behind my place. The body was in a bamboo grove on the other side of the mountain. Its exact location? A few hundred yards off the Yamashina post road. A deserted place where a few scrub cedar trees are mixed in with the bamboo.

The man was lying on his back in his pale blue robe with the sleeves tied up and one of those fancy Kyoto- style black hats with the sharp creases. He had only one stab wound, but it was right in the middle of his chest; the bamboo leaves around the body were soaked with dark red blood. No, the bleeding had stopped. The wound looked dry, and I remember it had a big horsefly sucking on it so hard the thing didn't even notice my footsteps.

Did I see a sword or anything? No, Sir, not a thing. Just a length of rope by the cedar tree next to the body. And – oh yes, there was a comb there, too. Just the rope and the comb is all. But the weeds and the bamboo leaves on the ground were pretty trampled down: he must have put up a tremendous fight before they killed him. How's that, Sir – a horse? No, a horse could never have gotten into that place. It's all bamboo thicket between there and the road.

The TesTimony of a Traveling PriesT under QuesTioning by The magisTraTe

I'm sure I passed the man yesterday, Your Honor. Yesterday at – about noon, I'd say. Near Checkpoint Hill on the way to Yamashina. He was walking toward the checkpoint with a woman on horseback. She wore a stiff, round straw hat with a long veil hanging down around the brim; I couldn't see her face, just her robe. I think it had a kind of dark- red outer layer with a blue-green lining. The horse was a dappled gray with a tinge of red, and I'm fairly sure it had a clipped mane. Was it a big horse? I'd say it was a few inches taller than most, but I'm a priest after all. I don't know much about horses. The man? No, Sir, he had a good- sized sword, and he was equipped with a bow and arrows. I can still see that black- lacquered quiver of his: he must have had twenty arrows in it, maybe more. I would never have dreamt that a thing like this could happen to such a man. Ah, what is the life of a human being – a drop of dew, a flash of lightning? This is so sad, so sad. What can I say?

The TesTimony of a Policeman under QuestTioning by The magisTraTe

The man I captured, Your Honor? I am certain he is the famous bandit, Tajōmaru. True, when I caught him he had fallen off his horse, and he was moaning and groaning on the stone bridge at Awataguchi. The time, Sir? It was last night at the first watch. He was wearing the same dark blue robe and carrying the same long sword he used the time I almost captured him before. You can see he also has a bow and arrows now. Oh, is that so, Sir? The dead man, too? That settles it, then: I'm sure this Tajōmaru fellow is the murderer. A leather- wrapped bow, a quiver in black lacquer, seventeen hawk- feather arrows – they must have belonged to the victim. And yes, as you say, Sir, the horse is a dappled gray with a touch of red, and it has a clipped mane. It's only a dumb animal, but it gave that bandit just what he deserved, throwing him like that. It was a short way beyond the bridge, trailing its reins on the ground and eating plume grass by the road.

Of all the bandits prowling around Kyoto, this Tajōmaru is known as a fellow who likes the women. Last fall, people at Toribe Temple found a pair of worshippers murdered – a woman and a child – on the hill behind the statue of Binzuru. Everybody said Tajōmaru must have done it. If it turns out he killed the man, there's no telling what he might have done to the woman who was on the horse. I don't mean to meddle, Sir, but I do think you ought to question him about that.

The TesTimony of an old Woman under QuestTioning by The magisTraTe

Yes, Your Honor, my daughter was married to the dead man. He is not from the capital, though. He was a samurai serving in the Wakasa provincial office. His name was Kanazawa no Takehiro, and he was twenty- six years old. No, Sir, he was a very kind man. I can't believe anyone would have hated him enough to do this.

My daughter, Sir? Her name is Masago, and she is nineteen years old. She's as bold as any man, but the only man she has ever known is Takehiro. Her complexion is a little on the dark side, and she has a mole by the outside corner of her left eye, but her face is a tiny, perfect oval.

Takehiro left for Wakasa yesterday with my daughter, but what turn of fate could have led to this? There's nothing I can do for my son- in- law anymore, but what could have happened to my daughter? I'm worried sick about her. Oh please, Sir, do everything you can to find her, leave no stone unturned: I have lived a long time, but I have never wanted anything so badly in my life. Oh how I hate that bandit – that, that Tajōmaru! Not only my son- in- law, but my daughter . . . (Here the old woman broke down and was unable to go on speaking.)

* * * * *

Tajōmaru's confession

Sure, I killed the man. But I didn't kill the woman. So, where did she go? I don't know any better than you do. Now, wait just a minute – you can torture me all you want, but I can't tell you what I don't know. And besides, now that you've got me, I'm not going to hide anything. I'm no coward.

I met that couple yesterday, a little after noon. The second I saw them, a puff of wind lifted her veil and I caught a peek at her. Just a peek: that's maybe why she looked so perfect to me – an absolute bodhisattva of a woman. I made up my mind right then to take her even if I had to kill the man.

Oh come on, killing a man is not as big a thing as people like you seem to think. If you're going to take somebody's woman, a man has to die. When I kill a man, I do it with my sword, but people like you don't use swords. You gentlemen kill with your power, with your money, and sometimes just with your words: you tell people you're doing them a favor. True, no blood flows, the man is still alive, but you've killed him all the same. I don't know whose sin is greater – yours or mine. (A sarcastic smile.)

Of course, if you can take the woman without killing the man, all the better. Which is exactly what I was hoping to do yesterday. It would have been impossible on the Yamashina post road, of course, so I thought of a way to lure them into the hills.

It was easy. I fell in with them on the road and made up a story. I told them I had found an old burial mound in the hills, and when I opened it it was full of swords and mirrors and things. I said I had buried the stuff in a bamboo grove on the other side of the mountain to keep anyone from finding out about it, and I'd sell it cheap to the right buyer. He started getting interested soon enough. It's scary what greed can do to people, don't you think? In less than an hour, I was leading that couple and their horse up a mountain trail.

When we reached the grove, I told them the treasure was buried in there and they should come inside with me and look at it. The man was so hungry for the stuff by then, he couldn't refuse, but the woman said she'd wait there on the horse. I figured that would happen – the woods are so thick. They fell right into my trap. We left the woman alone and went into the grove.

It was all bamboo at first. Fifty yards or so inside, there was a sort of open clump of cedars – the perfect place for what I was going to do. I pushed through the thicket and made up some nonsense about how the treasure was buried under one of them. When he heard that, the man charged toward some scrawny cedars visible up ahead. The bamboo thinned out, and the trees were standing there in a row. As soon as we got to them, I grabbed him and pinned him down. I could see he was a strong man –he carried a sword – but I took him by surprise, and he couldn't do a thing. I had him tied to the base of a tree in no time. Where did I get the rope? Well, I'm a thief, you know – I might have to scale a wall at any time – so I've always got a piece of rope in my belt. I stuffed his mouth full of bamboo leaves to keep him quiet. That's all there was to it.

Once I finished with the man, I went and told the woman that her husband had suddenly been taken ill and she should come and have a look at him. This was another bull' s- eye, of course. She took off her hat and let me lead her by the hand into the grove. As soon as she saw the man tied to the tree, though, she whipped a dagger out of her breast. I never saw a woman with such fire! If I'd been off my guard, she'd have stuck that thing in my gut. And the way she kept coming, she would have done me some damage eventually no matter how much I dodged. Still, I am Tajōmaru. One way or another, I managed to knock the knife out of her hand without drawing my sword. Even the most spirited woman is going to be helpless if she hasn't got a weapon. And so I was able to make the woman mine without taking her husband's life.

Yes, you heard me: without taking her husband's life. I wasn't planning to kill him on top of everything else. The woman was on the ground, crying, and I was getting ready to run out of the grove and leave her there when all of a sudden she grabbed my arm like some kind of crazy person. And then I heard what she was shouting between sobs. She could hardly catch her breath: 'Either you die or my husband dies. It has to be one of you. It's worse than death for me to have two men see my shame. I want to stay with the one left alive, whether it's you or him.' That gave me a wild desire to kill her husband.(Sullen excitement.)

When I say this, you probably think I'm crueller than you are. But that's because you didn't see the look on her face – and especially, you never saw the way her eyes were burning at that moment. When those eyes met mine, I knew I wanted to make her my wife. Let the thunder god kill me, I'd make her my wife – that was the only thought in my head. And no, not just from lust. I know that's what you gentlemen are thinking. If lust was all I felt for her, I'd already taken care of that. I could've just kicked her down and gotten out of there. And the man wouldn't have stained my sword with his blood. But the moment my eyes locked onto hers in that dark grove, I knew I couldn't leave there until I had killed him.

Still, I didn't want to kill him in a cowardly way. I untied him and challenged him to a sword fight. (That piece of rope they found was the one I threw aside then.) The man looked furious as he drew his big sword, and without a word he sprang at me in a rage. I don't have to tell you the outcome of the fight. My sword pierced his breast on the twenty- third thrust. Not till the twenty- third: I want you to keep that in mind. I still admire him for that. He's the only man who ever lasted even twenty thrusts with me. (Cheerful grin.)

As he went down, I lowered my bloody sword and turned toward the woman. But she was gone! I looked for her among the cedars, but the bamboo leaves on the ground showed no sign she'd ever been there. I cocked my ear for any sound of her, but all I could hear was the man's death rattle.

Maybe she had run through the underbrush to call for help when the sword fight started. The thought made me fear for my life. I grabbed the man's sword and his bow and arrows and headed straight for the mountain road. The woman's horse was still there, just chewing on grass. Anything else I could tell you after that would be a waste of breath. I got rid of his sword before coming to Kyoto, though.

So that's my confession. I always knew my head would end up hanging in the tree outside the prison some day, so let me have the ultimate punishment. (Defiant attitude.)

PeniTEnT confession of a Woman in The Kiyomizu TemPle

After the man in the dark blue robe had his way with me, he looked at my husband, all tied up, and taunted him with laughter. How humiliated my husband must have felt! He squirmed and twisted in the ropes that covered his body, but the knots ate all the deeper into his flesh. Stumbling, I ran to his side. No – I tried to run to him, but instantly the man kicked me down. And that was when it happened: that was when I saw the indescribable glint in my husband's eyes. Truly, it was indescribable. It makes me shudder to recall it even now. My husband was unable to speak a word, and yet, in that moment, his eyes conveyed his whole heart to me. What I saw shining there was neither anger nor sorrow. It was the cold flash of contempt –contempt for me . This struck me more painfully than the bandit's kick. I let out a cry and collapsed on the spot.

When I regained consciousness, the man in blue was gone. The only one there in the grove was my husband, still tied to the cedar tree. I just barely managed to raise myself on the carpet of dead bamboo leaves, and look into my husband's face. His eyes were exactly as they had been before, with that same cold look of contempt and hatred. How can I describe the emotion that filled my heart then? Shame . . . sorrow . . . anger . . . I staggered over to him.

‘Oh, my husband! Now that this has happened, I cannot go on living with you. I am prepared to die here and now. But you – yes, I want you to die as well. You witnessed my shame. I cannot leave you behind with that knowledge.’

I struggled to say everything I needed to say, but my husband simply went on staring at me in disgust. I felt as if my breast would burst open at any moment, but holding my feelings in check, I began to search the bamboo thicket for his sword. The bandit must have taken it – I couldn’t find it anywhere – and my husband’s bow and arrows were gone as well. But then I had the good luck to find the dagger at my feet. I brandished it before my husband and spoke to him once again.

‘This is the end, then. Please be so good as to allow me to take your life. I will quickly follow you in death.’

When he heard this, my husband finally began moving his lips. Of course his mouth was stuffed with bamboo leaves, so he couldn’t make a sound, but I knew immediately what he was saying. With total contempt for me, he said only, ‘Do it.’ Drifting somewhere between dream and reality, I thrust the dagger through the chest of his pale blue robe.

Then I lost consciousness again. When I was able to look around me at last, my husband, still tied to the tree, was no longer breathing. Across his ashen face shone a streak of light from the setting sun, filtered through the bamboo and cedar. Gulping back my tears, I untied him and cast the rope aside. And then – and then what happened to me? I no longer have the strength to tell it. That I failed to kill myself is obvious. I tried to stab myself in the throat. I threw myself in a pond at the foot of the mountain. Nothing worked. I am still here, by no means proud of my inability to die. (Forlorn smile.) Perhaps even Kanzeon, bodhisattva of compassion, has turned away from me for being so weak. But now – now that I have killed my husband, now that I have been violated by a bandit – what am I to do? Tell me, what am I to . . . (Sudden violent sobbing.)

The TesTimony of The dead man’s sPiriT Told Through a medium

After the bandit had his way with my wife, he sat there on the ground, trying to comfort her. I could say nothing, of course, and I was bound to the cedar tree. But I kept trying to signal her with my eyes: Don't believe anything he tells you. He's lying, no matter what he says . I tried to convey my meaning to her, but she just went on cringing there on the fallen bamboo leaves, staring at her knees. And, you know, I could see she was listening to him. I writhed with jealousy, but the bandit kept his smooth talk going from one point to the next. 'Now that your flesh has been sullied, things will never be the same with your husband. Don't stay with him – come and be my wife! It's because I love you so much that I was so wild with you.' The bandit had the gall to speak to her like that!

When my wife raised her face in response to him, she seemed almost spellbound. I had never seen her look so beautiful as she did at that moment. And what do you think this beautiful wife of mine said to the bandit, in my presence – in the presence of her husband bound hand and foot? My spirit may be wandering now between one life and the next, but every time I recall her answer, I burn with indignation. 'All right,' she told him, 'take me anywhere you like.' (Long silence.)

And that was not her only crime against me. If that were all she did, I would not be suffering so here in the darkness. With him leading her by the hand, she was stepping out of the bamboo grove as if in a dream, when suddenly the color drained from her face and she pointed back to me. 'Kill him!' she screamed. 'Kill him! I can't be with you as long as he is alive!' Again and again she screamed, as if she had lost her mind, 'Kill him!' Even now her words like a windstorm threaten to blow me headlong into the darkest depths. Have such hateful words ever come from the mouth of a human being before? Have such damnable words ever reached the ears of a human being before? Have such – (An explosion of derisive laughter.) Even the bandit went pale when he heard her. She clung to his arm and screamed again, 'Kill him!' The bandit stared at her, saying neither that he would kill me nor that he would not. The next thing I knew, however, he sent my wife sprawling on the bamboo leaves with a single kick. (Another explosion of derisive laughter.) The bandit calmly folded his arms and turned to look at me.

'What do you want me to do with her?' he asked. 'Kill her or let her go? Just nod to answer. Kill her?’ For this if for nothing else, I am ready to forgive the bandit his crimes. (Second long silence.)

When I hesitated with my answer, my wife let out a scream and darted into the depths of the bamboo thicket. He sprang after her, but I don’t think he even managed to lay a hand on her sleeve. I watched the spectacle as if it were some kind of vision.

After my wife ran off, the bandit picked up my sword and bow and arrows, and he cut my ropes at one place. ‘Now it’s my turn to run,’ I remember hearing him mutter as he disappeared from the thicket. Then the whole area was quiet. No – I could hear someone weeping. While I was untying myself, I listened to the sound, until I realized – I realized that I was the one crying. (Another long silence.)

I finally raised myself, exhausted, from the foot of the tree. Lying there before me was the dagger that my wife had dropped. I picked it up and shoved it into my chest. Some kind of bloody mass rose to my mouth, but I felt no pain at all. My chest grew cold, and then everything sank into stillness. What perfect silence! In the skies above that grove on the hidden side of the mountain, not a single bird came to sing. The lonely glow of the sun lingered among the high branches of cedar and bamboo. The sun – but gradually, even that began to fade, and with it the cedars and bamboo. I lay there wrapped in a deep silence.

Then stealthy footsteps came up to me. I tried to see who it was, but the darkness had closed in all around me. Someone – that someone gently pulled the dagger from my chest with an invisible hand. Again a rush of blood filled my mouth, but then I sank once and for all into the darkness between lives.

Death Register

My mother was a madwoman. I never did feel close to her, as a son should feel toward his mother. Hair held in place by a comb, she would sit alone all day puffing on a long, skinny pipe in the house of my birth family in Tokyo's Shiba Ward. She had a tiny face on a tiny body, and that face of hers, for some reason, was always ashen and lifeless. Once, reading The Story of the Western Wing, I came upon the phrase 'smell of earth, taste of mud', and thought immediately of my mother – of her emaciated face in profile.

And so I never had the experience of a mother's care. I do seem to recall that one time, when my adoptive mother made a point of taking me upstairs to see her, she suddenly conked me on the head with her pipe. In general, though, she was a quiet lunatic. I or my elder sister would sometimes press her to paint a picture for us, and she would do it on a sheet of paper folded in four. And not just with black ink, either. She would apply my sister's watercolors to blossoming plants or the costumes of children on an outing. The people in her pictures, though, always had fox faces.

My mother died in the autumn of my eleventh year, not so much from illness, I think, as from simply wasting away. I have a fairly clear memory of the events surrounding her death.

A telegram must have arrived to alert us. Late on a windless night, I climbed into a rickshaw with my adoptive mother and sped across the city from Honjo to Shiba. Otherwise in my life I have never used a scarf, but I do recall that on that particular night I had a thin silk handkerchief wrapped around my neck. I also recall that it had some kind of Chinese landscape motif, and that it smelled strongly of Iris Bouquet.

My mother lay on a futon in the eight- mat parlor directly beneath her upstairs room. I knelt beside her, wailing, with my four- year- older sister. I felt especially miserable when I heard someone behind me say, 'The end is near.' My mother had been lying there as good as dead, but suddenly she opened her eyes and spoke. Sad as everyone felt, we couldn't help giggling.

I stayed up by my mother through the following night as well, but that night, for some reason, my tears simply wouldn't flow. Ashamed to be so unfeeling while right next to me my sister wept almost constantly, I struggled to pretend. Yet I also believed that as long as I was unable to cry, my mother would not die.

On the evening of the third day, though, she did die, with very little suffering. A few times before it happened, she would seem to regain consciousness, look us all in the face, and release an endless stream of tears, but as usual she said not a thing.

Even after her body had been placed in the coffin, I couldn't keep from breaking down time and again. The old woman we called our 'Ōji Auntie', a distant relative, would say, 'I'm so impressed with you!' My only thought was that here was a person who let herself be impressed by very strange things.

The day of my mother's funeral, my sister climbed into a rickshaw holding the memorial tablet, and I followed her inside, holding the censer. I dozed off now and then, waking with a start each time the censer was about to drop from my hand. Still, we seemed never to reach Yanaka. Always I would wake to find the long funeral procession still winding its way through the streets of Tokyo in the autumn sunlight.

The anniversary of my mother's death is 28 November. The priest gave her the posthumous name of Kimyōin Myōjō Nisshin Daishi. I can remember neither the anniversary of my birth father's death two decades later nor his posthumous name. Memorizing such things had probably been a matter of pride for me at the age of eleven.

I have just the one elder sister. Not very healthy, she is nevertheless the mother of two children. She is not, of course, one of those I want to include in this 'Death Register.' Rather, it is the sister who died suddenly just before I was born. Among us three siblings, she was said to be the smartest.

She was certainly the first – which is why they named her ‘Hatsuko’ (First Daughter). Even now a small framed portrait of ‘Little Hatsu’ adorns the Buddhist altar in my house. There is nothing at all sickly- looking about her. Her cheeks, with their little dimples, are as round as ripe apricots.

Little Hatsu was by far the one who received the greatest outpouring of love from my parents. They made a point of sending her all the way from Shiba Shinsen-za to attend the kindergarten of a Mrs Summers – I think it was – in Tsukiji. On weekends, though, she would stay with my mother’s family, the Akutagawas, in Honjo. On these outings of hers, Little Hatsu would probably wear Western dresses, which still, in the Meiji twenties, would have seemed very modish. When I was in elementary school, I remember, I used to get remnants of her clothes to put on my rubber doll. Without exception, all the cloth patches were imported calico scattered with tiny printed flowers or musical instruments.

One Sunday afternoon in early spring, when Little Hatsu was strolling through the garden (wearing a Western dress, as I imagine her), she called out to our aunt Fuki in the parlor, ‘Auntie, what’s the name of this tree?’

‘Which one?’

‘This one, with the buds.’

In the garden of my mother’s family, a single low boke ^[1] trailed its branches over the old well. Little Hatsu, in pigtails, was probably looking up at its thorny branches with big round eyes.

‘It has the same name as you,’ my aunt said, but before she could explain her joke, Hatsu made up one of her own:

‘Then it must be a “dummy” tree.’

My aunt always tells this story whenever the conversation turns to Little Hatsu. Indeed, it’s the only story left to tell about her. Probably not too many days later, Little Hatsu was in her coffin. I don’t remember the posthumous name engraved on her tiny memorial tablet. I do have a strangely clear memory of her death date, though: 5 April.

For some unknown reason, I feel close to this sister I never knew. If ‘Little Hatsu’ were still living, she would be over forty now. And maybe, at that age, she would look like my mother as I recall her upstairs in the Shiba house, blankly puffing away on her pipe. I often feel as if there is a fortyish woman somewhere – a phantom not exactly my mother nor this dead sister – watching over my life. Could this be the effect of nerves wracked by coffee and tobacco? Or might it be the work of some supernatural power giving occasional glimpses of itself to the real world?

Because my mother lost her mind, I was adopted into the family of her elder brother shortly after I was born, and so my real father was another parent for whom I had little feeling. He owned a dairy and seems to have been a small- scale success. That father was the person who taught me all about the newly imported fruits and drinks of the day: banana , ice cream , pineapple , rum – and probably much more. I remember once drinking rum in the shade of an oak tree outside the pasture, which was then located in Shinjuku. Rum was an amber- colored drink with little alcohol.

When I was very young, my father would try to entice me back from my adoptive family by plying me with these rare treats. I remember how he once openly tempted me into running away while feeding me ice cream in the Uoei restaurant in Ōmori. At times like this he could be a smooth talker and exude real charm. Unfortunately for him, though, his enticements never worked. This was because I loved my adoptive family too much – and especially my mother's elder sister, Aunt Fuki.

My father had a short temper and was always fighting with people. When I was in the third year of middle school, I beat him at sumo wrestling by tripping him backwards using a special judo move of mine. He got up and came right after me saying 'One more go.' I threw him easily again. He came charging at me for a third time, again saying 'One more go,' but now I could see he was angry. My other aunt (Aunt Fuyu, my mother's younger sister – by then my father's second wife) was watching all this, and she winked at me a few times behind my father's back. After grappling with him for a little while, I purposely fell over backwards. I'm sure if I hadn't lost to him, I would have ended up another victim of my father's temper.

When I was twenty- eight and still teaching, I received a telegram saying ‘Father hospitalized,’ and I rushed from Kamakura to Tokyo. He was in the Tokyo Hospital with influenza. I spent the next three days there with my Aunts Fuyu and Fuki, sleeping in a corner of the room. I was beginning to feel bored when a call came for me from an Irish reporter friend inviting me out for a meal at a Tsukiji tea house. Using his upcoming departure for America as an excuse, I left for Tsukiji even though my father was on the verge of death.

We had a delightful Japanese dinner in the company of four or five geisha. I think the meal ended around ten o’clock. Leaving the reporter, I was headed down the steep, narrow stairway when, from behind, I heard a soft feminine voice calling me ‘ Ah- san’ in that playful geisha way. I stopped in mid- descent and turned to look up toward the top of the stairs. There, one of the geisha was looking down, her eyes fixed on mine. Wordlessly, I continued down the stairs and stepped into the cab waiting at the front door. The car moved off immediately, but instead of my father what came to mind was the fresh face of that geisha in her Western hairstyle – and in particular her eyes.

Back at the hospital, I found my father eagerly awaiting my return. He sent everyone else outside the two- panel folding screen by the bed, and, gripping and caressing my hand, he began to talk about long- ago matters that I had never known – things from the time when he married my mother. They were inconsequential things – how he and she had gone to shop for a storage chest, or how they had eaten home- delivered sushi – but before I knew it my eyelids were growing hot inside, and down my father’s wasted cheeks, too, tears were flowing.

My father died the next morning without a great deal of suffering. His mind seemed to grow confused before he died, and he would say things like ‘Here comes a warship! Look at all the flags it has flying! Three cheers, everybody!’ I don’t remember his funeral at all. What I do remember is that when we transported his body from the hospital to his home, a great big spring moon was shining down on the hearse.

to carry pocket warmers, my wife and I visited the cemetery for the first time in a long while – a very long while. Still, however, there was no change at all in either the small grave itself (of course) nor in the red pine stretching its branches above it.

The bones of all three people I have included in this ‘Death Register’ lie buried in the same corner of the cemetery in Yanaka – indeed, beneath the same gravestone. I recalled the time my mother’s coffin was gently lowered into the grave. They must have done the same with Little Hatsu. In my father’s case, though, I remember the gold teeth mixed in with the tiny white shards of bone at the crematorium.

I don’t much like visiting the cemetery, and I would prefer to forget about my parents and sister if I could. On that particular day, though, perhaps because I was physically debilitated, I found myself staring at the blackened gravestone in the early spring afternoon sunlight and wondering which of the three had been the most fortunate.

A shimmering of heat –
Outside the grave
Alone I dwell.

Never before had I sensed these feelings of Jōsō’s pressing in upon me with the force they truly had for me that day.

[1] boke : The name of the tree, known as a Japanese quince (Pyrus japonica) in English, is a homonym for ‘dimwit’. Before the aunt can joke with her that both she and the tree are ‘boke’, Hatsu cleverly makes up her own remarkably similar word play using ‘baka’ (dummy).

The Life of a Stupid Man

To my friend, Kume Masao:

I leave it to you to decide when and where to publish this manuscript – or whether to publish it at all.

You know most of the people who appear here, but if you do publish this, I don't want you adding an index identifying them.

I am living now in the unhappiest happiness imaginable. Yet, strangely, I have no regrets. I just feel sorry for anyone unfortunate enough to have had a bad husband, a bad son, a bad father like me. So goodbye, then. I have not tried –consciously , at least – to vindicate myself here.

Finally, I entrust this manuscript to you because I believe you probably know me better than anyone else. I may wear the skin of an urbane sophisticate, but in this manuscript I invite you to strip it off and laugh at my stupidity.

Akutagawa Ryūnosuke

20 June 1927

1. The era

He was upstairs in a bookstore. Twenty years old at the time, he had climbed a ladder set against a bookcase and was searching for the newly- arrived Western books: Maupassant, Baudelaire, Strindberg, Ibsen, Shaw, Tolstoy . . .

The sun threatened to set before long, but he went on reading book spines with undiminished intensity. Lined up before him was not so much an array of books as the fin de siècle itself. Nietzsche, Verlaine, the Goncourt brothers, Dostoevsky, Hauptmann, Flaubert . . .

He took stock of their names as he struggled with the impending gloom. The books began to sink into the somber shadows. Finally his stamina gave out and he made ready to climb down. At that very moment, directly overhead, a single bare light bulb came on. Standing on his perch on top of the ladder, he looked down at the clerks and customers moving among the books. They were strangely small – and shabby.

Life is not worth a single line of Baudelaire.

He stood on the ladder, watching them below . . .

2. moTher

All the lunatics had been dressed in the same gray clothing, which seemed to give the large room an even more depressing look. One of them sat at an organ, playing a hymn over and over with great intensity. Another was dancing – or, rather, leaping about – in the very center of the room.

He stood watching this spectacle with a doctor of notably healthy complexion. Ten years earlier, his mother had been in no way different from these lunatics. In no way. And in fact in their smell he caught a whiff of his own mother's smell.

‘Shall we go, then?’

The doctor led him down a corridor to another room. In a corner there were several brains soaking in large jars of alcohol. On one of the brains he noticed something faintly white, almost like a dollop of egg white. As he stood there chatting with the doctor, he thought again of his mother.

‘The man who had this brain here was an engineer for the XX lighting company. He always thought of himself as a big shiny black dynamo.’

To avoid the doctor's eyes, he kept looking out the window. There was nothing out there but a brick wall topped with embedded broken bottles. It did, though, have thin growths of moss in dull white patches.

3. The house

He was living in the upstairs room of a house in the suburbs. The second story tilted oddly because the ground was unstable.

In this room, his aunt would often quarrel with him, though not without occasional interventions from his adoptive parents. Still, he loved this aunt more than anyone. She never married, and by the time he was twenty, she was an old woman close to sixty.

He often wondered, in that suburban second story, if people who loved each other had to cause each other pain. Even as the thought crossed his mind, he was aware of the floor's eerie tilt.

4. ToKyo

A thick layer of cloud hung above the Sumida River. From the window of the little steamer, he watched the Mukōjima bank drawing closer. To his eyes, the blossoming cherry trees there looked as dreary as rags in a row. But almost before he knew it, in those trees – those cherry trees that had lined the bank of Mukōjima since the Edo Period –he was beginning to discover himself.

5. ego

He and an elder colleague sat at a café table puffing on cigarettes. He said very little, but he paid close attention to his companion's every word.

‘I spent half the day riding around in an automobile.’

‘Was there something you needed to do?’

Cheek resting on his hand, the elder colleague replied with complete abandon, ‘No, I just felt like riding around.’

The words released him into a world of which he knew nothing – a world of ‘ego’ close to the gods. He felt a kind of pain but, at the same time, a kind of joy.

The café was extremely small. Beneath a framed picture of the god Pan, however, a rubber tree in a red pot thrust its thick leaves out and down.

6. illness

In a steady ocean breeze, he spread out the large English dictionary and let his fingertip find words for him.

Talaria: A winged sandal.

Tale: A story.

Talipot: A coconut palm native to the East Indies. Trunk from 50 to 100 feet in height, leaves used for umbrellas, fans, hats, etc.

Blooms once in 70 years . . .

His imagination painted a vivid picture of this bloom. He then experienced an unfamiliar scratchy feeling in his throat, and before he knew it he had dropped a glob of phlegm on the dictionary. Phlegm? But it was not phlegm. He thought of the shortness of life and once again imagined the coconut blossom – the blossom of the coconut palm soaring on high far across the ocean.

7. PicTure

It happened for him suddenly – quite suddenly. He was standing outside a bookstore, looking at a Van Gogh volume, when he suddenly understood what a ‘picture’ was. True, the Van Gogh was just a book of reproductions, but even in the photographs of those paintings, he sensed the vivid presence of nature.

This passion for pictures gave him a whole new way of looking at the world. He began to pay constant attention to the curve of a branch or the swell of a woman’s cheek.

One rainy autumn evening, he was walking beneath an iron railroad bridge in the suburbs. Below the bank on the far side of the bridge stood a horse cart. As he passed it, he sensed that someone had come this way before. Someone? There was no need for him to wonder who that ‘someone’ might have been. In his twenty- three- year- old heart, a Dutchman with a cut ear and a long pipe in his mouth was fixing his gaze on this dreary landscape.

8. sParKs: floWers of fire

Soaked by the rain, he trod along the asphalt. It was a heavy downpour. In the enveloping spray, he caught the smell of his rubberized coat.

Just then he saw the overhead trolley line giving off purple sparks and was strangely moved. His jacket pocket concealed the manuscript of the piece he was planning to publish in their little magazine. Walking through the rain, he looked back and up once again at the trolley line.

The cable was still sending sharp sparks into the air. He could think of nothing in life that he especially desired, but those purple sparks – those wildly- blooming flowers of fire – he would trade his life for the chance to hold them in his hands.

9. cadavers

A tag on a wire dangled from the big toe of each cadaver. The tags were inscribed with names, ages, and such. His friend bent over one corpse, peeling back the skin of its face with a deftly wielded scalpel. An expanse of beautiful yellow fat lay beneath the skin.

He studied the cadaver. He needed to do this to finish writing a story – a piece set against a Heian Period background – but he hated the stink of the corpses, which was like the smell of rotting apricots. Meanwhile, with wrinkled brow, his friend went on working his scalpel.

‘You know, we’re running out of cadavers these days,’ his friend said.

His reply was ready: ‘If I needed a corpse, I’d kill someone without the slightest malice.’ Of course the reply stayed where it was – inside his heart.

10. The masTer

He was reading the Master’s book beneath a great oak tree. Not a leaf stirred on the oak in the autumn sunlight. Far off in the sky, a scale with glass pans hung in perfect balance. He imagined such a vision as he read the Master’s book . . .

11. daWn

Night gradually gave way to dawn. He found himself on a street corner surveying a vast market. The swarming people and vehicles in the market were increasingly bathed in rose light.

He lit a cigarette and ambled into the market. Just then a lean black dog started barking at him, but he was not afraid. Indeed, he even loved this dog.

In the very center of the marketplace, a sycamore spread its branches in all directions. He stood at the foot of the tree and looked up through the branches at the sky. A single star shone directly above him.

It was his twenty- fifth year – the third month after he first met the Master.

12. naval Port

Gloom filled the interior of the miniature submarine. Crouching down amid all the machinery, he peered into a small scope. What he saw there was a view of the bright naval port.

‘You should be able to see the Kongō , too,’ the naval officer explained to him.

As he was looking at the small warship through the square eyepiece, the thought of parsley popped into his mind for no reason – faintly aromatic parsley on top of a thirty- yen serving of beefsteak.

13. The masTer’s deaTh

In the wind after the rain, he walked down the platform of the new station. The sky was still dark. Across from the platform three or four railway laborers were swinging picks and singing loudly. The wind tore at the men’s song and at his own emotions.

He left his cigarette unlit and felt a pain close to joy. ‘Master near death,’ read the telegram he had thrust into his coat pocket.

Just then the 6 a.m. Tokyo- bound train began to snake its way toward the station, rounding a pine- covered hill in the distance and trailing a wisp of smoke.

14. marriage

The day after he married her, he delivered a scolding to his wife: ‘No sooner do you arrive here than you start wasting our money.’ But the scolding was less from him than from his aunt, who had ordered him to deliver it. His wife apologized to him, of course, and to the aunt as well – with the potted jonquils she had bought for him in the room.

15. he and she

They led a peaceful life, surrounded by the garden’s broad green bashō leaves.

It helped that their house was located in a town by the shore a full hour's train ride from Tokyo.

16. Pillow

Pillowing his head on his rose- scented skepticism, he read a book by Anatole France. That even such a pillow might hold a god half- horse, he remained unaware.

17. butterfly

A butterfly fluttered its wings in a wind thick with the smell of seaweed. His dry lips felt the touch of the butterfly for the briefest instant, yet the wisp of wing dust still shone on his lips years later.

18. moon

He happened to pass her on the stairway of a certain hotel. Her face seemed to be bathed in moonglow even now, in daylight. As he watched her walk on (they had never met), he felt a loneliness he had not known before.

19. man- made Wings

He moved on from Anatole France to the eighteenth- century philosophers, though not to Rousseau. Perhaps this was because one side of him – the side easily moved by passion – was too close to Rousseau. Instead, he approached the author of Candide , who was closer to another side of him – the cool and richly intellectual side.

At twenty- nine, life no longer held any brightness for him, but Voltaire supplied him with man- made wings.

Spreading these man- made wings, he soared with ease into the sky. The higher he flew, the farther below him sank the joys and sorrows of a life bathed in the light of intellect. Dropping ironies and smiles upon the shabby towns below, he climbed through the open sky, straight for the sun – as if he had forgotten about that ancient Greek who plunged to his death in the ocean when his man-made wings were singed by the sun.

20. shackles

He and his wife came to live with his adoptive parents when he went to work for a newspaper. He saw his contract, written on a single sheet of yellow paper, as a great source of strength. Later, however, he came to realize that the contract saddled him with all the obligations and the company with none.

21. crazy girl

Two rickshaws sped down a deserted country road beneath overcast skies. From the sea breeze it was clear that the road was headed toward the ocean. Puzzled that he felt not the slightest excitement about this rendezvous, he sat in the second rickshaw thinking about what had drawn him here. It was certainly not love. And if it was not love, then . . . but to avoid the conclusion, he had to tell himself, At least we are in this as equals .

The person riding in the front rickshaw was a crazy girl. And she was not alone in her madness: her younger sister had killed herself out of jealousy.

There's nothing I can do about this anymore.

He now felt a kind of loathing for this crazy girl – this woman who was all powerful animal instinct.

The two rickshaws soon passed a cemetery where the smell of the shore was strong. Several blackened, pagoda-shaped gravestones stood within the fence, which was woven of brushwood and decorated with oyster shells. He caught a glimpse of the ocean gleaming beyond the gravestones and suddenly – inexplicably – he felt contempt for the woman's husband for having failed to capture her heart.

22. a Painter

It was just a magazine illustration, but the ink drawing of a rooster showed a remarkable individuality. He asked a friend to tell him about the painter.

A week later, the painter himself came to pay him a visit. This was one of the most remarkable events in his entire life. He discovered in this painter a poetry of which no one else was aware. In addition, he discovered in himself a soul of which he himself had been unaware.

One chilly autumn evening, he was reminded of the painter by a stalk of corn: the way it stood there armed in its rough coat of leaves, exposing its delicate roots atop the mounded earth like so many nerves, it was also a portrait of his own most vulnerable self. The discovery only served to increase his melancholy.

It's too late now. But when the time comes . . .

23. The Woman

From where he stood, the plaza was beginning to darken. He walked into the open space feeling slightly feverish. The electric lights in the windows of several large office buildings flashed against the clear, faintly silvery sky.

He halted at the curb and decided to wait for the woman there. Five minutes later she came walking toward him looking somewhat haggard. 'I'm exhausted,' she said with a smile when she caught sight of him. They walked through the fading light of the plaza side-by-side. This was their first time together. He felt ready to abandon anything and everything to be with her.

In the automobile she stared at him and asked, 'You're not going to regret this?'

'Not at all,' he answered with conviction.

She pressed her hand on his and said, 'I know I won't have any regrets.'

Again, as she said this, her face seemed to be bathed in moonlight.

24. The birTh

He stood by the sliding screen, looking down at the midwife in her white surgical gown washing the baby. Whenever soap got in its eyes, the baby would wrinkle up its sad little face and let out a loud wail. It looked like a baby rat, and its odor stirred him to these irrepressible thoughts –

Why did this one have to be born – to come into the world like all the others, this world so full of suffering? Why did this one have to bear the destiny of having a father like me?

This was the first son his wife bore him.

25. sTrindberg

He stood in the doorway, watching some grimy Chinese men playing Mahjongg in the moonlight where figs bloomed. Back in his room, he started reading The Confessions of a Fool beneath a squat lamp. He had barely read two pages when he caught himself with a sour smile. So – the lies that Strindberg wrote to his lover, the Countess, were hardly different from his own.

26. anTiQuiTy

He was nearly overwhelmed by peeling Buddhas, heavenly beings, horses and lotus blossoms. Looking up at them, he forgot everything – even his good fortune at having escaped the clutches of the crazy girl.

27. sParTan disciPline

He was walking down a back street with a friend when a hooded rickshaw came charging in their direction. He was surprised to recognize the passenger as the woman he had been with the night before. Her face seemed to be bathed in moonglow even now, in the daylight. With his friend present, they could not exchange even ordinary greetings.

‘Pretty woman,’ his friend said.

Eyes on the spring hills at the end of the street, he answered without the slightest hesitation:

‘Yes, very.’

28. murder

The country road stank of cow manure in the sun. Mopping his sweat, he struggled up the steep hill. The ripened wheat on either side of the road gave off a pleasant scent.

‘Kill him, kill him . . .’

Before he knew it, he was muttering this aloud to himself over and over. Kill whom? It was obvious to him. He recalled the cringing fellow with close-cropped hair.

Just then, the domed roof of a Catholic church appeared beyond the yellow wheat.

29. form

It was a cast- iron saké bottle. With its finely incised lines, it had managed at some point to teach him the beauty of form'.

30. rain

In the big bed he talked with her about many things. Beyond the bedroom window it was raining. The blossoms of the crinum tree had begun to rot in the rain, it seemed. Her face, as always, looked as if it were in moonlight, yet talking with her was not entirely free of boredom. He lay on his stomach, had himself a quiet smoke, and realized he had now been with her for seven years.

Do I still love this woman? he asked himself. He was in the habit of observing himself so closely that the answer came as a surprise to him: I do .

31. The greaT earThQuaKe

The odor was something close to overripe apricots. Catching a hint of it as he walked through the charred ruins, he found himself thinking such thoughts as these: The smell of corpses rotting in the sun is not as bad as I would have expected . When he stood before a pond where bodies were piled upon bodies, however, he discovered that the old Chinese expression, 'burning the nose', was no mere sensory exaggeration of grief and horror. What especially moved him was the corpse of a child of twelve or thirteen. He felt something like envy as he looked at it, recalling such expressions as 'Those whom the gods love die young.' Both his sister and his half- brother had lost their houses to fire. His sister's husband, though, was on a suspended sentence for perjury.

Too bad we didn't all die.

Standing in the charred ruins, he could hardly keep from feeling this way.

32. fight

He had a quarrel with his half- brother that ended in a physical brawl. True, he was a constant source of pressure for this younger brother, who in turn cost him a good deal of freedom. Relatives were always telling the young man, 'be like your brother', but for him, this was like being bound hand and foot. Locked in each other's grip, they fell near the edge of the veranda. He still remembers the one crape myrtle bush in the garden by the veranda – its load of brilliant red blossoms beneath a sky about to drop its rainy burden.

33. hero

From the window of Voltaire's house, he found himself looking up toward a high mountain. There was nothing to be seen on the glacier- topped mountain, not even a vulture. There was, however, a short Russian man doggedly climbing the trail.

After night fell, beneath the bright lamp in Voltaire's house, he wrote this didactic poem (still picturing that Russian man climbing the mountain).

You who more than anyone obeyed the Ten Commandments
Are you who more than anyone broke the Ten Commandments.
You who more than anyone loved the masses
Are you who more than anyone despised the masses.

You who more than anyone burned with ideals Are you who more than anyone knew reality.

You are what our Eastern world has bred –An electric locomotive that smells of flowering grasses.

34. color

At thirty he found himself loving a piece of vacant land. It contained only some moss and scattered bits of brick and tile. To his eyes, however, it was exactly like a Cezanne landscape.

He suddenly recalled his passions of seven or eight years earlier. And when he did so, he realized that seven or eight years earlier he had known nothing about color.

35. comic PuPPeT

He wanted to live life so intensely that he could die at any moment without regrets. But still, out of deference to his adoptive parents and his aunt, he kept himself in check. This created both light and dark sides to his life. Seeing a comic puppet in a Western tailor's shop made him wonder how close he himself was to such a figure. His self beyond consciousness, however – his 'second self' – had long since put such feelings into a story.

36. Tedium

He was walking through a field of plume grass with a university student. 'You fellows still have a strong will to live, I suppose?'

'Yes, of course, but you, too . . .'

'Not any more,' he said. He was telling the truth. At some point he had lost interest in life. 'I do have the will to create, though.'

'But surely the will to create is a form of the will to live . . . ?'

To this he did not reply. Above the field's red plumes rose the sharp outline of an active volcano. He viewed the peak with something close to envy, though he had no idea why this was so . . .

37. 'Woman of hoKuriKu'

He met a woman he could grapple with intellectually. He barely extricated himself from the crisis by writing a number of lyric poems, some under the title 'Woman of Hokuriku'. These conveyed a sense of heartbreak as when one knocks away a brilliant coating of snow frozen onto a tree trunk.

Hat of sedge dancing in the wind:
How could it fail to drop into the road?
What need I fear for my name?
For your name alone do I fear.

38. Punishment

They were on the balcony of a hotel surrounded by trees in bud. He was drawing pictures to amuse a little boy –the only son of the crazy girl, with whom he had broken off relations seven years earlier.

The crazy girl lit a cigarette and watched them play. With an oppressive feeling, he went on drawing trains and airplanes. Fortunately, the boy was not his, but it still pained him greatly when the child called him 'uncle'.

After the boy wandered off, the crazy girl, still smoking her cigarette, said suggestively:

‘Don’t you think he looks like you?’

‘Not at all. Besides –’

‘But you do know about “prenatal influence”, I’m sure.’

He looked away from her in silence, but in his heart he wanted to strangle her.

39. mirrors

He was in the corner of a café, chatting with a friend. The friend was eating a baked apple and talking about the recent cold weather when he himself began to sense a certain contradiction in the conversation.

‘Hey, wait a minute – you’re still a bachelor, right?’

‘Not exactly: I’m getting married next month.’

That silenced him. The mirrors set in the café walls reflected him in endless numbers. Coldly. Menacingly.

40. dialogue

Why do you attack the present social system?

Because I see the evils that capitalism has engendered.

Evils? I thought you recognized no difference between good and evil. How do you make a living, then?

He engaged thus in dialogue with an angel – an angel in an impeccable top hat.

41. illness

He suffered an onslaught of insomnia. His physical strength began to fade as well. The doctors gave him various diagnoses – gastric hyperacidity, gastric atony, dry pleurisy, neurasthenia, chronic conjunctivitis, brain fatigue . . .

But he knew well enough what was wrong with him: he was ashamed of himself and afraid of them – afraid of the society he so despised.

One afternoon when snow clouds hung over the city, he was in the corner of a café, smoking a cigar and listening to music from the gramophone on the other side of the room. He found the music permeating his emotions in a strange new way. When it ended, he walked over to the gramophone to read the label on the record.

‘Magic Flute – Mozart.’

All at once it became clear to him: Mozart too had broken the Ten Commandments and suffered. Probably not the way he had, but . . .

He bowed his head and returned to his table in silence.

42. The laughTer of The gods

At thirty- five, he was walking through a pinewood with the spring sun beating down on it. He was recalling, too, the words he had written a few years earlier: ‘It is unfortunate for the gods that, unlike us, they cannot commit suicide.’

43. nighT

Night closed in again. The rough sea sent up spray in the fading light. Beneath these skies, he married his wife anew. This brought them joy, but there was suffering as well. With them, their three sons watched the lightning over the open sea. His wife, holding one of the boys in her arms, seemed to be fighting back tears.

‘See the boat over there?’ he asked her.

‘Yes . . .’

‘That boat with the mast cracked in two . . .’

44. deaTh

Taking advantage of his sleeping alone, he tried to hang himself with a sash tied over the window lattice. When he slipped his head into the sash, however, he suddenly became afraid of death. Not that he feared the suffering he would have to experience at the moment of dying. He decided to try it again, using his pocket watch to see how long it would take. This time, everything began to cloud over after a short interval of pain. He was sure that once he got past that, he would enter death. Checking the hands of his watch, he discovered that the pain lasted one minute and twenty-some seconds. It was pitch dark outside the lattices, but the wild clucking of chickens echoed in the darkness.

45. divan

Divan was giving him new inner power. This was an 'Oriental Goethe' he had not known before. He saw the author standing with quiet confidence on the Other Shore, far beyond good and evil, and he felt an envy close to despair. In his eyes, the poet Goethe was even greater than the poet Christ. For in the heart of the poet Goethe, there bloomed not only the roses of the Acropolis and Golgotha but the rose of Arabia as well. If only he had the least ability to follow in this poet's footsteps!

Once he had finished reading Divan and recovered somewhat from its terrifying emotional impact, he could only despise himself for having been born such a eunuch in life!

46. lies

He felt the suicide of his sister's husband as a terrible blow. Now he was responsible for his sister's family as well. To him at least, his future looked as gloomy as the end of the day. He felt something like a sneer for his own spiritual bankruptcy (he was aware of all of his faults and weak points, every single one of them), but he went on reading one book after another. Even Rousseau's Confessions, though, was full of the most heroic lies. And when it came to Tōson's New Life, he felt he had never met such a cunning hypocrite as that novel's protagonist. The one who truly moved him, though, was François Villon. He found in that poet's many works the 'beautiful male'.

Sometimes in his dreams the image would come to him of Villon waiting to be hanged. Like Villon, he had several times nearly fallen to the ultimate depths of life, but neither his situation nor his physical energy would permit him to keep this up. He grew gradually weaker, like the tree Swift saw so long ago, withering from the top down.

47. Playing With fire

She had a radiant face, like the morning sun on a thin sheet of ice. He was fond of her, but he did not love her, nor had he ever laid a finger on her.

‘I’ve heard you want to die,’ she said.

‘Yes – or rather, it’s not so much that I want to die as that I’m tired of living.’

This dialogue led to a vow to die together.

‘It would be a Platonic suicide, I suppose,’ she said.

‘A Platonic double suicide.’

He was amazed at his own sangfroid.

48. deaTh

He did not die with her, but he took a certain satisfaction in his never having touched her. She often spoke with him as though their dialogue had never happened. She did once give him a bottle of cyanide with the remark, ‘As long as we have this, it will give us both strength.’

And it did indeed give him strength. Sitting in a rattan chair, observing the new growth of a shii tree, he often thought of the peace that death would give him.

49. sTuffed sWan

With the last of his strength, he tried to write his autobiography, but it did not come together as easily as he had hoped. This was because of his remaining pride and skepticism, and a calculation of what was in his own best interest. He couldn’t help despising these qualities in himself; but neither could he help feeling that ‘Everyone is the same under the skin.’ He tended to think that Goethe’s title ‘Poetry and Truth’ could serve for anyone’s autobiography, but he knew that not everyone is moved by literature. His own works were unlikely to appeal to people who were not like him and had not lived a life like his – this was another feeling that worked upon him. And so he decided to write his own brief ‘Poetry and Truth’.

Once he had finished writing ‘The Life of a Stupid Man’, he happened to see a stuffed swan in a secondhand shop. It stood with its head held high, but its wings were yellowed and moth-eaten. As he thought about his life, he felt both tears and mockery welling up inside him. All that lay before him was madness or suicide. He walked down the darkening street alone, determined now to wait for the destiny that would come to annihilate him.

50. caPTive

One of his friends went mad. He had always felt close to this man because he understood far more deeply than anyone else the loneliness that lurked beneath his jaunty mask. He visited him a few times after the madness struck.

‘You and I are both possessed by a demon,’ the friend whispered, ‘the demon of the fin de siècle.’

Two or three days later, he heard, the man ate roses on the way to a hot- spring resort. When the friend was hospitalized, he recalled once sending him a terra cotta piece. It was a bust of the author of The Inspector General, one of the friend’s favorite writers. Thinking how Gogol, too, had gone mad, he could not help feeling that there was a force governing all of them.

Just as he reached the point of utter exhaustion, he happened to read Raymond Radiguet’s dying words, ‘God’s soldiers are coming to get me,’ and sensed once again the laughter of the gods. He tried to fight against his own superstitions and sentimentalism, but he was physically incapable of putting up any kind of struggle. The ‘demon of the fin de siècle’ was preying on him without a doubt. He envied medieval men’s ability to find strength in God. But for him, believing in God – in God’s love – was an impossibility, though even Cocteau had done it!

51. defeaT

The hand with the pen began to tremble, and before long he was even drooling. The only time his head ever cleared was after a sleep induced by eight- tenths of a gram of Veronal, and even then it never lasted more than thirty minutes or an hour. He barely made it through each day in the gloom, leaning as it were upon a chipped and narrow sword.

萎缩的胳膊

一 遭遗弃的挤奶姑娘

这是一个有八十头奶牛的牛奶场，一群挤奶工，正式的和临时的，都在干活儿；季节虽然还不过是四月初的春天，可放牧全在那些水浇地牧场上，所以那些奶牛个个都是“满桶奶的”。时间大约到了傍晚六点钟，那些大个头、红颜色、长方块的畜生，有四分之三已经挤完了奶，这样大家就有机会聊聊天了。

“我听说，他明天真要把新娘子带回家来啦。他们今天已经从安格伯瑞动身了。”

声音仿佛发自那头叫作樱桃的母牛的肚子，不过说话的人可是一个挤奶妇，她的脸埋在那头一动不动的母牛肋条上。

“有谁瞧见过她吗？”另一个人问。

先说话的那个人说，没有。“可他们说，她真够得上是玫瑰脸蛋儿，樱草花球小身段儿。”她又这样加了一句。这个挤奶妇一边说，一边转过脸去，这样，她就可以隔着她那头母牛的尾巴对场院的那一边膘上一眼。那里有一个姿容憔悴的瘦削女人，大约三十岁模样，和别人多少分开了一点，正在挤奶。

“他们说，比他小好些岁呢。”第二个人接着说，也对那个方向投去若有所思的一瞥。

“那么，你说他多大岁数了？”

“三十上下吧。”

“更像四十岁。”旁边一个年岁大的挤奶男工插了一句，他罩了一件大白围裙或者说“工作罩衣”，帽檐向下耷拉着，看起来像是一个女人。“他出世的时候，水坝还没筑，我在那里提水的时候，还没拿大人的工资呢。”

议论越来越热闹，牛奶往下流的声音变得断断续续的了，这时从另一头母牛肚子那儿传来颇有权威的声音：“嗨，嗨，农场主洛吉的年纪，或者洛吉的新太太，究竟和咱们有啥关系？不管他或者她是多大岁数，反正我租他的这些奶牛，每头牛每年都得交他九镑。接着干你们的活儿吧，要不，咱们干不完天就黑了。晚霞已经把天都照红啦。”说这话的人是牛奶场的老板，这些挤奶的女工和男工都是他雇

的。

谁也没有再公然大声议论农场主洛吉的婚事了，不过第一个说话的女工仍在她那头牛下面对她的近邻嘀咕：“她可不好受啦。”她指的是刚才提到的那个瘦削憔悴的挤奶女工。

“啊，不会的，”第二个说，“他已经有几年没跟若达·布茹克说话了。”

挤完了奶，他们刷净了自己的奶桶，把它们挂在奶桶架上。它像通常的奶桶架一样，是用一根剥了皮的橡树枝做的，上面装着许多钩子，直直地竖在地上，像一盘巨大的鹿角。大多数人都朝着四面八方回家去了。那个一言未发的瘦女人，和一个大约十二岁的男孩走到一起，他们俩也顺着那块场地走上去了。

他们走的路和别人不同，通向水浇牧场上面一块高出来的孤零零的地方，离爱敦荒原的边缘不远，当他们走到家门附近的时候，可以远远看见荒原那黑乎乎的影子。

“他们刚才在场院里说，你爸爸明天要把他那个年轻的媳妇从安格伯瑞带回来了，”那个女人说，“我想打发你到市场上去干点事，你准保可以碰见他们。”

“好吧，妈妈，”男孩说，“那么爸爸结婚了吗？”

“是……你可以看她一眼。要是你真看到了她，就告诉我她什么样。”

“好吧，妈妈。”

“她是长得黑还是白，个儿高不高——是不是跟我一样高。还有，她看起来是不是像一个靠干活儿吃饭的女人，或者是一个富裕惯了的人，从来没有干过什么活儿，显出一副太太的样子，就像我想的那样。”

“好。”

他们在苍茫暮色中爬上那座小山，走进自己的农舍。农舍四面是土墙，多次雨水冲刷，已经把墙面冲出一道道的沟纹和凹洼，原来那种平整的墙面，一点也看不见了，而上面铺草的房顶，时而露出一根椽子，像是一根骨头戳破了皮肤露在外面。

她跪在炉灶旁边，两块泥煤架在前面，煤块中间放着石楠的干枝，她用力吹那堆红热的余烬，一直吹到泥煤燃起了火苗。火光照亮了她苍白的脸颊，使她那对曾经看起来很漂亮的眼睛，好像又漂亮起来了。“是的，”她接着又说起来，“看她长得是黑还是白，还有，要是能够看得到，留神一下她那双手白不白，要是不白，就看看它们是不

是做过家务活儿，或者是像我这双挤奶的手。”

男孩照样答应了，这次有点心不在焉，他母亲没有注意到，他正在用一把小刀，在山毛榉木靠背椅上刻一道凹痕。

二 年轻媳妇

从安格伯瑞到霍姆斯托克的大道，基本都是平路，只有一个地方有个很陡的上坡道，使它显得不那么单调。赶集回家的农夫，都是一路让马小跑着，到了这段短短的陡坡，才赶着马缓慢爬坡。

第二天黄昏，太阳还挺亮，一辆崭新漂亮的轻便双轮马车，由一匹健壮的牝马拉着，沿着那条平川大道向西飞跑。这辆车车身是柠檬色的，车轮是红色的。赶车人是个年富力强的自耕农，胡子刮得干干净净，像个演戏的，脸色红里透青。一个兴旺发达的农夫，在镇上做了几笔顺手的买卖回家，常常就是这样满面生辉。他身旁坐着一个女人，比他年轻得多，简直可以说还是一个女孩儿。她的脸色也很光鲜，但那完全是另外一种性质——柔媚缥缈，像是从一堆玫瑰花瓣透过来的光辉。

没有什么人这样赶路，因为这不是一条主要的大道。在这条沙砾铺成的白色长带上，他们前面空空荡荡，只有一个几乎并不活动的小黑点，它渐渐地变成了一个男孩的模样，好似一只蜗牛正在慢慢向上爬，而且不断地回过头来朝后面张望。他背的那个沉重的包，如果说不是他步履缓慢的理由，也可以说是某种借口。那辆欢腾跳跃的轻便马车，来到前面提到的那个陡坡下面，放慢了速度，这时那个步行的男孩在前面不过几码 [1] 的地方。他一只手放在屁股上托着那个大包，和马并排走着，同时回过头来，死死盯住农场主的媳妇，好像要把她仔仔细细琢磨个透似的。

夕阳迎面照在她的脸上，把她五官的每一个部分，从她那小巧鼻孔的曲线直到她那双眼睛的颜色都照得一清二楚。那个农场主，对男孩这样死乞白赖地盯着看，似乎感到恼火，可是并没有赶他走，吩咐他让路，因此这个小小子一直走在他们前面。他的眼睛一直死盯着她，等到他们到达坡顶，农场主脸上露出放下心来的神情，撒开马小跑起来——从外表上看，不再注意那个男孩究竟怎样了。

“看那可怜的男孩盯着我看的那副神情！”年轻媳妇说。

“是呀，亲爱的，我看见他是在盯着你瞧。”

“他是村里的人吧，我猜？”

“是附近的一个人。我想他是和他妈住在一两英里 [2] 远的地方。”

“毫无疑问，他知道我们是谁吧？”

“啊，是的，你一定得预料到，刚开始人家会盯着你瞧，我漂亮的格楚德。”

“我料到了——不过我以为，这个可怜的男孩盯着我们瞧，可能是想让我们帮他带一下他背的那个沉重的大包，而不是出于好奇。”

“啊，不对，”她丈夫脱口而出，“这些乡下小子，只要东西一上肩，就可以背上一英担 [3]，再说，他那个包看起来很大，实际上并不那么重。好啦，再走上一英里，我就可以远远地指给你看我们住的那所房子——要是我们赶到那儿天还不太黑的话。”车轮滚滚向前，又像以前那样把砂土碾得向四周乱迸，终于出现了一所占地阔大的白房子，房后还有一些专为干农活儿用的房子和干草堆。

这时候，那个男孩加快了脚步，在离这所白色农庄还有差不多一英里半的地方，拐到一条小路上，向着那些比较贫瘠的草场爬上去，一直走到他母亲的那所村舍。

她干完了她当天在外面奶场上挤奶的活儿，已经回到家里，正借着渐渐昏暗的光线，在门洞里洗菜。“把这个网兜拿一会儿。”男孩刚一走进来，她没有先打招呼就这样说。

他赶忙扔下他那个大包袱，抓住盛菜网兜的边，她一边往兜里放正在滴水的卷心菜，一边继续说话：“怎么样，你看见她了吗？”

“嗯，挺清楚的。”

“她像个太太吗？”

“嘿，不单像，还是个不折不扣的太太呢。”

“她年轻吗？”

“嗯，她已经是大人啦。她那神气，十足是个女人。”

“当然。她的头发和脸蛋儿是什么颜色？”

“她头发是浅色的，脸蛋儿就像一个活的玩具娃娃。”

“她的眼睛，那么，不是像我的眼睛这样深颜色的吧？”

“不，是浅蓝色的，她的嘴长得挺俏挺红，笑起来露出一口白牙。”

“她个儿高吗？”她酸溜溜地问道。

“我看不见。她坐着呢。”

“那么，明天早晨你到霍姆斯托克教堂去，她准会去那儿。早点

去，看着她走进来，回家来告诉我，她是不是比我高。”

“那好吧，妈妈。可是你干吗不自己去看看呢？”

“我去看她！她就是这会儿从我窗户前面走过去，我也不会抬头去看她。当然，她是和洛吉先生在一起。他说了些什么？做了些什么？”

“和平常一样。”

“没有注意你？”

“没有。”

第二天，母亲给孩子穿了一件干净的衬衫，打发他到霍姆斯托克教堂去。他到达这座小小的古老建筑的时候正赶上开门，他就第一个走了进去。他在洗礼盘旁边找了个座位，看着教区所有的教民鱼贯而入。阔气的农场主洛吉几乎是最后一个走进来的，伴随他的那个年轻的媳妇，走进教堂走廊，脸上带着羞涩的神情，这对于一个第一次在众人面前露面的端庄淑静的女人来说，也是自然而然的事。大家的目光都盯着她，所以这个年轻人的注视，现在也就没有引起人们的注意了。

他到达家门口的时候，还没等走进屋子，他母亲就问：“怎么样？”

“她个儿并不高，还有点矮呢！”他回答说。

“啊！”他母亲满意地叫了一声。

“可是她很漂亮——很漂亮。说实话，她挺可爱。”自耕农的媳妇那种年轻鲜艳的神情，甚至给这个秉性多少有点严峻的男孩，显然留下了深刻的印象。

“这就是所有我想要听到的。”他母亲很快地说，“好啦，把桌布铺上。你用铁丝网套住的兔子很嫩，可是要小心，别让谁抓住你——你一直还没告诉我，她的手是什么样的。”

“我根本没见到。她一直没有脱下手套。”

“她今天早晨穿戴的什么？”

“一顶白帽子和一身银灰色的袍子。袍子蹭到教堂条凳上刺啦刺啦地响，声音那么大，那位太太自己听到这声音感到不好意思，脸红得比原先更厉害了，她把衣服拉起来，好让它别再蹭，可是她猛一下坐到位子上，那刺啦声更大了。洛吉先生，他好像很得意，他的背心露着，他几颗金晃晃的大印吊着，就像一个大老爷似的，可是他太太好像是希望她那件闹人的袍子放在哪里都成，就是别穿在她身

上。”

“是吗？不管怎么说，现在这就够啦！”

以后，这个男孩每次偶然碰见这对新婚夫妇，他母亲都要他陆续把他们的情况再讲一遍。若达·布茹克固然只要走上一两英里就可以很容易地亲自见到年轻的洛吉太太，但是她从没打算走这一点路，到农庄房舍所在的地方去。牛奶场的场院就在洛吉这远处的第二个农场里，她每天在场院挤奶的时候，也从来不提最近办的这桩婚事。牛奶场老板租了洛吉的奶牛，对这个高挑挤奶姑娘的身世也知道得清清楚楚，他怀着男子汉的善意，总是不让奶场场院里的这些流言蜚语引起若达苦恼。但是洛吉太太到达以后最初那些日子，周围的环境老是充满这个话题。而若达·布茹克从她孩子的描述和其他挤奶工人偶尔露出的只言片语，也能够心里描绘出对这个一无所知的洛吉太太的图像，就像照片那样逼真。

三 幻象

新人回家两三个星期后的一天晚上，男孩上床睡了，若达把泥煤灰扒出来放在面前，好让它们熄灭，她在那堆泥煤余火前面坐了很长时间。她就着那些余烬，按照她想象的模样，心里想着那个新媳妇，思考得那样聚精会神，竟忘记时间过去了多久，最后，由于一天工作的疲累，她也去睡觉了。

但是，这一天和前些天来一直萦回在她心中的形象，即使在夜晚也无法赶开。梦中，那个取代她的地位的格楚德·洛吉第一次来看她了。若达·布茹克在睡着以前确信自己真看见她了，而这是不足信的。她梦见这个年轻媳妇穿了一身浅灰色的衣服，戴着一顶白帽子，但是面容却歪歪扭扭，一塌糊涂，好像年纪很大，满脸皱纹。她躺在那儿，这个新媳妇就坐在她的胸脯上。洛吉太太的身体压得越来越重，那双蓝眼睛冷酷无情地死盯着她的脸，然后这个影子又嘲弄地向前伸出左手，好让她戴的那个结婚戒指在若达的眼前熠熠闪耀。睡觉的人精神狂乱，给压得几乎透不过气来，她拼命挣扎。一会儿压在她身上的那个梦魔退到床脚去了，可是仍然死盯着她，随后又逐渐移上前来，重新坐在她胸脯上，又像刚才那样晃着左手。

若达使劲喘着气，最后拼命挣扎，抽出自己的右手，猛地抓住面前这个影子伸出的左臂，迅速把它向后拧着朝地上摔，她自己一下坐起来，同时发出一声低沉的叫喊。

“啊，善心的老天爷呀！”她叫喊着，坐在床边，出了一身冷汗。“这不是做梦——她到这儿来了！”

甚至到这时候，她都能感觉到那只胳膊在她紧握的手掌中挣扎

——好像真是有骨头有肉似的。她看看地上，她曾经把鬼影摔在那儿，但是地上什么也看不见。

若达·布茹克那天夜里再也没睡。第二天清早她去挤牛奶的时候，大家注意到，她的脸色惨白，显得疲乏不堪。她挤出的牛奶颤颤悠悠地流进牛奶桶，她的手到那时还没有平静下来，仍然感觉得到那只胳膊。她回家吃早饭，就好像是到了吃晚饭的时候那样困。

“妈妈，昨天晚上你屋子里有声音，怎么啦？”她儿子问她，“你真是从床上滚下来了吧？”

“你听见什么东西摔下来吗？什么时候？”

“刚好钟敲两点的时候。”

她无法解释，吃过早饭就一声不响地干起家务活儿来，男孩帮她干，因为他讨厌到外面农场地里去，他不愿去，她也就惯着他。十一二点钟的时候，园子的门咔嚓一响，她抬头望着窗户，园子尽头门口站着她幻觉中的那个女人。若达好像一下子呆住了。

“啊，她说过她要来的！”男孩也看到了这个女人，大声喊着。

“这样说过——什么时候？她怎么知道我们？”

“我见过她，和她说过话。我昨天和她说过话。”

“我不是告诉过你了吗？”妈妈满脸通红愤怒地说，“不要和那所房子里的什么人说话，也不要走到那所房子跟前去。”

“我没和她说话，是她先和我说的。我也没有走到那所房子跟前，我在大路上碰到她的。”

“你告诉她什么啦？”

“什么也没有。她说：‘你就是那天从市场上背回那么重一包东西的那个可怜的孩子吗？’她看了看我的靴子，并且说，要是走在湿地上，这靴子没法儿让我的脚不湿，因为靴子都那么破了。我告诉她，我和妈妈一起过，我们为养活自己，已经做得够可以了，而且事实就是这样。那时候她就说了‘我给你带双好点的靴子来，并且看看你妈妈’。不光给我们，她还给牧场上别的人散东西呢。”

洛吉太太这时已经接近屋门口了——不是满身丝绸，像若达梦见在卧室里那样，而是戴了一顶晨帽，穿了一件普通薄料子的袍子，而这比丝绸更适合她。她胳膊上挎着一只篮子。

头天夜里所经历的事情，留下的印象仍然很强烈。布茹克差不多还以为可以从来访客人的脸上看到那些皱纹，那种蔑视，那种冷酷。如果能够躲开，她就会躲开，不和她见面。然而，这所房子并没有后

门，洛吉太太轻轻一敲门，孩子就立刻把门门拨开了。

“我说呢，我找这所房子是找对了。”她一边说，一边瞅了一眼这个小子，满脸含笑，“可是不是你开门，我还没有把握呢。”

这种形象和举止同幻梦中的影子一模一样，但是她的声音那么难以言传的甜，她的一顾一盼都那么逗人喜欢，她的笑容那么温柔，完全不像若达夜半梦中那个来访的贵客，若达简直无法相信自己的感觉是否正确了。她本来因为非常讨厌而想一躲了事，这时她却真正感到高兴，她幸好没有躲开。洛吉太太篮子里带来了她原来答应给孩子的一双靴子，还有一些别的有用的东西。

面对这些说明洛吉太太对她和她的亲人亲切友善的感情，若达内心不觉在痛苦地责备自己。这个天真无辜的年轻人儿，应该得到她的祝福，而不是她的诅咒。她离开他们以后，屋子里好像少了一种光辉。两天以后，她又来了，想知道那双靴子是不是合脚；在那以后不到两个星期，她又来看了若达一次。这一次男孩不在家。

“我经常出来走走，”洛吉太太说，“你们的房子是我们自己那个教区以外离我们最近的了。我希望你身体很好。可是你看起来好像不太好。”

若达说她很好，的确，两个人比起来，她脸色比较苍白，可是她身体结实，身材高大，比起站在她面前的这位面容娇柔的年轻女人来，更有力量，更能耐劳。谈起谁强壮谁柔弱，谈话也就越来越亲密了。洛吉太太动身离开的时候，若达说：“我希望这里的空气对你合适，太太，希望水浇牧场的潮气对你没有害处。”

年纪轻的这位回答说，这倒没有多大的问题，她总的健康状况通常都是很好的。“不过，你现在提醒我了，”她又接着说下去，“我有点小毛病，叫我闹不明白。它也并不是什么大不了的事，可是我就是弄不清楚。”

她露出她的左手和左胳膊，若达一看，就是她在梦中看见过并且猛地抓住的那只胳膊的样子。胳膊粉红圆润的表皮上，现出的淡淡的颜色带有病态的痕迹，像是给猛力抓住过而留下的手印。若达的眼睛死盯在这些变了颜色的痕迹上。在想象中，她以为她从中辨认出来了她的四根手指头的形状。

“这是怎么弄的？”她不动声色地问。

“我也说不上来，”洛吉太太一边摇头，一边说，“有一天晚上，我睡得很熟，梦见我去到一个有些陌生的地方，突然我的胳膊猛地一疼，疼得很厉害，把我疼醒了。我想，大概是我白天里撞了一下，可是我也记不得这样撞过。”她笑着又加了一句，“我对我亲爱的丈夫开

玩笑说，看起来好像是他突然大发雷霆，在那儿打了我一下。噢，我敢说，它很快就会没了的。”

“哈，哈！是呀……那是哪一天夜里有的？”

洛吉太太想了想，然后说，那是两个星期以前的一个夜晚。“我醒过来的时候，记不清我到过哪里。”她又加了一句，“一直到钟敲了两点，这才提醒了我。”

她说出了若达与幻影相遇的那天夜晚和具体钟点，布茹克觉得好像成了一个罪人。这样没有一点矫饰虚夸就透露了真情，使她大为惊恐，但她并不把它设想为奇怪的巧合：闹鬼那天夜里的一切景象，都更加生动地重现在她心里了。

“啊，难道说，”客人走了以后，她自言自语道，“我能违反自己的意愿，对别人施加邪恶的力量吗？”她知道，她失身以后，有人一直偷偷地叫她叫作女巫；但是她从来不明白，为什么要把这恶名加在她头上，不去管它也就过去了。难道这就是原因吗？难道像这样的事果真以前也发生过吗？

四 建议

夏天越来越近了，若达·布茹克几乎害怕再见到洛吉太太，尽管她对这个年轻的媳妇差不多可以说很有感情了。若达个人品格上的某些东西似乎要把她自己判为有罪。然而出于命运安排，她有时离开家门不是为了上工，走着走着就走到霍姆斯托克附近去了；因此她们下一次会面也就到了户外。若达想避也避不开那个使她感到神秘的话题，说了不多几句话，她就吞吞吐吐地说：“我想，你的——胳膊已经复原了吧，太太？”其实她早已惊愕地发现，格楚德·洛吉的左胳膊有些直挺挺的。

“不，还没怎么见好。说实在的，根本就没有见好，倒不如说是更坏了。有时候痛得要命。”

“也许你最好还是去找个医生看看，太太。”

她回答说，她已经找过医生了。她丈夫坚持要她去找一个医生。但是那位外科大夫好像根本不懂那只有病的胳膊是怎么回事。他告诉她用热水浸泡，她也泡过了，但是这种治疗一点用处也没有。

“让我看看，好吗？”挤奶妇问道。

洛吉太太把袖子卷上去，露出那个地方，就在手腕上边几英寸[4]。若达·布茹克一看见它，几乎都无法保持镇静了。那并不是像伤口一样的什么东西，但是胳膊上那个地方现出干瘪的样子，那四根手指头的轮廓比前一次显得更清楚了。不仅如此，她还想象出，这些指

印刚好就在她恍惚之间使劲抓住的位置：第一根指头朝着格楚德的手腕，第四根指头朝向她的胳膊肘。

格楚德自己在她们上次会面之后，好像也感到这些印痕和什么相像。“看起来几乎就像手指印。”她说，接着淡淡一笑，“我丈夫说，好像是什么女巫，或者魔鬼抓住过我这个地方，把肌肉掐干瘪了。”

若达打了一个冷战。“那是胡思乱想，”她急忙说，“我要是你，我就不会在乎它。”

“我本来不应该那样在乎它，”年轻的那位迟迟疑疑地说，“要是……要是我没有一种感觉，觉得它使我丈夫……不喜欢我，不，不那样爱我。男人都那样喜欢考虑一个人的外表。”

“有些人是那样的——他就是一个。”

“是的，而且起先，他对我的外表非常得意。”

“把你的胳膊遮着，别让他瞧见。”

“唉——他知道那儿变样了！”她竭力想不让人看见她那满眼泪水。

“好了，太太，我真心诚意希望这事马上就过去。”

就这样，这个挤奶妇回家的时候，又重新让一种可怕的魔力把自己的心同这件事情牢牢地拴在一起了。她装作嘲笑自己迷信，可是做了某种坏事的犯罪感还是增强了。若达在内心深处，并不完全反对她那位后任的花容月貌略微有点减损，不管是出于什么方式；但是也不希望使她遭受肉体上的痛苦，因为，虽然有了这个年轻漂亮的女人，洛吉再也不可能就他自己过去对若达的所作所为给予任何补偿，但是在这个较年长女人的心里，对别人完全出于无心的篡夺行为所怀有的任何愤恨，都早已烟消云散了。

如果这位甜美善良的格楚德·洛吉知道了卧房里的那场梦境，她会怎么想呢？和她保持友谊，而又不把这件事告诉她，好像就是不仁不义；但是她自己又不愿意主动地去告诉她——而且她也想不出什么补救的办法。

那天晚上她大部分时间都在思索这件事情。第二天，挤完了早晨那班牛奶之后，由于有一种可怕的魔力把她拉向洛吉太太那里，她就动身出去，想看看是不是能够再见格楚德·洛吉一面。挤奶姑娘从远处遥望那所房子，终于能够辨认出农场主的妻子独自一人骑马外出——大概是到远处的农场去和她丈夫会合。洛吉太太看见了她，就策马朝她这个方向慢慢跑来。

“早上好，若达！”格楚德跑过来的时候说，“我正要去看你呢。”

若达注意到，洛吉太太握住缰绳都有些困难。

“我希望——那只有毛病的胳膊……”若达说。

“他们告诉我，也许有一种办法，我可以找出它的原因，这样就可以把它治好，”另一位急匆匆地说，“那就是去找爱敦荒原上的一个什么聪明人。他们不知道他是否还活着——这会儿我一下想不起他的名字来了。但是他们说，你比附近不管谁都更了解他的动静，可以告诉我，是不是还可以找他请教。哎呀——他叫什么名字？你是知道的。”

“不是纯德法师吗？”她问着，瘦削的脸变得惨白了。

“纯德——对了。他还活着吗？”

“我相信他还活着。”若达勉强地说。

“你为什么把他称作法师？”

“嗯——他们说……他们一直说，他是个……他有许多别人没有的能力。”

“唉，我们那些人怎么那样迷信，要介绍这种人？我原来以为他们说的是个什么行医的人呢。我不想再找他了。”

若达看来松了一口气，洛吉太太骑马走了。挤奶妇听说别人提出向她打听这个人，那时，她就从内心感到，工友中间一定有某种讥讽的看法，说一个女巫会知道那个魔法师的下落。那么，他们是在怀疑她。不久以前，这种事不会让她这个明理的女人在意。但是，现在她可有一个挥之不去让她迷信的理由了。她突然恐惧起来，害怕这个法师会指名道姓，说她是那个正在摧毁格楚德美貌的恶人，因而使她那位朋友永远恨她，把她看成是化作人形的魔鬼。

但是所有一切都还没有完结。过了两天，午后的太阳透过窗格子照进来，在若达·布茹克家的地上投下了一个黑影。这个女人立刻开了门，几乎都喘不过气来了。

“你一个人在家吗？”格楚德问道。她看来也同若达·布茹克本人一样焦虑急躁。

“是。”若达说。

“我胳膊上那块地方看来好像更糟了，这让我很苦恼！”这个年轻的农场主太太继续说，“它多么奇怪呀！我真希望它不会是一种不治之症。我一直又在考虑他们所说的纯德法师的事。我并不真信那种人，但是我觉得，只是去看看他并不碍事，出于好奇吧——不过绝不应该让我丈夫知道。到他住的地方去远吗？”

“是——有五英里地呢，”若达迟迟疑疑地说，“在爱敦荒原最里边。”

“嗯，我应该步行去。你能和我一起去，帮我带带路吗？——比如说，明天下午？”

“啊，我不行。那是——”挤奶妇低声咕哝着，心中一惊。她突然觉得很恐惧，害怕她在梦中采取那种猛烈行动的事会泄露出来，那样，在她这个平生最有益的朋友眼中，她的人格就完了，而且再也无可挽回了。

洛吉太太一再撺掇，若达虽然非常担心，最后还是同意了。这条道路对她说来固然很伤心，可是她的恩人那种奇怪的病有可能治好，她就不能蓄意挡她的道。最后两人商量好，为了避免别人对她们这种不可思议的意图产生怀疑，她们决定在荒原边沿一块人工林的角落上会合。从她们现在站着的地方就可以看见那个角落。

五 纯德法师

在第二天下午以前，若达本来可以做出一些事情来逃避这次探访，但是她已经答应要去。不仅如此，如果真能有助于找到一种可能的方法，弄清究竟，也许可以发现她在那个神秘莫测的世界里还是一个人物，比她过去对她自己设想过的更加了不起，这本身有时就具有一种可怕的诱惑力。

快到她们约定的那个时间，她出发了，经过半小时轻快的步行，她走到了这一地带爱敦荒原的东南边缘，那里有一片枞树林。一个身材娇小的人，穿着外套，戴着面罩，早已到了那里。若达一看到洛吉太太用吊带把左胳膊吊着，几乎浑身打了一个哆嗦。

她们彼此几乎没有讲什么话，就立即开始爬坡，朝这片森严肃穆的荒野深处走去。这片地方居高临下，俯视她们半小时之前刚刚离开的那片冲积而成的富饶土地。这是一次长途跋涉。乌云使整个环境显得阴暗，虽然这时还不过刚到下午。风在荒原的斜坡上凄厉地嚎叫，这个荒原未必就不是那个目睹过威塞克斯国王伊那的痛苦的荒原，而后世则把伊那描述为李尔 [5]。格楚德·洛吉说话多，若达只是用简单几个现成的字眼儿回答。她有一种奇怪的厌恶心理，不愿走在这个同伴吊着那条有毛病的胳膊的那一边，一不小心靠近那条胳膊了，她就转身走到另一边去。下坡走向一条车道的时候，她们的脚扫着了许多石楠。她们要寻找的那个人的房子就在路旁。

他并不承认他开业治病，或者关心与此相关的任何事情。他直接关心的是经营常青棘、泥煤、“粗砂”等土特产品。的确，他假装并不相信自己的能力，人们请他治疗瘰子，这些瘰子奇迹般地消失了——

必须承认，的确是消失了——他会轻描淡写地说：“噢，我不过是对着那些瘕子喝了杯烈酒，也许是凑巧了吧。”而且马上就转换话题。

她们到达的时候，他正好在家，事实上是看着她们下到他这个山谷里来的。他胡须灰白，脸色红润。他一见到若达，就用一种奇特的眼神盯着她。洛吉太太告诉他，她是来干什么的。他一边嘴里叨唠着自己不行，一边又检查她的胳膊。

“药可治不了它，”他立刻说，“这是一个仇人干的。”

若达缩作一团，倒退了两步。

“一个仇人？什么仇人？”洛吉太太问道。

他摇摇头。“那你自已最容易弄清楚，”他说，“要是你愿意，我可以把那个人给你指出来。不过我自己并不会知道那是谁。别的我干不了，也不想干。”

她催着他干。于是他告诉若达，让她在外面她现在站的地方等着，然后把洛吉太太领进屋里。屋门马上开了，而且后来一直留着一道缝儿，因此若达没有跟他们在一起，也可以看见他们自始至终在干什么。他从食具柜里拿出一只平底酒杯，装上半杯水，并且拿出一个鸡蛋，用某种不让别人知道的办法摆弄了一番，然后就着玻璃杯的边缘把蛋敲破，让蛋清流进去，蛋黄留在蛋壳里。因为天越来越暗了， he 就把酒杯和酒杯里的东西一起拿到窗前，告诉格楚德仔细地观察水里的东西。他们俩一起躬身靠近桌子，挤奶妇能够看见蛋清在水里下沉的时候形状不断变化泛起的乳白色，但是她离得不够近，看不出它成了什么形状。

“你看的时候，能够看得出像什么人的脸或者模样吗？”法师对年轻的女人说。

她小声回答，声音轻得若达听不见，并且还继续全神贯注地看着杯子里面。若达转过身去，向远处走了几步。

洛吉太太出来了，阳光照在她脸上，在荒原景物忧郁暗淡的色调衬托之下，她的脸显得特别惨白——和若达的脸一样惨白。纯德在她走出之后把门关上了，她们立刻一起回家。但是若达看得出来，她的同伴完全变了。

“他收费很多吗？”她探问道。

“啊，不——没花钱。他分文不取。”格楚德说。

“那么，你看到什么啦？”若达问道。

“什么……什么我也不乐意说。”她那种小心翼翼的样子很明显。她的脸板着，一下变老了，有点像若达卧室中的那张脸。

“是你首先建议到这里来的吗？”洛吉太太停了很久以后突然问道，“如果是你首先建议的，那该多怪呀！”

“不是。但是就目前的情况来看，我并不认为这个决定是错误的。”她回答道。她忽然第一次有了一种胜利感，她一点也不悔恨，她身边的这个小东西该知道，并不是她们自己，而是别的什么有影响力的东西，使她们不相容。

在回家去的这条漫长而又累人的路上，再也没有人提到这个话题了。但是，那年冬天在那片有很多牛奶场的低地上，以这种或那种方式悄悄流传着这样一个故事：洛吉太太的左胳膊慢慢不中用了，是因为若达·布茹克用“目光震慑”住了。若达对于那场梦魇保有她自己的想法，但是她的面容越来越愁苦，越来越消瘦。到了春天在霍姆斯托克附近就再也见不到她和她那个男孩了。

六 第二次尝试

六年过去了，洛吉先生和太太的婚后生活平淡乏味，而且更糟。农场主常常闷闷不乐，沉默寡言；而那个女人，以前由于优雅和美貌而受到他的热烈追求，这时左臂已经变形，不成样子。不仅如此，她也并没有给他生孩子，这就大有可能使他在大约二百年来占有这个河谷的家族中，成为末代子孙了。他想起若达·布茹克和她的儿子，害怕这可能就是上天对他的判决。

过去一向心情轻快、头脑开明的格楚德，逐渐变成了一个容易激动、思想迷信的女人，她全部时间都用来为治她的病痛做试验，采用她碰上的任何一个江湖医生的药方。她一心眷恋丈夫，还暗怀着痴心妄想至少挽回她身上原有的某些美貌，来赢得他的回心转意，因此她的私室里摆满了各式各样的瓶瓶、包包、药盒、药罐——不仅这些，还有一包包神秘的草药、种种符咒和宣讲巫术的书籍，要是在她的学生时代，她一定会嘲笑说这些东西都是愚蠢胡闹。

“见鬼。看吧，这些药店乱配的杂烩和巫婆胡掺和的东西，哪一天不把你自已毒死才怪呢。”她丈夫偶尔看到那一排又一排的玩意儿就这样说。

她并不回答，只是用那样一种痛心的责备神情，向他投去悲哀而又温情的一瞥，所以他显出对自己的话感到歉意的样子，又加了一句：“你知道，我这不过是为了你好，格楚德。”

“我要把这些劳什子一股脑儿都清理出来，全部毁掉，”她哑着嗓子说，“再也不试那种药方了！”

“你得有个什么人，让你高兴起来。”他说，“我曾经想抱养一个男孩，可是他现在岁数太大了，而且他走了，我也不知道现在他在什么

地方。”

她猜到了他指的是谁，因为这些年来，若达·布茹克的事她已经知道了，虽然她丈夫从来没有就这件事和她交谈过一个字。她也从来没有对他说过，她曾经去拜访过纯德法师，也没说过那个孤零零地住在荒原上的人给她透露过什么，或者她以为给她透露过什么。

她现在二十五岁，但是看起来要老得多。“六年的婚姻，不过几个月的爱情。”有时她这样自言自语。于是她想到那个显而易见的原因，看看自己那条日益萎缩的胳膊，满怀悲哀地说：“要是我能够再变回原来的模样，就像他第一次见到过的那样，那该多好呀！”

她顺从地毁掉了那些丹方符咒，但是仍然保留着一种热切的愿望，想试试另外的东西——完全不同的另一种疗法。自从若达勉为其难地领着她去拜访过那位离群索居的人以后，她再也没有重访纯德。但格楚德现在突然想起，她可以再做孤注一掷的努力，来消除这种看来像是受到诅咒的灾祸，如果他还活着，就再去找找他。他应该是可信的，因为他在酒杯中造出的那个不大清晰的形象，毫无疑问是和一个女人相像，虽然那时她还不知道，可是她现在知道了，世界上只有那个女人有理由对她不怀好意。是应该再去拜访一次。

这一次她是一个人去的，不过她在荒原上几乎迷了路，比她应该走的路多绕了很远的一段。然而，最后总算到了纯德的那所房子，他不在家，没有在屋子里等她。远处他那伛偻的身影，指明他在那个地方干活儿，她走了过去。纯德还记得她。他把他收集的常青棘根放下，堆成一堆，提出要陪着她朝她回家的路上走走，因为路程很远，而白天又很短。这样他们就一起走着，他的头低得几乎都要触到地面了，而且他的外表和地面是一个颜色。

“我知道，你可以把瘡子、瘤子消掉，”她说，“为什么不能把这个消掉呢？”她说就露出了胳膊。

“你把我的力量想得太大了！”纯德说，“我现在是年纪又老，身体又弱。不行，不行。我亲自干，干不了。你试过些什么办法？”

她时时变换，用过上百种治病的药物和驱邪的符咒，她给他举出了几种，他摇了摇头。

“有一些是够好的，”他用赞成的口气说，“可是其中有许多并非如此。这种病是一种萎缩性的，不是创伤性的，而且只要你一下把它摆脱了，那马上就会完全好了。”

“要是我能那样该多好！”

“我所知道的，只有唯一一种机遇能行。治疗类似的病痛，这个办法从来没有不灵的——我敢这样说。不过做起来难，特别是一个女

人。”

“告诉我吧！”她说。

“你必须用那条胳膊去摸上过绞刑的人的脖子。”

他讲的这种景象把她吓了一跳。

“要在刚从绞刑架上放下来尸体还没有冰凉的时候。”法师不动声色地继续说。

“那样做有什么好处呢？”

“它可以调理血脉，改变体质。不过，我刚说过，做起来很难。你得在有绞刑的时候到监狱去，在那里等着把人从绞刑架上放下来，好多人都那样干过，不过也许没有像你这样漂亮的女人。我一向打发皮肤有毛病的人去，总有几十人了。不过，那都是以前的事，我打发的最后一个人，是在一八一三年——都差不多有十二年啦。”

他再没有对她说什么，然后把她送上一条回家去的直路，就转身离开了她，和第一次一样，一文钱也不肯收。

七 骑马赶路

这番话深深地印在格楚德的心里了。她的性格属于有点怯弱的那种，大概这个善心的术士所能够推荐的一切疗法中，没有任何一种能像这种办法那样，使她充满反感，更不用说实行起来会遇到的不计其数的障碍了。

到郡城所在地卡斯特桥有十二英里或十五英里。虽然在那个犯盗马罪、纵火罪、夜盗罪的人都要处死刑的年月，一场巡回审判过后很少有不判绞刑的，但是，没有别人帮忙，她大概没法儿接近犯人的尸体。而她又害怕她丈夫会大发雷霆，所以不愿意把纯德的建议向他或他周围的人透露一个字。

她等了几个月，什么也没做，只是像以前一样，耐心地忍受着破相的痛苦。但是，她毕竟是一个女人，从天性来说，总想恢复自己的秀美姿容，重新得到爱情（她还不过二十五岁呀），这种渴望不断地刺激她，要她尝试一下这种无论如何也不大可能使她受到任何伤害的办法。“用魔法降临的，也一定得用魔法赶走。”她常这样说。可是她的想象里一出现这种行动，她就恐惧退缩，不敢正视这种可能性。随后，法师讲的“它可以调理血脉”这句话又来了，好像它能够变成一种符合科学的解释，而不是一派胡言乱语。同时那种难以抑制的想克服病痛的愿望也催促她再去尝试尝试。

那个时候，郡里只有一家报纸，她丈夫也只是偶尔借阅一下。但

是过去也有过去的办法。人们广泛用口舌传递消息，从一个市场到另一个市场，从一个集市到另一个集市，所以一有执行死刑这类事情快要发生，方圆二十英里之内，几乎没有人不知道这种马上要来的光景，哪怕远在霍姆斯托克，也有些热心的人，据大家所知道的，步行去到卡斯特桥，一天之内走个来回，就是为了亲眼看看那场热闹。下一次巡回审判定在三月；格楚德·洛吉听说审判已经举行了，一找到机会就偷偷地向酒馆、客店打听审判的结果。

然而，她已经太迟了。行刑的时间已经到了，走那么一段路，还要在那样短的时间内就能获准进去，那至少要得到她丈夫的帮助。她可不敢告诉他，因为她刚稍微一试探就已经发现，农村中此类迷信的念头，只要一提就使他火冒三丈，一半原因是他自己对这类念头也半信半疑，因此她只好再等另一次机会。

她听说，就在霍姆斯托克的这个村子里，多年以前有两个患癫痫病的孩子曾经去过，而且效果很好，尽管附近的教会人士强烈谴责这种做法，这种事情还是使她的决心得到鼓舞。四月、五月、六月都过去了，可以毫不夸张地说，到了六月底的时候，格楚德简直是在热切希望把什么人处死了。她平时每天晚上都做常规的祈祷，这时她却不知不觉地这样祈祷起来了：“啊，上帝，快把一个什么人绞死吧，管他有罪还是无辜！”

这一次她更早就开始打听，她的做法也更加按部就班。不仅如此，当时正是夏季，处在储草和收获之间，她丈夫有空闲时间，常常离家在外度假。

巡回审判是在七月份，她又像以前那样到客店去打听。只判了一个死刑——仅仅一个——罪名是纵火。

她最大的问题倒不是如何去卡斯特桥，而是采用什么办法可以获准进入监狱。虽然为了这种目的而提出进入监狱，这种申请以前从来没有遭到过拒绝，可是这种习俗现在已经不时兴了。她考虑到可能遇到的困难，差不多又要迫不得已回过头来去依靠她丈夫了。但是，她对巡回审判的事情稍微一试探，他就显得那么不愿谈论，甚至比以前更加冷淡，所以她没往下再说，决定不管要做什么，她都自己一个人去做。

一向冷酷无情的命运，于她来说出乎意料地好转了。死刑定在星期六，星期四的时候，洛吉先生对她说，他要再离家一两天，到集市上去做点生意，并且说他很抱歉，不能带她一起去。

这次她表示非常乐意留在家里，这使他感到惊讶，盯着她直看。她以前对于失去这种短途旅游的机会，总是表现出强烈失望的。然而，他慢慢恢复了他一向沉默寡言的态度，到了所说的那一天，就离

开了霍姆斯托克。

现在该轮到她了。她最初想赶车去，可是仔细一想，又打住了，因为那样她就得走税卡路，她那鬼鬼祟祟的使命让人发觉的可能性就要增加十倍了。本来在结婚之前，她丈夫答应过要经常留一匹牝马供她骑用，而这时在她丈夫的几个马厩里，无论想象多么出格，也找不到一匹适合女人的坐骑；尽管如此，她还是决心骑马，并且避开人们常走的路。她丈夫有许多拉车的马，很好的驭马，留下的马匹中间有一匹可以使唤。这是一匹体形高大的亚马逊牝马，马背宽得像一只沙发，她小有不适的时候，偶尔也骑出去换换空气。她挑上了这匹马。

星期五下午，一个伙计把它溜熟了。她已经穿戴停当，临走前她看着那条干瘪的胳膊。“哎呀！”她说，“如果不是为了你，我就不会去受这一趟可怕的罪啦！”

她带了几件衣物，打了一个小包，趁这个机会对仆人说：“我去看一个朋友，怕今天晚上回不来，所以带了这些东西。要是我十点钟还没回来，不要惊慌，像平日一样把家门关好。明天我肯定会回来。”她打算以后再私下告诉她丈夫，做完了的事不像计划要做的事，他差不多肯定会宽恕她的。

于是，这个颇为忐忑的格楚德·洛吉离开了丈夫的宅院。但是，尽管她的目的地是卡斯特桥，她却并没有走直路经过斯蒂克福到那里去。她耍花招最初走的路刚好是相反的方向。然而，她一走到人们看不见的地方，就向左拐，走上去爱敦荒原的路。刚要走上荒原的时候，又拐一个弯，走上真正要走的路，向正西方走去。很难想象出，到郡城去还有比这更隐秘的路了；至于方向，她只需要把马头牢牢对准太阳右边一点就行。她懂得，她随时可以碰到砍常青棘的或者村舍里的什么人，问问他们就不会走错了路。

虽然说来那时离现在还不太久远，可是爱敦远远不像现在这个样子把地面都分成了小块小块的，人们想在低坡上开垦，不管结果是成功还是失败，都把原来的荒原分割成了许多互不相连的小荒原。而那时候，这些还不太盛行，还没实现圈地法，田埂和树篱都还没建立起来。不像现在这样：村民的牲口不能享有从前在公有地上放牧的权利，那些享有泥煤开采特权的人自己的大车也不能随便到处走，保证他们一年到头都有东西烧。因此格楚德骑马走去，除了带刺的常青棘丛、一片片石楠、白色的水沟、地表上自然的悬崖和斜坡以外，并没有别的什么障碍。

她那匹马如果大踏步、慢慢走很稳当，虽然是一匹挽马，走得却从容不迫。如果不是这样，她就不敢端着一条半死不活的胳膊，骑上它走这样一片村野荒地了。因此，她快要离开荒原下到满是耕地的山

谷之前，走到了荒原通向卡斯特桥的路上最后一块边远的高地，勒住缰绳让她的坐骑喘口气，这时候，已经快到八点钟了。

她停在一个叫作灯草池的水塘边，池子两侧是两道树篱的尽头，一道栏杆通过池子中心，把水池分为两半。从栏杆上面望过去，是乡间的低绿地，越过绿树，是市镇的房顶，越过房顶有一道房子平平的白色前脸儿，那就是郡监狱的入口。这道房子前脸儿的房顶上，有几个小黑点在来回挪动；看来他们像是几个工人在竖一个什么东西。她觉得毛骨悚然。她缓慢地往下走，不久就走到玉米地和牧场中间了。又过了半小时以后，格楚德走到城市这一边的第一个客店白鹿客栈，这时差不多已是暮色苍茫了。

她到达这里并没有激起什么人的惊讶。那个年月，农夫的妻子骑马赶路，比现在要多，不过，此情此景别人也根本想象不出洛吉太太已经身为人妻了。客栈老板以为她是一个轻率莽撞的年轻女人，到这里来看第二天的“绞刑盛会”。她丈夫和她本人都没有在卡斯特桥市场上做过买卖，所以没有人认识她。下马的时候她看到一群男孩就在客栈前面围在一个马具店的大门口，兴趣盎然地在朝里面看。

“那儿在干什么？”她问客栈的马夫。

“搓绳子明天好用。”

她会意地心头一悸，并且把胳膊缩回来了。

“事情完了以后，这根绳子要一寸一寸地卖，”那个马夫接着说，“要是你想要，小姐，我可以给你弄一段，免费的。”

她赶紧打消了任何这类念头，主要是因为她不知道怎么忽然有了一种奇怪的感觉，好像那个判了死刑的可怜人的命运，和她自己的命运交织在一起了。她订了一个房间准备过夜，然后坐下寻思。

究竟应该用什么办法获得允许进入监狱，一直到现在她连哪怕是最模糊的一点主意也没有。她忽然想起那个神通广大的人说过的那番话。他曾经暗示过，她可以利用她的美貌——尽管遭到了损害，作为通关的钥匙。她没有经验，狱卒、狱吏她都不认识。她曾经听说过一个郡长和副郡长，但是也只是模糊地提到。然而她知道，一定有一个绞刑吏，于是她决定去求绞刑吏。

八 水边隐士

在那个年月以及几年以后，几乎每个监狱都有一个绞刑吏。格楚德经过打听才知道，卡斯特桥的那个小吏住在悬崖下面那条很深、很缓的河流旁边一个孤零零的村舍里，悬崖上面就是监狱那些房子的所在。而那条河，虽然她并不知道，就是灌溉下游斯蒂克福德和霍姆斯

托克那一带草场的同一条河。

格楚德换了衣服，没吃没喝就出发了，因为不把某些具体事情定下来，她就是无法让自己安下心来。她沿着河边的一条小路走向所说的那所房子。走过监狱附近，在天空的映衬下，可以看得出来，在门道上面的平房顶上，有三个长方形的框子，她远远望去，有几个黑影在那里活动，她认出了竖起的东西是什么，于是快步走过去。再走了一百码，她就到了行刑人的房子，这是一个男孩指给她的。房子就在同一条河流的旁边，紧靠一座排闸，河水流过不断发出轰隆的声响。

她站在那儿犹豫不决，这时门开了，一个老人走了出来，用一只手遮住一根蜡烛。他从外面把门锁上，转身登上一座木踏板楼梯，楼梯安在那所房子的边上，他开始上楼，显然这是通往他卧室的楼梯。格楚德赶忙上前，但是等赶到楼梯下面，他已经上到楼梯顶上了。她朝着他高声叫喊，声音足可以盖过排闸那边的轰鸣，让他听见，他往下看着问道：“你来这儿干啥？”

“和你说一分钟。”

烛光总算还照在了她仰面朝上颜色惨白而且带着乞求神情的脸上，戴维斯（大家都这样称呼这个绞刑吏）又走下楼梯。“我正要睡觉去了，”他说，“早睡早起”嘛，可是为了像你这样的一位女士，耽搁一分钟我是不会在乎的。进屋里来吧。”他重新打开门，把她领到屋子里面。

他平常干活的工具，也就是短工花匠的工具，摆在墙角，他大概看出了她像个乡下人，于是说道：“要是你想找我去干乡下的活儿，我可不能去，因为我从来没有离开过卡斯特桥，为高贵的或是低微的人去干事儿——别找我吧。尽管有的时候我会让别人“离开”这里。”他正式地加了一句。

“是呀，是！是那样。明天！”

“啊，我想是这么回事。好吧，那又怎么样啦？关于绳结的事，到这儿来没有用——人们不断到这儿来，可是俺告诉他们，这个结也好，那个结也好，只要你把它打在耳朵下面，都是一样仁慈的。那个不幸的又是个亲戚吗？或者我该说，也许是（他看了看她的装束）你雇用的一个人？”

“不是。绞刑在什么时候执行？”

“和以前一样——十二点，或者说只等伦敦来的邮车一到就执行。我们总是等邮车到，准备等缓刑令。”

“噢——缓刑令——我希望没有！”她不觉说了出来。

“好吧——嘻——嘻！——当作公事办，我也这么希望！可是不管怎样，如果说一个年轻小伙子应该得到从轻发落的话，这个小伙子就应该。才刚刚十八岁出头嘛，而且只是碰巧在草垛着火的时候在那儿。不管怎么说，那并没有多大的危险，其实他们是不得已拿他来杀一儆百，这些日子像那样破坏财产的事太多啦。”

“我的意思是，”她解释说，“我想摸摸他，作为治病的法术，治一种病痛。有一个人证明，这种疗法很灵，是他出的主意。”

“噢，是的，小姐！现在我懂了。前几年有这种人来找过我。可是我想不到，你会是需要调理血脉的那种人。是怎么不好？这种事搞错了，我可担着责任呢。”

“我的胳膊。”她很不愿意地露出那块干瘪的皮肤来。

“啊，这就是胳膊萎缩！”绞刑吏一边观察一边说。

“是。”她说。

“好吧，”他很感兴趣地接着说，“我不得不承认，这真是个很好的病例！我喜欢这种样子的伤，就我所见过的来比较，这肯定真正适合做这种治疗。告诉你来这儿的，不管他是谁，可真是一个明白人。”

“你能费心帮我把要办的都安排好吗？”她屏住呼吸问。

“你应该去找监狱长，和你的医生一起去，说出你的名字和住址——要是我记得不错，一向都是这么办的。不过，也许俺能帮你办，只要很少一点费用。”

“噢，谢谢你！我宁愿这么办，因为我愿意保密。”

“不让情人知道，嗯？”

“不是，是不让丈夫知道。”

“哈哈！好极了。俺会让你摸一下尸体。”

“它现在在哪儿？”她一边说一边颤抖。

“它？你的意思是说他吧，他现在还活着。在上面那个暗处，就在那个矮窗后面。”他指着悬崖上面的那个监狱。

她想起她丈夫和她那些朋友。“是的，当然啰，”她说，“那么，我怎么进行呢？”

他把她领到门口。“看，你可以等在那堵墙上的小门旁边，你往上走，在那个小巷里就可以找到，不要迟过一点钟。我从里边把门打开，因为不把他放下来，我是不会回家吃饭的。晚安。要准时到；要是你不想让别人看见你，罩块面纱。嗯——俺有一阵子有过你这么个

女儿！”

她走了，爬上上面的那条小路，想自己先去弄清楚，好在第二天能够找到那扇小门。小门的轮廓，她很快就看得见了——是在监狱外面围墙上的一个小缺口。这是那么高的一个陡坡，她爬到小门旁边，不得不停下喘一会儿气，她朝后面望了一下水边的那所小房子，看见绞刑吏又在爬他户外的楼梯。他进了楼梯顶上的那个阁楼，或者屋子，过了几分钟，他的烛光就灭了。

郡城的钟敲了十点，她像她刚到的时候那样，回到了白鹿客栈。

九 不期而遇

星期六中午一点钟。格楚德·洛吉像前面说过的那样，得到允许进入监狱，坐在第二道大门里面一个会客室里。这道门建在条石砌成的古典式拱廊下面，在当时看来，拱廊还是比较新式的，门上有几个字：“郡监狱；1793年”。这就是她前一天从荒原上看到的那面墙。旁边有一个通道，通向竖着绞刑架的房顶。

城里面人山人海，市场暂时停业了，但是格楚德几乎没有见到一个人影，她在屋子里一直待到约定的时刻，然后就动身去指定的地点。她走的那条路避开了悬崖下面那片开阔地带，观众那时都会集在那里，但是她甚至能听得见那里人声鼎沸。喧嚣声停顿的时候，一个沙哑的粗嗓子大叫了一声：“死前最后遗言，忏悔！”并没来缓刑令，绞刑已经执行了；但是大伙还在等着，想看看尸体怎样卸下来。

不久，这个苦苦等待的女人听到头顶上有脚步声，然后就有一只手招呼她，她随着指引的方向，走了出去，穿过门房外面铺平了院子。她的双膝发抖，简直走不动了。她一只胳膊露在袖子外面，只用披肩盖着。

她现在来到的地方，有两个支架，她还没来得及想这两个支架是干什么用的，就听见沉重的脚步在她背后什么地方下楼。她没有转过头去，或者无法转过头去，就用这种姿势僵在那里：她模模糊糊感到有四个人抬着一个粗糙的棺材和她擦肩而过。棺材敞开着，里面躺着一个年轻小伙子的尸体，身上穿着一件农民干活儿穿的长罩衫和一条粗斜纹布过膝短裤。尸体是匆匆忙忙扔进棺材的，所以罩衫的下摆吊在上面。这副沉重的东西暂时搁在支架上。

这个年轻女人现在处于这样一种状态：好像有一阵灰色的雾在她眼前浮动，因为这个缘故，再加上她又戴着面纱，她简直分辨不出任何东西，她好像已经快要死了，只是由于某种电流刺激才缓着没有断气。

“来吧！”紧靠她身边有个声音，她刚刚能意识到，这句话是对她

说的。

她拼命使出最后的一点气力，向前走去，就在这个时候，她听见背后有人向她走过来。她露出她那只被诅咒的可怜的胳膊，于是戴维斯揭开罩在尸体脸上的布，拉过格楚德的手举着，好让她的胳膊搭在死者的脖子周围，像还没熟透的黑莓果那种颜色的一道线上面。

格楚德尖叫了一声：法师预言的“调理血脉”实现了。但是就在这个当口，第二声尖叫响彻这个围墙里面的整个空间，它不是格楚德的喊叫。这一声尖叫使她大吃一惊，不禁往四处看。

紧靠她身后，站着若达·布茹克，她的脸歪扭着，两只眼睛因为哭泣而红肿起来了。若达身后站着格楚德自己的丈夫，他的脸上布满皱纹，两眼黯然无光，但是并没有眼泪。

“见鬼！你来这里干什么？”他声音沙哑地问道。

“臭婊子——现在到我们和我们孩子中间来了！”若达大叫，“这就是魔鬼在幻梦中显示给我的意思！到头来你还是像她！”她一把抓住这个年轻女人袒露出来的那只胳膊，把她死命地向后拉，一直把她顶到墙上。布茹克刚一松手，年轻虚弱的格楚德就滑溜下来，瘫靠在她丈夫的脚上，他把她抱起来的时候，她已经不省人事了。

一看见那一对，就足以提醒她，死去的年轻人是若达的儿子。在那个时代，罪犯处死之后，他的亲属只要愿意就有权要求领回尸体下葬，因此洛吉同若达一起在等待验尸。这个年轻人这次被拘留之后，若达就把他叫去了，以后又在不同的时候叫去过几次，而且审判期间，他还曾经在法庭出席。这就是他近来经常沉迷其中的“度假”。这一对可怜的父母原来希望避免事情暴露，因此他们亲自来收尸，运尸的马车和盖尸的单子都在外面等着呢。

格楚德的病情十分严重，所以大家认为最好还是让她在附近就医。她被抬出监狱送往市内，但是她再也没有活着回家。她脆弱的生命力，由于胳膊瘫痪也许一直在逐渐给榨干，而在这以前的二十四小时内，她的身体和精神方面都受到重压，于是一受到双重的震惊就彻底垮了。她的血脉的确得到了“调理”——但是太过头了。两天以后，她就在市内死去。

她的丈夫再也没有在卡斯特桥露过面，仅仅在他一向经常光顾的安格伯瑞老市场曾经露过一次面。而在任何公开场合，他都很少出现。他最初由于郁郁寡欢和悔恨交加，心情沉重，后来逐渐好转，看来像是一个历经磨炼和细心体贴的人了。他参加了他那年轻亡妻的葬礼之后，立即采取了放弃霍姆斯托克和邻近教区的农场的行动，并且卖掉了他的每一头牲口，然后离开，去到这个郡另一头的波特布瑞迪，住在那里孤零零的寓所中，直到两年以后因衰竭无疾而终。直到

那个时候，大家才知道，他早已把他那笔不算菲薄的财产，全部遗赠给一家男童感化院，唯一的附带条件是，如果能找到若达·布茹克认领，就给她一小笔年金。

有一段时间，并没有找到她。但是她终于在她那个老教区重新出现了，不过她坚决拒绝与为她制定的规定有什么瓜葛。她又恢复了在牛奶场挤奶那种毫无变化的活儿，一直干了很多年，直到最后身体变得佝偻了，原来那一头浓密的头发变成了银丝，前额也脱光了——也许是因为挤奶时长期顶着奶牛的缘故。这里一些了解她身世的人，有时会站住看着她，并且寻思：随着那交错流下的条条奶流的节奏，在那个一动不动、满布皱纹的脑门儿后面，有些什么阴沉忧郁的思想在那儿悸动呢？

止不住打喷嚏的贼

很多很多年前，当现在已不茂盛的老橡树还只和老绅士的拐杖一样粗的时候，有位农民和儿子住在韦塞克斯。当时儿子休伯特十四岁上下，直率坦荡又英勇果敢，大家都很好。不过这个小伙子倒是有一点自负。

一个寒冷的圣诞节前夜，由于人手不足，父亲只能差遣他去离家数英里外的小镇办个重要差事。他是骑马去的，又被差事拖到很晚，时间已近深夜。所幸最后事情圆满解决了，他赶回小旅馆，给马配好鞍后，就上路了。回家要穿过肥沃但有些荒僻的布莱克摩山谷，那时的山谷土质黏重，小路蜿蜒，和如今一样被大片丛林所覆盖。

大约九点前后，休伯特骑着自己壮实的矮脚马杰瑞，走在遮天的林荫小道上，哼起了圣诞颂歌。仿佛是为了应和此情此景，他恍惚觉得自己听到林间有些微响动，不由得想起，他所经过的这个地方可是恶名在外，以前路过的人曾在此遭到伏击。休伯特看看杰瑞，真希望它不是这一身亮灰鬃毛，其他任何颜色都好；因为如此一来，即便在昏暗的荫蔽中，这匹温驯小马的身形也清晰可见。“我在担心什么呢？”他想了一下，大声说道，“杰瑞这么敏捷矫健，一定不会让强盗靠近我的。”

“哈哈！那倒是。”一个低沉的声音响起。转眼间一个身影从他右手边的密林里蹿出来，又有一个从左边的树丛中跳出，另一个则在前方好几码外的树干后现身。接着休伯特手中的缰绳便被夺走，自己也被从马上拽下。尽管奋力挣扎，像任何一个英勇的男孩都会做的那样，最终他还是被制服了，双臂捆在身后，两腿紧紧绑在一起。强盗把他扔进道沟后，驾马扬长而去。此时他才勉强看清：那两个人的脸都被故意涂黑了。

当休伯特意识清醒一点时，他发现，虽然自己可以奋力挣脱腿上的绳子，但不管怎么活动，两只胳膊还是捆得严严实实。所以他只能跳起来，双手背在身后前进，希望能够在某一个瞬间把绳结挣开。他知道今晚是走不到家了，而且还是在这种情况下，但他也没有放弃，依然坚持前进。谁知刚才受到的袭击让脑袋昏昏沉沉的，他很快就迷了路。如果不是很清楚大冬天毫无覆盖地睡在霜地上有多危险，休伯特真想就此躺下，休息一晚。他继续往前走，双臂被绳索绑着拧着，早已麻木，心中想到失去了可怜的杰瑞，便愈加伤痛：他的杰瑞不踹

人也不咬人，从没有半点臭毛病。走着走着，休伯特惊喜地看到森林中依稀有微弱的灯光射出。于是他循着光亮向前，最终发现自己来到了一栋有宽阔侧翼、山墙和高塔的大宅前，碉堡之上有城垛和烟囱，映衬在星空下。

四周一片寂静，宅邸的门却赫然洞开，正是门内射出的光吸引他来到这里。进去之后，他发现这个巨大套间是一个餐厅，灯火通明，墙面均铺了深色的护壁板，配有缘饰镶板、各种雕刻、壁橱门柜，以及其他这类大房子里常见的装饰陈设。不过，最吸引休伯特的还是正中央的大桌子，因为上面摆满了珍馐佳肴，是无比丰盛的晚餐，但却未被动过。而桌子四周摆好了餐椅，看起来像是正要开始的晚宴被什么事突然打断了。

就算休伯特再想，他现在这个状况也吃不了，除非把嘴浸在盘子里，像猪牛一样拱着进食，所以当务之急是看看有没有人能帮忙解开绳子。正当他准备往房子里走时，突然听到门廊处传来匆忙的脚步声和说话声：“快点！”这声音低沉，和他从马背上被拖下来时听到的一模一样。他赶紧往桌下一钻，接着三个男人就进来了。休伯特从垂下的桌布边缘偷偷向外望，只见那几个人的脸也是涂黑的，这时他心中最后一点疑问打消了：真是同一伙贼。

“现在，”走在最前的那个人用低沉的嗓音说，“我们快藏起来。他们一会儿就又回来了。这方法不错吧？让他们都出去了。”

“嗯。别说，你模仿惊慌失措的叫声还真挺像。”第二个人说。

“惟妙惟肖。”另一个说。

“不过他们很快就会发现警报是假的，快，我们藏哪儿好呢？最好是能待两三个小时的地方，可以一直等到所有人都上床睡着。啊！知道了。这边！之前听人说过最远的橱柜一年都开不了一次，正合我意。”

说话人出了餐厅进入一条走廊。休伯特悄悄往前爬了些，依稀可以看见伫立在走廊另一头的橱柜，柜门朝着餐厅这边。这几个贼猫腰躲进去，关上了柜门。休伯特屏住呼吸，向前挪了挪，想要弄清楚他们的意图；凑近后，他听见强盗们在小声谈论哪些房间有金银珠宝，其他值钱的东西藏在哪里，很显然，他们准备行窃。

不一会儿，露台那边开始传来绅士、淑女们的闲谈欢笑声。休伯特意识到如果被人发现自己在房子里鬼鬼祟祟可不太好，除非他想要被当成劫匪给抓起来，于是他悄悄潜回厅外，藏在门廊黑暗的角落里。在这里他可以看见厅内的一切，却不会被人发现。很快，一群人走过来，和休伯特擦身而过，进了房子。其中有一对较为年长的绅士和淑女，还有年轻的小姐和男士各八九位，除此之外随行的男女仆从

共有六人。显然，他们才是这栋大房子真正的主人、客人，之前有事出去了。

“孩子们、年轻人，现在，晚宴继续，”老绅士说，“我也不知道刚才的吵闹声是怎么回事，但敢肯定的是，一定有一个人在家门口被杀了。”

随后，女士们开始讨论方才的情形有多么骇人，她们又是怎样暗自期待一场冒险奇遇，结果到头来什么事也没发生。

“等着吧，女士们，”休伯特自言自语道，“不久后你们就会有一场货真价实的冒险了。”

看起来，年轻的男士、女士似乎是老夫妻已婚的儿女们，他们在这一天回家，与父母共度圣诞节。

接着大门就关上了，休伯特被留在了门廊外。他意识到这是自己寻求帮助的绝佳时机，由于双手被捆起来了没办法敲，他便开始用身体使劲地撞门。

“喂！在这儿闹什么呢？”开门的男仆质问道，一把抓住休伯特的肩膀，把他拽进餐厅里。“西蒙爵士，我发现这个男孩在门廊里制造噪声，非常可疑。”

所有人都看向休伯特。

“把他带过来。”西蒙男爵说，他正是之前提到的那位老绅士，“孩子，你在那里做什么呀？”

“为什么他的手臂被绑起来了？”其中一位女士说。

“可怜的孩子！”另一位说道。

休伯特立即解释了自己是在回家途中遭受伏击，被盗贼夺去马匹后残忍地抛下，才沦落至此的。

“想想都让人难过！”西蒙爵士大声说道。

“这很可能只是编造的故事。”一位绅士打扮的客人狐疑道。

“你不相信，嗯？”西蒙爵士问。

“也许他自己就是一个盗匪。”一位女士表示。

“我仔细看了他的相貌，长得就邪里邪气，不像好人。”老夫人说道。

休伯特脸唰的一下红了；他没有再说下去，想到强盗们还藏在房子里，他赶紧停住了嘴，一边开始思忖如何让这群人自己发现危险。

“给他松绑吧。”西蒙爵士说，“这样，既然今天是圣诞前夜，我们还是要好好招待一下。来，小伙子，坐在长桌那头的空座上吧，敞开了吃，尽情享用。等你吃饱喝足了，我们再细听你的故事。”

于是盛宴又继续进行着；休伯特现在没有了束缚，一点也不觉得不好意思。他们吃得越多喝得越多，休伯特也就愈加高兴。葡萄酒在人们的杯中芳香四溢，木材燃起熊熊炭火，直顶烟囱，女士们被绅士们讲的故事逗得捧腹大笑；简而言之，周遭一切都是喧闹欢愉的，和那个时候所有热闹的圣诞聚会一样。

人们的欢呼与嬉笑，在座主宾的热闹与狂喜，这场面使休伯特也情不自禁被感染了，虽然因为别人怀疑自己的诚实而有点受伤，但此时他的身心都备感温暖。他渐渐融入其中，到最后，他和老从男爵、西蒙男爵一样，也因为那些风趣故事和妙语如珠而痛快大笑。宴席快结束的时候，男爵的一个儿子，好像酒喝得多了点，和那个世纪的男人们一样，晃悠悠地靠过来跟休伯特说：“嘿，我的朋友，最近怎么样啊？要吸撮鼻烟吗？”说着他掏出一个鼻烟盒。这种小盒子当时风靡全国，老人、年轻人都很喜欢。

“谢谢。”休伯特说，吸了一口。

“告诉这些女士们，你是谁，你是做什么的，你能干什么。”年轻男人接着说道，重重拍着休伯特的肩膀。

“当然，”我们的男主人公说，提了提精神，想着最好还是勇敢面对，“我是一个旅行魔术师。”

“没错！”

“接下来要说什么呢？”

“你能从深渊招魂吗，小巫师？”

“我能在橱柜里掀起一场小风暴。”休伯特回答道。

“哈哈！”老从男爵听了兴奋地搓搓手，“那我们可得好好看看。女士们，别走远，好戏就要开始啦。”

“应该不危险吧？”老夫人问。

休伯特从桌旁起身，对刚才那个无礼的年轻人说：“请把鼻烟盒递给我一下。”“现在，”他继续说道，“请大家保持安静，随我来。任何人出声都会打破咒语。”

于是宾客们都乖乖听话，鸦雀无声。休伯特脱下皮靴，进入走廊，蹑手蹑脚地靠近那扇柜门，其他人默默跟在他后面，保持一小段距离。接着休伯特悄悄在门前放下一只凳子，自己站上去，刚好能够到柜顶。他悄无声息地从上面的柜门外把鼻烟倾倒进去，再呼出短短

几口气，就把鼻烟恰好从门缝里吹进了橱柜。他挥手示意人群继续保持安静。

“我的天哪，什么声音？”过了一两分钟后，老夫人说。

只听得柜子里面一声压抑的喷嚏。

休伯特继续示意安静。

“真是奇了怪了，”西蒙爵士小声说，“太有意思了。”

休伯特趁此机会悄悄插紧橱柜的门闩，平静地说：“再来点鼻烟。”

“来点鼻烟。”西蒙爵士说。两三个绅士立即递来几个鼻烟盒，里面的东西继而也从柜门上方被吹了进去。接着又是一声喷嚏，已经不像第一声那样闷了；然后又一声，似乎在诉说自己无论如何都不想压抑了。最后，只听得一阵雷鸣般的喷嚏声此起彼伏。

“非常好，真是年少有为！”西蒙爵士说，“我对这种发声技巧很感兴趣，我猜，是叫腹语术吧。”

“还需要鼻烟。”休伯特说。

“还需要鼻烟。”西蒙爵士吩咐下去，于是仆从们拿来了一大罐香气浓郁的苏格兰鼻烟。

休伯特再次对准柜门上方的空隙，像之前一样把鼻烟吹进去。反复了好几次，直至把罐子全部清空。喷嚏声变得喧闹起来，毫不费力就能听见——并且一刻不停，就像是暴风雨中狂风、大雨和海水的激荡。

“我想这里面是有人的，根本就不是什么魔术！”西蒙爵士恍然大悟，大声说道。

“是的，”休伯特说，“他们是来打劫的，也是他们抢了我的马。”

此时喷嚏声已转为断断续续的嘟囔呻吟，其中一个贼听到了休伯特的声音，大喊道：“噢！行行好！饶了我吧！让我们出去！”

“我的马在哪儿？”休伯特问。

“系在了山谷间的一棵树上，就在绞刑架后面。行行好！行行好！放我们出去，不然就要被闷死了！”

此时，所有圣诞宾客都明白了，这不是什么消遣戏法，而是严肃的真事。枪和棍棒都已备好，所有男仆也都被叫进来，严阵以待。信号一发，休伯特抽开门闩，准备好防守姿势。然而这三个强盗哪还有力气攻击他们，早就在柜子角落蜷缩成一团，上气不接下气了。他们

毫无抵抗便乖乖束手就擒，绑住双臂后就直接被扔到外屋去，等候明早处置。

休伯特现在才将整个故事向宾客众人娓娓道来，大家都对他的竭力帮助感激不尽。西蒙爵士表示一定要留他下来过夜，并且让他享用大宅子里最好的卧室。伊丽莎白女王和查尔斯王子到访当地时，就曾先后下榻在那间房。不过休伯特婉言谢绝了，因为他迫不及待地要找回自己的小马杰瑞，他要去验证强盗们的说辞是否真实。

几位客人陪着休伯特走到绞刑架后，根据盗贼暗指的意思，杰瑞就藏在这附近。他们走上小圆丘四处查看，瞧！小马就站在那里呢，毫发无伤，而且颇为惬意。一看到休伯特，它便兴奋地嘶叫起来；对于休伯特来说，也没有什么比找到杰瑞更开心了。他骑了上去，向身边朋友们道了声“晚安”，便策马朝着他们所指的方向飞驰，那是回家最近的路。清晨四点前后，他终于平安抵家。

The Withered Arm

I A Lorn MILkMAId

It was an eighty- cow dairy, and the troop of milkers, regular and supernumerary, were all at work; for, though the time of year was as yet but early April, the feed lay entirely in water- meadows and the cows were 'in full pail'. The hour was about six in the evening, and three- fourths of the large, red, rectangular animals having been finished off, there was opportunity for a little conversation.

'He brings home his bride tomorrow, I hear. They've come as far as Anglebury today.'

The voice seemed to proceed from the belly of the cow called Cherry, but the speaker was a milking- woman, whose face was buried in the flank of that motionless beast.

'Has anybody seen her?' said another.

There was a negative response from the first. 'Though they say she's a rosy- cheeked, tisty- tosty little body enough,' she added; and as the milkmaid spoke she turned her face so that she could glance past her cow's tail to the other side of the barton, where a thin, faded woman of thirty milked somewhat apart from the rest.

'Years younger than he, they say,' continued the second, with also a glance of reflectiveness in the same direction.

'How old do you call him, then?'

'Thirty or so.'

'More like forty,' broke in an old milkman near, in a long white pinafore or 'wropper', and with the brim of his hat tied down, so that he looked like a woman. ' 'A was born before our Great Weir was builded, and I hadn't man's wages when I laved water there.'

The discussion waxed so warm that the purr of the milk-streams became jerky, till a voice from another cow's belly cried with authority, 'Now then, what the Turk do it matter to us about

Farmer Lodge's age, or Farmer Lodge's new mis'ess? I shall have to pay him nine pound a year for the rent of every one of these milchers, whatever his age or hers. Get on with your work, or 'twill be dark before we have done. The evening is pinking in a'ready.' This speaker was the dairyman himself, by whom the milkmaids and men were employed.

Nothing more was said publicly about Farmer Lodge's wedding, but the first woman murmured under her cow to her next neighbour, ' 'Tis hard for she ,' signifying the thin worn milkmaid aforesaid.

'Oh no,' said the second. 'He hasn't spoken to Rhoda Brook for years.'

When the milking was done they washed their pails and hung them on a many- forked stand made of the peeled limb of an oak-tree, set upright in the earth, and resembling a colossal antlered horn. The majority then dispersed in various directions homeward. The thin woman who had not spoken was joined by a boy of twelve or thereabout, and the twain went away up the field also.

Their course lay apart from that of the others, to a lonely spot high above the water- meads, and not far from the border of Egdon Heath, whose dark countenance was visible in the distance as they drew nigh to their home.

'They've just been saying down in barton that your father brings his young wife home from Anglebury tomorrow,' the woman observed. 'I shall want to send you for a few things to market, and you'll be pretty sure to meet 'em.'

'Yes, mother,' said the boy. 'Is father married, then?'

'Yes . . . You can give her a look, and tell me what she's like, if you do see her.'

'Yes, mother.'

'If she's dark or fair, and if she's tall – as tall as I. And if she seems like a woman who has ever worked for a living, or one that has been always well off, and has never done anything, and shows marks of the lady on her, as I expect she do.'

'Yes.'

They crept up the hill in the twilight, and entered the cottage. It was thatched, and built of mud- walls, the surface of which had been washed by many rains into channels and depressions that left none of the original flat face visible; while here and there a rafter showed like a bone protruding through the skin.

She was kneeling down in the chimney- corner, before two pieces of turf laid together with the heather inwards, blowing at the red- hot ashes with her breath till the turves flamed. The radiance lit her pale cheek, and made her dark eyes, that had once been handsome, seem handsome anew. ‘Yes,’ she resumed, ‘see if she is dark or fair, and if you can, notice if her hands are white; if not, see if they look as though she had ever done housework, or are milker’s hands like mine.’

The boy again promised, inattentively this time, his mother not observing that he was cutting a notch with his pocket- knife in the beech- backed chair.

II The young wife

The road from Anglebury to Holmstoke is in general level; but there is one place where a sharp ascent breaks its monotony. Farmers homeward- bound from the former market- town, who trot all the rest of the way, walk their horses up this short incline.

The next evening, while the sun was yet bright, a handsome new gig, with a lemon- coloured body and red wheels, was spinning westward along the level highway at the heels of a powerful mare. The driver was a yeoman in the prime of life, cleanly shaven like an actor, his face being toned to that bluish- vermilion hue which so often graces a thriving farmer’s features when returning home after successful dealings in the town. Beside him sat a woman, many years his junior – almost, indeed, a girl. Her face too was fresh in colour, but it was of a totally different quality – soft and evanescent, like the light under a heap of rose- petals.

Few people travelled this way, for it was not a turnpike- road; and the long white riband of gravel that stretched before them was empty, save of one small scarce- moving speck, which presently resolved itself into the figure of a boy, who was creeping on at a snail’s pace, and continually looking behind him – the heavy bundle he carried being some excuse for, if not the reason of, his dilatoriness. When the bouncing gig- party slowed at the bottom of the incline above mentioned, the pedestrian was only a few yards in front. Supporting the large bundle by putting one hand on his hip, he turned and looked straight at the farmer's wife as though he would read her through and through, pacing along abreast of the horse.

The low sun was full in her face, rendering every feature, shade, and contour distinct, from the curve of her little nostril to the colour of her eyes. The farmer, though he seemed annoyed at the boy's persistent presence, did not order him to get out of the way; and thus the lad preceded them, his hard gaze never leaving her, till they reached the top of the ascent, when the farmer trotted on with relief in his lineaments – having taken no outward notice of the boy whatever.

‘How that poor lad stared at me!’ said the young wife.

‘Yes, dear; I saw that he did.’

‘He is one of the village, I suppose?’

‘One of the neighbourhood. I think he lives with his mother a mile or two off.’

‘He knows who we are, no doubt?’

‘Oh yes. You must expect to be stared at just at first, my pretty Gertrude.’

‘I do, – though I think the poor boy may have looked at us in the hope we might relieve him of his heavy load, rather than from curiosity.’

‘Oh no,’ said her husband off- handedly. ‘These country lads will carry a hundredweight once they get it on their backs; besides, his pack had more size than weight in it. Now, then, another mile and I shall be able to show you our house in the distance – if it is not too dark before we get there.’ The wheels spun round, and particles flew from their periphery as before, till a white house of ample dimensions revealed itself, with farm- buildings and ricks at the back.

Meanwhile the boy had quickened his pace, and turning up a by- lane some mile and half short of the white farmstead, ascended towards the leaner pastures, and so on to the cottage of his mother.

She had reached home after her day's milking at the outlying dairy, and was washing cabbage at the doorway in the declining light. 'Hold up the net a moment,' she said, without preface, as the boy came up.

He flung down his bundle, held the edge of the cabbage-net, and as she filled its meshes with the dripping leaves she went on, 'Well, did you see her?'

'Yes; quite plain.'

'Is she ladylike?'

'Yes; and more. A lady complete.'

'Is she young?'

'Well, she's grown up, and her ways are quite a woman's.'

'Of course. What colour is her hair and face?'

'Her hair is lightish, and her face as comely as a live doll's.'

'Her eyes, then, are not dark like mine?'

'No – of a bluish turn, and her mouth is very nice and red; and when she smiles, her teeth show white.'

'Is she tall?' said the woman sharply.

'I couldn't see. She was sitting down.'

'Then do you go to Holmstoke church tomorrow morning: she's sure to be there. Go early and notice her walking in, and come home and tell me if she's taller than I.'

'Very well, mother. But why don't you go and see for yourself?'

'I go to see her! I wouldn't look up at her if she were to pass my window this instant. She was with Mr Lodge, of course. What did he say or do?'

'Just the same as usual.'

'Took no notice of you?'

'None.'

Next day the mother put a clean shirt on the boy, and started him off for Holmstoke church. He reached the ancient little pile when the door was just being opened, and he was the first to enter.

Taking his seat by the font, he watched all the parishioners file in. The well- to- do Farmer Lodge came nearly last; and his young wife, who accompanied him, walked up the aisle with the shyness natural to a modest woman who had appeared thus for the first time. As all other eyes were fixed upon her, the youth's stare was not noticed now.

When he reached home his mother said 'Well?' before he had entered the room.

'She is not tall. She is rather short,' he replied.

'Ah!' said his mother, with satisfaction.

'But she's very pretty – very. In fact, she's lovely.' The youthful freshness of the yeoman's wife had evidently made an impression even on the somewhat hard nature of the boy.

'That's all I want to hear,' said his mother quickly. 'Now, spread the table- cloth. The hare you caught is very tender; but mind that nobody catches you. – You've never told me what sort of hands she had.'

'I have never seen 'em. She never took off her gloves.'

'What did she wear this morning?'

'A white bonnet and a silver- coloured gownd. It whewed and whistled so loud when it rubbed against the pews that the lady coloured up more than ever for very shame at the noise, and pulled it in to keep it from touching; but when she pushed into her seat, it whewed more than ever. Mr Lodge, he seemed pleased, and his waistcoat stuck out, and his great golden seals hung like a lord's; but she seemed to wish her noisy gownd anywhere but on her.'

'Not she! However, that will do now.'

These descriptions of the newly- married couple were continued from time to time by the boy at his mother's request, after any chance encounter he had had with them. But Rhoda Brook, though she might easily have seen young Mrs Lodge for herself by walking a couple of miles, would never attempt an excursion towards the quarter where the farmhouse lay. Neither did she, at the daily milking in the dairyman's yard on Lodge's outlying second farm, ever speak on the subject of the recent marriage. The dairyman, who rented the cows of Lodge, and knew perfectly the tall milkmaid's history, with manly kindness always kept the gossip in the cow-barton from annoying Rhoda. But the atmosphere thereabout was full of the subject during the first days of Mrs Lodge's arrival; and from her boy's description and the casual words of the other milkers, Rhoda Brook could raise a mental image of the unconscious Mrs Lodge that was realistic as a photograph.

III A vision

One night, two or three weeks after the bridal return, when the boy was gone to bed, Rhoda sat a long time over the turf ashes that she had raked out in front of her to extinguish them. She contemplated so intently the new wife, as presented to her in her mind's eye over the embers, that she forgot the lapse of time. At last, wearied with her day's work, she too retired.

But the figure which had occupied her so much during this and the previous days was not to be banished at night. For the first time Gertrude Lodge visited the supplanted woman in her dreams. Rhoda Brook dreamed – since her assertion that she really saw, before falling asleep, was not to be believed – that the young wife, in the pale silk dress and white bonnet, but with features shockingly distorted, and wrinkled as by age, was sitting upon her chest as she lay. The pressure of Mrs Lodge's person grew heavier; the blue eyes peered cruelly into her face; and then the figure thrust forward its left hand mockingly, so as to make the wedding-ring it wore glitter in Rhoda's eyes. Maddened mentally, and nearly suffocated by pressure, the sleeper struggled; the incubus, still regarding her, withdrew to the foot of the bed, only, however, to come forward by degrees, resume her seat, and flash her left hand as before.

Gasping for breath, Rhoda, in a last desperate effort, swung out her right hand, seized the confronting spectre by its obtrusive left arm, and whirled it backward to the floor, starting up herself as she did so with a low cry.

'Oh, merciful heaven!' she cried, sitting on the edge of the bed in a cold sweat, 'that was not a dream – she was here!'

She could feel her antagonist's arm within her grasp even now – the very flesh and bone of it, as it seemed. She looked on the floor whither she had whirled the spectre, but there was nothing to be seen.

Rhoda Brook slept no more that night, and when she went milking at the next dawn they noticed how pale and haggard she looked. The milk that she drew quivered into the pail; her hand had not calmed even yet, and still retained the feel of the arm. She came home to breakfast as wearily as if it had been supper- time.

‘What was that noise in your chimmer, mother, last night?’ said her son. ‘You fell off the bed, surely?’

‘Did you hear anything fall? At what time?’

‘Just when the clock struck two.’

She could not explain, and when the meal was done went silently about her household work, the boy assisting her, for he hated going afield on the farms, and she indulged his reluctance. Between eleven and twelve the garden- gate clicked, and she lifted her eyes to the window. At the bottom of the garden, within the gate, stood the woman of her vision. Rhoda seemed transfixed.

‘Ah, she said she would come!’ exclaimed the boy, also observing her.

‘Said so – when? How does she know us?’

‘I have seen and spoken to her. I talked to her yesterday.’

‘I told you,’ said the mother, flushing indignantly, ‘never to speak to anybody in that house, or go near the place.’

‘I did not speak to her till she spoke to me. And I did not go near the place. I met her in the road.’

‘What did you tell her?’

‘Nothing. She said, “Are you the poor boy who had to bring the heavy load from market?” And she looked at my boots, and said they would not keep my feet dry if it came on wet, because they were so cracked. I told her I lived with my mother, and we had enough to do to keep ourselves, and that’s how it was; and she said then, “I’ll come and bring you some better boots, and see your mother.” She gives away things to other folks in the meads besides us.’

Mrs Lodge was by this time close to the door – not in her silk, as Rhoda had seen her in the bed- chamber, but in a morning hat, and gown of common light material, which became her better than silk. On her arm she carried a basket.

The impression remaining from the night's experience was still strong. Brook had almost expected to see the wrinkles, the scorn, and the cruelty on her visitor's face. She would have escaped an interview, had escape been possible. There was, however, no back-door to the cottage, and in an instant the boy had lifted the latch to Mrs Lodge's gentle knock.

'I see I have come to the right house,' said she, glancing at the lad, and smiling. 'But I was not sure till you opened the door.'

The figure and action were those of the phantom; but her voice was so indescribably sweet, her glance so winning, her smile so tender, so unlike that of Rhoda's midnight visitant, that the latter could hardly believe the evidence of her senses. She was truly glad that she had not hidden away in sheer aversion, as she had been inclined to do. In her basket Mrs Lodge brought the pair of boots that she had promised to the boy, and other useful articles.

At these proofs of a kindly feeling towards her and hers, Rhoda's heart reproached her bitterly. This innocent young thing should have her blessing and not her curse. When she left them a light seemed gone from the dwelling. Two days later she came again to know if the boots fitted; and less than a fortnight after that paid Rhoda another call. On this occasion the boy was absent.

'I walk a good deal,' said Mrs Lodge, 'and your house is the nearest outside our own parish. I hope you are well. You don't look quite well.'

Rhoda said she was well enough; and indeed, though the paler of the two, there was more of the strength that endures in her well-defined features and large frame, than in the soft-cheeked young woman before her. The conversation became quite confidential as regarded their powers and weaknesses; and when Mrs Lodge was leaving, Rhoda said, 'I hope you will find this air agree with you, ma'am, and not suffer from the damp of the water-meads.'

The younger one replied that there was not much doubt of it, her general health being usually good. 'Though, now you remind me,' she added, 'I have one little ailment which puzzles me. It is nothing serious, but I cannot make it out.'

She uncovered her left hand and arm; and their outline confronted Rhoda's gaze as the exact original of the limb she had beheld and seized in her dream. Upon the pink round surface of the arm were faint marks of an unhealthy colour, as if produced by a rough grasp. Rhoda's eyes became riveted on the discolorations; she fancied that she discerned in them the shape of her own four fingers.

'How did it happen?' she said mechanically.

'I cannot tell,' replied Mrs Lodge, shaking her head. 'One night when I was sound asleep, dreaming I was away in some strange place, a pain suddenly shot into my arm there, and was so keen as to awaken me. I must have struck it in the daytime, I suppose, though I don't remember doing so.' She added, laughing, 'I tell my dear husband that it looks just as if he had flown into a rage and struck me there. Oh, I daresay it will soon disappear.'

'Ha, ha! Yes . . . On what night did it come?'

Mrs Lodge considered, and said it would be a fortnight ago on the morrow. 'When I awoke I could not remember where I was,' she added, 'till the clock striking two reminded me.'

She had named the night and the hour of Rhoda's spectral encounter, and Brook felt like a guilty thing. The artless disclosure startled her; she did not reason on the freaks of coincidence; and all the scenery of that ghastly night returned with double vividness to her mind.

'Oh, can it be,' she said to herself, when her visitor had departed, 'that I exercise a malignant power over people against my own will?' She knew that she had been silyly called a witch since her fall; but never having understood why that particular stigma had been attached to her, it had passed disregarded. Could this be the explanation, and had such things as this ever happened before?

Iv A suggestion

The summer drew on, and Rhoda Brook almost dreaded to meet Mrs Lodge again, notwithstanding that her feeling for the young wife amounted wellnigh to affection. Something in her own individuality seemed to convict Rhoda of crime. Yet a fatality sometimes would direct the steps of the latter to the outskirts of Holmstoke whenever she left her house for any other purpose than her daily work; and hence it happened that their next encounter was out of doors. Rhoda could not avoid the subject which had so mystified her, and after the first few words she stammered, 'I hope your – arm is well again, ma'am?' She had perceived with consternation that Gertrude Lodge carried her left arm stiffly.

'No; it is not quite well. Indeed it is no better at all; it is rather worse. It pains me dreadfully sometimes.'

'Perhaps you had better go to a doctor, ma'am.'

She replied that she had already seen a doctor. Her husband had insisted upon her going to one. But the surgeon had not seemed to understand the afflicted limb at all; he had told her to bathe it in hot water, and she had bathed it, but the treatment had done no good.

'Will you let me see it?' said the milkwoman.

Mrs Lodge pushed up her sleeve and disclosed the place, which was a few inches above the wrist. As soon as Rhoda Brook saw it, she could hardly preserve her composure. There was nothing of the nature of a wound, but the arm at that point had a shrivelled look, and the outline of the four fingers appeared more distinct than at the former time. Moreover, she fancied that they were imprinted in precisely the relative position of her clutch upon the arm in the trance; the first finger towards Gertrude's wrist, and the fourth towards her elbow.

What the impress resembled seemed to have struck Gertrude herself since their last meeting. 'It looks almost like finger- marks,' she said; adding with a faint laugh, 'my husband says it is as if some witch, or the devil himself, had taken hold of me there, and blasted the flesh.'

Rhoda shivered. 'That's fancy,' she said hurriedly. 'I wouldn't mind it, if I were you.'

'I shouldn't so much mind it,' said the younger, with hesitation, 'if – if I hadn't a notion that it makes my husband – dislike me – no, love me less. Men think so much of personal appearance.'

'Some do – he for one.'

'Yes; and he was very proud of mine, at first.'

‘Keep your arm covered from his sight.’

‘Ah – he knows the disfigurement is there!’ She tried to hide the tears that filled her eyes.

‘Well, ma’am, I earnestly hope it will go away soon.’

And so the milkwoman’s mind was chained anew to the subject by a horrid sort of spell as she returned home. The sense of having been guilty of an act of malignity increased, affect as she might to ridicule her superstition. In her secret heart Rhoda did not altogether object to a slight diminution of her successor’s beauty, by whatever means it had come about; but she did not wish to inflict upon her physical pain. For though this pretty young woman had rendered impossible any reparation which Lodge might have made Rhoda for his past conduct, everything like resentment at the unconscious usurpation had quite passed away from the elder’s mind.

If the sweet and kindly Gertrude Lodge only knew of the scene in the bed-chamber, what would she think? Not to inform her of it seemed treachery in the presence of her friendliness; but tell she could not of her own accord –neither could she devise a remedy.

She mused upon the matter the greater part of the night; and the next day, after the morning milking, set out to obtain another glimpse of Gertrude Lodge if she could, being held to her by a gruesome fascination. By watching the house from a distance the milkmaid was presently able to discern the farmer’s wife in a ride she was taking alone –probably to join her husband in some distant field. Mrs Lodge perceived her, and cantered in her direction.

‘Good morning, Rhoda!’ Gertrude said, when she had come up. ‘I was going to call.’

Rhoda noticed that Mrs Lodge held the reins with some difficulty.

‘I hope – the bad arm,’ said Rhoda.

‘They tell me there is possibly one way by which I might be able to find out the cause, and so perhaps the cure, of it,’ replied the other anxiously. ‘It is by going to some clever man over in Egdon Heath. They did not know if he was still alive – and I cannot remember his name at this moment; but they said that you knew more of his movements than anybody else hereabout, and could tell me if he were still to be consulted. Dear me –what was his name? But you know.’

‘Not Conjuror Trendle?’ said her thin companion, turning pale.

‘Trendle – yes. Is he alive?’

‘I believe so,’ said Rhoda, with reluctance.

‘Why do you call him conjuror?’

‘Well – they say – they used to say he was a – he had powers other folks have not.’

‘Oh, how could my people be so superstitious as to recommend a man of that sort! I thought they meant some medical man. I shall think no more of him.’

Rhoda looked relieved, and Mrs Lodge rode on. The milkwoman had inwardly seen, from the moment she heard of her having been mentioned as a reference for this man, that there must exist a sarcastic feeling among the work- folk that a sorceress would know the whereabouts of the exorcist. They suspected her, then. A short time ago this would have given no concern to a woman of her common- sense. But she had a haunting reason to be superstitious now; and she had been seized with sudden dread that this Conjuror Trendle might name her as the malignant influence which was blasting the fair person of Gertrude, and so lead her friend to hate her for ever, and to treat her as some fiend in human shape.

But all was not over. Two days after, a shadow intruded into the window- pattern thrown on Rhoda Brook’s floor by the afternoon sun. The woman opened the door at once, almost breathlessly.

‘Are you alone?’ said Gertrude. She seemed to be no less harassed and anxious than Brook herself.

‘Yes,’ said Rhoda.

‘The place on my arm seems worse, and troubles me!’ the young farmer’s wife went on. ‘It is so mysterious! I do hope it will not be a permanent blemish. I have again been thinking of what they said about Conjuror Trendle. I don’t really believe in such men, but I should not mind just visiting him, from curiosity – though on no account must my husband know. Is it far to where he lives?’

‘Yes – five miles,’ said Rhoda backwardly. ‘In the heart of Egdon.’

‘Well, I should have to walk. Could not you go with me to show me the way – say tomorrow afternoon?’

‘Oh, not I – that is,’ the milkwoman murmured, with a start of dismay. Again the dread seized her that something to do with her fierce act in the dream might be revealed, and her character in the eyes of the most useful friend she had ever had be ruined irretrievably.

Mrs Lodge urged, and Rhoda finally assented, though with much misgiving. Sad as the journey would be to her, she could not conscientiously stand in the way of a possible remedy for her patron’s strange affliction. It was agreed that, to escape suspicion of their mystic intent, they should meet at the edge of the heath, at the corner of a plantation which was visible from the spot where they now stood.

v Conjuror Trendle

By the next afternoon Rhoda would have done anything to escape this inquiry. But she had promised to go. Moreover, there was a horrid fascination at times in becoming instrumental in throwing such possible light on her own character as would reveal her to be something greater in the occult world than she had ever herself suspected.

She started just before the time of day mentioned between them, and half an hour’s brisk walking brought her to the south-eastern extension of the Egdon tract of country, where the fir plantation was. A slight figure, cloaked and veiled, was already there. Rhoda recognized, almost with a shudder, that Mrs Lodge bore her left arm in a sling.

They hardly spoke to each other, and immediately set out on their climb into the interior of this solemn country, which stood high above the rich alluvial soil they had left half an hour before. It was a long walk; thick clouds made the atmosphere dark, though it was as yet only early afternoon; and the wind howled dismally over the hills of the heath – not improbably the same heath which had witnessed the agony of the Wessex King Ina, presented to after- ages as Lear. Gertrude Lodge talked most, Rhoda replying with monosyllabic preoccupation. She had a strange dislike to walking on the side of her companion where hung the afflicted arm, moving round to the other when inadvertently near it. Much heather had been brushed by their feet when they descended upon a cart- track, beside which stood the house of the man they sought.

He did not profess his remedial practices openly, or care anything about their continuance, his direct interests being those of a dealer in furze, turf, 'sharp sand', and other local products. Indeed, he affected not to believe largely in his own powers, and when warts that had been shown him for cure miraculously disappeared – which it must be owned they infallibly did – he would say lightly, 'Oh, I only drink a glass of grog upon 'em – perhaps it's all chance,' and immediately turn the subject.

He was at home when they arrived, having in fact seen them descending into his valley. He was a grey- bearded man, with a reddish face, and he looked singularly at Rhoda the first moment he beheld her. Mrs Lodge told him her errand; and then with words of self- disparagement he examined her arm.

'Medicine can't cure it,' he said promptly. "'Tis the work of an enemy.'

Rhoda shrank into herself, and drew back.

'An enemy? What enemy?' asked Mrs Lodge.

He shook his head. 'That's best known to yourself,' he said. 'If you like I can show the person to you, though I shall not myself know who it is. I can do no more; and don't wish to do that.'

She pressed him; on which he told Rhoda to wait outside where she stood, and took Mrs Lodge into the room. It opened immediately from the door; and, as the latter remained ajar, Rhoda Brook could see the proceedings without taking part in them. He brought a tumbler from the dresser, nearly filled it with water, and fetching an egg, prepared it in some private way; after which he broke it on the edge of the glass, so that the white went in and the yolk remained. As it was getting gloomy, he took the glass and its contents to the window, and told Gertrude to watch them closely. They leant over the table together, and the milkwoman could see the opaline hue of the egg- fluid changing form as it sank in the water, but she was not near enough to define the shape that it assumed.

‘Do you catch the likeness of any face or figure as you look?’ demanded the conjuror of the young woman.

She murmured a reply, in tones so low as to be inaudible to Rhoda, and continued to gaze intently into the glass. Rhoda turned, and walked a few steps away.

When Mrs Lodge came out, and her face was met by the light, it appeared exceedingly pale – as pale as Rhoda’s – against the sad dun shades of the upland’s garniture. Trendle shut the door behind her, and they at once started homeward together. But Rhoda perceived that her companion had quite changed.

‘Did he charge much?’ she asked tentatively.

‘Oh no – nothing. He would not take a farthing,’ said Gertrude.

‘And what did you see?’ inquired Rhoda.

‘Nothing I – care to speak of.’ The constraint in her manner was remarkable; her face was so rigid as to wear an oldened aspect, faintly suggestive of the face in Rhoda’s bed- chamber.

‘Was it you who first proposed coming here?’ Mrs Lodge suddenly inquired, after a long pause. ‘How very odd, if you did!’

‘No. But I am not sorry we have come, all things considered,’ she replied. For the first time a sense of triumph possessed her, and she did not altogether deplore that the young thing at her side should learn that their lives had been antagonized by other influences than their own.

The subject was no more alluded to during the long and dreary walk home. But in some way or other a story was whispered about the many- dairied Swenn valley that winter that Mrs Lodge’s gradual loss of the use of her left arm was owing to her being ‘overlooked’ by Rhoda Brook. The latter kept her own counsel about the incubus, but her face grew sadder and thinner; and in the spring she and her boy disappeared from the neighbourhood of Holmstoke.

Half a dozen years passed away, and Mr and Mrs Lodge's married experience sank into prosiness, and worse. The farmer was usually gloomy and silent: the woman whom he had wooed for her grace and beauty was contorted and disfigured in the left limb; moreover, she had brought him no child, which rendered it likely that he would be the last of a family who had occupied that valley for some two hundred years. He thought of Rhoda Brook and her son; and feared this might be a judgement from heaven upon him.

The once blithe- hearted and enlightened Gertrude was changing into an irritable, superstitious woman, whose whole time was given to experimenting upon her ailment with every quack remedy she came across. She was honestly attached to her husband, and was ever secretly hoping against hope to win back his heart again by regaining some at least of her personal beauty. Hence it arose that her closet was lined with bottles, packets, and ointment-pots of every description – nay, bunches of mystic herbs, charms, and books of necromancy, which in her schoolgirl time she would have ridiculed as folly.

'Damned if you won't poison yourself with these apothecary messes and witch mixtures some time or other,' said her husband, when his eye chanced to fall upon the multitudinous array.

She did not reply, but turned her sad, soft glance upon him in such heart- swollen reproach that he looked sorry for his words, and added, 'I only meant it for your good, you know, Gertrude.'

'I'll clear out the whole lot, and destroy them,' said she huskily, 'and attempt such remedies no more!'

'You want somebody to cheer you,' he observed. 'I once thought of adopting a boy; but he is too old now. And he is gone away I don't know where.'

She guessed to whom he alluded; for Rhoda Brook's story had in the course of years become known to her; though not a word had ever passed between her husband and herself on the subject. Neither had she ever spoken to him of her visit to Conjuror Trendle, and of what was revealed to her, or she thought was revealed to her, by that solitary heath- man.

She was now five- and- twenty; but she seemed older. 'Six years of marriage, and only a few months of love,' she sometimes whispered to herself. And then she thought of the apparent cause, and said, with a tragic glance at her withering limb, 'If I could only again be as I was when he first saw me!'

She obediently destroyed her nostrums and charms; but there remained a hankering wish to try something else – some other sort of cure altogether. She had never revisited Trendle since she had been conducted to the house of the solitary by Rhoda against her will; but it now suddenly occurred to Gertrude that she would, in a last desperate effort at deliverance from this seeming curse, again seek out the man, if he yet lived. He was entitled to a certain credence, for the indistinct form he had raised in the glass had undoubtedly resembled the only woman in the world who – as she now knew, though not then – could have a reason for bearing her ill-will. The visit should be paid.

This time she went alone, though she nearly got lost on the heath, and roamed a considerable distance out of her way. Trendle's house was reached at last, however: he was not indoors, and instead of waiting at the cottage she went to where his bent figure was pointed out to her at work a long way off. Trendle remembered her, and laying down the handful of furze-roots which he was gathering and throwing into a heap, he offered to accompany her in her homeward direction, as the distance was considerable and the days were short. So they walked together, his head bowed nearly to the earth, and his form of a colour with it.

'You can send away warts and other excrescences, I know,' she said; 'why can't you send away this?' And the arm was uncovered.

'You think too much of my powers!' said Trendle; 'and I am old and weak now, too. No, no; it is too much for me to attempt in my own person. What have ye tried?'

She named to him some of the hundred medicaments and counterspells which she had adopted from time to time. He shook his head.

'Some were good enough,' he said approvingly; 'but not many of them for such as this. This is of the nature of a blight, not of the nature of a wound; and if you ever do throw it off, it will be all at once.'

'If I only could!'

‘There is only one chance of doing it known to me. It has never failed in kindred afflictions, – that I can declare. But it is hard to carry out, and especially for a woman.’

‘Tell me!’ said she.

‘You must touch with the limb the neck of a man who’s been hanged.’

She started a little at the image he had raised.

‘Before he’s cold – just after he’s cut down,’ continued the conjuror impassively.

‘How can that do good?’

‘It will turn the blood and change the constitution. But, as I say, to do it is hard. You must get into jail, and wait for him when he’s brought off the gallows. Lots have done it, though perhaps not such pretty women as you. I used to send dozens for skin complaints. But that was in former times. The last I sent was in ’13 – near twenty years ago.’

He had no more to tell her; and, when he had put her into a straight track homeward, turned and left her, refusing all money as at first.

vII A rIdE

The communication sank deep into Gertrude’s mind. Her nature was rather a timid one; and probably of all remedies that the white wizard could have suggested there was not one which would have filled her with so much aversion as this, not to speak of the immense obstacles in the way of its adoption.

Casterbridge, the county- town, was a dozen or fifteen miles off; and though in those days, when men were executed for horse-stealing, arson, and burglary, an assize seldom passed without a hanging, it was not likely that she could get access to the body of the criminal unaided. And the fear of her husband’s anger made her reluctant to breathe a word of Trendle’s suggestion to him or to anybody about him.

She did nothing for months, and patiently bore her disfigurement as before. But her woman’s nature, craving for renewed love, through the medium of renewed beauty (she was but twenty- five), was ever stimulating her to try what, at any rate, could hardly do her any harm. 'What came by a spell will go by a spell surely,' she would say. Whenever her imagination pictured the act she shrank in terror from the possibility of it: then the words of the conjuror, 'It will turn your blood,' were seen to be capable of a scientific no less than a ghastly interpretation; the mastering desire returned, and urged her on again.

There was at this time but one county paper, and that her husband only occasionally borrowed. But oldfashioned days had old- fashioned means, and news was extensively conveyed by word of mouth from market to market or from fair to fair; so that, whenever such an event as an execution was about to take place, few within a radius of twenty miles were ignorant of the coming sight; and, so far as Holmstoke was concerned, some enthusiasts had been known to walk all the way to Casterbridge and back in one day, solely to witness the spectacle. The next assizes were in March; and when Gertrude Lodge heard that they had been held, she inquired stealthily at the inn as to the result, as soon as she could find opportunity.

She was, however, too late. The time at which the sentences were to be carried out had arrived, and to make the journey and obtain admission at such short notice required at least her husband's assistance. She dared not tell him, for she had found by delicate experiment that these smouldering village beliefs made him furious if mentioned, partly because he half entertained them himself. It was therefore necessary to wait for another opportunity.

Her determination received a fillip from learning that two epileptic children had attended from this very village of Holmstoke many years before with beneficial results, though the experiment had been strongly condemned by the neighbouring clergy. April, May, June passed; and it is no overstatement to say that by the end of the last- named month Gertrude wellnigh longed for the death of a fellow- creature. Instead of her formal prayers each night, her unconscious prayer was, 'O Lord, hang some guilty or innocent person soon!'

This time she made earlier inquiries, and was altogether more systematic in her proceedings. Moreover, the season was summer, between the haymaking and the harvest, and in the leisure thus afforded her husband had been holiday- taking away from home.

The assizes were in July, and she went to the inn as before. There was to be one execution – only one – for arson.

Her greatest problem was not how to get to Casterbridge, but what means she should adopt for obtaining admission to the jail. Though access for such purposes had formerly never been denied, the custom had fallen into desuetude; and in contemplating her possible difficulties, she was again almost driven to fall back upon her husband. But, on sounding him about the assizes, he was so uncommunicative, so more than usually cold, that she did not proceed, and decided that whatever she did she would do alone.

Fortune, obdurate hitherto, showed her unexpected favour. On the Thursday before the Saturday fixed for the execution, Lodge remarked to her that he was going away from home for another day or two on business at a fair, and that he was sorry he could not take her with him.

She exhibited on this occasion so much readiness to stay at home that he looked at her in surprise. Time had been when she would have shown deep disappointment at the loss of such a jaunt. However, he lapsed into his usual taciturnity, and on the day named left Holmstoke.

It was now her turn. She at first had thought of driving, but on reflection held that driving would not do, since it would necessitate her keeping to the turnpike- road, and so increase by tenfold the risk of her ghastly errand being found out. She decided to ride, and avoid the beaten track, notwithstanding that in her husband's stables there was no animal just at present which by any stretch of imagination could be considered a lady's mount, in spite of his promise before marriage to always keep a mare for her. He had, however, many horses, fine ones of their kind; and among the rest was a serviceable creature, an equine Amazon, with a back as broad as a sofa, on which Gertrude had occasionally taken an airing when unwell. This horse she chose.

On Friday afternoon one of the men brought it round. She was dressed, and before going down looked at her shrivelled arm. 'Ah!' she said to it, 'if it had not been for you this terrible ordeal would have been saved me!'

When strapping up the bundle in which she carried a few articles of clothing, she took occasion to say to the servant, 'I take these in case I should not get back tonight from the person I am going to visit. Don't be alarmed if I am not in by ten, and close up the house as usual. I shall be at home tomorrow for certain.' She meant then to privately tell her husband: the deed accomplished was not like the deed projected. He would almost certainly forgive her.

And then the pretty palpitating Gertrude Lodge went from her husband's homestead; but though her goal was Casterbridge she did not take the direct route thither through Stickelford. Her cunning course at first was in precisely the opposite direction. As soon as she was out of sight, however, she turned to the left, by a road which led into Egdon, and on entering the heath wheeled round, and set out in the true course, due westerly. A more private way down the county could not be imagined; and as to direction, she had merely to keep her horse's head to a point a little to the right of the sun. She knew that she would light upon a furze- cutter or cottager of some sort from time to time, from whom she might correct her bearing.

Though the date was comparatively recent, Egdon was much less fragmentary in character than now. The attempts – successful and otherwise – at cultivation on the lower slopes, which intrude and break up the original heath into small detached heaths, had not been carried far: Enclosure Acts had not taken effect, and the banks and fences which now exclude the cattle of those villagers who formerly enjoyed rights of commonage thereon, and the carts of those who had turbary privileges which kept them in firing all the year round, were not erected. Gertrude therefore rode along with no other obstacles than the prickly furze- bushes, the mats of heather, the white water- courses, and the natural steeps and declivities of the ground.

Her horse was sure, if heavy- footed and slow, and though a draught animal, was easy- paced; had it been otherwise, she was not a woman who could have ventured to ride over such a bit of country with a half- dead arm. It was therefore nearly eight o'clock when she drew rein to breathe the mare on the last outlying high point of heath- land towards Casterbridge, previous to leaving Egdon for the cultivated valleys.

She halted before a pond, flanked by the ends of two hedges; a railing ran through the centre of the pond, dividing it in half. Over the railing she saw the low green country; over the green trees the roofs of the town; over the roofs a white flat facade, denoting the entrance to the county jail. On the roof of this front specks were moving about; they seemed to be workmen erecting something. Her flesh crept. She descended slowly, and was soon amid corn- fields and pastures. In another half- hour, when it was almost dusk, Gertrude reached the White Hart, the first inn of the town on that side.

Little surprise was excited by her arrival: farmers' wives rode on horseback then more than they do now; though, for that matter, Mrs Lodge was not imagined to be a wife at all; the inn- keeper supposed her some harum- skarum young woman who had come to attend 'hang- fair' next day. Neither her husband nor herself ever dealt in Casterbridge market, so that she was unknown. While dismounting she beheld a crowd of boys standing at the door of a harness- maker's shop just above the inn, looking inside it with deep interest.

'What is going on there?' she asked of the ostler.

'Making the rope for tomorrow.'

She throbbed responsively, and contracted her arm.

' 'Tis sold by the inch afterwards,' the man continued. 'I could get you a bit, miss, for nothing, if you'd like?'

She hastily repudiated any such wish, all the more from a curious creeping feeling that the condemned wretch's destiny was becoming interwoven with her own; and having engaged a room for the night sat down to think.

Up to this time she had formed but the vaguest notions about her means of obtaining access to the prison. The words of the cunning- man returned to her mind. He had implied that she should use her beauty, impaired though it was, as a pass- key. In her inexperience she knew little about jail functionaries; she had heard of a high- sheriff and an under- sheriff, but dimly only. She knew, however, that there must be a hangman, and to the hangman she determined to apply.

vIII A wATer- side herMIT

At this date, and for several years after, there was a hangman to almost every jail. Gertrude found, on inquiry, that the Casterbridge official dwelt in a lonely cottage by a deep slow river flowing under the cliff on which the prison buildings were situate – the stream being the self- same one, though she did not know it, which watered the Stickleford and Holmstoke meads lower down in its course.

Having changed her dress, and before she had eaten or drunk – for she could not take her ease till she had ascertained some particulars – Gertrude pursued her way by a path along the water-side to the cottage indicated. Passing thus the outskirts of the jail, she discerned on the level roof over the gateway three rectangular lines against the sky, where the specks had been moving in her distant view; she recognized what the erection was, and passed quickly on. Another hundred yards brought her to the executioner's house, which a boy pointed out. It stood close to the same stream, and was hard by a weir, the waters of which emitted a steady roar.

While she stood hesitating the door opened, and an old man came forth shading a candle with one hand. Locking the door on the outside, he turned to a flight of wooden steps fixed against the end of the cottage, and began to ascend them, this being evidently the staircase to his bedroom. Gertrude hastened forward, but by the time she reached the foot of the ladder he was at the top. She called to him loudly enough to be heard above the roar of the weir; he looked down and said, 'What d'ye want here?'

'To speak to you a minute.'

The candle- light, such as it was, fell upon her imploring, pale, upturned face, and Davies (as the hangman was called) backed down the ladder. 'I was just going to bed,' he said; ' "Early to bed and early to rise," but I don't mind stopping a minute for such a one as you. Come into the house.' He reopened the door, and preceded her to the room within.

The implements of his daily work, which was that of a jobbing gardener, stood in a corner, and seeing probably that she looked rural, he said, 'If you want me to undertake country work I can't come, for I never leave Casterbridge for gentle nor simple – not I.

Though sometimes I make others leave,' he added formally.

'Yes, yes! That's it! Tomorrow!'

'Ah! I thought so. Well, what's the matter about that?' 'Tis no use to come here about the knot – folks do come continually, but I tell 'em one knot is as merciful as another if ye keep it under the ear. Is the unfortunate man a relation; or, I should say, perhaps' (looking at her dress) 'a person who's been in your employ?'

'No. What time is the execution?'

'The same as usual – twelve o'clock, or as soon after as the London mail- coach gets in. We always wait for that, in case of a reprieve.'

'Oh – a reprieve – I hope not!' she said involuntarily.

'Well, – he, he! – as a matter of business, so do I! But still, if ever a young fellow deserved to be let off, this one does; only just turned eighteen, and only present by chance when the rick was fired. Howsomever, there's not much risk of it, as they are obliged to make an example of him, there having been so much destruction of property that way lately.'

'I mean,' she explained, 'that I want to touch him for a charm, a cure of an affliction, by the advice of a man who has proved the virtue of the remedy.'

'Oh yes, miss! Now I understand. I've had such people come in past years. But it didn't strike me that you looked of a sort to require blood- turning. What's the complaint? The wrong kind for this, I'll be bound.'

'My arm.' She reluctantly showed the withered skin.

'Ah! – 'tis all a- scram!' said the hangman, examining it.

'Yes,' said she.

'Well,' he continued with interest, 'that is the class o'subject, I'm bound to admit! I like the look of the place; it is truly as suitable for the cure as any I ever saw. 'Twas a knowing- man that sent 'ee, whoever he was.'

'You can contrive for me all that's necessary?' she said breathlessly.

‘You should really have gone to the governor of the jail, and your doctor with ’ee, and given your name and address – that’s how it used to be done, if I recollect. Still, perhaps, I can manage it for a trifling fee.’

‘Oh, thank you! I would rather do it this way, as I should like it kept private.’

‘Lover not to know, eh?’

‘No – husband.’

‘Aha! Very well. I’ll get ’ee a touch of the corpse.’

‘Where is it now?’ she said, shuddering.

‘It? – he , you mean; he’s living yet. Just inside that little small winder up there in the glum.’ He signified the jail on the cliff above.

She thought of her husband and her friends. ‘Yes, of course,’ she said; ‘and how am I to proceed?’

He took her to the door. ‘Now, do you be waiting at the little wicket in the wall, that you’ll find up there in the lane, not later than one o’clock. I will open it from the inside, as I shan’t come home to dinner till he’s cut down. Good night. Be punctual; and if you don’t want anybody to know ’ee, wear a veil. Ah – once I had such a daughter as you!’

She went away, and climbed the path above, to assure herself that she would be able to find the wicket next day. Its outline was soon visible to her – a narrow opening in the outer wall of the prison precincts. The steep was so great that, having reached the wicket, she stopped a moment to breathe; and, looking back upon the water- side cot, saw the hangman again ascending his outdoor staircase. He entered the loft or chamber to which it led, and in a few minutes extinguished his light.

The town clock struck ten, and she returned to the White Hart as she had come.

IX A renCounTer

It was one o’clock on Saturday. Gertrude Lodge, having been admitted to the jail as above described, was sitting in a waiting-room within the second gate, which stood under a classic archway of ashlar, then comparatively modern, and bearing the inscription, 'CovnTy jAIL: 1793.' This had been the facade she saw from the heath the day before. Near at hand was a passage to the roof on which the gallows stood.

The town was thronged, and the market suspended; but Gertrude had seen scarcely a soul. Having kept her room till the hour of the appointment, she had proceeded to the spot by a way which avoided the open space below the cliff where the spectators had gathered; but she could, even now, hear the multitudinous babble of their voices, out of which rose at intervals the hoarse croak of a single voice, uttering the words, 'Last dying speech and confession!' There had been no reprieve, and the execution was over; but the crowd still waited to see the body taken down.

Soon the persistent girl heard a trampling overhead, then a hand beckoned to her, and, following directions, she went out and crossed the inner paved court beyond the gatehouse, her knees trembling so that she could scarcely walk. One of her arms was out of its sleeve, and only covered by her shawl.

On the spot at which she had now arrived were two trestles, and before she could think of their purpose she heard heavy feet descending stairs somewhere at her back. Turn her head she would not, or could not, and, rigid in this position, she was conscious of a rough coffin passing her shoulder, borne by four men. It was open, and in it lay the body of a young man, wearing the smockfrock of a rustic, and fustian breeches. It had been thrown into the coffin so hastily that the skirt of the smockfrock was hanging over. The burden was temporarily deposited on the trestles.

By this time the young woman's state was such that a grey mist seemed to float before her eyes, on account of which, and the veil she wore, she could scarcely discern anything: it was as though she had nearly died, but was held up by a sort of galvanism.

'Now,' said a voice close at hand, and she was just conscious that it had been addressed to her.

By a last strenuous effort she advanced, at the same time hearing persons approaching behind her. She bared her poor curst arm; and Davies, uncovering the face of the corpse, took Gertrude's hand, and held it so that her arm lay across the dead man's neck, upon a line the colour of an unripe blackberry, which surrounded it.

Gertrude shrieked: 'the turn o' the blood,' predicted by the conjuror, had taken place. But at that moment a second shriek rent the air of the enclosure: it was not Gertrude's, and its effect upon her was to make her start round.

Immediately behind her stood Rhoda Brook, her face drawn, and her eyes red with weeping. Behind Rhoda stood her own husband; his countenance lined, his eyes dim, but without a tear.

'D— n you! what are you doing here?' he said hoarsely.

'Hussy – to come between us and our child now!' cried Rhoda. 'This is the meaning of what Satan showed me in the vision! You are like her at last!' And clutching the bare arm of the younger woman, she pulled her unresistingly back against the wall. Immediately Brook had loosened her hold the fragile young Gertrude slid down against the feet of her husband. When he lifted her up she was unconscious.

The mere sight of the twain had been enough to suggest to her that the dead young man was Rhoda's son. At that time the relatives of an executed convict had the privilege of claiming the body for burial, if they chose to do so; and it was for this purpose that Lodge was awaiting the inquest with Rhoda. He had been summoned by her as soon as the young man was taken in the crime, and at different times since; and he had attended in court during the trial. This was the 'holiday' he had been indulging in of late. The two wretched parents had wished to avoid exposure; and hence had come themselves for the body, a waggon and sheet for its conveyance and covering being in waiting outside.

Gertrude's case was so serious that it was deemed advisable to call to her the surgeon who was at hand. She was taken out of the jail into the town; but she never reached home alive. Her delicate vitality, sapped perhaps by the paralysed arm, collapsed under the double shock that followed the severe strain, physical and mental, to which she had subjected herself during the previous twenty- four hours. Her blood had been 'turned' indeed –too far. Her death took place in the town three days after.

Her husband was never seen in Casterbridge again; once only in the old market place at Anglebury, which he had so much frequented, and very seldom in public anywhere. Burdened at first with moodiness and remorse, he eventually changed for the better, and appeared as a chastened and thoughtful man. Soon after attending the funeral of his poor young wife he took steps towards giving up the farms in Holmstoke and the adjoining parish, and, having sold every head of his stock, he went away to Port- Bredy, at the other end of the county, living there in solitary lodgings till his death two years later of a painless decline. It was then found that he had bequeathed the whole of his not inconsiderable property to a reformatory for boys, subject to the payment of a small annuity to Rhoda Brook, if she could be found to claim it.

For some time she could not be found; but eventually she reappeared in her old parish, – absolutely refusing, however, to have anything to do with the provision made for her. Her monotonous milking at the dairy was resumed, and followed for many long years, till her form became bent, and her once abundant dark hair white and worn away at the forehead – perhaps by long pressure against the cows. Here, sometimes, those who knew her experiences would stand and observe her, and wonder what sombre thoughts were beating inside that impassive, wrinkled brow, to the rhythm of the alternating milkstreams.

The Thieves Who Couldn't Help Sneezing

Many years ago, when oak- trees now past their prime were about as large as elderly gentlemen's walking- sticks, there lived in Wessex a yeoman's son, whose name was Hubert. He was about fourteen years of age, and was as remarkable for his candour and lightness of heart as for his physical courage, of which, indeed, he was a little vain.

One cold Christmas Eve his father, having no other help at hand, sent him on an important errand to a small town several miles from home. He travelled on horseback, and was detained by the business till a late hour of the evening. At last, however, it was completed; he returned to the inn, the horse was saddled, and he started on his way. His journey homeward lay through the Vale of Blackmore, a fertile but somewhat lonely district, with heavy clay roads and crooked lanes. In those days, too, a great part of it was thickly wooded.

It must have been about nine o'clock when, riding along amid the overhanging trees upon his stout- legged cob Jerry, and singing a Christmas carol, to be in harmony with the season, Hubert fancied that he heard a noise among the boughs. This recalled to his mind that the spot he was traversing bore an evil name. Men had been waylaid there. He looked at Jerry, and wished he had been of any other colour than light grey; for on this account the docile animal's form was visible even here in the dense shade. 'What do I care?' he said aloud, after a few minutes of reflection. 'Jerry's legs are too nimble to allow any highwayman to come near me.'

'Ha! ha! indeed,' was said in a deep voice; and the next moment a man darted from the thicket on his right hand, another man from the thicket on his left hand, and another from a tree-trunk a few yards ahead. Hubert's bridle was seized, he was pulled from his horse, and although he struck out with all his might, as a brave boy would naturally do, he was overpowered. His arms were tied behind him, his legs bound tightly together, and he was thrown into the ditch. The robbers, whose faces he could now dimly perceive to be artificially blackened, at once departed, leading off the horse.

As soon as Hubert had a little recovered himself, he found that by great exertion he was able to extricate his legs from the cord; but, in spite of every endeavour, his arms remained bound as fast as before. All, therefore, that he could do was to rise to his feet and proceed on his way with his arms behind him, and trust to chance for getting them unfastened. He knew that it would be impossible to reach home on foot that night, and in such a condition; but he walked on. Owing to the confusion which this attack caused in his brain, he lost his way, and would have been inclined to lie down and rest till morning among the dead leaves had he not known the danger of sleeping without wrappers in a frost so severe. So he wandered further onwards, his arms wrung and numbed by the cord which pinioned him and his heart aching for the loss of poor Jerry, who never had been known to kick, or bite, or show a single vicious habit. He was not a little glad when he discerned through the trees a distant light. Towards this he made his way, and presently found himself in front of a large mansion with flanking wings, gables, and towers, the battlements and chimneys showing their shapes against the stars.

All was silent; but the door stood wide open, it being from this door that the light shone which had attracted him. On entering he found himself in a vast apartment arranged as a dining- hall, and brilliantly illuminated. The walls were covered with a great deal of dark wainscoting, formed into moulded panels, carvings, closet-doors, and the usual fittings of a house of that kind. But what drew his attention most was the large table in the midst of the hall, upon which was spread a sumptuous supper, as yet untouched. Chairs were placed around, and it appeared as if something had occurred to interrupt the meal just at the time when all were ready to begin.

Even had Hubert been so inclined, he could not have eaten in his helpless state, unless by dipping his mouth in the dishes, like a pig or cow. He wished first to obtain assistance; and was about to penetrate further into the house for that purpose when he heard hasty footsteps in the porch and the words, 'Be quick!' uttered in the deep voice which had reached him when he was dragged from the horse. There was only just time for him to dart under the table before three men entered the dining- hall. Peeping from beneath the hanging edges of the tablecloth, he perceived that their faces, too, were blackened, which at once removed any remaining doubts he may have felt that these were the same thieves.

‘Now, then,’ said the first – the man with the deep voice – ‘let us hide ourselves. They will all be back again in a minute. That was a good trick to get them out of the house – eh?’

‘Yes. You well imitated the cries of a man in distress,’ said the second.

‘Excellently,’ said the third.

‘But they will soon find out that it was a false alarm. Come, where shall we hide? It must be some place we can stay in for two or three hours, till all are in bed and asleep. Ah! I have it. Come this way! I have learnt that the further closet is not opened once in a twelvemonth; it will serve our purpose exactly.’

The speaker advanced into a corridor which led from the hall. Creeping a little farther forward, Hubert could discern that the closet stood at the end, facing the dining-hall. The thieves entered it, and closed the door. Hardly breathing, Hubert glided forward, to learn a little more of their intention, if possible; and, coming close, he could hear the robbers whispering about the different rooms where the jewels, plate, and other valuables of the house were kept, which they plainly meant to steal.

They had not been long in hiding when a gay chattering of ladies and gentlemen was audible on the terrace without. Hubert felt that it would not do to be caught prowling about the house, unless he wished to be taken for a robber himself; and he slipped softly back to the hall, out at the door, and stood in a dark corner of the porch, where he could see everything without being himself seen. In a moment or two a whole troop of personages came gliding past him into the house. There were an elderly gentleman and lady, eight or nine young ladies, as many young men, besides half-a-dozen men-servants and maids. The mansion had apparently been quite emptied of its occupants.

‘Now, children and young people, we will resume our meal,’ said the old gentleman. ‘What the noise could have been I cannot understand. I never felt so certain in my life that there was a person being murdered outside my door.’

Then the ladies began saying how frightened they had been, and how they had expected an adventure, and how it had ended in nothing after all.

‘Wait a while,’ said Hubert to himself. ‘You’ll have adventure enough by- and- by, ladies.’

It appeared that the young men and women were married sons and daughters of the old couple, who had come that day to spend Christmas with their parents.

The door was then closed, Hubert being left outside in the porch. He thought this a proper moment for asking their assistance; and, since he was unable to knock with his hands, began boldly to kick the door.

‘Hullo! What disturbance are you making here?’ said a footman who opened it; and seizing Hubert by the shoulder, he pulled him into the dining- hall. ‘Here’s a strange boy I have found making a noise in the porch, Sir Simon.’

Everybody turned.

‘Bring him forward,’ said Sir Simon, the old gentleman before mentioned. ‘What were you doing there, my boy?’

‘Why, his arms are tied!’ said one of the ladies.

‘Poor fellow!’ said another.

Hubert at once began to explain that he had been waylaid on his journey home, robbed of his horse, and mercilessly left in this condition by the thieves.

‘Only to think of it!’ exclaimed Sir Simon.

‘That’s a likely story,’ said one of the gentleman- guests, incredulously.

‘Doubtful, hey?’ asked Sir Simon.

‘Perhaps he’s a robber himself,’ suggested a lady.

‘There is a curiously wild wicked look about him, certainly, now that I examine him closely,’ said the old mother.

Hubert blushed with shame; and, instead of continuing his story, and relating that the robbers were concealed in the house, he doggedly held his tongue, and half resolved to let them find out their danger for themselves.

‘Well, untie him,’ said Sir Simon. ‘Come, since it is Christmas Eve, we’ll treat him well. Here, my lad; sit down in that empty seat at the bottom of the table, and make as good a meal as you can. When you have had your fill we will listen to more particulars of your story.’

The feast then proceeded; and Hubert, now at liberty, was not at all sorry to join in. The more they ate and drank the merrier did the company become; the wine flowed freely, the logs flared up the chimney, the ladies laughed at the gentlemen’s stories; in short, all went as noisily and as happily as a Christmas gathering in old times possibly could do.

Hubert, in spite of his hurt feelings at their doubts of his honesty, could not help being warmed both in mind and in body by the good cheer, the scene, and the example of hilarity set by his neighbours. At last he laughed as heartily at their stories and repartees as the old Baronet, Sir Simon, himself. When the meal was almost over one of the sons, who had drunk a little too much wine, after the manner of men in that century, said to Hubert, ‘Well, my boy, how are you? Can you take a pinch of snuff?’ He held out one of the snuff-boxes which were then becoming common among young and old throughout the country.

‘Thank you,’ said Hubert, accepting a pinch.

‘Tell the ladies who you are, what you are made of, and what you can do,’ the young man continued, slapping Hubert upon the shoulder.

‘Certainly,’ said our hero, drawing himself up, and thinking it best to put a bold face on the matter. ‘I am a travelling magician.’

‘Indeed!’

‘What shall we hear next?’

‘Can you call up spirits from the vasty deep, young wizard?’

‘I can conjure up a tempest in a cupboard,’ Hubert replied.

‘Ha- ha!’ said the old Baronet, pleasantly rubbing his hands. ‘We must see this performance. Girls, don’t go away: here’s something to be seen.’

‘Not dangerous, I hope?’ said the old lady.

Hubert rose from the table. ‘Hand me your snuffbox, please,’ he said to the young man who had made free with him. ‘And now,’ he continued, ‘without the least noise, follow me. If any of you speak it will break the spell.’

They promised obedience. He entered the corridor, and, taking off his shoes, went on tiptoe to the closet door, the guests advancing in a silent group at a little distance behind him. Hubert next placed a stool in front of the door, and, by standing upon it, was tall enough to reach to the top. He then, just as noiselessly, poured all the snuff from the box along the upper edge of the door, and, with a few short puffs of breath, blew the snuff through the chink into the interior of the closet. He held up his finger to the assembly, that they might be silent.

‘Dear me, what’s that?’ said the old lady, after a minute or two had elapsed.

A suppressed sneeze had come from inside the closet.

Hubert held up his finger again.

‘How very singular,’ whispered Sir Simon. ‘This is most interesting.’

Hubert took advantage of the moment to gently slide the bolt of the closet door into its place. ‘More snuff,’ he said, calmly.

‘More snuff,’ said Sir Simon. Two or three gentlemen passed their boxes, and the contents were blown in at that top of the closet. Another sneeze, not quite so well suppressed as the first, was heard: then another, which seemed to say that it would not be suppressed under any circumstances whatever. At length there arose a perfect storm of sneezes.

‘Excellent, excellent for one so young!’ said Sir Simon. ‘I am much interested in this trick of throwing the voice –called, I believe, ventriloquism.’

‘More snuff,’ said Hubert.

‘More snuff,’ said Sir Simon. Sir Simon’s man brought a large jar of the best scented Scotch.

Hubert once more charged the upper chink of the closet, and blew the snuff into the interior, as before. Again he charged, and again, emptying the whole contents of the jar. The tumults of sneezes became really extraordinary to listen to – there was no cessation. It was like wind, rain, and sea, battling in a hurricane.

‘I believe there are men inside, and that it is no trick at all!’ exclaimed Sir Simon, the truth flashing on him.

‘There are,’ said Hubert. ‘They are come to rob the house; and they are the same who stole my horse.’

The sneezes changed to spasmodic groans. One of the thieves, hearing Hubert’s voice, cried, ‘Oh! mercy! mercy! let us out of this!’

‘Where’s my horse?’ said Hubert.

‘Tied to the tree in the hollow behind Short’s Gib bet. Mercy! mercy! let us out, or we shall die of suffocation!’

All the Christmas guests now perceived that this was no longer sport, but serious earnest. Guns and cudgels were procured; all the men-servants were called in, and arranged in position outside the closet. At a signal Hubert withdrew the bolt, and stood on the defensive. But the three robbers, far from attacking them, were found crouching in the corner, gasping for breath. They made no resistance; and, being pinioned, were placed in an out-house till the morning.

Hubert now gave the remainder of his story to the assembled company, and was profusely thanked for the services he had rendered. Sir Simon pressed him to stay over the night, and accept the use of the best bedroom the house afforded, which had been occupied by Queen Elizabeth and King Charles successively when on their visits to this part of the country. But Hubert declined, being anxious to find his horse Jerry, and to test the truth of the robbers’ statements concerning him.

Several of the guests accompanied Hubert to the spot behind the gibbet, alluded to by the thieves as where Jerry was hidden. When they reached the knoll and looked over, behold! there the horse stood, uninjured, and quite unconcerned. At sight of Hubert he neighed joyfully; and nothing could exceed Hubert’s gladness at finding him. He mounted, wished his friends ‘Good night!’ and cantered off in the direction they pointed out as his nearest way, reaching home safely about four o’clock in the morning.

櫻花樹下的清酒

序段

无聊之日，枯坐硯前，心中不由得杂想纷呈，乃随手写来；其间似有不近常理者，视为怪谈可也。

*

人生在世，最是贪图名位。

天皇固然尊贵至极，皇亲国戚也都是金枝玉叶，不是寻常人可以高攀；摄政关白^[1]在一人之下、万人之上，当然不容奢望。

至于身在大内，号称“舍人”的诸贵人，也不能等闲视之。其子孙即便破落，也自有其清姿贵格。相比之下，有一点身份就小人得志、自命不凡的人，就不足道了。

世上怕没有多少人把法师瞧得上眼吧。清少纳言就说过：人视之“犹如木屑”。说得很客观。法师一辈子高座说法，俯临众生，似有无上的权威，但对他来说，究竟有什么意义呢？增贺上人似乎说过，一心求名，是有违佛陀教义的。

不过真心舍弃现世、皈依佛门的人，倒颇为令人钦羨。

人都想有秀美的姿容。不过谈吐招人喜爱而并不多话的人，也让人整天面对都不觉得乏味。姿采虽然炫目，德行并不相符的人，就着实令人惋惜了。德行与容貌都是天生的，姑且不论。思想境界，通过持续不断的修习，能够日复一日地精进。天生容貌气质不错的人，如果腹中并无才学，又常与品貌俱无的人在一起，甚至被其习性品味所浸染，比他们还不如，就实在是我所不愿看到的。

我对于世上男子的期许，在于有修身齐家的真才实学，长于诗赋文章，通晓和歌乐理，精典章制度，而能够为人表率，这是最理想的。其次，工于书法，信笔挥洒皆成模样；善于歌咏，而能合乎音律节拍；对于席上别人的劝酒，如果推辞不了，也能略饮一点，以不伤应酬的和气，对于男人来说，这也是相当好的事。

事事能干却不解风情的男子，好比没有杯底的玉杯，中看不中用。

相比之下，彷徨无计、流离失所，整日里晨霜夜露、疲于奔命，

既怕听父母的训诫，又担心世人的讥讽，时时刻刻心中慌乱不安，而常常孤枕难眠，这样的日子，倒是其味无穷。

只要不一味沉迷于女色，且让女子们知道自己不是随意苟且之人，就比较得体了。

倘若无常野的露水和鸟部山的云烟都永不消散，世上的人，既不会老，也不会死，则纵然有大千世界，又哪里有生的情趣可言呢？世上的万物，原本是变动不居、生死相续的，也唯有如此，才妙不可言。

天生万物，而以人之寿命最长。其他如蜉蝣，早上出生晚上即死；如夏蝉，只活一夏而不知有春与秋。然而抱着从容恬淡的心态过日子，一年都显得漫长无尽；抱着贪婪执着的心态过日子，纵有千年也短暂如一夜之梦。

以过客之身，暂居于世上，等待老丑之年的必然到来，到底所图为何呢？寿则多辱。所以至迟四十岁以前，就应该瞑目谢世，这是天大好事。过了这个年纪，还没有自惭形秽的觉悟，仍然热衷于在众人中抛头露脸，等到了晚年，又溺爱子孙，奢望在有生之年看到他们功成名就，把心思一味地放在世俗的名利上，对人情物趣一无所知，这样的人，想起来就觉得可悲可厌。

世上最能迷惑人心的，莫过于色欲。人心实在是愚昧啊！

明知薰香并不能常驻，虽暂时附着于衣物之上，闻着也不禁心旌荡漾，难以自持。

昔年有位久米仙人，能够御空而行。当他飞过家乡时，看见河边洗衣女用双脚踏踩衣物，裸露出雪白的小腿，心中起了色欲，顿时丧失神通之力，从天上掉了下来。不过女人手足的丰满美艳如凝脂，是其天然的本色，能够让人心迷惑，倒在情理之中。

女子美发的修饰，最引人注目。至于她的人品、气质之类，就算隔帘相语，不睹其面，也能从二三语中听出大概来。女人的作为，能让男人心旌荡漾、神魂颠倒。她自己也为春思所催，不能安眠，以至于不惜自荐于枕席之间，行苟且之事。这都是心怀色欲的缘故。

人心的爱欲，根自本性，其源也远。能令人沾惹六尘的嗜欲虽然不少，舍而弃之，是可以办到的。唯有爱欲，不论老幼贤愚，莫不为其所惑，不能了断。

是以用女人的发丝搓为绳索，能够拴住象腿不令其动；以女人的木屐削而为笛，横吹之声能令秋日之牡鹿集于眼前。

想来这色欲之惑，是最需戒惧的。

住所要舒适自在，虽说浮生如逆旅，也不妨有盎然的意趣。

高人雅士幽居之所，月光流入时，自有一股沁人心脾的气象。今天的时尚，追逐的都是些恶俗的风格，一无可取。此间则是古木缭绕、园草杂生，一派天然野趣。篱围与墙垣的造设，要考虑到周边的景致宜人，日常器物的措置，也一定富有古朴之趣，没有一丝做作的痕迹，才可以让人到此则雅兴勃发。

唐土与日本之器物，有极精致的，都是工匠们费尽心思、百般雕琢而成，如果将它们错杂并陈，又将庭前的草木，一律违拗其天性，肆意摧残，看了真让人心生厌恶。这样的地方，又怎么能长住呢？我每见到这样的庭户，就想，搞得这么精致，谁知道它哪天不会顷刻间付诸一炬呢？

大体说来，从住所的布置情况，就能够推断主人的品位气质。

后德大寺大臣 [2] 在寝殿中拉了绳索，不让野鸢飞到庭院中来。前来造访的西行法师看见了，就问：“就算野鸢飞进来，又有什么关系？这位大人怎么会有这样的心胸呢？”据说他从此以后再也不来这里了。绫小路宫居住的小坂殿的梁柱上，也曾经拉了绳，我因此才想起西行法师的事。小坂殿中的人说：“这是因为乌鸦飞进来啄食池中的青蛙，亲王心痛那些青蛙的缘故。”如果是这样的话，就是一件大好事了。后德大寺大臣那么做，或者也有他的原因吧，只是我不知道而已。

神无月时节 [3]，我路过叫栗栖野的地方，到一个山村去。

沿着长满苔藓的小路走了很久，来到山村的深处，见到一个清寂的佛庵。被落叶所埋的引水管中，水声泠泠可闻，此外便寂然无声。在于伽棚上，看到散放着摘下的菊花、红叶，才知道此处仍有人居住。

如此简陋的地方，也有人居住，不禁感慨系之。又见前方庭园里，有一株果实沉沉的橘树，只是四周严实地围着一圈篱栅，有些人扫兴。如果没有这棵树，这里的天然之趣，或者就得以保全了吧？

与志趣相投的友人从容闲谈，不论所谈为饶有趣味之事，还是琐碎无聊之事，都能以性情相见，真是一大快乐。不过这样的人很难遇到。如果谈话的对象，意见与自己一味相同，则与自己独坐有何差异？

我辈倾谈之时，有完全倾向于对方意见的，也有意见略有分歧的，要争论起来，说“我的看法不是这样”“因此我的结论是”等等，在闲来无事时，都挺有意思的。有人对世道人心颇为不满，而我的想法则迥然不同，与之论辩一番，也可稍慰寂寥之心。然而毕竟心存隔阂，不能尽兴，和与知己晤对时的感觉不同。

在孤灯下独坐翻书，与古人相伴，真是乐何如哉！

书籍当中，《文选》的各卷都是富于情趣的作品，除此之外，如白居易的《白氏文集》、老子《道德经》及庄子《南华真经》等，都是佳作。本国历代诸博士的著述中，也常有高妙之作。

人如果立身简素，不慕豪奢，不敛财货，不贪图功名利禄，则可谓人中之上品也。自古以来，很少见到富贵贤人。

唐土有个许由，没有任何身外之物。有人见他用双手捧水喝，就送他一个水瓢。他将水瓢挂在树上，因为风吹得响动，听了心烦，就弃而不用，仍然用手捧水喝。此人心中，何其清澈啊！

还有个名叫孙晨的人，冬天没有被褥，只有蒿草一束，晚上睡在上面，早上便收起来。

唐土的人视之为高士，记入书中传之后世。此等之人若在我国，是无人记述的。

万物随四季的更替，各有其不同的情趣。

人都说，秋天的事物最有情趣。这话确乎不错。然而最使人心潮涌动的则莫过于春色。当此之际，啁啾鸟鸣中饱含春意，和煦的阳光下，幼草在墙根悄然萌动，而春意随之渐浓。此时霞光遍洒，众花含苞欲放，如不幸遇上连日风雨，则又仓皇殒落、飘散一地。此后则草木繁滋、天地转绿，其中触动人心、惹人愁思的，就多了。

橘之花，本就令人怀旧了；梅之香，也让人思虑往昔，牵惹旧

情；何况还有棣棠之花的艳光明丽，藤花的娇弱无依、我见犹怜。凡此种种，都令人逡巡流连，不能忘怀。

浴佛日与祭祀日的时候，到处装饰着葵花，初发的新叶与嫩枝，透出欣欣的生意，让人有清凉之感。于是有人说，这是人世间的情趣与人的恋世之心最为浓郁的时候，此话不假。五月间，要在门上插菖蒲驱邪，稻田里开始插稻秧，水鸡的鸣叫笃笃如叩门之声，都让人为之心动。六月里，穷人家的墙根开满了白色的夕颜花，到处燃起驱赶蚊虫的烟火，很有味道。六月末的大祓 [4] 也很有意思。

七夕的祭仪很是优雅。夜晚逐渐转凉，大雁飞来，在天际鸣叫，芦荻之叶开始变黄，早稻收割、晾晒等事务接踵而来。秋日，乃是农事最多的时节。劲风吹拂的晚秋之晨，也有趣。这样的情景，在《源氏物语》《枕草子》等书中都有过描述，然而相同的事物，亲身经历后，不妨自己也来描述一番。心中有所感触而不把它表达出来，不免会腹胀气闷，郁积不堪，所以就信手写下来。不过也没有必要拿给别人看，随手扔掉就是了。

冬日草木枯萎的景色，不下于秋色。早上起来，水边的草地上，散落着红叶，泛着白色的霜气；庭院的流水之上，寒烟缭绕，颇饶意趣。就要到年终了，看着世人忙着备置货物，心中也不免有所感触。

过腊月二十日后，月亮就见不着了，静夜里面没有什么可观赏的，只有一天的澄澈清寒，令人有寂寞之感。佛名会、祭陵使诸事都很有意思，也让人心怀崇敬。这个时候，朝中政事繁忙，又要为新春到来时的诸事务做好准备，还真不轻松。除夕夜宫中的追傩仪式与紧接着元日早上皇上的四方拜仪式，都非常有意思。

除夕，众人于午夜前手持松枝火把狂呼乱叫，四处叩门，奔跑起来好像双脚都没有着地，哪知道为了什么呢。天亮之后，到处寂静无声，只有旧年的余味在心头萦回，令人有怅然之感。除夕之夜原本是祭奠亡灵的时间，但现在京城已经没有这个风俗了，只在关东地区还有人这么做。这也是个让人产生兴趣的事。

元日的早晨，晴空万里，景色与昨日并无两样，但心情却大不相同，真是奇怪。京城里，通衢大道的两旁，家家户户都摆出了门松，一眼望去，绵延不绝，充满盎然的生机，令人心生喜爱，真是有味道啊。

有遁世者说：“我在世上已经了无牵挂，只对于时序节令的推移，还不能忘怀。”此话我深以为然。

*

人心是不待风吹而自落的花。以前的恋人，还记得她情深意切的话，但人已离我而去，形同路人。此种生离之痛，有甚于死别也。故见到染丝，有人会伤心；面对岔路，有人会悲泣。堀川院的百首和歌中有歌云： 旧垣今又来，

彼妹安在哉？
唯见萋萋处，
寂寞堇花开。

这种寂寞的景况，谁说没有呢。

死后的情景，是最令人伤心的。

死后中阴期间，遗体停在山寺里，亲戚朋友从各处云集而来，举行法事。一时间这里就显得拥挤嘈杂，让人心绪不宁。时间过得很快，不觉就是最后一天了，大家都意兴阑珊，彼此之间也没什么话说了，于是收拾行李，各自返回来处。回家之后，让人伤心的事恐怕会更多吧。

有人说：“这种事不要随便谈论，多考虑下活着的人吧。”这世道竟然有这样的言论，想起来真让人感到遗憾。

对亡人的追思，并不随岁月的流逝而消减，但古话说“去者日以疏”，其哀伤之情，已不如当初深切，乃至说起往事时，已是言笑如常。

遗骸葬于了无人迹的深山之中，只有在忌日才去洒扫一次。不久，坟上的碑碣便长出青苔，落叶也覆盖了墓地，来访的，只有日暮的风、夜半的月罢了。

怀念者在世时尚且如此，当其逝世之后，子孙只是听说其人，又如何会有由衷的缅怀呢？从此墓地就再无人凭吊，沦为无名荒坟，只有年年春草，令善感者望之动情。呜咽之苍松，不待千年就已伐而为薪，古墓也犁为田地，从此再无形迹可寻，可悲啊！

早晨起来，白雪飞舞，真是意趣盎然。又因有事要告诉某人，就

去了一封信，信中只字没有提到早晨的飞雪。对方回信说：“对这场雪作何感想，尊驾真是吝于一言。如此俗物，岂能与我言事？君胸中甚少情趣也。”这话着实令人回味。

这位友人如今已经故去，但这件小事，却令我难忘。

九月二十日，应某人的邀约，一起去赏月夜游。中途此人一时兴起，要去拜访他的一位友人。于是派人传达入内，我则站在荒芜的庭院中等他。四下里露气繁重，飘浮着薰香的气味，这幽居的住所，景致还不错。

那人不久便从屋里出来，我还在欣赏美景。从暗处望去，见主人送完客后，又把旁边的窗户推开一点，抬头望月。此时如果只是关门进屋，就毫无韵味了。她却不知道外面有人看到她推户赏月，所以此举当出于她平素的修养，绝不是做给人看的。

听说此主人不久即去世了。

被名利驱使，一辈子紧张劳累，是何等不明智的事啊！

只顾积累钱财，忽略了修身养性，钱财就只是招累买烦的东西。而“身后堆金拄北斗”，又把烦恼都留给了后人。凡夫俗子们就喜欢看到家中堆金砌银，十分无聊。乘高车、坐大马，穿金戴玉，在明白人看来，不仅讨厌，而且愚不可及。最好还是“捐金于山，沉珠于渊”。一味沉迷于利欲的人，可谓愚蠢之至。

人都想有不朽的盛名能够传诸后世。达官贵人，不一定是忠贞正直的人。名门之下，也有拙劣之辈，靠出身和运气跻身庙堂，甚至过着穷奢极欲的生活。相反，杰出的圣贤，一生地位卑下、怀才不遇的，也不乏其人。因此，一心渴慕高官显位的人，其愚蠢的程度，仅次于沉醉利欲的人。

还有想以出众的智慧与品行留名后世的人。然而这也是经不起推敲的：一般喜爱名誉的人，都喜欢听到世人的赞扬。只是不管是赞扬你的人，还是诋毁你的人，在世上都待不久，替你传名的人，也要不多久就消逝了。害怕愧对谁，希望得到谁的认可，又有什么意义呢？非议随声誉而起，身后之名毫无用处，执意去追求，实在也是愚蠢之举。

一心想变得智慧或者成为贤者的人，要知道虚伪出自智慧，一身才能让人一生烦恼。不管是经别人传授而掌握知识，还是经自己勤学

而掌握知识，都不能说有了真智慧。什么是真智慧呢？即要明白可与不可都一样的道理。至人无智、无德、无功、无名，没有人知道他，也没有人替他传名于后世。这样的人，并不是有意要变得大智若愚，而是已经超越贤与愚、得与失的区分，达到了更高的境界。

追逐世间浮名与虚利的痴愚之人，大略就有以上几类。实质世上万事皆非，没必要在意，也不值得期盼。

因幡国有位入道的女儿容貌非凡，来求婚的人极多。但这女子平常只吃栗子，不进米面，其父就对求婚的众人说：“我这女儿，不是寻常之人，不可以与人婚配。”就这样把前来求婚的人都回绝了。

五月初五，驱车去贺茂神社观看赛马，到后，发现围观的人极多，车上无法观看，就下了车，想到马场的围栏边去近看。然而那里更为拥挤，根本无法靠近。

这时发现对面一棵楝树上，有个法师蹲踞在树杈中间，手扶着身旁的树枝打瞌睡。每当眼看就要掉下来时，就会惊醒过来，如此反复再三。观众中有人嘲讽说：“真是个大蠢物，在这么高的树枝上还能安心睡觉？”

我听了这话，心中忽然有所触动，便应声道：“我等又怎知死期不近在眼前呢？还不是整天在这儿观看赛马，比那法师，岂不更蠢？”

众人闻言，都回头看着我，点头说：“足下所言极是，此事确实愚蠢。”于是一边说“请进、请进”，一边为我让开一席之地，使我得以近前。

其实这道理人人都知道，只不过在这种场合下，犹如现场说法，让人听了更有当头一棒、恍然大悟之感。人非木石，触景生情是情理之中的事。

有志于出家参悟佛乘、圆满功德的人，心中纵有万千难以舍弃、不能心安之事，也要当即放下。有人或者会想：“这件事随手就可以办了”，“那件事也随手就能办妥”，“这些事，为了不给将来留下麻烦，也免得让人嘲笑，还是先处理妥当为好”，“这么多年都忙碌过来了，这点事也不太费时间，还是不急这一时片刻吧”。如果这样，则无可逃避的事反而会越来越多，无穷无尽，最终永无修行之日。

世间略有慧根而有心向佛的人不少，但都耽误在这样的想法中，枉度了一生。遇到火灾要逃命时，哪有说“再等一等”的道理？为了保住性命，总会顾不上羞耻，抛下家中财物就跑。生命的迫促，也像大火一样不会等人。无常相逼，比水火之灾还要紧迫，也更难逃脱。死期一到，家中的老人、幼子，身受的君恩、人情，一切难舍之人事，也都不得不舍弃了。

书写上人，即因长诵《法华经》而臻于六根清净之境的法师。

某日，上人在旅舍进房之际，听到用豆荚煮豆时发出的咕嘟咕嘟之声，似是豆子在对豆荚说：“君等是我近亲，为何如此无情地煮我，让我痛苦难当？”豆荚的毕剥爆裂之声，似又在回答说：“这不是我等的本意，我等被烧，也已不堪忍受其苦，实在无能为力啊！求你不要出语抱怨了。”

听到一个人的名字，心中就在想象其相貌，待见面之后，才发现与之前的想象完全不同。

听到过去的掌故，则容易联想到今日的某户人家，且也将今日之人物，与昔日之人物相比较。这些都是人之常情，不独我如此。

又有时候，眼前的所闻所见，让自己觉得过去某个时候也同样经历过，虽然记不起确切时间，但肯定确有其事。这种感觉，恐怕也不是我才有的吧？

我不知道人为什么要为无聊所苦。不要用心于外物，最好的办法，是一个人独处。

一旦把心放在世俗，就免不了被它迷惑，失去自主。比如和别人交谈，总想博得别人的好感，就做不到言为心声了。又不免有和人嬉闹的时候，有和人争执的时候，以至于喜怒不定，妄念丛生，得失之心就再难放下。

如此执迷于尘世，陶醉其中，且又好发痴心梦想，全不悟我佛真谛。就算无法彻悟佛理，只要能了断俗缘，让此身清净，澄清俗务，让此心安宁，也还可以暂得此生之乐。生活、人事、技艺、学问诸般，都得放下，《摩诃止观》如是说。

有世上盛传的事，非当事之人，却知之甚详，一边与人说，一边向人打听，好不奇怪。偏远地区的和尚们尤其有此嗜好，尽皆热衷于打听俗事，好像是自己的事一样，然后滔滔不绝地说与他人听，真不知其何以知道得如此详尽！

*

对俗世盛传的奇闻异事津津乐道，实在是无聊。也有种人，当事情已流传很久了，他还懵然不知，是为清雅之人也。彼此熟稔的人之间经常谈论的话题、物事，只消片言只语，便能相互会意。

初来乍到者，则不知其所云，遂有身在局外之窘。此种情况，未免于人情世故有所不合，而品流低下的人必犯此病。

有人说：“书籍墨宝用薄绢装裱，容易损坏，真是没有办法。”顿阿听了说：“薄绢装裱的东西，两端有所破损，或其螺钿卷轴上的贝壳有所脱落，都是可喜的事。”真是超人一等的见识。又有人说，一部草子中的各册装帧不统一，看着令人极不舒服。弘融僧都却说：“把什么都弄得整齐划一，是无聊人才会做的事。就要参差残缺才好。”这话也品之有味。

把什么都弄得规整如一，确实令人难以忍受。没有完成的东西，保持其没有完成的样子，不仅别具趣味，还有意犹未尽之妙。又有人说：“建造皇宫时必定会留下若干未曾完成的地方。”

先贤所著的内外典籍中，也有不少残章断文。

关于赤舌日的诸种说法，阴阳道未曾提及。古人于此并不忌讳，近来有人说起，才讲究起来。民间的说法是：此日百事不顺。做事都不能圆满，到手之物也会放脱，有什么谋划都要落空。如此等等都是愚昧无知的迷信。在吉日里办的事，其顺利的和不顺利的，数量其实大致相当。

原因在于，世间本是变化无常的所在，各种可能都存在。人一旦开始做某事，就对结果满心期待。但人心是变幻不定的，事物的结果也因而不能确定，随时都在随人心而变化。这个道理，常人都不明白。古人云，吉日为恶必凶，凶日行善必吉，吉凶皆由人定，而非由日期定。

有人初学射箭，就一次拿上两支箭瞄准箭靶。

师父说：“初学者不要一次拿两支箭。想到后面还有一箭的机会，对第一箭，就不会用全心。射箭时心中不能患得患失，要专注于这一箭，而且要志在必得。”师父当前，就算只发两箭，也不能忽略其中之一。这中间的懈怠之心，自己可能并未意识到，但师父却能洞察。同样的道理，可以用在其他事情上。

学道之人，晚上惦记着明早的功课，早晨又惦记着当晚的功课，看起来是日催一日，勤奋精进，但其间有刹那的懈怠之心，自己恐怕是没有察觉的吧？为何只专注于当前的一念一世，就这么难呢？

有人在闲聊中说：“有个买牛的人，与卖牛的人说好明日付钱后就把牛牵走，不料当晚牛就死了。这样的事，对买者有利，对卖者则是损失。”

旁边有人听了说：“牛主人确实有损失，但未必没有大利。具体说来，生者是料想不到死期逼近的，牛如此，人也如此。牛的死，是意料之外的事；牛主人的生死，恐怕一样难料，但与牛相比，已多得一日之生。一日的生命，值过万金，一头牛的价钱与之相比，简直轻如鸿毛。所以损失一钱而得到万金，谈不上什么损失吧？”

众人听了都嘲笑他说：“这道理怕不仅适用于牛主人吧！”

那人又说：“怕死的话，就该爱惜生命，故理当日日享受生之愉悦。但愚弩之人忘了生命本身的愉悦，不辞劳苦地追逐身外之乐；忘了生命本身即财宝，而不顾生死地贪求身外之财，从不满足。既不知生的乐趣，又害怕死的到来，这两种情况是不会并存的。人活得不快乐，恰恰是因为不怕死；人不是不怕死，而是忘记了死就是眼前的事。只有超越了死生，才算得参透真谛。”

听了这段宏论，众人益发嘲笑他了。

有个女子，幽居在荒僻无人的地方，也不知是在逃避什么。某傍晚时分，月色朦胧之际，一名男子悄然来访，惹得犬儿汪汪地叫起来，侍女出门探视，问：“是何方的贵客呢？”乃把他引入院中。

见到一派凄凉景象，他不由得心中黯然，寻思道：此地岂宜佳人久居？随后在屋前粗陋的木板上立候了片刻，听得里面一个恬静稚细的声音传来：“请进吧！”才拉开已不灵便的门走进去。

室内的情形，却不似外面那么荒凉，别有一番幽雅景致。炉火摇曳，微光影绰，四壁之物皆因之熠熠生辉；暗盈的薰香，却不是为来客新燃起的，闻着倍觉亲切。

又听女主人说：“烦请将门关好，怕是要下雨了。车可停于门下，诸随从的住宿也请妥善安排。”随从皆嗡嗡窃语道：“到。”

于是相对絮语，把近况一一说与她听。不知不觉间，就听到了第一声鸡鸣，但意兴仍然浓厚，继续倾心交谈，于过去、未来莫不畅所欲言。不久，又听到雄鸡高唱，想必天亮了吧？不过此地是僻静之所，不必如别处需趁暗夜匆匆离去。所以等亮光已从门隙间透入时，才从容起身辞别。

出来时已是四月初夏的曙色，树梢与庭草都深翠欲滴，景色绝美。登车之后，一夜的深情相晤，还萦回于心，恋恋不舍中，回首门前之大桂树，一直到车儿渐行渐远，再看不到为止。

一位攀树的名手叫某人到树的高处去砍伐树枝，当攀树的人爬到很高的地方时，他在下面一言不发；当攀树的人下到如屋檐高的地方时，他才说：“小心点，别掉下来了。”

我好奇地问他：“已到此处，一跃而下都无妨，为何还提醒他呢？”

他回答说：“恰好要在此处提醒呢。人到了高处，会感觉头晕目

眩，看着又高又细的树条，自己都会警惕起来，所以不需要提醒。但失误多出现在感觉轻松的地方，所以必须提醒他。”

虽然是身份卑微之人，说出的道理，却颇合乎圣人的训诫。

蹴鞠也是同样的道理，把高难度的动作对付了，如果掉以轻心，球则必然掉在地上。

人常饲养的家畜是马与牛，套上枷轭后，终日奴役，实在可叹。然而马与牛又是日常不可或缺的东西，莫奈何也。狗能够守夜防盗，比人还能干，也是不可或缺的，故每家都养，但不必搜求更多来喂养。

其余各种鸟兽就没有什么实际用途了。把走兽带回家中，锁上铁链，把飞鸟剪掉羽毛，放进鸟笼，让它们那思恋云霄、怀想山野的愁苦永无尽头，如果换作人，恐怕也难忍受吧？所以有心之人，怎能以此为乐呢？残害生灵来娱乐自己的人，其心与桀纣何异？

王子猷爱鸟，称林中嬉戏的鸟儿为逍遥之友。他不会把鸟儿捉回家让它痛苦的。《尚书》云：“珍禽奇兽不育于国。”

雅房大纳言才学俱佳，品行高卓，皇上准备升任他为大将军，但身边的近臣却说：“最近看到些见不得人的事。”

皇上问：“什么事呢？”回答说：“我从墙壁的缝隙间，看见雅房卿割下活犬的脚来喂鹰。”

皇上听了心中大为厌恶，对雅房的印象顿时改变，升迁之事也就搁置了。

其实犬足饲鹰等等，全属乌有之事。遭人诽谤，固然不幸，但君王听说有这种事，心生憎恶之情，其仁爱之心也甚为感人。

总而言之，以杀戮、折磨动物为乐的人，就像以自相残杀为乐的

牲畜。上自鸟兽，下至昆虫，如果细心观察它们的行为的话，就看得出它们也爱护幼子、关怀亲人，有夫有妻，会嫉妒、会发火，有七情六欲，也爱惜生命，甚至比人还执迷痴愚。折磨它们的身体、夺去它们的生命，实在令人痛心。对世间一切众生不怀慈悲之心者，不能视之为为人。

颜回的志向是不将自己的意志强加于人。大体说来，残虐生灵之事不可为，贱民的意志，也不能剥夺。

有人喜欢用谎话来哄骗、恫吓和戏谑幼童，这些谎话，在成人看来，也许并不觉得有什么，但对幼童的心灵，则有深刻的影响。他们会感到恐惧、羞耻、悲痛，好像亲身经历了那样的事一样。用别人的痛苦来让自己开心的人，是没有慈悲之心的人。

成人的喜怒哀乐都是心中的虚妄，但人都当作实有之相来在意。

伤害心灵，比伤害身体更为严重。病痛多半来自心中，少有来自外界。服药发汗，有时会没有效果；而心中羞愧恐惧时，则必定要出汗。由此可见心的作用，书凌云之额而忽然白头的典故，即是先例。

盛开的樱花和明朗的月色，世人所能观赏的，难道仅此二者？不论对阴雨而怀明月，抑或垂帘幽居不问春归何处，都是极有情趣的事。而如含苞待放的树梢、落花遍地的庭院等等，可供观赏之处还多着呢。和歌之小序中有“本要看花而花已零落”或“无奈没能前去赏花”的话，其难道不比“赏着了花”之类更有味吗？花殒月沉，皆为之惋惜嗟叹，这是人之常情，但只有俗不可耐的人才说得这样的话说：“这儿的花没了，那儿的花也没了，没什么看头了！”

世上的事，最令人回味的，是始和终这两端。男女恋爱，也是如此。恋爱之真味，不只在日日相会长相厮守。有时要因暂难相会而忧虑重重，有时要悲叹缘分之变幻莫测，有时独自辗转到天明，有时遥寄相思于远地，有时则远避他乡而追怀往日，凡此种种，都体验过了，才敢说明白了恋爱的真谛。

发皎洁之光而令人一望千里的满月，不如期盼了一夜，到天快亮时才姗姗而来的月有意味。此时的月，略带青苍之色，或在远山之杉树梢间隐现，或为天上之雨云遮断，都极其有味。一丛丛的椎木与白橡树，叶面如洗，辉映在月光下，望之沁人心脾。此情此景，岂能无会心者共赏？不禁怀想起京中的诸友来。

大体说来，可观赏者，岂只限于眼前所见之月与花？春日闭门家

中，或月夜静处室内时，于心中想象其风致，也别有兴味。

品流高尚的人物虽好物而不溺于物，虽兴致颇高也能淡然处之。只有那些不解风雅的村夫俗子，才于游赏时力求尽兴。赏花时拥挤在花下，或凑近盯着花看，要饮酒，要作连歌，末了手持折下的花枝，欢欢喜喜地打道回府；路过泉水时，一定要把手足都泡进去；遇到下雪时，一定要在雪地上踩踏，留下自己的足印。总之凡有景致处，决不悠然旁观，一定要去耍弄一番才甘心。

此辈观看贺茂祭的情形，也是妙不可言。“祭神的行列要有一阵才过来呢，这会儿待在看台上有什么意思？”说罢就拥入看台后的人家里，饮酒、大嚼，下围棋、双六。待到外面放风之人喊道“行列过来了！”才又一拥而出，你推我搡地挤上看台，连看台上的布帘也似要被其挤落了。在观看时，此辈绝不错过任何细节，且都要评头论足一番。当一个行列过去后，就说：“咱回去等下一轮吧。”又钻回台后的屋子去戏耍了。此辈人眼中，只认实在之物。

比较起来，京都人士就要文雅得多。彼等做闭目养神状，似乎并不热衷于观看。职位较低的年轻侍从们紧随其主，立于身后，也没有谁探身引颈做粗俗状。总之这群人中，没有一个表现出一定要看个清楚才甘心的样子。

现场到处悬挂着葵叶，秀雅可人，而驾车前来者，已在天色未明之际悄然云集于此，车中人不时左右探望，看看有无旧识，打打招呼。众车错杂相陈，有的妙趣横生，有的光彩夺目，颇富观赏趣味，在等待时，细加观玩，倒颇能解闷。然而到了日暮时分，一排排牛车与拥挤不堪的人群便突然不知去向，变得稀疏零落，看台上的布帘与坐垫也纷纷被取走了，眼前呈现一片凄凉景象，让人联想到世道的盛衰，不禁感慨有加。把大路上的情景，这样看下来，才可以说观了贺茂祭。

聚集于看台之上的众人中，相识的人不少，可知世上的人，其实并不太多。假设我须等到众人死后才最后死去，实在也等不了太久。在一个大容器中盛满水，在它的底部凿开一个小孔，水于是往下流。这孔虽然细小，但如果长流不止，也不需要太久，水就会流尽。京都的人虽多，但每日都有人死去，且不止一二人。鸟部野、舟冈及众多无名野山上，只见过送葬之人众多的时候，没见过无人前去送葬的时候。因此卖棺材者的棺材做好不久就能卖出，不论老幼强弱，皆死期难料，侥幸能活到今天，实在是不可思议的奇妙之事。所以人生在世，来日方长的想法，是片刻都不能有的。

可尝试将双六的棋子排作“继子立”的形状，当其首尾成列之后，起初不知从何处下手取子。等数下数来，则依数取出一子；其他诸

子，似乎还安然无事；然而再数、再取，最终会一子不剩。人死也是如此：死是必然的，所不同者先后而已。战士在阵前，知道死亡就在眼前，所以能身家两忘，不顾一切。遁世之人长住茅庵，静享林泉之趣，如果自以为与战士阵前迥乎不同，那就太不明智了。深山里虽然静僻，难道“无常”这个敌人就不会挟常胜之势来攻打你？此时与死面对，与战士在战场上的情形，并无不同。

留下身后之财，是智者不为的事。积蓄不好的东西没有意义，而好东西再舍不得也终不能带走。一生积蓄太多，反而是件苦事。口称“我一定要得到它”，而争夺人死后遗物的行径，尤其丑恶。凡想于身后留给某人的东西，最好在在世的时候就给他。

人除了日常必需品外，别的东西就不用再有了。

*

看起来毫无情趣的人，只言片语中，偶尔也有可取之处。

有个乡村武士，凶神恶煞的样子，有次问旁边的人：“你有子女吗？”那人回答说：“一个也没有。”

武士就说：“没有子女的人是不懂人间真情的。如此说来，你真是个冷酷无情的人，可怕呀！”

这可谓至理名言。不懂恩爱的人，心中就没有慈悲之心。不懂得孝养的人，有了子女后，才会明白父母之心。

舍世出家的人，孑然一身，与万事不相关联，常常鄙视羁縻尘世、谄人媚上、欲望深重的人，其实也不应当。若换了自己，为了至爱的亲人与妻儿，就算不顾廉耻地沦为盗贼，也必然会愿意的。缉拿盗贼，因他所犯的恶行而治他的罪，不如把国家治理好，让世人免于饥寒。人无恒产，则无恒心，人穷则为盗，如果国家治理不善，人民会受饥寒之苦，犯罪之人也难以绝迹。把人置于苦难之中，使其犯法，又绳之以法，真是可悲的做法。

然而如何才能普惠众生呢？上能摒弃奢靡，下能抚民劝农，则天下必得其利。倘有人在衣食能保的情况下，还要为非作恶，那就是真正的盗贼了。

御随身秦重躬在谈到北面武士下野入道信愿时，说：“这人是落马之相，当慎之又慎！”但信愿一向不以此为然，最后果然落马而

亡。秦重躬真是精于此道的人，一句话，就让人视之为神人。

后来有人请教他：“什么叫作落马之相呢？”他回答说：“此人的臀部状似桃核，又好骑沛艾之马，故有落马之相。看来我这话，是说中了。”

没什么要紧的事，到别人家里去盘桓，是不好的。最好有事才去，事了之后就回来。在别人家中待得太久，也特别让人讨厌。

坐在一起后，话必定就多，令人身体疲惫，心中烦乱，既耽误做事，又浪费时间，于人于己都无益处。对客人感厌烦时，也不宜说话烦躁。如果不喜欢来客久坐，就明白地告诉他也无妨。

至于情趣相投，愿意畅谈的人，如果正好无事可忙，就可以说：“请不妨安坐，今日可以做一长谈。”阮籍的青眼、白眼，恐怕人人都有吧。

如果没什么事，过来坐坐，悠然闲谈一阵，然后回去，也不错。或者修书一封，说“久未奉教”云云，也颇为愉快。

少年时血气旺盛，心易动，多情欲，此时恰如落地而走的珍珠，容易触物而碎，常有性命之危。年少的时候，总会做一些耽误自己的事：或者贪好美艳之物而不惜钱财；或者心血来潮舍红尘而着僧衣；或者逞强斗狠，既耻于不如人，又羡慕别人比自己强，喜好多变，每日不同；或者沉溺女色，感情用事，讲究仗义而误了大事；或者竟然效仿他人而不惜一死，从不知爱惜生命以求长寿；又或者因好色之名而饱受物议。

老年人精神衰退，嗜欲清淡，对于外物，能够无动于衷，心中自然平静，不会做无益之事，要爱惜身体，既不自烦，也不扰人。年老后，智慧胜过年轻时，就好比年轻时容貌风采胜过老年。

世上有许多不可思议的事。

但凡有事，一定要喝酒，且喜欢强行劝酒，真不知道理何在。被劝酒的人，端着酒杯，皱着眉头，一脸为难之色，直想趁人不备扔下酒杯逃走。然而被发现后，则牵裳捉臂地被留在座上，强行灌饮。结果本来稳重端庄的人，变得疯疯癫癫，一味丢人现眼；本来正常的人，变成病重的人，醉得分不清前后左右，倒头便睡。这样的事如果

发生在喜庆的场合，更是令人咂舌。大醉的次日醒来，头痛欲裂，粒米难进，躺在床上痛苦呻吟，昨日的事仿佛发生在前世，一点也记不得了。公私大事都被耽误，造成诸多不便。让人落到这地步的人，既不仁，也无礼；而遭此不幸的人，对强行灌酒的人，又岂能不心生怨恨？假如这样的陋习，只在外国有，而我国没有，我们听起来，一定会觉得匪夷所思吧。

酒席上的众生相，若只是旁观，也会觉得不堪入目：体面而有教养的人，在酒席上却放肆笑骂，说起话来喋喋不休，乌帽歪着，上衣敞着，下装高卷，双腿裸裎，全然不顾体统，与平时的举止大相径庭；女人则撩起头发，不知羞耻地媚笑撒娇，掰开那端着酒的粗人的嘴巴，往里面塞进菜肴，自己也大嚼不已，真是丑态难当；一众人尽力吼叫着，自歌自舞，甚至叫来年长的法师，光着污黑的臂膀，一副不堪入目的恶俗样，连兴致勃勃的旁观者都觉得再也看不下去。

有人喝醉了喜欢夸夸其谈，吹嘘自己，还强迫身边的人洗耳恭听；有人喝醉了就哭泣；贱人们则相互谩骂，大打出手，让人既惊又怕。接下来就开始为非作歹，强取别人之物，或摔倒在屋檐下，或自马及车上坠落受伤。无车可乘的人，就跌跌撞撞地走在大路上，到土墙下或别人门前去行那方便之事。还有身着袈裟的年长法师，扶着小童的肩，满口胡言、步履蹒跚，看着让人心生怜悯。

如此等等，倘有益于今生来世，倒也无话可说；但实际而言，酒之于今生，是令人犯错误、损财货、生疾病之物。虽然号称“百药之长”，但百病皆因酒而生；虽然号称可以解忧，但醉后反易让人伤心而泣。于来世而言，酒让人丧失心智，如被火烧去善根，恶胆顿生，破除诸戒，最终必堕入地狱。佛祖云：“若以己手持酒器与人饮者，五百世轮回中无手。”

然而酒虽有如上可厌处，也有其可爱而难舍时。月之夜、雪之朝、花之下，与人悠然闲谈，举杯小饮，可以助清兴，发雅趣；闲暇之日，友人意外来访，则端出酒食，小加款待，心情也甚为愉快。在高贵之人家里，酒食出于庖厨，经美人之手端来席上，感觉也颇不错。

隆冬之日，斗室之中，于火上小煮点什么，与亲密知己举杯豪饮，是极有味的事。在旅舍或山野间，口中说着“何不上酒肴”，而径直在草地上坐下饮用，也有趣。不善饮者，为人所强劝，则少许饮下一点，是不错的事。此时座中有身份的人端起酒杯自言自语：“那么我就再来一杯如何？反正酒已不多了。”听着令人高兴。若自己酒量甚豪，席上又有极愿结识的人在，则与之杯盏相亲，也是十分可喜的事。

善饮的人，其实也天真可爱，颇为有趣。在别人家中醉卧不起，早上，主人家拉开纸窗时，他顿时手脚慌乱，睡眼惺忪，细髻曝露，都来不及穿衣，一把抱在手上就狼狈而逃。看着他穿着短衣短裤的背影和长满毛发的瘦腿，实在是有趣，还真像个醉汉的模样。

男子不应有妻。

我每听人说“我一向独居”，就觉得其人不俗；听说其为某人女婿或要带回某女同住，就极其反感。我猜想，那人其实没什么头脑，竟把平常女子认作美人，一定要迎娶回家。如果女子确实是美人，则那人必定全心全意地侍奉着，就像我侍奉佛祖一样。我这想法大体是没有错的。主持家政的女人尤其让人讨厌，生儿育女，百般宠爱，也是毫无意义的事。男人死后，女人削发为尼，其年老之丑状，就算男人死了，也很难让人接受。

不管是何种女人，与她相处久了，也会心生厌恶。从女方看来，不谈婚娶，就有悬空而无着落之感。但不同住而经常往来的男女，反而可能成为感情持久、至死不渝的伴侣。不期然而来，留宿一夜，可于双方都保有新鲜之感。

所谓入夜则无物可观的说法，是不足取的。

万物的光华、装饰与色彩，在夜晚看来更觉不同凡响。白天的装束可以简淡朴素一点，到了晚上，则以绚丽华美为佳。灯光之下，人的容颜神采看上去会美上加美。别人的谈话，在暗处听来，也更觉优雅而有味。各种香味与音乐，都在夜晚更加动人。

平时有夜深来访之人，觉得别有一番清新韵致，颇为有味。青年人无时不在打量着他人的装束容貌，特别在可以放任的场合，不分便装与盛装，都是用心打扮了的。美男子在日暮时分才开始梳头，女子也是在夜色渐深的时候才离开座位，拿出镜子来化妆。这些都很有味道。

德大寺右大臣大人任检非违使的时候，有一日在中门使厅讨论官厅公事，官人章兼牛车上的牛走脱了，来到使厅，径直走上大理所坐的滨床，卧床反刍。这是少有的怪事，众人都说应该把牛牵到阴阳师那里断一断吉凶。

大理之父相国说：“牛又不晓得人事，既然有脚，哪里不能去？”

因为这点意外就要没收小吏的牛，真是岂有此理！”于是将牛归还其主人，更换掉卧席，此后并无不吉利之事发生。

这正是“见怪不怪，其怪自败”。

世事无常，万物都不足以长久倚赖。执迷不悟的人深信此生有物可恃，必争为己有，于是心生怨怒之情。

实则权势不可倚赖，因为强者先亡；财富不可倚赖，因为可以轻易散尽；才学不可倚赖，因为孔子也有怀才不遇的时候；德行不可倚赖，因为颜回也是不幸之人；君王的宠幸不可倚赖，因为说不准何时会有杀身之祸；奴仆的恭顺不可倚赖，因为难免有叛逃的事发生；人的志向不可倚赖，因为志向总有变化的时候；说好的事，不可倚赖，因为守信的人太少。

既然自己与他人都不可靠，那么时运来时固然可喜，时运背时也不要抱怨。左右广大才无障碍，前后远阔方能通畅。若置身于逼仄处，则容易有冲突毁损；若用心于狭隘处，则不能舒坦通泰；拂逆他人而与之相争，则容易伤及身体。若能心宽而性柔，才可以毫发无损。

人为天地灵长，天地无限，人之心性也一样。人心如能广大无垠，则不为喜怒所羁绊，也不为外物所烦扰。

丹波有个地方叫出云，有个大神社迁移来此，建筑极为雄伟。此地是名为志太的人的任职之地，到了秋天，这个志太就邀请圣海上人等一众人，说：“敬请光临出云之神社，将以萩饼款待诸君。”于是带着众人来到了神社。众人于社中各处参拜，深为震服，无不肃然起敬。

神社前有一狮子和一狛犬之石像，二者相背而立。上人看了极为感动，含着眼泪说：“善哉善哉，这狮犬的立向，实为罕见，必有其深意在，诸君若不注意此稀有之景，实在可惜！”

众人也觉得奇怪，都说：“确实和别的地方不同，回去后一定要把这地方的胜景告诉都中人士。”

上人还想追究它的来由，就叫来一位看着体体面面、博学多闻的神官，问道：“贵社的狮子如此安放，是有什么来由的吧？愿闻其详。”

神官回答说：“这实在是顽童所为，真是岂有此理！”于是上前将

狮子与狍犬的方向调回到正面相对的原状。

上人的感动之泪，算是白流了。

男女之于暗夜私会，既怕人见到，又怕人听到，但心中恋情之强烈，不见不行。此种情形于日后必然永难忘怀。如是那种经父母兄弟同意了明媒正娶，就让人扫兴得很了。

有迫于生计的女子，因贪慕钱财，就托人对根本不相配的老法师或乡巴佬说：“愿奉君之箕帚。”媒人也两头说好话，尽力撮合，于是把这素不相识的女子迎娶回来。这真是难以接受的事。这样的夫妇之间，有什么话可说呢？夫妇之间，能够一起回忆当年恋爱如何辛苦，如何担惊受怕地只求一见的情形，那才叫情深意永呢。

凡是由他人撮合的夫妇，不免会厌恶对方，常常闹得不愉快。若本是品貌俱无的老朽，把年轻貌美的女子娶回来，想着这么个美女竟下嫁我这副德行的人，心中恐怕也会不太自在吧？品貌都不如人，相比之下，必定会自惭形秽，这样过着真没什么意思。

梅香暗吐、月色朦胧之夜，伫立在她身旁；或任由宅垣旁的草露沾湿了衣裳，和她一起踏着晓月回去——没有这些可供追忆的往事，还不如不要谈情说爱。

十五的满月瞬间即亏，不留心观察的人是看不到月在一夜中的变化的。

人在重病之时，病况也是时刻都在变化，不觉就濒于死亡。

当病情还不至于致命，就习惯性地想着存世之日还长久，还可以完成若干心愿，然后再潜心修佛；当病情加重，快迈进鬼门关时，自己还一事无成，才后悔一向的懈怠，想着这次若能痊愈，保住一命，一定要夜以继日、勇猛精进，完成这件事、那件事；虽然发了这些誓，但病情突然恶化，神志不清，行为失控，最终还是过世了。世上的人，以这样的人居多。所以最紧要而需要牢记的事是：

人都想完成了各种心愿后，再把余下的时间用以事佛，但人的心愿是无穷无尽的。在变幻莫测的一生中，能做成什么事呢？一切愿望都是妄想。愿望的产生，源于心的迷乱，所以一桩也不要去做。要立即放下一切，一心向佛，心中才坦然无碍；只有一无所为，才能保全身心的宁静。

我八岁的时候曾问家父：“什么是佛？”

家父回答：“佛是人所化。”

我又问：“人怎么才能化为佛呢？”

家父又回答说：“遵从佛的教诲就可以成佛。”

我又问：“教人的佛，又是谁教的呢？”

家父又回答说：“是他之前的佛教的。”

我又问：“那么第一个教人成佛的佛是什么样的呢？”

家父大笑着说：“要不是从天上掉下来的，就是从地里冒出来的，谁知道呢！”

后来家父在与众人笑谈时说：“追问到这地步，就实在无法回答了。”

[1] 摄政是指在天皇年幼时，帮助处理国政的大臣官职，关白则是在天皇成年后，帮助处理国政的大臣官职。此处意指一人担任了两种职务，也可简称为“摄关”。（说明：书中脚注除特别标明的之外，均为编者注。）

[2] 此处指的应是后德大寺左大臣藤原实定。他的祖父因修建德大寺而被称为“德大寺左大臣”。

[3] 日本民间将一年划分为十二个月，相当于我们的农历节气，神无月对应的是农历十月。

[4] 大袂即大袂式，每年日本各大神社都会举行两次的祭祀仪式。一次在夏越晦日，另一次在大晦日（过年之袂）。夏越大袂旨在将上半年积累的晦气和过错清除，平安的迎来下半年，也顺利度过容易生病的夏季。

[5] 此处微妙暗示了男色关系。日本自古以来男色文化兴盛，尤以稚子受人欢迎。——译者注

A Cup of Sake Beneath the Cherry Trees

What strange folly, to beguile the tedious hours like this all day before my ink stone, jotting down at random the idle thoughts that cross my mind . . .

To be born into this world of ours, it seems, brings with it so much to long for.

The rank of emperor is, of course, unspeakably exalted; even his remotest descendants fill one with awe, having sprung from no mere human seed.

Needless to say, the great ruler, and even the lesser nobles who are granted attendant guards to serve them, are also thoroughly magnificent. Their children and grandchildren too are still impressive, even if they have come down in the world. As for those of lesser degree, although they may make good according to their rank, and put on airs and consider themselves special, they are really quite pathetic.

No one could be less enviable than a monk. Sei Shōnagon wrote that people treat them like unfeeling lumps of wood, and this is perfectly true. And there is nothing impressive about the way those with power will throw their weight around. As the holy man Sōga, I think, remarked, fame and fortune are an affliction for a monk, and violate the Buddha's teachings.

There is much to admire, though, in a dedicated recluse.

It is most important to present well, in both appearance and bearing. One never tires of spending time with someone whose speech is attractive and pleasing to the ear, and who does not talk overmuch. There is nothing worse than when someone you thought impressive reveals himself as lacking in sensibility. Status and personal appearance are things one is born with, after all, but surely the inner man can always be improved with effort. It is a great shame to see a fine upstanding fellow fall in with low and ugly types who easily run rings round him, and all for want of cultivation and learning.

A man should learn the orthodox literature, write poetry in Chinese as well as Japanese, and study music, and should ideally also be a model to others in his familiarity with ceremonial court customs and precedents. He should write a smooth, fair hand, carry the rhythm well when songs are sung at banquets, and when offered sake, make a show of declining it but nevertheless be able to drink.

No matter how splendid in every way, there is something dreadfully lacking in a man who does not pursue the art of love. He is, to coin the old phrase, like a beautiful wine cup that lacks a base.

The elegant thing is for a lover to wander aimlessly hither and yon, drenched with the frosts or dews of night, tormented by fears of his parents' reproaches and the censure of the world, the heart beset with uncertainties, yet for all that sleeping often alone, though always fitfully.

On the other hand, he shouldn't lose himself to love too thoroughly, or gain the reputation of being putty in women's hands.

If our life did not fade and vanish like the dews of Adashino's graves or the drifting smoke from Toribe's burning grounds, but lingered on for ever, how little the world would move us. It is the ephemeral nature of things that makes them wonderful.

Among all living creatures, it is man that lives longest. The brief dayfly dies before evening; summer's cicada knows neither spring nor autumn. What a glorious luxury it is to taste life to the full for even a single year. If you constantly regret life's passing, even a thousand long years will seem but the dream of a night.

Why cling to a life which cannot last for ever, only to arrive at ugly old age? The longer you live, the greater your share of shame. It is most seemly to die before forty at the latest. Once past this age, people develop an urge to mix with others without the least shame at their own unsightliness; they spend their dwindling years fussing adoringly over their children and grandchildren, hoping to live long enough to see them make good in the world. Their greed for the things of this world grows ever deeper, till they lose all ability to be moved by life's pathos, and become really quite disgraceful.

Nothing so distracts the human heart as sexual desire. How foolish men's hearts are!

Aroma, for instance, is a mere transient thing, yet a whiff of delightful incense from a woman's robes will always excite a man, though he knows perfectly well that it is just a passing effect of robe-smoking.

The wizard priest of Kume is said to have lost his supernatural powers when he spied the white legs of a woman as she squatted washing clothes. I can quite believe it – after all, the beautiful, plump, glowing flesh of a woman's arm or leg is quite a different matter from some artificial allurements.

Beautiful hair on a woman will draw a man's gaze – but we can judge what manner of person she is and the nature of her sensibility even by simply hearing her speak from behind a screen. A mere unintended glimpse of a woman can distract a man's heart; and if a woman sleeps fitfully, and is prepared to endure impossible difficulties heedless of her own well-being, it is all because her mind is on love.

Yes indeed, the ways of love lie deep in us. Many are the allurements of our senses, yet we can distance ourselves from them all. But among them this one alone seems without exception to plague us all, young and old, wise and foolish.

So it is that we have those tales of how a woman's hair can snare and hold even an elephant, or how the rutting stag of autumn will always be drawn by the sound of a flute made from the wood of a woman's shoe.

We must discipline ourselves to be constantly prudent and vigilant lest we fall into this trap.

Though a home is of course merely a transient habitation, a place that is set up in beautiful taste to suit its owner is a delightful thing.

Even the moonlight is so much the more moving when it shines into a house where a refined person dwells in tranquil elegance. There is nothing fashionable or showy about the place, it is true, yet the grove of trees is redolent of age, the plants in the carefully untended garden carry a hint of delicate feelings, while the veranda and openweave fence are tastefully done, and inside the house the casually disposed things have a tranquil, old-fashioned air. It is all most refined.

How ugly and depressing to see a house that has employed a bevy of craftsmen to work everything up to a fine finish, where all the household items set out for proud display are rare and precious foreign or Japanese objects, and where even the plants in the garden are clipped and contorted rather than left to grow as they will. How could anyone live for long in such a place? The merest glimpse will provoke the thought that all this could go up in smoke in an instant.

Yes, on the whole you can tell a great deal about the owner from his home.

The Later Tokudaiji Minister once had rope strung over the roof of the main house to stop the kites from roosting on it. 'What could be wrong with having kites on your roof? This shows what manner of man he is!' exclaimed the poet-monk Saigyō, and it is said he never called there again. I was reminded of this story when I noticed once that Prince Ayanokōji had laid rope over his Kosaka residence. Someone told me, however, that it was because he pitied the frogs in his pond when he observed how crows gathered on the roof to catch them. I was most impressed. Perhaps the Tokudaiji Minister too might have had some such reason for acting as he did?

One day in the tenth month, I went to call on someone in a remote mountain village beyond Kurusuno.

Making my way along the mossy path, I came at length to the lonely hut where he lived. There was not a sound except for the soft drip of water from a bamboo pipe buried deep in fallen leaves. The vase on the altar shelf with its haphazard assortment of chrysanthemums and sprigs of autumn leaves bespoke someone's presence.

Moved, I said to myself, 'One could live like this' – but my mood was then somewhat spoiled by noticing at the far end of the garden a large mandarin tree, branches bowed with fruit, that was firmly protected by a stout fence. If only that tree weren't there! I thought.

What happiness to sit in intimate conversation with someone of like mind, warmed by candid discussion of the amusing and fleeting ways of this world . . . but such a friend is hard to find, and instead you sit there doing your best to fit in with whatever the other is saying, feeling deeply alone.

There is some pleasure to be had from agreeing with the other in general talk that interests you both, but it's better if he takes a slightly different position from yours. 'No, I can't agree with that,' you'll say to each other combatively, and you'll fall into arguing the matter out. This sort of lively discussion is a pleasant way to pass the idle hours, but in fact most people tend to grumble about things different from oneself, and though you can put up with the usual boring platitudes, such men are far indeed from the true friend after your own heart, and leave you feeling quite forlorn.

It is a most wonderful comfort to sit alone beneath a lamp, book spread before you, and commune with someone from the past whom you have never met.

As to books – those moving volumes of Wenxuan, the Wenji of Bai Juyi, the words of Laozi and Zhuangzi. There are many moving works from our own land, too, by scholars of former times.

It is an excellent thing to live modestly, shun luxury and wealth and not lust after fame and fortune. Rare has been the wise man who was rich.

In China once there was a man by the name of Xu You, who owned nothing and even drank directly from his cupped hands. Seeing this, someone gave him a 'singing gourd' to use as a cup; he hung it in a tree, but when he heard it singing in the wind one day he threw it away, annoyed by the noise it made, and went back to drinking his water from his hands. What a free, pure spirit!

Sun Chen had no bedclothes to sleep under in the winter months, only a bundle of straw which he slept in at night and put away again each morning.

The Chinese wrote these stories to hand down to later times because they found them so impressive. No one bothers to tell such tales in our country.

The changing seasons are moving in every way.

Everyone seems to feel that 'it is above all autumn that moves the heart to tears', and there is some truth in this, yet surely it is spring that stirs the heart more profoundly. Then, birdsong is full of the feel of spring, the plants beneath the hedges bud into leaf in the warm sunlight, the slowly deepening season brings soft mists, while the blossoms at last begin to open, only to meet with ceaseless winds and rain that send them flurrying restlessly to earth. Until the leaves appear on the boughs, the heart is endlessly perturbed.

The scented flowering orange is famously evocative, but it is above all plum blossom that has the power to carry you back to moments of cherished memory. The exquisite kerria, the hazy clusters of wisteria blossom – all these things linger in the heart.

Someone has said that at the time of the Buddha's birthday and the Kamo festival in the fourth month, when the trees are cool with luxuriant new leaf, one is particularly moved by the pathos of things and by a longing for others, and indeed it is true. And who could not be touched to melancholy in the fifth month, when the sweet flag iris leaves are laid on roofs, and the rice seedlings are planted out, and the water rail's knocking call is heard? The sixth month is also moving, with white evening- glory blooming over the walls of poor dwellings, and the smoke from smouldering smudge fires. The purifications of the sixth month are also delightful.

The festival of Tanabata is wonderfully elegant. Indeed so many things happen together in autumn – the nights grow slowly more chill, wild geese come crying over, and when the bush clover begins to yellow the early rice is harvested and hung to dry. The morning after a typhoon has blown through is also delightful.

Writing this, I realize that all this has already been spoken of long ago in The Tale of Genji and The Pillow Book – but that is no reason not to say it again. After all, things thought but left unsaid only fester inside you. So I let my brush run on like this for my own foolish solace; these pages deserve to be torn up and discarded, after all, and are not something others will ever see.

To continue – the sight of a bare wintry landscape is almost as lovely as autumn. It is delightful to see fallen autumn leaves scattered among the plants by the water's edge, or vapour rising from the garden stream on a morning white with frost. It is also especially moving to observe everyone bustling about at year's end, preparing for the new year. And then there is the forlornly touching sight of the waning moon around the twentieth day, hung in a clear, cold sky, although people consider it too dreary to look at. The Litany of Buddha Names and the Presentation of Tributes are thoroughly moving and magnificent, and in fact all the numerous court ceremonies and events at around this time, taking place as they do amidst the general end- of- year bustle, present an impressive sight. The way the Worship of the Four Directions follows so quickly upon the Great Demon Expulsion is wonderful too.

In the thick darkness of New Year's Eve, people light pine torches and rush about, so fast that their feet virtually skim the ground, making an extraordinary racket for some reason, and knocking on everyone's doors until late at night – but then at last around dawn all grows quiet, and you savour the touching moment of saying farewell to the old year. I was moved to find that in the East they still perform the ritual for dead souls on the night when the dead are said to return, although these days this has ceased to be done in the capital.

And so, watching the new year dawn in the sky, you are stirred by a sense of utter newness, although the sky looks no different from yesterday's. It is also touching to see the happy sight of new year pines gaily decorating the houses all along the main streets.

A certain recluse monk once remarked, 'I have relinquished all that ties me to the world, but the one thing that still haunts me is the beauty of the sky.' I can quite see why he would feel this.

How mutable the flower of the human heart, a fluttering blossom gone before the breeze's touch – so we recall the bygone years when the heart of another was our close companion, each dear word that stirred us then still unforgotten; and yet, it is the way of things that the beloved should move into worlds beyond our own, a parting far sadder than from the dead. Thus did Mozi grieve over a white thread that the dye would alter for ever, and at the crossroads Yang Zhu lamented the path's parting ways.

In Retired Emperor Horikawa's collection of one hundred poems, we read:

Where once I called on her	mukashi mishi
the garden fence is now in ruins–	imo ga kakine wa flowering there I find	arenikeri only wild violets, woven through no	tsubana majiri
with rank spring grasses. shite	sumire nomi

Such is the desolate scene that once must have met the poet's eye.

Nothing is sadder than the aftermath of a death.

How trying it is to be jammed in together in some cramped and inconvenient mountain establishment for the forty- nine- day mourning period, performing the services for the dead. Never have the days passed faster. On the final day everyone is gruff and uncommunicative; each becomes engrossed in the importance of his own tidying and packing, then all go their separate ways. Once home again, the family will face all manner of fresh sorrows.

People go about warning each other of the various things that should be ritually avoided for the sake of the family. What a way to talk, at such a time! Really, what a wretched thing the human heart is!

Even with the passage of time the deceased is in no way forgotten, of course, but 'the dead grow more distant with each day', as the saying goes. And so, for all the memories, it seems our sorrow is no longer as acute as at death, for we begin to chatter idly and laugh again.

The corpse is buried on some deserted mountainside, we visit it only at the prescribed times, and soon moss has covered the grave marker, the grave is buried under fallen leaves, and only the howling evening winds and the moon at night come calling there.

It is all very well while there are those who remember and mourn the dead, but soon they too pass away; the descendants only know of him by hearsay, so they are hardly likely to grieve over his death. Finally, all ceremonies for him cease, no one any longer knows who he was or even his name, and only the grasses of each passing spring grow there to move the sensitive to pity; at length even the graveyard pine that sobbed in stormy winds is cut for firewood before its thousand years are up, the ancient mound is levelled by the plough, and the place becomes a field. The last trace of the grave itself has finally disappeared. It is sad to think of.

One morning after a beautiful fall of snow, I had reason to write a letter to an acquaintance, but I omitted to make any mention of the snow. I was delighted when she responded, 'Do you expect me to pay any attention to the words of someone so perverse that he fails to enquire how I find this snowy landscape? What deplorable insensitivity!'

The lady is no longer alive, so I treasure even this trifling memory.

Around the twentieth day of the ninth month, someone invited me along to view the moon with him. We wandered and gazed until first light. Along the way, my companion came upon a house he remembered. He had his name announced, and in he went. In the unkempt and dew- drenched garden, a hint of casual incense lingered in the air. It was all movingly redolent of a secluded life.

In due course my companion emerged, but the elegance of the scene led me to stay a little longer and watch from the shadows. Soon the double doors opened a fraction wider; it seemed the lady was gazing at the moon. It would have been very disappointing had she immediately bolted the doors as soon as the visit was over. She could not know that someone would still be watching. Such sensibility could only be the fruit of a habitual attitude of mind.

I heard that this lady died not long after.

It is foolish to be in thrall to fame and fortune, engaged in painful striving all your life with never a moment of peace and tranquillity.

Great wealth will drive you to neglect your own well- being in pursuit of it. It is asking for harm and tempting trouble. Though you leave behind at your death a mountain of gold high enough to prop up the North Star itself, it will only cause problems for those who come after you. Nor is there any point in all those pleasures that delight the eyes of fools. Big carriages, fat horses, glittering gold and jewels – any man of sensibility would view such things as gross stupidity. Toss your gold away in the mountains; hurl your jewels into the deep. Only a complete fool is led astray by avarice.

Everyone would like to leave their name unburied for posterity – but the high- born and exalted are not necessarily fine people, surely. A dull, stupid person can be born into a good house, attain high status thanks to opportunity and live in the height of luxury, while many wonderfully wise and saintly men choose to remain in lowly positions, and end their days without ever having met with good fortune. A fierce craving for high status and position is next in folly to the lust for fortune.

We long to leave a name for our exceptional wisdom and sensibility – but when you really think about it, desire for a good reputation is merely revelling in the praise of others. Neither those who praise us nor those who denigrate will remain in the world for long, and others who hear their opinions will be gone in short order as well. Just who should we feel ashamed before, then? Whose is the recognition we should crave? Fame in fact attracts abuse and slander. No, there is nothing to be gained from leaving a lasting name. The lust for fame is the third folly.

Let me now say a few words, however, to those who dedicate themselves to the search for knowledge and the desire for understanding. Knowledge leads to deception; talent and ability only serve to increase earthly desires. Knowledge acquired by listening to others or through study is not true knowledge. So what then should we call knowledge? Right and wrong are simply part of a single continuum. What should we call good? One who is truly wise has no knowledge or virtue, nor honour nor fame. Who then will know of him, and speak of him to others? This is not because he hides his virtue and pretends foolishness – he is beyond all distinctions such as wise and foolish, gain and loss.

I have been speaking of what it is to cling to one's delusions and seek after fame and fortune. All things of this phenomenal world are mere illusion. They are worth neither discussing nor desiring.

A certain novice monk in Inaba was rumoured to have a beautiful daughter, and many men came asking for her hand. But the girl ate nothing but chestnuts and never touched grains, so her father declared that she was too eccentric to be marriageable, and rejected them all.

When I went to see the horse racing at the Kamo Shrine on the fifth day of the fifth month, the view from our carriage was blocked by a throng of common folk. We all got down and moved towards the fence for a better view, but that area was particularly crowded and we couldn't make our way through.

We then noticed a priest who had climbed a chinaberry tree across the way to sit in its fork and watch from there. He was so sleepy as he clung there that he kept nodding off, and only just managed to start awake in time to save himself from falling each time. Those who saw him couldn't believe their eyes. 'What an extraordinary fool!' they all sneered. 'How can a man who's perched up there so precariously among the branches relax so much that he falls asleep?'

A thought suddenly occurred to me. 'Any of us may die from one instant to the next,' I said, 'and in fact we are far more foolish than this priest – here we are, contentedly watching the world go by, oblivious to death.'

'That's so true,' said those in front of me. 'It's really very stupid, isn't it,' and they turned around and invited me in and made room for me.

Anyone can have this sort of insight, but at that particular moment it came as a shock, which is no doubt why people were so struck by it. Humans are not mere insensate beings like trees or rocks, after all, and on occasion things can really strike home.

Those who feel the impulse to pursue the path of enlightenment should immediately take the step, and not defer it while they attend to all the other things on their mind. If you say to yourself, 'Let's just wait until after this is over,' or 'While I'm at it I'll just see to that,' or 'People will criticize me about such- and- such so I should make sure it's all dealt with and causes no problem later,' or 'There's been time enough so far, after all, and it won't take long just to wait a little longer while I do this. Let's not rush into things,' one imperative thing after another will occur to detain you. There will be no end to it all, and the day of decision will never come.

In general, I find that reasonably sensitive and intelligent people will pass their whole life without taking the step they know they should. Would anyone with a fire close behind him choose to pause before fleeing? In a matter of life and death, one casts aside shame, abandons riches and runs. Does mortality wait on our choosing? Death comes upon us more swiftly than fire or flood.

There is no escaping it. Who at that moment can refuse to part with all they love – aged parents, beloved children, lord and master, or the love of others?

The holy man of Shosha had accumulated such merit through recitations of The Lotus Sutra that he had attained purity of the Six Senses.

Once, on a journey, he entered the lodging where he was to stay the night and heard the bubbling of a pot of beans being boiled over a fire made from their husks. 'We're so closely related and yet you boil us so brutally!' they were crying, and the bean husks crackling in the flames seemed to him to reply, 'Do you imagine we're boiling you on purpose? It's excruciating for us to be burning like this, heaven knows, but we're powerless to stop. Enough of these recriminations!'

As soon as I hear someone's name, I feel I can picture their face, but when I actually meet them no one ever looks as I had been imagining all that time.

Also, I wonder if everyone, on hearing some old tale, imagines it as taking place in a certain part of some house he knows, and identifies the characters with people he sees in life, as I do.

And is it just I who sometimes feels a conviction that what someone is saying, or what you're seeing or thinking just then, has already happened before, though you cannot remember when?

Unpleasant things – a great many things cluttering up the area where someone is sitting. A lot of brushes lying on an ink stone. A crowd of Buddhist images in a private worship hall. A large collection of stones and plants in a garden. Too many children and grandchildren in a house. Too much talk when meeting others. A long list of one's virtuous acts in a supplicatory prayer.

Things that are not unpleasant in large amounts are books on a book cart, and rubbish on a rubbish heap.

What kind of man will feel depressed at being idle? There is nothing finer than to be alone with nothing to distract you.

If you follow the ways of the world, your heart will be drawn to its sensual defilements and easily led astray; if you go among people, your words will be guided by others' responses rather than come from the heart. There is nothing firm or stable in a life spent between larking about together and quarrelling, exuberant one moment, aggrieved and resentful the next. You are forever pondering pros and cons, endlessly absorbed in questions of gain and loss. And on top of delusion comes drunkenness, and in that drunkenness you dream.

Scurrying and bustling, heedless and forgetful – such are all men. Even if you do not yet understand the True Way, you can achieve what could be termed temporary happiness at least by removing yourself from outside influences, taking no part in the affairs of the world, calming yourself and stilling the mind. As The Great Cessation and Insight says, we must 'break all ties with everyday life, human affairs, the arts and scholarship'.

I cannot bear the way people will make it their business to know all the details of some current rumour, even though it has nothing to do with them, and then proceed to pass the story on and do their best to learn more. Wandering monks up from some provincial backwater seem particularly adept at prying into tales about others as if it was their own concern, and spreading the word in such detail that you wonder how on earth they came to know so much.

Nor can I bear the way people will spread excited rumours about the latest marvels. A refined person will not learn of things until the rumours are old and stale.

If someone new comes visiting, the boorish and insensitive will always manage to make the visitor feel ignorant by exchanging cryptic remarks about something they all know among themselves, some story or name, chuckling and exchanging knowing glances.

When someone complained that it was a great shame the way fine silk covers are so soon damaged, Ton'a replied, 'It is only after the top and bottom edges of the silk have frayed, or when the mother-of-pearl has peeled off the roller, that a scroll is truly impressive' – an astonishingly fine remark, I felt. Similarly, an unmatched set of bound books can be considered unattractive, but Bishop Kōyū impressed me deeply by saying that only a boring man will always want things to match; real quality lies in irregularity – another excellent remark.

In all things, perfect regularity is tasteless. Something left not quite finished is very appealing, a gesture towards the future. Someone told me that even in the construction of the imperial palace, some part is always left uncompleted.

In the Buddhist scriptures and other works written by the great men of old there are also a number of missing sections.

The Dainagon Abbot employed a young acolyte by the name of Otozuru-maru, who came to be on intimate terms with one Yasura-dono and was constantly coming and going to visit him.

One day, seeing the lad return, the abbot asked where he had been. 'I've been to see Yasura-dono,' he replied.

'Is this Yasura-dono a layman, or a monk?' enquired the abbot.

Bringing his sleeves together in a polite bow, the acolyte replied, 'I really don't know, sir. I've never seen his head.'

I wonder why not – after all, he would have seen the rest of him.

The Yin- Yang masters do not concern themselves with those days of the calendar marked 'Red Tongue Days'. Nor did people of old treat the day as unpropitious. It seems someone more recently has declared it unlucky, and now everyone has begun to avoid it, believing that things undertaken on this day will miscarry. This idea – that whatever is said or done on this day will fail, that objects gained on the day will be lost and plans made will go awry – is ridiculous. If you count the number of failures that happen on an auspicious day, you will find there are just as many.

This is because, in this transient phenomenal world with its constant change, what appears to exist in fact does not. What is begun has no end. Aims go unfulfilled, yet desire is endless. The human heart changes ceaselessly. All things are passing illusion. What is there that remains unchanging? The folly of such beliefs springs from people's inability to understand this.

It is said that evil performed on an auspicious day is always ill-fated, while good performed on an inauspicious one will be blessed by good fortune. It is people who create good fortune and misfortune, not the calendar.

A man who was studying archery took two arrows in his hand and stood before the target.

'A beginner should not hold two arrows,' his teacher told him. 'You will be careless with the first, knowing you have a second. You must always be determined to hit the target with the single arrow you shoot, and have no thought beyond this.' With only two arrows, and standing before his master, would he really be inclined to be slapdash with one of them? Yet although he may not have been aware of his own carelessness, his teacher was. The same injunction surely applies in all matters.

A man engaged in Buddhist practice will tell himself at night that there is always the morning, or in the morning will anticipate the night, always intending to make more effort later. And if such are your days, how much less aware must you be of the passing moment's indolence. Why should it be so difficult to carry something out right now when you think of it, to seize the instant?

Someone told the following tale. A man sells an ox. The buyer says he will come in the morning to pay and take the beast. But during the night, the ox dies. 'The buyer thus gained, while the seller lost,' he concluded.

But a bystander remarked, 'The owner did indeed lose on the transaction, but he profited greatly in another way. Let me tell you why. Living creatures have no knowledge of the nearness of death. Such was the ox, and such too are we humans. As it happened, the ox died that night; as it happened, the owner lived on. One day's life is more precious than a fortune's worth of money, while an ox's worth weighs no more than a goose feather. One cannot say that a man who gains a fortune while losing a coin or two has made a loss.'

Everyone laughed at this. 'That reasoning doesn't only apply to the owner of the ox,' they scoffed.

The man went on. 'Well then, if people hate death they should love life. Should we not relish each day the joy of survival? Fools forget this – they go striving after other enjoyments, cease to appreciate the fortune they have and risk all to lay their hands on fresh wealth. Their desires are never sated. There is a deep contradiction in failing to enjoy life and yet fearing death when faced with it. It is because they have no fear of death that people fail to enjoy life – no, not that they don't fear it, but rather they forget its nearness. Of course, it must be said that the ultimate gain lies in transcending the relative world with its distinction between life and death.'

At this, everyone jeered more than ever.

A lady who had reason to withdraw from the world for a time had retired to a lonely tumbledown house, where she was idling away the long days of her seclusion, when one dimly moonlit evening a certain man decided to call; but as he was creeping stealthily to her door, a dog set up a fierce barking. This brought one of the maidservants. 'Where do you hail from?' she enquired. The man promptly announced himself, and was shown in.

His heart was heavy as he took in his forlorn surroundings. How must she spend her time here? He stood hesitating on the veranda's rough wooden boards. 'This way,' came a wonderfully serene and youthful voice, so he slid open the door with some difficulty and entered.

The place was not so shabby after all, but was modest and refined. At the far end a lamp shone softly, revealing the beauty of the furnishings, and the scent of incense lit some time earlier imbued the place with an evocative and beguiling air.

He heard orders being given among the servants – ‘Take care to lock the gate. It may rain. Put the carriage under the shelter of the gate roof’ – and talk of where his retainers should spend the night. Then one added, in a soft murmur that nevertheless reached his ears because he was quite close, ‘Tonight at least we can sleep easy.’

The two spoke together of all that had happened since they last met, until the first cock crowed while it was yet night. On they talked earnestly, of matters past and to come, and now the cock’s crow was loud and persistent. The day must by now have dawned, he thought, but this was not a place he must hasten to leave before light, so he lingered on a little, until sunlight whitened the cracks in the door. At last, with promises not to forget her, he departed.

Recalling the enchanting scene, he remembers how beautifully green the trees and garden plants glowed in that early summer daybreak, and even now, whenever he passes the house, he turns to gaze until the great camphor tree in the garden is lost to sight.

A man famed for his tree- climbing skills once directed another to climb a tall tree and cut branches. While the fellow was precariously balanced aloft, the tree- climber watched without a word, but when he was descending and had reached the height of the eaves the expert called to him, ‘Careful how you go! Take care coming down!’

‘Why do you say that? He’s so far down now that he could leap to the ground from there,’ I said.

‘Just so,’ replied the tree- climber. ‘While he’s up there among the treacherous branches I need not say a word –his fear is enough to guide him. It’s in the easy places that mistakes will always occur.’

Lowly commoner though he was, his words echoed the warnings of the sages.

Apparently one of the laws of kickball also states that if you relax after achieving a difficult kick, this is the moment when the ball will always fall to the ground.

There are seven types of people one should not have as a friend.

The first is an exalted and high-ranking person. The second, somebody young. The third, anyone strong and in perfect health. The fourth, a man who loves drink. The fifth, a brave and daring warrior. The sixth, a liar. The seventh, an avaricious man.

The three to choose as friends are – one who gives gifts, a doctor and a wise man.

The domestic animals are the horse and the ox. It is a shame to tether the poor things and make them suffer, but it can't be helped, since they are indispensable to us. One should most certainly have a dog, as they are better than men at guarding the house. However, since all the houses around you will have dogs, you probably don't need to go out of your way to get one yourself.

All other creatures, be it bird or beast, are useless. When you lock an animal that runs free into a cage or chain it up, when you snip the wings of a flying bird and confine it, the beast will ceaselessly pine for the wild and the bird for the clouds. Surely no one with a heart to imagine how unbearable he himself would find it could take pleasure in these creatures' torment. It would take the stony heart of a Jie or a Zhou to enjoy witnessing the suffering of a living creature.

Wang Huizhi loved birds. He watched them frolicking happily in the forest, and made them his companions in his rambles. He did not catch them and make them suffer. We should follow the words of the classic: 'Do not cultivate rare birds or strange beasts in your own land.'

Grand Counsellor Masafusa was a fine, scholarly man, and the retired emperor was planning to promote him to Commander of the Guards, when someone in close service informed His Majesty that he had just witnessed something dreadful.

'What was it?' His Majesty enquired.

‘I watched through a gap in the fence as Count Masafusa cut off the leg of a live dog to feed to his hawk,’ the man replied.

His Majesty was appalled. The thought of Masafusa revolted him, and he was not promoted after all.

It is extraordinary that such a man would own a hawk, and the story of the dog’s leg is absolutely unfounded. The lie was most unfortunate, but how splendid of His Majesty to have reacted with such disgust when he heard the tale.

Overall, it must be said that those who kill or harm living creatures, or set them up to fight each other for their own pleasure, are no better than wild beasts themselves. If you pause and look carefully at the birds and animals, and even the little insects, you will see that they love their children, feel affection for their parents, live in couples, are jealous, angry, full of desire, self-protecting and fearful for their lives, and far more so than men, since they lack all intelligence. Surely one should pity them when they are killed or made to suffer? If you can look on any sentient being without compassion, you are less than human.

Yan Hui’s firm belief was that he must avoid burdening others. One should not cause suffering and pain to others, nor undermine the will of the humble man.

Some will take pleasure in deceiving, frightening or mocking little children. Adults treat such tales lightly, knowing that they are quite unfounded, but those words will strike deep into the heart of a poor little child, and humiliate, terrify or appal it. It is heartless to enjoy tormenting children in this way.

The joys, angers, sorrows and pleasures of adults too are all based on illusion, but who among us is not attached to the seeming reality of this life?

It harms a man more to wound his heart than to hurt his body. Illness, too, often originates in the mind. Few illnesses come from without. There are times when medicine cannot produce the intended sweat, but shame or fear will always bring one on, which should prove to us that such things come from the mind. We find examples in the classics, after all – think of the man who was hoisted up the Ling Yun Tower to write its signboard, whose hair turned white from fear at the height.

Should we look at the spring blossoms only in full flower, or the moon only when cloudless and clear? To long for the moon with the rain before you, or to lie curtained in your room while the spring passes unseen, is yet more poignant and deeply moving. A branch of blossoms on the verge of opening, a garden strewn with fading petals, have more to please the eye. Could poems on the themes of 'Going to view the blossoms to find them already fallen' or 'Written when I was prevented from going to see the flowers' be deemed inferior to 'On seeing the blossoms'? It is natural human feeling to yearn over the falling blossoms and the setting moon – yet some, it seems, are so insensitive that they will declare that since this branch and that have already shed their flowers, there is nothing worth seeing any longer.

In all things, the beginning and end are the most engaging. Does the love of man and woman suggest only their embraces? No, the sorrow of lovers parted before they met, laments over promises betrayed, long lonely nights spent sleepless until dawn, pining thoughts for one in some far place, a woman left sighing over past love in her tumbledown abode – it is these, surely, that embody the romance of love.

Rather than gazing on a clear full moon that shines over a thousand leagues, it is infinitely more moving to see the moon near dawn and after long anticipation, tinged with most beautiful palest blue, a moon glimpsed among cedar branches deep in the mountains, its light now hidden again by the gathering clouds of an autumn shower. The moist glint of moonlight on the glossy leaves of the forest shii oak or the white oak pierces the heart, and makes you yearn for the distant capital and a friend of true sensibility to share the moment with you.

Are blossoms and the moon merely things to be gazed at with the eye? No, it brings more contentment and delight to stay inside the house in spring and, there in your bedroom, let your heart go out to the unseen moonlit night.

The man of quality never appears entranced by anything; he savours things with a casual air. Country bumpkins, however, take flamboyant pleasure in everything. They will wriggle their way in through the crowd and stand there endlessly gaping up at the blossoms, sit about under the trees drinking sake and indulging in linked verse- making together and, finally, oafishly break off great branches of blossom to carry away. They will dip their hands and feet into clear spring water, get down to stand in unsullied snow and leave their footprints everywhere, and in short throw themselves into everything with uninhibited glee.

I have observed such people behaving quite astonishingly when they came to see the Kamo festival. Declaring that the procession was horribly late so there was no point in hanging around on the viewing stand, a group retired to a house behind the stands and settled down to eat, drink and play go and sugoroku, leaving one of their number back on the stand to keep watch. 'It's coming by!' he shouted, whereupon they all leaped frantically to their feet and dashed back, elbowing each other out of the way as they scrambled up, nearly tumbling off in their eagerness to thrust aside the blinds for a better look, jostling for position and craning to miss nothing, and commenting volubly on everything they saw. Then, when that section of the procession had passed, off they went again, declaring they'd be back for the next one. They were clearly only there to see the spectacle.

The upper echelons from the capital, on the other hand, will sit there dozing without so much as a glance at the scene. Young gentlemen of lesser rank are constantly rising to wait on their superiors, while those seated in the back rows never rudely lean forward, and no one goes out of his way to watch as the procession passes.

On the day of the festival everything is elegantly strewn with the emblematic aoi leaves, and even before dawn the carriages quietly begin to arrive to secure a good viewing position, everyone intrigued about which carriage is whose, sometimes identifying them by an accompanying servant or ox- boy they recognize. It is endlessly fascinating to watch the carriages come and go, some charming, others more showy. By the time evening draws in, all those rows of carriages and the people who were crammed into the stands have disappeared, and hardly a soul is left. Once the chaos of departing carriages is over, the blinds and matting are taken down from the stands as you watch, and the place is left bare and forlorn, moving you to a poignant sense of the brevity of worldly things. It is this that is the real point of seeing the festival.

Among the people coming and going in front of the stands there are many you recognize, making you realize there are not really so many people in this world. Even if you were destined to die after all these others, clearly your own death cannot be far away. When a large vessel filled with water is pierced with a tiny hole, though each drop is small it will go on relentlessly leaking until soon the vessel is empty. The city is filled with people, but not a day would go by without someone dying. And is it only one or two a day? There are times when the corpses on the pyres of Toribe, Funaoka and elsewhere further afield are piled high, but no day passes without a funeral. And so the coffin sellers no sooner make one than it is sold. Be they young, be they strong, the time of death comes upon all unawares. It is an extraordinary miracle that we have escaped it until now. Can we ever, even briefly, have peace of mind in this world?

It is like the game of mamakodate, played with sugoroku pieces, in which no one knows which in the line of pieces will be removed next – when the count is made and a piece is taken, the rest seem to have escaped, but the count goes on and more are picked off in turn, so that no piece is finally spared. Soldiers going into battle, aware of the closeness of death, forget their home and their own safety. And it is sheer folly for a man who lives secluded from the world in his lowly hut, spending his days in idle delight in his garden, to pass off such matters as irrelevant to himself. Do you imagine that the enemy Impermanence will not come forcing its way into your peaceful mountain retreat? The recluse faces death as surely as the soldier setting forth to battle.

A sensible man will not die leaving valuables behind. A collection of vulgar objects looks bad, while good ones will suggest a futile attachment to worldly things. And it is even more unfortunate to leave behind a vast accumulation. There will be ugly fights over it after your death, with everyone determined to get things for himself. If you plan to leave something to a particular person, you should pass it on while you are still alive.

Some things are necessary for day- to- day living, but one should have nothing else.

Even people who seem to lack any finer feelings will sometimes say something impressive.

An alarming- looking ruffian from the eastern provinces once turned to the man beside him and asked if he had any children. 'Not one,' the man replied.

'Well then,' said the Easterner, 'you'll not know what true depth of feeling is. It frightens me to think of a man unacquainted with tenderness. It's having your own children that brings home to you the poignant beauty of life.'

This is indeed true. Without familial love, would such a man as this be able to feel compassion? Even a man who lacks all filial piety will discover how a parent feels when he himself has children.

It is wrong for a man who has taken the tonsure and cast all away to despise those he sees around him encumbered with worldly ties, who go crawling abjectly after this person and that and are full of craving. If you imagined yourself in his place, you would see how he might abase himself so far as to steal for the sake of his beloved parents or wife and children. Rather than seizing thieves and punishing their crimes, it would be better to make the world a place where people did not go hungry or cold. A man without stable means is a man whose heart is unstable. People steal from extremity. There will be no end to crime while the world is not governed well, and men suffer from cold and starvation. It is cruel to make people suffer and drive them to break the law, then treat the poor creatures as criminals.

As for how to improve people's lives, there can be no doubt that it would benefit those below if people in high positions were to cease their luxurious and wasteful ways and instead were kind and tender to the people, and encouraged agriculture. The true criminal must be defined as a man who commits a crime though he is as decently fed and clothed as others.

The imperial bodyguard Hada no Shigemi once said of one of the retired emperor's guard, the Shimotsuke Novice Shingan, 'He has the mark of one prone to falling from horses. He should take great care.' Shingan thought this very unlikely, but he did indeed fall from his horse and die. Everyone then decided that the words issuing from such an expert in his field were divinely prophetic.

So just what was this mark? people asked him. 'He showed all the signs by having a very poor riding seat, and favouring horses that tend to buck,' replied the guard. 'Have I ever been wrong?'

It is not good to call on someone if you have no particular reason. Even if you go with some purpose, you should leave promptly once your business is accomplished. It is very annoying if a visit drags on.

There is so much talking when people get together. It is exhausting, disturbs the peace of mind and wastes time better spent on other things. There is nothing to be gained for either party. It is bad, too, to feel irritable as you talk. When you don't care for something, you should come right out and say so.

The exception to all this is when someone after your own heart, whom you feel inclined to talk with, is at a loose end and encourages you to stay a while longer for a peaceful chat. No doubt we all have Ruan Ji's 'welcoming green eyes' from time to time.

It is very nice when a friend simply drops in, has a quiet talk with you, and then leaves. It is also wonderfully pleasing to receive a letter that simply begins, 'I write because it's been some time since I sent news,' or some such.

A young man overflows with vigour, things stir his heart, and he is prone to passions. Like a flung ball, such a youth courts danger and physical harm. Riches are wasted in pursuit of magnificence, then all this is suddenly abandoned for the wretched robes of the monk; he is full of fervour and fight, suffers agonies of shame or bitterness, and his fancies are constantly shifting from day to day. He will devote himself to women and pursue infatuations, or take his example from those who have died with no thought to their own safety or longevity, behaving with such reckless daring that 'a long life lies ruined', or let himself be drawn wherever his heart urges, becoming the cause of talk for many years to come. It is indeed in youth that we make our mistakes.

In age, on the other hand, the spirit weakens, we become indifferent and apathetic, and nothing rouses us. The heart grows naturally calm, so that we no longer act in futile ways but instead tend to our bodies, live free of discontent and try to avoid troubling others. Age has more wisdom than youth, just as youth has more beauty than does age.

There are many incomprehensible things in this world.

I cannot understand why people will seize any occasion to immediately bring out the sake, delighting in forcing someone else to drink. The other will frown and grimace in painful protest, attempt to throw it away when no one's looking or do his best to escape, but this man will seize him, pin him down and make him swallow cup after cup. A genteel man will quickly be transformed into a madman and start acting the fool; a vigorous, healthy fellow will before your very eyes become shockingly afflicted and fall senseless to the floor. What a thing to do, on a day of celebration! Right into the next day his head hurts, he can't eat, and he lies there groaning with all memory of the previous day gone as if it were a former life. He neglects essential duties both public and private, with disastrous effects. It is both boorish and cruel to subject someone to this sort of misery. Surely a man who has had this bitter experience will be filled with regret and loathing. Anyone from a land that lacked this custom would be amazed and appalled to hear of its existence in another country.

It is depressing enough just to witness this happening to another. A man who had always seemed thoughtful and refined will burst into mindless laughter, prattle on and on, his lacquered court cap askew, the ties of his robes loosened and the skirts hauled up above his shins, and generally behave so obliviously that he seems a changed man. A woman will blatantly push her hair up away from her face, throw back her head and laugh quite shamelessly, and seize the hand of the person with the sake, while the more uncouth might grab one of the snacks and hold it to someone else's mouth or eat it herself – a quite disgraceful sight. People bellow at the top of their lungs, everyone sings and prances about, and an old monk is called in, who proceeds to bare his filthy black shoulder and writhe about so that you can hardly stand to watch, and you loathe just as much the others who sit there enjoying the spectacle.

Some will make you cringe by the way they sing their own praises, others will cry into their drink, while the lower orders abuse each other and get into quite shocking and appalling fights. Finally, after all manner of disgraceful and pitiful behaviour, the drunkard will seize things without permission, then end up hurting himself by rolling off the veranda or tumbling from his horse or carriage. If he's of a class that goes on foot he'll stagger away down the high road, doing unspeakable things against people's walls or gates as he goes. It is quite disgusting to see the old monk in his black robe stumbling off, steadying himself with his hand on the shoulder of the lad beside him and rambling on incomprehensibly.

If drinking like this profited us in this world or the next, what could one say? But in this world it leads to all manner of error, and causes both illness and loss of wealth. Wine has been called 'the greatest of medicines', but in fact all sickness springs from it. It is claimed that you forget your sorrows in drink, but from what I can see, men in their cups will in fact weep to recall their past unhappiness. As for the next world – having lost the wisdom you were born with, reduced all your good karma to ashes, built up a store of wickedness and broken all the Buddhist precepts, you are destined for hell. Remember, the Buddha teaches that those who lift the wine glass either to their own lips or to others' will spend five hundred lifetimes without hands.

Yet, loathsome though one finds it, there are situations when a cup of sake is hard to resist. On a moonlit night, a snowy morning, or beneath the flowering cherry trees, it increases all the pleasures of the moment to bring out the sake cups and settle down to talk serenely together over a drink. It is also a great comfort to have a drink together if an unexpected friend calls round when time is hanging heavy on your hands. And it is quite wonderful when sake and snacks are elegantly served from behind her curtains by some remote and exalted lady.

It is also quite delightful to sit across from a close friend in some cosy little nook in winter, roasting food over the coals and drinking lots of sake together. And delightful too on a journey to sit about on the grass together in some wayside hut or out in the wild, drinking and lamenting the lack of a suitable snack. And it's a fine thing when someone who really hates having sake pressed on them is forced to have just a little. You are thrilled when some grand person singles you out and offers to refill your cup, urging, 'Do have more. You've barely drunk.' And it is also very pleasing when someone you would like to get to know better is a drinker and becomes very pally with you in his cups.

All things considered, a drunkard is so entertaining he can be forgiven his sins. Think of the charming scene when a master throws open the door on his servant, who is sound asleep next morning after an exhausting night on the drink. The poor befuddled fellow rushes off, rubbing his bleary eyes, topknot exposed on his hatless head, only half dressed and clutching the rest of his trailing clothes, his hairy shins sticking out below his lifted skirts as he scampers into the distance – a typical drunk.

The one thing a man should not have is a wife.

One is impressed to hear that a certain man always lives alone, while someone who is reported to have married into this or that family, or to have taken a wife and be living together, will find himself quite looked down on. 'He must have married that nondescript girl because he thought she was something special,' people will say scornfully, or if she is a good woman they will think, 'He'll be so besotted that he treats her like his own personal buddha.' The impression is even more dreary when she runs the house well. It is depressing to watch her bear children and fuss over them, and things don't end with his death, for then you have the shameful sight of her growing old and decrepit as a nun.

No matter who the woman may be, you would grow to hate her if you lived with her and saw her day in day out, and the woman must become dissatisfied too. But if you lived separately and sometimes visited her, your feelings for each other would surely remain unchanged through the years. It keeps the relationship fresh to just drop in from time to time on impulse and spend the night.

What a shame it is to hear someone declare that things lose their beauty at night! All lustre, ornamentation and brilliance come into their own at night.

In daylight, one can keep things simple and dress sedately. But the best clothing for night is showy and dazzling formal wear. The same goes for people – a good-looking person will look still finer by lamplight, and it's charming to hear a careful voice speaking in darkness. Scents and music too are still lovelier at night.

It is a fine thing to see a man who calls on some great household looking his best late on an uneventful evening. Young people who pay attention to such things will always notice one's appearance no matter what the hour, so it is wise to dress well whatever the situation, whether formal or informal, and most especially at times when one is inclined to relax and unwind. Particularly delightful is when a fine gentleman has bothered to plaster down his hair though it is after dark, or when a lady slips from the room late at night to take up a mirror and see to her face before rejoining the company.

When the now-deceased Tokudaiji Minister of the Right was Superintendent of Police, he was one day holding court at his central gate when the ox of one of the officers, Akikane, broke loose, got into the court room, scrambled up on to the Superintendent's seating platform and there settled down to chew its cud. This was deemed a disturbingly untoward event, and everyone present declared that the beast should be taken off for Yin-Yang divination to determine the meaning.

However, when the Superintendent's father the Minister heard of this, he declared, 'An ox has no understanding. It has its four legs which can take it anywhere. There is no reason to impound a skinny beast that happens to have brought some lowly official here.' He had the ox returned to its master, and changed the matting where the ox had lain. There were no ill consequences from the event.

It is sometimes said that if you see something sinister and choose to treat it as normal, you will thereby avert whatever it portended.

Nothing in this world can be trusted. Fools put all their faith in things, and so become angry and bitter.

The powerful should place no faith in their powerful position. The strong are the first to go. The rich should never depend on their wealth. A fortune can easily disappear from one moment to the next. A scholar should never be complacent about his skills. Even Confucius did not meet with the reception he deserved. The virtuous should not rely on their virtue. Even the exemplary Yan Hui met with misfortune. Nor should those favoured by the emperor be smug. You may at any time find yourself instead faced with execution for some crime. Never rely on your servants to be loyal. They can rebel and flee. Never put your faith in others' goodwill. They will inevitably change their minds. Never depend on a promise made. People seldom keep their word.

If you rely neither on yourself nor on others, you will rejoice when things go well, and not be aggrieved when they don't. Maintain a clear space on either side, and nothing will obstruct you; keep open before and behind you, and you will be unimpeded. If you let yourself be hemmed in, you can be squeezed to breaking point. Without care and flexibility in your dealings with the world, you will find yourself in conflict and be damaged, while if you live calmly and serenely, not a hair on your head will come to harm.

Humans are the most miraculous and exalted of all things in heaven and earth. And heaven and earth are boundless. How, then, could we differ in essence? If our spirit is open and boundless, neither fear nor joy will obstruct it, and we will remain untroubled by the world.

There is a place in Tamba called Izumo, where the deity of the great Izumo Shrine has been installed in a magnificent shrine building. The area is ruled by a certain Shida, who one autumn invited a great many people, including the holy man Shōkai. 'Come and pray to Izumo,' he said, 'and let us feast on rice cakes.' He led them to the shrine, and every one of them prayed and was filled with faith.

The holy man was immensely moved by the sight of the guardian Chinese lion and Korean dog, which were placed back to back and facing backwards. 'How marvellous!' he exclaimed, close to tears. 'Such an unusual position to stand them in! There must be some deep reason behind it.' Then he turned to the others. 'How can you not have noticed this wonder?' he cried. 'I'm amazed at you.'

They were very struck. 'Yes indeed,' they all declared, 'they are different from elsewhere. We'll tell this to everyone back in the capital.'

The holy man now wished to learn more, so he called over an elderly and wise-looking shrine priest. 'There must be some interesting tale explaining the placement of these images,' he said. 'Do be so kind as to tell us.'

'Indeed there is,' replied the priest. 'Some naughty children did it. A disgraceful business,' and so saying he went over to the statues, set them to rights and walked off.

The holy man's tears of delight had been for nothing.

He whose deep love spurs him to dare all and go to his beloved, though 'watchful eyes surround the stealthy lover' and 'guards are set to snare him in the dark', will leave them both replete with powerful memories of all the moments when they tasted life's poignancy to the full. It must feel very awkward and unromantic for the woman, however, if a man simply takes her as his wife with the full consent of the family and without further ado.

How dreary it is when a woman hard up in the world announces that she will 'answer the call of any current' so long as he is well-off, be it some unsuitable old priest or an uncouth Easterner, and a go-between sets about singing the praises of each to the other, with the result that she comes to someone's house as a bride without either knowing the other at all. What on earth would they say to each other when they first come face to face? On the other hand, a couple can find endless conversation in the memories of long hardships overcome, 'forging their way through the dense autumn woods' to be together at last.

It can generally be said that a great deal of dissatisfaction results from a marriage set up by a third party. If the wife is excellent and the man a lowly and ugly old fellow, he will despise her for allowing herself to be thrown away on the likes of himself, and feel ashamed in her presence – a deplorable situation.

If you can never linger beneath the clouded moon on a plum-scented evening, nor find yourself recalling the dawns when you made your way home through the dew-soaked grasses by her gate after a night of love, you had best not aspire to be a lover at all.

The full moon's perfect roundness lasts barely a moment, and in no time is lost. Those with no eye for such things, it seems, fail to see how it changes in the course of a night.

An illness will grow graver as each moment passes, and death is already close at hand, yet while the sickness is still mild and you are not yet confronting death, you are lulled by your accustomed assumptions of a normal life in an unchanging world, and choose to wait until you have accomplished all you want in life before calmly turning your thoughts to salvation and a Buddhist practice, with the result that when you fall ill and confront death, none of your dreams has been fulfilled. Now, too late, you repent of your long years of negligence, and swear that if only you were to recover you would dedicate yourself unstintingly day and night to this thing and that – but for all your prayers your illness grows graver, until you lose your senses and die a raving death. It happens to so many of us. We must fully grasp this, here and now.

If you plan to turn your thoughts to the Buddhist Way after you have fulfilled all your desires, you will find that those desires are endless. What could be achieved, in this illusory life of ours? All desire is delusion. If desires arise within you, realize that they spring from your lost and deluded mind, and ignore them all. Relinquish all today and turn to the Buddhist path, and you will be freed of all obstruction, released from the need for action, and lasting peace will be yours body and soul.

*

The year I turned eight, I asked my father, 'What sort of thing is a buddha?'

'A buddha is what a human becomes,' he replied.

'How does a human become a buddha?' I asked.

'You become a buddha by following the Buddha's teaching,' he answered.

'So who taught the Buddha?' I asked.

'He became a buddha by following the teaching of previous buddhas,' he said.

'So what sort of buddha was the first one who began the teaching?' I asked.

My father laughed and replied, 'I suppose he just fell from the sky like rain or rose out of the earth like water.'

He used to enjoy recounting this story to others, adding, 'He had me cornered. I couldn't think what to reply.'

《弥尔顿》序诗

要是远古时那些圣足
曾在英格兰的群山上徜徉；
要是那神圣的上帝的羊羔
到过英格兰的快乐的牧场！

那张神圣的脸庞可曾
照亮我们阴云中的山峦？
耶路撒冷可曾建起，在这些
昏暗的撒旦的磨坊 ^[1] 之间？

把我那灼亮的金弓带给我，
把我那愿望的箭矢带给我，
带给我长矛，招展的云彩呀！
把我那烈火的战车带给我！

我不会停止内心的战斗，
我的剑也不会手中安眠，
直到我们建立起耶路撒冷， 在英格兰青翠而快乐的地面。

[1] “磨坊”一语双关，原文mill也指工厂。（说明：书中脚注除特别标明的之外均为译者注。）

我看见一座全金的教堂

我看见一座全金的教堂，
谁也没有胆量进去，
许多人悲叹着站在外面，
悲叹，哀哭，膜拜顶礼。

我看见一条巨蛇出现
在那些白色门柱中间，
他用力挤呀挤呀挤呀，
终于挤落了黄金的铰链。

沿着可爱的，铺满珍珠
以及灿灿宝石的通道，
他伸直他那黏滑的蛇身，
直伸到白色的祭坛上面。

他向外喷射出他的毒液，
喷在面包和啤酒上面，
于是我折进了一个猪圈，
躺在那些猪猡中间。

“我死了，我死了。”母亲说道

“我死了，我死了。”母亲说道，
“我的孩子们将因饥馑而亡！
那不仁的暴君还说了些什么？”
修士坐在她冰硬的床上。

他眼睛枯涩，泪已哭干，
一声长叹道破了悲伤。
他在床上瑟瑟地颤抖，
最后无力地开始哭讲：

“在勤学的深夜，当这双手
受命于上帝而写作的时候，
他说我写下的一切将证明
尘世间我所爱的一切的毒性。

“我兄弟求生无门而饿死，
他的孩子们哭得我心悸；
我嘲笑那嘎嘎响的破旧锁链，
我伛偻的身体嘲笑酷刑的熬煎。

“你父亲在北方拔出利剑，
率万千壮士奋勇向前；
你兄弟已操起钢铁的武器，
要报复你的孩子们所受的冤屈。

“但利剑和弓矢无济于我们，
它们永不能打倒战争；
唯隐士的祈祷和寡妇的泪滴
才能使这世界摆脱恐惧。”

复仇的手在那床上搜，
穿紫袍的暴君闻声逃走。
铁手捏碎了暴君的头颈，
又取而代之成了暴君。

天真之歌

(1789)

序诗

吹着笛儿，我走下野谷，
欢乐的笛声随风轻飘。
我看见云彩上有个小孩 [\[1\]](#)，
孩子他笑着，向我说道：

“吹个歌唱小羊羔的歌！”
我兴高采烈地吹了一曲。
“再吹，再吹一次那歌儿！”
我又吹时他淌下了泪滴。

“放下笛儿，那快乐的笛儿，
唱吧，唱唱那快乐的小曲。”
于是我就唱，唱那首歌，
他听着，淌下了喜悦的泪滴。

“吹笛的人，坐下来写吧，
写成一本书，大家都能看。”
他刚说完，便隐去了形象，
我折下一根空心的芦管。

做出来一支土造水笔，
在笔中注满清清河水，
我用它写下快乐的歌谣，
孩子们都能高兴地听到。

[1] 指耶稣。

牧羊人

牧人的好运多么美妙！
从早到晚他到处游荡；
他须整天跟随着羊群，
他的口中要充满颂扬——

他听到羔羊天真地叫，
他听到母羊纤柔地嚷；
他警觉着：它们安然无忧——
因为知道牧人就在近旁。

回音草坪

太阳升起，
使天空欢喜；
钟声欢鸣， 将春天欢迎；
云雀和鸫鸟，
灌木林中的小鸟，
到处高声唱——
和着欢欣的钟鸣；
我们就开始游戏
在那回音草坪。

满头白发的老约翰
无忧无虑地笑着，
坐在橡树下面，
坐在老人们中间；
他们笑我们嬉闹，
不久他们都说道：
“这样，这样作乐还是
当我们，全都年纪轻轻，
还是孩子时干的事，
在这回音草坪。”

直到小家伙们倦了，
再也提不起兴致；

太阳也落山了，
游戏才跟着完事。
妈妈们的裙兜周围，
围满了兄弟姐妹；
像鸟儿回到了窝里，
即将进入梦境；
看不到还有人游戏
在那渐黑的草坪。

羔羊

小羊羔儿，谁造了你？

你可知道是谁造了你？

给了你生命，吩咐你吃草，
在流水旁边，遍青青草地；
给了你人见人爱的衣裳，
茸茸的衣裳，鲜艳又柔软；
给了你那么柔和的声音，
让所有的溪谷听了都喜欢；

小羊羔儿，谁造了你？

你可知道是谁造了你？

小羊羔儿，我来告诉你，

小羊羔儿，我来告诉你：

他的名字和你的一样，
因为他叫自己羊羔羔儿；
他又柔顺，他又温和，
他变成了一个小小孩儿：
我是小孩儿，你是羊羔儿，
我们全都叫他的名儿。

小羊羔儿，上帝保佑你。

小羊羔儿，上帝保佑你。

黑人小孩

我妈妈生我在南方荒凉的地方，
我黑，可是啊！我的灵魂洁白；
白得像天使的是英国人的孩子，
可我黑，黑得好像失去了光彩。

在白昼的暑热中，妈妈坐着，
在一棵树下面她谆谆教导我；
她将我抱在膝上，把我亲吻，
她指着东方，开始对我诉说。

“看升起的太阳！那儿住着上帝，
他放射出光明，放射出热；
花草树木、飞禽走兽和人们
清晨得安慰，正午时分得欢乐。

“我们被安置在一块小小的天地，
我们可学着感受爱的光辉；
而这黑黑的肢体，晒黑的面容，
只是一片云，也像是多荫的树丛。

“当我们的灵魂学会忍受暑热，
那云会消散，他将召唤我们：
‘走出树林来吧，我的爱和担忧，
羔羊般快乐地围着我金色的帐篷。’”

妈妈亲着我，对我说了这些话。
我便这样对英国人的孩子谈讲：
当从黑云 [1]、他从白云 [2] 得到解放，
羔羊般快乐地围着上帝的篷帐，

我会为他遮阴，到他能忍受热，
能够快乐地倚着父亲 [3] 的膝盖；
我将站着，抚摸着他的银发，
变得像他一样，得到他的爱。

[1] 指躯体。

[2] 指躯体。

[3] 指上帝。

鲜花

欢乐的欢乐的小雀，
在那么绿的叶子下面，
一朵幸福的花儿
见到你箭一样迅捷，
寻找你狭小的巢穴，
靠近我的心儿。

美丽的美丽的欧鸽，
在那么绿的叶子下面，
一朵幸福的花儿
听到你啜泣，啜泣，
美丽的美丽的欧鸽，
靠近我的心儿。

扫烟囱的孩子

我妈死去的时候我还很小，
我爸卖了我，那时我的小嘴
还叫不出“扫，扫，扫，扫”，
于是你的烟囱我扫，烟灰里我睡。

有个小汤姆长着羊毛般的鬃发，
剃光头时他哭得伤心，我就对他说：
“嘘，别介意，汤姆，光着头就知道
烟灰糟蹋不了你淡色的头发啦。”

他安静了下来。就在那天夜里，
汤姆在梦中见到这样的景象：
扫烟囱的孩子迪克、乔、小凯……
千万个全被关进黑洞洞的棺材。

后来，来了个带着亮钥匙的天使，
他打开棺材，让他们自由地离去，
他们穿过原野，跳呀，笑呀，
在清清河水中洗澡，在阳光中沐浴。
再光着白净的身子，扔了烟灰袋，
升上云端，在风中追逐游戏；
天使告诉汤姆，只要是好孩子，
就会有上帝做父亲，再不缺欢娱。

汤姆醒了，我们在黑暗中起身，
背着烟灰袋，拿起扫帚去干活。
早晨虽冷，汤姆却又暖和又愉快，
所以尽本分了，就不必怕受到伤害。

男童之失

“爸爸，爸爸，你去哪儿呀？
你别走这么快啊。
讲话呀爸爸，和你的儿讲话，
不然我会迷失啦。”

天黑了，哪里有什么爸爸。
孩子被露水沾湿了。
泥泞很深，孩子哭起来， 幻象也跟着消失了。

男童之得

小男孩迷失在孤寂的沼泽里，
向摇曳的灯光走去，
他哭着，但永在的上帝出现了，
像父亲，穿着白衣。

他吻了孩子，搀着他的手，
带领他去妈妈那里：
她正愁苦地在孤寂的山谷中
哭泣着找她的孩子。

笑歌

当绿色的树林以欢快的声音笑着，
那微波荡漾的流水笑着跑过，
当大气以我们的欢声笑语笑着，
绿色的山冈以它的喧声笑着，

当草地以它生动的绿色笑着，
蚱蜢在那欢乐的景象中笑着，
当玛丽，苏珊，还有爱弥丽她们
以甜蜜的小嘴唱着：“哈哈——嗨！”

当色彩瑰丽的鸟儿在林荫中笑着，
放着樱桃和栗子的餐桌已摆开，
来住下吧，高高兴兴，和我一块儿，
齐声欢唱那悦耳的：“哈哈——嗨！”

摇篮曲

甜蜜的梦儿，成一片暗影
罩在我可爱的婴儿头顶；
甜蜜地梦见怡人的流水，
借着幸福的静月的光辉。

甜蜜的睡眠，用柔软的绒羽
将你的眉编织成童稚花冠。
甜蜜的睡眠啊温柔的天使，
在幸福的孩儿上空盘旋。

甜蜜的微笑，在这夜间
在我的欢乐之上空盘旋；
甜蜜的微笑啊母亲的微笑，
哄走整个漫长的夜晚。

甜蜜的呻吟和温柔的叹息
不会驱走你眼中的睡意。
甜蜜的呻吟和更甜的微笑
哄走所有温柔的喁语。

睡吧，睡吧，幸福的孩子，
天地万物已微笑着安憩；
睡吧，睡吧，幸福地睡吧，
俯望着你，妈妈在哭泣。

甜蜜的宝贝，在你脸上
我能看到神圣的形象。
甜蜜的宝贝，曾经像你
造物主躺着，为我哭泣。

为我哭泣，为你，为全体，
那时他还是个小小的幼婴，
你永远看见他的形象——
超凡的面容微笑吟吟。

向你微笑，向我，向全体，
他变成过一个小小的幼婴，
童稚的微笑是他的真容，
将天国和尘世哄慰入静。

至上的形象

向仁慈、和平、怜悯与爱，
所有忧伤者恳切祈祷，
对这些蕴含着欢乐的美德，
他们以感激予以回报。

因仁慈、和平、怜悯与爱，
是上帝，我们亲爱的父，
仁慈、和平、怜悯与爱，
也是人——他的孩子和关注。

因为仁慈有一颗人心，
怜悯，有一张人的脸庞，
爱，有着至上的人形，
和平，有一套人的服装。

所以每一块地方每一个
处于忧伤之中的祈祷者，
都向至上的人形祈求
爱与仁慈与怜悯与和平。

所有人都应爱人的形象，
爱犹太人，土耳其人，土著，
它寓有仁慈与爱与怜悯，
上帝也在其中居住。

升天节

升天节到了，天真的脸蛋洗得干干净净，
孩子们一对对走着，穿着红黄绿各色衣裙，
灰发的助理牧师在前，执着雪一样白的手杖，
像泰晤士河水一样，他们流进了圣保罗大厅 [1]。

这么一大群孩子啊！这些伦敦市的花朵！
他们神采奕奕，自动地结伴坐在一起，
一大群响着嗡嗡的声音，只是一大群羔羊哦，
无数男孩和女孩，举起了天真的手臂。

他们向天国扬起的歌声，就像劲风一样，
宛若天国的席位间悦耳的雷声飞驰。
他们后面是成年人——穷人贤明的保护者，
此刻你要心怀怜悯，免得以门前赶走天使。

[1] 指圣保罗大教堂。

夜

夕阳沉落西山，
晚星闪耀在天上，
鸟儿在巢中安眠，
我也要將我的巢寻访。
月亮，像一朵花儿，
静静地怀着喜悦；
它安憩在高高的天庭，
对夜微笑吟吟。

别了啊，碧野和绿林，
这儿曾有欣欣
羊群，羔羊啃青，
欢快的天使脚步轻盈。
他们将欢乐和祝福
无形地不断倾注
在每朵鲜花和蓓蕾上，
在所有沉睡的胸上。

他们探遍不慎的鸟巢，
把鸟儿盖得和和暖暖；
他们访遍动物的洞穴，
使它们不受伤残；
他们若见谁哭泣，
谁就会熟睡过去——

洒睡眠于它们头上，
还坐在它们身旁。

当虎狼发出捕食的吼声，
他们就站住，哀然而泣——
试图驱散它们的渴望，
使它们免害群羊；
但它们若可怕地冲过去，
天使们就小心翼翼 接受每一个柔魂
去将新世界继承。

那里狮子红色的眼睛
将会流出金色的泪水，
并怜悯那些纤弱的呼叫，
漫步在羊群周围
说道：“狂怒，被他的
柔顺；疾病，被他的
健康，驱逐出了
我们的永恒之世。

“在你身旁，咩咩的羔羊啊， 我现在能够躺下睡去； 或想着有你名字的他，
在后面吃草和哭泣——
经过生命河的洗礼，
我的闪亮的鬃毛 将永远闪耀如金，

当我守护着羊群。”

春

吹起长笛！
正当沉寂。
鸟儿嘻闹
白天夜里。
夜莺夜莺 溪谷中鸣，
云雀凌空，
欢乐地，
欢乐地，欢乐地，迎接新年。

小男孩儿 欢天喜地，
小女孩儿
可爱伶俐， 雄鸡欢叫，
你也欢叫。
欢乐之声，
童之喧声，
欢乐地，欢乐地，迎接新年。

小羔羊儿， 我在这儿， 过来舔舔
我雪白的脖儿，

让我拉拉

你柔软的毛儿，

让我亲亲

你柔软的脸儿，

欢乐地，欢乐地，我们迎接新年。

保姆之歌

当孩子们的声音从草坪传来，
欢笑声声飘荡在山冈，
我的心中就一片安宁，
周身都觉得宁静安详。

“该回来了，我的孩子，太阳下山了，
夜间的露水也已经出来；
得了，得了，快走吧，别玩了，
到明天天亮再来。”

“不，不，让我们玩嘛，还是白天呐，
我们一点也不想上床；
还有，小鸟儿还在天上飞翔，
满山遍野布满了绵羊。”

“唉，唉，去玩吧，玩到看不见了，
你们再回家睡觉去。”
小家伙跳啊，叫啊，笑啊， 山丘间回音四起。

童稚的欢乐

“我没有姓名， 出生只有两天。”
那我怎么叫你？ “我幸福欢欣， 欢乐是我的名。”
甜蜜的欢乐降给你！

美妙的欢乐！
甜蜜的欢乐才两天，
“甜蜜的欢乐”，我称你，
你甜甜地笑了，
我歌唱那一刻，
甜蜜的欢乐降给你！

一个梦

曾有一个梦编着树荫，
在我那天使守护的床顶；
我看见一只迷路的蚂蚁，
在我所躺的那片草地。

她苦恼，困惑，又孤凄，
夜色昏黑，她力尽精疲；
她翻过许多纠结的草茎，
我听到她心胆俱裂的声音：

“我的孩子啊！他们在哭泣？
他们可听到父亲在叹息？
他们一定四处去找我，
然后回去，为我哭泣。”

我流下了眼泪，为她哀恸；
但突然看到了一只萤火虫。
它应道：“是谁在哀哀地哭着，
哀哀地呼唤夜的巡察者？

“我是被派来照亮地面的，
还有甲虫在到处巡察；
好了，循着甲虫的声音，
小小迷路者，赶紧回家。”

对别人的悲伤

我会见到别人的苦恼
而不随之陷入伤悲？
我会见到别人的不幸
不为之寻求亲切的安慰？

我会见到滴落的泪珠
不感到在将悲伤分担？
会有父亲看到孩子
哭泣，不充满悲戚之感？

难道会有母亲坐视着
婴儿发出恐惧的呻吟？
不，不！永远不会，
永远，永远不会。

对一切都微笑的他 [\[1\]](#) 难道
会听到鹪鹩有一丝悲伤，
听到小鸟有不幸和烦恼，
听到婴儿忍受着苦恼，

而不坐在鸟巢旁边，
倾注同情于它们心里；
而不坐在摇篮旁边，
同婴儿眼泪流在一起；

而不日日夜夜地坐着，
将我们的眼泪全都擦去？
啊，不！永远不会，
永远，永远不会。

他将欢乐分给了全体， 他变成了一个小小的婴孩，
他变成了一个有苦恼的人，
他也感到了忧伤和悲哀。

别以为你有一次叹息
造物主他会不在前后， 别以为你有一次流泪
造物主他会不在左右。

啊！他 [2] 给了我们愉悦，
我们的悲伤他会消灭；
他总是坐在一旁叹息，
直等到我们的不幸离去。

[1] 指耶稣，耶稣投胎于圣母玛利亚腹内，变成了婴儿。

[2] 指造物主——上帝，与前面的“他”——耶稣并不矛盾，按“三位一体”之说，上帝为圣父，耶稣为圣子，为一体。

经验之歌

(1794)

序诗

听吟游诗人之声！
他看到现在、未来和过去，
他已听见
神明之言 漫步在古老的树林子里，

呼唤迷失的灵魂，
哭泣而涕下夜间的露水，
或许会操纵
北极明星 重新射出泯灭的光辉！

“地母啊，重现吧，地母！
请从露湿的草地上升起；
夜已消尽， 而那黎明 已从昏睡的氛围中升起。

“别再背转你的脸，
你为何还要把脸背过去？
星照的地面，
潮湿的海岸，
在破晓之前一直付与你。”

地母的回答

地母抬起了她的头，
从可怕而阴郁的黑暗之上。
她的光逃隐，
恐怖得寒心！
她的头发上是灰色的绝望。

“我囚于潮湿的海岸，
繁星的嫉妒使我的脏巢
寒冷又霉烂，
我泪水哭干
才听到古人的父亲 [\[1\]](#) 来到，

“因自私而善妒，胆怯，
人类的这个自私的父亲哟，
你用黑夜 链住欢悦， 少女和黎明怎能忍受？

“春天藏起了欢乐吗，
在蓓蕾和鲜花生长的时候？ 播种者在夜间
播种的吗？ 耕犁者在暗中耕犁的吗？

“砸碎这沉重的锁链！
它僵住了我周身的筋骨，
自私！愚蠢！
永恒的毒根！
用奴役把自由的爱捆住。”

[1] 指上帝。

土块和卵石

“爱不图自己满意欢喜，
也不为自己小心留意，
却为了他人献出安逸，
在地狱的绝望中将天堂建起。”

一个小黏土块这样唱着，
被粘在牛脚上踏着踩着，
与一块溪中的卵石相遇，
它婉转地唱出这些韵律：

“爱只图自己满意欢喜，
强求于别人自己惬意，
取乐于他人失去安逸，
在天堂的憎恶中将地狱建起。”

升天节

难道这能算是至善，
在富饶多产的土地上——
婴儿的境遇悲惨，
被冰冷的放债的手喂养？

那嘶哭能算是歌声？
能算是欢乐的歌曲？
那么多孩子不幸啊，
那是块贫瘠的土地！——

那里见不着阳光，
土地荒芜不毛，
道路为荆棘所网，
冰雪四季不消。

哪里有了阳光，
哪里有雨露滋润，
婴儿就不会挨饿，
不会有令人心悸的贫困。

幼女之失

我预见
未来的大地
将从睡梦中
(请深深铭记)

起来和寻觅 她温顺的造物主：
荒原将变为
和暖的花园。

在那南国之疆，
那夏日之精华
永不凋谢的地方，
躺着可爱的丽卡。

我们可爱的丽卡，
好像已经过七夏；
她听着野鸟歌唱，
迷失的时间已很长。

“美丽的梦，快来吧，
我在这棵树的下面，
爸爸妈妈在哭吗——
哪儿丽卡能睡眠？

“你们幼小的孩儿，
已在荒原里迷路，
丽卡怎么能睡呢，
要是她妈妈在哭？

“要是妈妈心在痛，
就让丽卡醒着；
要是妈妈已安睡，
就不要让我伤悲。

“愁眉不展的夜啊，
快升起你的月吧，
在这莽莽荒原，
当我合上双眼。”

丽卡躺下睡了，
寻食的野兽来了，
从深深的大洞出来，
见到梦中的女孩。

那为王的狮子站着，
朝那处女看着；
然后来回地转，
在那片圣地上跳着。

虎豹围着她嬉戏， 学她躺着的姿势，

而那年老的狮子，
垂下金灿灿的鬃丝，

他的火眼含泪，
他舔着她的胸脯，
他的宝石般的泪水，
落在她的颈部。

于是那些个狮子，
为她解开了薄衣，
裸着梦中的少女，
把她抬往洞里。

幼女之得

丽卡的父亲和母亲， 整夜地悲痛伤心，
寻遍了深深的山谷，
荒野为他们悲哭。

他们疲惫又愁闷，
呻吟得哑了嗓门，
他们相依为命地
在荒原里摸索了七日。

七夜他们都睡在
浓浓的树荫里面，
梦见他们的女孩
饿死在荒原中间。

梦见她边哭边走，
在荒野中迷失了方向，
虚弱加上饥饿，
哭声嘶哑而凄凉。

睡不安只得起身，
那妇人直打哆嗦，
无奈凄惨的双脚，
乏得再不能往前挪。

他双臂将她抱紧，
一步一声悲叹，
一只狮子忽现，
正卧在他们路前。

回转去已是徒劳：
他用厚厚的鬃毛，
将他们掀倒在地，
又大步绕来绕去。

他嗅着他的猎物，
他们却稍稍胆壮；
他舔着他们的手，
静静地站在了一旁。

他们看他的眼睛，
感到无比地震惊：
他们惊奇地见到
一个金色的精灵。

他头上戴着王冠，
毛发从肩上披下； 他的毛发如金，
他们的忧虑消尽。

“跟我来吧，”他说道， “别再为姑娘哭了，

在我的深宫里面 丽卡已安然入眠。”

那尤物前面走着，
他们在后面跟着，
他们见到孩子，
在猛虎中间躺着。

他们直到今天，
都住在孤寂的山谷，
既不怕狼的嚎叫，
也不惧狮子的咆哮。

扫烟囱的孩子

雪地里一个小黑点，
哭着“扫，扫”，叫人怜！
“你的爹妈在哪儿？说呀！”
“他们都去礼拜堂祈祷啦。

“我在荒野里曾经很快乐，
还在冬天的雪里欢笑，
他们就让我穿上黑衣，
叫我唱起悲伤的小调。

“我还是快乐，又跳又唱，
爹妈就以为没把我害够，
就去赞美上帝、神父和国王——
是他们在我们的苦难上建起天堂。”

保姆之歌

当孩子们的声音从草坪传来，
喁语阵阵轻飘在山谷，
我的春光就生动地浮现在脑海：
我的脸发青，一会儿又泛白。

该回来了，我的孩子，太阳落山了，
夜间的露水也已经出来，
你们的春光和白昼在游戏中荒废了，
你们的白昼和夜晚在借口中浪费了。

枯萎的玫瑰

玫瑰啊，你枯萎了！

飞行在黑夜里

那无形的飞虫

在呼啸的风暴中

找到了你的

绯红色喜悦的床，

他的隐秘的爱情

毁了你的生命。

蝇

小小的蝇儿 你夏日的游戏
已被我的手 不慎拂去了。

难道我不是
你一样的蝇吗？
你不也是 我一样的人吗？

我喝酒跳舞，
唱唱歌曲， 直到盲目的手
擦伤我羽翼。

若思想是生命、
力量和呼吸，
而思想贫乏
就等于死去，

那我就是只 幸福的蝇， 不管我活着 还是死了。

天使

我做了个梦，它什么意思？ 在梦中我是个未婚女王，
由一个温柔的天使守护：
愚蠢的悲哀，怎么也止不住！——

我日日夜夜不停地哭泣，
天使他替我擦去泪滴，
日日夜夜我不停地哭泣，
躲开他我才心中欢喜。

天使他拍起翅膀消失了，
黎明呈现出了玫瑰红，
我擦干眼泪，用十万盾矛
来压住我的惶惑惊恐。

不久，我的天使又来了，
我戒备着，他白来一趟——
我的青春已经消逝，
头上已是白发苍苍。

虎

虎，虎，光焰灼灼
燃烧在黑夜之林，
什么样的神手和神眼
构造出你可畏的匀称？

在海与天多深的地方，
燃着造你眼睛的火？
凭什么翅膀他敢追它，
凭什么手他敢捕捉？

凭什么肩膀，什么技艺，
才能拧成你的心肌？
何等可怖的手与脚才能
让你的心开始搏击？

用什么锤子，什么铁链，
在什么炉中将你的脑冶炼？
用什么砧子，何等铁手，
敢抓那令凡人致命的物件？

当天上的群星投下长矛，
用泪水浸湿了天空，
他在看着他的成果微笑？
是造耶稣的他将你创造？

虎，虎，光焰灼灼
燃烧在黑夜之林，
什么样的神手和神眼
构造出你可畏的匀称？

我美丽的玫瑰树

有人献给我一朵花儿，
一朵五月里见不到的花儿；
但我说“我有棵美丽的玫瑰树”，
我放弃了那朵可爱的花儿。

我走向我美丽的玫瑰树，
日日夜夜我将她照顾，
但是她疑忌地转过脸去，
她的刺成了我唯一的乐处。

太阳花

太阳花啊！厌倦了时间，
竟然数点起太阳的脚步，
寻找那美妙的金色所在，
漫游者结束旅程之处：

那里，因情欲而憔悴的青年，
和裹着冰雪的苍白的处女
却都从墓中起来，向往
我的太阳花想去的地方。

百合

羞怯的玫瑰竖着她的刺，
温驯的绵羊叉着吓人的角，
而洁白的百合会用怡人的爱——
不用刺也不用角，来点染她辉煌的美。

爱的花园

我来到爱的花园里面，
看到我从未见过的情形：
一座小教堂建在中央，
那儿原是我游戏的草坪。

这座小教堂大门紧闭，
门上写着“不许”的字样，
我于是转向爱的花园， 许多花曾在那儿吐送芬芳。

现在我看到的却是坟丘，
墓碑取代了昔日的花朵；
穿黑袍的神父来回转悠，
用刺蔷薇捆我的情欲和欢乐。

小流浪者

好妈妈，好妈妈，教堂里真冷，
酒吧里却惬意暖和又益身； 我习惯待着的还有别的地方，
那样的受用天堂里也比不上。

但若在礼拜堂能给我们点啤酒，
给一盆好火烤起我们的精神，
我们愿一辈子天天祷告歌唱，
一次也不想跑出去漂泊流浪。

牧师就可以讲道、喝酒和唱歌，
我们会像春天的小鸟一样快乐；
庄重的暗监夫人——她常在教堂，
就不会让罗圈腿的孩子挨打挨饿。

上帝会像一位父亲，高高兴兴，
看到孩子们跟自己同样地幸福，
再不会跟那个魔王或酒桶争吵，
而是亲吻他，给他酒又给他衣服。

伦敦

我走过每一条特辖大街，
附近特辖的泰晤士河在流淌，
我遇到的每一张脸上的痕迹，
都表露出虚弱，表露出哀伤。

在每个人的每一声呼叫之中，
在每个婴儿害怕的哭声里，
在一声一响，道道禁令中，
我听到精神之枷锁的碰击：

扫烟囱的孩子的哭叫多么
使每一个阴森的教堂惧怕，
还有那不幸的士兵的叹息
化成了鲜血从宫墙上淌下。

更不堪的是在夜半大街上
年轻妓女瘟疫般的诅咒，
它吞噬了新生婴儿的哭声，
将结婚喜榻变成了灵柩。

人之抽象

再也不会存在仁慈，
若大家像我们一样幸福；
同样也不会有怜悯存在，
如果不使有的人穷苦。

彼此间的恐惧产生和睦，
一直到自私的爱增长；
于是残忍就编织罗网，
细心地将诱饵播撒散布。

他怀着无比的敬畏坐下，
用他的泪水浇灌大地，
于是谦卑就在他脚下
伸出了它的虬结的根须。

不久他的头顶上方 蔓延开了神秘的暗影；
对于那些毛虫和苍蝇，
神秘正是它们的食粮。

它 [1] 终于结出欺诈之果，
红艳香甜，无比可口；
用它那浓密至极的树荫，
渡鸦 [2] 将自己的巢穴造就。

陆上和海里诸多神祇
寻遍自然寻找此树，
但他们全都是枉费辛苦：
人脑之中长着一株。

[1] 指“谦卑”。

[2] 可能指神父。

婴儿的悲伤

我妈妈呻吟！我爸爸哭泣，
我跳进了这个危险世界里。
赤条条无力自助，哭嚎着，
像魔鬼藏在一片阴影里。

在我爸爸手中挣扎着，
跟我的襁褓拼命反抗着，
又被裹着，又累，我只想
在我妈妈的乳房上解气。

有毒的树

我对朋友愤怒，
我表明愤怒，怒气就没了；
我对敌人愤怒，
我不予表露，这怒气长着。

我提心吊胆将它浇灌，
日夜浇灌着泪滴；
我用微笑来将它照耀，
用软软的狡诈的诡计。

它日日夜夜地生长，
终于结出了鲜亮的苹果；
我的敌人看到它闪光，
他知道那苹果属于我。

当夜色将树身遮掩，
他就溜进园子里偷食：
早晨我高兴地看到
我的敌人在树下挺尸。

少年之失

“没有人爱别人像爱自己，
也谈不上那样尊重别人，
比思想本身知道得更多，
对思想来说也不可能。

“父亲1啊，我怎能更加爱你，
或者更爱我的兄弟？
我爱你就像小小的鸟雀，
在门前啄食面包的碎屑。”

神父坐在他旁边谛听，
激动地抓住他的头发：
他拽着小外衣揪牢这孩子，
大家都佩服他神父的心机。

他站在高高的祭坛之上：
“瞧，这儿有个恶魔！”
他说：“他竟捏造出论据
来指责我们最神圣的神秘。”

听不见哭着的孩子的声音，
哭着的双亲枉然地哭泣；
他被剥得只剩件小衬衣，
被人用一根铁链子捆起。

在一处圣地他被焚烧，
从前那儿焚烧过多人，
哭着的双亲枉然地哭泣，
这种事阿尔比恩 [\[1\]](#) 海岸有吗？

[\[1\]](#) 英格兰的古称。

少女之失

未来时代的孩子们
读着这愤慨的一页，
会知道从前的时候，
爱！甜蜜的爱！被当作罪孽。

在那黄金时代，
没有冬天的寒冷，
欢快的青年男女，
于神圣的灯 [\[1\]](#) 下
在和煦的光中裸着游戏。

曾有对青年男女，
充满了柔情蜜意，
相会在明亮的花园，
当神圣的灯，
刚刚拉去那夜的幕帘。

升起的曙光之中
他们在草地上游戏；
父母们不在近前，
陌生人远离此地，
不久姑娘就忘记了恐惧。

亲够了甜蜜的吻，

他们约定要重逢，
在那安谧的睡梦
飘拂过深空， 而疲惫的旅人悲叹的时辰。

善意的父亲跟前， 来了欢快的少女；
但他那疼爱的神色
就像圣经一般，
她害怕得娇躯抖抖瑟瑟。

“欧娜！你脸色苍白！
快对你父亲坦白，
真让人心儿发抖！
哦，忧愁啊，
真要把我的灰发愁白！”

[1] 指太阳。

致特拉 [1]

出身于凡胎的芸芸众生，
都将毁灭，消失躯体。
摆脱生殖而自由地复活：
那我何必和你在一起？

男女们出生于羞耻和骄傲，
在早晨开花，在黄昏死去；
但仁慈令死亡变成了安眠，
男女们复活了，激动哭泣。

你，我的凡体的母亲，
用残忍套住了我的心灵，
用那欺人又自欺的眼泪，
裹住我的鼻耳和眼睛：

用无知的泥土堵住我嘴，
使我背叛了尘世的生命；
耶稣之死使我无羁： [2]
那我何必和你在一起？

[1] 不详。可能指下文“我的凡体的母亲”。

[2] 这是一个灵魂的复活。——原注

小学生

我爱在夏天的清晨起床，
当鸟儿鸣啭在棵棵树上；
猎人远远地吹着号角，
云雀儿伴我歌唱，
啊！多美妙的伙伴。

但要在夏天的清晨上学，
唉！这把兴致都扫尽；
在那严厉昏花的眼底，
小同学们垂头丧气地
把一天苦熬过去。

唉！我有时得颓丧地坐着，
度过许多个急人的钟点，
我得不到快乐，无论从书中
或是和一帮无聊的讨厌鬼
同坐在书斋里挨时间。

为了欢乐而出世的鸟儿 怎能坐在笼中歌唱？
孩子怎能一受惊扰就
垂下他娇嫩的翅膀，
忘记了朝气蓬勃的春天？

爸爸妈妈啊，若花蕾被摘，
花儿被刮落在地，
若是嫩弱的幼苗被悲哀
和满腹的重重心事夺去
他们春天里的欢愉，

夏天怎么会高兴地露头，
夏天的果实怎么会露脸？
怎收拾悲伤所毁的一切，
如何祝福丰美的一年，
当冬天的狂风出现？

古代吟游诗人之声

到这里来吧，快乐的年轻人， 看这展布着的黎明，
真理新生的象征。

疑惑消失了，及理性的阴影，
及无知的争辩和狡猾的戏弄。

愚蠢是一条无尽的迷途，
纠结的根蔓困着她的路，
多少人在那里绊倒！

他们整夜在尸骨上跌蹶，
却自认为想知道的无不知晓，
他们需要引导，却好为人师。

至上的形象

残忍据有人的心灵；
嫉妒据有人的脸庞；
恐怖据有至上的人形，
隐秘据有人的服装。

人的服装是锻过的铁器，
人的外形是熊熊的锻炉，
人的脸庞是封闭的熔炉，
人心是它的饥饿的胃部。

内心旅行者

我途经一个男人的国度，
这国度里有男人也有女人；
我所见闻的骇人的事情，
乃冷漠的尘世旅行者所未闻。

那里的婴儿出生于欢乐，
然而受孕于不幸的伤悲；
正如我们欢乐地收割，
播种时却洒下悲酸之泪。

如果那婴儿生而为男，
他就被交给一个老妇，
她将他钉在石头上，
用金杯接他那尖声的嚎哭。

她用铁蒺藜捆住他的手，
她将他的手和脚全刺穿，
她割下他的心放在旁边，
让它对热与冷都有所体验。

她的手把每根神经都数过，
就像吝啬鬼查点黄金；
她靠他的哭嚎生活：
他愈益年长，她愈益年轻。

最后他变成个流血的青年，
她则变成了鲜艳的处女，
然后他将他的手铐砸烂，
为了取乐将她捆起。

他用她全部的神经来育己，
像丈夫种他的模型一般；
她变成了他的居住之地
和一个七十倍丰产的果园。

他很快衰老成老年的影子，
绕着尘世的小屋踱步，
他身上装满黄金和宝石，
那是他勤劳所致的财富。

这是人类灵魂的宝石，
是相思的眼睛里的珍珠和红玉，
是痛苦的心灵中的无数金子，
是殉难者的呻吟和情人的叹息。

这是他的食物和饮料；
他以此款待穷人和乞丐，
款待徒步旅行的旅人：
他的门永远对他们敞开。

他的苦是他们永恒的欢乐；
他们使屋顶和墙壁唱歌；

直到荒原上的野火之中
出生了一个女性的婴儿。

她整个身体是固体的火焰、
宝石和黄金。婴儿的身体
他不敢伸手抚摸，也不敢
将她包裹在襁褓里面。

但她找来了她所爱的男人，
不管穷或富，青年或老年；
他们很快驱逐了年老的主人，
让他行乞于他人的门前。

他流着泪漂泊，走向远方，
最后他被人收留供养，
他又老又驼、浑身痛、眼睛瞎，
最后他赢得了一位姑娘。

为了减轻他冻僵的年纪，
这可怜人将她抱在怀里，
小屋在他面前渐渐凋敝，
花园也失去了可爱的魅力。

变化的景色改变了一切，
于是旅客遍布于九州；
感官恐惧地到处乱滚，
平坦的大地变成了圆球。

日月星辰，全部消隐，
荒原茫茫，无边也无沿，
食物没有了，水也没有，
四周全是茫茫的荒原。

她的微笑里面的面包，
她的稚嫩双唇上的甘蜜，
她流盼的眼睛里任性的游戏，
将他哄向婴儿时期。

因为他每天又吃又喝，
所以他变得愈益年轻；
在荒野上面，他们两个
恐惧而沮丧地四处漂零。

她像野鹿一样地逃走，
用恐惧种下了许多野灌木丛；
他追赶着她，日夜不休，
被各种爱情的艺术所诓哄。

他受骗于各种爱和恨的艺术，
终于，在广阔的荒野上面
布满了任性的爱情的迷宫，
野猪、狮和狼漫游其间。

终于，她变成个哭泣的老妇，
他则变成了任性的婴儿，
太阳和星辰更近地运转着，

许多的情侣漫游到这儿。

树上结出了甜蜜的狂喜，
奉给荒野的每一位游客；
终于建起了许多城市，
许多牧人的快乐的家舍。

可他们发现了那皱眉的婴儿，
整个地区被恐怖所笼罩，
“那个婴儿！婴儿出生了！”
他们逃了，连滚带跑。

因为谁敢摸那皱眉的形象，
手臂就会枯萎无遗；
野猪和狮狼齐吼着奔逃，
每棵树木都凋落了果实。

除非那人是一个老妇，
没人敢摸那皱眉的形象；
她将他钉在石头上面，
诸事完毕，如我叙说过的那样。

此译本内容皆选自我1981年至1983年初所译《布莱克诗集》。此前该诗集已出版过三个版本：上海三联书店1999年版、台湾书林出版有限公司2007年英汉对照版（《布雷克诗选》）和上海社会科学院出版社2017年版。

该诗集译自*William Blake's Poems and Prophecies* (Everyman's Library, 1927)，并参照*Selected Poems of William Blake* (Oxford University, 1957)；The Poetical Works of William Blake (Oxford University, 1913)；Blake's Poetry and Designs (W. W. Norton & Company, 1979)。

在很长一段时间里，布莱克的诗作大部分是以手稿形式存世的，后英美多家出版社在出版时各自进行了整理和校勘，所以各版本之间互有不同。为此，译者今依照企鹅兰登版的英文，对译文做了些许相应的改动。

‘How can the bird that is born for joy Sit in a cage and sing?’

MILTON

a Poem in 2 Books

To Justify the Ways of God to Men

([London:] The Author & Printer W Blake 1804)

Preface

And did those feet in ancient time
Walk upon England's mountains green;
And was the holy Lamb of God
On England's pleasant pastures seen!

And did the Countenance Divine
Shine forth upon our clouded hills?
And was Jerusalem builded here,
Among these dark Satanic Mills?

Bring me my Bow of burning gold:
Bring me my Arrows of desire:
Bring me my Spear: O clouds, unfold:
Bring me my Chariot of Fire!

I will not cease from Mental Fight,
Nor shall my Sword sleep in my hand:
Till we have built Jerusalem,
In England's green & pleasant Land.

'Would to God that all the Lord's people were Prophets.'
Numbers XI Ch 29 v.

‘I saw a chapel all of gold’

I saw a chapel all of gold
That none did dare to enter in
And many weeping stood without Weeping, mourning, worshipping.

I saw a serpent rise between
The white pillars of the door
And he forcd & forcd & forcd
Down the golden hinges tore
And along the pavement sweet
Set with pearls & rubies bright
All his slimy length he drew
Till upon the altar white

Vomiting his poisons out
On the bread & on the wine.
So I turnd into a sty
And laid me down among the swine.

‘ “I die I die” the Mother said’

‘I die I die’ the Mother said,
‘My Children will die for lack of bread!
What more has the merciless tyrant said?’
The Monk sat down on her stony bed.

His Eye was dry, no tear could flow.
A hollow groan first spoke his woe.
He trembled & shudderd upon the bed.
At length with a feeble cry he said

‘When God commanded this hand to write
In the studious hours of deep midnight
He told me that All I wrote should prove
The bane of all that on Earth I love.

‘My brother starvd between two walls,
His children’s cry my soul appalls.
I mockd at the wrack & griding chain,
My bent body mocks at their torturing pain.

‘Thy father drew his sword in the north,
With his thousands strong he is marched forth.
Thy brother has armed himself in steel
To revenge the wrongs thy Children feel.

'But vain the sword & vain the bow,
They never can work war's overthrow!
The Hermit's prayer & the widow's tear
Alone can free the world from fear.'

The hand of vengeance sought the bed
To which the purple tyrant fled.
The iron hand crushd the tyrant's head
And became a tyrant in his stead.

Songs of Innocence and of Experience

Shewing the Two Contrary States of the Human Soul

Songs of Innocence

([London:] The Author & Printer W Blake 1789)

INTRODUCTION

Piping down the valleys wild,
Piping songs of pleasant glee
On a cloud I saw a child,
And he laughing said to me:

‘Pipe a song about a Lamb:’
So I piped with merry chear.
‘Piper pipe that song again;’
So I piped, he wept to hear.

‘Drop thy pipe, thy happy pipe;
Sing thy songs of happy chear.’
So I sung the same again,
While he wept with joy to hear.

‘Piper, sit thee down and write
In a book that all may read.’
So he vanish’d from my sight
And I pluck’d a hollow reed

And I made a rural pen,
And I stain’d the water clear,
And I wrote my happy songs
Every child may joy to hear.

THE SHEPHERD

How sweet is the Shepherd's sweet lot!
From the morn to the evening he strays;
He shall follow his sheep all the day
And his tongue shall be filled with praise.

For he hears the lamb's innocent call,
And he hears the ewe's tender reply.
He is watchful while they are in peace,
For they know when their Shepherd is nigh.

THE ECCHOING GREEN

The Sun does arise,
And make happy the skies.
The merry bells ring
To welcome the Spring.
The sky- lark and thrush,
The birds of the bush,
Sing louder around,
To the bells' chearful sound,
While our sports shall be seen
On the Ecchoing Green.

Old John with white hair
Does laugh away care,
Sitting under the oak,
Among the old folk.
They laugh at our play,
And soon they all say:
'Such such were the joys
When we all girls & boys,
In our youth- time were seen
On the Ecchoing Green.'

Till the little ones weary
No more can be merry;

The sun does descend,
And our sports have an end:
Round the laps of their mothers
Many sisters and brothers,
Like birds in their nest,
Are ready for rest:
And sport no more seen,
On the darkening Green.

THE LAMB

Little Lamb, who made thee?

Does thou know who made thee?

Gave thee life & bid thee feed
By the stream & o'er the mead;
Gave thee clothing of delight,
Softest clothing wooly bright;
Gave thee such a tender voice,
Making all the vales rejoice;

Little Lamb, who made thee?

Dost thou know who made thee?

Little Lamb, I'll tell thee,

Little Lamb, I'll tell thee:

He is called by thy name,
For he calls himself a Lamb:
He is meek & he is mild,
He became a little child:
I a child & thou a lamb,
We are called by his name.

Little Lamb, God bless thee.

Little Lamb, God bless thee.

THE LITTLE BLACK BOY

My mother bore me in the southern wild,
And I am black, but O! my soul is white.
White as an angel is the English child:
But I am black as if bereav'd of light.

My mother taught me underneath a tree
And sitting down before the heat of day
She took me on her lap and kissed me
And pointing to the east began to say:

'Look on the rising sun! there God does live
And gives his light and gives his heat away;
And flowers and trees and beasts and men receive Comfort in morning, joy in the noon day.

'And we are put on earth a little space,
That we may learn to bear the beams of love;
And these black bodies and this sun- burnt face
Is but a cloud, and like a shady grove.

'For when our souls have learn'd the heat to bear
The cloud will vanish; we shall hear his voice Saying: "come out from the grove my love & care
And round my golden tent like lambs rejoice." '

Thus did my mother say and kissed me,
And thus I say to little English boy:
When I from black and he from white cloud free,
And round the tent of God like lambs we joy:

I'll shade him from the heat till he can bear
To lean in joy upon our father's knee
And then I'll stand and stroke his silver hair
And be like him and he will then love me.

THE BLOSSOM

Merry Merry Sparrow
Under leaves so green
A happy Blossom
Sees you swift as arrow
Seek your cradle narrow
Near my Bosom.

Pretty Pretty Robin
Under leaves so green
A happy Blossom
Hears you sobbing sobbing
Pretty Pretty Robin
Near my Bosom.

THE CHIMNEY SWEEPER

When my mother died I was very young,
And my father sold me while yet my tongue
Could scarcely cry ‘weep weep weep weep,’
So your chimneys I sweep & in soot I sleep.

There’s little Tom Dacre, who cried when his head
That curl’d like a lamb’s back was shav’d, so I said:
‘Hush Tom, never mind it, for when your head’s bare,
You know that the soot cannot spoil your white hair.’

And so he was quiet, & that very night,
As Tom was asleeping he had such a sight,
That thousands of sweepers, Dick, Joe, Ned & Jack
Were all of them lock’d up in coffins of black,
And by came an Angel who had a bright key,
And he open’d the coffins & set them all free.
Then down a green plain leaping laughing they run
And wash in a river and shine in the Sun.

Then naked & white, all their bags left behind,
They rise upon clouds, and sport in the wind.
And the Angel told Tom if he’d be a good boy,
He’d have God for his father & never want joy.

And so Tom awoke and we rose in the dark
And got with our bags & our brushes to work.
Tho' the morning was cold, Tom was happy & warm.
So if all do their duty, they need not fear harm.

THE LITTLE BOY LOST

'Father, father, where are you going?

O do not walk so fast.

Speak, father, speak to your little boy

Or else I shall be lost.'

The night was dark, no father was there;

The child was wet with dew.

The mire was deep, & the child did weep

And away the vapour flew.

THE LITTLE BOY FOUND

The little boy lost in the lonely fen,
Led by the wand'ring light,
Began to cry, but God ever nigh,
Appeard like his father in white.

He kissed the child & by the hand led
And to his mother brought,
Who in sorrow pale thro' the lonely dale
Her little boy weeping sought.

LAUGHING SONG

When the green woods laugh with the voice of joy
And the dimpling stream runs laughing by,
When the air does laugh with our merry wit,
And the green hill laughs with the noise of it,

When the meadows laugh with lively green
And the grasshopper laughs in the merry scene,
When Mary and Susan and Emily
With their sweet round mouths sing ‘Ha, Ha, He,’

When the painted birds laugh in the shade
Where our table with cherries and nuts is spread,
Come live & be merry and join with me,
To sing the sweet chorus of ‘Ha, Ha, He.’

A CRADLE SONG

Sweet dreams form a shade
O'er my lovely infant's head.
Sweet dreams of pleasant streams,
By happy silent moony beams.

Sweet sleep with soft down
Weave thy brows an infant crown.
Sweet sleep Angel mild,
Hover o'er my happy child.

Sweet smiles in the night,
Hover over my delight
Sweet smiles, Mother's smiles
All the livelong night beguiles.

Sweet moans, dovelike sighs,
Chase not slumber from thy eyes.
Sweet moans, sweeter smiles,
All the dovelike moans beguiles.

Sleep, sleep, happy child.
All creation slept and smil'd.
Sleep, sleep, happy sleep,
While o'er thee thy mother weep.

Sweet babe, in thy face,
Holy image I can trace.
Sweet babe, once like thee
Thy maker lay and wept for me,

Wept for me, for thee, for all,
When he was an infant small.
Thou his image ever see,
Heavenly face that smiles on thee,

Smiles on thee, on me, on all,
Who became an infant small.
Infant smiles are his own smiles;
Heaven & earth to peace beguiles.

THE DIVINE IMAGE

To Mercy, Pity, Peace and Love
All pray in their distress:
And to these virtues of delight
Return their thankfulness.
For Mercy, Pity, Peace and Love
Is God our father dear:
And Mercy, Pity, Peace and Love
Is Man his child and care.

For Mercy has a human heart,
Pity a human face:
And Love, the human form divine,
And Peace, the human dress.

Then every man of every clime,
That prays in his distress,
Prays to the human form divine
Love, Mercy, Pity, Peace.

And all must love the human form,
In heathen, turk or jew.
Where Mercy, Love & Pity dwell
There God is dwelling too.

HOLY THURSDAY

Twas on a Holy Thursday, their innocent faces clean,
The children walking two & two in red & blue & green;
Grey headed beadles walkd before with wands as white as snow

Till into the high dome of Paul's they like Thames waters flow.

O what a multitude they seemd these flowers of London town!
Seated in companies they sit, with radiance all their own.
The hum of multitudes was there but multitudes of lambs,
Thousands of little boys & girls raising their innocent hands.

Now like a mighty wind they raise to heaven the voice of song,
Or like harmonious thunderings the seats of heaven among.
Beneath them sit the aged men, wise guardians of the poor;
Then cherish pity, lest you drive an angel from your door.

NIGHT

The sun descending in the west,
The evening star does shine.
The birds are silent in their nest,
And I must seek for mine,
The moon like a flower
In heaven's high bower;
With silent delight
Sits and smiles on the night.

Farewell green fields and happy groves,
Where flocks have took delight;
Where lambs have nibbled, silent moves
The feet of angels bright;
Unseen they pour blessing,
And joy without ceasing,
On each bud and blossom,
And each sleeping bosom.

They look in every thoughtless nest,
Where birds are covered warm;
They visit caves of every beast
To keep them all from harm:
If they see any weeping
That should have been sleeping

They pour sleep on their head
And sit down by their bed.

When wolves and tygers howl for prey
They pitying stand and weep;
Seeking to drive their thirst away,
And keep them from the sheep.
But if they rush dreadful,
The angels most heedful
Recieve each mild spirit
New worlds to inherit.

And there the lion's ruddy eyes
Shall flow with tears of gold:
And pitying the tender cries,
And walking round the fold:
Saying: 'Wrath by his meekness
And by his health sickness,
Is driven away
From our immortal day.

'And now beside thee, bleating lamb,
I can lie down and sleep;
Or think on him who bore thy name,
Graze after thee and weep.
For wash'd in life's river,
My bright mane for ever
Shall shine like the gold,

As I guard o'er the fold.'

SPRING

Sound the Flute!

Now it's mute.

Birds delight

Day and Night.

Nightingale

In the dale,

Lark in Sky

Merrily

Merrily Merrily to welcome in the Year.

Little Boy

Full of joy;

Little Girl

Sweet and small;

Cock does crow,

So do you.

Merry voice,

Infant noise,

Merrily Merrily to welcome in the Year.

Little Lamb,

Here I am;

Come and lick

My white neck.

Let me pull

Your soft Wool.

Let me kiss

Your soft face,

Merrily Merrily we welcome in the Year.

NURSE'S SONG

When the voices of children are heard on the green
And laughing is heard on the hill,
My heart is at rest within my breast
And everything else is still.

‘Then come home my children, the sun is gone down
And the dews of night arise;
Come, come, leave off play and let us away
Till the morning appears in the skies.’

‘No no, let us play, for it is yet day
And we cannot go to sleep;
Besides in the sky, the little birds fly
And the hills are all covered with sheep.’

‘Well well go & play till the light fades away
And then go home to bed.’
The little ones leaped & shouted & laugh’d
And all the hills echoed.

INFANT JOY

'I have no name;
I am but two days old.'
What shall I call thee?
'I happy am,
Joy is my name,'
Sweet joy befall thee!

Pretty joy!
Sweet joy but two days old,
Sweet joy I call thee;
Thou dost smile,
I sing the while,
Sweet joy befall thee.

A DREAM

Once a dream did weave a shade
O'er my Angel- guarded bed,
That an Emmet lost its way
Where on grass methought I lay.

Troubled, wilder and forlorn,
Dark benighted, travel- worn,
Over many a tangled spray
All heart- broke I heard her say:

'O my children! do they cry?
Do they hear their father sigh?
Now they look abroad to see,
Now return and weep for me.'

Pitying I drop'd a tear:
But I saw a glow- worm near
Who replied: 'What wailing wight
Calls the watchman of the night?

'I am set to light the ground,
While the beetle goes his round:
Follow now the beetle's hum.
Little wanderer, hie thee home.'

ON ANOTHER'S SORROW

Can I see another's woe,
And not be in sorrow too?
Can I see another's grief
And not seek for kind relief?

Can I see a falling tear,
And not feel my sorrow's share,
Can a father see his child
Weep, nor be with sorrow filld?

Can a mother sit and hear
An infant groan, an infant fear?
No, no, never can it be.
Never never can it be.

And can he who smiles on all
Hear the wren with sorrows small,
Hear the small birds grief & care,
Hear the woes that infants bear

And not sit beside the nest
Pouring pity in their breast;
And not sit the cradle near Weeping tear on infant's tear;

And not sit both night & day,
Wiping all our tears away?
O! no never can it be.
Never never can it be.

He doth give his joy to all.
He becomes an infant small.
He becomes a man of woe;
He doth feel the sorrow too.

Think not thou canst sigh a sigh,
And thy maker is not by.
Think not thou canst weep a tear
And thy maker is not near.

O! he gives to us his joy,
That our grief he may destroy;
Till our grief is fled & gone
He doth sit by us and moan.

THE LITTLE GIRL LOST

In futurity
I prophetic see,
That the earth from sleep
(Grave the sentence deep)

Shall arise and seek
For her maker meek:
And the desart wild
Become a garden mild.

In the southern clime,
Where the summer's prime
Never fades away,
Lovely Lyca lay.

Seven summers old
Lovely Lyca told,
She had wanderd long
Hearing wild birds' song.

'Sweet sleep come to me
Underneath this tree;
Do father, mother weep?
Where can Lyca sleep?

'Lost in desert wild
Is your little child,
How can Lyca sleep,
If her mother weep:

'If her heart does ake,
Then let Lyca wake:
If my mother sleep,
Lyca shall not weep.

'Frowning frowning night,
O'er this desert bright,
Let thy moon arise
While I close my eyes.'

Sleeping Lyca lay;
While the beasts of prey,
Come from caverns deep,
View'd the maid asleep.

The kingly lion stood
And the virgin view'd,
Then he gambold round
O'er the hallowd ground:

Leopards, tygers play,
Round her as she lay;

While the lion old
Bow'd his mane of gold,

And her bosom lick,
And upon her neck,
From his eyes of flame,
Ruby tears there came;

While the lioness
Loos'd her slender dress,
And naked they convey'd
To caves the sleeping maid.

THE LITTLE GIRL FOUND

All the night in woe,
Lyca's parents go:
Over vallies deep
While the desarts weep.

Tired and woe- begone,
Hoarse with making moan:
Arm in arm seven days
They trac'd the desert ways.

Seven nights they sleep
Among shadows deep
And dream they see their child
Starv'd in desert wild.

Pale thro' pathless ways
The fancied image strays,
Famish'd, weeping, weak
With hollow piteous shriek.
Rising from unrest,
The trembling woman prest,
With feet of weary woe;
She could no further go.

In his arms he bore
Her arm'd with sorrow sore:
Till before their way
A couching lion lay.

Turning back was vain.
Soon his heavy mane
Bore them to the ground;
Then he stalk'd around

And smelling to his prey,
But their fears allay,
When he licks their hands:
And silent by them stands.

They look upon his eyes
Fill'd with deep surprise:
And wondering behold
A spirit arm'd in gold.

On his head a crown,
On his shoulders down
Flow'd his golden hair.
Gone was all their care.

'Follow me' he said,
'Weep not for the maid;

In my palace deep,
Lyca lies asleep.'

Then they followed
Where the vision led;
And saw their sleeping child,
Among tygers wild.

To this day they dwell
In a lonely dell
Nor fear the wolvish howl,
Nor the lions growl.

THE SCHOOL BOY

I love to rise in a summer morn,
When the birds sing on every tree;
The distant huntsman winds his horn,
And the sky-lark sings with me.
O! what sweet company.

But to go to school in a summer morn,
O! it drives all joy away:
Under a cruel eye outworn,
The little ones spend the day
In sighing and dismay.

Ah! then at times I drooping sit,
And spend many an anxious hour,
Nor in my book can I take delight,
Nor sit in learning's bower,
Worn thro' with the dreary shower.

How can the bird that is born for joy
Sit in a cage and sing?
How can a child when fears annoy
But droop his tender wing
And forget his youthful spring?

O! father & mother, if buds are nip'd,
And blossoms blown away,
And if the tender plants are strip'd
Of their joy in the springing day,
By sorrow and cares dismay,

How shall the summer arise in joy,
Or the summer fruits appear?
Or how shall we gather what griefs destroy
Or bless the mellowing year,
When the blasts of winter appear?

THE VOICE OF THE ANCIENT BARD

Youth of delight, come hither
And see the opening morn,
Image of truth new- born.
Doubt is fled & clouds of reason
Dark disputes & artful teasing.
Folly is an endless maze,
Tangled roots perplex her ways.
How many have fallen there!
They stumble all night over bones of the dead:
And feel they know not what but care;
And wish to lead others when they should be led.

Songs Of Experience

([Lambeth:] The Author & Printer W. Blake, 1794)

INTRODUCTION

Hear the voice of the Bard!
Who Present, Past, & Future sees;
Whose ears have heard
The Holy Word
That walk'd among the ancient trees,

Calling the lapsed Soul
And weeping in the evening dew:
That might controll
The starry pole;
And fallen fallen light renew!

'O Earth O Earth return
Arise from out the dewy grass;
Night is worn,
And the morn
Rises from the slumberous mass.

'Turn away no more:
Why wilt thou turn away?
The starry floor,
The watry shore
Is giv'n thee till the break of day.'

EARTH'S ANSWER

Earth raised up her head
From the darkness dread & drear.
Her light fled:
Stony dread!
And her locks cover'd with grey despair.

'Prison'd on watry shore
Starry Jealousy does keep my den;
Cold and hoar
Weeping o'er
I hear the father of the ancient men.

'Selfish father of men!
Cruel jealous selfish fear!
Can delight
Chain'd in night
The virgins of youth and morning bear?

'Does spring hide its joy
When buds and blossoms grow?
Does the sower
Sow by night
Or the plowman in darkness plow?

'Break this heavy chain
That does freeze my bones around.
Selfish! vain!
Eternal bane!
That free Love with bondage bound.'

THE CLOD & THE PEBBLE

'Love seeketh not Itself to please,
Nor for itself hath any care;
But for another gives its ease,
And builds a Heaven in Hell's despair.'

So sang a little Clod of Clay,
Trodden with the cattle's feet:
But a Pebble of the brook
Warbled out these metres meet:

'Love seeketh only Self to please
To bind another to Its delight;
Joys in another's loss of ease,
And builds a Hell in Heaven's despite.'

HOLY THURSDAY

Is this a holy thing to see,
In a rich and fruitful land,
Babes reduced to misery,
Fed with cold and usurous hand?

Is that trembling cry a song?
Can it be a song of joy?
And so many children poor?
It is a land of poverty!

And their sun does never shine,
And their fields are bleak and bare,
And their ways are fill'd with thorns:
It is eternal winter there.

For where- e'er the sun does shine,
And where- e'er the rain does fall:
Babe can never hunger there,
Nor poverty the mind appall.

THE CHIMNEY SWEEPER

A little black thing among the snow:
Crying 'weep, weep,' in notes of woe!
'Where are thy father & mother? say?'
'They are both gone up to the church to pray.

'Because I was happy upon the heath,
And smil'd among the winter's snow:
They clothed me in the clothes of death,
And taught me to sing the notes of woe.

'And because I am happy & dance & sing,
They think they have done me no injury:
And are gone to praise God & his Priest & King
Who make up a heaven of our misery.'

NURSE'S SONG

When the voices of children are heard on the green
And whisprings are in the dale:
The days of my youth rise fresh in my mind,
My face turns green and pale.

Then come home my children, the sun is gone down
And the dews of night arise;
Your spring & your day are wasted in play
And your winter and night in disguise.

THE SICK ROSE

O Rose, thou art sick,
The invisible worm,
That flies in the night
In the howling storm:

Has found out thy bed
Of crimson joy:
And his dark secret love
Does thy life destroy.

THE FLY

Little Fly

Thy summer's play
My thoughtless hand
Has brush'd away.

Am not I

A fly like thee?
Or art not thou
A man like me?

For I dance

And drink & sing:
Till some blind hand
Shall brush my wing.

If thought is life

And strength & breath:
And the want
Of thought is death;

Then am I

A happy fly,
If I live,
Or if I die.

THE ANGEL

I dreamt a Dream! what can it mean?
And that I was a maiden Queen:
Guarded by an Angel mild:
Witless woe was neer beguil'd!

And I wept both night and day
And he wip'd my tears away
And I wept both day and night
And hid from him my heart's delight

So he took his wings and fled:
Then the morn blush'd rosy red:
I dried my tears & armd my fears
With ten thousand shields and spears.

Soon my Angel came again;
I was arm'd, he came in vain:
For the time of youth was fled
And grey hairs were on my head.

THE TYGER

Tyger, Tyger, burning bright,
In the forests of the night:
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

In what distant deeps or skies
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
On what wings dare he aspire?
What the hand dare seize the fire?

And what shoulder, & what art,
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And when thy heart began to beat,
What dread hand? & what dread feet?

What the hammer? what the chain,
In what furnace was thy brain?
What the anvil? what dread grasp
Dare its deadly terrors clasp!
When the stars threw down their spears
And waterd heaven with their tears:
Did he smile his work to see?
Did he who made the Lamb make thee?

Tyger, Tyger burning bright,
In the forests of the night:
What immortal hand or eye
Dare frame thy fearful symmetry?

MY PRETTY ROSE TREE

A flower was offerd to me;
Such a flower as May never bore,
But I said 'T've a Pretty Rose- tree,'
And I passed the sweet flower o'er.

Then I went to my Pretty Rose- tree
To tend her by day and by night,
But my Rose turnd away with jealousy
And her thorns were my only delight.

AH! SUN FLOWER

Ah Sun- flower! weary of time,
Who countest the steps of the Sun:
Seeking after that sweet golden clime
Where the traveller's journey is done;

Where the Youth pined away with desire,
And the pale Virgin shrouded in snow
Arise from their graves and aspire
Where my Sun- flower wishes to go.

THE LILLY

The modest Rose puts forth a thorn:

The humble Sheep a threatning horn:

While the Lilly white shall in Love delight,

Nor a thorn nor a threat stain her beauty bright.

THE GARDEN OF LOVE

I went to the Garden of Love,
And saw what I never had seen:
A Chapel was built in the midst,
Where I used to play on the green.

And the gates of this Chapel were shut,
And 'Thou shalt not' writ over the door;
So I turn'd to the Garden of Love,
That so many sweet flowers bore,

And I saw it was filled with graves,
And tomb- stones where flowers should be:
And Priests in black gowns were walking their rounds,
And binding with briars my joys & desires.

THE LITTLE VAGABOND

Dear Mother, dear Mother, the Church is cold,
But the Ale- house is healthy & pleasant & warm:
Besides I can tell where I am used well,
Such usage in heaven will never do well.

But if at the Church they would give us some Ale,
And a pleasant fire our souls to regale:
We'd sing and we'd pray all the live- long day;
Nor ever once wish from the Church to stray.

Then the Parson might preach & drink & sing,
And we'd be as happy as birds in the spring:
And modest dame Lurch, who is always at Church
Would not have bandy children nor fasting nor birch.

And God like a father rejoicing to see His children as pleasant and happy as he;
Would have no more quarrel with the Devil or the Barrel
But kiss him & give him both drink and apparel.

LONDON

I wander thro' each charter'd street,
Near where the charter'd Thames does flow
And mark in every face I meet
Marks of weakness, marks of woe.

In every cry of every Man,
In every Infants cry of fear,
In every voice; in every ban,
The mind-forg'd manacles I hear.

How the Chimney-sweepers cry
Every blackning Church appalls,
And the hapless Soldiers sigh
Runs in blood down Palace walls

But most thro' midnight streets I hear
How the youthful Harlots curse
Blasts the new-born Infants tear
And blights with plagues the Marriage hearse.

THE HUMAN ABSTRACT

Pity would be no more
If we did not make somebody Poor:
And Mercy no more could be
If all were as happy as we;
And mutual fear brings peace;
Till the selfish loves increase.
Then Cruelty knits a snare,
And spreads his baits with care.

He sits down with holy fears,
And waters the ground with tears;
Then Humility takes its root Underneath his foot.

Soon spreads the dismal shade
Of Mystery over his head;
And the Catterpillar and Fly
Feed on the Mystery.

And it bears the fruit of Deceit,
Ruddy and sweet to eat;
And the Raven his nest has made
In its thickest shade.

The Gods of the earth and sea
Sought thro' Nature to find this Tree
But their search was all in vain:
There grows one in the Human Brain.

INFANT SORROW

My mother groand! My father wept.
Into the dangerous world I leapt:
Helpless, naked, piping loud:
Like a fiend hid in a cloud.

Struggling in my father's hands:
Striving against my swadling bands:
Bound and weary I thought best
To sulk upon my mother's breast.

A POISON TREE

I was angry with my friend:
I told my wrath, my wrath did end.
I was angry with my foe:
I told it not, my wrath did grow.

And I waterd it in fears,
Night & morning with my tears:
And I sunned it with smiles,
And with soft deceitful wiles.

And it grew both day and night,
Till it bore an apple bright,
And my foe beheld it shine,
And he knew that it was mine,

And into my garden stole,
When the night had veild the pole:
In the morning glad I see
My foe outstretchd beneath the tree.

A LITTLE BOY LOST

'Nought loves another as itself
Nor venerates another so,
Nor is it possible to Thought
A greater than itself to know:

'And Father, how can I love you,
Or any of my brothers more?
I love you like the little bird
That picks up crumbs around the door.'

The Priest saw by and heard the child,
In trembling zeal he siez'd his hair:
He led him by his little coat;
And all admir'd the Priestly care.

And standing on the altar high,
'Lo what a fiend is here!' said he:
'One who sets reason up for judge
Of our most holy Mystery.'

The weeping child could not be heard.
The weeping parents wept in vain:
They strip'd him to his little shirt
And bound him in an iron chain,

And burn'd him in a holy place,
Where many had been burn'd before:
The weeping parents wept in vain.
Are such things done on Albion's shore?

A LITTLE GIRL LOST

Children of the future Age,
Reading this indignant page;
Know that in a former time,
Love! sweet Love! was thought a crime.

In the Age of Gold,
Free from winter's cold
Youth and maiden bright
To the holy light,
Naked in the sunny beams delight.

Once a youthful pair
Fill'd with softest care
Met in garden bright,
Where the holy light
Had just removd the curtains of the night.

There in rising day
On the grass they play:
Parents were afar:
Strangers came not near:
And the maiden soon forgot her fear.

Tired with kisses sweet

They agree to meet,
When the silent sleep
Waves o'er heaven's deep:
And the weary tired wanderers weep.

To her father white
Came the maiden bright:
But his loving look,
Like the holy book,
All her tender limbs with terror shook.

'Ona! pale and weak!
To thy father speak:
O the trembling fear!
O the dismal care!
That shakes the blossoms of my hoary hair.'

TO TIRZAH

Whate'er is Born of Mortal Birth
Must be consumed with the Earth
To rise from Generation free:
Then what have I to do with thee?

The Sexes sprung from Shame & Pride,
Blowd in the morn; in evening died
But Mercy changd Death into Sleep;
The Sexes rose to work & weep.

Thou Mother of my Mortal part
With cruelty didst mould my Heart
And with false self- decieving tears
Didst bind my Nostrils, Eyes & Ears,

Didst close my Tongue in senseless clay
And me to Mortal Life betray:
The Death of Jesus set me free,
Then what have I to do with thee?

A DIVINE IMAGE

Cruelty has a Human Heart
And Jealousy a Human Face,
Terror the Human Form Divine
And Secrecy the Human Dress.

The Human Dress is forged Iron,
The Human Form a fiery Forge,
The Human Face a Furnace seal'd,
The Human Heart its hungry Gorge.

THE BALLADS (OR PICKERING) MANUSCRIPT

([?after 1807])

The Mental Traveller

I traveld thro' a Land of Men,
A Land of Men & Women too
And heard & saw such dreadful things
As cold Earth wanderers never knew

For there the Babe is born in joy
That was begotten in dire woe
Just as we Reap in joy the fruit
Which we in bitter tears did Sow

And if the Babe is born a Boy
He's given to a Woman Old
Who nails him down upon a rock,
Catches his Shrieks in Cups of gold.

She binds iron thorns around his head,
She pierces both his hands & feet,
She cuts his heart out at his side
To make it feel both cold & heat.

Her fingers number every Nerve
Just as a Miser counts his gold;
She lives upon his shrieks & cries
And She grows young as he grows old

Till he becomes a bleeding youth
And she becomes a Virgin bright;
Then he rends up his Manacles
And binds her down for his delight.

He plants himself in all her Nerves
Just as a Husbandman his mould
And She becomes his dwelling place
And Garden fruitful Seventy fold.

An aged Shadow soon he fades
Wandering round an Earthly Cot
Full filled all with gems & gold
Which he by industry had got

And these are the gems of the Human Soul,
The rubies & pearls of a lovesick eye,
The countless gold of the akeing heart,
The martyr's groan & the lover's sigh.

They are his meat, they are his drink;
He feeds the Beggar & the Poor

And the way faring Traveller;
For ever open is his door.

His grief is their eternal joy;
They make the roofs & walls to ring
Till from the fire on the hearth
A little Female Babe does spring

And she is all of solid fire
And gems & gold that none his hand
Dares stretch to touch her Baby form
Or wrap her in his swaddling- band

But She comes to the Man she loves
If young or old or rich or poor;
They soon drive out the aged Host
A Beggar at another's door.

He wanders weeping far away
Untill some other take him in Oft blind & age- bent, sore distrest
Until he can a Maiden win

And to allay his freezing Age
The Poor Man takes her in his arms;
The Cottage fades before his Sight,
The garden & its lovely Charms.

The Guests are scatterd thro' the land
For the Eye altering alters all;
The Senses roll themselves in fear
And the flat Earth becomes a Ball;
The Stars, Sun, Moon all shrink away
A desert vast without a bound
And nothing left to eat or drink
And a dark desert all around.

The honey of her Infant lips,
The bread & wine of her sweet smile,
The wild game of her roving Eye
Does him to Infancy beguile

For as he eats & drinks he grows
Younger & younger every day
And on the desert wild they both
Wander in terror & dismay.

Like the wild Stag she flees away,
Her fear plants many a thicket wild
While he pursues her night & day
By various arts of Love beguild,

By various arts of Love & Hate
Till the wide desert planted oer
With Labyrinths of wayward Love

Where roams the Lion, Wolf & Boar

Till he becomes a wayward Babe
And she a weeping Woman Old.
Then many a Lover wanders here;
The Sun & Stars are nearer rolld.

The tree brings forth sweet Extacy
To all who in the desert roam
Till many a City there is Built
And many a pleasant Shepherd's home

But when they find the frowning Babe
Terror strikes thro the region wide;
They cry 'the Babe, the Babe is Born'
And flee away on Every side

For who dare touch the frowning form
His arm is witherd to its root;
Lions, Boars, Wolves all howling flee
And every Tree does shed its fruit

And none can touch the frowning form
Except it be a Woman Old;
She nails him down upon the Rock
And all is done as I have told.

译者序

这十封信是赖内·马利亚·里尔克（Rainer Maria Rilke，1875—1926）在他三十岁左右时写给一个青年诗人的。里尔克除却他诗人的天职外，还是一个永不疲倦的书简家；他一生写过无数比这十封更亲切、更美的信。但是这十封信却浑然天成，无形中自有首尾；向着青年说得最多。里边他论到诗和艺术，论到两性的爱，严肃和冷嘲，悲哀和怀疑，论到生活和职业的艰难——这都是青年人心里时常起伏的问题。

人们爱把青年比作春，这比喻是正确的。可是彼此的相似点与其说是青年人的晴朗有如春阳的明丽，倒不如从另一方面看，青年人的愁苦、青年人的生长，更像那在阴云暗淡的风里、雨里、寒里演变着的春。因为后者比前者更漫长、沉重而更有意义。我时常在任何一个青年的面前，便联想起荷兰画家梵·高的一幅题作《春》的画：那幅画背景是几所矮小、狭窄的房屋，中央立着一棵桃树或杏树，杈丫的枝干上寂寞地开着几朵粉红色的花。我想，这棵树是经过了长期的风雨，如今还在忍受着春寒，四围是一个穷乏的世界，在枝干内却流动着生命的汁浆。这是一个真实的、没有夸耀的春天！青年人又何尝不是这样呢，生命无时不需要生长，而外边却不永远是日光和温暖的风。他们要担当许多的寒冷和无情、淡漠和误解。他们一切都充满了新鲜的生气，而社会的习俗却是腐旧的，腐旧得像是洗染了许多遍的衣衫。他们觉得内心和外界无法协调，处处受着限制，同时又不能像植物似的那样沉默，他们要向人告诉——他们寻找能够听取他们的话的人，他们寻找能从他们表现力不很充足的话里体会出他们的本意而给以解答的过来人。在这样的寻找中几乎是一百个青年有一百个失望了。但是有一人，本来是一时的兴会，写出一封抒发自己内心状况的信，寄给一个不相识的诗人，那诗人读完了信有所会心，想起自己的青少年时代，仿佛在抚摸他过去身上的伤痕，随即来一封，回答一封，对于每个问题都给一个精辟的回答和分析——同时他却一再声明，人人都要自己料理，旁人是很难给以一些帮助的。

可是他告诉我们，人到世上来，是艰难而孤单。一个个的人在世上好似园里的那些并排着的树。枝枝叶叶也许有些呼应吧，但是它们的根，它们盘结在地下摄取营养的根却各不相干，又沉静，又孤单。人每每为了无谓的喧嚣，忘却生命的根蒂，不能在寂寞中、在对草木鸟兽（它们和我们一样都是生物）的观察中体验一些生的意义，只在

人生的表面上永远往下滑过去。这样，自然无所谓艰难，也无所谓孤单，只是隐瞒和欺骗。欺骗和隐瞒的工具，里尔克告诉我们说，是社会的习俗。人在遇见了艰难，遇见了恐怖，遇见了严重的事物而无法应付时，便会躲在习俗的下边去求它的庇护。它成了人们的避难所，却不是安身立命的地方——谁若是要真实地生活，就必须脱离开现成的习俗，自己独立成为一个生存者，担当生活上种种的问题，和我们的始祖所担当过的一样，不能容有一些儿代替。

在这几封信里，处处流露着这种意义，使读者最受感动。当我于1931年的春天，第一次读到这一小册书信时，觉得字字都好似从自己心里流出来，又流回到自己心里，感到一种满足，一种兴奋，禁不住读完一封，便翻译一封，为的是寄给不能读德文的远方的朋友。如今已经过了六年，原书不知又重版多少次，而我的译稿则在行篋内睡了几年觉，始终没有印成书。现在我把它取出来，略加修改付印，仍然是献给不能读德文原文的朋友。

关于里尔克的一生和他的著作，不能在这短短的序中有所叙述。去年他去世十周年纪念时，上海的《新诗》月刊第一卷第三期，曾为他出了一个特辑，读者可以参看。他的作品有一部分已由卞之琳、梁宗岱、冯至译成中文，散见《沉钟》半月刊、《华胥社论文集》、《新诗》月刊、大公报的《文艺》和《艺术周刊》中。

至于收信人的身世，我知道得很少，大半正如他的《引言》上所说的一样，后来生活把他“赶入了正是这位诗人温暖、和蔼而多情的关怀”所为他“防护的境地”了。

1937年5月1日

收信人引言

1902年的深秋——我在维也纳·新城陆军学校的校园里，坐在古老的栗树下读着一本书。我读时是这样专心，几乎没有注意到，那位在我们学校中唯一不是军官的教授、博学而慈祥的校内牧师荷拉捷克（Horaček）是怎样走近我的身边。他从我的手里取去那本书，看看封面，摇摇头。“赖内·马利亚·里尔克的诗？”他深思着问。随后他翻了几页，读了几行，望着远方出神，最后才点头说道：“勒内·里尔克 [1] 从陆军学生变成一个诗人了。”

于是我知道一些关于这个瘦弱苍白的儿童的事，十五年前他的父母希望他将来做军官，把他送到圣波尔腾（Sankt-Pölten）的陆军初级学校读书。那时荷拉捷克在那里当牧师，他还能清清楚楚想得起这个陆军学生。他说他是一个平静、严肃、天资很高的少年，喜欢寂寞，忍受着宿舍生活的压抑，四年后跟别的学生一齐升入梅里史·外司克尔心（Mäbrisch-Weisskirchen）地方的陆军高级中学。可是他的体格担受不起，于是他的父母把他从学校里召回，教他在故乡布拉格继续读书。此后他的生活怎样发展，荷拉捷克就不知道了。

按照这一切很容易了解，这时我立即决定把我的诗的试作寄给赖内·马利亚·里尔克，请他批评。我还没有满二十岁，就逼近一种职业的门槛，我正觉得这职业与我的意趣相违，我希望，如果向旁人去寻求理解，就不如向这位《自庆》 [2] 的作者去寻求了。我无意中在寄诗时还附加一封信，信上自述是这样坦白，我在这以前和以后从不曾向第二个人做过。

几个星期过去，回信来了。信上印着巴黎的戳记，握在手里很沉重；从头至尾写着与信封上同样清晰美丽而固定的字体。于是我同赖内·马利亚·里尔克开始了不断的通信，继续到1908年才渐渐稀疏，因为生活把我赶入了正是诗人的温暖、和蔼而多情的关怀所为我防护的境地。

这些事并不重要。所重要的是下边的这十封信，为了理解里尔克所生活所创造的世界是重要的，为了今日和明天许多生长者和完成者也是重要的。一个伟大的人、旷百世而一遇的人说话的地方，小人物必须沉默。

第一封信

尊敬的先生：

你的信前几天才转到我这里。我要感谢你信里博大而亲爱的信赖。此外我能做的事很少。我不能评论你的诗艺；因为每个批评的意图都离我太远。再没有比批评的文字那样同一件艺术品隔膜的了；同时总是演出来较多或较少的凑巧的误解。一切事物都不是像人们要我们相信的那样可言传的，它们完全在一个语言从未达到过的空间；可是比一切更不可言传的是艺术品，它们是神秘的生存，它们的生命在我们无常的生命之外赓续着。

我既然预先写出这样的意见，可是我还得向你说，你的诗没有自己的特点，自然暗中也静静地潜伏着向着个性发展的趋势。我感到这种情形最明显的是在最后一首《我的灵魂》里，这首诗字里行间显示出一些自己的东西。还有那首优美的诗《给雷渥琶地》^[1]也洋溢着一种同这位伟大而寂寞的诗人精神上的契合。虽然如此，你的诗本身还不能算什么，还不是独立的，就是那最后的一首和《给雷渥琶地》也不是。我读你的诗感到有些不能明确说出的缺陷，可是你随诗寄来的亲切的信，却把这些缺陷无形中给我说明了。

你在信里问你的诗好不好。你问我。你从前也问过别人。你把它们寄给杂志。你把你的诗跟别人的比较；若是某些编辑部退回了你的试作，你就不安。那么（因为你允许我向你劝告），我请你，把这一切放弃吧！你向外看，是你现在最不应该做的事。没有人能给你出主意，没有人能够帮助你。只有一个唯一的方法。请你走向内心。探索那叫你写作的缘由，考察它的根是不是盘在你心的深处；你要坦白承认，万一你写不出来，是不是必得因此而死去。这是最重要的——在你夜深最寂静的时刻问问自己：我必须写吗？你要在自身内挖掘一个深的答复。若是这个答复表示同意，而你也能够以一种坚强、单纯的“我必须”来对答那个严肃的问题，那么，你就根据这个需要去建造你的生活吧；你的生活直到它最寻常最细琐的时刻，都必须是这个创造冲动的标志和证明。然后你接近自然。你要像一个原人似的练习去说你所见、所体验、所爱以及所遗失的事物。不要写爱情诗，先要回避那些太流行、太普通的格式：它们是最难的，因为那里聚有大量好的或是一部分精美的流传下来的作品，从中再表现出自己的特点则需要一种巨大而熟练的力量。所以你要躲开那些普遍的题材，而归依于你自己日常生活呈现给你的事物；你描写你的悲哀与愿望，流逝的思

想与对于某一种美的信念——用深幽、寂静、谦虚的真诚描写这一切，用你周围的事物、梦中的图影、回忆中的对象表现自己。如果你觉得你的日常生活很贫乏，你不要抱怨它；还是怨你自己吧，怨你还不够做一个诗人来呼唤生活的宝藏，因为对于创造者没有贫乏，也没有贫瘠不关痛痒的地方。即使你自已是在一座监狱里，狱墙使人世间的喧嚣和你的官感隔离——你不还永远据有你的童年吗，这贵重的富丽的宝藏，回忆的宝库？你往那方面多多用心吧！试行拾捡起过去久已消沉了的动人的往事；你的个性将渐渐固定，你的寂寞将渐渐扩大，成为一所朦胧的住室，别人的喧扰只远远地从旁走过——如果从这收视反听，从这向自己世界的深处产生出“诗”来，你一定不会再想问别人，这是不是好诗。你也不会再尝试让杂志去注意这些作品，因为你将在作品里看到你亲爱的天然产物，你生活的断片与声音。一件艺术品是好的，只要它是从“必要”里产生的。在它这样的根源里就含有对它的评判：别无他途。所以，尊敬的先生，除此以外我也没有别的劝告：走向内心，探索你生活发源的深处，在它的发源处你将会得到问题的答案，是不是“必须”创造。它怎么说，你怎么接受，不必加以说明。它也许告诉你，你的职责是艺术家。那么你就接受这个命运，承担起它的重负和伟大，不要关心从外边来的报酬。因为创造者必须自己是一个完整的世界，在自身和自身所联接的自然界里得到一切。

但也许经过一番向自己、向寂寞的探索之后，你就断念做一个诗人了（那也够了，感到自己不写也能够生活时，就可以使我们决然不再去尝试）；就是这样，我向你所请求的反思也不是徒然的。无论如何，你的生活将从此寻得自己的道路，并且那该是良好、丰富、广阔的道路，我所愿望于你的比我所能说出的多得多。

我还应该向你说什么呢？我觉得一切都本其自然；归结我也只是这样劝你，静静地严肃地从你的发展中成长起来；没有比向外看和从外面等待回答会更严重地伤害你的发展了，你要知道，你的问题也许只是你最深的情感在你最微妙的时刻所能回答的。

我很高兴，在你的信里见到了荷拉捷克教授的名字；我对于这位亲切的学者怀有很大的敬意和多年不变的感激。请你替我向他致意；他至今还记得我，我实在引为荣幸。

你盛意寄给我的诗，现奉还。我再一次感谢你对我信赖的博大与忠诚；我本来是个陌生人，不能有所帮助，但我要通过这封本着良知写的忠实的回信报答你的依赖于万一。

以一切的忠诚与关怀：

赖内·马利亚·里尔克

第二封信

请你原谅我，亲爱的、尊敬的先生，我直到今天才感谢地想到你2月24日的来信：这段时间我很苦恼，不是病，但是一种流行性感冒类的衰弱困扰我做什么都没有力气。最后，这种现象一点也没变，我才来到这曾经疗养过我一次的南方的海滨。但是我还未康复，写作还困难，你只得接受这封短信代替我更多的心意。

你自然必须知道，你的每封信都永远使我欢喜，可是你要宽恕我的回答，它也许对你没有什么帮助；因为在根本处，也正是在那最深邃、最重要的事物上我们是无名地孤单；要是一个人能够对别人劝告，甚至帮助时，彼此间必须有许多事情实现了，完成了，一切事物必须有一个完整的安排，才会有一次的效验。

今天我只要向你谈两件事：第一是“暗嘲”（Ironie）^[1]：

你不要让你被它支配，尤其是在创造力贫乏的时刻。在创造力丰富的时候你可以试行运用它，当作一种方法去理解人生。纯洁地用，它就是纯洁的，不必因为它而感到羞愧；如果你觉得你同它过于亲密，又怕同它的亲密日见增长，那么你就转向伟大、严肃的事物吧，在它们面前它会变得又渺小又可怜。寻求事物的深处：在深处暗嘲是走不下去的——若是你把它引近伟大的边缘，你应该立即考量这个理解的方式（暗嘲）是不是发自你本性的一种需要。因为在严肃事物的影响下（如果它是偶然发生的），它会脱离了你（如果它真是天生就属于你），它就会强固成为一个严正的工具，而列入你创作艺术的一些方法的行列中。

第二件我今天要向你说的：

在我所有的书中只有少数的几本是不能离身的，有两部书甚至无论我走到哪里都在我的行囊里。此刻它们也在我的身边：一部是《圣经》，一部是丹麦伟大诗人茵斯·彼得·雅阔布生^[2]的书。我忽然想起，不知你读过他的著作没有。这很容易买到，因为有一部分很好的翻译在雷克拉木（Reclam）万有文库中出版。你去买他的《六篇短篇小说》和他的长篇《尼尔·律内》（Niels Lyhne）。你先读前一本的第一篇《摩根斯》（Mogens）。一个世界将要展现在你的面前，一个世界的幸福、丰富、不可捉摸的伟大。请你在这两本书里体验一些时，学你以为值得学的事物，但最重要的是你要爱它们。这种爱将为你得到千千万万的回报，并且，无论你的生活取怎样的途径——我确

信它将穿过你的成长的丝纶，在你一切经验、失望与欢悦的线索中成为最重要的一条。

如果我应该说，从谁那里我体验到一些关于创作的本质以及它的深奥与它的永恒的意义，那么我只能说出两个名字：一个是雅阔布生，伟大的诗人；一个是奥古斯特·罗丹 [3]，那在现存的艺术家中无人能与比拟的雕刻家。

愿你前途一切成功！

你的：赖内·马利亚·里尔克

第三封信

亲爱的、尊敬的先生，你复活节的来信给我许多欢喜；因为它告诉我许多关于你的好消息，并且像你对雅阔布生伟大而可爱的艺术所抒发的意见也可以证明，我把你的生活和生活中的许多问题引到这丰富的世界里来，我并没有做错。

现在你该读《尼尔·律内》了，那是一部壮丽而深刻的书；越读越好像一切都在书中，从生命最轻妙的芬芳到它沉重的果实的厚味。这里没有一件事不能被我们去理解、领会、经验，以及在回忆的余韵中亲切地认识；没有一种体验是过于渺小的，就是很小的事件的开展都像是一个大的命运，并且这命运本身像是一块奇异的广大的织物，每条线都被一只无限温柔的手引来，排在另一条线的旁边，千百条互相持衡。你将要得到首次读这本书时的大幸福，通过无数意料不到的惊奇仿佛在一个新的梦里。可是我能够向你说，往后我们读这些书时永远是个惊讶者，它们永不能失去它们的魅力，连它们首次给予读者的童话的境界也不会失掉。

我们只在那些书中享受日深，感激日笃，观察更为明确而单纯，对于生的信仰更为深沉，在生活里也更幸福博大——

往后你要读那部叙述马丽·葛鲁伯夫人的命运与渴望的奇书^[1]，还有雅阔布生的信札、日记、片断，最后还有他的诗（纵使是平庸的德文翻译），也自有不能磨灭的声韵（这时我要劝告你，遇机会时可以去买一部雅阔布生的全集，一切都在里边。共三册，译文很好，莱比锡外根·笛得利许（Eugen Diederichs）书店出版，每册据我所知只卖五六个马克）。

关于那篇非常细腻而精练的短篇小说《这里该有蔷薇……》，你对于作者不同的意见实在很对。顺便我劝你尽可能少读审美批评的文字——它们多半是一偏之见，已经枯僵在没有生命的硬化中，毫无意义；不然就是乖巧地卖弄笔墨，今天这派得势，明天又是相反的那派。艺术品都是源于无穷的寂寞，没有比批评更难望其边际的了。只有爱能够理解它们，把住它们，认识它们的价值——面对每个这样的说明、评论或导言，你要相信你自己和你的感觉；万一你错误了，你内在的生命自然的成长会慢慢地随时使你认识你的错误，把你引到另外的一条路上。让你的判断力静静地发展，发展跟每个进步一样，是深深地从内心出来，既不能强迫，也不能催促。一切都是时至才能产

生。让每个印象与一种情感的萌芽在自身里、在暗中、在不能言说，不知不觉、个人理解所不能达到的地方完成。以深深的谦虚与忍耐去期待一个新的豁然贯通的时刻：这才是艺术地生活，无论是理解或是创造，都一样。

不能计算时间，年月都无效，就是十年有时也等于虚无。艺术家是：不算，不数；像树木似的成熟，不勉强挤它的汁液，满怀信心地立在春日的暴风雨中，也不担心后边没有夏天来到。夏天终归是会来的。但它只向着忍耐的人们走来；他们在这里，好像永恒总在他們面前，无忧无虑地寂静而广大。我天天学习，在我所感谢的痛苦中学习：“忍耐”是一切！

谈到理洽特·德美尔 [2]：他的书（同时也可以说他这个人，我泛泛地认识他），我觉得是这样，每逢我读到他的一页好诗时，我常常怕读到第二页，又把前边的一切破坏，将可爱之处变得索然无味。你把他的性格刻画得很对：“情欲地生活，情欲地创作。”——其实艺术家的体验是这样不可思议地接近于性的体验，接近于它的痛苦与它的快乐，这两种现象本来只是同一渴望与幸福的不同的形式。若是可以不说“情欲”——而说是“性”，是博大的、纯洁的、没有被教会的谬误所诋毁的意义中的“性”，那么他的艺术或者会很博大而永久地重要。他诗人的力是博大的，坚强似一种原始的冲动，在他自身内有勇往直前的韵律爆发出来，像是从雄浑的山中。

但我觉得，这个力并不永远是完全直率的，不无装腔作态（这对于创造者实在是一个严峻的考验，他必须永远不曾意识到、不曾预感到他最好的美德，如果他要保持住那美德的自然而混元的境地）。现在这个鼓动着他的本性的力向性的方面进发，但是它却没有找到它所需要的那个纯洁的人。那里没有一个成熟而纯洁的性的世界，只有一个缺乏广泛的“人性”，而只限于“男性”的世界，充满了情欲、迷醉与不安，为男人旧日的成见与傲慢的心所累，使爱失却了本来的面目。因为他只是作为男人去爱，不是作为人去爱，所以在他的性的感觉中有一些狭窄、粗糙、仇恨、无常，没有永久性的成分存在，减低艺术的价值，使艺术支离晦涩。这样的艺术不会没有污点，它被时代与情欲所渲染，很少能持续存在（多数的艺术却都是这样）。虽然，我们也可以享受其中一些卓绝的地方，可是不要沉溺迷失，变成德美尔世界中的信徒；他的世界是这样无穷地烦恼，充满了奸情、迷乱，同真实的命运距离太远了；真实的命运比起这些暂时的忧郁使人更多地忍受痛苦，但也给人以更多的机会走向伟大，更多的勇气向着永恒。

最后关于我的书，我很愿意送你一整份你所喜欢的。但我很穷，并且我的书一出版就不属于我了。我自己不能买，虽然我常常想赠给能够对于我的书表示爱好的人们。

所以我在另纸上写给你我最近出版的书名和出版的书局（只限于最近的；若是算上从前的共有十二三种），亲爱的先生，我把这书单给你，遇机会时你任意订购好了。

我愿意我的书在你的身边。

珍重！

第四封信

十天前我又苦恼又疲倦地离开了巴黎，到了一处广大的北方的平原，它的旷远、寂静与天空本应使我恢复健康。可是我却走入一个雨的季节，直到今天在风势不定的田野上才闪透出光来；于是我就用这第一瞬间的光明来问候你，亲爱的先生。

亲爱的卡卜斯先生：我很久没有答复你的信，我并没有忘记它——反而它是常常使我从许多信中检出来再读一遍的，并且在你的信里我认识你非常亲切。那是你5月2日的信，你一定记得起这封信。我现在在这远方无边寂静中重读你的信，你那对于生活的美好的忧虑感动我，比我在巴黎时已经感到的还深；在巴黎因为过分的喧嚣，一切都发出异样的声音，使万物战栗。这里周围是伟大的田野，从海上吹来阵阵的风，这里我觉得，那些问题与情感在它们的深处自有它们本来的生命，没有人能够给你解答；因为就是最好的字句也要失去真意，如果它们要解释那最轻妙、几乎不可言说的事物。虽然，我却相信你不会永远得不到解决，若是你委身于那同现在使我的眼目为之一新的相类似的事物。若是你依托自然，依托自然中的单纯，依托于那几乎没人注意到的渺小，这渺小会不知不觉地变得庞大而不能测度；若是你对于微小都怀有这样的爱，作为一个侍奉者质朴地去赢得一些好像贫穷的事物的信赖，那么，一切对于你就较为轻易、较为一致、较为容易和解了，也许不是在那惊讶着退却的理智中，而是在你最深的意识、觉醒与悟解中得到和解。你是这样年轻，一切都在开始，亲爱的先生，我要尽我的所能请求你，对于你心里一切的疑难要多多忍耐，要去爱这些“问题的本身”，像是爱一间锁闭了的房屋，或是一本用别种文字写成的书。现在你不要去追求那些你还不能得到的答案，因为你还不能在生活里体验到它们。一切都要亲身生活。现在你就在这些问题里“生活”吧。或者，不大注意，渐渐会有那遥远的一天，你生活到了能解答这些问题的境地。也许你自身内就负有可能性：去组织、去形成一种特别幸福与纯洁的生活方式；你要向那方面修养——但是，无论什么来到，你都要以广大的信任领受；如果它是从你的意志里、从任何一种内身的窘困里产生的，那么你要好好地负担着它，什么也不要憎恶——“性”，是很难的。可是我们分内的事都很难；其实一切严肃的事都是艰难的，而一切又是严肃的。如果你认识了这一层，并且肯这样从你自身，从你的禀性，从你的经验、你的童年、你的生命力出发，得到一种完全自己的（不是被因袭和习俗所影响的）对于“性”的关系，那么你就不要怕你有所迷惑，或是玷污了你最好的

所有。

切，也许这世界伟大的革新就在于这一点：男人同女人从一切错误的感觉与嫌忌里解放出来，不作为对立面互相寻找，而彼此是兄妹或邻居一般，共同以“人”的立场去工作，以便简捷地、严肃而忍耐地负担那放在他们肩上的艰难的“性”。

凡是将来有一天许多人或能实现的事，现在寂寞的人已经可以开始准备了，用他比较确切的双手来建造。亲爱的先生，所以你要爱你的寂寞，负担那它以悠扬的怨诉给你引来的痛苦。你说，你身边的都同你疏远了，其实这就是你周围扩大的开始。如果你的亲近都离远了，那么你的旷远已经在星空下开展得很广大；你要为你的成长欢喜，可是向那里你不能带进来一个人，要好好对待那些落在后边的人，在他们面前你要稳定自若，不要用你的怀疑苦恼他们，也不要利用你的信心或欢悦惊吓他们，这是他们所不能了解的。同他们寻找出一种简单而诚挚的谐和，这种谐和，任凭你自己将来怎么转变，都无须更改；要爱惜他们那种生疏方式的生活，要谅解那些进入老境的人；他们对于你所信任的孤独是畏惧的。要避免去给那在父母与子女间常演出的戏剧增加材料；这要费去许多子女的力，消蚀许多父母的爱，纵使他们的爱不了解我们；究竟是在爱着、温暖着我们。不要向他们问计，也不要计较了解；但要相信那种为你保存下来像是一份遗产似的爱，你要信任在这爱中自有力量存在，自有一种幸福，无须脱离这个幸福才能扩大你的世界。

那很好，你先进入一个职业 [1]，它使你成为独立的人，事事完全由你自己料理。你耐心地等着吧，看你内心的生活是不是由于这职业的形式而受到限制。我认为这职业是很艰难很不容易对付的，因为它被广大的习俗所累，并且不容人对于它的问题有个人的意见存在。但是你的寂寞将在这些很生疏的关系中间是你的立足点和家乡，从这里出来你将寻得你一切的道路。

我一切的祝愿都在陪伴着你，我信任你。

第五封信

亲爱的、尊敬的先生：

我在佛罗伦萨收到你8月29日的信，现在——两个月了——我才写回信告诉你。请你原谅我的迟延——我在路上不喜欢写信，因为我写信除去必需的纸笔外还要用：一些幽静、寂寞和一个不太生疏的时刻。

我们在六个星期前到了罗马，那时还是个空虚、炎热、时疫流行的罗马，这种环境又添上许多现实生活上安排的困难，更助长围绕我们的不安，简直没有终结，使我们尝尽了异乡漂泊的痛苦。更加之以：罗马（如果我们还不认识它）在我们到达的头几天真令人窒闷悲哀——由于它放射出来的死气沉沉忧郁的博物馆的空气；由于它精华已尽，而又勉强保持着的过去时代的储存（从中滋养着一个可怜的现在）；由于这些，无名的、被学者和语言学家们所维护、经常不断的意大利旅游者所效仿的、对于一切改头换面或是毁败了的物品的过分的估价，根本这些物品也不过是另一个时代另一种生活的偶然的残余，这生活已经不是我们的了，而也不应该是我们的。在日日担心防范的几个星期后，虽还有些纷乱，却终于回到自己的世界，我们才说：这里并不比别的地方有更多的美，这些被世代代所叹赏的对象，都经过俗手的修补，没有意义，无所包含，没有精神，没有价值——但这里也自有许多美，因为无论什么地方都有它的美。永远生动的流水从古老的沟渠流入这座大城，它们在许多广场的白石盘上欢舞，散入宽阔的贮水池中，昼间泠泠有声，夜晚的声音更为清澈，这里的夜色广大而星光灿烂，拂着习习轻风。并且有许多名园，使人难忘的林荫路与石阶——米霞盎基罗 [1] 所设计的石阶，那是按着向下流水的姿势建筑的石阶：宽宽地向下一层生出一层，像是后浪接着前浪。由于这样的印象，我们凝聚精神，从那些傲慢的、谈谈讲讲的“多数”（那是多么爱饶舌呀！）回到自身内，慢慢地学习认识“少数”，在少数的事物里延绵着我们所爱的永恒和我们轻轻地分担着的寂寞。

现在我还住在城内卡皮托丘上 [2]，离那最美的从罗马艺术中保存下来的马克·奥雷尔 [3] 骑马式的石像不远；但是在几个星期后我将迁入一个寂静而简单的地方，是一座老的望楼，它深深地消失在一片大园林里，足以躲避城市的喧嚣与纷扰。我将要在那里住一冬，享受那无边的寂静，从这寂静中我期待着良好而丰盛的时间的赠品……

到那时我将常常在家，再给你写较长的信，还要谈到关于你信中的事。今天我必须告诉你的是（这已经是不对了，我没有早一点告诉你），你信中提到的那本书（其中想必有你的作品）没有寄到。是不是从沃普斯韦德给你退回去了（因为包裹不能转到外国）？退回是最好的，我愿意得到证实。希望不要遗失——这在意大利的邮务并不是例外的事——可惜。

我很愿意接到这本书（像是我愿意接到你所写的一切一样）；还有你最近的诗（如果你寄给我），我要永远尽我的所能诚心地一读再读，好好体验。

以多多的愿望和祝福：

你的赖内·马利亚·里尔克

第六封信

我的亲爱的卡卜斯先生：

你不会得不到我的祝愿，如果圣诞节到了，你在这节日中比往日更深沉地负担着你的寂寞。若是你觉得它过于广大，那么你要因此而欢喜（你问你自己吧），哪有寂寞，不是广大的呢；我们只有“一个”寂寞又大又不容易负担，并且几乎人人都有这危险的时刻，他们情愿把寂寞和任何一种庸俗无聊的社交，和与任何一个不相配的人勉强谐和的假象去交换……但也许正是这些时候，寂寞在生长；它的生长是痛苦的，像是男孩的发育，是悲哀的，像是春的开始。你不要为此而迷惑。我们最需要的却只是：寂寞，广大的内心的寂寞。“走向内心”，长时期不遇一人——这我们必须能够做到。居于寂寞，像人们在儿童时那样寂寞，大人们来来往往，跟一些好像很重要的事务纠缠，大人们是那样匆忙，可是儿童并不懂得他们做些什么事。

如果一天我们洞察到他们的事务是贫乏的，他们的职业是枯燥的，跟生命没有关联，那么我们为什么不从自己世界的深处，从自己寂寞的广处（这寂寞的本身就是工作、地位、职业），和儿童一样把它们当作一种生疏的事去观看呢？为什么把一个儿童聪明的“不解”抛开，而对于许多事物采取防御和蔑视的态度呢？“不解”是居于寂寞；防御与蔑视虽说是设法和这些事物隔离，同时却是和它们发生纠葛了。

亲爱的先生，你去思考你自身负担着的世界；至于怎样称呼这思考，那就随你的心意了；不管是自己童年的回忆，或是对于自己将来的想望——只是要多多注意从你生命里出现的事物，要把它放在你周围所看到的一切之上。你最内心的事物值得你全心全意地去爱，你必须为它多方工作；并且不要浪费许多时间和精力去解释你对于人们的态度。“到底谁向你说，你本来有一个态度呢？——我知道你的职业是枯燥的，处处和你相违背，我早已看出你的苦恼，我知道，它将要来了。现在它来了，我不能排解你的苦恼，我只能劝你去想一想，是不是一切职业都是这样，向个人尽是无理的要求，尽是敌意，它同样也饱受了许多低声忍气、不满于那枯燥的职责的人们的憎恶。你要知道，你现在必须应付的职业并不见得比旁的职业被什么习俗呀、偏见呀、谬误呀连累得更厉害；若是真有些炫耀着一种更大的自由的职业，那就不会有职业在它自身内广远而宽阔，和那些从中组成真实生

活的伟大事物相通了。只有寂寞的个人，他跟一个“物”一样被放置在深邃的自然规律下，当他走向刚破晓的早晨，或是向外望那充满非常事件的夜晚，当他感觉到那里发生什么事，一切地位便会脱离了他，像是脱离一个死者，纵使他正处在真正的生活的中途。亲爱的卡卜斯先生，凡是你现在做军官所必须经验的，你也许在任何一种现有的职业里都会感到，甚至纵使你脱离各种职务，独自同社会寻找一种轻易而独立的接触，这种压迫之感也不会对你有什么减轻——到处都是一样，但是这并不足使我们恐惧悲哀；如果你在人我之间没有谐和，你就试行与物接近，它们不会遗弃你；还有夜，还有风——那吹过树林、掠过田野的风；在物中间和动物那里，一切都充满了你可以分担的事；还有儿童，他们同你在儿时所经验过的一样，又悲哀，又幸福——如果你想起你的童年，你就又在那些寂寞的儿童中间了，成人人们是无所谓的，他们的尊严没有价值。

你为什么 not 这样想，想他是将要来到的，他要从永恒里降生，是一棵树上最后的果实，我们不过是这树上的树叶？是谁阻拦你，不让你把他的诞生放在将来转变的时代，不让你度过你的一生像是度过这伟大的孕期内又痛苦又美丽的一日？你没有看见吗，一切发生的事怎样总是重新开始？那就不能是神的开始吗？啊，开端的本身永远是这般美丽！如果 he 是最完全的，那么较为微小的事物在他以前就不应该存在吗，以便他从丰满与过剩中能够有所选择？——他不应该是个最后者吗，将一切握诸怀抱？若是我们所希求的他早已过去了，那我们还有什么意义呢？

像是蜜蜂酿蜜那样，我们从万物中采撷最甜美的资料来建造我们的神。我们甚至以渺小，没有光彩的事物开始（只要是出于爱），我们以工作，继之以休息，以一种沉默，或是以一种微小的寂寞的欢悦，以我们没有朋友、没有同伴单独所做的一切来建造他，他，我们并不能看到，正如我们的祖先不能看见我们一样。可是那些久已逝去

的人，依然存在于我们的生命里，作为我们的禀赋，作为我们命运的负担，作为循环着的血液，作为从时间的深处升发出来的姿态。

现在你所希望不到的事，将来不会有一天在最遥远、最终极的神的那里实现吗？

亲爱的卡卜斯先生，在这虔诚的情感中庆祝你的圣诞节吧，也许神正要用你这生命的恐惧来开始；你过的这几天也许正是一切在你生命里为他工作的时期，正如你在儿时已经有一次很辛苦地为他工作过一样。好好地忍耐，不要沮丧，你想，如果春天要来，大地就使它一点点地完成，我们所能做的最少量的工作，不会使神的生成比起大地之于春天更为艰难。

祝你快乐，勇敢！

第七封信

我的亲爱的卡卜斯先生：

自从我接到你上次的来信，已经过了许久。请你不要见怪。先是工作，随后是事务的干扰，最后是小病，总阻挡着我给你写回信，因为我给你写信是要在良好平静的时刻。现在我觉得好些了（初春的恶劣多变的过渡时期在这里也使人觉得很 discomfort），亲爱的卡卜斯先生，我问候你，并且（这是我衷心愿做的事）就我所知道的来回答你。

你看，我把你的十四行诗抄下来了，因为我觉得它美丽简练，是在很适当的形式里产生的。在我所读到的你的诗中，这是最好的一首。现在我又把它誊抄给你，因为我以为这很有意义，并且充满新鲜的体验，在别人的笔下又看到自己的作品。你读这首诗，像是别人作的，可是你将要在最深处感到它怎样更是你的。

这是我的一种快乐，常常读这首十四行诗和你的来信；为了这两件事我感谢你。

在寂寞中你不要徬徨迷惑，由于你自身内有一些愿望要从这寂寞里脱身——也正是这个愿望，如果你平静地、卓越地，像一件工具似的去运用它，它就会帮助你把你的寂寞扩展到广远的地方。一般人（用因袭的帮助）把一切都轻易地去解决，而且按着轻易中最轻易的方面；但这是很显然的，我们必须认定艰难；凡是生存者都认定，自然界中一切都是按照自己的方式生长，防御，表现出来自己，无论如何都要生存，抵抗一切反对的力量。我们知道的很少；但我们必须委身于艰难却是一件永不会丢开我们的信念。寂寞地生存是好的，因为寂寞是艰难的；只要是艰难的事，就有使我们更有理由为它工作。

爱，很好，因为爱是艰难的。以人去爱人：这也许是给与我们的最艰难、最重大的事，是最后的实验与考试，是最高工作，别的工作都不过是为它而做的准备。所以一切正在开始的青年们还不能爱；他们必须学习。他们必须用他们整个的生命、用一切的力量，集聚他们寂寞、痛苦和向上激动的心去学习爱。可是学习的时期永远是一个长久的专心致志的时期，爱就长期地深深地侵入生命——寂寞，增强而深入的孤独生活，是为了爱着的人。爱的要义并不是什么倾心、献身、与第二者结合（那该是怎样的一个结合呢，如果是一种不明了，无所成就、不关重要的结合？），它对于个人是一种崇高的动力，去

成熟，在自身内有所完成，去完成一个世界，是为了另一个人完成一个自己的世界，这对于他是一个巨大的、不让步的要求，把他选择出来，向广远召唤。青年们只应在把这当作课业去工作的意义中（“昼夜不停地探索，去锤炼”）去使用那给予他们的爱。至于倾心、献身，以及一切的结合，还不是他们的事（他们还须长时间地节省、聚集），那是最后的终点，也许是人的生活现在还几乎不能达到的境地。

但是青年们在这方面常常错误得这样深（因为在他们本性中没有忍耐），如果爱到了他们身上，他们便把生命任意抛掷，甚至陷入窒闷、颠倒、紊乱的状态——但随后又该怎样呢？这支离破碎的聚合（他们自己叫作结合，还愿意称为幸福），还能使生活有什么成就吗？能过得去吗？他们的将来呢？这其间每个人都为了别人失掉自己，同时也失掉别人，并且失掉许多还要来到的别人，失掉许多广远与可能性；把那些轻微的充满预感的物体的接近与疏远，改换成一个日暮穷途的景况，什么也不能产生：无非是一些厌恶、失望与贫乏，不得已时便在因袭中寻求补救，有大宗因袭的条例早已准备好了，像是避祸亭一般在这危险的路旁。在各种人类的生活中没有比爱被因袭的习俗附饰得更多的了，是无所不用其极地发明许多救生圈、游泳袋、救护船；社会上的理解用各种样式设备下避难所，因为它倾向于把爱的生活也看作一种娱乐，所以必须轻率地把它形成一种简易、平稳、毫无险阻的生活，跟一切公开的娱乐一样。

诚然也有许多青年错误地去爱，即随随便便地赠予，不能寂寞（一般总是止于这种境地——），他们感到一种失误的压迫，要按照他们自己个人的方式使他们已经陷入的境域变得富有生力和成果——因为他们的天性告诉他们，爱的众多问题还比不上其他的重要的事物，它们可以公开地按照这样或那样的约定来解决；都不过是人与人之间切身问题，它们需要一个在各种情况下都新鲜而特殊、“只是”个人的回答——但，他们已经互相抛掷在一起，再也不能辨别、区分，再也不据有自己的所有，他们怎么能够从他们自身内从这已经埋没的寂寞的深处寻得一条出路呢？

他们的行为都是在通常无可告援的情势下产生的，如果他们以最好的意愿要躲避那落在他们身上的习俗（譬如说结婚），也还是陷入一种不寻常，但仍同样是死气沉沉限于习俗的解决的网中。因为他们周围的一切都是——习俗：从一种很早就聚在一起、暗淡的结合中表演出来的只是种种限于习俗的行动；这样的紊乱昏迷之所趋的每个关系，都有它的习俗，即使是那最不常见的（普通的意义叫作不道德的）也在内；是的，甚至于“分离”也几乎是一种习俗的步骤，是一种非个性的偶然的决断，没有力量，没有成果。

谁严肃地看，谁就感到，同对于艰难的“死”一样，对于这艰难的“爱”还没有启蒙，还没有解决，还没有什么指示与道路被认识；并且为了我们蒙蔽着、负担着、传递下去，还没有显现的这两个任务，也没有共同的、协议可靠的规律供我们探讨。但是在我们只作为单独的个人起始练习生活的程度内，这些伟大的事物将同单独的个人们在更接近的亲切中相遇。艰难的爱的工作对于我们发展过程的要求是无限的广大，我们作为信从者对于那些要求还不能胜任。但是，如果我们坚持忍耐，把爱作为重担和学业担在肩上，而不在任何浅易和轻浮的游戏中失掉自己（许多人都是一到他们生存中最严肃的严肃面前，便隐藏在游戏的身后）——那么将来继我们而来的人们或许会感到一点小小的进步与减轻；这就够好了。

可是我们现在正应该对于一个单独的人和另一个单独的人的关系，没有成见、如实地观察；我们试验着在这种关系里生活，面前并没有前例。可是在时代的变更中已经有些事，对于我们小心翼翼的开端能有所帮助了。

少女和妇女，在她们新近自己的发展中，只暂时成为男人恶习与特性的模仿者，男人职业的重演者。经过这样不稳定的过程后，事实会告诉我们，妇女只是从那（常常很可笑的）乔装的成功与变化中走过，以便把她们自己的天性从男性歪曲的影响中洗净。至于真的生命是更直接、更丰富、更亲切地在妇女的身内，根本上她们早应该变成比男人更纯净、更人性的人；男人没有身体的果实，只生活于生活的表面之下，傲慢而急躁，看轻他们要去爱的事物。如果妇女将来把这“只是女性”的习俗在她们外生活的转变中脱去，随后那从痛苦与压迫里产生出的妇女的“人性”就要见诸天日了，这是男人们现在还没有感到的，到那时他们将从中受到惊奇和打击。有一天（现在北欧的国家里已经有确切的证明）新的少女来到，并且所谓妇女这个名词，她不只是当作男人的对立体来讲，却含有一些独立的意义，使我们不再想到“补充”与“界限”，只想到生命与生存——女性的人。

这个进步将要把现在谬误的爱的生活转变（违背着落伍的男人们的意志），从根本更改，形成一种人对于人，不是男人对于女人的关系。并且这更人性的爱（它无限地谨慎而精细，良好而明晰地在结合与解脱中完成），它将要同我们辛辛苦苦地预备着的爱相似，它存在于这样的情况里：两个寂寞相爱护，相区分，相敬重。

还有：你不要以为，那在你童年曾经有过一次的伟大的爱已经失却了；你能说吗，那时并没有伟大的良好的愿望在你的生命里成熟，而且现在你还从中吸取养分？我相信那个爱是强有力地永在你的回忆中，因为它是你第一次的深的寂寞，也是你为你生命所做的第一次的内心的工作——祝你一切安好，亲爱的卡卜斯先生！

十四行诗

我生命里有一缕阴深的苦恼
颤动，它不叹息，也不抱怨。
我梦里边雪一般的花片
是我寂静的长日的祭祷。

但是大问题梗住我的小道。
我变得渺小而凄凉
像是走过一座湖旁，
我不敢量一量湖水的波涛。

一种悲哀侵袭我，这般愁惨
好似暗淡的夏夜的苍茫
时时闪露出一星光；

于是我的双手向着爱试探，
因为我想祈求那样的声调，
我热烈的口边还不能找到……

（弗兰斯·卡卜斯）

第八封信

亲爱的卡卜斯先生，我想再和你谈一谈，虽然我几乎不能说对你有所帮助以及对你有一些用处的话。你有过很多大的悲哀，这些悲哀都已过去了。你说，这悲哀的过去也使你非常苦恼。但是，请你想一想，是不是这些大的悲哀并不曾由你生命的中心走过？当你悲哀的时候，是不是在你生命里并没有许多变化，在你本性的任何地方也无所改变？危险而恶劣的是那些悲哀，我们把它们运送到人群中，以遮盖它们的声音；像是敷衍治疗的病症，只是暂时退却，过些时又更可怕地发作；它们聚集在体内，成为一种没有生活过、被摈斥、被遗弃的生命，能使我们死去。如果我们能比我们平素的知识所能达到的地方看得更远一点，稍微越过我们预感的前哨，那么也许我们将会以比担当我们的欢悦更大的信赖去担当我们的悲哀。因为它们（悲哀）都是那些时刻，正当一些新的、陌生的事物侵入我们的生命；我们的情感蜷伏于怯懦的局促的状态里，一切都退却，形成一种寂静，于是这无人认识的“新”就立在中间，沉默无语。

我相信几乎我们一切的悲哀都是紧张的瞬间，这时我们感到麻木，因为我们不再听到诧异的情感生存。因为我们要同这生疏的闯入者独自周旋；因为我们平素所信任的与习惯的都暂时离开了我们；因为我们正处在一个不能容我们立足的过程中。可是一旦这不期而至的新事物迈进我们的生命，走进我们的心房，在心的最深处化为无有，溶解在我们的血液中，悲哀也就因此过去了。我们再也经验不到当时的情形。这很容易使我们相信前此并没有什么发生；其实我们却是改变了，正如一所房子，走进一位新客，它改变了。我们不能说，是谁来了，我们往后也许不知道，可是有许多迹象告诉我们，在“未来”还没有发生之前，它就以这样的方式潜入我们的生命，以便在我们身内变化。所以我们在悲哀的时刻要安于寂寞，多注意，这是很重要的，因为当我们的“未来”潜入我们的生命的瞬间，好像是空虚而枯僵，但与那从外边来的、为我们发生的喧嚣而意外的时刻相比，是同生命接近得多。我们悲哀时越沉静，越忍耐，越坦白，这新的事物也越深、越清晰地走进我们的生命，我们也就更好地保护它，它也就更多地成为我们自己的命运；将来有一天它“发生”了（就是说：它从我们的生命里出来向着别人走进），我们将在最内心的地方感到我们同它亲切而接近。并且这是必要的。是必要的——我们将渐渐地向那方面发展——凡是迎面而来的事，是没有生疏的，都早已属于我们了。人们已经变换过这么多运转的定义，将来会渐渐认清，我们所谓的命运是从

我们怎么能不感觉困难呢？

如果我们再谈到寂寞，那就会更明显，它根本不是我们所能选择或弃舍的事物。我们都是寂寞的。人能够自欺，好像并不寂寞。只不过如此而已。但是，那有多么好呢，如果我们一旦看出，我们都正在脱开这欺骗的局面。在其间我们自然要发生眩昏；因为平素我们的眼睛看惯了的一切这时都忽然失去，再也没有亲近的事物，一切的远方都是无穷的旷远。谁从他的屋内没有准备，没有过程，忽然被移置在一脉高山的顶上，他必会有类似的感觉；一种无与伦比的不安被交付给无名的事物，几乎要把他毁灭。他或许想象会跌落，或者相信会被抛掷在天空，或者粉身碎骨，他的头脑必须发现多么大的谎话，去补救、去说明他官感迷失的状态。一切的距离与尺度对于那寂寞的人就有了变化；从这些变化中忽然会有许多变化发生。跟在山顶上的那个人一样，生出许多非常的想象与稀奇的感觉，它们好像超越了一切能够担当的事体。但那是必要的，我们也体验这种情况。我们必须尽量广阔地承受我们的生存；一切，甚至闻所未闻的事物，都可能在里边存在。根本那是我们被要求的唯一的勇气：勇敢地面对我们所能遇到的最稀奇、最吃惊、最不可解的事物。就因为许多人在这意义中是怯懦的，所以使生活受了无限的损伤；人们称作“奇象”的那些体验、所谓“幽灵世界”、死，以及一切同我们相关联的事物，它们都被我们日常的防御挤出生活之外，甚至我们能够接受它们的感官都枯萎了。关于“神”，简直就不能谈论了。但是对于不可解的事物的恐惧，不仅使个人的生存更为贫乏，并且人与人的关系也因之受到限制，正如从有无限可能性的河床里捞出来，放在一块荒芜不毛的岸上。因为这不仅是一种惰性，使人间的关系极为单调而陈腐地把旧事一再重演，而且是对于任何一种不能预测、不堪胜任的新的生活的畏缩。但是如果有人对于一切有了准备，无论什么，甚至最大的哑谜，也不置之度外，那么他就会把同别人的关系，当作生动着的事物去体验，甚至充分理解自己的存在。正如我们把各个人的存在看成一块较大或较小的空间，那么大部分人却只认识了他们空间的一角、一块窗前的空地，或是他们走来走去的一条窄道。这样他们就有一定的安定。可是那危险的不安定是更人性的，它能促使爱伦·坡 [1] 的故事里的囚犯摸索他们

可怕的牢狱的形状，而熟悉他们住处内不可言喻的恐怖。但我们不是囚犯，没有人在我们周围布置了陷阱，没有什么来恐吓我们，苦恼我们。我们在生活中像是在最适合于我们的原素里，况且我们经过几千年之久的适应和生活这样地相似了，如果我们静止不动，凭借一种成功的模拟，便很难同我们周围的一切有所区分。我们没有理由不信任我们的世界，因为它并不敌对我们。如果它有恐惧，就是我们的恐惧；它有难测的深渊，这深渊是属于我们的；有危险，我们就必须试行去爱这些危险。若是我们把我们的生活，按照那叫我们必须永远把握艰难的原则来处理，那么现在还最生疏的事物就会变得最亲切、最忠实的了。我们怎么能忘却那各民族原始时都有过的神话呢；恶龙在最紧急的瞬间变成公主的那段神话；也许我们生活中一切的恶龙都是公主们，她们只是等候着，美丽而勇敢地看一看我们。也许一切恐怖的事物在最深处是无助的，向我们要求救助。

亲爱的卡卜斯先生，如果有一种悲哀在你面前出现，它是从未见过的那样广大，如果有一种不安，像光与云影似的掠过你的行为与一切工作，你不要恐惧。你必须想，那是有些事在你身边发生了；那是生活没有忘记你，它把你握在手中，它永不会让你失落。为什么你要把一种不安、一种痛苦、一种忧郁置于你的生活之外呢，可是你还不知道，这些情况在为你做什么工作。为什么你要这样追问，这一切是从哪里来，要向哪里去呢？可是你要知道，你是在过渡中，要愿望自己有所变化。如果你的过程里有一些是病态的，你要想一想，病就是一种方法，有机体用以从生疏的事物中解放出来；所以我们只需让它生病，使它有整个的病发作，因为这才是进步。亲爱的卡卜斯先生，现在你自身内有这么多的事发生，你要像一个病人似的忍耐，又像一个康复者似的自信；你也许同时是这两个人。并且你还须是看护自己的医生。但是在病中常常有许多天，医生除了等候以外，什么事也不能做。这就是（尽你是你的医生的时候），现在首先必须做的事。

对于自己不要过甚地观察。不要从对你发生的事物中求得很快的结论，让它们单纯地自生自长吧。不然你就很容易用种种（所谓道德的）谴责回顾你的过去，这些过去自然和你现在遇到的一切很有关系。凡是从你童年的迷途、愿望、渴望中在你身内继续影响着的事，它们并不让你回忆，供你评判。一个寂寞而孤单的童年非常的情况是这样艰难，这样复杂，受到这么多外来的影响，同时又这样脱开了一切现实生活的关联，纵使在童年有罪恶，我们也不该简捷了当地称作罪恶。对于许多名称，必须多多注意；常常只是犯罪的名称使生命为之破碎，而不是那无名的、个人的行为本身，至于这个行为也许是生活中规定的必要，能被生活轻易接受的。因为你把胜利估量得过高，所以你觉得力的消耗如此巨大；胜利并不是你认为已经完成的“伟大”，纵使你觉得正确；“伟大”是你能以一些真的、实在的事物代替欺

骗。不然你的胜利也不过是一种道德上的反应，没有广大的意义，但是它却成为你生活的一个段落。亲爱的卡卜斯先生，关于你的生活，我有很多的愿望。你还记得吗，这个生活是怎样从童年里出来，向着“伟大”渴望？我看着，它现在又从这些伟大前进，渴望更伟大的事物。所以艰难的生活永无止境，但因此生长也无止境。

如果我还应该向你说一件事，那么就是：你不要相信，那试行劝慰你的人是无忧无虑地生活在那些有时对你有益的简单而平静的几句话里。他的生活有许多的辛苦与悲哀，他远远地专诚帮助你。不然，他就绝不能找到那几句话。

第九封信

我亲爱的卡卜斯先生：

在这没有通信的时期内，我一半是在旅途上，一半是事务匆忙，使我不能写信。今天我写信也是困难的，因为我已经写了许多封，手都疲倦了。若是我能以口述给旁人写，我还能向你说许多，可是现在你只好接受这寥寥几行来报答你的长信。

亲爱的卡卜斯先生，我常常思念你，并且以这样专诚的愿望思念你，总要对你有所帮助。但是我的信到底能不能帮助你，我却常常怀疑。你不要说：它们能够帮助你。你只安心接受这些信吧，不必说感谢的话，让我们等着，看将要有什么事情来到。

现在我对于你信里个别的字句加以探讨，大半是没有用的；因为我关于你疑惑的倾向，关于体内外生活和谐的不可能，关于另外苦恼着你的一切——我所能说的，还依然是我已经说过的话：还是愿你自己有充分的忍耐去担当，有充分单纯的心去信仰；你将会越来越信任艰难的事物和你在众人中间感到的寂寞。以外就是让生活自然进展。请你相信：无论如何，生活是合理的。

谈到情感：凡是使你集中向上的情感都是纯洁的；但那只捉住你本性的一方面，对你有所伤害的情感是不纯洁的。凡是在你童年能想到的事都是好的。凡能够使你比你从前最美好的时刻还更丰富的，都是对的。各种提高都是好的，如果它是在你“全”血液中，如果它不是迷醉，不是忧郁，而是透明到底的欢悦。你了解我的意思吗？

就是你的怀疑也可以成为一种好的特性，若是你好好“培养”它。它必须成为明智的，它必须成为批判——当它要伤害你一些事物时，你要问它，这些事物“为什么”丑恶，向它要求证据，考问它，你也许见它仓皇失措，也许见它表示异议。但你不要让步，你同它辩论，每一回都要多多注意，立定脚步，终于有一天它会从一个破坏者变成你的一个最好的工作者——或许在一切从事于建设你的生活的工作中它是最聪明的一个。

亲爱的卡卜斯先生，这是我今天所能向你说的一切。我附寄给我一篇短的作品抽印本 ^[1]，这是在布拉格出版的《德意志工作》中发表的。在那里我继续着同你谈生和死，以及它们的伟大与美丽。

第十封信

亲爱的卡卜斯先生，你该知道，我得你这封美好的信，我是多么欢喜。你给我的消息是真实、诚挚，又像你从前那样，我觉得很好，我越想越感到那实在是好的消息。我本来想在圣诞节的晚间给你写信，但是这一冬我多方从事没有间断的工作，这古老的节日是这样快地走来了，使我没有时间去做我必须处理的事，更少写信。

但是在节日里我常常思念你，我设想你是怎样寂静地在你寂寞的军垒中生活，两旁是空旷的高山，大风从南方袭来，好像要把这些山整块地吞了下去。

这种寂静必须是广大无边，好容许这样的风声风势得以驰骋，如果我想到了，更加上那辽远的海也在你面前同时共奏，像是太古的谐音中最深处的旋律，那么我就希望你能忠实地、忍耐地让这大规模的寂寞在你身上工作，它不再能从你的生命中消灭；在一切你要去生活要去从事的事物中，它永远赓续着像是一种无名的势力，并且将确切地影响你，有如祖先的血在我们身内不断地流动，和我们自己的血混为唯一的、绝无仅有的一体，在我们生命的无论哪一个转折。

是的：我很欢喜，你据有这个固定的、可以言传的存在，有职称，有制服，有任务，有一切把得定、范围得住的事物，它们在这同样孤立而人数不多的军队环境中，接受严肃与必要的工作，它们超越军队职业的游戏与消遣意味着一种警醒的运用，它们不仅容许，而且正好培养自主的注意力。我们要在那些为我们工作、时时置我们于伟大而自然的事物面前的情况中生活，这是必要的一切。

艺术也是一种生活方式，无论我们怎样生活，都能不知不觉地为它准备；每个真实的生活都比那些虚假的、以艺术为号召的职业跟艺术更为接近，它们炫耀一种近似的艺术，实际上却否定了、损伤了艺术的存在，如整个的报章文字、几乎一切的批评界、四分之三号称文学和要号称文学的作品，都是这样。我很高兴，简捷地说，是因为你经受了易于陷入的危险，寂寞而勇敢地生活在任何一处无情的现实中。即将来到的一年会使你在这样的生活里更为坚定。

Letters to a Young Poet

Nº 10

‘What matters is to live everything.
Live the questions for now.’

Preface

In late autumn 1902 it was – I was sitting under ancient chestnut trees in the gardens of the Military Academy in Wiener Neustadt with a book. I was so absorbed by my reading that I hardly noticed it when the only one of our teachers who was not an army officer, Horaček, the learned and good-natured chaplain of the Academy, came and joined me. He took the volume from my hand, looked at the cover and shook his head. ‘Poems by Rainer Maria Rilke?’ he asked thoughtfully. He leafed through its pages, ran his eyes over a few verses, looked reflectively into the distance and finally nodded. ‘So, our pupil René Rilke has become a poet.’

And I was told about the slight, pale boy sent by his parents more than fifteen years before to the Military Lower School in Sankt Pölten so that he might later become an officer. In those days Horaček had worked there as the chaplain and he still remembered his former pupil well. He described him as a quiet, serious, highly gifted child, who liked to keep himself to himself, put up with the discipline of boarding-school life patiently and after the fourth year moved on with the others to the Military Upper School in Mährisch-Weiskirchen. There his constitution proved not to be resilient enough, and so his parents took him out of the establishment and had him continue his studies at home in Prague. What path his career had taken after that Horaček was unable to say.

Given all this it is probably not difficult to understand that I decided that very hour to send my poetic efforts to Rainer Maria Rilke and ask him for his verdict. Not yet twenty years old and on the verge of going into a profession which I felt was directly opposed to my true inclinations, I thought that if anyone was going to understand my situation it was the author of the book To Celebrate Myself. And without its being my express intention, my verses were accompanied by a letter in which I revealed myself more unreservedly than to anyone ever before, or to anyone since.

Many weeks went by before an answer came. The letter with its blue seal bore a Paris postmark, weighed heavy in the hand and displayed on the envelope the same clarity, beauty and assurance of hand with which the content itself was written from the first line to the last. And so my regular correspondence with Rainer Maria Rilke began, lasting until 1908 and then gradually petering out because life forced me into domains which the poet's warm, tender and moving concern had precisely wanted to protect me from.

But that is unimportant. The only important thing is the ten letters that follow, important for the insight they give into the world in which Rainer Maria Rilke lived and worked, and important too for many people engaged in growth and change, today and in the future. And where a great and unique person speaks, the rest of us should be silent.

Franz Xaver Kappus

Berlin, June 1929

Paris, 17 February 1903

Dear Sir,

Your letter only reached me a few days ago. Let me thank you for the great and endearing trust it shows. There is little more I can do. I cannot go into the nature of your verses, for any critical intention is too remote from me. There is nothing less apt to touch a work of art than critical words: all we end up with there is more or less felicitous misunderstandings. Things are not all as graspable and sayable as on the whole we are led to believe; most events are unsayable, occur in a space that no word has ever penetrated, and most unsayable of all are works of art, mysterious existences whose life endures alongside ours, which passes away.

Having begun with this preliminary remark, all I will go on to say is that your verses have no identity of their own, though they do have tacit and concealed hints of something personal. I feel that most clearly in the last poem, 'My Soul'. There something individual is trying to come into words, to find its manner. And in the lovely poem 'To Leopardi' perhaps a kind of affinity with this great and solitary man develops. Still, the poems are not yet anything in themselves, nothing self sufficient, not even the last one and the one to Leopardi. The kind letter you wrote accompanying them does not fail to make many of the shortcomings I sensed in reading your verses explicable, without for all that being able to give them a name.

You ask whether your verses are good. You ask me that. You have asked others, before. You send them to magazines. You compare them with other poems, and you worry when certain editors turn your efforts down. Now(since you have allowed me to offer you advice) let me ask you to give up all that. You are looking to the outside, and that above all you should not be doing now. Nobody can advise you and help you, nobody. There is only one way. Go into yourself. Examine the reason that bids you to write; check whether it reaches its roots into the deepest region of your heart, admit to yourself whether you would die if it should be denied you to write. This above all: ask yourself in your night's quietest hour: must I write? Dig down into yourself for a deep answer. And if it should be affirmative, if it is given to you to respond to this serious question with a loud and simple 'I must', then construct your life according to this necessity; your life right into its most inconsequential and slightest hour must become a sign and witness of this urge. Then approach nature. Then try, like the first human being, to say what you see and experience and love and lose. Don't write love poems; avoid at first those forms which are too familiar and habitual: they are the hardest, for you need great maturity and strength to produce something of your own in a domain where good and sometimes brilliant examples have been handed down to us in abundance. For this reason, flee general subjects and take refuge in those offered by your own day to day life; depict your sadnesses and desires, passing thoughts and faith in some kind of beauty – depict all this with intense, quiet, humble sincerity and make use of whatever you find about you to express yourself, the images from your dreams and the things in your memory. If your everyday life seems to lack material, do not blame it; blame yourself, tell yourself that you are not poet enough to summon up its riches, for there is no lack for him who creates and no poor, trivial place. And even if you were in a prison whose walls did not let any of the sounds of the world outside reach your senses – would you not have your childhood still, this marvellous, lavish source, this treasure house of memories? Turn your attention towards that. Attempt to raise the sunken sensations of this distant past; your self will become the stronger for it, your loneliness will open up and become a twilight dwelling in which the noise other people make is only heard far off. And if from this turn inwards, from this submersion in your own world, there come verses, then it will not occur to you to ask anyone whether they are good verses. Nor will you attempt to interest magazines in these bits of work: for in them you will see your beloved natural possessions, a piece, and a voice, of your life. A work of art is good if it has arisen out of necessity. The verdict on it lies in this nature of its origin: there is no other. For this reason, my dear Sir, the only advice I have is this: to go into yourself and to examine the depths from which your life springs; at its source you will find the answer to the question of whether you have to write. Accept this answer as it is, without seeking to interpret it. Perhaps it will turn out that you are called to be an artist. Then assume this fate and bear it, its burden and its greatness, without ever asking after the rewards that may come from outside. For he who creates must be a world of his own and find everything within himself and in the natural world that he has elected to follow.

But perhaps even after this descent into yourself and into your solitariness you will have to give up the idea of becoming a poet (the feeling that one could live without writing is enough, as I said, to make it something one should never do). But even then, to have taken pause in the way I am asking you to will not have been in vain. Whatever happens, your life will find its own paths from that point on, and that they may be good, productive and far reaching is something I wish for you more than I can say.

What else should I say to you? I think everything has been emphasized as it should be; and all I wanted to do in the end was advise you to go through your development quietly and seriously; you cannot disrupt it more than by looking outwards and expecting answers from without to questions that only your innermost instinct in your quietest moments will perhaps be able to answer.

I was delighted to find Professor Horaček's name in your letter; I retain a great admiration for this kindhearted scholar, a gratitude that has endured over the years. Could you please pass on these sentiments to him; it is very kind of him still to remember me, and I much appreciate it.

The verses you were so good as to entrust me with I am sending back to you along with this letter. Thank you again for the extent and the warmth of your trust – as well as I can, I have attempted with this sincere reply to make myself a little worthier of it than, as a stranger, I really am.

With all devotion and sympathy,

Rainer Maria Rilke

Viareggio near Pisa (Italy), 5 April 1903

You must forgive me, my dear Sir, for only attending to your letter of 24 February today: the whole time I have been under the weather, not ill exactly but oppressed by an influenza like feebleness which has made me incapable of anything. And in the end, when all else had failed, I travelled down to this southern coast, whose beneficial effects have helped me in the past. But I'm still not well again, writing is difficult, and so you must take these few lines as if there were more of them.

First of all you should know that every letter from you will always be a pleasure, and you only need to be understanding with regard to the replies, which often, maybe, will leave you with empty hands; for at bottom, and particularly in the deepest and most important things, we are unutterably alone, and for one person to be able to advise, let alone help, another, a great deal must come about, a great deal must come right, a whole constellation of things must concur for it to be possible at all.

There are just two things I wanted to say to you today:

Irony: don't let yourself be ruled by it, especially not in uncreative moments. In creative ones try to make use of it as one means among many to get a grasp on life. Used purely, it too is pure, and there is no need to be ashamed of it; and if you feel too familiar with it, if you fear your intimacy is growing too much, then turn towards great and serious subjects, next to which irony becomes small and helpless. Seek out the depths of things: irony will never reach down there – and if in so doing you come up against something truly great, inquire whether this way of relating to things originates in a necessary part of your being. For under the influence of serious things irony will either fall away (if it is something incidental) or on the contrary (if it really belongs to you in a native way) it will gain strength and so become a serious tool and take its place among the means with which you will be bound to create your art.

And the second thing I wanted to tell you today is this:

Of all my books there are only a few I cannot do without, and two are always among my effects, wherever I am. I have them with me here: the Bible, and the books of the great Danish writer Jens Peter Jacobsen. I wonder whether you know his works. They are easy to get hold of, because a number of them are available in good translations in Reclam's Universal Bibliothek. Get hold of the little volume Six Novellas by J. P. Jacobsen, and his novel Niels Lyhne, and begin with the first story in the first of these volumes which is called 'Mogens'. A world will come over you, the joy, the richness, the incomprehensible greatness of a new world. Live in these books for a while, learn from them what seems to be worth learning, but above all love them. This love will be repaid you thousands and thousands of times, and however your life may turn out – this love, I am sure of it, will run through the weave of your becoming as one of the most important threads of all among the other threads of your experiences, disappointments and joys.

If I had to say from whom I have learnt anything about the nature of artistic creation, about its profundity and eternity, there are only two names I can give: Jacobsen's, the great, great poet, and Auguste Rodin's, the sculptor who has no equal among all artists now alive. –

All success on your paths! Yours,

Rainer Maria Rilke

Viareggio near Pisa (Italy), 23 April 1903

Your Easter letter, my dear Sir, gave me a great deal of pleasure, for it had many good things to report, and the way you spoke about Jacobsen's great and generous art showed me that I was not mistaken in conducting your life and its many questions to this source of plenty.

Now Niels Lyhne will reveal itself to you, a book full of splendours and depths; the more often one reads it, it seems to contain everything, from life's faintest scent to the full, grand savour of its heaviest fruits. There is nothing in it that has not been understood, grasped, lived, and known in memory's trembling, lingering resonance; no experience is too slight, and the merest occurrence unfolds like a fate, and fate itself is like a wonderful, vast fabric in which every thread is drawn by an infinitely tender hand and laid next to another, held in place and supported by a hundred others. You will experience the immense pleasure of reading this book for the first time, and will pass through its innumerable surprises as if in a new dream. But I can tell you that later too one always traverses these books with the same astonishment and that they lose nothing of the wondrous power, relinquish none of the magical qualities, which they lavish on the reader the first time round.

One just takes more and more enjoyment in them, one grows ever more grateful and somehow better and simpler in seeing the world, deeper in one's faith in life and happier and larger in living.

And later you must read the wonderful book of the fate and longings of Marie Grubbe and Jacobsen's letters and diaries and fragments and finally his verse which (even if the translations are only moderate) has an infinite resonance. (To do so, I'd suggest you buy the lovely collected edition of Jacobsen's works – which has all this in it – if you get the opportunity. It came out in three volumes and in good translations with Eugen Diederichs in Leipzig and costs, I believe, only 5 or 6 marks a volume.)

In your opinion on 'Here roses should stand . . .' (a work of such incomparable subtlety and form) you are of course absolutely in the right, and inviolably so, whatever the author of the preface may have to say. And let me at once make this request: read as little as possible in the way of aesthetics and criticism – it will either be partisan views, fossilized and made meaningless in its lifeless rigidity, or it will be neat wordplay, where one opinion will triumph one day and the opposite the next. Works of art are infinitely solitary and nothing is less likely to reach them than criticism. Only love can grasp them and hold them and do them justice. – With regard to any such disquisition, review or introduction, trust yourself and your instincts; even if you go wrong in your judgement, the natural growth of your inner life will gradually, over time, lead you to other insights. Allow your verdicts their own quiet untroubled development which like all progress must come from deep within and cannot be forced or accelerated. Everything must be carried to term before it is born. To let every impression and the germ of every feeling come to completion inside, in the dark, in the unsayable, the unconscious, in what is unattainable to one's own intellect, and to wait with deep humility and patience for the hour when a new clarity is delivered: that alone is to live as an artist, in the understanding and in one's creative work.

These things cannot be measured by time, a year has no meaning, and ten years are nothing. To be an artist means: not to calculate and count; to grow and ripen like a tree which does not hurry the flow of its sap and stands at ease in the spring gales without fearing that no summer may follow. It will come. But it comes only to those who are patient, who are simply there in their vast, quiet tranquillity, as if eternity lay before them. It is a lesson I learn every day amid hardships I am thankful for: patience is all!

richard dehmel: With his books (as also, by the way, with the man himself whom I know slightly) I always find myself, when I've come upon one of his best pages, fearful of the next, which can always undo it all again and turn what was so lovely into something base. You sum him up very well with your phrase about 'living and writing in rut'. – And indeed artistic experience lies so incredibly close to sexual experience, to its pains and pleasures, that both phenomena are really just different forms of one and the same desire and felicity. And if instead of speaking of 'rut' we could say 'sex', sex in the large, capacious, pure sense, not rendered suspect by any misapprehensions stemming from the Church, his art would be very great and infinitely important. His poetic power is immense, as vigorous as instinct; it has its own reckless rhythms running through it and bursts out of him as if from a mountain.

But this power seems not always to be quite genuine and free of affectation. (But then that is one of the severest tests of an artist: he must always remain innocent and unconscious of his greatest virtues if he is to avoid depriving them of their uninhibitedness and purity.) And when this power, coursing through his being, reaches his sexuality, it doesn't find quite the pure human being it needs. The world of sexuality it finds is not entirely mature and pure, it is not human enough, only virile, rut, intoxication, restlessness, and weighed down by the old prejudices and arrogance with which men have disfigured and overburdened love. Because he loves only as a man, not as a human being, there is in his sense of sexuality something narrow, seemingly savage, hateful, time bound, uneternal that diminishes his art and makes it ambivalent and doubtful. It is not without blemish, it is marked by the times and by passion, and little of it will prevail and endure. (But that's the case with most art!) In spite of all this one can still take deep pleasure in what is great about his work and must just make sure not to lose oneself to it and become an acolyte of this Dehmel world which is so full of anxiety, of adultery and confusion, and remote from the real destinies, which create more suffering than these passing afflictions but also give more opportunity for greatness and more courage to make something that will last.

To come to my own books, really I'd like to send you all those that might give pleasure. But I am very poor, and as soon as my books have appeared they cease to belong to me. I cannot buy them myself and, as I'd so often like to, give them to those who would value and look after them.

For that reason I have written down for you on a slip of paper the titles (and publishing houses) of my recent books (that is the very newest, altogether I must have published 12 or 13) and must leave it to you, dear Sir, to order one or two of them if they take your fancy.

I shall be glad to know that my books are with you.

All good wishes,

Yours,

Rainer Maria Rilke

at present in Worpswede near Bremen, 16 July 1903

About ten days ago I left Paris, ailing and very weary, and travelled to these great northern plains whose vastness and quiet and sky are supposed to return my health to me. But I drove into unceasing rain which only today is beginning to clear a bit over the restless, windswept land; and I'm using this first moment of brightness to send you a greeting, my dear Sir.

My dear Mr Kappus: I have left your letter unanswered for a long time – not that I had forgotten it; on the contrary, it was the kind of letter one reads again, coming across it among one's papers, and I recognized you in it as if I were in your presence. It was your letter of the second of May – I'm sure you remember it. When, as I do now, I read it in the great calm of these expanses, I am touched by your fine concern for life, even more than I was in Paris where everything has a different tone and gets lost in the immense din which sets things trembling. Here, surrounded as I am by a mighty stretch of land over which the winds blow in from seas, here I feel that no human being anywhere can respond to those questions and feelings that have a profound life of their own; for even the best of us get the words wrong when we want them to express such intangible and almost unsayable things. But all the same I believe that you need not remain without solution if you hold to things like those now refreshing my eyes. If you hold close to nature, to what is simple in it, to the small things people hardly see and which all of a sudden can become great and immeasurable; if you have this love for what is slight, and quite unassumingly, as a servant, seek to win the confidence of what seems poor – then everything will grow easier, more unified and somehow more conciliatory, not perhaps in the intellect, which, amazed, remains a step behind, but in your deepest consciousness, watchfulness and knowledge. You are so young, all still lies ahead of you, and I should like to ask you, as best I can, dear Sir, to be patient towards all that is unresolved in your heart and to try to love the questions themselves like locked rooms, like books written in a foreign tongue. Do not now strive to uncover answers: they cannot be given you because you have not been able to live them. And what matters is to live everything. Live the questions for now. Perhaps then you will gradually, without noticing it, live your way into the answer, one distant day in the future. Perhaps you do carry within yourself the possibility of forming and creating, as a particularly happy and pure way of living. School yourself for it, but take what comes in complete trust, and as long as it is a product of your will, of some kind of inner necessity, accept it and do not despise it. Sex is difficult, true. But difficult things are what we were set to do, almost everything serious is difficult, and everything is serious. If you only acknowledge this and manage from your own resources, from your own disposition and nature, from your own experience and childhood and strength, to win your way towards a relationship to sex that is wholly your own (not influenced by convention and custom), then you have no need to fear losing yourself and becoming unworthy of your best possession.

Physical desire is a sensual experience, no different from pure contemplation or the pure sensation with which a fine fruit sates the tongue; it is a great and endless feeling which is granted to us, a way of knowing the world, the fullness and the splendour of all knowledge. And that we receive this pleasure cannot be a bad thing; what is bad is the way almost all of us misuse the experience and waste it and apply it as a stimulus to the tired parts of our lives, as a distraction instead of as a concentration of ourselves into climactic points. Eating, too, has been turned away from its true nature: want on the one hand and superfluity on the other have troubled the clarity of this need, and all the profound, simple necessities in which life renews itself have similarly been obscured. But the individual can clarify them for himself and live in this clearness (and if not the individual, who is too dependent, then at least the solitary). He can remind himself that all beauty in plants and animals is a quiet and durable form of love and longing, and he can see the animal, as also the plant, patiently and willingly joining and multiplying and growing, not from physical pleasure, not from physical suffering, but bowing to necessities which are greater than pleasure and pain and more powerful than desire and resistance. Oh if only mankind could embrace this mystery, which penetrates the earth right into its smallest elements, with more humility, and bear and sustain it with more gravity and know how terribly heavy it is, instead of taking it lightly. If only mankind could hold its own fertility in awe, which is one and the same whether it manifests itself in the spirit or in the flesh. For creativity of the spirit has its origin in the physical kind, is of one nature with it and only a more delicate, more rapt and less fleeting version of the carnal sort of sex. 'The desire to be a creator, to engender, to give form' is nothing without its continuing, palpable confirmation and realization in the world, nothing without the myriad expressions of assent coming from animals and things. And the pleasure it gives is only as unutterably fine and abundant as it is because it is full of inherited memories of the engendering and bearing of millions. In one creative thought a thousand forgotten nights of love revive and lend it grandeur and height. And those who come together in the night time and are entwined in a cradle of desire are carrying out a serious work in collecting sweetness, profundity and strength for the song of some poet yet to come, who will rise up to speak unutterable pleasures. And they summon up the future; and even if they err and embrace one another blindly, the future will come all the same, a new creature will appear, and based on the chance act that seems to be accomplished here the law comes into being according to which a resistant and vigorous seed forces its way through to the egg moving forward to receive it. Do not be distracted by surfaces; it is in the depths that all laws obtain. And those who live the mystery falsely and badly (and there are many of them) forfeit it only for themselves and still hand it on like a sealed letter, unwittingly. And don't be put off by the multiplicity of names and the complexity of the various cases. Perhaps a great maternity lies over everything, as a shared longing. The beauty of the virgin, of a being, who, as you put it so well, 'has not yet achieved anything', is maternity divining and preparing itself, anxious and full of longing. And the beauty of a mother is maternity at work, and that of the old woman a great memory. And in the man too there is maternity, as it seems to me, physical and spiritual; his engendering is also a kind of giving birth, and it is an act of birth when he creates out of his inmost resources. And perhaps the sexes are more closely related than we think, and the great renewal of the world will perhaps consist in man and woman, freed of all sense of error and disappointment, seeking one another out not as opposites but as brothers and sisters and neighbours, and they will join together as human beings , to share the heavy weight of sexuality that is laid upon them with simplicity, gravity and patience.

But everything which one day will perhaps be possible for many, the solitary individual can prepare for and build now with his hands which are more unerring. For this reason, dear Mr Kappus, love your solitude and bear the pain it causes you with melody wrought with lament. For the people who are close to you, you tell me, are far away, and that shows that you are beginning to create a wider space around you. And if what is close is far, then the space around you is wide indeed and already among the stars; take pleasure in your growth, in which no one can accompany you, and be kind hearted towards those you leave behind, and be assured and gentle with them and do not plague them with your doubts or frighten them with your confidence or your joyfulness, which they cannot understand. Look for some kind of simple and loyal way of being together with them which does not necessarily have to alter however much you may change; love in them a form of life different from your own and show understanding for the older ones who fear precisely the solitude in which you trust. Avoid providing material for the drama which always spans between parents and their children; it saps much of the children's strength and consumes that parental love which works and warms even when it does not comprehend. Ask no advice of them and reckon with no understanding; but believe in a love which is stored up for you like an inheritance, and trust that in this love there is a strength and a benediction out of whose sphere you do not need to issue even if your journey is a long one.

It is good that for the moment you are going into a profession which will make you independent and mean you only have yourself to rely on, in every sense. Have the patience to wait and see whether your inmost life feels confined by the form of this occupation. I consider it a very difficult and a very demanding one, as it is burdened by powerful conventions and leaves almost no room to interpret its duties according to your own lights. But your solitude, even in the midst of quite foreign circumstances, will be a hold and a home for you, and leading from it you will find all the paths you need. All my good wishes are ready to accompany you, and you have all my confidence and trust.

Yours,

Rainer Maria Rilke

Rome, 29 October 1903

My dear Sir,

Your letter of 29 August reached me in Florence, and only now – two months on – do I give you news of it. Forgive me this delay, but I prefer not to write letters when I'm travelling because letter writing requires more of me than just the basic wherewithal: some quiet and time on my own and a moment when I feel relatively at home.

We arrived in Rome about six weeks ago, at a time when it was still the empty, hot city, the Rome supposedly ridden with fevers, and this circumstance, together with other practical difficulties to do with settling in, meant that the unrest surrounding us went on and on and the foreignness of the place lay on us with the weight of homelessness. On top of that you have to remember that Rome (if one is not yet acquainted with it) seems oppressively sad when one first arrives: the lifeless and drear museum atmosphere it breathes, the abundance of fragments of the past (on which a tiny present nourishes itself) that have been fetched out of the ground and laboriously maintained, the unspeakable excess of esteem, nourished by academics and philologists with the help of run of the mill tourists, given to all these disfigured and spoilt objects which after all are basically nothing more than accidental vestiges of another age and of a life that is not our own and is not meant to be. At last, after weeks of daily fending off, you get your bearings back, and somewhat dazed you tell yourself: No, there is not more beauty here than elsewhere, and all these objects which generation after generation have continued to admire, which inexpert hands have mended and restored, they mean nothing, are nothing and have no heart and no value; but there is a great deal of beauty here, because there is beauty everywhere. Infinitely lively waters go over the old aqueducts into the city and on the many squares dance over bowls of white stone and fill broad capacious basins and murmur all day and raise their murmur into the night, which is vast and starry and soft with winds. And there are gardens here, unforgettable avenues and flights of steps, steps conceived by Michelangelo, steps built to resemble cascades of flowing water – giving birth to step after broad step like wave after wave as they descend the incline. With the help of such impressions you regain your composure, win your way back out of the demands of the talking and chattering multitude(how voluble it is!), and you slowly learn to recognize the very few things in which something everlasting can be felt, something you can love, something solitary in which you can take part in silence.

I'm still living in the city, on the Capitol, not far from the finest equestrian statue that has come down to us from Roman art – that of Marcus Aurelius. But in a few weeks I shall be moving into a quiet, simple room, an old summer house lost in the depths of a great park, hidden away from the city with its noise and its inconsequentiality. I'll live there for the whole winter and take pleasure in the great stillness from which I expect the gift of good and productive hours . . .

From there, where I shall feel more at home, I'll write you a longer letter in which I'll also have something to say about your writing. Today I must just mention (and it was perhaps wrong of me not to have done so before) that the book you announced in your letter (which you said contained pieces by you) has not arrived here. Has it been sent back to you, perhaps from Worpswede? (For: packets cannot be forwarded abroad.) This is the best explanation, which it would be nice to have confirmed. I hope it has not gone astray, which given the Italian postal service cannot be ruled out – alas.

I should have been glad to receive the book (as with everything that gives some sign of you); and any verse you have written since I shall always (if you entrust me with it) read and reread and take in as well and as completely as I can. With good wishes and greetings,

Yours,

Rainer Maria Rilke

Rome, 23 December 1903

My dear Mr Kappus,

You shall not go without greetings from me at Christmas time, when you are perhaps finding your solitude harder than usual to bear among all the festivities. But if you notice that it is great, then be glad of it; for what (you must ask yourself) would a solitude be that was not great? There is only one solitude, and it is vast and not easy to bear and almost everyone has moments when they would happily exchange it for some form of company, be it ever so banal or trivial, for the illusion of some slight correspondence with whoever one happens to come across, however unworthy . . . But perhaps those are precisely the hours when solitude grows, for its growth is painful like the growth of boys and sad like the beginning of spring. But that must not put you off. What is needed is this, and this alone: solitude, great inner loneliness. Going into oneself and not meeting anyone for hours –that is what one must arrive at. Loneliness of the kind one knew as a child, when the grown ups went back and forth bound up in things which seemed grave and weighty because they looked so busy, and because one had no idea what they were up to.

And when one day you realize that their preoccupations are meagre, their professions barren and no longer connected to life, why not continue to look on them like a child, as if on something alien, drawing on the depths of your own world, on the expanse of your own solitude, which itself is work and achievement and a vocation? Why wish to exchange a child's wise incomprehension for rejection and contempt, when incomprehension is solitude, whereas rejection and contempt are ways of participating in what, by precisely these means, you want to sever yourself from?

Think, dear Mr Kappus, of the world that you carry within you, and call this thinking whatever you like. Whether it is memory of your own childhood or longing for your own future – just be attentive towards what rises up inside you, and place it above everything that you notice round about. What goes on in your innermost being is worth all your love, this is what you must work on however you can and not waste too much time and too much energy on clarifying your attitude to other people. Who says you have such an attitude at all? – I know, your profession is hard and goes against you, and I had foreseen your complaints and knew they would come. Now that they have come I cannot assuage them; I can only advise you to consider whether all professions are not like that, full of demands, full of hostility for the individual, steeped as it were in the hatred of those who with sullen resentment have settled for a life of sober duty. The station you are now obliged to occupy is no more heavily burdened with conventions, prejudices and misapprehensions than any other, and if there are some domains that make a show of greater freedom there are none that are vast and spacious and in contact with the great things of which real life consists. Only the solitary individual is subject, like a thing, to the fundamental laws, and if someone goes out into the morning as it is breaking, or looks out into the evening full of occurrence, and if he feels what is happening there, every hint of station slips from him as if from a dead man, although he is standing in the midst of life itself. Dear Mr Kappus, something similar to what you now have to undergo as an officer would have affected you in any of the existing professions, and even if, outside of any position, you had sought only fleeting and non committal contact with society, you would not have been spared this feeling of constraint. – It is the same everywhere; but that is no reason for anxiety or sadness; if there is no communal feeling between you and other people, try to be near to things – they will not abandon you. The nights are still there and the winds that go through the trees and over the many lands; among things and among animals all is still full of happenings in which you can take part; and the children are still as you were when you were a child, just as sad and happy, and whenever you think of your childhood you live among them again, among the lonely children, and adults are nothing and their dignity has no worth.

And if it frightens and pains you to think of your childhood and of the simplicity and stillness that go together with it, because you can no longer believe in God, who is everywhere present in it, then ask yourself, dear Mr Kappus, whether you have really lost God after all? Is it not rather the case that you have never yet possessed him? For when was it supposed to have been? Do you think a child can hold him, him whom grown men only bear with difficulty and whose weight bows down the old? Do you believe that anyone who really has him could lose him like a little pebble, or don't you think that whoever had him could only be lost by him alone? – But if you acknowledge that he was not present in your childhood, and not before that, if you suspect that Christ was deceived by his longing and Mohammed betrayed by his pride, and if you feel with horror that even now he is not present, at the moment when we are talking about him, what then gives you the right to miss him who never was, as if he had disappeared, and to search for him as if he were lost?

Why don't you think of him as a coming god, who since eternity has lain ahead of us, the future one, the eventual fruit of a tree of which we are the leaves? What prevents you from casting his birth out into the times of becoming and from living your life like a painful and beautiful day in the history of a great pregnancy? Don't you see how everything that happens is always a beginning again, and could it not be His beginning, given that beginnings are in themselves always so beautiful? If he is the complete being, must not slighter things come before him, so that he can pick himself out of fullness and abundance? – Must he not be the last in order to encompass all things in himself, and what significance would we have if the one whom we hanker for had already been?

As the bees collect honey together, so we fetch the sweetness out of everything and build Him. We begin with the very slightest things, with what is barely noticeable (as long as it comes about through love), with our work and the repose that comes after, with a moment of silence or with a small solitary joy, with everything that we do on our own without helpers and accomplices, we begin him whom we shall never know, just as our ancestors could not live to know us. And yet they are in us, these people long since passed away, as a disposition, as a load weighing on our destinies, as a murmur in the blood and as a gesture that rises up out of the depths of time.

Is there anything that can strip you of the hope of dwelling one day in him, the most remote, the most extreme?

Dear Mr Kappus, celebrate Christmas in the piety of the feeling that He perhaps requires of you precisely this existential anxiety in order to begin. Precisely these days of transition are perhaps the period when everything in you is working on him, just as before, as a child, you worked on him with bated breath. Be patient and even tempered and remember that the least we can do is not make his becoming more difficult than the earth makes it for spring when it decides to come.

And I wish you happiness and confidence.

Yours,

Rainer Maria Rilke

Rome, 14 May 1904

My dear Mr Kappus,

Much time has gone past since I received your last letter. Don't hold that against me; first it was work, then disruptions and finally ill health that kept me from replying, whereas I wanted to write to you out of good, peaceful days. Now I feel a little better again (even here the beginning of spring with its bad and fickle transitions was hard to bear) and can manage to send you greetings, dear Mr Kappus, and (as I am very glad to do) say this and that about your letter, as best I can.

You will see: I have copied out your sonnet because I found that it had beauty and simplicity and a native form in which it unfolds with such quiet propriety. It is the best of the verses of yours I have been permitted to read. And I'm giving you this copy now because I know that it is important and a whole new experience to come across a work of one's own in a foreign hand. Read the lines as if they were unknown to you, and you will feel in your inmost self how very much they are yours. –

It has been a pleasure for me to read this sonnet and your letter, which I did often. I thank you for both.

And you must not let yourself be diverted out of your solitude by the fact that something in you wants to escape from it. Precisely this desire, if you use it calmly and judiciously, as a kind of tool, will help you to extend your solitude over a greater expanse of ground. People have tended (with the help of conventions) to resolve everything in the direction of easiness, of the light, and on the lightest side of the light; but it is clear that we must hold to the heavy, the difficult. All living things do this, everything in nature grows and defends itself according to its kind and is a distinct creature from out of its own resources, strives to be so at any cost and in the face of all resistance. We know little, but that we must hold fast to what is difficult is a certainty that will never forsake us. It is good to be alone, for solitude is difficult; that something is difficult should be one more reason to do it.

To love is also good, for love is hard. Love between one person and another: that is perhaps the hardest thing it is laid on us to do, the utmost, the ultimate trial and test, the work for which all other work is just preparation. For this reason young people, who are beginners in everything, do not yet know how to love: they must learn. With their whole being, with all their strength, concerted on their solitary, fearful, upward beating hearts, they have to learn to love. An apprenticeship though is always a long, secluded period, and love too is for a great long time and far into life: solitariness, heightened and deepened loneliness for the one in love. Love at first has nothing to do with unfolding, abandon and uniting with another person (for what would be the sense in a union of what is unrefined and unfinished, still second order?); for the individual it is a grand opportunity to mature, to become something in himself, to become a world, to become a world in himself for another's sake; it is a great immoderate demand made upon the self, something that singles him out and summons him to vast designs. Only in this sense, as a duty to work on themselves ('to hearken and to hammer day and night'), should young people use the love that is given them. The unfolding, the abandon and any kind of togetherness is not for them (who for a long time yet will have to scrimp and save). They are the culmination, and perhaps that for which a human life now is hardly sufficient.

But there young people so often and so badly go wrong: in that they (who by nature have no patience) fling themselves at one another when love comes over them, scatter themselves just as they are in all their troubledness, disorder, confusion . . . But what can come of that? What is life supposed to do with this heap of half broken things that they call their togetherness and would like to call their happiness, were it possible, their future? Each person loses himself then for the other's sake and loses the other and many more who were yet to come. And loses the expanses and possibilities, exchanges the nearing and fleeing of delicate, mysterious things for a sterile helplessness of which nothing more can come; nothing but a bit of disgust, disappointment and deprivation and the escape into one of the many conventions which like public shelters are set up in great numbers along this most dangerous of paths. No area of human experience is so well furnished with conventions as this:

there are lifebelts of the most various invention, dinghies and buoyancy devices; society in its wisdom has found ways of constructing refuges of all kinds, for since it has been disposed to make the love life a pastime, it has also felt obliged to trivialize it, to make it cheap, risk free and secure, as public pleasures usually are.

It is true that many young people who love wrongly, that is, simply with abandon and not in solitude (and your average person will never move beyond this), feel the oppression of having failed at something and do want to make the state into which they have got liveable and productive in their own, personal way; for their nature tells them that questions of love, even less than all other important matters, cannot be solved publicly and by following this or that consensus; that they are questions that touch the quick of what it is to be human and which in every case require a new, particular and purely private response: but how can people who have already flung together and no longer set themselves any limits or tell one another apart, and who therefore possess nothing of their own any more, how on earth can they find a way out of themselves, out of the depths of a solitude that has already been spilt and squandered?

They act out of a shared helplessness, and if they do their best to escape the convention they happen to have noticed (as marriage for example), they fall into the clutches of a less obvious but just as deadly conventional solution; for all around them there is nothing but –convention; when an action derives from a precipitately arrived at and unwitting union, it is always conventional; every relationship which is the product of such confusion has its conventions, however unusual (that is, immoral in the generally accepted sense) it may be; yes, even separation would in such a case be a conventional step, an impersonal, fortuitous decision without force and without point.

Whoever looks at the matter seriously finds that, as for death, which is difficult, no explanation, no solution, has yet been discovered for love, which is difficult too: there are no directions, no path. And for these two problems that we carry round with us in a sealed packet and hand on without opening, it will always be impossible to locate a common rule, resting on consensus. But to the same extent that we begin as individuals to venture onto life, these great things will encounter us, on our own, at ever closer quarters. The demands that the hard work of love makes on our development are larger than life, and as beginners we are not a match for them. But if we can hold out and take this love upon us as a burden and an apprenticeship, instead of losing ourselves in all the trivial and frivolous games behind which people have hidden from the utter seriousness of their existence, then perhaps a small advance and some relief will be sensible to those who come long after us. That would mean a great deal.

We are only now just coming to the point where we can consider the relationship of one human individual to another objectively and without prejudice, and our attempts to live such a relation have no model to go on. And yet in the shifting of the times there are already a few things that can help our tentative beginnings.

Girls and women, in their new, particular unfolding, will only in passing imitate men's behaviour and misbehaviour and follow in male professions. Once the uncertainty of such transitions is over it will emerge that women have only passed through the spectrum and the variety of those (often laughable) disguises in order to purify their truest natures from the distorting influences of the other sex. Women, in whom life abides and dwells more immediately, more fruitfully and more trustingly, are bound to have ripened more thoroughly, become more human human beings, than a man, who is all too light and has not been pulled down beneath the surface of life by the weight of a bodily fruit and who, in his arrogance and impatience, undervalues what he thinks he loves. This humanity which inhabits woman, brought to term in pain and humiliation, will, once she has shrugged off the conventions of mere femininity through the transformations of her outward status, come clearly to light, and men, who today do not yet feel it approaching, will be taken by surprise and struck down by it. One day (there are already reliable signs which speak for it and which begin to spread their light, especially in the northern countries), one day there will be girls and women whose name will no longer just signify the opposite of the male but something in their own right, something which does not make one think of any supplement or limit but only of life and existence: the female human being.

This step forward (at first right against the will of the men who are left behind) will transform the experience of love, which is now full of error, alter it root and branch, reshape it into a relation between two human beings and no longer between man and woman. And this more human form of love (which will be performed in infinitely gentle and considerate fashion, true and clear in its creating of bonds and dissolving of them) will resemble the one we are struggling and toiling to prepare the way for, the love that consists in two solitudes protecting, defining and welcoming one another.

And one more thing: do not believe that that abundance of love which was once, as a boy, bestowed on you is now lost. Can you tell whether back then great and good desires did not ripen within you, and resolutions which you still live by today? I believe that love remains so strong and powerful in your memory because it was your first deep experience of solitariness and the first inner work that you undertook on your life. – All good wishes to you, dear Mr Kappus!

Yours,

Rainer Maria Rilke

Sonnet

Through my life there trembles unlamenting suffering dark and deep, without a sigh.

Pure as snow the blossoming of my dreams consecrates the stillest of my days.

Often though a question's gravity cuts across my path. I seem to shrink, pass coldly on as if beside a lake whose waters are too vast for me to measure.

And then a sadness settles, dim, opaque, like the grey of pallid summer nights, shimmered through with stars – now and then – :

love then is what my hands attempt to grasp because I want to say a prayer whose sounds my burning mouth, my lips, cannot bring forth . . .

}blr}{Franz Kappus)

Borgeby gård, Flådie, Sweden, 12 August 1904

I want to talk to you again for a while, dear Mr Kappus, although I can say almost nothing that is of any help, hardly anything useful. You have had many great sadnesses which have now passed by. And you say that their passing was also hard and upsetting for you. But I ask you to consider whether these great unhappinesses did not rather pass through you. Whether much within you has not changed, whether somewhere, in some part of your being, you were not transformed while you were unhappy? The only sorrows which are harmful and bad are those one takes among people in order to drown them out. Like diseases which are treated superficially and inexpertly, they only abate, and after a short pause break out again with more terrible force, and accumulate inside and are life, un-lived, rejected, lost life – from which we can die. If it were possible for us to see further than our knowledge reaches, and a little beyond the outworks of our intuitions, perhaps we should then bear our sadnesses with greater assurance than our joys. For they are the moments when something new enters into us, something unknown to us; our feelings, shy and inhibited, fall silent, everything in us withdraws, a stillness settles on us, and at the centre of it is the new presence that nobody yet knows, making no sound.

I believe that almost all our sadnesses are periods of tautening that we experience as numbness because we can no longer hear the stirring of our feelings, which have become foreign to us. Because we are alone with the strange thing that has entered into us; because everything familiar and accustomed is taken away from us for a moment; because we are in the middle of a transition where we cannot stand still. And that is why sadness passes: what is new in us, the thing that has supervened, has entered into our heart, penetrated to its innermost chamber and not lingered even there – it is already in our blood. And we never quite know what it was. One might easily suppose that nothing had happened, but we have altered the way a house alters when a guest enters it. We cannot say who has come, perhaps we shall never know, but there are many indications that it is the future that enters into us like this, in order to be transformed within us, long before it actually occurs. And that is why it is so important to be solitary and attentive when one is sad: because the apparently uneventful and static moment when our future comes upon us is so much closer to life than that other noisy and accidental point when it happens to us as if from the outside. The quieter, the more patient and open we are in our sadness, the deeper and more unerringly the new will penetrate into us, the better we shall acquire it, the more it will be our fate, and when one day in the future it 'takes place' (that is, steps out of us towards others) we shall feel related and close to it in our inmost hearts. And that is necessary. It is necessary –and little by little our development will tend in this direction – that nothing alien should happen to us, but only what has long been part of us. We have already had to adjust our understanding of so many theories of planetary motion, and so too we shall gradually learn to recognize that what we call fate originates in ourselves, in humankind, and does not work on us from the outside. Only because so many people did not absorb their fates while they were inhabited by them, and did not make them a part of themselves, only because of this did they fail to recognize what emerged from them. It was so foreign to them that in their confused panic they assumed it must just have entered into them, for they swore never to have found anything of the sort in themselves before. Just as for a long time people were deceived about the movement of the sun, so we are still deceived about the movement of what is to come. The future is fixed, dear Mr Kappus, but we move around in infinite space.

How could things not be difficult for us?

And if we come back to solitude, it grows ever clearer that fundamentally it is not something that one can take or leave. We are solitary. It is possible to deceive yourself and act as if it were not the case. That is all. How much better though, to see and accept that that is what we are, and even to take it as our starting point. If we do, the effect is admittedly one of giddiness; for all the points on which we are accustomed to rest our eyes are taken away from us, there is no longer anything close by, and everything remote is infinitely so. Someone transported from his room, almost without warning and interval, onto the top of a high mountain would feel something like it: he would be virtually destroyed by an unparalleled sense of insecurity, by an exposure to something nameless. He would think he was falling or believe himself to be hurtling out into space or shattered into a thousand pieces: what a monstrous lie his brain would have to invent to rein in and clarify the state of his senses. In the same way all distances, all measurements, alter for the one who becomes solitary; many such changes suddenly take place at once and, as with the man on the mountaintop, unusual imaginings and curious sensations occur which seem to take on dimensions greater than can be tolerated. But it is necessary for us to experience this too. We must accept our existence in as wide a sense as can be; everything, even the unheard of, must be possible within it. That, when you come down to it, is the only kind of courage that is demanded of us: the courage for the oddest, the most unexpected, the most inexplicable things that we may encounter. That human beings have been cowardly in this regard has done life endless harm; the experiences we describe as 'apparitions', the entire so called 'spirit world', death, all those things so closely akin to us have by our daily rejection of them been forced so far out of our lives that the senses with which we might apprehend them have atrophied. To say nothing of God. But the fear of the inexplicable has not just rendered the individual existence poorer; relations between people, too, have been restricted, as it were lifted out of the river bed of endless possibilities and placed on a deserted bank where nothing happens. For it is not lethargy alone which causes human relationships to repeat themselves in the same old way with such unspeakable monotony in instance after instance; it is the fearful shying away from any kind of new, unforeseeable experience which we think we may not be equal to. But only someone who is ready for anything and rules nothing out, not even the most enigmatic things, will experience the relationship with another as a living thing and will himself live his own existence to the full. For imagining an individual's existence as a larger or smaller room reveals to us that most people are only acquainted with one corner of their particular room, a place by the window, a little area to pace up and down. That way, they have a certain security. And yet the perilous uncertainty that drives the prisoners in Poe's tales to grope out the outlines of their terrible dungeons and so to know the unspeakable horrors of their surroundings, is so much more human. But we are not prisoners. There are no traps or snares set up around us, and there is nothing that should frighten or torment us. We are placed into life as into the element with which we have the most affinity, and moreover we have after thousands of years of adaptation come to resemble this life so closely that if we keep still we can, thanks to our facility for mimicry, hardly be distinguished from all that surrounds us. We have no reason to be mistrustful of our world, for it is not against us. If it holds terrors they are our terrors, if it has its abysses these abysses belong to us, if there are dangers then we must try to love them. And if we only organize our life according to the principle which teaches us always to hold to what is difficult, then what now still appears most foreign will become our most intimate and most reliable experience. How can we forget those ancient myths found at the beginnings of all peoples? The myths about the dragons who at the last moment turn into princesses? Perhaps all the dragons in our lives are princesses, only waiting for the day when they will see us handsome and brave? Perhaps everything terrifying is deep down a helpless thing that needs our help.

So, dear Mr Kappus, you shouldn't be dismayed if a sadness rises up in front of you, greater than any you have ever seen before; or if a disquiet plays over your hands and over all your doings like light and cloud shadow. You must think that something is happening with you, that life has not forgotten you, that it holds you in its hand; it will not let you fall. Why should you want to exclude from your life all unsettling, all pain, all depression of spirit, when you don't know what work it is these states are performing within you? Why do you want to persecute yourself with the question of where it all comes from and where it is leading? You well know you are in a period of transition and want nothing more than to be transformed. If there is something ailing in the way you go about things, then remember that sickness is the means by which an organism rids itself of something foreign to it. All one has to do is help it to be ill, to have its whole illness and let it break out, for that is how it mends itself. There is so much, my dear Mr Kappus, going on in you now. You must be patient as an invalid and trusting as a convalescent, for you are perhaps both. And more than that: you are also the doctor responsible for looking after himself. But with all illnesses there are many days when the doctor can do nothing but wait. And inasfar as you are your own doctor, this above all is what you must do now.

Do not watch yourself too closely. Do not draw overrapid conclusions from what is happening to you. Simply let it happen. Otherwise you will too readily find yourself looking on your past, which is of course not uninvolved with everything that is going on in you now, reproachfully (that is, moralistically). But what now affects you from among the divagations, desires and longings of your boyhood is not what you will recall and condemn. The extraordinary circumstances of a solitary and helpless childhood are so difficult, so complicated, exposed to so many influences and at the same time removed from any real life context, that if a vice enters into it we must not be too quick to call it a vice. We should in general be very careful with names; it is so often the name of a crime which destroys a life, not the nameless and personal act itself, which was perhaps completely necessary to that life and could have been absorbed by it without difficulty. And the expenditure of energy only seems so great because you put too much importance on the victory. It is not victory that is the 'great thing' you think you have achieved, though the feeling itself is not in error. What is great is that there was already something there that you were able to set in place of that deception, something true and real. Without it, your victory would only have been a moral reaction with no further significance, but as it is it has become a segment of your life. Of your life, dear Mr Kappus, which I am thinking of with so many hopes and wishes. Do you remember how this life of yours longed in childhood to belong to the 'grown ups'? I can see that it now longs to move on from them and is drawn to those who are greater yet. That is why it does not cease to be difficult, but also why it will not cease to grow.

And if I have anything else to say to you it is this: do not think that the person who is trying to console you lives effortlessly among the simple, quiet words that sometimes make you feel better. His life is full of troubles and sadness and falls far short of them. But if it were any different he could never have found the words that he did.

Yours,

Rainer Maria Rilke

Furuborg, Jonsered, Sweden, 4 November 1904

My dear Mr Kappus,

During this time that has passed without a letter I was partly travelling and partly too busy to be able to write. And even today writing is not going to be easy because I have had to write a good number of letters already and my hand is tired. If I had someone to dictate to I'd have plenty to say, but as it is you'll have to make do with just a few words in return for your long letter.

I think of you often, dear Mr Kappus, and with such a concentration of good wishes that really in some way it ought to help. Whether my letters can really be a help to you, well, I have my doubts. Do not say: Yes, they are. Just let them sink in quietly and without any particular sense of gratitude, and let's wait and see what will come of it.

There's not perhaps much purpose in my dealing with the detail of what you wrote, for what I might be able to say about your tendency towards self doubt or your inability to reconcile your inner and outer life, or about anything else that assails you – it all comes down to what I have said before: the same desire that you might find enough patience in you to endure, and simplicity enough to have faith; that you might gain more and more trust in what is hard and in your own loneliness among other people. And otherwise let life take its course. Believe me: life is right, whatever happens.

And as to feelings: all feelings are pure that focus you and raise you up. An impure feeling is one that only comprises one side of your nature and so distorts you. Any thoughts that match up to your childhood are good. Everything that makes more of you than you have hitherto been in your best moments is right. Every heightening is good if it occurs in the quick of your bloodstream, if it is not an intoxication, not a troubling but a joy one can see right to the bottom of. Do you understand what I mean?

And your doubts can become a good quality if you school them. They must grow to be knowledgeable , they must learn to be critical. As soon as they begin to spoil something for you ask them why a thing is ugly, demand hard evidence, test them, and you will perhaps find them at a loss and short of an answer, or perhaps mutinous. But do not give in, request arguments, and act with this kind of attentiveness and consistency every single time, and the day will come when instead of being demolishers they will be among your best workers – perhaps the canniest of all those at work on the building of your life.

That is all, dear Mr Kappus, that I can say to you for today. But I'm also sending you the off print of a little work that has just appeared in the Prague journal Deutsche Arbeit. There I continue to speak to you of life and of death and of the greatness and splendour of both.

Yours,

Rainer Maria Rilke

Paris, on the second day of Christmas 1908

You ought to know, dear Mr Kappus, how happy I was to get this lovely letter from you. The news you give me, actual and articulate as it now is, seems good to me, and the more I thought about it the more it struck me as incontrovertibly good. I really wanted to write you this in time for Christmas Eve; but what with the work that has been occupying me variously and without interruption this winter the old festival came up so quickly that I hardly had time enough to make the most necessary purchases, much less to write a letter.

But during these Christmas days I have often thought of you and imagined how quiet you must be in your solitary fort up among the empty mountains over which those great south winds rush as if they wanted to devour them in mighty chunks.

The silence must be immense to be able to receive such sounds and movements, and when one thinks that they are joined by the noise of the sea, present in the distance, perhaps the most inward note in this prehistoric harmony, one can only hope that you have the trust and patience to let this marvellous solitude work on you, a solitude which will never be deleted from your life. In all that lies before you to experience and do, it will continue as an anonymous influence and have a subtly decisive effect, perhaps like the way the blood of our ancestors moves unceasingly within us and mingles with our own to make us the unique, not to be repeated being that we are at every turn of our lives.

Yes: I am glad that you have this firm, utterable form of existence, the rank, the uniform, the duty, all these tangible and well defined things that in such surroundings, with an equally isolated and not numerous company of men, take on a seriousness and necessity; and which, over and above the aspects of play and pastime that are also part of the military profession, make for a certain vigilance and not only permit an individual attentiveness but actually teach it. And to be in circumstances that work on us, that set us before great natural phenomena from time to time, is all we need.

Art too is only a way of living, and it is possible, however one lives, to prepare oneself for it without knowing; in every real situation we are nearer to it, better neighbours, than in the unreal half artistic professions which by pretending to be close to art in fact deny and hurt its very existence, as for example is the case with the whole of journalism and almost all criticism and three quarters of what passes for literature. I am glad, in a word, that you have withstood the dangers of slipping into all this, and that somewhere you are living alone and courageous in a rough reality. May the year to come maintain and strengthen you in it.

Ever yours,

R. M. Rilke

只有乏味的人会在早餐时才华横溢

对他们的伟人一无所知，是英国教育的必要元素之一。

我们人人都花时间寻找生活的秘诀。其实，生活的秘诀在艺术之中。

生活的至高目标是生活。很少人在生活。实现自己的完美状态，把自己的梦想逐一变为现实，那才叫生活。

商人早早起床吃了第一餐，赶火车进城，在昏暗无光、灰灰蒙蒙的商业世界混上一天，夜晚回到家里，吃完晚餐就睡觉，这种生活以我看来比奴工都不如——捆绑他的不是铁链，是金枷。

劣等艺术比没有艺术还要差远了。

.....没有什么是值得做的，除了世人都说无法成功的事。

做一份美味沙拉相当于做一个优秀的外交家——两者涉及的问题完全相同：得知道应该往醋里掺多少油。

生活是太重要的事，不能认真地谈论它。

贵族政治里的金钱永远多于头脑。

好国王是唯一对现代民主政治构成威胁的敌人。

我一向认为，只有缺乏想象力的人会死守“始终如一”的立场.....

.....典型的英国厨子是个蠢女人，她的罪过是从来没学会如何放盐，为此她应该变成一根盐柱。 [1]

关于莎士比亚，可以说他是第一个明白男式紧身上衣的戏剧价值，也知道如何运用一件裙撑托起一个高潮。

.....舞台不单是各种艺术形式交会的地方，而且是艺术向生活回归的地方。

真正的戏剧家.....向我们展现艺术条件下的生活，而不是生活形式的艺术。

.....我们普通的英国小说家.....没有做到.....风格凝练。他们的人物过于能说会道，谈得自己也精疲力尽。我们想要的是多一点的现实，少一点的修辞.....我们情愿他们谈得少些、想得些。

它们领着我们穿越一片废话连连的荒漠，去到一座据说是人生的海市蜃楼：我们漫无目的地游走于词语的不毛之地，追寻一点点自然。不过，也别对英国小说太苛刻了；它们是智力空虚者的唯一消遣。

没有什么能打垮一个诗人，除了一处印刷错误。

.....不神经质的诗人是稀有的。

美国没有蠢材。许多美国人招人厌烦、趣味庸俗、举止唐突、鲁莽无礼，这也同样是许多英国人爱犯的毛病；但愚蠢并不在美国人的缺点之列。真的，美国没有蠢材生存的土壤。美国人期许擦鞋的也有头脑，事实也不负所望。

至于婚姻，那是他们最流行的制度之一。美国男人早早结婚，美国女人常常结婚；这两种人是天作之合。

美洲始终不能原谅欧洲，因为在历史上它比自己被发现的时间早了一些。

.....假如人要专门学习如何说话，那真会是一件功德。语言是我们拥有的最高贵的工具，既能揭示思想又能掩饰思想；讲话本身是一种精神化的行动，交谈则是最可爱的一门艺术。

唯一不会让真实人物显得突兀的杜撰之作是历史。

她在人生早年发现了一条重要的道理：一切都没有放浪那么看似天真；于是，借着一系列大胆的越轨行为（其中一半是无甚损害的），她获取了一个名人能有的各种特权。她不止一次换过丈夫；狄布列特说她有三场婚姻呢；但因为她们从来没有换过情人，社会上早已不再流传她的丑闻了。

除非有钱，否则迷人的气质毫无用处。风流韵事是富人的特权，不是无业者的职业。穷人应当实际而本分。有一份持久收入比气质诱人更好。

哪怕在外郡 [2]，也绝对不该容许在宴席上向人抛出一个纯属数学的智力问题。提这种问题，跟忽然询问人家灵魂的状况一样糟糕。

如果人不能畅所欲言，所谓良好的友谊又何在？人人都可以说动听的话去取悦和奉承，但是真朋友说的永远是逆耳的话，而且不担心令对方痛苦。的确，真朋友宁愿如此，因为这样一来他就会知道自己有益处。

觉得别人全都远远不如自己，这种意识是唯一叫人活得下去的东西，而我向来悉心培育这样的感觉。

我如此聪明，以至于有时我正在说的话，我自己一个词儿都听不

懂。

我一向认为，操劳不过是无所事事者的救命稻草。

以“世纪末”这个词为人所知的一切，我都特别佩服和喜爱。这是我们的文明绽放的一朵娇花：唯有它才令世界不至于沦入平庸、粗俗、野蛮。

福楼拜没有写法语文章，他写的是一位艺术大师的文章，作者刚好是法国人。

今天早晨我在床上想着，法国远远胜过英国的地方在于法国的资产阶级个个想当艺术家，而英国的艺术家个个想当资产阶级。

祈祷永远不能得到应答：否则哪还是祈祷，岂不成了通信。

我有一个重大发现……充分饮酒，足以产生沉醉的全部效果。

传教士呀，乖乖！难道你们不懂，传教士对又穷又饿的食人族来说是神赐的美食？每当他们快到饥馑边缘的时候，大慈大悲的老天就给他们送去一个白白胖胖的传教士。

哲学教我们心平气和地应对他人的不幸。

我个人的经验是我们越多研究艺术，就越少在乎自然……艺术是我们精神饱满的抗议，是我们要自然安守本分的英勇尝试。

思考是世界上最不健康的事，它像别的疾病一样可以夺人性命。谢天谢地，思考不会传染——至少在英国如此。

在文学中我们需要优异、魅力、美感和想象的魄力。我们不希望作品把下等阶级的所作所为描述一番，令人难受和恶心。

我完全承认现代小说有许多优点。我只不过坚持，作为一类书，它们没法读。

艺术本身就是一种夸张；艺术的精神在于甄选，它正是过度强调的一种强化模式。

事实不仅在历史中找到立足之地，而且逐渐在篡夺幻想的领域，并已经占领了传奇的王国。它们令人寒心地触碰着一切。它们让人类愈加庸俗。

社会迟早必须重投入它失去的领袖——那高雅迷人的说谎者的怀抱。

生活模仿艺术，远多于艺术模仿生活……生活向艺术举起镜子，要么复制画家或雕塑家想象的某种奇异事物，要么实现小说中的幻梦。

.....模仿可以成为最恳切的一种侮辱。

昨晚阿伦德尔太太坚持要我走去窗前，看看她所谓的“天上荣光”。我当然不得不看。她是那种漂亮得不可理喻的俗人，你没法不答应她的任何要求。结果呢？那不过是一幅非常二流的透纳油画，属于透纳较差的时期，此画家最糟糕的缺点全都遭到夸张和过分的强调。

一种艺术越是抽象，越是理想化，就越可以向我们揭示它所属时代的气质。如果我们想通过艺术来了解一个国家，不妨看它的建筑，听它的音乐。

其实，我们完全仰赖了艺术的中介来回望历史，幸好，艺术从来就没有一次把真相告诉过我们。

成为一件艺术品是生活的宗旨。

英国人总把真实降级为事实。当真实变作事实的时候，就失去了它全部的智力价值。

小说从尾读起的好处一言难尽。最后一页通常最有兴味，当读者从灾难或结局开始，就会感到和作者平起平坐的愉悦，好比去剧场后台探班一样。人不再沉迷于故事，男主角绝处逢生，女主角呼天抢地，都完全令人无动于衷。读者知道了精心埋藏的秘密，那么，面对小说中傀儡们义不容辞地表现出的不必要的焦灼，就大可一笑而过。

一切风采翩翩的人，我猜，都是被惯坏了的。这是他们有魅力的秘诀。

给人建议总是一桩愚行，给人以好的建议则绝对是致命的。我希望你永远不犯这种错。否则，你将会追悔莫及。

你忘了，一件事并不由于有人为它丧命便是真实的。

艺术，哪怕是视野最完整、景象最开阔的艺术，也从未真的向我们呈现外在世界。它向我们呈现的只是我们自己的灵魂，那个我们唯一具有真切认识的世界.....只有艺术能让我们发现自己。

评论家应当学会在评论一件艺术品的时候不谈及作者的个性。这其实是评论的开始。

如今每一个大人物都有门徒，而给他写传记的永远是犹太。

旁征博引的谈话要么是无知者的做作，要么是精神空虚者的专业。

教育是一件可敬的事。但最好不要忘了，值得了解的事情都不是能教的。

谁都能写一部三卷本的小说。这只需要对生活和文学全然无知。

谁都能创造历史。只有伟人能把它写出来。

有时听人说，艺术家生涯的悲剧在于他不能实现理想。但是大多数艺术家一路走来，妨碍他们的真正悲剧却在于他们把理想实现得太彻底。因为当理想实现时，它就失去了它的奇妙和神秘，仅仅变成了另一个理想的新起点。音乐是完美的艺术，这是原因所在。

交谈的话题，应该无所不触及，又无所偏重。

.....生活极度缺乏形式。它的灾祸以错误方式发生在错误的人身上。它的喜剧有一种怪诞的恐怖，它的悲剧似乎以胡闹为高潮。人走近它的时候永远是受伤的。各种过程要么漫长，要么匆促。

.....一切艺术都无关道德，除了较低层次的感官艺术或说教艺术，只有它们才会企图激起或邪恶或正义的行动。因为任何行动都属于道德领域。艺术的目标仅止于造成一种情绪。

世界上没有哪个国家像我们国家这样需要不切实际的人。在我们这儿，思想由于一直跟实践相联系而遭受贬低.....我们活在一个工作过度，而又教养不足的时代；这时代的人勤勤恳恳，以至于变得愚不可及。

通向对生活无知的不二法门，是努力让自己有用。

人多么容易同情困苦，多么难同情思想。

一个不危险的观念根本不配称作观念。

人以自己的身份说话时最是言不由衷。给他一副面具，他就会道出真情。

因为何谓真实？在宗教方面，它不过是胜出的观点。在科学方面，它是最终的感觉。在艺术方面，它是人上一次的情绪。

不爱艺术有两种方式.....一种是不爱它。另一种是理智地爱它。

一点点真诚会带来危险，大量的真诚绝对要致命。

看出美丽的事物蕴含着丑恶的意义，这样的人既堕落又不讨人喜欢。这是一种缺点。

看出美丽的事物蕴含着美丽的意义，这样的人有教养。他们身上有希望。

所谓道德的书和不道德的书都是无稽之谈。书要么写得好，要么写得糟。仅此而已。

恶习和美德对艺术家来说是艺术的素材。

一切艺术都兼具表面和象征。

揭开表面的人，风险自负。

解读象征的人，风险自负。

艺术之镜真正映出的是观者，不是生活。

评论家莫衷一是的时候，艺术家与自己达成了一致。

我们能原谅别人制作一件有用之物，只要他不欣赏它。制作一件无用之物的唯一理由是对它欣赏备至。

经验并没有伦理价值。大家只是用它来称呼自己犯过的错罢了。

一个人不再爱另一个人以后，对方表现出的感情总显得荒唐可笑。

自责含有一种奢侈。我们责备自己的时候，觉得别人都无权责备我们。给我们赦罪的是忏悔，不是神父。

不真诚有那么可怕？我不觉得。它只不过是一种令我们个性倍增的手段。

随着私有财产的废除，我们将会迎来真正、美好而健康的个人主义。将来不再有人会把生命浪费于积累物品和物品的符号上。人将会生活。生活是世界上最稀有的。多数人只是在生存，仅此而已。

社会之中只有一个阶级想钱比富人想得还多，那就是穷人。穷人没有别的可想。这是贫穷的痛苦。

民主一度被寄以厚望，但民主不过是代表人民者对人民的压迫。

[3]

其实，文明需要奴隶。古希腊人的做法不无道理。除非有奴隶去做丑陋、可怕、无聊的工作，否则文化和沉思都遥不可及。人类奴隶制是错误、不安全且令人颓丧的。世界的未来有赖于机械奴隶制，有赖于奴役机器。

一件艺术品是一种独特心性的独到成果……艺术家一旦留意别人想要什么，并尝试有求必应的时候，他就不再是艺术家，而成了一个沉闷或逗笑的工匠，一个诚实或不诚实的买卖人。

艺术永远不应当努力做到通俗。公众应当努力学会鉴赏。

在英国，幸免于难的艺术，以那些不令公众感兴趣的艺术为最。诗歌这个例子可以佐证我的话。英国之所以继续有好诗，是因为公众不读诗，对它没有影响。

昔年人民受刑具之苦。如今他们被报章所误。

在英国，除了几个众所周知没有发展到粗暴无度的事例，报业依然是一个重要因素、一股可观的力量。它有意施于民众私生活的专横统治，以我看来非同寻常。其实，公众的好奇心是没有餍足的，他们什么都想知道，唯独对有价值的东西不感兴趣。报业深明此理，而且长于商人之道，对他们有求必应。在我们之前的很多个世纪，公众把记者的耳朵钉在水泵上。这骇人听闻。本世纪，记者把耳朵牢牢贴近钥匙孔。这样更加不堪。

谁都能够同情一个受苦的朋友，但同情一个成功的朋友，这就得有一种极好的性格——实际上，得有一个真正的个人主义者的性格。

工作是本国饮酒阶级的诅咒。

唯独没有想法的地方才有民意。

本身美丽的题材不能给艺术家以启发。它少了缺憾。

艺术是世界上唯一认真的事。艺术家是唯一从来不认真的人。

可以安慰穷人的只有挥霍。可以安慰富人的只有省俭。

人永远不该聆听。聆听意味着对你的听众漠不关心。

生活的头一件义务在于尽可能地做到人工化。第二件义务何在，迄今无人发现。

“坏”是好人杜撰的一种迷思，以此解释别人为何有奇异的魅力。

认为灵魂和肉体有区别的人这两样都没有。

一朵别在扣眼上的工艺精致的花，是艺术和自然的唯一联系。

宗教死于它们得到证实的时候。科学是已死宗教的记录。

上等人反驳别人。智者反驳自己。

真实发生的事，没有一桩是无足轻重的。

沉闷是严肃的成年阶段。

在所有不重要的事情上，风格而非诚意是基本要素；在所有重要的事情上，风格而非诚意是基本要素。

如果人说了真话，肯定是迟早要被识穿的。

人只该为了享受活着。幸福是最快变味的。

没有罪恶是粗俗的，但一切粗俗都是罪恶。粗俗是他人的行为举止。

唯独浅薄的人有自知之明。

时间是浪费金钱。

人永远应该有点不合常规。

一切良好的决心都有一个致命伤。那就是决心全都下得太快。

偶尔盛装过度只有一种补救，那就是，永远要绝对地表现出过度的学问。

执着于行为的对错观念，显示出智力发育的不完全。

“有野心”是失败的最后一种遁词。

人应该要么当一件艺术品，要么穿戴一件艺术品。

只有肤浅的性格才持久。人类较深沉的本性总被迅速识破。

产业是一切丑陋的根源。

各个时代以时空错杂的途径活在历史之中。

老年人无所不信，中年人无所不疑，青年人无所不晓。

完美性的条件是悠闲，完美性的目标是青春。

只有文体大师曾经成功地做到晦涩。

爱自己是终生浪漫之始。

啊，男人有一套律法，女人另有一套律法，这真是遗憾之至。我觉得，谁都应该无法无天才是。

第一杯之后，你看见的东西如你所愿。第二杯之后，你看见的东西似是而非。最后你看见了各种东西的本相，这是世界上最可怕的事。（谈苦艾酒）

我的存在是一桩丑闻。

生活中真实的悲剧，往往以一种难以言喻的方式发生，其伤人之处在于它们粗鲁的暴力、绝对的不连贯、荒谬的缺乏意义、彻底的没有风格。

一切同伴关系，不管婚姻还是友谊，纽带终究是谈话……

肉体的罪孽何足挂齿。它们只是让医生治疗的疾病，如果该治的话。只有灵魂的罪孽才可耻。

爱的目标就是去爱：不多，也不少。

对体验感到后悔是故步自封。否定自己的体验，是在个人生活的唇齿间放进一个谎言。那样无异于灵魂上的否定。

艺术家始终追寻的是灵肉合一而不相分割的存在模式：外在可以

表现内在；形式即揭示。

依我如今看来，某个类型的爱恋，是人世间苦难深重的唯一合理解释。

大多数人是别人。他们的想法是别人的见解，他们的生活是一种模仿，他们的热情是一种照搬。

每件艺术品都是一个预言的实现：因为每件艺术品都是观念向形象转化而成的。

……一切伟大的观念都是危险的。

模仿结束的地方才是艺术开始之处……

一切糟糕的艺术都源于良好的意图。

出于天性和选择，我极其懒惰。

我从不推迟到明天——既然是可以后天做的事。

我天生属于例外，不属于规律。

赞美使我谦卑，但是谩骂纷起之际，我知道我摘到了星辰。

这一切何去何从呢？半个世界不相信上帝，另外半个世界不相信我。

假设我孤身一人滞留荒岛，而物品齐全的话，我每天晚餐时都会盛装打扮。

我有最单纯的品味。我向来只满意最好的。

由于爱国而身陷牢狱的爱国者爱他的国家，由于爱男孩子而坐牢的诗人爱男孩子。如果要改变我的人生，等于要我承认同性爱是不高贵的。我坚持认为它高贵，比其他形式的爱更高贵。

我进监狱时心如铁石，只考虑自己的享受，但现在我的心已被击碎，怜悯进入了我的心；我现在知道怜悯是世间最伟大也最美好的事物。所以，我无法怨恨那些控告我的人，也并不怨恨任何人，因为从前的我不会懂得这一切。

我不是一个为自己曾经坐牢感到羞愧的败类。令我羞愧难当的是那种把我送进牢狱的物质至上的生活。它跟一个艺术家大不相称。

我喜欢表演。它比生活真实太多。

人一旦上了年纪，活到看透的份儿上，就什么也看不透了。

老年的悲剧并不是人老迈，而是人稚嫩。

我会不惜一切来重获青春，除了锻炼身体、早起和循规蹈矩。

友善地对待自己毫不关心的人总是不难。

法律应该明文禁止自我牺牲。为别人牺牲自己，会极大地损害别人的志气。

英国人对美国的粗野兴致勃勃，对美国的文明兴味索然。

一件称身的衣物，对于两性都同样称身，根本没有什么分明属于女性的衣装。

实在是唯独有闲阶级才衣着不堪。任何需要体力劳动的时候，用到的服装通常都无比称身，因为劳动得有自由，而没有自由，就谈不上衣着之美。

穿上一身晚礼服，任何人，哪怕是证券经纪，也可以博得文雅之名。

只有浅薄的人才会不凭借外表作判断。

天然无饰只不过是一种姿态，据我所知是最讨厌的故作姿态。

也许人最自在的状态，莫过于他得要扮演某个角色的时候。

我觉得人应该虚构关于自己的神话。

一切艺术都毫无用处。

伟大的艺术家从来不会如实地观看事物。若然，他就不再是艺术家。

对美的欲望，不外乎生命欲望的一种高级形态。

挥霍是穷人的奢侈，吝啬是富人的奢侈。

世人常说，穷人对慈善感恩。当然有些人是感恩的，但是最优秀的穷人从来不会感恩。他们不感恩，愤愤不平，抗命，反叛。他们很有理由如此。

向穷人提倡节俭是既怪诞又无礼的。这好比建议挨饿的人减食。

他们（穷人）干吗要对从富人桌上洒落的面包屑感恩戴德？他们有平起平坐的权利，也渐渐知道了这一点。

穷人真正的悲剧在于，他们除了克己忘我就什么都没有条件做。美丽的罪孽，犹如美好的事物一样，是富人的特权。

狂恋是无所事事者的特权。一个国家的有闲阶级的用途莫不如此。

民族里代代相传的愚蠢——英国人健全的常识。

谁都能有常识，只要缺乏想象力。

我热衷于迷信。它们是思维和想象力的彩色元素。它们是常识的对手。

现在大多数人不知不觉地被一种常识拘禁终生，太晚才意识到人只对自己做错的事无悔。

自私不是过自己想过的生活，而是要求别人过自己想过的生活。

谈话属于最可爱的艺术之列。

谈话的目标在于消遣，不在于赐教。

“如果同伴乏味，那是你的错”这句格言，叫我们觉得未免乐观了些。

晚宴上遇见一位天才、一位公爵，这种时候，善谈者会试着把自己提升到天才的高度，而把公爵拉低到他自己的高度。要在社交场上高自己一等的人中间成功，你必须毫不犹豫地反驳他们。

一个人能在伦敦的晚宴上抢尽风头，就能在全世界抢尽风头。

我迷恋它们（伦敦的晚宴）。聪明人从不听别人说，蠢材从不开口。

向来只有智力上迷失的人要争辩。

相信是很无趣的。怀疑是引人入胜的。保持警醒是活着，沉陷于安全感是死去。

现在我从不赞成或反对什么。那样的人生态度是荒唐的。我们降生到世界上，并不是为了炫耀我们的道德偏见。

使人笃信不疑的事物从来都不真实。那是信仰的致命伤，和传奇的教训。

没有人殉身他了解的真实。人殉身他们期望的真实，殉身他们内心深处恐怖地知道并不真实的东西。

谋杀总是错的。人不该做任何一件不能在晚宴后谈起的事。

现代罪案的元祖是贫困，不是罪孽。

习惯性地用惩罚来治理会造成社区野蛮化，其恶果远远大于偶尔发生的罪案。

牢狱生涯叫人如实地看见人和事物。所以监狱使人变得冷酷。监狱外的人被幻象所迷惑，才以为生活在不断变动。

对身在狱中的人，眼泪属于日常的体验。在监狱里不曾哭泣的一天是心灵冷酷的一天，并不是心灵快乐的一天。

（牢狱生涯）最可怕的事不是它令人心碎——心天生是易碎的——而是它令人心如铁石。

正因为一个人没有能力做某件事，他才适合做这件事的裁判。

玩火唯一的好处……是玩火者永远不会被灼伤。不懂玩火的才是会被烧伤的人。

何谓犬儒主义者 [4] ？他们知道所有东西的价格，却不知道任何东西的价值。

感伤主义者内心永远是个犬儒主义者。没错，感伤主义不过是犬儒主义者休假的表现。

感伤主义者不过是个想要情感的奢侈又不愿为之付出的人。

他是个典型的英国人，永远乏味，时常粗暴。

像所有要把一个话题说尽的人那样，他说到听众全都筋疲力尽。

她举止像是个美人儿。美国女性大多如此。这是她们的魅力之源。

她努力打扮得像幅画，结果却显得景象凌乱。

（她）滔滔不绝而言语空洞，比我见识过的任何人更甚。她是个天生的演说家。

一个土气、乏味的姑娘，长着某一种典型的英国面孔，叫人一见之下再也回忆不起来。

不满是驱使一个人或一个民族前进的第一步。

在任何一个熟知历史的人看来，抗命是人类的原德 [5] 。进步是通过抗命——抗命和反叛——取得的。

如同在政治的领域一样，艺术领域的革命全都出自一个来源，那就是人追求一种更高贵的生活形态、更自由的表达方式和机会的愿望。

一个绅士的首要责任是梦想。

梦想家是只能借着月光认路的人，他受到的惩罚在于他比全世界更早看见曙光。

社会往往宽恕罪犯；它从不宽恕梦想家。

唯一比梦想家有更多幻觉的人是行动家。

我对自己的责任是让自己乐趣无穷。

世人从不考虑培育少女的想象力。这是现代教育的重大缺点。

我们教人记诵，我们从不教他们成长。

牛津在夏季学期开课传授闲逸这一门精妙的艺术，这是任何大学能传授的最重要的东西之一。

生活的秘诀是永远不要怀着不得体的情感。

只有浅薄的人，才需要用很多年来摆脱一份情感。能放能收的人了断一种哀愁，跟他生发一种快乐同样轻易。

啤酒、《圣经》和七宗致命的美德 [6]，造就了我们今天的英格兰。

英国公众在听一个庸才讲话的时候永远感到无比舒服。

家庭真是一种可怕的妨碍，尤其是当人未婚的时候。

时装不过是一种难以承受的丑陋，我们忍无可忍，只好每半年改换它一次。

始于一句夸奖的相识必然会深化为真正的友谊。以这种方式开始是对的。

一场友谊从笑声开始一点也不赖，而且它绝对是友谊最好的收尾。

我对新朋友总想无所不知，对老朋友总想一无所知。

礼俗客套会让亲密友谊变得紧张。

儿女最初爱恋父母。过些年，他们评判父母。他们绝少（哪怕真有）会原谅父母。

我们这个灰蒙蒙的、又大又丑的伦敦呀，容纳着它难以计数的居民、它龌龊的罪人，和它辉煌的罪恶。

我不喜欢瑞士：它只出产过神学家和侍者。

对于专制者可以说一句好话：他是一个人，因此可能有教养，而乌合之众是一头怪物，绝无教养。

历史从不自我重复。历史学家们互相重复。

我们对历史的唯一义务是重写它。

我们全都喜欢把别人设想得很好，原因是我们全都替自己担忧。乐观主义的基础在于纯然的恐惧。

笑是对待生命的原初态度——这种模式只在艺术家和罪犯身上依然存在。

什么都不做是世界上最困难的事——最困难且最智性的。

生活的目标是自我完善。去完美地实现个人的天性——我们人人都为此而生。

有时候人会多年来浑浑噩噩地活着，然后在一个钟点之内经历生命的密集冲撞。

我们在生活中顶多只会有一种伟大的体验，而生活的秘诀就在于尽可能频繁地重复那体验。

别跟我说你榨干了生活的可能性。一个男人这么说，旁人便知道是生活榨干了他。

变成自己生活的旁观者，就是逃逸出生活的苦难。

生活用影子来玩弄我们。我们向它求取享受。它给我们享受，继之以苦恼和失望。

文学总是预言了生活。它不抄袭生活，而是照它的目标来塑造生活。我们所知的19世纪，一大半是巴尔扎克发明的。

我讨厌文学中的庸俗写实主义。实话照说的人应该被逼着拿起铁锹 [7]。

难道没有一些书让我们在一小时内获得生命的丰收，盖过我们二十年乏善可陈的人生？

把真人放进小说或戏剧，意味着想象力贫乏的头脑、粗糙而不老练的观察、文体的完全缺失。

世人称为伤风败俗的书，是一些把世界的可耻面目展示出来的书。

没有人能经受高估，要毁掉一个作者的声望，最有力的手段莫过于一味地赞美他、过分地颂扬他。

所有爱情都是一场悲剧。

误会……是爱情的基础。

忠贞者只知道爱情琐碎的一面；不忠者才知道爱情的悲剧。

在感情生活方面忠贞，正如在智力生活方面见解始终不变——不外乎承认失败。

性欲……使人爱恋自己憎恶的一切。

人很难不对所爱的不公平。

人应该永远恋爱。因此之故，人应该永远不结婚。

婚姻的适当基础是互相误会。

婚姻生活只是一个习惯，一个坏习惯。

婚姻多么能毁掉男人！它跟香烟一样令人丧志，而价格贵得多。

已婚男人的幸福……取决于他没有娶的那些人。

婚姻只有一个魅力，那就是它让双方完全必要地过上哄骗的生活。

任何看似幸福婚姻的东西，现在都会引来世界的深深怀疑。

一个丈夫如今在公共场合对妻子注目是最危险的。旁人看了，总会认为这丈夫在夫妇独处的时候殴打妻子。

这年头所有人妒忌所有人，当然，无人妒忌夫妻。

谈二十年恋爱，女人看上去会像一座废墟；结二十年婚，她会变成公共建筑一类的东西。

姑娘从来不跟调情的对象结婚。姑娘觉得这样不对。

男人结婚是因为疲倦；女人是因为好奇。两者都感到失望。

男人太早懂得生活……女人太晚懂得生活。这是男女的区别。

女人只有一个改造男人的办法：令他彻底厌倦，以至他对生活完全失去兴趣。

男人一旦爱过一个女人，就会为她做任何事，但继续爱她除外。

男人跟任何女人在一起都能够快乐，只要是他不爱的女人。

男人总想做女人的初恋。那是他们笨拙的虚荣……女人对事物有较为精细的本能。（她们）喜欢的是做男人的最后一段罗曼史。

女人的生活中只有一个真正的悲剧：过去永远是她的爱人，而她的将来一成不变的是她的丈夫。

男女之间没有友谊。有激情、敌意、崇拜、爱，但没有友谊。

女人对事物有一种奇妙的本能。她们能发现一切，偏偏看不到最明显的。

人永远不该信任说出自己真实年龄的女人。连这个都说的女人，是无所不言的。

藏起面孔的女人总是要么奇丑，要么极美。

如果女人想控制一个男人，只需勾起他最坏的本性。

我旅行必带日记。坐火车，手上永远应该有一本耸动视听的读物。

假如我们不怕有人捡，我们会丢掉的东西有很多。

人何以落得身败名裂？毁灭何以有这样的魅力？

人需要不幸才能幸福地生活。

要活得幸福，你必须知道人生的某些不幸福。

世界上幸福的人有他们的价值，但仅仅是反衬作用的负值。他们令不幸福者的美感和魅力格外突出。

火烧而不毁的，益加坚固。

苦难和苦难的共同体使人们善良。

虽然打算成为更好的人是种没有科学根据的空谈，但曾经受苦的人确实独具优势，可以变成更有深度的人。

哀愁是无与伦比的真实。有些时候，我觉得哀愁是唯一的真实。

一切放纵，与一切克制相同，都会自食其果。

过度会带来无与伦比的成功。

形式上纯粹的现代性总是带有庸俗的倾向。

没什么比做得太现代更危险：它容易一下子就过时。

电话的价值，在于两人要说的话的价值。

只有一样东西始终叫我迷恋不已：情绪的奥秘。做这些情绪的主人是美妙的，凭它们做主又更加妙不可言。

你们这些标榜自己始终如一的人，跟别人会有一样多的情绪。仅有的差别在于你们的情绪没什么意义。

没有一种情绪是人不能感同身受的，没有一种暮气沉沉的生活是不能重焕朝气的。

道德只是我们对自己反感的人作出的姿态。

道德属于无稽之谈，因为心灵的健康没有通用法则；它是全然个人的，因人而异。

现代道德无非是接受生当其时的标准。我认为，任何有教养的人接受生当其时的标准，都是一种最重大的不道德行径。

举止风度比道德准则重要。

道德教训再明显不过。

我遇到的满腔道德感的人，没有一个不是硬心肠、冷酷、报复心重、愚蠢不堪、缺乏丝毫人情味的。所谓道德人士，是些简单的禽

兽。

音乐这门艺术……最完全地实现了艺术的观念，它处于其他一切艺术时时在追求的境界。

音乐……给人开创了一个先前自己不知晓的过去，使人内心充满流泪时未曾体会的各种哀愁。

如果你弹奏出优美的音乐，人们会充耳不闻，如果你弹奏出糟糕的音乐，人们会一言不发。

我偏爱瓦格纳的音乐胜过别人的。它大吵大闹，由始至终你都可以谈话，又不会被人听见说了什么。

音乐界的人蛮不讲理。他们总是偏偏在你渴望完全耳聋的时候，希望你哑口无声。

天地万物并不属于我们；我们怎样领受的，就该怎样留给子孙。

至少在我而言，自然之中有治愈的力量。

我们全都对自然审视太多，与她共生太少。

假如自然令人舒适，人类就永远不会发明建筑。

自然令一切不会常驻，它永远在自我循环，好让造化的一切都不消失。

自然总是落后于时代。

每当我们回归于生活和自然，我们的作品总会变得粗俗、平庸、无趣。

只有两种人真正有魅力——无所不知的，和一无所知的。

我当然剽窃。这是赏识者的特权。

缺乏想象力的人方才杜撰。真艺术家的标志，就在于他把东西据为己有的手法，而他把一切都据为己有。

一出戏里的每一个词都既有智力上的也有音韵上的价值，它得传达出某种情感。

我从不给任何人写戏。我写戏是自娱自乐。过后，如果有人想演它，我有时会予以准许。

你可以用两种方式不欣赏我的话剧：要么统统不欣赏，要么欣赏《不可儿戏》^[8]。

愉悦是大自然的测验，是她表达赞许的信号。人觉得开心，就是他跟自己和环境都和谐共处的时候。

没有文明人会去懊悔一次享受，粗鄙者从来不知享受为何物。

我钟爱简单的享受。它们是复杂之人最后的避难所。

一支烟就是一次完美享受的完美体现。它精致，又叫人意犹未尽，还奢求什么呢？

我没有一刻后悔过自己为了享受而活。我这样生活做到了极致，因为每个人都应该把自己做的事做到极致。我体验过的享受无所不有。

我喜欢人多于原则，我喜欢没有原则的人多于世上的一切。

我不喜欢原则……我宁可要偏见。

驱动时代的是人物，不是原则。

我纳闷是谁把人定义为理性动物。这是古往今来最不成熟的定义了。人是什么，一言难尽，但人并不理性。

我很想把人定义为理性动物——这种理性动物一到需要依照理性的指令行事时就发脾气。

期望别人和自己一样出色是不公平的。

只有乏味的人会在早餐时才华横溢。

‘It would be be as remarkable as oneself.’

Only Dull People are Brilliant at Breakfast

To know nothing about their great men is one of the necessary elements of English education.

We spend our days, each one of us, in looking for the secret of life. Well, the secret of life is in art.

The supreme object of life is to live. Few people live. It is true life only to realize one's own perfection, to make one's every dream a reality.

To me the life of the businessman who eats his breakfast early in the morning, catches a train for the city, stays there in the dingy, dusty atmosphere of the commercial world, and goes back to his house in the evening, and after supper to sleep, is worse than the life of the galley slave – his chains are golden instead of iron.

Bad art is a great deal worse than no art at all.

. . . nothing is worth doing except what the world says is impossible.

To make a good salad is to be a brilliant diplomatist –the problem is entirely the same in both cases. To know exactly how much oil one must put with one's vinegar.

Life is much too important a thing ever to talk seriously about it.

There is always more brass than brains in an aristocracy.

Good kings are the only dangerous enemies that modern democracy has.

I have always been of the opinion that consistency is the last refuge of the unimaginative . . .

. . . the British cook is a foolish woman, who should be turned, for her iniquities, into a pillar of that salt which she never knows how to use.

Of Shakespeare it may be said he was the first to see the dramatic value of doublets, and that a climax may depend on a crinoline.

. . . the stage is not merely the meeting- place of all the arts, but is also the return of art to life.

The true dramatist . . . shows us life under the conditions of art, not art in the form of life.

. . . our ordinary English novelists . . . fail . . . in concentration of style. Their characters are far too eloquent and talk themselves to tatters. What we want is a little more reality and a little less rhetoric . . . we wish that they would talk less and think more.

They lead us through a barren desert of verbiage to a mirage that they call life: we wander aimlessly through a very wilderness of words in search of one touch of nature. However, one should not be too severe on English novels; they are the only relaxation of the intellectually unemployed.

A poet can survive everything but a misprint.

. . . a poet without hysterics is rare.

There is no such thing as a stupid American. Many Americans are horrid, vulgar, intrusive and impertinent, just as many English people are also; but stupidity is not one of the national vices. Indeed, in America there is no opening for a fool. They expect brains even from a boot- black, and get them.

As for marriage, it is one of their most popular institutions. The American man marries early, and the American woman marries often; and they get on extremely well together.

America has never quite forgiven Europe for having been discovered somewhat earlier in history than itself.

. . . it would be a very good thing if people were taught how to speak. Language is the noblest instrument we have, either for the revealing or the concealing of thought; talk itself is a sort of spiritualized action; and conversation is one of the loveliest of the arts.

The only form of fiction in which real characters do not seem out of place is history.

Early in life she had discovered the important truth that nothing looks so like innocence as an indiscretion; and by a series of reckless escapades, half of them quite harmless, she had acquired all the privileges of a personality. She had more than once changed her husband; indeed, Debrett credits her with three marriages; but as she had never changed her lover, the world had long ago ceased to talk scandal about her.

Unless one is wealthy there is no use in being a charming fellow. Romance is the privilege of the rich, not the profession of the unemployed. The poor should be practical and prosaic. It is better to have a permanent income than to be fascinating.

Nobody, even in the provinces, should ever be allowed to ask an intelligent question about pure mathematics across a dinner table. A question of this kind is quite as bad as inquiring suddenly about the state of a man's soul . . .

But what is the good of friendship if one cannot say exactly what one means? Anybody can say charming things and try to please and to flatter, but a true friend always says unpleasant things, and does not mind giving pain. Indeed, if he is a really true friend he prefers it, for he knows that then he is doing good.

The only thing that sustains one through life is the consciousness of the immense inferiority of everybody else, and this is a feeling that I have always cultivated.

I am so clever that sometimes I don't understand a single word of what I am saying.

I have always been of opinion that hard work is simply the refuge of people who have nothing whatever to do. All that is known by that term [fin de siècle] I particularly admire and love. It is the fine flower of our civilization: the only thing that keeps the world from the commonplace, the coarse, the barbarous.

Flaubert did not write French prose, but the prose of a great artist who happened to be French.

I was thinking in bed this morning that the great superiority of France over England is that in France every bourgeois wants to be an artist, whereas in England every artist wants to be a bourgeois.

Prayer must never be answered: if it is, it ceases to be prayer and becomes correspondence.

I have made an important discovery . . . that alcohol, taken in sufficient quantities, produces all the effects of intoxication.

Missionaries, my dear! Don't you realize that missionaries are the divinely provided food for destitute and underfed cannibals? Whenever they are on the brink of starvation, Heaven in its infinite mercy sends them a nice plump missionary.

Philosophy teaches us to bear with equanimity the misfortunes of others.

My own experience is that the more we study Art, the less we care for Nature . . . Art is our spirited protest, our gallant attempt to teach Nature her proper place.

Thinking is the most unhealthy thing in the world, and people die of it just as they die of any other disease. Fortunately, in England at any rate, thought is not catching.

In literature we require distinction, charm, beauty and imaginative power. We don't want to be harrowed and disgusted with an account of the doings of the lower orders.

I quite admit that modern novels have many good points. All I insist on is that, as a class, they are quite unreadable.

Art itself is really a form of exaggeration; and selection, which is the very spirit of art, is nothing more than an intensified mode of over- emphasis.

Facts are not merely finding a footing- place in history, but they are usurping the domain of Fancy, and have invaded the kingdom of Romance. Their chilling touch is over everything. They are vulgarizing mankind.

Society sooner or later must return to its lost leader, the cultured and fascinating liar.

Life imitates Art far more than Art imitates Life . . . Life holds the mirror up to Art, and either reproduces some strange type imagined by painter or sculptor, or realizes in fact what has been dreamed in fiction.

. . . imitation can be made the sincerest form of insult.

Yesterday evening Mrs Arundel insisted on my going to the window, and looking at the glorious sky, as she called it. Of course I had to look at it. She is one of those absurdly pretty Philistines to whom one can deny nothing. And what was it? It was simply a very second- rate Turner, a Turner of a bad period, with all the painter's worst faults exaggerated and over- emphasized.

The more abstract, the more ideal an art is, the more it reveals to us the temper of its age. If we wish to understand a nation by means of its art, let us look at its architecture or its music.

The fact is that we look back on the ages entirely through the medium of art, and art, very fortunately, has never once told us the truth.

To become a work of art is the object of living.

The English are always degrading truths into facts. When a truth becomes a fact it loses all its intellectual value.

There is a great deal to be said in favour of reading a novel backwards. The last page is as a rule the most interesting, and when one begins with the catastrophe or the dénouement one feels on pleasant terms of equality with the author. It is like going behind the scenes of a theatre. One is no longer taken in, and the hair-breadth escapes of the hero and the wild agonies of the heroine leave one absolutely unmoved. One knows the jealously guarded secret, and one can afford to smile at the quite unnecessary anxiety that the puppets of fiction always consider it their duty to display.

All charming people, I fancy, are spoiled. It is the secret of their attraction.

It is always a silly thing to give advice, but to give good advice is absolutely fatal. I hope you will never fall into that error. If you do, you will be sorry for it.

You forget that a thing is not necessarily true because a man dies for it.

Art, even the art of fullest scope and widest vision, can never really show us the external world. All that it shows us is our own soul, the one world of which we have any real cognizance . . . It is Art, and Art only, that reveals us to ourselves.

A critic should be taught to criticize a work of art without making any reference to the personality of the author. This, in fact, is the beginning of criticism.

Every great man nowadays has his disciples, and it is always Judas who writes the biography.

Learned conversation is either the affectation of the ignorant or the profession of the mentally unemployed.

Education is an admirable thing. But it is well to remember from time to time that nothing that is worth knowing can be taught.

Anybody can write a three- volume novel. It merely requires a complete ignorance of both life and literature.

Anybody can make history. Only a great man can write it.

It is sometimes said that the tragedy of an artist's life is that he cannot realize his ideal. But the true tragedy that dogs the steps of most artists is that they realize their ideal too absolutely. For, when the ideal is realized, it is robbed of its wonder and its mystery, and becomes simply a new starting- point for an ideal that is other than itself. This is the reason why music is the perfect type of art.

Conversation should touch everything, but should concentrate itself on nothing.

. . . life is terribly deficient in form. Its catastrophes happen in the wrong way and to the wrong people. There is a grotesque horror about its comedies, and its tragedies seem to culminate in farce. One is always wounded when one approaches it. Things last either too long or not long enough.

. . . all the arts are immoral, except those baser forms of sensual or didactic art that seek to excite to action of evil or of good. For action of every kind belongs to the sphere of ethics. The aim of art is simply to create a mood.

There is no country in the world so much in need of unpractical people as this country of ours. With us, Thought is degraded by its constant association with practice . . . We live in the age of the overworked, and the under- educated; the age in which people are so industrious that they become absolutely stupid.

The sure way of knowing nothing about life is to try to make oneself useful.

It is so easy for people to have sympathy with suffering. It is so difficult for them to have sympathy with thought.

An idea that is not dangerous is unworthy of being called an idea at all.

Man is least himself when he talks in his own person. Give him a mask, and he will tell you the truth.

For what is Truth? In matters of religion, it is simply the opinion that has survived. In matters of science, it is the ultimate sensation. In matters of art, it is one's last mood.

There are two ways of disliking art . . . One is to dislike it. The other, to like it rationally.

A little sincerity is a dangerous thing, and a great deal of it is absolutely fatal.

Those who find ugly meanings in beautiful things are corrupt without being charming. This is a fault.

Those who find beautiful meanings in beautiful things are the cultivated. For these there is hope.

There is no such thing as a moral or an immoral book. Books are well written, or badly written. That is all.

Vice and virtue are to the artist materials for an art.

All art is at once surface and symbol.

Those who go beneath the surface do so at their peril.

Those who read the symbol do so at their peril.

It is the spectator, and not life, that art really mirrors.

When critics disagree the artist is in accord with himself.

We can forgive a man for making a useful thing as long as he does not admire it. The only excuse for making a useless thing is that one admires it intensely.

Experience was of no ethical value. It was merely the name men gave to their mistakes.

There is always something ridiculous about the emotions of people whom one has ceased to love.

There is a luxury in self-reproach. When we blame ourselves we feel that no one else has a right to blame us. It is the confession, not the priest, that gives us absolution.

Is insincerity such a terrible thing? I think not. It is merely a method by which we can multiply our personalities.

With the abolition of private property, then, we shall have true, beautiful, healthy Individualism. Nobody will waste his life in accumulating things, and the symbols for things. One will live. To live is the rarest thing in the world. Most people exist, that is all.

There is only one class in the community that thinks more about money than the rich, and that is the poor. The poor can think of nothing else. That is the misery of being poor.

High hopes were once formed of democracy; but democracy means simply the bludgeoning of the people by the people for the people.

The fact is, that civilization requires slaves. The Greeks were quite right there. Unless there are slaves to do the ugly, horrible, uninteresting work, culture and contemplation become almost impossible. Human slavery is wrong, insecure and demoralizing. On mechanical slavery, on the slavery of the machine, the future of the world depends.

A work of art is the unique result of a unique temperament . . . the moment that an artist takes notice of what other people want, and tries to supply the demand, he ceases to be an artist, and becomes a dull or an amusing craftsman, an honest or a dishonest tradesman.

Now Art should never try to be popular. The public should try to make itself artistic.

In England, the arts that have escaped best are the arts in which the public take no interest. Poetry is an instance of what I mean. We have been able to have fine poetry in England because the public do not read it, and consequently do not influence it.

In the old days men had the rack. Now they have the Press.

In England, Journalism, except in a few wellknown instances, not having been carried to such excesses of brutality, is still a great factor, a really remarkable power. The tyranny that it proposes to exercise over people's private lives seems to me to be quite extraordinary. The fact is that the public have an insatiable curiosity to know everything, except what is worth knowing.

Journalism, conscious of this, and having tradesman- like habits, supplies their demands. In centuries before ours the public nailed the ears of journalists to the pump. That was quite hideous. In this century journalists have nailed their own ears to the keyhole. That is much worse.

Anybody can sympathize with the sufferings of a friend, but it requires a very fine nature – it requires, in fact, that nature of a true Individualist – to sympathize with a friend's success.

Work is the curse of the drinking classes of this country.

Public opinion exists only where there are no ideas.

A subject that is beautiful in itself gives no suggestion to the artist. It lacks imperfection.

Art is the only serious thing in the world. And the artist is the only person who is never serious.

The only thing that can console one for being poor is extravagance. The only thing that can console one for being rich is economy.

One should never listen. To listen is a sign of indifference to one's hearers.

The first duty in life is to be as artificial as possible. What the second duty is no one has as yet discovered.

Wickedness is a myth invented by good people to account for the curious attractiveness of others.

Those who see any difference between soul and body have neither.

A really well- made buttonhole is the only link between Art and Nature.

Religions die when they are proved to be true. Science is the record of dead religions.

The well- bred contradict other people. The wise contradict themselves.

Nothing that actually occurs is of the smallest importance.

Dullness is the coming of age of seriousness.

In all unimportant matters, style, not sincerity, is the essential.
In all important matters, style, not sincerity, is the essential.

If one tells the truth, one is sure, sooner or later, to be found out.

Pleasure is the only thing one should live for. Nothing ages like happiness.

No crime is vulgar, but all vulgarity is crime. Vulgarity is the conduct of others.

Only the shallow know themselves.

Time is waste of money.

One should always be a little improbable.

There is a fatality about all good resolutions. They are invariably made too soon.

The only way to atone for being occasionally a little overdressed is by being always absolutely overeducated.

Any preoccupation with ideas of what is right or wrong in conduct shows an arrested intellectual development.

Ambition is the last refuge of the failure.

One should either be a work of art, or wear a work of art.

It is only the superficial qualities that last. Man's deeper nature is soon found out.

Industry is the root of all ugliness.

The ages live in history through their anachronisms.

The old believe everything: the middle-aged suspect everything: the young know everything.

The condition of perfection is idleness: the aim of perfection is youth.

Only the great masters of style ever succeed in being obscure.

To love oneself is the beginning of a life-long romance.

Oh, it is indeed a burning shame that there would be one law for men and another law for women. I think that there should be no law for anybody.

After the first glass, you see things as you wish they were. After the second, you see things as they are not. Finally you see things as they really are, and that is the most horrible thing in the world. (On absinthe)

My existence is a scandal.

It often happens that the real tragedies of life occur in such an inarticulate manner that they hurt one by their crude violence, their absolute incoherence, their absurd want of meaning, their entire lack of style.

Ultimately the bond of all companionship, whether in marriage or in friendship, is conversation . . .

Sins of the flesh are nothing. They are maladies for physicians to cure, if they should be cured. Sins of the soul alone are shameful.

The aim of love is to love: no more, and no less.

To regret one's own experiences is to arrest one's own development. To deny one's own experiences is to put a lie into the lips of one's own life. It is no less than a denial of the soul.

What the artist is always looking for is the mode of existence in which soul and body are one and indivisible: in which the outward is expressive of the inward: in which form reveals.

Now it seems to me that love of some kind is the only possible explanation of the extraordinary amount of suffering that there is in the world.

Most people are other people. Their thoughts are someone else's opinions, their lives a mimicry, their passions a quotation.

Every single work of art is the fulfilment of a prophecy: for every work of art is the conversion of an idea into an image.

. . . all great ideas are dangerous.

Art only begins where Imitation ends . . .

All bad art is the result of good intentions.

By nature and by choice, I am extremely indolent.

I never put off till tomorrow what I can possibly do – the day after.

I am one of those who are made for exceptions, not for laws.

Praise makes me humble, but when I am abused I know I have touched the stars.

Where will it all end? Half the world does not believe in God, and the other half does not believe in me.

If I were all alone, marooned on some desert island and had my things with me, I should dress for dinner every evening.

I have the simplest tastes. I am always satisfied with the best.

A patriot put in prison for loving his country loves his country, and a poet in prison for loving boys loves boys. To have altered my life would have been to have admitted that Uranian love is ignoble. I hold it to be noble, more noble than other forms.

I entered prison with a heart of stone, thinking only of my pleasure, but now my heart has been broken; pity has entered my heart; I now understand that pity is the greatest and the most beautiful thing that there is in the world. And that's why I can't be angry with those who condemned me, nor with anyone, because then I would not have known all that.

I am not a scrap ashamed of having been in prison. I am horribly ashamed of the materialism of the life that brought me there. It was quite unworthy of an artist.

I love acting. It is so much more real than life.

As soon as people are old enough to know better, they don't know anything at all.

The tragedy of old age is not that one is old, but that one is young.

To get back my youth I would do anything in the world, except take exercise, get up early, or be respectable.

One can always be kind to people about whom one cares nothing.

Self-sacrifice is a thing that should be put down by law. It is so demoralizing to the people for whom one sacrifices oneself.

English people are far more interested in American barbarism than they are in American civilization.

Every right article of apparel belongs equally to both sexes, and there is absolutely no such thing as a definitely feminine garment.

It is really only the idle classes who dress badly. Wherever physical labour of any kind is required, the costume used is, as a rule, absolutely right, for labour necessitates freedom, and without freedom there is no such thing as beauty in dress at all.

With an evening coat and a white tie, anybody, even a stock-broker, can gain a reputation for being civilized.

It is only shallow people who do not judge by appearances.

Being natural is simply a pose, and the most irritating pose I know.

Perhaps one never seems so much at one's ease as when one has to play a part.

I think a man should invent his own myth.

All art is quite useless.

No great artist ever sees things as they really are. If he did, he would cease to be an artist.

The desire for beauty is merely a heightened form of the desire for life.

Extravagance is the luxury of the poor, penury the luxury of the rich.

We are often told that the poor are grateful for charity. Some of them are, no doubt, but the best amongst the poor are never grateful. They are ungrateful, discontented, disobedient, and rebellious. They are quite right to be so.

To recommend thrift to the poor is both grotesque and insulting. It is like advising a man who is starving to eat less.

Why should they [the poor] be grateful for the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table? They should be seated at the board, and are beginning to know it.

The real tragedy of the poor is that they can afford nothing but self-denial. Beautiful sins, like beautiful things, are the privilege of the rich.

A grande passion is the privilege of people who have nothing to do. That is the one use of the idle classes of a country.

The inherited stupidity of the race – sound English common sense.

Anybody can have common sense, provided that they have no imagination.

I love superstitions. They are the colour element of thought and imagination. They are the opponents of common sense.

Nowadays most people die of a sort of creeping common sense, and discover, when it is too late, that the only thing one never regrets are one's mistakes.

Selfishness is not living as one wishes to live, it is asking others to live as one wishes to live.

Conversation is one of the loveliest of the arts.

Recreation, not instruction, is the aim of conversation.

The maxim 'If you find the company dull, blame yourself' seems to us somewhat optimistic.

In the case of meeting a genius and a duke at dinner, the good talker will try to raise himself to the level of the former and to bring the latter down to his own level. To succeed among one's social superiors one must have no hesitation in contradicting them.

A man who can dominate a London dinner table can dominate the world.

I adore them [London dinner parties]. The clever people never listen, and the stupid people never talk.

It is only the intellectually lost who ever argue.

To believe is very dull. To doubt is intensely engrossing. To be on the alert is to live, to be lulled into security is to die.

I never approve, or disapprove, of anything now. It is an absurd attitude to take towards life. We are not sent into the world to air our moral prejudices.

The things one feels absolutely certain about are never true. That is the fatality of Faith, and the lesson of Romance.

No man dies for what he knows to be true. Men die for what they want to be true, for what some terror in their hearts tells them is not true.

Murder is always a mistake. One should never do anything that one cannot talk about after dinner.

Starvation, and not sin, is the parent of modern crime.

A community is infinitely more brutalized by the habitual employment of punishment, than it is by the occasional occurrence of crime.

Prison life makes one see people and things as they really are. That is why it turns one to stone. It is the people outside who are deceived by the illusion of a life in constant motion.

To those who are in prison, tears are a part of every day's experience. A day in prison on which one does not weep is a day on which one's heart is hard, not a day on which one's heart is happy.

The most terrible thing about it [imprisonment] is not that it breaks one's heart – hearts are made to be broken – but that it turns one's heart to stone.

It is exactly because a man cannot do a thing that he is the proper judge of it.

The one advantage of playing with fire . . . is that one never even gets singed. It is the people who don't know how to play with it who get burned up.

What is a cynic? A man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing.

The sentimentalist is always a cynic at heart. Indeed sentimentality is merely the bank holiday of cynicism.

A sentimentalist is simply a man who desires to have the luxury of an emotion without paying for it.

He is a typical Englishman, always dull and usually violent.

Like all people who try to exhaust a subject, he exhausted his listeners.

She behaves as if she was beautiful. Most American women do. It is the secret of their charm.

She tried to look picturesque, but only succeeded in being untidy.

[She] talks more and says less than anybody I ever met. She is made to be a public speaker.

A dowdy dull girl, with one of those characteristic British faces, that, once seen, are never remembered.

Discontent is the first step in the progress of a man or a nation.

Disobedience, in the eyes of anyone who has read history, is man's original virtue. It is through disobedience that progress has been made, through disobedience and through rebellion.

In art, as in politics, there is but one origin for all revolutions, a desire on the part of man for a nobler form of life, for a freer method and opportunity of expression.

It is the first duty of a gentleman to dream.

A dreamer is one who can only find his way by moonlight, and his punishment is that he sees the dawn before the rest of the world.

Society often forgives the criminal; it never forgives the dreamer.

The one person who has more illusions than the dreamer is the man of action.

My duty to myself is to amuse myself terrifically.

People never think of cultivating a young girl's imagination. It is the great defect of modern education.

We teach people how to remember, we never teach them how to grow.

In the summer term Oxford teaches the exquisite art of idleness, one of the most important things that any University can teach.

The secret of life is never to have an emotion that is unbecoming.

It is only shallow people who require years to get rid of an emotion. A man who is master of himself can end a sorrow as easily as he can invent a pleasure.

Beer, the Bible, and the seven deadly virtues have made our England what she is.

The English public always feels perfectly at its ease when a mediocrity is talking to it.

A family is a terrible encumbrance, especially when one is not married.

Fashion is merely a form of ugliness so unbearable that we are compelled to alter it every six months.

An acquaintance that begins with a compliment is sure to develop into a real friendship. It starts in the right manner.

Laughter is not at all a bad beginning for a friendship, and it is far the best ending for one.

I always like to know everything about my new friends, and nothing about my old ones.

Formal courtesies will strain a close friendship.

Children begin by loving their parents. After a time they judge them. Rarely, if ever, do they forgive them.

This grey, monstrous London of ours, with its myriads of people, its sordid sinners, and its splendid sins.

I don't like Switzerland: it has produced nothing but theologians and waiters.

There is this to be said in favour of the despot, that he, being an individual, may have culture, while the mob, being a monster, has none.

History never repeats itself. The historians repeat each other.

The one duty we owe to history is to re- write it.

The reason we all like to think so well of others is that we are all afraid for ourselves. The basis of optimism is sheer terror.

Laughter is the primeval attitude towards life – a mode of approach that survives only in artists and criminals.

To do nothing at all is the most difficult thing in the world, the most difficult and the most intellectual.

The aim of life is self- development. To realize one's nature perfectly – that is what each of us is here for.

One can live for years sometimes without living at all, and then all life comes crowding into one single hour.

We can have in life but one great experience at best, and the secret of life is to reproduce that experience as often as possible.

Don't tell me that you have exhausted life. When a man says that one knows that life has exhausted him.

To become the spectator of one's own life is to escape the suffering of life.

Life cheats us with shadows. We ask it for pleasure. It gives it to us, with bitterness and disappointment in its train.

Literature always anticipates life. It does not copy it, but moulds it to its purpose. The nineteenth century, as we know it, is largely an invention of Balzac.

I hate vulgar realism in literature. The man who could call a spade a spade should be compelled to use one.

Are there not books that can make us live more in one single hour than life can make us live in a score of shameful years?

To introduce real people into a novel or a play is a sign of an unimaginative mind, a coarse, untutored observation, and an entire absence of style.

The books that the world calls immoral books are books that show the world its own shame.

No one survives being over-estimated, nor is there any surer way of destroying an author's reputation than to glorify him without judgement and to praise him without tact.

All love is a tragedy.

Misunderstanding . . . is the basis of love.

Those who are faithful know only the trivial side of love: it is the faithless who know love's tragedies.

Faithfulness is to the emotional life what consistency is to the life of the intellect – simply a confession of failure.

Lust . . . makes one love all that one loathes.

It is difficult not to be unjust to what one loves.

One should always be in love. That is the reason one should never marry.

The proper basis for marriage is a mutual misunderstanding.

Married life is merely a habit, a bad habit.

How marriage ruins a man! It's as demoralizing as cigarettes, and far more expensive.

The happiness of a married man . . . depends on the people he has not married.

The one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties.

The world has grown so suspicious of anything that looks like a happy married life.

It's most dangerous nowadays for a husband to pay attention to his wife in public. It always makes people think he beats her when they are alone.

Nowadays everybody is jealous of everyone else, except, of course, husband and wife.

Twenty years of romance make a woman look like a ruin; but twenty years of marriage make her something like a public building.

Girls never marry the men they flirt with. Girls don't think it right.

Men marry because they are tired; women because they are curious. Both are disappointed.

Men know life too early . . . Women know life too late. That is the difference between men and women.

The only way a woman can ever reform a man is by boring him so completely that he loses all possible interest in life.

When a man has once loved a woman, he will do anything for her, except continue to love her.

A man can be happy with any woman, as long as he does not love her.

Men always want to be a woman's first love. That is their clumsy vanity . . . Women have a more subtle instinct about things. What [they] like is to be a man's last romance.

There is only one real tragedy in a woman's life. The fact that the past is always her lover, and her future invariably her husband.

Between men and women there is no friendship possible. There is passion, enmity, worship, love, but no friendship.

Women have a wonderful instinct about things. They can discover everything except the obvious.

One should never trust a woman who tells one her real age. A woman who would tell one that, would tell one anything.

It is only very ugly or very beautiful women who ever hide their faces.

If a woman wants to hold a man she has merely to appeal to what is worst in him.

I never travel without my diary. One should always have something sensational to read in the train.

There are many things that we would throw away if we were not afraid that others might pick them up.

Why is it that one runs to one's ruin? Why has destruction such a fascination?

One needs misfortunes to live happily.

To live in happiness, you must know some unhappiness in life.

The happy people of the world have their value, but only the negative value of foils. They throw up and emphasize the beauty and the fascination of the unhappy.

What fire does not destroy, it hardens.

Suffering and the community of suffering makes people kind.

While to propose to be a better man is a piece of unscientific cant, to have become a deeper man is the privilege of those who have suffered.

There is no truth comparable to Sorrow. There are times when Sorrow seems to me to be the only truth.

All excess, as well as all renunciation, brings its own punishment.

Nothing succeeds like excess.

Pure modernity of form is always somewhat vulgarizing.

Nothing is so dangerous as being too modern; one is apt to grow old-fashioned quite suddenly.

The value of the telephone is the value of what two people have to say.

Only one thing remains infinitely fascinating to me, the mystery of moods. To be master of these moods is exquisite, to be mastered by them more exquisite still.

You people who go in for being consistent have just as many moods as others have. The only difference is that your moods are rather meaningless.

There must be no mood with which one cannot sympathize, no dead mode of life that one cannot make alive.

Morality is simply the attitude we adopt towards people whom we personally dislike.

There is no such thing as morality, for there is no general rule of spiritual health; it is all personal, individual.

Modern morality consists in accepting the standard of one's age. I consider that for any man of culture to accept the standard of his age is a form of the grossest immorality.

Manners are of more importance than morals.

The moral is too obvious.

I never came across anyone in whom the moral sense was dominant who was not heartless, cruel, vindictive, log-stupid, and entirely lacking in the smallest sense of humanity. Moral people, as they are termed, are simple beasts.

Music is the art . . . which most completely realizes the artistic idea, and is the condition to which all the other arts are constantly aspiring.

Music . . . creates for one a past of which one has been ignorant, and fills one with a sense of sorrows that have been hidden from one's tears.

If one plays good music, people don't listen, and if one plays bad music, people don't talk.

I like Wagner's music better than anybody's. It is so loud that one can talk the whole time without people hearing what one says.

Musical people are so absurdly unreasonable. They always want one to be perfectly dumb at the very moment when one is longing to be absolutely deaf.

The things of nature do not really belong to us; we should leave them to our children as we have received them.

In nature there is, for me at any rate, healing power.

We all look at Nature too much, and live with her too little.

If Nature had been comfortable, mankind would never have invented architecture.

Nature, which makes nothing durable, always repeats itself so that nothing which it makes may be lost.

Nature is always behind the age.

Whenever we have returned to Life and Nature, our work has always become vulgar, common, and uninteresting.

There are only two kinds of people who are really fascinating – people who know absolutely everything, and people who know absolutely nothing.

Of course I plagiarize. It is the privilege of the appreciative man.

It is only the unimaginative who ever invent. The true artist is known by the use he makes of what he annexes, and he annexes everything.

Every word in a play has a musical as well as an intellectual value, and must be made expressive of a certain emotion.

I never write plays for anyone. I write plays to amuse myself. After, if people want to act in them, I sometimes allow them to do so.

There are two ways of disliking my plays. One is to dislike them, the other is to like Earnest.

Pleasure is Nature's test, her sign of approval. When man is happy he is in harmony with himself and his environment.

No civilized man ever regrets a pleasure, and no uncivilized man ever knows what a pleasure is.

I adore simple pleasures. They are the last refuge of the complex.

A cigarette is the perfect type of a perfect pleasure. It is exquisite, and it leaves one unsatisfied. What more can one want?

I don't regret for a single moment having lived for pleasure. I did it to the full, as one should do everything that one does to the full. There was no pleasure I did not experience.

I like persons better than principles, and I like persons with no principles better than anything else in the world.

I don't like principles . . . I prefer prejudices.

It is personalities, not principles, that move the age.

I wonder who it was defined man as a rational animal. It was the most premature definition ever given. Man is many things, but he is not rational.

One is tempted to define man as a rational animal who always loses his temper when he is called upon to act in accordance with the dictates of reason.

It would be unfair to expect other people to be as remarkable as oneself.

雄鸡报晓

献给勒内·比约特

此前，贝尔特·德·阿旺塞勒夫人始终拒绝狂追她的约瑟夫·德·克罗瓦萨尔男爵的苦苦恳求。整个冬季在巴黎，男爵就紧追不舍，现在回到他在诺曼底的卡维尔城堡，又频频为她举办宴请聚会和出游打猎活动。

她丈夫德·阿旺塞勒先生还一如既往，对此一无所见，也一无所知。据说，他因身体衰弱，已同妻子分居。这在他夫人看来，是不可饶恕的。这个男人是个矮胖子，秃了顶，胳膊腿短，脖颈鼻子也短，全身无不奇短。

德·阿旺塞勒夫人则相反，是位高挑身材、棕发的少妇，她行事果断，冲她的先生咯咯大笑，声音洪亮，还当众称他“管家婆”。而她投向公开的追求者——约瑟夫·德·克罗瓦萨尔的目光，却含情脉脉，欣赏他那宽阔的肩膀、硕壮的颈项和长长金黄的胡须。

不过，她还什么都没有应承。男爵不惜为她倾家荡产，接二连三，不断组织晚会、打猎、各种新式娱乐活动，邀请周围一带城堡的贵族。

整个白天，大群猎犬在树林中飞奔，狂吠着追逐狐狸和野猪。而每天夜晚，烟火令人眼花缭乱，腾空的羽饰花焰，与星光交相辉映。客厅窗户灯火通明，一条条光带投向宽阔的草坪，只见人影幢幢。

入秋时节，万物一片橙黄色。落叶宛如一群群鸟雀，在草地上飞旋。空气中弥漫着卸下衣装的土地潮湿的气味，就像舞会散场之后，一位女子脱掉长裙，露出肌肤的气味。

就在今年春天，一次晚会上，德·阿旺塞勒夫人耐不住纠缠的恳求，这样答复德·克罗瓦萨尔先生：“如果我难免失足，我的朋友，在落叶之前绝不会发生。今年夏天我没有时间，要做的事情太多了。”这种大胆的笑谈，男爵念念不忘，因而他越发坚持，日甚一日，步步进逼，认为他在这位敢作敢为的美人心中已经立足，她那推却的态度，不过是装装样子而已了。

一场大型狩猎活动举办在即。前一天晚上，贝尔特夫人笑吟吟地对男爵说道：“男爵，如果您能猎杀野兽，我给您准备了点儿东西。”

天刚拂晓，他就起身，前去侦察那头独行的野猪藏身的巢穴。他让饲养猎犬的仆人们跟随，一路亲自组织部署，确保一举成功。当出发的号角一齐吹响时，他已身穿红色带金饰的紧身猎装出现了，只见他腰身束紧，虎背宽肩，目光炯炯有神，斗志昂扬，那劲头就好像刚刚起床。

猎手们出发了。那头野猪被驱逐出来，惊慌逃窜，随后紧追着吼叫的猎犬，穿过一片片荆丛；马匹也都奔跑起来，驮着男女骑手，冲进林间小径，而随行车辆驶在松软的土路上，不声不响，远远跟着打猎的队伍。

德·阿旺塞勒夫人很狡黠，留住男爵陪伴身边，在大路上缓缓前行。笔直的大道长不见尽头，排成四列橡树，枝叶树冠交织成长长的穹顶。男爵的内心，也交织着爱恋和不安，浑身不免发颤，他一只耳朵聆听少妇嘲弄般的饶舌，另一只则追踪渐行渐远的号角之声，以及猎犬的吠鸣。

“怎么，您不爱我了吗？”少妇问道。

“何出此言，怎么会呢？”男爵回应。

“然而，您的心思，似乎更顾虑打猎，而不是放在我身上。”少妇接着说道。

“还不是您命令我，亲手猎杀那只野兽吗？”男爵哀叹道。

“不错，这事我很看重，您必须当着我的面，将其猎杀。”她又正色补充了一句。

闻听此言，男爵坐在鞍上，不由得浑身一抖，他双脚一磕。他的坐骑被马刺刺痛，蹿跳起来，他也失去了耐性：

“真见鬼！夫人，我们就待在这里，这事怎么办得到！”

少妇咯咯笑起来，抛给他一句：

“真的，这可必须办到……否则的话……倒霉的是您。”

随后，她对男爵说话就柔声细语了，手搭到他的胳膊上，或者，仿佛心不在焉似的，抚弄他那匹马的鬃毛。

继而，他们就拐进右侧一条杂草丛生的小路。忽然，为了躲避一根拦路的树枝，她身子朝他一斜，靠得极近，他的脖颈都感到了她那秀发的拂痒。于是，他猛地抱住她，大胡子贴到她额角，狂热地亲吻她。

在这种冲动的爱抚下，她起初一动也不动，随后，她晃了晃，头扭了一下，似偶然又似有意，她这娇小的嘴唇，遇到他那瀑布般金黄

胡须下的嘴唇。这时，或因羞愧，或因后悔，她一鞭抽向马腹，马奔跑起来。他们就这样跑了许久，彼此甚至没有交换一下目光。

越跑越靠近狩猎的嘈杂声，短树林仿佛也随之颤动，突然，一头野猪闯开枝条，浑身是血冲出来，挣脱咬住不放的猎犬。男爵一见，登时发出胜利的欢声，嚷道：“爱我者，随我上！”说罢，他就冲进矮树林不见了，仿佛被树林吞没了。贝尔特夫人几分钟之后，赶到林间一片空地，这时男爵已经站起来，满身是泥，上装也撕破了，双手沾满了鲜血，而那头野猪则躺倒在地，肩头深深插进一把猎刀，只露出刀柄。

点起火把，享用猎物，夜色温和而又忧伤。月光映黄了火把的火焰，而燃烧树脂的烟雾又笼罩了夜空。猎犬吼叫，相互撕咬，争食野猪发臭的内脏。饲养猎犬的仆人和打猎的贵绅们，则围在野味四周，用足气力吹着号角。阵阵号角声传至树林清朗的夜空，在远处山谷中回荡，惊醒了惴惴不安的鹿群，惊得狐狸吱吱尖叫，也惊扰了在林间空地边缘嬉戏的一群小灰兔。惊飞的一群夜鸟，在狂欢的人群上空惶惶乱飞。这种场面，又甜美又凶残，女士们不由得动情，微微靠着男人的手臂，已经离群踏上小径，不待猎犬用完美餐。

这一整天，又疲倦又多情，德·阿旺塞勒夫人无精打采，对男爵说道：

“我的朋友，您愿意在院子里走一走吗？”

男爵却不应声，他浑身颤抖，双腿发软，拉走了夫人。

二人一避开人群，便拥抱在一起。他们缓步走在叶子几乎落光的树木下面，月光透着枝丫照射下来。此情此景，他们的爱恋，他们的欲望，他们对彼此的渴望，已经变得极其强烈，几乎支撑不住，就地倒在一棵树脚下了。

号角声断了，猎犬都疲惫不堪，回窝睡觉去了。

“咱们回去吧。”少妇说道。于是他们往回走。

他们走到城堡主楼前时，她的声音微弱，喃喃说道：“我累了，要去睡觉了，我的朋友。”男爵张开双臂，正要抱住她最后吻一下，她却跑开了，仿佛告别似的丢给他一句：“不，我去睡了……爱我者，跟我来！”

一小时过后，整个城堡一片死寂，男爵蹑手蹑脚，走出卧室，走到他女友的卧室，轻轻叩门，由于她没有应声，他就实施推门：没有插上门闩。

她正俯在窗台上遐想。男爵跪倒她脚下，隔着睡袍，狂热地亲吻

她的双膝，她一句话不讲，只是将她纤细的手指，爱抚一般插进男爵的头发里。她仿佛做出了重大决定，猛然脱身，一副果敢的神情，低声喃喃说了一句：“我这就回来，您等着我。”说着，她指向黑暗中，卧室里端床铺隐约白色的影子。

男爵心醉神迷，摸索着走过去，双手颤抖着脱掉衣服，钻进了新铺的床单被罩中。他躺在床上舒服极了，几乎忘记了女友，整个身子乏得不想动弹，沉浸在无比舒坦的被窝的惬意中。少妇根本就没有回来，无疑是乐得让他热切地等待。男爵闭上眼睛安享着美妙的舒适，温柔地畅想，甜美地等待梦寐以求的事情。不过，他的肢体逐渐懈怠，头脑逐渐昏沉，神思飘忽不定。他最终被强大的疲倦击垮了，沉沉睡过去了。

精疲力竭的猎手的困倦无法抵制，他睡得死死的，一直睡到拂晓。突然，栖息在附近树上的一只公鸡报晓，从半开的窗户传入响亮的鸡鸣，男爵猛地惊醒，睁开了眼睛。他感到挨着一个女人的身体，发现自己睡在他认不出来的床上，不免十分惊诧，什么也想不起来了，他刚醒就慌了神儿，讷讷问道：“怎么？我在哪儿？怎么回事儿？”

且说她通宵未眠，此刻看着这个头发蓬乱、眼睛发红、厚嘴唇的男人，她拿出对丈夫说话的那种高傲的声调，回答说：“没事儿。是一只公鸡打鸣。您接着睡吧，先生，没您的事儿。”

蛇蝎美人

蟋蟀饭店是游艇手的法伦斯泰尔^[1]，顾客慢慢散去，而门前却闹哄哄的，叫嚷和呼唤声响成一片。身穿白色运动衫的高大的小伙子，肩上扛着桨，在那里指手画脚。女人则身着浅颜色的春装，她们小心翼翼地跨上游艇，坐到船尾，整理一下衣裙。游艇场老板，一个有名的大力士、蓄留棕红胡子的壮小伙子，一边用手搀扶那些漂亮的小娘们儿，一边稳住轻飘飘的小船。

桨手们也各就各位，他们光着胳膊，挺起胸脯，给长廊里围观的人摆出架势。围观的人有节日打扮的市民、工人和士兵，他们俯在桥栏杆上，聚精会神地观赏这种场景。游艇一只接着一只离开浮桥。那些划船手身子前伏，再往后仰，动作十分均匀。在打了弯的长桨的推动下，小船在河面上迅速滑行，越驶越远，越来越小，在一座铁路桥下消失不见，顺流而下驶向青蛙滩。

只有一对伴侣留了下来。男青年还未长出胡须，身材瘦溜，脸色苍白，他搂着女伴的腰肢。女孩娇小细弱，一头棕发，走路蹦蹦跳跳。二人不时相对凝注。

老板喊道：“来呀，保罗先生，你们快点儿。”

二人应声走过去。这船场的所有顾客中，保罗先生最受喜爱，最受尊敬。他出手大方，又按期结账，而其他顾客要让人揪着耳朵催好久，还可能付不出钱就再不露面了。再说，他成了这个船场的活广告，因为他父亲是参议员。如果有个外地人问道：“那个小家伙是谁呀？他把那个小浪货搂得那么紧！”就会有一位常客，郑重而神秘的样子，悄声答道：“他就是保罗·巴隆，您不知道？参议员的儿子呀。”可是，对方总要情不自禁地感叹：“可怜的家伙，他神魂颠倒了。”蟋蟀大妈为人诚实，会做生意，管这个青年及其女伴叫作“我的一对小斑鸠”，似乎非常喜爱对她饭店有利的这一对情侣。

这对情侣缓步走过去。“玛德琳号”游艇已经准备好，可是上了船，他们又搂抱在一起，惹得聚在桥上的人都笑起来。于是，保罗先生操起桨，也朝青蛙滩划去。

划到那里，将近三点钟了，水上大咖啡厅已经坐满了顾客。水上咖啡厅是一座大木排，由木柱撑着涂了柏油的棚盖，有两座小桥通往美丽的克鲁瓦西岛，其中一座直插这个水上建筑物的正中，而另一座则连着仅长一棵树而得了“花盆”绰号的小岛，从那里上岸便是浴场管

理处。

保罗顺着木排把船拴住，攀过咖啡厅的栏杆，再把他情妇拉上来，二人在餐桌一端面对面坐下。

河对岸的纤道上车水马龙，普通出租车同豪华马车相混杂。前一种十分笨重，便便大腹压低了车弓，套的是一匹脖颈下垂、膝头弯曲的劣马；而另一种车轮轻巧，车身挺秀飘逸，套的马四肢修长挺拔，高扬起脖子，嚼口泛着雪似的白沫，车夫则一本正经，穿着号服，高领支着发僵的脑袋，腰板挺得直直的，鞭子放在一个膝头上。

堤岸上游人熙熙攘攘，有全家人或成帮结伙来的，也有成双成对或者孤身前来的。他们揪草茎，下到水里，再登上岸，回到路上，大家都来到同一地点，停下来等候摆渡的船工。小渡船满载游客，送到岛上，在两岸之间不停地来往。

水上咖啡厅所靠的一道河汊，水流极缓，仿佛在沉睡，人称死河汊。各式各样的船只——游船、赛艇、单人艇、快艇、舢板等，在静止的水面上往来如梭，交错混杂，相互碰撞，有时猛一用力让船急停，然后再突然奋臂，让船又冲出去，飞快滑行，活像一条条红色和黄色的大鱼。

从上游夏图和从下游布吉谷，还源源不断地有船划来。河面上笑声此起彼伏，呼叫、谩骂、召唤或争吵声不绝于耳。划船的人将棕色的皮肤、隆起的二头肌曝露在烈日下，坐在船尾的女士则撑开丝阳伞，红绿蓝黄，五彩缤纷，宛如盛开的异域鲜花，在水上漂流。

七月的太阳在中天燃烧，空气中似乎弥漫着灼人的欢乐。没有一丝风，杨柳的枝叶都纹丝不动。对面远远一道屏障，那便是瓦莱里昂山，它陡峭的山坡展现在强烈的阳光下。右侧秀丽的卢浮西安丘峦，则随同河流弯转，形成半圆，在那大片大片园子的苍莽黛绿中，点缀着乡下人家的白墙。

青蛙滩头有不少参天大树，使这岛上一隅成为世上最惬意的公园。大群游人在滩头的树下散步。那些黄头发的妓女，挺着过度丰满的乳房，撅着过分肥大的屁股，脸上搽的脂粉就像抹了一层白灰，嘴唇涂得血红，身上紧紧箍着系了带子的奇特怪异的衣裙，她们从绿油油的草坪上走过，便留下那种庸俗打扮的强烈味道。陪伴她们的年轻男子，一个个也都装腔作势，身穿时髦版画上的那种奇装异服，手戴浅色手套，足蹬油亮的皮鞋，拄着细绳一般的手杖，还戴着单片眼镜，愈加突出他们微笑时的愚昧。

小岛恰巧在青蛙滩这里变得狭窄，另一边也有一只渡船，将从克鲁瓦西来的游人送过来。这条河汊水流湍急，到处是漩涡、回流和浪花泡沫，大有滚滚激流的气势。一支身穿炮兵服的架桥部队驻扎在对

岸，一些士兵并排坐在一根长梁上观看流水。

水上餐厅里人声嘈杂，混乱不堪。木桌上摆满了半空的酒瓶，围着半醉的顾客，桌面上洒的饮料，形成一条条黏糊糊的细流。这里的人都在大嚷大叫，扯着嗓门儿唱歌。男的将帽子推到后脑勺儿，一个个红头涨脸，眼睛闪着醉态，他们这样肆无忌惮，咋呼鼓噪，完全是出于粗鲁的人天生的需要。那些女的，都在捕捉过夜的对象，眼下先让人请喝酒。在餐桌之间的空地上，主要站着这里的常客、好起哄的划船手们以及穿着法兰绒短裙的女伴。

他们当中有一位正在奋力弹钢琴，仿佛手脚并用。有四对人在跳四对方舞。一些漂亮端庄的年轻人在观看，如果不露出无法掩饰的破绽的话，他们还真像文雅之士。

然而破绽太明显了，一到这儿就能嗅出这全是世界渣滓，全是臭名昭著的荒淫之徒、巴黎社会一切霉烂的东西。这个大杂烩里有时新商店的伙计、蹩脚演员、下流记者、财产代管人、小额股票投机商、无耻的酒色之徒、老牌腐朽的浪荡鬼、各色各样形迹可疑的人。五分可知，五分未知，五分受人尊敬，五分声名狼藉，是些扒手、骗子、拉皮条的、冒险家。一个个却是正人君子的模样，虚张声势，那神气似乎在说：“哪个胆敢把我当成坏蛋，我就要他的命。”这里充斥着愚蠢荒唐的东西，散发着风月场的假意殷勤和无耻欺诈。在这里，男的都半斤八两。这里飘浮着廉价爱情的气味，为了一声“对”还是“不对”，就打架斗殴，动剑动枪，要维护坏透了的名声，结果名声会更臭。

附近有些居民好奇，每逢星期天来瞧瞧。每年，也有几个青年，非常年轻，来这里学习生活。还有一些人散步，路过到这里，有几个天真的人就迷不知返了。

这里叫青蛙滩也有道理。就在喝酒的水上餐厅旁边，紧挨着“花盆”的水域，有人在游泳。那些肌肤丰腴足以示人的女人，便来这里展露肉体以招徕顾客。其他女人却不屑一顾，她们身上虽然这里塞了棉花，那里撑起弹簧，这里垫高一点儿，那里改变一下，但是却以鄙夷的神气望着她们嬉水的姊妹。

游泳的人挤在一个小平台上，要头朝下扎猛子。他们的体形，有的长得像竹竿，有的圆得像柠檬，有的扭曲得像橄榄树，有的弓着腰，有的腆着肚子朝后仰，但无一例外，都丑陋不堪，他们跳水时，溅起的水花会洒到旁边喝咖啡的顾客身上。

水上咖啡厅尽管有繁茂的大树遮阴，又挨着水面，可是仍然溽暑熏蒸。洒掉饮料的气味、人体散发的气味，同爱情女贩的浓烈香水味混杂在一起，须知香水已经渗进爱情女贩的皮肤中，待在这个火炉里

便蒸发出来。不过，在这形形色色的气味掩盖下，还飘浮着一种搽面香粉的清香，时隐时现，但总能再次闻到，就好像有一只隐蔽的手在空中摇晃着一个无形的粉扑。

美妙的景观还在河上，往来如梭的游船引人注目。船上的女客半躺在圆椅里，面对着臂膀强健的男伴，带着几分蔑视的神态，望着岛上那些游荡觅食的女人。有时，一只快船飞速划过去，岸上的朋友们便高喊加油。咖啡馆里的全体观众也都突然疯狂起来，开始大吼大叫。在夏图方向的河湾上，不断出现新的游船。船划近了，越来越大，人们也渐渐认出船上人的面孔，于是又发出一阵阵吼叫。

一只篷船载着四个女人，顺水慢慢划过来。划船的女人瘦小枯干，穿着见习水手服，头发绾上去，戴着一顶漆布帽。她对面是个金发胖女人，一副男装打扮，穿着白色法兰绒上衣。她仰卧在船舱里，双腿举起搭在桨手两侧的坐凳上，嘴里叼着香烟，每当双桨用力划一下，她的胸脯和腹部就颤动、摇晃起来。后面船篷下有两个细高挑儿的漂亮姑娘，一位棕发，一位金发，两人相互搂着腰，一直看着她们的同伴。

有人从青蛙滩喊了一声：“来宝斯来啦！”于是，突然爆发一阵狂呼乱叫，大家拼命拥挤。酒杯倒了，有人登上餐桌，所有人都歇斯底里，大吼大叫：“来宝斯！来宝斯！来宝斯！”喧声滚荡，变得混杂不清，汇成一种骇人的喧嚣，继而，仿佛猛然拔地而起，冲上半空，笼罩平野，充塞大树的茂盛枝叶，扩展到远处的丘峦，并直趋高悬的太阳。

在欢呼声中，那位划船的女人从容地停住双桨，而躺在船舱里的那个金发胖姑娘，则用两肘支起身子，漫不经心地转过头去。坐在船尾的那两位美丽姑娘一边向人群致意，一边咯咯笑起来。于是，喧叫之声变本加厉，震动了水上咖啡厅。男人举起帽子，女人挥动手帕，所有人，不管尖嗓门儿还是粗嗓门儿，都齐声高呼：“来宝斯！”这场面，真像一帮堕落的人在向头头儿致敬，如同一位海军司令检阅时，船队鸣礼炮一样。成群结队的游船也向那几位女子欢呼。她们的小艇又慢悠悠地划开，到稍远一点儿的地方靠岸。

保罗先生则不然，他从兜里掏出一个薄片钥匙，用全力吹响。他那神经质的情妇脸色更加苍白，拉他胳膊叫他停下，这回，她瞪着保罗，眼睛冒火了。然而，保罗似乎恼羞成怒，表现出一种男人的嫉妒，一种深沉的、本能的而又混乱的愤怒，他气得嘴唇颤抖，结结巴巴地说：“真不要脸！就该像溺死母狗那样，在她们脖子上吊上石头沉到河里！”

这时，玛德琳突然发火了，她那小尖嗓门儿变得刺耳了，说了一

大套，仿佛是为自已辩解：“你来什么劲，这关你什么事儿？她们不欠任何人的，难道连想干什么就干什么的权利都没有吗？收起你这套吧，别烦别人，管好你自己的事儿吧……”

但是，保罗打断她的话：“这与警察局有关系，哼，我要把她们投进圣拉扎尔监狱！”

玛德琳浑身一抖。

“就你！”

“对，就我！而且，这会儿我也不准你同她们说话，听见了吧，我就是不准。”

于是，她耸了耸肩，立刻平静下来：“我的宝贝，我高兴干什么就干什么，你要是不满意，那就走开，马上走。我不是你老婆，对不对？你还是闭嘴吧。”

保罗没有回嘴，二人对视，嘴角抽搐，呼吸急促。

四个女人从木质结构的大咖啡厅另一侧进来，两个男装打扮的走在前面，一个干瘦，酷似老气横秋的小男孩，鬓颊蜡黄色；另一个肥胖，塞满白色法兰绒外衣，肥臀也撑起肥大的裤子，走路像肥鹅一般摇摆，那两条大腿胖得要命，连膝盖都显得凹进去了。她们的两个女友跟在后面。划船手都纷纷上前同她们握手。

她们四人在岸边租了一间小木屋，像两家人在一起生活。她们的淫荡是人所共知的，也是明目张胆的。大家提起来，就像谈论一件自然而然的事情，抱着几分同情的态度，私下里还讲些有关她们的离奇故事、妒火中烧的女人编造的艳事，说是知名的妇女、女演员都秘密造访河边这间小屋。一位邻居听了这些丑闻十分生气，告诉宪警。一名队长带着一名属员来调查。这任务很棘手，总的说来，这些女人根本不卖淫，并没有什么可指责的。那位队长大惑不解，甚至没怎么弄明白所怀疑的罪过是什么性质，随便询问了一些人，写了一份冗长的报告，得出无罪的结论。这个笑话都传到了圣日耳曼。

她们摆出王后的架势，缓步穿过青蛙滩的咖啡厅，那神气显然为她们的名气感到自豪，为能引人注目而感到高兴。她们傲视这群人，这帮无名鼠辈、乌合之众。玛德琳和她的情人注视她们走过来，而姑娘的眼神燃得明亮。

走在前面的两位到了长桌这一端时，玛德琳喊了一声：“波莉娜！”那个胖子回过头来，站住了，但是仍然挽着那个穿着见习水手服的女伴的胳膊，应声说道：“噢！玛德琳……我的心肝儿，过来跟我说说话。”

保罗扣在他情妇腕子上的手指又用了用力，可是她却说：“要知道，我的宝贝，你可以离开。”那语气十分坚持，保罗便不讲话了，独自留下。

她们三人站在那里，低声交谈，话讲得很快，她们的嘴唇上不时掠过快意的神情。波莉娜有时偷偷看保罗一眼，那微笑则含有讥讽与刻薄。保罗终于忍不住了，他忽地站起来，冲到玛德琳面前，四肢都在颤抖，一把抓住她的肩膀，说道：“过来，我叫你过来呢，说过不准你同这些娼妇交谈！”

可是，波莉娜却提高嗓门儿，使出市井泼妇的全套本领同他吵架。周围的人开始哄笑，都凑到近前，踮起脚，想看个究竟。脏话雨点一般地浇到他头上，保罗呆住了，觉得从那张嘴里吐出的话，就像往他身上泼屎泼尿，因此这闹剧一开场，他就退却了，掉头回去，靠到临河的栏杆上，背向那三个旗开得胜的女人。保罗俯在那里，凝望水面，有时他迅速抹一下，用神经质的手指抹掉在眼角聚成的泪珠，就好像是一把抓走似的。

这是因为他坠入情网，也不知为什么，既违背他敏锐的直觉，也违背他的良知和意愿。他坠入情网，如同人掉进泥坑里。他天生多情敏感，曾梦想过那种美妙的、理想而炽热的恋情，岂料这个瘦小的女人，跟所有妓女一样愚蠢，愚蠢得不可救药，甚至谈不上漂亮，又瘦又爱生气。就是这样一个女人将他抓住，将他俘获，从头到脚，从肉体到灵魂占有了他。他中了女性这种神秘的、威慑无比的魔力，不知道这种陌生的力量、这种神奇的牵制从何而来，是肉体之魔授予的，能让一个最明智的男人，匍匐在一个寻常女郎的脚下，根本无法解释她身上有什么天生的主宰大权。

他感到就在他身后，正策划一种可耻的举动。一阵阵笑声直刺他的心。怎么办？他完全明白，但又办不到。他定睛看着对岸一个垂钓者，守着纹丝不动的鱼线。

突然，那人猛地抬起鱼竿，只见线梢儿从水中拉出一尾摆动的银色小鱼来。接着，他要把鱼钩摘下来，拧来扭去都不成，便不耐烦了，干脆用劲一拉，将小鱼带血的喉头连同一段肠子拉出来了。保罗浑身一抖，心都撕裂了，他觉得那鱼钩就是他的爱情，要想夺走，那么铁钩尖就会把他内心深处的东西，全部从胸膛里拉出来，而拉着钓线的正是玛德琳。

一只手搭到他肩膀上，他吓了一跳，扭头看看，原来是他情妇回到了身边。二人谁也不讲话，玛德琳也像他一样，趴到栏杆上，定睛望着河水。保罗想找话说，却一句也没有想出来。他甚至弄不清心里有什么活动，只感到她回到身边、有她陪伴的快慰，也感到一种蒙

耻的懦弱、一种宽恕一切的愿望，只要她不离开，就什么都答应。

沉默了几分钟之后，他终于口气十分温和地问道：“咱们走吧，好吗？到船上更舒服些。”

玛德琳答道：“好吧，我的小猫。”

于是，保罗搀她登上游艇，紧紧抓着双手扶住她，温情脉脉，眼角还挂着泪花。玛德琳也含笑看着他，于是，二人又拥抱亲吻了。他们沿着岸边，缓缓地溯流而上。岸上绿茵覆盖，柳树成行，静悄悄的，沐浴在午后温暖的阳光里。他们回到蟋蟀饭店的时候，刚敲六点钟。他们舍船登上小岛，沿着岸边高大的杨树，穿过牧场，朝贝松走去。

高高的牧草快要开割了，遍地野花盛开，西斜的太阳在上面铺了一层橙黄色晖光。傍晚暑热稍减，青草飘香，加上河流的潮气，给空气增添一种缠绵的情调、一种淡淡的幸福感，好似令人舒坦的氤氲之气。

心扉透进一股缱绻的柔情，似乎应和黄昏这种宁静的霞光、生命勃发的这种幽微而神秘的震颤，应和这种沁人心脾的忧伤的诗意。仿佛从草木万物生发而蔓延的诗意，在这温馨而沉思的时刻，充盈着他的感官。这一切，他都感受到了，而她却毫不体悟。他们并排走着，她不耐沉默了，忽然唱起歌来。她那假嗓音有点儿刺耳，唱的是街头流行曲，残留在记忆中的一个小调，却蓦地撕破了黄昏幽深静谧的和谐。

于是，他看了她一眼，感到他们之间隔着一道不可逾越的鸿沟。她用阳伞抽打着青草，略微低头瞧着自己的脚，边走边唱，拖长音节，尝试华彩过门，敢于模仿颤音。

她那小小的、狭窄的额头，他爱得多深，居然如此空虚，如此空虚！那里面只装着这种八音盒式的音乐，即使偶尔形成一点儿思想，也类似这种音乐。她根本不理解他，他们之间的距离比不在一起还要大。难道他的吻从来没有超越嘴唇吗？

这时，她抬起眼睛看他，又微微一笑。于是，一股冲动深入骨髓，他张开手臂，以双倍的爱热烈地拥抱她。她见衣裙弄皱了，便挣脱拥抱，用呢喃的一句话给点儿补偿：“好了，我非常爱你，我的小猫。”不过，他又搂住了她的腰，发狂一般拖着她跑起来，一边欢蹦乱跳，一边吻她的脸蛋、鬓角和脖子。他们气喘吁吁，倒在被夕阳照成一片火的灌木丛脚下，二人交欢了，而她却没有领会他那份激情。

他们手拉手走回来，从树木中间，突然望见河上那四个女人的游船。胖波莉娜也瞧见他们俩，她站起来，朝玛德琳送来飞吻，接着喊

道：“今晚见！”

玛德琳答道：“今晚见！”

保罗觉得自己的心一下子浸入冰水里。他们回去用晚餐，二人坐在临水的凉棚下，开始闷头吃饭。天色黑下来，伙计送来一支点燃的蜡烛，玻璃球罩里的微弱烛光摇曳不定。二楼大餐厅里不时传来划船手的阵阵喧哗。快要上甜食的时候，保罗温存地拉起玛德琳的手，对她说道：“我非常疲乏，我的小乖乖，你要是愿意的话，咱们就早点儿睡觉。”

然而，玛德琳明白这种花招，十分暧昧地瞥了他一眼，女人眼睛的深处，往往闪现这种负情的神色。她想了一下，才回答说：“你要睡就去睡吧，我呢，已经答应人家去参加青蛙滩舞会。”

保罗凄然一笑，这是人们用以掩饰极痛深悲的一种微笑，不过，他还是用既温柔又伤感的声调答道：“你要是体贴一点儿，那么咱们俩就会待在一起了。”她摇了摇头，但没有讲出“不”字。保罗仍不死心：“求求你了，我的小鹿。”

可是，她却打断他的话：“你知道我对你说过什么。你要是不满意，门是敞开的，没人强留你。至于我，答应了，就得去。”

保罗双肘撑在桌子上，用手捂住额头，木然不动，沉浸在冥思苦想中。游船客下楼来，仍然大嚷大叫，他们要划船去参加青蛙滩舞会。玛德琳对保罗说：“快点儿决定，你要是不去，还有这些先生，我求一位送我去。”

保罗站起来，咕哝道：“走吧。”于是，他们去了。夜色弥漫，星斗满天，到处流动着灼人的气息、滞重的气浪，负载着溽暑，无形中透着一丝活力。微风受其拖累也缓慢了，似乎变得稠浓而厚重，拂面给人一种热乎乎爱抚的感觉，令人呼吸加快，乃至喘息了。一只只游船启程了，船头都挂一盏花灯。根本看不清船身，只见一盏盏小彩灯疾驰跳动，宛如狂舞的流萤。黑暗中，四面八方都流动着人声笑语。两个年轻人的游艇缓缓滑行。有时，一只快艇从旁边超过去，他们就突然瞧见划船手被灯光照亮的白色背影。他们驶过河湾，就远远望见青蛙滩了。

水上咖啡厅一派节日气氛，挂起了大花灯、小彩灯花束和葡萄灯串。几只平底大船在塞纳河上缓缓游动，五彩斑斓的灯光在空中绘成圆顶、金字塔以及复杂建筑物，形状各异。点亮的花彩一直拖到水面。有时，一盏红灯或蓝灯，高高挑在一根看不见的长竿上，好似一颗摇曳的巨星。

所有这些彩灯，照亮咖啡厅的四周，从上到下照亮岸边的大树，

只见浅灰色的树干和淡绿色的叶丛，被黑洞洞的田野和天空衬得尤为突出。乐队由五名郊区艺人组成，演奏着支离破碎的酒吧粗劣音乐，传得很远，玛德琳和着音乐歌唱。玛德琳要立刻进舞厅。保罗本来想在岛上转一圈，最后不得不让步。参加舞会的人几乎清一色是游船客，还有零星几个市民、几个携妓的青年。这场康康舞的指挥兼组织者，身穿黑色旧礼服，神气活现，满场展示他那颗兜售廉价娱乐的老商人秃头。胖波莉娜及其女伴不在那儿，保罗舒了一口气。

一对对跳舞的人面对面，发狂似的又蹦又吵，腿踢得很高，一直举到舞伴的鼻子上。那些女的大腿都要脱臼了，蹿跳时裙子飘起来，露出了内裤。她们的脚不费劲就举过头顶，令人惊叹。她们还摇晃肚子，摆动屁股，抖动乳房，向周围散发出汗馊的强烈气味。那些男的则蹲下来，学蛤蟆的样子，做出猥亵的姿势，身子弯来扭去，挤眉弄眼，丑态百出，还用手撑地倒翻跟头，或者忸怩作态，竭力装扮怪相。一名胖女招待和两名男招待送着饮料食物。

这个水上咖啡厅仅有棚盖，四面并无墙板同外面相隔，他们就在安谧的黑夜，在繁星满天的苍穹下疯狂地舞蹈。忽然间，对面瓦莱里昂山那边亮起来，仿佛山后发生了火灾。那片亮光越扩越大，越来越明亮，逐渐侵袭上空，勾画出一个光圈，先呈淡白色，继而又出现红晕，扩大开来，呈现火红色，如同铁砧上烧红的铁，再缓缓延展成圆，似乎从大地里出来。就这样，月亮很快离开地平线，冉冉升空，越升越高，绛红色随之渐淡，化为黄色，是亮晶晶的淡黄。而那星体离地面越远，也似乎越小了。

保罗久久凝望月亮，心驰神往，忘了他的情妇。等他再扭头看时，她已经不见了。

他寻找，却不见她的踪影。他那焦急不安的目光扫过一张张餐桌，他还来回奔走，问这个又问那个，谁也没有瞧见她。他担心得要命，就这样东找西找，这时，一名伙计对他说：“您是找玛德琳夫人吧？她刚才和波莉娜夫人一道走了。”

就在说话的同时，保罗望见咖啡厅的另一端，站着那个身穿见习水手服的女人和那两个漂亮姑娘，三个人相互搂着腰，一边窥视他，一边交头接耳。他明白了，立刻像疯了似的冲上小岛。他先朝夏图方向跑去，可是看到眼前一片平野，他沿原路返回，开始搜寻灌木丛，狂奔乱走，不时停下来听一听。四面八方都送来铿锵短促的蛙声。从布吉谷方面，还传来几声鸟叫，但是距离远而声音微弱。月亮的清辉洒在宽阔的草地上，仿佛白絮般的尘雾。清辉透过叶丛，沿着白杨的银色树皮流泻，看上去高高震颤的树冠就像被光雨打穿。这仲夏之夜醉人的诗意，也由不得保罗，还是透进他的心胸，穿越他惊慌失措的历程，带着残忍的嘲讽搅动他的心田；在他那颗沉思多情的灵魂上，

激起狂热的渴望，要追求理想的爱情，要在一个忠贞可爱的女子怀中倾诉炽烈的情肠。

他柔肠寸断，泣不成声，不得不停下脚步。一阵悲痛过去，他又往前走。猛然，他好像挨了一刀：树丛里有人在拥抱。他跑过去一看，原来是一对情侣，两个身影搂抱在一起吻个没完，见他走近便躲开了。他不敢呼唤，就知道她不会答应。而且，他又深恐突然发现那两个。短号声令人心碎，笛子模仿欢笑，小提琴尖声狂叫，这些组成四对方舞的老调，一下下揪他的心，加剧他的痛苦。疯狂的音乐节奏混乱，在树下流窜，随着阵风时强时弱。

他猛然想到，也许她回去了吧？不错，她肯定回去啦！为什么不会呢？实在愚蠢，这一阵他无缘无故自相惊扰，胡乱猜疑，完全昏了头。痛苦绝望的情绪，也有奇异的间歇的时候，他正好碰到这种情况，又回头朝舞场走去。

他扫视整个大厅，仍然不见她的人影儿。他绕过餐桌，又突然面对那三个女人，他那气急败坏的样子一定很怪，因为她们仨都咯咯笑起来。他赶紧逃开，又跑上小岛，喘着粗气冲进树丛里。——继而，他又谛听——听了许久，因为耳朵嗡嗡鸣响。终于，他仿佛听见不远处有尖细的笑声，是他所熟悉的。于是，他蹑手蹑脚地靠近，拨开树枝朝前爬行，心跳得十分剧烈，连呼吸都感到困难。

两个人在窃窃私语，还听不清楚，随后又不出声了。

他忽然产生一个强烈的愿望，要逃开，不想看见，不想知道，永远逃开，远离这种毁掉他的狂热恋情。他要回到夏图，乘上火车，再也不回来，再也不见她了。可是，她的形象又突然浮现，他又在意念中看见她。早晨她在他们暖烘烘的床上醒来，紧紧贴着他亲昵，双臂搂住他的脖子，蓬乱的头发稍微遮住前额，眼睛还闭着，张开嘴唇接受第一个吻。他蓦然想起这种晨起的亲昵，心中立刻充满肠断魂销的遗憾、炽热狂燃的欲火。

那二人又说话了，他弯着腰靠近，忽听近旁枝叶下轻轻叫了一声。一声叫！那正是他们欢情深烈时他听熟了的叫声。他还继续靠近，仿佛不由自主，无法抵御那种吸引，完全是下意识的……果然看见她们了。

噢！另外一个，哪怕是个男人呢！不料却这样！却这样！他就觉得自己也被扯进她们的无耻行径里了。他愣在原地，神情沮丧，意乱心烦，就好像猛然发现一具被残害的亲人尸体，发现一件伤天害理的罪案、一种亵渎神灵的行为。这时，他不由自主地一闪念，想到他看见拉出肠子的那条小鱼……忽然玛德琳轻声叫道：“波莉娜！”那声调就跟叫“保罗”一样热烈。于是，保罗心如刀绞，立刻奋力逃开了。他

撞到两棵树干，摔倒在一条树根上，爬起来又跑，忽然发觉到了河边，面对月光照亮的湍急的水流。激流形成许多巨大的漩涡，舞弄着月影。河岸形同峭壁，高踞于水面，河面如同一条宽宽的黑带，可以听见暗影中的汨汨水声。对岸是克鲁瓦西村，皎洁的月光下是一片农舍。

这一切如同梦境，保罗仿佛重温一件往事。他什么也不想，什么也不明白，自然万物，乃至他自身的存在，都变得恍惚遥远了，都忘却了，完结了。面前就是河流。他明白自己在做什么吗？他要寻死吗？他简直疯了。在这寂静的夜晚，庸俗舞曲的叠句还在微弱固执地回荡，他决然转过身，面向小岛，面向她，惨叫一声：“玛德琳！”那声音绝望、尖厉，迥非人声。

他那声撕肝裂胆的呼叫，穿过寥廓长天的沉寂，传向四面八方。接着，他纵身一跳，像野兽蹿跳那样，投进河中，溅起水花，河面随即又合拢。他消失的地方，泛起一圈圈波纹，映着月光越扩越大，一直扩展到对岸。两个女人听见了。玛德琳站起来，说道：“是保罗。”她心里萌生一丝疑虑：“他跳河了。”她冲向河边，胖波莉娜也随后赶到。

一条笨重的平底船上有两个男人，在那处水面转悠。一人划船，另一人将一根长竿探进水中，似乎在探寻什么。波莉娜嚷道：“你们干什么呢？那儿有什么？”

一个陌生的声音答道：“有个投河自杀的人。”

两个女人惊呆了，紧紧靠在一起，注视着船的移动。远处青蛙滩的音乐还在闹哄，那节拍仿佛给捞尸者的动作伴奏，而河流现在隐藏一具尸体，在月光下打漩流淌。

打捞了好长时间。可怕的等待，玛德琳瑟瑟发抖。至少过了半个钟头，其中一个人终于说道：“我钩住啦！”

他轻轻往上提竿。一样大东西终于浮出水面。另一个船员放下桨，两个人合力，拉那个不动的大坨子，拉到船上。然后，他们挑地势低并有月光的一处上岸。等他们上了岸，两个女人也赶到了。

玛德琳一见尸体，吓得连连后退。在月光下，他仿佛变绿了，嘴巴、眼睛、鼻子、衣服都沾满了污泥，合拢的僵硬的手指十分可怕，全身都糊了一层黑乎乎的泥水。脸好像肿胀了，沾了稀泥的头发上不断往下淌污水。

两个船员察看了尸体，其中一个问道：“你认识他吗？”

另一个是克鲁瓦西的摆渡人，他犹豫一下，答道：“认识，这张脸好像见过，不过你也知道，这是不容易认的。”接着，他突然说

道：“嘿，这是保罗先生啊！”

“保罗先生是谁呀？”伙伴问道。

前一个回答：

“就是保罗·巴隆先生啊，参议员的儿子，小伙子太痴情了。”

另一个则达观地补充说：

“是啊，现在他玩到头了。不过，人有钱，走了还是挺可惜的。”

玛德琳失声痛哭，瘫倒在地上。波莉娜走到尸体跟前，问道：“他真死了吗？——救不活了吗？”

那两个人耸耸肩膀：“唉！都这么长时间啦！肯定完了。”

而后，其中一个人问道：“他是住在蟋蟀饭店吗？”

“对，”另一个答道，“该送到那儿去，能给赏钱的。”

他们又上了船，划走了，但是水流太急，船行得很慢。两个女人站在原地，好久还能望见他们，听到船桨有节奏击水的声音。

这时，可怜的玛德琳还在哀痛，波莉娜搂住她，极力爱抚，久久拥抱，安慰她说：“有什么办法，这根本不是你的错，对不对？没法儿阻止男人干傻事。归根结底，他要这么干，这就活该啦！”

接着，她把玛德琳扶起来，又说道：“好啦，宝贝儿，去我那儿睡吧。今晚，你不能回蟋蟀饭店了。”她又拥抱玛德琳，说道：“好啦，我们会治好你的。”

玛德琳站起来，还一直在哭泣，但声势减弱，她的头偎在波莉娜的肩上，仿佛找到了庇护所，是一种更体贴可靠、更亲热信赖的温情，她脚步蹉跎，蹒跚而去。

奥托父子

这座大庄院，半似农场，半像庄园，是混合型乡居，颇有几分领主庄园的气派，现在则居住着大庄户人家。院落苹果树上拴的几条狗守着院门，瞧见护树人和几个小青年扛着猎袋，便汪汪叫起来。

在厨房兼餐室的厅堂里，老奥托和小奥托父子，收税员贝尔蒙先生和公证人蒙达吕先生，正吃一顿便饭，喝杯红酒，就要出发打猎了，今天是正式开猎的日子。

老奥托拥有这份家产，很是得意，打猎前就先吹嘘客人到他这地盘上，能打到什么猎物。他这个诺曼底人身材高大，面色红润，特别健壮，是个能把苹果车举上肩头的汉子。他是半个农民，半个文化人，家境殷富，受人尊敬，很有影响力，也很专横。他让儿子凯撒上学受教育，念到三年级^[1]就辍学，唯恐小奥托变成文化人而忽略田产。

凯撒小奥托，几乎跟父亲一般高，但是真瘦溜儿。他是个好小伙子，听话的儿子，对什么都满意，对老奥托的意愿和见解，满心赞赏，敬重且钦佩。

收税员贝尔蒙先生，则是个矮胖子，红红的面颊上，呈现青色血脉织成的细网，仿佛地图上的红河水道。他问道：“那么，野兔呢——有野兔吗？”

老奥托回答：“您要多少就有多少，特别是到比伊萨蒂埃那片林子深处。”

“我们先从哪儿开始呢？”公证人插言道。他是个胖子，脸色苍白，作为公证人，性格随和而开朗，同样大腹便便，穿一身崭新的猎装，全身箍得紧紧的，还是上周去鲁昂买的。

“喏，就从那里，从里端开始，我们先将山鹑轰到田野里，然后就势扑上去。”

老奥托说罢，就站起身，大家也都跟着站起来，去角落操起各自的猎枪，再检查一下全套装备，又跺跺脚，确定靴子非常跟脚。靴子偏硬一点儿，等走动起来血脉一热就会软和些。接着，他们走出去，猎犬立时扯直了绳索，身子立起来，前爪在半空乱抓，发出尖厉的叫

声。

大家上路，走向林子深处。这是一道小山谷，确切点儿说，是一大道土质恶劣的沟壑，因而不能耕种。一条条细谷长满了蕨类植物，正是猎物极好的去处。猎手们拉开了距离，老奥托走右侧，小奥托走左侧，两位客人居中。猎场守护人和扛猎袋的人紧随其后。这是庄严的时刻，大家都等待打响第一枪，心跳不免有点儿加速，而紧张的手指随时准备叩动扳机。

突然，第一枪打响了！是老奥托开的枪。所有人都停下来，只见一只山鹑脱离拍打翅膀逃窜的一群，跌落到一条沟壑茂密的荆丛里。亢奋的猎手开始奔跑，跨越，挣脱挂住他的刺藤，他也消隐在矮树林中了，去寻找他的猎物。几乎紧随其后，第二声枪响了。

“嗨！嗨！这个无赖，”贝尔蒙先生叫起来，“在那下面，他很可能把一只野兔赶出窝了。”

所有人都等待，眼睛注视那片目光透不进去的茂密枝叶。公证人双手合成喊话筒，嚷道：“捉到了吗？”老奥托没有应声，于是凯撒回身对护林人说：“你去帮帮他，约瑟夫。必须一排往前推。我们等着。”

约瑟夫，干干巴巴，长得像根老树桩，疙里疙瘩，各个关节无不突显。他不慌不忙卸下装备，找准容易下脚的穴坑，像狐狸一样谨慎小心。不大工夫，听到他嚷起来，“噢！来人哪！来人哪！出乱子啦！”

所有人都跑下去，冲进荆丛里，老奥托侧身倒在地上，双手捂住肚子，只见鲜血从子弹打穿的帆布衣破洞里流到了荒草上。他在伸手去抓那只打死的山鹑时，丢下的猎枪磕到石头上，撞击走火，打出第二响，打穿了他的腹部。大家急忙上手，把他从沟里拖出来，扒开猎装，看到伤口惨不忍睹，肠子也流出来了。好歹给他包扎住伤口之后，当即抬他回家，等待早已派人请的医生以及一位神父。

医生赶来检查伤势，他神情凝重，摇了摇头，转过身来，对坐在椅子上啜泣的小奥托说道：“我可怜的小伙子，看来情况可不妙。”

不过，等伤口包扎好了，伤者动了动手指，张开嘴，睁开枯槁的双眼，目光焦虑地环顾四周。接着，他仿佛搜寻记忆，似乎想起来，明白过来了，这才咕哝一句：“妈的，这下子栽啦！”

医生拉住他的手，说道：

“哪儿的话，哪儿的话呢，休养几天就行了，没什么事。”

奥托接口道：“这下子栽啦！我肚子破开啦！我完全清楚。”

随即突然说道：“我想跟儿子谈谈，如果还来得及的话。”

小奥托不由得哭哭啼啼，像个小孩子似的反复说道：“爸爸，爸爸，可怜的爸爸！”

然而父亲，语气更加坚定，说道：“好了，别哭了，这不是时候。我有话跟你说。过这儿来，靠近前，很快就能说完，我也就放心了。你们几位，请给我一些时间。”

所有人都出去了，留下儿子面对父亲。只有父子二人了，父亲便说道：“听着，儿子，你已经二十四岁了，事情可以告诉你了。其实，我们说的，也不是什么天大的秘密。你清楚，你母亲过世已有七年了，对不对，我呢，现在不过四十五岁，当年结婚我才十九岁，对不对？”

儿子结结巴巴地回答：“对，是这样。”

“那好，你母亲过世都七年了，我呢，一直独身生活。好嘛！像我这样一个男人，不可能三十七岁就一直做个鳏父吧，对不对？”

儿子回答：“对，是这样。”

父亲喘着气，脸色惨白，面部肌肉抽搐着，他接着说道：

“天哪，疼得真邪乎！喏，你明白。男人天生就不能过独身生活，但是，我又不愿意续弦，替代你母亲，只因我向她许诺过……怎么样……你明白吧？”

“是的，父亲。”

“因此，我在鲁昂找了个小相好的，住在胡瓜鱼街，十八号，四层，二门——我对你说的这些，不要忘了，——那个小相好的很体贴人，对我一心一意，很重感情，很忠贞，是一个实实在在的女人，怎么？你懂了吧，我的孩子？”

“是的，父亲。”

“那好，如果我走了，我还欠她点儿什么，而且至关重要，能保证她生活无忧。你明白吧？”

“是的，父亲。”

“跟你说，她是个贤淑的姑娘，真的，很贤淑，如果不是有你，如果不是怀念你母亲，再说，如果没有我们三人生活过的这个家，那么，我就会带她来这里了，然后娶她，这是肯定的……你听好……听好了……我的孩子……我本可以立一份遗嘱……可我根本没有做！我不愿意……因为事情……这类事情……决不应该写下来……这太损害合法继承人了……况且，这样会全部搅乱了……这样能毁了所有人！

你瞧，印花公文纸，不需要，永远呢不要使用。如果说我富有，就因为我一辈子都没有动用过。这你明白，我的儿子！”

“是的，父亲。”

“再听我说说……听好了……就是说，我没有立遗嘱……我不愿意……而且，我了解你，你心肠好，你不吝啬，怎么说呢，不斤斤计较。我心里想好了，等临终时，我就把事情一五一十告诉你，还要恳求你别忘记那个女孩：卡罗莉娜·多奈，胡瓜鱼街十八号，四层，二门，别忘了——再有，听我说，等我一走，你立刻就去那儿——去妥善处理，免得她想起我时产生抱怨情绪。——你有钱财——你办得到……我给你留下的相当多……你挺好……平日找不到她。她在莫罗太太家里干活，博瓦西纳街。星期四你去。这一天她等着我。这是我的日子，已经六年了。可怜的姑娘，她会怎么伤心哭泣啊！……这件事，我全对你讲了，我的儿子，就因为我非常了解你。这类事情，不能当众去讲，也不能告诉公证人和本堂神父。这种事天天发生，众所周知，但是不能讲，除非到了必要的时候。因此，除了家人，外人，谁也不知道这个秘密，就因为家庭，所有人拧成一股绳。你明白了吧？”

“是的，父亲。”

“你答应吗？”

“是的，父亲。”

“你发誓？”

“是的，父亲。”

“是我求你了，恳求你了，儿子，不要忘了，这是我的心事。”

“不会忘的，父亲。”

“你要亲自去。我希望这个事情你能妥善安排。”

“是的，父亲。”

“然后，就看情况吧……你看她怎么向你解释。我呢，不能对你多讲了。发过誓了。”

“是的，父亲。”

“就这样吧，我的儿子，吻吻我。别了。我不行了，确定无疑。告诉他们进来吧。”小奥托呻吟着亲吻了父亲，他也始终顺从，打开了房门。神父进屋，他身穿宽袖白色法袍，手上拿着圣体油。然而，重危的人已经闭上眼睛，再也不肯睁开了，也不肯回答，甚至都不肯做一个他听懂了的暗示。

这个汉子，他说得够多的了，不能再讲了。况且，此刻他心里很平静，就想这样安静地死去。他已经向他的儿子，这个家庭的成员忏悔了，何必还向上帝的代表忏悔呢？

照例为他行了圣事，净除了心中的邪魔。赎了罪过，他的朋友围在身边，仆人们跪了一圈，没见他脸上有一丝征象他还活着。

表明剧痛的抽搐持续了四小时之后，他于午夜时分离世了。

二

星期天开猎，星期二下了葬。凯撒·奥托送父亲到墓地，安葬之后回家，这天余下的时间，他就只顾伤心流泪了，通宵没有怎么睡觉，醒来感到特别凄苦，心想，今后这日子怎么过下去呢？不过，到了傍晚，他还是想到要遵从父亲的遗愿，次日他一定得前往鲁昂看望卡罗莉娜·多奈那个姑娘，记得她住在胡瓜鱼街十八号，四层，二门。他像喃喃祈祷一样，低声重复这个名字和这个地址，不知念叨了多少遍，以免忘记。最后就没完没了地咕哝，停都停不下来，或者无论想什么，他的舌头和他的思维却总被这句话控制着。

第二天，约莫八点钟，他就吩咐下人备车，套上“大麦粒”，那匹诺曼底种的高头大马，他上车起程，马车飞驰在安维尔通往鲁昂的大道上。他穿上他那件黑礼服，头戴丝绸大礼帽，穿一条裤脚松紧带套在脚底的长裤。考虑当时的境况，他不愿意显露他那漂亮的礼服，就套上了蓝罩衫，迎风便鼓起来，能遮挡灰尘和脏点，到达后一跳下车，随手就脱掉。

马车驶进鲁昂城，恰好敲响十点钟。凯撒·奥托还一如既往，到三潭街“好心肠”旅馆落脚，接受老板、老板娘及其五个儿子的拥抱，因为他们得知了办丧事的消息。他还不得不详细讲述是出意外的情况，这又引起他们伤心落泪。这些人人都知道他有钱，百般殷勤招待，可是他却谢绝，甚至不吃他们的饭，这又让他们挺生气。

他掸掉帽子上的尘土，刷干净礼服，又擦亮了皮靴，便出去寻找胡瓜鱼街。他不敢向任何人打听，生怕被人认出来，引起怀疑。最终他还是没有找到，看见一名教士，认为教会的人信得过，他们在职业上就谨慎，于是向那人问路。原来，走过去不过百十来步远，就在右侧的第二条街。

这时，他倒犹豫起来。此前，他就像个粗人，一直按照死者的意愿行事。而现在，他却感到心慌意乱，迷惑起来，一想到他，作为儿子，要面对这个曾经是他父亲的姘头女人，就不免觉得丢脸。我们心中的全部道德观，是多少世纪传承教育在我们感情深处的积淀，关于生活中的坏女人，源自教理课本他所学到的一切，以及天性多疑的男

人，对这种放荡的女人，哪怕娶了一个，也必然——本人心存的蔑视，再加上他这个农民身上所具备的整个狭隘的正派观念，凡此种种，都在他内心翻腾，令他畏缩不前，令他羞愧而脸红。

不过，他还是想：“我答应了父亲，总不该失信。”于是，他推开挂着十八号牌子的半掩的楼门，发现一座昏暗的楼梯，上到四层，看到一门，又看到二门，找见门铃绳，便拉了两下。丁零丁零的铃声，在里面的房间响起，让他浑身不由得猛一战栗，房门打开了，出现在他面前的是一位年轻太太，穿戴得很好，一头棕发，肤色鲜艳，她眼神惊愕地打量他。

凯撒不知道对她说什么好，而她，还什么都不知道，等待对方开口，并不请他进屋。二人彼此端详，就这样过了将近半分钟，女主人终于问道：“你有什么事吗，先生？”

他讷讷答道：“我是奥托的儿子。”

女人惊抖了一下，脸色刷的白了，她好像早就认识他似的，结结巴巴地说道：“凯撒先生？”

“对。”

“您来有什么事吗？”

“我代表父亲，有话对您说。”

她不由得发出一声：“噢！我的上帝！”随即后退一步，让他进屋。他关上房门，跟着往里走。这时，凯撒瞧见一个四五岁的小男孩，正逗弄一只猫玩。男孩坐在地上，身后一个火炉，火上正热着菜，冒着浊气。

“请坐。”她说道。

他坐了下来。

她问道：“怎么回事呢？”

凯撒再也不敢开口了，他的目光凝视摆在屋子中央的桌子，桌子已经放好三副餐具，一副是儿童的。他看着背对着炉火的椅子，对面摆好餐巾、酒杯、开启的红葡萄酒、未开瓶的白葡萄酒，那是他父亲的座位，背对着炉火还等着他呢。凯撒看到并认出，叉子旁边是为他父亲准备的面包，已经削下硬皮，因为奥托牙口不好。接着，他抬眼，又瞧见墙上挂的大照片，奥托在巴黎世博会那年照的相，而同样一张相片，就挂在安维尔家他卧室床头的上方。

少妇又问道：“怎么回事，凯撒先生？”

凯撒看了她一眼。她惶恐焦虑，面失血色，双手害怕得发抖，还

在等待。于是，他鼓足了勇气：“是这样，小姐，星期天开猎，爸爸身亡了。”

少妇受到极大的震撼，一时动弹不得。沉默了半晌，她才喃喃说，声音低得几乎听不见：“噢！这不可能！”

继而，她眼中突然涌出泪水，她抬起双手，捂住脸，开始抽泣起来，这时，小男孩扭头看见他母亲哭了，便叫起来。接着，他看明白母亲突然悲痛，是这个陌生人引起的，便扑向凯撒，一只手揪住他的裤子，另一只手拼力打他的大腿。这对母子，一个是为他父亲痛哭的女人，一个是保卫母亲的孩子，凯撒夹在中间，手足无措又极为感动，他觉得自己也受到这种激动情绪的感染，眼睛因伤悲而肿胀起来，于是振作一下，开始讲述了：“是的，”他说道，“不幸的事件，是星期天早晨八点来钟发生的……”

他讲述，就好像她在听似的，不漏掉任何细节，以农民的那种细心，多么微不足道的情况都要讲到。而小家伙还一直打他，现在是用脚踢他脚踝了。当他说到老奥托谈她情况的时候，她听到自己的名字，双手便从脸上撤下来，请求道：

“对不起，我没有听您讲，我很想了解……如果您不介意，就再从头讲起。”

他又从头讲述，还是原来的话：“不幸的事件，是星期天早晨，八点来钟发生的……”

他全部讲了，讲了很久，中间有停顿，有句号，还时而有他的想法。她贪婪地听着，以女人神经的敏感度，领会他叙述的各种变化的情况，有时感叹一声：“噢，我的上帝！”孩子以为她平静了，就不再打凯撒了，过去拉住母亲的手，也同样倾听，就好像听懂了似的。小奥托叙述完了，又说道：“现在按照他的愿望，我们一起把事情安排一下，您听我说，我很富裕，他给我留下了财产。我不愿意安排不周让您抱怨……”

然而，她急忙打断他的话：“噢！凯撒先生，凯撒先生，今天不说了。我心如刀绞！等下次吧，改天。不，今天别谈了。如果我接受，听我说，也不是为我。不，不，不，我向您发誓。是为了孩子，而且，钱财也要落到他的名头。”

凯撒闻听此言，十分惊恐，他猜测出来，结结巴巴地说道：“这么说……是他的……这孩子？”

“当然了。”少妇回答。

小奥托注视着这个小弟弟，激动的心情很复杂，既强烈又难堪。少妇又哭起来，凯撒沉默了许久，处境十分尴尬，接着说道：“那好

吧，多奈小姐，我先走了，什么时候您愿意，我们再谈好吗？”

她高声说：“噢！不，您别走，您别走，不要丢下我一个人跟埃米尔！我会伤心死的。我什么人也没有了，除了我孩子就没人了。噢！多大的苦难，多大的苦难啊，凯撒先生，喏，您请坐，您还要对我讲一讲。您要告诉我，他在那边，平时都做什么？”

凯撒顺从惯了，他又坐下来。她挪过一把椅子给自己，靠近他也坐下来，就在一直热着菜的火炉前面。凯撒还抱起埃米尔放到膝上，女人向凯撒问起有关父亲无数的事儿，全是私生活的小事儿，看得出来，凯撒不用推理就感觉得到，这个可怜的女人，真是全心全意爱奥托。

凯撒的想法并不多，他说着话，自然又回到那个意外的不幸事件。“他肚子崩开一个大洞，能塞进去两个拳头。”凯撒讲出这种情况时，她不由得叫了一声，泪水再次涌出。凯撒受此感染，也哭起来。眼泪总能软化心弦，他俯向埃米尔，嘴唇正巧接近孩子的额头，就势亲吻了他。

母亲缓过一口气，喃喃说道：“可怜的孩子，现在成了孤儿。”

“我也一样。”凯撒说道。

随后，他们又不说话了。

忽然，家庭主妇什么都想到的习惯——这种实践的本能在这少妇心中苏醒了。

“这一上午，也许您还没有吃什么吧，凯撒先生？”

“没有，小姐。”

“唔！您肯定饿了。您还是吃点儿东西吧。”

“谢谢，”他回答，“我不饿，心里太痛苦了。”

“难过归难过，总得活下去。这事儿您不能拒绝！而且，您也可以多留下一会儿。等您一走，真不知道我会成什么样子！”

凯撒还婉拒了两句，终于退让了，他坐下来，背靠着火，面对着她，吃了一盘在炉子上炖得咕咕作响的羊肚，喝了一杯红葡萄酒，但是说什么也不让她开那瓶白葡萄酒。小孩子吃饭，满嘴巴浇汁，凯撒给他擦了好几次。他起身告辞时，问道：“您看什么时候合适，我再来谈事呢，多奈小姐？”

“下星期四吧，凯撒先生，如果对您没妨碍的话。这样我就不用耽误干活时间了。我每逢星期四休息。”

“下星期四，我也方便。”

“您来吃午饭吧，好不好？”

“哦！吃午饭嘛，我还不能应承。”

“一边吃饭一边谈事更好，时间也充裕些。”

“那好吧。还是中午。”

他离去时，又亲了亲小埃米尔，还同多奈小姐握了握手。

三

这一周，凯撒·奥托感到很漫长。他从来没有这样寂寞过，觉得难以忍受这种孤独。此前，他一直如影随形，生活在父亲身边，跟随到田间地头，监督雇工执行命令的情况，即使分开一阵工夫，吃晚饭时又见到了。晚上的时光，爷儿俩就面对面，边抽着烟斗，边谈论马、牛和羊；而早晨醒来，父子就握手问好，洋溢着深厚的亲情。

现在，凯撒独自一人了。他沿着秋天的田地游荡，始终期望从一片平展的地头，立起父亲那挥动臂膀的高大身影。他要消磨时光，就走进邻居家，向所有未听过的人讲述那次意外事件，有时还向听过的人重讲一遍。这种事情忙完了，该想的事也想过了，他就坐到路边，思索这种日子还要持续多久。

他经常想到多奈小姐。他觉得挺喜欢她，确实认为她很像样，正如他父亲所言，是一个温柔的正派姑娘。对，若说一个正派姑娘，她确实确实是一个正派的姑娘。处理这件事，他决心要出手大方：在确保孩子资产的同时，给她买下两千法郎的年金。一想到星期四又要见到她，一起安排这件事，他甚至感到有几分欣喜。再一想到这个弟弟，这个五岁的小家伙，却是他父亲的儿子，又让他忧虑，颇为烦恼，同时也让他心里热乎乎的。这个私生的娃儿，虽然算作家里人，可是永远不能姓奥托，这个家他管不管也随意，但总归令他联想到父亲。

因此，星期四早晨，前往鲁昂的路上，驾车的“大麦粒”嗒嗒的马蹄声非常响亮，他坐在车上的心情，自不幸的事件发生后，还从来没有如此轻松，如此平静。

他走进多奈小姐的套房，看到餐桌已经摆好，同上星期四一样，只有一点不同，面包没有去掉硬皮。

凯撒握了握少妇的手，亲了亲埃米尔的脸蛋，随即坐下，有点儿像到了他的家，不过心情还照样沉重。他觉得多奈小姐瘦了一点儿，脸色也苍白了些：她肯定流泪过多。现在她在凯撒面前，神态不自然了，就好像意识到了些什么，而上星期刚受不幸消息的打击时却未曾注意。她对他格外客气起来，表现出一种痛苦的谦恭、体贴的照顾，

仿佛要用关心和忠诚来回报凯撒对她的善意。他们午饭吃了好长时间，谈论他此次来要办的事。她不要这么多钱。这太多了，实在太多了。她挣的钱足够生活了，她只是希望埃米尔长大后，还能有点儿钱。凯撒执意这样做，甚至还额外赠送一千法郎，作为抚恤金。等他喝完咖啡，多奈小姐问道，“您抽烟吗？”

“抽啊……我有烟斗。”他说道。

他摸了摸口袋。糟糕，烟斗忘记带了。他正欲气恼，多奈小姐却从杆子里给他取出他父亲的烟斗。他接受了，拿起一看便认出来，还嗅了嗅，夸赞它是最好的烟斗之一，声音中还透着一丝激动。随后他往烟斗里塞满烟丝，吸几点着了。多奈小姐收拾桌子，将用过的餐具放进橱柜下层，准备等他走后清洗，他将埃米尔放到腿上，让孩子骑马玩，直到该走的时候。

快到三点时，他未免遗憾地站起身，想到该走了心里很烦。

“好啦，多奈小姐，”他说道，“希望您下午过得愉快，我很高兴看到您这种状况。”

多奈小姐伫立在他面前，脸有点儿红，显得挺激动，注视着她心里的另一个人。

“我们就再也不见面了吗？”

他回答得干脆：“可以呀，小姐，如果您愿意的话。”

“当然愿意了，凯撒先生。那好，下星期四，您方便吗？”

“方便啊，多奈小姐。”

“您来吃午饭，没错吧？”

“这，如果您乐意，我不谢绝。”

“当然乐意，凯撒先生，下星期四，中午，像今天这样。”

“星期四中午见，多奈小姐。”

公墓妓女

五个朋友一起吃晚饭。这五个上流社会人士，都是成熟男子，富有，三人已有家室，两个仍然单身。他们这样聚会，每月一次，追忆他们的青春岁月，吃完饭便闲聊，直到凌晨两点钟。他们始终是知心密友，而且兴趣相投，也许认为这种聚会是他们一生中最美好的夜晚。他们无所不谈，谈遍了巴黎人喜闻乐见的大事小情，其实他们之间，也像大多数沙龙聚会那样，无非是重复在晨报上看到的那些社会新闻。

最愉快的要数约瑟夫·德·巴尔东。这个单身汉以别出心裁的方式全方位地过着巴黎生活。他绝非放荡之徒，也非堕落分子，而只是一个尚属年轻的好奇者、乐天派，因为他不过四十岁。说他是上流社会人士，是取这个词组最宽泛、最和善的含义。他天资聪慧，却没有多大深度；知识面很宽，又谈不上渊博；理解事物很快速，但不肯认真深入探讨。他从自己的观察、自己的奇遇，从自己所看到的、碰到的和找到的一切，提炼出哲理滑稽小说式的趣闻逸事，以及幽默的见解，从而在全城赢得了智慧的盛誉。他是饭局的演说家。他有自己的故事，每次都讲他的故事，别人也总有所期待。他不用别人请求，就开始讲起自己的故事了。

他抽着烟，两只臂肘支在餐桌上，半杯上等白兰地摆在餐盘前面，沉浸在弥漫热咖啡香味的烟雾中，仿佛就在自己家中，犹如某些生物在某时某处，绝对在自己栖息地的感觉，犹如礼拜堂里的一个虔诚的女信徒，又如鱼缸中的一只金鱼。他在吸烟的间歇，说道：

“不久之前，我有一次非常独特的艳遇。”

所有人几乎异口同声，要求道：“讲来听听。”

他便说下去。

好吧。你们都知道，我在巴黎走的地方很多，就像爱收集小摆设的人，到处探寻摆设的

橱窗那样。我则窥探热闹，窥探人，注视眼前经过的一切、发生的所有事。

且说九月中旬，一天午后我出门，去哪儿还不知道，天气好极了，就像此刻这样。男人总有一种模糊的欲

望，不期而遇一位美女，而且在脑子里挨排挑选，比较，酌量她们能引起你多大兴趣，对你施展多大魅力最终还是决定要看当天的吸引力了。不过，阳光明媚，天气温暖，往往就没什么兴致拜访人了。

阳光真是明媚，天气真是温暖，我点着一支雪茄，糊里糊涂走在环城大道上。我溜达了一会儿，便心生一念，何不一直走到蒙马特公墓，进去瞧瞧呢。我呢，很爱看公墓，能休息，也感受点儿忧伤，这是我所需要的。而且，有些好友，也在那里安息，再也没人去探视了；我呢，时而还去看望。

恰恰在这座蒙马特墓园，有我一段感情史。一个矮小的可爱女子，一个对我非常钟情也让我特别动情的相好。每每想起来，心里就难过到极点，同时也深感痛惜，百感交集的痛

惜。我就去她的墓畔静思，她走完了这一生。

此外，我也喜爱墓园，只因这是一座座大城池，居民异常密集。你们想想看，在这狭小的空间，埋葬了多少死者，世世代代的巴黎人，在这儿找到永久的归宿，关进小小的墓穴里，埋进小土坑，上面盖着一块石板或者立个十字架标志，彻彻底底成为穴居人；反之，活在世上的这些蠢货，却占据了大片地方，大肆喧哗闹腾。

再者，公墓里有些纪念性建筑物，其价值几乎不亚于博物馆的藏品。我得承认，卡芬雅克的坟墓，不用比较，就能让我联想到让·古戎的杰作——鲁昂大教堂地下礼拜堂里路易·德·布雷泽墓的全身浮雕像。先生们，凡是称得上现代和现实主义的艺术均来源于此。路易·德·布雷泽的浮雕像，比起今天在墓中所有受刑折磨的尸体，显得更为真实，更为骇人，更具有临终后痉挛且已无生命的肉体感。

不过，在蒙马特公墓，还能观赏到博丹宏伟的纪念碑，以及戈蒂埃、米尔热的墓碑。而

有一天，我看到米尔热的碑前，仅仅摆放了一个可怜的黄蜡菊花圈，是谁送的呢？也许是最后一个小女

工，如今年迈，在附近当看门人时送来的吧？这是米勒制作的一尊小雕像，很精美，但是因为无人照管而肮脏不堪。米尔热哟，歌唱青春吧！

且说我走进蒙马特公墓，忽然一阵感伤袭上心头，倒是一种不太难受的忧伤，是那种能让健康的人思考的忧伤：“这地方嘛，没多大意思，不过，我还没有到迁居这里的时候。”秋色印象，暗淡的枯叶氤氲着温暖的潮湿，微弱的阳光强化了飘浮在这上空的孤独和终结的感受，为这墓园染上了些浪漫色彩。

我漫步在这些故冢的街道上，这里的邻居们绝不往来，再不同床共枕，再也不看报了。我呢，则开始读起碑文来。读碑文，真的，这是世上最有趣的事。拉比升也好，梅拉克也罢，从来就没有滑稽得像碑文这样能引我如此发笑的文字。啊！这些大理石墓板，这些十字架上的文字，远高于保罗·德·科克的书，更能令

人捧腹大笑：父母倾诉丧失孩子的憾恨，唯愿逝者在另一个世界生活幸福，并且希望日后相聚——开什么玩笑！

不过，在这座墓园中，我尤其喜爱被遗弃的部分，非常凄清，布满紫杨和翠柏。埋葬前人的老区，用不了多久，又会重新变成新区，伐倒那些以死者遗体为养料的绿树，将新近的死者埋进排列整齐的小块大理石板下面。

我游荡了一段时间，头脑清爽了，心下明白就要感到乏味了，得赶紧到我那女友长眠的“床位”，敬献我忠诚的哀思。我走到她的墓前，感到一阵揪心。亲爱的人啊，多么可怜，生前她那么温柔，那么深情，那么白净，那么清新……而现在……如果开棺瞧瞧……隔着铁栅栏，我俯身对她低声讲述我的哀痛，当然她根本听不见了，正要离去，却瞥见旁边墓前跪着一位女子，身穿重孝，一色黑衣裙。她撩起黑纱，露出一副令人惊艳的容貌，那头金发分梳在两鬓，在她头巾的黑夜中仿佛照耀着曙光。我停下来。自不待言，她一定心潮涌动着深深

的痛苦，目光埋藏在双手里，全身僵直不动，俨然一尊沉思的雕像，行进在痛惜之路上，在遮蔽眼睛的阴影里，数着前尘往事折磨人的念珠，她自身仿佛一个死了的女人，可能在思念一个死去的男人。忽然，我看出她要哭了，只见她后背微微颤动，宛如弱风拂柳，我才做此猜想。起初她在饮泣，逐渐哭得厉害，脖颈和肩头急速抖动。猛然，她移开手，露出双眼，漫溢着泪水，很是迷人，惊慌的眼神扫视周围，处于从噩梦中醒来的状态。她瞧见我正注视她，不免有些羞愧，整张脸重又埋在双手中。这时，她的哭泣变得抽噎了，脑袋缓慢俯向大理石墓板，额头贴在上面，纱巾披散开，罩住了爱人坟墓的白衣角，仿佛新戴的孝。我听见她呜咽，继而全身瘫软，脸颊贴着石板，静止不动，失去了知觉。

我急步上前，拍打她的双手，往她眼睑吹气，同时浏览了十分简单的碑文：

“海军陆战队上尉，路易·泰奥道尔·卡雷尔之墓，战死于东京湾。为他的灵魂祈祷吧。”

数月前死去的。我也伤心为之落泪，便加倍努力救护。救护奏了效，她苏醒过来。当时我的神情很激动——我的相貌也不赖，未满四十岁——从她投来的第一眼，我就明白她是个懂礼貌、知感激的人。随后她又流了泪，讲述了身世，证明她确实是这样的人。她抽泣着，断断续续倾吐胸臆，说她是个孤女，父母双亡，这位军官出于爱情才娶她的，因为她的嫁妆勉强说得过去，不料结婚才一年，丈夫便倒在东京湾了。

我劝解，安慰她，扶她立起身，搀她站起来。然后，我对她说。

“不要在这里逗留了。跟我来吧。”

她喃喃答道：

“我走不了路了。”

“别担心，我帮您。”

“谢谢，先生，您真是好人。您来这里，也是祭拜死者吗？”

“是的，夫人。”

“死去的一位女子？”

“是的，夫人。”

“您妻子？”

“一位女友。”

“爱一位女友，也可能像爱妻子那样，爱情并无规范。”

“是的，夫人。”

于是，我们就一道走了，她偎依在我身上，在出墓园这一路，我几乎是抱着她走的。出来之后，她气息微弱，说道：“我觉得自己要病了似的。”

“要不要找个地方，您进去喝点儿什么？”

“好吧，先生。”

我看到一家饭馆，是办完丧事之后，亲友聚一聚的那种馆子。我们进去，我给她要了一杯热茶，她喝下去似乎有了点儿精神，嘴角泛起了一抹微笑，跟我谈起了她本人。要多凄凉有多凄凉啊，生活中孤单一人，在家里，白天黑夜，总是形影相吊，纵使有什么风情，信赖体恤、亲近相处的情意，也没有任何人可给予了。

这种话听来很诚恳，从她口中讲出来，也

讨人喜欢。我动了情感。她非常年轻，或许就二十岁。我恭维她几句，她坦然接受了。看看时间不早了，我提议叫辆车送她回家，她同意了。我们坐上出租马车，肩靠着肩挤在一起，体温透过衣服相交融，这种事最令人心猿意马了。

马车停到她家的楼门口，她低声问道：“我觉得单独上不了楼了，我住在五层。您这么热心，能不能搀扶我送到家呢？”

我赶忙答应了。她缓慢上楼，还气喘吁吁。到了她的家门口，她又说道：“您进屋坐一坐，好让我向您表示感谢。”

没的说，我进去了。

房间不大，甚至有点儿贫寒，但是很简朴，她家里收拾得整整齐齐。我们并排坐到小型长沙发上，她又向我提起她的孤寂。她摇铃唤女仆，要吩咐给我端上什么喝的。女仆没有来。我心下暗喜，想必那个女仆只是上午来干活，即所谓的清洁女工。她已经摘了帽子。她那双明澈的眼睛凝视我，样子确实非常可爱：那么明澈，又那么凝视，激发起我的极大欲念。

我情不自禁，一把将她搂在怀里，亲吻她那忽然闭起的眼睛，吻了又吻，吻个没够。她挣扎着推我，连声说：“行了，行了，行了！”

她这话是什么意思呢？此情此景，“行了”至少可能有两层意思。我要让她住声，就从眼睛移吻到嘴上，从而给“行了”这话赋予我喜爱的定义。她并不过分抗拒。在冒犯了对死于东京湾的上尉的纪念之后，我们重又凝视着对方时，她那样子显得倦怠、温柔、驯顺，这便驱散了我的不安情绪。

于是，我献起殷勤，因感激而更加热情。大约又交谈了一小时之后，我就问她：

“您在哪儿用晚餐？”

“在附近的一家小餐馆。”

“独自一人？”

“当然了。”

“您愿意同我共进晚餐吗？”

“去哪儿？”

“林荫大道一家好餐馆。”

她婉拒了一下，我坚持邀请，她就退让

了，给自己找了个台阶下：“我太烦闷，太烦闷了。”随后又补充一句：“我得换一条衣裙，颜色别这么暗了。”她说，走进自己的画室。再一出来，她已换成戴半孝了，穿了一条灰色连衣裙，非常朴素，突显苗条的身段更有魅力了。显而易见，她有两套装束：扫墓的孝服，出门的便装。

晚餐很开心。她喝了香槟，兴奋起来，活跃起来。我同她一道回到她家里。在墓畔结缘的这段关系，大约持续三周。可是，人做什么事都有个够，尤其是男女的事儿。我借口一趟远行推不掉，便离开了她。分手时我也出手大方，她也向我千恩万谢。她让我答应她，向她发誓，我一归来就去找她，因为，她对我似乎真的有点儿依依不舍了。

我又另寻新欢去了，大约过了一个月，我也没有多大意愿再去见墓地艳遇的那个小妞。然而，我却忘不掉她……对她的记忆萦绕心头，仿佛一个秘密，仿佛一种心理问题，又像一种困扰我们的无解的疑问。

有一天，也说不清为什么，我想象到蒙马特公墓，就能见到她，于是去了。

我在墓园久久漫步，仅仅遇见那里的常客，还没有完全斩断同死者关系的那些人。至于在东京湾阵亡的那个上尉的墓前，既不见跪在大理石上哭泣的那位女子，也没有祭奠的鲜花、花圈。

不过，在这座亡灵的大城池，我误入另一个街区，忽然发现一条狭窄的十字架林荫路尽头，有一对身穿重孝的男女朝我走过来。噢，好不惊愕！他们渐行渐近，我认出那个女的：正是她！

她看见我，脸一红，与我擦肩而过时，她还向我打了个小暗号，向我丢了个眼色，示意“装作不认识我”，

似乎还表明：“来看我呀，心爱的。”

那男人很体面，风度翩翩，佩戴着四级荣誉团勋章，年纪约有五十岁。他搀扶着她，一如我本人曾那样搀扶她走出公墓。

我走开了，不免十分惊诧，心中回味刚看

到的情景。这个墓园女猎手究竟属于哪类人，莫非就是个普通妓女，揽客有了灵感，专门在墓区拉伤心的男人，即心里还装着一个女人，妻子或情妇，还因念念不忘失去的恩爱而魂不守舍的那种男人。她是独此一家吗？抑或还有数人呢？莫非这是一种职业？在墓地也像在街头人行道那样吗？公墓妓女！再不然，唯独她发此奇想，能从哲学的深度发掘，到这种悲凄哀悼的场所，唤醒痛惜的爱情吧？

我真想知道，那天她是哪位墓主的孀妇呢？

‘They trailed in all their vulgar glory over the fresh green grass...’

Cockcrow

Madame Berthe d'Avancelles had rejected the advances of her admirer Baron Joseph de Croissard to such an extent that he was now in despair. He had pursued her relentlessly throughout the winter in Paris, and now at his château at Carville in Normandy he was holding a series of hunting parties in her honour.

The husband, Monsieur d'Avancelles, turned a blind eye to all this. It was rumoured that they lived separate lives on account of a physical shortcoming of his which Madame could not overlook. He was a fat little man with short arms, short legs, a short neck, short nose, short everything in fact.

Madame d'Avancelles, in contrast, was a tall, chestnuthaired, determined- looking young woman. She laughed openly at old Pipe and Slippers as she called him to his face but looked with tender indulgence on her admirer, the titled Baron Joseph de Croissard, with his broad shoulders, his sturdy neck and his fair, drooping moustache.

Until now, however, she had granted him no favours despite the fact that he was spending a fortune on her, throwing a constant round of receptions, hunting parties, and all kinds of celebrations to which he invited the local aristocracy.

All day long the woods rang to the sound of hounds in full cry after a fox or a wild boar and every night a dazzling display of fireworks spiralled upwards to join the sparkling stars. A tracery of light from the drawing- room windows shone on the huge lawns where shadowy figures occasionally passed.

It was the russet season of autumn when leaves swirled over the gardens like flocks of birds. Wafting on the air came the tang of damp, bare earth, caught as the smell of a woman's naked flesh as her gown slips down to the floor after the ball.

On an evening during a reception held the previous spring, Madame d'Avancelles had replied to an imploring Monsieur de Croissard with the words: 'If I am to fall at all, my friend, it will certainly not be before the leaves do likewise. I've far too many things to do this summer to give it a thought.' He had remembered those daring words of hers spoken so provocatively and was now pressing his advantage. Each day he crept closer, gaining more and more of the bold beauty's heart until by this point her resistance seemed hardly more than symbolic.

Soon there was to be a great hunting party. The night before, Madame Berthe had said laughingly to the Baron: 'Tomorrow, Baron, if you manage to kill the beast I shall have something to give you.'

He was up at dawn reconnoitring where the wild boar was wallowing. He accompanied his whips, setting out the order of the hunt in such a way that he should return from the field in triumph. When the horns sounded for the meet, he appeared in a well-cut hunting costume of scarlet and gold. With his upright, broad-chested figure and flashing eyes he glowed with good health and manly vigour.

The hunt moved off. The boar was raised and ran, followed by the baying hounds rushing through the undergrowth. The horses broke into a gallop, hurtling with their riders along the narrow forest paths while far behind the following carriages drove noiselessly over the softer verges.

Teasingly, Madame d'Avancelles kept the Baron at her side, slowing down to walking pace in an interminably long, straight avenue along which four rows of oaks arched vaultlike towards each other. Trembling with both desire and frustration he listened with one ear to the young woman's light badinage, the other pricked for the hunting horns and the sound of the hounds growing fainter by the minute.

'So you love me no longer,' she was saying.

'How can you say such a thing?' he replied.

'You do seem to be more interested in the hunt than in me,' she went on. He groaned. 'You do remember your own orders don't you? To kill the beast myself.'

'Indeed I do,' she added with great seriousness. 'Before my very eyes.' At this he quivered impatiently in the saddle, spurred on his eager horse and finally lost his patience.

‘For God’s sake, Madame, not if we stay here a minute longer.’

‘That is how it has to be nevertheless,’ she cried laughingly. ‘Otherwise, you’re out of luck.’

Then she spoke to him gently, leaning her hand on his arm and, as if absentmindedly, stroking his horse’s mane. They had turned right on to a narrow path overhung with trees when, suddenly swerving to avoid one of their low branches, she leaned against him so closely that he felt her hair tickling his neck. He threw his arms around her and pressing his thick moustache to her forehead planted upon it a passionate kiss.

At first she was motionless, stunned by his ardour, then with a start she turned her head and, either by chance or design, her own delicate lips met his beneath their blond cascade. Then, out of either embarrassment or regret for the incident she spurred her horse on the flank and galloped swiftly away. For a long while they rode straight on together, without so much as exchanging a glance.

The hunt in full cry was close and the thickets seemed to shake, when suddenly, covered in blood and shaking off the hounds that clung to him, the boar went rushing past through the bushes. The Baron gave a triumphant laugh, cried ‘Let him who loves me follow me!’ and disappeared, swallowed up by the forest. When Madame d’Avancelles reached an open glade a few minutes later he was just getting up, covered with mud, his jacket torn and his hands bloody, while the animal lay full length on the ground with the Baron’s knife plunged up to the hilt in its shoulder.

The quarry was cut by torchlight on that mild and melancholy night. The moon gilded the red flames of the torches which filled the air with pine smoke. The dogs, yelping and snapping, devoured the stinking innards of the boar while the beaters and the gentlemen, standing in a circle around the spoil, blew their horns with all their might. The flourish of the hunting horns rose into the night air above the woods. Its echoes fell and were lost in the distant valleys beyond, alarming nervous stags, a barking fox and small grey rabbits at play on the edge of the glades. Terrified night birds fluttered above the crazed pack while the women, excited a little by the violence and vulnerability surrounding these events, leaned a little heavily on the men’s arms and, without waiting for the hounds to finish, drifted off with their partners down the many forest paths. Feeling languid after all the exhausting emotion of the day Madame d'Avancelles said to the Baron: 'Would you care for a turn in the park, my friend?'

He gave no answer, but trembling and unsteady with desire pulled her to him. Instantly they kissed and as they walked very slowly under the almost leafless trees through which moonlight filtered, their love, their desire and their need for each other was so intense that they almost sank down at the foot of a tree.

The horns had fallen silent and the exhausted hounds were sleeping by now in their kennels.

'Let us go back,' the young woman said. They returned.

Just as they reached the château and were about to enter, she murmured in a faint voice: 'I'm so tired, my friend, I'm going straight to bed.' As he opened his arms for one last kiss she fled, with the parting words: 'No . . . to sleep . . . but . . . let him who loves me follow me!'

An hour later when the whole sleeping château seemed dead to the world the Baron crept on tiptoe out of his room and scratched at the door of his friend. Receiving no reply he made to open it and found it unbolted.

She was leaning dreamily with her elbows on the window ledge. He threw himself at her knees which he showered with mad kisses through her nightdress. She said nothing, but ran her dainty fingers caressingly through the Baron's hair. Suddenly, as if coming to a momentous decision, she disengaged herself and whispered provocatively: 'Wait for me. I shall be back.' Her finger raised in shadow pointed to the far end of the room where loomed the vague white shape of her bed.

With wildly trembling hands he undressed quickly by feel and slipped between the cool sheets. He stretched out in bliss and almost forgot his friend as his weary body yielded to the linen's caress. Doubtless enjoying the strain on his patience, still she did not return. He closed his eyes in exquisitely pleasurable anticipation. His most cherished dream was about to come true. Little by little his limbs relaxed, as did his mind, where thoughts drifted, vague and indistinct. He succumbed at last to the power of great fatigue and finally fell asleep.

He slept the heavy, impenetrable sleep of the exhausted huntsman. He slept indeed till dawn. Then from a nearby tree through the still half- open window came the ringing cry of a cock. Startled awake, the Baron's eyes flew open. Finding himself, to his great surprise, in a strange bed and with a woman's body lying against his he remembered nothing and stammered as he struggled into consciousness: 'What? Where am I? What is it?'

At this, she, who had not slept a wink, looked at the puffy, red-eyed and dishevelled man at her side. She answered in the same dismissive tone she took with her husband. 'Nothing,' she said, 'it's a cock. Go back to sleep, Monsieur. It's nothing to do with you.'

Femme Fatale

The restaurant, Le Grillon, Mecca of the entire local boating community, was now slowly emptying. At the main entrance a large crowd of people were calling and shouting out to each other. With oars on their shoulders, strapping great fellows in white jerseys waved and gesticulated. Women in light spring frocks were stepping cautiously into the skiffs moored alongside and, having settled themselves in the stern of each, were smoothing out their dresses. The owner of the establishment, a tough- looking, red- bearded man of legendary strength, was helping the pretty young things aboard and with a practised hand was holding steady the gently bobbing craft.

The oarsmen then took their places, playing to the gallery and showing off broad chests and muscular arms in their sleeveless vests. The gallery in this case consisted of a crowd of suburbanites in their Sunday best, as well as a few workmen and some soldiers, all leaning on the parapet of the bridge and watching the scene below with keen interest. One by one the boats cast off from the landing stage. The oarsmen leaned forward and with a regular swing pulled back. At each stroke of the long, slightly curved blades the fast skiffs sped through the water making for La Grenouillère and growing progressively smaller till they disappeared beyond the railway bridge and into the distance.

Only one couple now remained. The slim, pale- faced young man, still a relatively beardless youth, had his arm around the waist of his girl, a skinny little grasshopper of a creature with brown hair. They stopped from time to time to gaze into each other's eyes.

The owner cried: 'Come on, Monsieur Paul, get a move on!'

The couple moved down closer. Of all the customers, Monsieur Paul, who paid regularly and in full, was the best liked and most respected. Many of the others ran up bills and frequently absconded without settling them. The son of a senator, he was also an excellent advertisement for the establishment. When some stranger asked,

‘And who’s that young chap over there with his eyes glued to the girl?’ one of the regulars would murmur, in a mysterious, important sort of way, ‘Oh, that’s Paul Baron, you know, the son of the senator.’ Then the stranger would inevitably have to comment, ‘Poor young devil, he’s got it bad.’ The proprietress of Le Grillon, a good businesswoman and wise in the ways of the world, called the young man and his companion ‘my two turtle doves’ and looked with tender indulgence on the love affair which brought such glamour to her establishment.

The couple ambled slowly down to where a skiff called the Madeleine was ready. Before embarking, however, they stopped to kiss once more, much to the amusement of the audience gathered on the bridge. Finally, Monsieur Paul took up the oars and set off after the others also making for La Grenouillère.

When they arrived it was getting on for three and here too the vast floating café was swarming with people. It is in effect one huge raft with a tarpaulin roof supported by wooden columns. It is connected to the charming island of Croissy by two narrow footbridges, one of which runs right through to the centre of the café itself. The other connects at the far end with a tiny islet where a single tree grows and which is nicknamed the Pot- de- Fleurs. From there it connects with the land again via a bathing pool.

Monsieur Paul moored his boat alongside the café, climbed up to its balustrade then, holding his girl’s two hands, guided her up also. They entered, found a place for two at the end of a table and sat down opposite each other.

Lining the towpath on the opposite side of the river was a long string of vehicles. Fiacles alternated with the flashy carriages of gay young men- about- town. The first were lumbering great hulks whose bodywork crushed the springs beneath and to which were harnessed broken- down old hacks with drooping necks. The other carriages were streamlined, with light suspension and fine, delicate wheels. These were drawn by horses with slender, straight, strong legs, heads held high and bits snowy with foam. Their solemn, liveried drivers, heads held stiffly inside huge collars, sat ramrod straight with their whips resting on their knees.

The river banks were crowded with people coming and going in different kinds of configurations: family parties, groups of friends, couples and individuals. They idly plucked at blades of grass, wandered down to the water's edge then climbed back up to the path. Having reached a certain spot they all congregated to wait for the ferryman whose heavy boat plied constantly back and forth, depositing passengers on the island.

The branch of the river, incidentally called the dead branch, which this floating bar dominates, seemed asleep, so slowly did the current move there. Flotillas of gigs, skiffs, canoes, pedaloes and river craft of all kinds streamed over the still water, mingling and intersecting, meeting and parting, running foul of each other, stopping, and with a sudden jerk of their oarsmen's arms and a tensing of their muscles, taking off again, darting this way and that like shoals of red and yellow fish.

More were arriving all the time; some from Chatou upstream, some from Bougival, downstream. Gales of contagious laughter carried from one boat to another and the air was full of insults, complaints, protestations and howls. The men in the boats exposed their muscular, tanned bodies to the glare of the sun and, like exotic water-plants, the women's parasols of red, green and yellow silk blossomed in the sterns of their craft.

The July sun blazed in the middle of the sky and the atmosphere was gay and carefree, while in the windless air not a leaf stirred in the poplars and willows lining the banks of the river. In the distance ahead, the conspicuous bulk of Mont-Valérien loomed, rearing the ramparts of its fortifications in the glare of the sun. On the right, the gentle slopes of Louveciennes, following the curve of the river, formed a semi-circle within which could be glimpsed, through the dense and shady greenery of their spacious lawns, the white-painted walls of weekend retreats.

On the land adjoining La Grenouillère strollers were sauntering under the gigantic trees which help to make this part of the island one of the most delightful parks imaginable. Busty women with peroxided hair and nipped-in waists could be seen, made up to the nines with blood red lips and black-kohled eyes. Tightly laced into their garish dresses they trailed in all their vulgar glory over the fresh green grass. They were accompanied by men whose fashion-plate accessories, light gloves, patent-leather boots, canes as slender as threads and absurd monocles made them look like complete idiots.

The part of the island facing La Grenouillère is narrow and between it and the opposite bank where another ferry plies, bringing people over from Croissy, the current is very strong and very fast. Here it swirls and roars, raging like a torrent in a myriad of eddies and foam. A detachment of pontoon- builders wearing the uniform of artillerymen was camped on the bank and some of the soldiers, side by side on a long beam of wood, sat watching the river below.

A noisy, rambunctious crowd filled the floating restaurant. The wooden tables, sticky and awash with streams of spilt drink, were covered with half- empty glasses and surrounded by half- tipsy customers. The crowd sang and shouted and brawled. Red- faced, belligerent men, their hats tipped at the backs of their heads and their eyes glassy with booze, prowled like animals spoiling for a fight. The women, cadging free drinks in the meantime, were seeking their prey for the night. The space between the tables was filled with the usual clientèle – noisy young boating blades and their female companions in short flannel skirts.

One of the men was banging away at the piano using his feet as well as his hands. Four couples were dancing a quadrille and watching them was a group of elegantly dressed young men whose respectable appearance was ruined by the hideous incongruity of the setting.

The place reeked of vice and corruption and the dregs of Parisian society in all its rottenness gathered there: cheats, con men and cheap hacks rubbed shoulders with under- age dandies, old roués and rogues, sleazy underworld types once notorious for things best forgotten mingled with other small- time crooks and speculators, dabblers in dubious ventures, frauds, pimps, and racketeers. Cheap sex, both male and female, was on offer in this tawdry meat- market of a place where petty rivalries were exploited, and quarrels picked over nothing in an atmosphere of fake gallantry where swords or pistols at dawn settled matters of highly questionable honour in the first place.

Every Sunday, out of sheer curiosity some of the people from the surrounding countryside would drop in. Every year would bring a fresh batch of young men, extremely young men at that, keen to make useful contacts. Casual cruisers would amble by and every so often a complete innocent would become embroiled.

La Grenouillère lived up to its name. There was a place for bathing between the tarpaulin- covered raft where drinks were served and the Pot- de- Fleurs. Women with the requisite curves came there to display their wares and their clients. Those less fortunate who required padding and corsetry to pass muster looked disdainfully on as their rivals cavorted and splashed about.

Awaiting their turn to plunge in and thronging around a small diving board were swimmers of every shape and size: some slim and straight as vine- poles, some round as pumpkins, some gnarled as olive- branches, some with bodies curved forward over pot- bellies, some whose vast stomachs threw the body backwards. Each was as ugly as the other as they leapt into the water and splashed the customers drinking at the café next door.

Despite the proximity of the river and the huge trees shading it, the place was suffocatingly hot. Mingling with the fumes of spilt drinks came the smell of flesh and the cheap perfume with which the skin of those trading in sex was drenched. Underlying all these smells was the slight but persistent aroma of talc, which wafted with varying intensity as if an unseen hand were waving some gigantic powder- puff over the entire scene.

All eyes were on the river where the comings and goings of the boats attracted everyone's attention. Girls sprawled in the stern opposite their strong- wisted menfolk looked with contempt at those still prowling about the island in search of a male to buy them dinner that night. Sometimes when a crew in full swing flashed past their friends ashore would shout and were joined by the crazy, yelling crowd inside the restaurant. At the bend of the river near Chatou boats were constantly coming into view. As they approached and grew more distinct, faces became recognizable and more shouts went up.

A boat with an awning and containing four women came slowly downstream towards them. The woman at the oars was small, lean and past her prime. She wore her hair pinned up inside an oilskin hat. Opposite her a big blonde dressed in a man's jacket was lying on her back at the bottom of the boat with a foot resting on the thwart on either side of the oarswoman. The blonde was smoking a cigarette and with each jerk of the oars her bosom and her belly quivered. At the very stern of the boat under the awning two beautiful, tall, slender girls, one blonde the other brunette, sat with their arms round each other's waists watching their two companions.

A shout went up from La Grenouillère: 'Aye- aye! Lesbos!' and suddenly a wild clamour broke out. In the terrifying scramble to see, glasses were knocked over and people started climbing on the tables. Everyone began to chant 'Lesbos! Lesbos! Lesbos!' The words merged into a vague howl before suddenly starting up again, rising into the air, filling the plain beyond, resounding in the dense foliage of the tall surrounding trees and echoing in the distance as if aimed at the sun itself.

During this ovation the oarswoman had calmly come to a halt. The big blonde lying at the bottom of the boat turned her head languorously and raised herself on her elbows. The two in the stern started laughing and waving to the crowd. At this there was even more of a hullabaloo and the place shook with the noise. The men raised their hats and the women waved their handkerchiefs. Every voice, deep and shrill alike, chanted in unison 'Lesbos!' This motley collection of undesirables seemed to be saluting a leader, as warships give a gun salute to their passing admiral. From the flotilla of boats also there was wild acclamation for the women's boat which now continued at its leisurely pace, to land a little further off.

Monsieur Paul's reaction was unlike that of the others. Pulling a key from his pocket he started using it as a whistle and blew hard. His girl, looking nervous now and even paler than before, pulled his arm to make him stop. This time when she looked into his eyes, it was with fury. But he was beside himself with male jealousy and a deep, instinctive ungovernable rage. His lips trembling with indignation he stammered: 'Shouldn't be allowed! They should be drowned like puppies with stones round their necks!'

Madeleine suddenly lost her temper. Her shrill voice became piercing as she lashed out at him: 'Mind your own business, will you! They've got a perfect right to do whatever they want. They're not doing any harm to anyone. Why don't you just shut up and leave them alone . . .'

He cut her short. 'This a matter for the police! If it was up to me I'd have them locked up in Saint- Lazare!'

She gave a start. 'Oh you would, would you?'

'Certainly I would. And in the meantime I forbid you to have anything to do with them. I absolutely forbid it, do you understand?'

She shrugged her shoulders at this and said in a suddenly calm voice: 'Listen, dear, I shall do exactly as I please. If you don't like it you know what you can do. Get the hell out. Now. I'm not your wife, so shut up.'

He remained silent and they stood staring each other out, breathing rapidly, their mouths set.

At the other end of the café the women were now making their entrance. The two dressed as men led, one gaunt and weatherbeaten, ageing and very mannish. The other, more than amply filling the white flannel outfit with her large bottom and her huge thighs encased in the wide trousers, waddled forward like a fat, bow- legged goose. The two friends followed and the whole boating community surged forward to shake hands.

The four had rented a riverside cottage and lived together there as two couples. Their vice was public, official and perfectly obvious to all. It was referred to quite naturally as something entirely normal. There were rumours about jealous scenes that took place there and about the various actresses and other famous women who frequented the little cottage near the water's edge. One neighbour, scandalized by the goings- on, alerted the police at one stage and an inspector accompanied by one of his men came to make enquiries. It was a delicate mission: there was nothing the women could be prosecuted for, least of all prostitution. The inspector was deeply puzzled and could not understand what these alleged misdemeanours could possibly be. He asked a whole lot of pointless questions, compiled a lengthy report and dismissed the charges out of hand. The joke spread as far as Saint- Germain.

Like queens they now walked slowly the entire length of La Grenouillère. They seemed happy to be in the limelight and delighted with the attention paid to them by all this riff- raff. Madeleine and her lover watched them, and as they approached the girl's face lit up.

When the leading couple reached their table Madeleine cried 'Pauline!' and the big girl, turning round, stopped, still arm in arm with her midshipwoman.

'Well good heavens! Madeleine! Darling! Come and join us for a bit. We must catch up!'

Paul tightened his grip on his girl's wrist but she said, 'You know what you can do, sweetheart, shove off.'

He kept quiet and let her be. Standing huddled together the women continued their animated conversation sotto voce. Pauline from time to time cast furtive glances at Paul and flashed him an evil, sardonic smile. Finally, unable to bear it a minute longer he suddenly stood up and trembling in every limb leapt towards her. He seized Madeleine by the shoulders and said: 'Come with me, do you hear? I said you were not to speak to these beastly women!'

Raising her voice, Pauline began to swear at him like a fish wife. People around started laughing. Others stood on tip-toe to get a better look. Under the hail of filthy abuse he was speechless. Feeling contaminated by it and fearing there might be worse to come he retreated, retraced his steps and went to lean on the balustrade overlooking the river, turning his back on the three triumphant women. He stayed there looking at the water and every so often brusquely wiping away the tears that sprang to his eyes.

The fact was that despite himself, without knowing why or how it had happened and very much against his better judgement, he had fallen hopelessly in love. He had fallen as if into some deep and muddy hole. By nature he was a delicate and sensitive soul. He had had ideals and dreamed of an exquisite and passionate affair. And now he had fallen for this little cricket of a creature. She was as stupid as every other woman and not even pretty to make up for it. Skinny and foul-tempered, she had taken possession of him entirely from tip to toe, body and soul. He had fallen under the omnipotent and mysterious spell of the female. He was overwhelmed by this colossal force of unknown origin, the demon in the flesh capable of hurling the most rational man in the world at the feet of a worthless harlot. There was no way he could explain its fatal and total power.

Behind his back now he could feel something evil brewing.

Their laughter pierced his heart. What should he do? He knew very well but had not the courage. He stared fixedly at the opposite bank where an angler was fishing, his line perfectly still. All of a sudden the man jerked out of the water a little silver fish which wriggled at the end of his line. Twisting and turning it this way and that he tried to extract his hook, but in vain. Losing patience he started pulling and, as he did so, tore out the entire bloody gullet of the fish with parts of its intestines attached. Paul shuddered, feeling himself equally torn apart. It seemed to him that the hook was like his own love and that if he were to tear it out he too would be gutted by a piece of curved wire hooked deep into his essential self at the end of a line held by Madeleine.

Feeling a hand on his shoulder he started and turned round. Madeleine was standing beside him. Neither spoke. She simply put her elbows on the balustrade beside him and leaned with him, staring out at the river. He tried to think of something to say but failed. He was incapable of analysing what was going on inside him. All he felt now was joy in the very nearness of her and a shameful cowardice on his own part. He wanted to forgive her, to let her do anything in the world she liked provided she never left him again.

After a while in a very gentle voice he asked, 'Would you like to leave now? We'll be better off in the boat.'

'All right my pet,' she said.

Awash with forgiveness and with tears still in his eyes he held her two hands tightly and helped her on board. Basking in the warmth of the afternoon they rowed upstream again past the willows and the grass-covered banks. When they reached Le Grillon once more it was not yet six, so, leaving their skiff, they set off on foot towards Bezons across the meadows and past the high poplars bordering the banks.

The wide hayfields waiting to be harvested were full of flowers. The sinking sun cast a mantle of russet light over all and in the gentle warmth of the day's end the fragrance of the grass wafted in on them mingling with the damp smells of the river and filling the air with easy languor and an atmosphere of blessed well-being.

He felt soft and unresistant, in communion with the calm splendour of the evening and with the vague, mysterious thrill of life itself. He felt in tune with the all- embracing poetry of the moment in which plants and all that surrounded him revealed themselves to his senses at this lovely restful and reflective time of day. He was sensitive to it all but she appeared totally unaffected. They were walking side by side when suddenly, bored by the silence, she began to sing. In a squeaky, unmodulated voice she sang one of the catchy tunes of the day which jarred violently with the deeply serene mood of the evening. He looked at her and felt between them an unbridgeable abyss. She was swinging her parasol through the grass with her head down, looking at her feet as she sang, drawing out the notes and adding the odd little trill.

So behind the smooth little brow which he so much adored there was nothing! Absolutely nothing! Its sole concern at the moment was this caterwauling. The thoughts which from time to time passed through it were as vapid as the music. She had no understanding of him. They were as separate and distinct as if they had never met. His kisses had touched her lips only and nothing deeper within.

When, however, she raised her eyes to meet his and smiled, he felt himself melt. Opening his arms out wide to her in a surge of renewed love he clasped her passionately to him. Since he was crushing her dress as he did so, she eventually broke free saying consolingly, 'Yes, yes, I love you, my pet, now that's enough.' In a mad rush of relief he grabbed her round the waist and started to run, dragging her with him. He kissed her on the cheeks, the temples and the neck, all the time dancing with joy. They threw themselves down at the edge of a thicket incandescent in the light of the setting sun. Even before catching their breath they came together. She could not understand the rapture he felt.

Walking back hand in hand they suddenly saw through the trees the river and on it the boat containing the four women. Big Pauline must have caught sight of them at the same time since she straightened up, blew kisses at Madeleine and shouted, 'See you tonight!'

'See you tonight!' shouted Madeleine in reply.

Paul felt his heart turn suddenly to ice. They returned for dinner and settling down in one of the arbours at the side of the water they began to eat in silence. When darkness fell, a candle enclosed in a globe was brought which shed a feeble, glimmering light on the two. All the time they could hear bursts of laughter coming from the large room on the first floor where the boat-trippers were. The couple were just about to order dessert when Paul, taking Madeleine's hand tenderly in his own, said: 'Darling, I feel so tired. Shall we make an early night of it?'

But she saw through his little ploy and shot him an enigmatic glance, one of those treacherous looks that so often appear in women's eyes. She thought for a second, then said, 'You're perfectly welcome to go to bed if you like but I've promised to go to the dance at La Grenouillère.'

Attempting to mask his misery he gave her a pitiful smile and answered in a coaxing, wheedling tone: 'Be a darling. Let's both stay here. Please.'

She shook her head without saying a word. He tried again. 'Please, sweetheart . . .'

She cut him off. 'You know what I said. If you're not happy, you know where the door is. Nobody's stopping you. But I've promised, and I'm going.'

He put his two elbows on the table, sank his head into his hands and sat brooding. The trippers were coming down the stairs, yelling as usual before setting off for the dance at La Grenouillère. Madeleine said to Paul: 'Make up your mind. If you're not coming I'll ask one of these gentlemen to take me there.'

Paul rose. 'Come on then,' he muttered before they too set off. The night was dark and the sky full of stars. Around them the air was still hot and the atmosphere heavy with seething, unseen activity. The warm breeze caressed their faces, its hot breath stifling their own and making them gasp slightly. The skiffs set off, each with a Venetian lantern in the prow. It was too dark to see anything of the boats themselves except for the little patches of colour in the night bobbing and dancing like frenzied glow-worms. Voices sounded from the shadows on all sides as the young couple's skiff glided gently along. Sometimes when another overtook they would catch the flash of the oarsman's white-jerseyed back illuminated by his lantern. As they came round the bend of the river, La Grenouillère came into sight in the distance.

In gala mood, the place was decorated with bunting and with strings, clusters and garlands of fairy lights. On the surface of the Seine large barges moved slowly about, representing domes, pyramids and all kinds of monuments picked out in variously coloured lights. Illuminated festoons hung down as far as the water itself, and here and there an enormous red or blue lantern suspended from an invisible rod hung like a huge star in the sky.

All these illuminations shone on the café and floodlit the great trees on the bank whose trunks stood out pale grey and whose leaves were milky green against the deep, pitch black of the fields and of the sky. A band consisting of five local players blared shrill, syncopated music across the water and, hearing it, Madeleine began to sing along. She wanted to go in right away. Paul would have preferred to make a tour of the island first but had to give in. The clientèle had thinned out a little by this time, still consisting mostly of boatmen with the odd sprinkling of middle- class couples and a few young men flanked by girls. The director and organizer of the can- can strutted in his faded black suit and cast round the audience the world- weary, professional eye of a cheap music- hall master of ceremonies. Paul was relieved to see that Big Pauline and her chums were nowhere to be seen.

People were dancing. Couples faced each other and capered about madly, kicking their legs as high as their partners' noses. The women, who appeared to have double- jointed legs and hips, leapt about in a frou- frou of lifted skirts, flashing their knickers and kicking their legs up over their heads with amazing agility. They wriggled their bellies and shook their bosoms, spreading about them the powerful smell of female flesh in sweat. The males squatted like toads in front of them making faces and obscene gestures. They cavorted and turned cartwheels, posturing meanwhile in hideous parody, as one strapping maid and two waiters served the audience drinks.

Since the café- boat was covered by a roof only and had no side walls to separate it from the outdoors, the whole rumbustious dance was performed against the backdrop of the peaceful night and a firmament dusted with stars. Suddenly Mont- Valérien in the distance lit up as if a fire had started behind it. The glow deepened and spread, describing a wide, luminous circle of pale light. Then a ruby- coloured shape appeared, grew large, and glowed like red-hot metal. The circle widened further still and seemed to be emerging from the earth itself, as the moon, breaking free of the horizon, sailed gently upwards into space. As it rose, its crimson glow dimmed and turned to an increasingly light then bright yellow. As the planet climbed higher it grew smaller and smaller still in the distance.

Paul, lost in long contemplation of this sight, had become oblivious of his girl. When he turned round she had disappeared from view. He looked for her in vain. Having searched anxiously and systematically up and down the rows of tables he started asking people. No one had seen her. He then began to wander about wretchedly until one of the waiters said: 'If you're looking for Madame Madeleine, she went off a little while ago with Madame Pauline.'

Simultaneously, he caught sight of the midshipwoman and the two beautiful girls sitting at the opposite end of the café, arms round each other's waists, watching him and whispering. Realizing what had happened, he ran off like a madman towards the island. Chasing first in the direction of Chatou, he stopped at the edge of the plain, turned and retraced his steps. He began to search the dense coppices, wandering about aimlessly and stopping every so often to listen. All he could hear around him was the short, metallic croak of frogs. Towards Bougival an unfamiliar bird sang a song which reached him faintly from a distance. Over the broad fields the moon shed a soft, filmy light. It filtered through the foliage, silvering the barks of the poplars and casting a shower of brilliant moonbeams on the shimmering tops of the tallest trees. Despite himself Paul was enchanted by the intoxicating loveliness of the night. It penetrated the terrible anguish he was feeling and stirred in his heart a fierce sense of irony. He longed with all his gentle and idealistic soul for a faithful woman to worship – someone in whose arms he could express all his love and tenderness as well as his passion.

Choked by racking sobs, he had to stop in his tracks. Having recovered a little he went on, only to feel a sudden stab in his heart. There, behind that bush . . . a pair of lovers! He ran forward and saw their silhouettes united in a seemingly endless kiss before they quickly ran off at his approach. He dared not call out, knowing full well that his own girl would not respond. He was desperately afraid now of coming upon them all of a sudden. The music of the quadrilles with its piercing solo cornets, the mock gaiety of the flute and the scraping of the fiddles pulled at his own heartstrings and deepened the pain he continued to feel.

Suddenly it occurred to him that she might have gone back in! Yes, that was it! She must have returned. He had lost all sense of proportion, he was stupid, he had been carried away by all the silly suspicions and fears that always haunted him. In one of those periods of strange calm which occur during periods of the blackest despair he turned and began to make for the café again.

He took in the whole room at a single glance. She was not there. He checked all the tables, and once again came face to face with the three women. He must have looked the picture of dejection for the three burst out laughing. Rushing out again, he ran back to the island. He threw himself into the coppices and stopped to listen once more. It was some time before he could hear anything save the roaring in his own ears. Finally, however, he thought he could hear some way ahead a shrill little laugh he knew only too well. Creeping forward he fell to his knees and crawled on, parting the branches cautiously as he went. His heart was beating so wildly in his chest that he could hardly breathe. Two voices were murmuring. He could not make out what they were saying. Then they fell silent again.

He had a sudden furious desire to run away, not to see, not to know and to keep on running to escape from the raging passion with which he was consumed. He would return to Chatou, catch a train and never come back. He would never see her again. Just as suddenly her face appeared in his mind's eye. He saw her as she was waking up next to him in their warm bed. He saw her snuggle up to him and throw her arms round his neck. Her hair was loose and a little tangled over her brow. Her eyes were still closed and her lips parted, waiting for the first kiss of the day. The thought of this morning's embrace filled him with unbearable regret and frantic desire.

They were talking again. He approached bent double. Then a cry rose from under the branches close to him. That cry! It was one of those he had come to know from their most tender, their most passionate love-making. He crept even closer, drawn irresistibly, blindly, despite himself . . . and then he saw them.

Oh! If only the other person had been a man! But this! He was transfixed by the loathsome sight before him. He remained there overwhelmed by shock. It was as though he had just stumbled upon the mutilated body of a loved one. It was a crime against nature, a monstrous and wicked desecration. Suddenly flashing into his mind's eye this time came the image of the little fish whose entrails he had earlier seen ripped out. Madeleine was moaning 'Pauline', exactly as she used to moan 'Paul' to him. Hearing it, he felt such pain that he turned and fled. He hurtled into one tree and ricocheted into another, fell over a root, picked himself up and ran again until suddenly he found himself at the edge of the river. The raging torrent made whirls and eddies on which the moonbeams now played. On the opposite side the bank loomed over the water like a cliff, leaving a wide band of black at its foot from which the sound of the swirling water rose in the darkness. Clearly visible on the other side were the weekend homes at Croissy.

Paul saw all this as if in a dream or as something remembered. He was no longer thinking. He understood nothing now. Everything including his own existence seemed vague, distant, forgotten and finished. There was the river. Did he know what he was doing? Did he want to die? He had lost his mind. Nevertheless he turned round to face the island where she was. Into the night in which the faint but persistent beat of the dance- band still throbbed back and forth, he shouted, 'Madeleine!'

His heart- rending call pierced the great silence of the sky and echoed, lost in the distance. Then with a furious animal- like leap he plunged into the river. The water splashed then closed over the spot setting up a series of ever- widening circles which rippled in the moonlight as far as the opposite bank. The two women had heard. Madeleine got up and said, 'That's Paul.' A suspicion arose suddenly in her mind. 'He's drowned himself,' she said and rushed towards the bank where Pauline caught up with her.

A heavy punt with two men in it was circling over and over around the same spot. One of the men rowed while the other was plunging a long pole into the water evidently looking for something. Pauline shouted: 'What's happened? What are you doing?'

A stranger's voice cried: 'A man's just drowned himself.'

With haggard faces the two women huddled together and watched the boat's manoeuvres. The music from La Grenouillère pounding in the distance provided a grim counterpoint to the movements of the solemn fishermen. The river, now containing a corpse in its depths, continued to swirl in the moonlight. The search was prolonged and Madeleine, waiting in horrible suspense, shivered. Finally, after a good half- hour, one of the men announced: 'I've got him!'

Very gradually he pulled in the boathook. A large mass appeared at the surface of the water. The other boatman left his oars and between the two, each heaving with all his strength, they managed to haul the inert body and bring it tumbling into the boat. They soon reached the bank and found an open, flat space in the moonlight. As they landed, the women approached.

As soon as she saw him Madeleine recoiled in horror. In the light of the moon's rays he looked green already and his mouth, his eyes, his nose and his clothes were full of the river's slime. The stiff fingers of his clenched fist looked hideous. Black, liquid silt covered his entire body. The face looked swollen and from his hair now plastered down with ooze a stream of filthy water ran. The two men examined him.

'You know him?' asked one.

The other, the Croissy ferryman, hesitated.

'Seems to me I know the face . . .,' he said, 'but it's difficult to tell seeing him like this . . .'

Then suddenly: 'Oh! I know! It's Monsieur Paul!'

'Who's Monsieur Paul?' his friend asked.

The first went on: 'You know! Monsieur Paul Baron. Son of that senator. The kid who was so hooked on that girl, you remember?'

The other added philosophically: 'No more girls for him now, eh? Poor sod. And with all that money too!'

Madeleine, having collapsed on the ground, was sobbing. Pauline approached the body and said, 'I suppose he really is dead . . there's no chance he might . . . ?'

The men shrugged their shoulders.

‘After that length of time no question.’

Then one of them asked: ‘Was he staying at Le Grillon?’

‘Yes,’ said the other. ‘We’d better take him back there. Handsome tip, mate.’ Re-embarking they set off, moving slowly against the rapid current. Long after they had disappeared from the two women’s sight the regular sound of their oars could still be heard.

Pauline took poor, weeping Madeleine in her arms, kissed and rocked her for a long time and then said: ‘Now look. As long as you know it’s not your fault. You can’t stop men doing stupid things. It was his decision so it’s just too bad, that’s all.’

Then lifting her to her feet, she added, ‘Come on darling! Come and sleep at the house. You can’t go back to Le Grillon tonight.’ She kissed her again. ‘Come on, you’ll feel better with us,’ she said.

Madeleine got up, still sobbing, but less violently. She leaned her head on Pauline’s shoulder. Seeming to find there a safer, warmer refuge and a closer, more intimate affection, she walked slowly away from the scene.

Hautot & Son

The house, half farm and half manor, was one of those combinations often found in the country of a property once vaguely seigneurial and now owned by farmers themselves rich in land. In front of it the dogs tied to the farmyard apple trees were barking and yelping as the keeper and some small boys arrived carrying gamebags.

It was the opening day of the season and in the vast kitchen which served as dining room Hautot senior, Hautot junior, Monsieur Bermont the tax- collector and Monsieur Mondaru the lawyer were having a drink and a bite to eat before setting off on the day's shoot. Hautot senior, very proud of his property, was telling his guests ahead of time what excellent game they would find on his land. He was a big- boned, ruddy- faced Norman, the powerfully built sort of man who can carry a whole barrel of apples on his shoulders. Somewhat authoritarian in manner, he was wealthy, respected and highly influential. He had sent his son César to school up to the fourth form so that he should have some education, then removed him lest he become so much of a gentleman that he no longer cared about his land.

César Hautot was nearly as tall as his father, but leaner. He was an easy- going, happy- go- lucky young man, a good son to his father whom he greatly admired and to whose every wish and opinion he was happy to defer.

Monsieur Bermont, the tax- collector, was a stout little man on whose red cheeks a maze of violet- coloured veins looked like a network of tortuous rivers and tributaries as might be seen on maps in an atlas. He asked, 'And hare? Will there be . . . hare?'

Hautot senior replied, 'As much as you like! Specially round PuySATIER.'

'Where shall we start?' enquired the lawyer, a portly, well- fed man trussed up now in a new shooting jacket bought the previous week in Rouen.

‘Down at the bottom, I think. We’ll get the partridge out on the plain and then put them up from there.’

With this, Hautot senior rose. Following suit they all stood up and stamped their feet to bring warmth and suppleness to the leather of their newly- donned and tight- fitting boots. They collected the guns propped up in various corners of the room, examined the locks, then left the house. Outside, the dogs, still leashed, were now jumping up on their hind legs, yelping shrilly and pawing the air.

They set off towards the lower grounds and a small valley which was no more than a dip of poor- quality land left purposely uncultivated. It was criss- crossed with gullies and covered with fern – an excellent place for game. The guns spread out, with Hautot senior on the far right, Hautot junior on the far left and the two guests in the middle. The keeper and two gamebag carriers followed. Nervously fingering their triggers and with their hearts beating fast they stopped and stood waiting in solemn silence for the first shot of the season to ring out.

There it was! Hautot senior had fired. They saw one partridge fall away from the headlong flight of birds and come down in a gully covered with thick brush. Highly excited, Hautot leapt up and ran off, tearing up everything in his way and finally disappearing into the undergrowth to pick up his quarry. Almost immediately a second shot rang out.

‘The lucky devil!’ cried old Bermont. ‘He’s picked off a hare while he’s at it!’

They all waited, eyes fixed on the dense, impenetrable under growth. Cupping his hands round his mouth, the lawyer yelled: ‘Have you got them?’

Since no answer came from Hautot senior, César, turning to the keeper, said: ‘Go and give him a hand, Joseph, will you? We must spread out in line. We’ll wait for you.’

Joseph, a great gnarled tree- trunk of a man, set off calmly down towards the gully. Like a fox he carefully reconnoitred the easiest way through the brush. Having found it and disappeared, he cried out suddenly: ‘Come quick! Quick! There’s been an accident!’

Each man tore through the bushes towards the scene. When they got there they saw Hautot lying on his side, unconscious, clasp- ing his stomach from which long streams of blood were flowing inside his bullet- torn jacket and into the grass. His fallen partridge within reach, Hautot must have dropped the gun to pick it up and in so doing triggered a second shot which shattered his own entrails. They dragged him from the ditch and on removing some of his clothing found a terrible wound now spilling out his intestines. They ligatured him as best they could and carried him home where the doctor they had sent for was waiting, along with a priest.

When the doctor saw him he shook his head gravely, and turning to Hautot's son who was sobbing in a chair, said, 'My poor boy, I'm afraid it doesn't look at all good.'

But when a dressing had been applied, the injured man moved his fingers, opened his mouth, then a pair of haggard eyes, and cast a few anxious glances around him. He seemed to be searching his mind for something and then, when the whole sequence of events came flooding back, murmured: 'Christ almighty! I've had it now.'

The doctor took his hand.

'No! Certainly not! All you need is a few days' rest and you'll be absolutely fine.'

Hautot went on: 'No, I know the score. Shattered stomach. I've had it.'

Then suddenly: 'I want to talk to my son if I've got time.'

Young Hautot whimpered like a little boy: 'Papa! Papa! Oh, poor Papa!'

In a firmer tone his father said: 'Listen, stop crying. Doesn't help. I've got to talk to you. Come close, it'll only take a minute. Then I'll feel much better. You lot, can we have a minute or two if you don't mind?'

The others went out of the room, leaving father and son together. As soon as they were alone the father spoke: 'Listen, my boy, you're twenty- four, I can tell you everything now. Not that there's much to tell. Anyway you know when your mother died seven years ago I was . . . well I'm forty- five now. I was married at nineteen by the way, right?'

'Yes I know.'

'So when she died she left me a widower at thirty- seven. Can you imagine? Chap like me. Can't be a permanent widower at thirty- seven, can you my boy?'

'No father, of course not.'

The father's face was pale and contorted with pain.

'God, I'm in agony here. Anyway, to continue. A chap can't live entirely on his own yet I couldn't remarry. I'd promised your mum. So . . . are you following?'

'Yes father.'

'So. I took up with this girl in Rouen. Rue de l'Éperlan, number 18, third floor, second door. You are taking all this in I hope? This girl, she's been so good to me, you know. I couldn't have wished for a sweeter little wife. Loving, devoted, you get the picture my boy?'

'Yes father.'

'Well, anyway, if I should pop off I reckon I owe her. A lot. Enough to set her up. You understand?'

'Yes, father.'

'When I say she's a good kid, I mean really good. If it hadn't been for you, and out of respect for your mother's memory, if it hadn't been for this house, and us having lived here, the three of us, I'd have brought her home here and married her, no question. Listen, listen, my boy. I could have made a will but I didn't. Didn't want to. Never put things down in writing. Not that sort of thing anyway. Upsets the family. Makes everything too complicated. Everybody at each other's throats. Who needs legal documents? Don't ever use them. That's how I've made my money, such as it is. Understand, my boy?'

'Yes, father.'

'Listen again, carefully. So I haven't made a will. Didn't need to. Because I know you. You've got a good heart, you're not . . . careful . . . tight- fisted, you know what I mean? So I thought when the end came I'd just tell you how things stood and I'd ask you not to forget the girl: Caroline Donet, rue de l'Éperlan, number 18, third floor, second door, don't forget. Listen again. Go straight there when I've gone . . . and make sure she's seen all right by me. You'll have plenty. You can do it. I'm leaving you enough. Listen. She won't be there most of the week, she works for Madame Moreau, rue Beauvoisine. But go on Thursday. That's when she expects me. That's my day, has been for six years now. Oh the poor girl! She's going to be so upset! I'm telling you all this because I know you, my boy. Not the sort of thing you tell everybody. Not the lawyer and not the curé. It happens, everybody knows that, but you don't discuss it. Not unless you have to. So, no strangers in on it. Just the family that's all. You understand?'

'Yes father.'

'Promise?'

'Yes father.'

'Swear?'

'Yes, father.'

'I beg of you, my boy, please. Please don't forget. You mustn't.'

'I won't father.'

'Go in person. You're in charge of everything.'

'Yes, father.'

'Then you'll see what she says. I can't talk any more. Swear to me.'

'Yes father.'

'That's good, my boy. Come and give me a kiss goodbye. I'm nearly finished. This is it. Tell them they can come in.'

Moaning, the younger Hautot kissed his father and, obedient as always, opened the door. The priest appeared wearing a white surplice and carrying the holy oils. But the dying man had closed his eyes and refused to open them again. He refused to reply and refused to give any sign that he knew what was going on.

He had talked enough and could not say another word. Besides, he felt relieved now. He could die in peace. What need was there for him to confess to this delegate of God since he had already confessed to his own son who really was family?

The last rites were administered, and he was given communion in the midst of his kneeling friends and servants with never a movement of his face to indicate that he was still alive. He died at around midnight after four hours of spasms indicative of appalling pain.

The season had opened on the Sunday and Hautot was buried the following Tuesday. Having returned from taking his father to the cemetery, César Hautot spent the rest of the day in tears. He hardly slept that night and was so miserable the next day that he wondered how he could carry on living. Nevertheless he spent the whole day thinking that, if his father's last wish was to be carried out, he should go to Rouen the following day and see this Caroline Donet at the rue de l'Éperlan, number 18, third floor, second door. He had repeated this like a mantra so many times so as not to forget it, that now he could think of little else. Both his mind and his ear were hypnotized by the phrase. Accordingly, the next morning around eight o'clock, having ordered Graindorge harnessed to the tilbury, he set off at a brisk pace behind the heavy Norman horse on the main road from Ainville to Rouen. He was wearing his black frock- coat, a tall silk topper and his trousers with the straps under the soles. In the circumstances he decided not to wear over his handsome suit the loose blue smock which, flapping in the wind, protected his better clothes against any dust or spots and which he normally shed as soon as he jumped down on arriving at his destination.

He got to Rouen just as ten o'clock was striking and went as usual to the Hôtel des Bons- Enfants, rue des Trois Mares. There he was embraced by the proprietor, the proprietor's wife and their five sons, all of whom had heard the sad news. After that he had to tell them exactly how the accident had happened and this set him off crying again. He turned down their offers of comfort, all the more insistent now that he was a man of substance, and even refused their invitation to dinner, which really offended them.

Having dusted off his hat, brushed down his frock- coat and given his boots a quick wipe, he set out to find the rue de l'Éperlan. He dared not ask for directions lest he be recognized and suspicions raised. Finally drawing a complete blank, he spotted a priest and counting on the professional discretion of a clergyman found out from him the way to the address. It was very close. In the next street on the right in fact.

He began to feel a little hesitant. Until this moment he had been blindly following his dead father's instructions. Now he felt a confusing mixture of sorrow and shame as he thought of himself, a son, soon to be face to face with the woman who had been his father's mistress. All the old moral strictures lying buried in his unconscious under layer after layer of conventional, received wisdom handed down from generation to generation, everything he had learned from his catechism years and since about loose women and the instinctive mistrust men have of them even if they marry one – all these ignorant, peasant values clamoured inside him, held him back and brought a blush of shame to his cheeks.

Nevertheless, he thought, I promised my father. Mustn't let him down. The door marked 18 was ajar so he pushed it open and saw beyond it a dark stairway which he climbed as far as the third floor. There he saw first one door, then a second with a bell- pull which he now tugged. The tinkle which he heard echo into the room beyond made his heart sink. The door was opened and he found himself standing opposite a very well- dressed, fresh- faced brunette who was staring at him in astonishment.

He had no idea what to say and she, unaware of anything untoward and expecting his father any minute, did not invite him in. They looked at each other for a full thirty seconds, at the end of which she said: 'Can I help you, monsieur?'

He murmured, 'I'm Hautot, the son.'

She started, turned pale and stammered as if she had known him all her life: 'Oh! Monsieur César?'

'Yes.'

'What . . . what's . . . ?'

'I have a message for you from my father.'

She said, 'Oh my God!' and took a step backwards to let him in. He then saw a little boy playing with a cat on the floor in front of a stove where several dishes were cooking.

'Sit down,' she said.

He sat down.

‘Well?’ she asked.

He was struck dumb, his eyes on the table in the middle of the room laid for three including a child. He looked at the chair with its back to the fire, the plate, the napkin, the glasses, one bottle of red wine, already drunk from, and one unopened bottle of white. That must be his father’s usual place with his back to the fire! He was still expected by her! That would have been his father’s bread with all the crust removed because of his poor teeth. Raising his eyes, he saw hanging on the wall a large photograph of his father taken at the Paris Exhibition, the duplicate of one which hung over the bed in the master bedroom at Ainville.

The young woman went on: ‘So? Monsieur César?’

He looked at her. She was pale with dread and her hands were trembling fearfully as she waited for him to speak. Eventually he gathered up enough courage to do so. ‘Well Mam’zelle, I’m afraid Papa died on Sunday on the opening day of the shooting season.’

She was shocked literally rigid. After a few moments’ silence she said in a barely audible voice, ‘Oh no! He can’t have!’

Then suddenly her eyes filled with tears. She raised her hands to cover her face and began to sob. The little boy, seeing his mother burst into tears and deducing that this stranger was the cause, hurled himself on César, grabbed him by the trouser- leg with one hand and started smacking him on the thigh as hard as he could with the other. César, frantic with grief himself, his own eyes still swollen with crying, was moved at the sight of this woman weeping for his father and the little boy defending the mother. He felt almost overwhelmed with emotion and, in order to keep from breaking down himself, started to speak: ‘Yes,’ he said, ‘the tragedy occurred on Sunday morning at eight o’clock . . .’

He went on, assuming she was hearing it all and forgetting no detail, omitting not the smallest incident in a painstaking, plodding peasant way. The little boy continued to smack him and had now begun to kick him on the ankles. When Hautot junior came to the part where Hautot senior had talked about her, the young woman, hearing her own name, uncovered her face and asked: ‘I’m sorry. Could you start again please? I wasn’t taking it in . . . I really want to know what happened . . .’

He began again, using exactly the same words: 'The tragedy occurred on Sunday morning at eight o'clock . . .'

Again he told her everything, stopping every now and then to punctuate the story with little asides of his own. She listened attentively. With the sensitive perception of a woman, she seized every implication of each twist and turn of events, shuddering with horror and saying 'Oh my God' from time to time. The little boy, seeing his mother had calmed down, stopped hitting César and was now holding her hand, listening too as if he understood every word. When he came to the end Hautot junior said: 'And now what we must do is make sure his wishes are carried out. I'm in a comfortable position. He's left me property so . . . I wouldn't want you to feel in any need . . .'

She broke in abruptly: 'Oh, please, please, Monsieur César! Not today! My heart's breaking! Another time, another day, perhaps. But not today. And if I were to accept, I do want you to know it would not be for me, oh no, no, no, I swear I wouldn't want anything for myself but for the little one. We'll put any money in his name.'

César was aghast. Then the penny dropped. He stammered, 'You mean . . . he's his?'

'Oh yes,' she said.

Hautot junior looked at his half-brother with a mixture of emotions, all deeply painful. After a long silence, for she had begun to weep again, César was at a complete loss as to what to do. He said: 'Well then, Mam'zelle Donet, I'd better be going. When would you like us to meet and talk about arrangements?'

She cried out: 'Oh don't go! Please! Please don't leave me and Émile on our own. I'd die of grief. I've got nobody now except my little boy. Oh it's awful, Monsieur César, it's terrible! Please, please sit down! Talk to me some more. Tell me about what he used to do when he was away from here, when he was back home with you.'

And so César, obedient as always, sat down again. She drew her chair up close to his in front of the stove where the food was still cooking. She put Émile on her lap and asked César hundreds of little intimate questions about his father from which he could see or rather feel instinctively that this poor young woman had loved Hautot with all her heart.

The conversation naturally kept returning to the accident and he told her all over again what had happened, in the same detail. When he said, 'The hole in his stomach was so big you could have put both hands in it', she gave a sort of cry and began sobbing yet again. This time César too broke down with her and started to weep. Softened by his own tears he leaned down towards Émile whose forehead was within reach and kissed it. His mother struggled to get her breath back.

'Poor little mite,' she said, 'he's fatherless now.'

'Me too,' said César.

At this, each stopped talking. Suddenly the young woman became the practical housewife who thinks of everything and everyone.

'I don't suppose you've eaten a thing all morning, have you, Monsieur César?'

'No, Mam'zelle.'

'Oh, you must be hungry! Will you have something to eat?'

'No thank you,' he said, 'I'm not hungry. Too upset.'

'Oh, but you've got to eat in spite of everything, you'll grant me that. Do stay a bit longer. I don't know what I'll do when you leave.'

After a few attempts at resistance, he sat down opposite her, and in the chair with its back to the fire he settled down to a dish of the tripe that had been sizzling in the oven, and to a glass of red wine. Several times he wiped the mouth of the little boy who had dribbled sauce all over his chin. As he rose to leave, he said: 'When would you like me to come back and talk business, Mam'zelle Donet?'

'If it's all the same to you, Monsieur César, next Thursday. It'll save me taking time off. I've always got Thursday off anyway.'

'That's fine with me. Next Thursday.'

'You'll have lunch, won't you?'

'Oh, I don't know . . . really.'

‘It’s much easier to talk over a meal. Saves time too.’

‘All right then. Let’s say twelve o’clock.’

After giving little Émile another kiss and shaking Mademoiselle Donet’s hand he left.

The week passed very slowly for César Hautot. He had never been on his own before and solitude seemed unbearable to him. Until then, he had shadowed his father all his life, following him into the fields, seeing that his orders were carried out, then, after a little while apart, he would see him again at dinner. In the evenings they would sit opposite each other smoking their pipes and talking about horses, cows and sheep. Their morning handshake was an expression of deep family attachment.

And now César was alone. He wandered about in the ploughed fields of autumn, all the time expecting to see the tall silhouette of his father waving to him from some field or other. To kill time he would drop in on neighbours, describe the accident to anyone who had not heard what had happened, and retell the story to those who had. Sometimes when he had run out of things that needed thinking about or doing he would sit down at the side of a cart track and wonder how much longer he could carry on.

He thought often of Mademoiselle Donet. He had liked her very much. He thought she was a very nice person indeed, a good, kind girl as his father had said. Yes, she was a lovely girl. A really lovely girl. He was determined to do her proud and to give her 2,000 francs in interest on capital to be settled on the child. He was rather pleased that he had to go and see her the following Thursday to sort things out with her. The thought of this brother, this new little fellow was a bit of a worry. It bothered him a little, yet at the same time it gave him a warm sort of feeling. There was a bit of kin for him there. The kid born on the other side of the blanket would never be called Hautot, but he was a bit of family with no pressure attached, a bit of his father after all.

When he found himself once more on the way to Rouen on Thursday morning, with these and similar thoughts in his head and the sound of Graindorge’s rhythmical clip- clop, his heart was lighter and his mind calmer than at any time since the accident. As he entered Mademoiselle Donet's apartment he saw that everything was laid exactly as it had been the previous Thursday with one single exception – the crust of the bread at his place had not been removed.

He shook hands with the young woman, kissed Émile on both cheeks and sat down feeling both very much at home and extremely emotional. Mademoiselle Donet seemed slightly thinner and slightly paler. She must have cried her little heart out. This time she was a bit awkward in her manner towards him as if she had realized something she had been unable to absorb on that first occasion when she was still taking in the enormity of what had happened. She was extremely attentive to his needs and humble in her approach, as if trying to pay back in devotion and service towards him some of the generosity he was showing her. They took a long time over lunch and discussed the business which had brought him there. She did not want so much money. It was too much, far too much. She earned enough to keep herself; all she wanted was that Émile might have something to look forward to when he reached his majority. César, however, stuck to his guns and even added a present for herself as a token of mourning. As he finished his coffee, she asked, 'Do you smoke?'

'Yes, I've got my pipe here . . .,' he began.

He patted his pockets. Damnation. He had left it at home! He was just about to bemoan the fact when she produced one belonging to his father which she had kept tucked away in a cupboard. He took it from her and recognized it. Sniffing it and with emotion in his voice, declaring it to be one of the best, he filled and lit it. Then he put Émile on his knee and played ride-a-cock-horse with him while she cleared the table, stacking the dirty dishes in the sideboard to wash later after he had gone.

At about three, when he rose regretfully, he hated the idea of leaving.

'Well, Mamz'elle Donet,' he said, 'I'll wish you a very good afternoon. I'm delighted to have made your acquaintance like this.'

She remained standing in front of him, blushing and near to tears. As she looked at him she thought of his father.

'Are we not to see each other again then?' she asked.

He replied simply: 'We can, Mam'zelle, if that's what you'd like.'

'It most certainly is, Monsieur César. Shall we say next Thursday, if that's convenient for you?'

'Indeed it is, Mam'zelle Donet.'

'You'll come for lunch, of course?'

'Well, if you're offering I wouldn't say no.'

'Very well, Monsieur César. Thursday next it is, at twelve o'clock, like today.'

'Twelve o'clock on Thursday then, Mam'zelle Donet!'

Laid to Rest

Five friends had been dining together. They were all rich, middle- aged men of the world, two of them bachelors, three married men. These monthly meetings of theirs were some of the happiest evenings of their lives. They had all known each other since their youth, remained close friends, enjoyed one another's company and often stayed talking till two o'clock in the morning. The conversation was about anything and everything that might interest or amuse a Parisian and, as in most drawing rooms, it was a kind of verbal version of the news in the morning papers.

One of the most footloose and fancy- free among them was Joseph de Bardon, a bachelor who exploited to the full all the attractions Paris has to offer. Though not exactly decadent or debauched in his habits, he managed to satisfy all the natural curiosity of a fun- loving man in his late thirties. A man of the world in the best and widest sense of the word, he was witty rather than profound, knowledgeable rather than wise and possessed a quick rather than a deep understanding of human nature. His experiences and encounters provided him with a fund of anecdotes, some edifying, some frankly hilarious. He had a reputation in society as a bright fellow with a good sense of humour – everyone's favourite after- dinner speaker whose tales were always the ones most looked forward to. He never needed any urging to begin, as he did on this occasion.

Certain creatures at certain times and places look absolutely in their element, let's say a goldfish in its bowl, a nun in church, or what have you. Sitting there smoking a cigar, with his elbows on the table, a half- filled glass of liqueur brandy to hand and relaxing in a warm haze of coffee and tobacco, he looked like a man in his ideal milieu. Between a couple of puffs he spoke.

'The funniest thing happened to me not so long ago . . .'

A near- instantaneous chorus replied, 'Go on, do!'

And he was off.

‘Thank you, I shall. You know I get around Paris a fair amount. As other people window- shop, I watch what’s going on. I watch the world and his brother pass by, I watch what’s going on around me. Well, some time towards the middle of last September, I left the house one afternoon with no clear idea of where I was going. You know how you always have a vague yen to go and see some pretty woman or other . . . you riffle through your little black book, you do a few mental comparisons, you weigh up the possible delights and you decide more or less on the spur of the moment. But when the sun’s shining and it’s warm outside you don’t always want to be cooped up indoors. On this particular day, it was warm and sunny and I lit a cigar before starting to stroll along the outer boulevard. As I was sauntering along I decided to make for the cemetery in Montmartre and have a little wander about there. I like cemeteries, you know. They sadden and they soothe me and I find I need that from time to time. And of course some of one’s chums are there, people nobody goes to see any more. I drop by every so often still. And as it happens, an old flame of mine is buried in Montmatre Cemetery, a lovely little lady I was very keen on at one point in my life, very attached to. So although it’s painful, I find it does me good. I mean all kinds of memories come flooding back while I’m there, letting my thoughts drift beside her grave. It’s all over for her of course . . .

‘The other reason I like cemeteries is because they’re like cities in themselves, densely populated at that. Just think how many generations of Parisians are packed in there for ever; so many people stuck in their caves, their little holes just covered with a stone or marked with a cross, while the living take up so much room and make such a stupid racket.

‘Then of course you’ve got all the monuments, some of them much more interesting than in a museum. Though I wouldn’t put them in the same league, Cavaignac’s grave reminded me so much of that masterpiece by Jean Goujon, the statue of Louis de Brézé in the underground chapel at Rouen cathedral. That’s actually the root of all so- called modern, realist art, you know. That statue of the dead Louis de Brézé is more convincing, more terrible and more suggestive of inanimate flesh still convulsed in the death- agony than any of the tortured corpses you see sculpted these days on people's tombs.

'But in Montmartre Cemetery you can still admire the impressive monument to Baudin, the one to Gautier, and that to Murger, on which incidentally, only the other day I spotted one poor solitary wreath of helichrysums. I wonder who put that there. Perhaps the last of the grisettes, now a very old woman and possibly one of the local concierges. It's a pretty little statue by Millet, suffering badly from neglect and all the accumulated dirt of the years. Oh for the joys of youth, eh, Murger?

'Anyway there I was, stepping into Montmartre Cemetery, suddenly filled with sadness of a not entirely disagreeable kind, the sort that makes a healthy fellow think "Not the most cheerful of spots, but thank God I'm not stuck in here just yet." The feeling of autumn, the warm dampness of dead leaves in pale, weak sunshine heightened and romanticized the sense of solitude and finality surrounding this place of the dead.

'I wandered slowly along the streets of graves where neighbours no longer call, no longer sleep together and never hear the news. Then I started reading the epitaphs. I tell you gentlemen, they are absolutely killing. Not even Labiche or Meilhac can give me more of a laugh than the language of the headstone. When you read what the nearest and dearest have put on the marble slabs and crosses, pouring out their grief and their best wishes for the happiness of the departed in the next world, and their hopes – the liars! – for a speedy reunion, it's hilarious! Better than a Paul de Kock any day!

'But what I love most in that cemetery is the deserted, lonely part planted with all those tall yews and cypresses, the old district where those who died long ago now lie. Soon it will become the new part of town; the green trees nourished by human corpses will be felled to make room for the recently departed to be lined up in turn under their own little marble slabs.

'After I had wandered about long enough to refresh my mind, I realized I was now getting a little bored and that it was time to go to the last resting place of my old love and pay her my ever-faithful respects. By the time I reached her graveside I was feeling quite upset. Poor darling, she was so sweet, so loving, so fair and rosy . . . and now . . . if this spot were ever opened up . . . Leaning on the iron railings I whispered to her a few sad words which I dare say she is unlikely to have heard. I was just about to leave when I saw a woman in deep mourning on her knees at the next graveside. She had lifted her crêpe veil and under it could be seen a pretty head of fair hair, a crown of bright dawn under the dark night of her head-dress. I lingered. In what was obviously deep distress she had buried her face in her hands and, stiff as a statue, was deep in meditation. Absorbed by her grief and telling the painful beads of memory behind closed and hidden eyes, she seemed herself dead to the world in her loss. Suddenly I saw that she was about to break down. I could tell from the slight movement her back made, like a willow stirring in the wind. She wept gently at first then more and more violently with her neck and shoulders shaking hard and rapidly. All of a sudden she uncovered her eyes. Full of tears they were lovely. She looked wildly about her as if waking from a nightmare. She saw me looking at her, seemed ashamed and buried her whole face once more in her hands. Then she burst into convulsive sobs and her head bent slowly down towards the marble slab. She rested her forehead on it and her veil, spreading about her, covered the white corners of her beloved sepulchre like a new mourning- cloth. I heard her moan before she collapsed with her cheek against the tombstone and lay there motionless and unconscious.

‘I rushed over to her, slapped her hands and breathed on her eyelids while reading the simple epitaph beyond:

HERE LIES LOUIS- THEODORE CARREL

Captain of Marines

Killed by the enemy at Tonkin

PRAY FOR HIS SOUL

The date of death was some months earlier. I was moved to tears and redoubled my efforts to revive her. Finally they succeeded and she came to. I’m not bad- looking, not yet forty, remember, and at that moment I must have been looking extremely solicitous. At any rate, from her first glance I realized she would be both polite and grateful to me. I was not disappointed. Between further tears and sobs she told me about the officer who had been killed at Tonkin after they had been married for just one year. He had married her for love. She had been an orphan and possessed nothing but the smallest dowry.

‘I comforted her, consoled her, lifted her up, then helped her to her feet.

“You can’t stay here like this,” I said, “come on . . .”

“I’m not sure I can manage to walk . . .”

“I’ll help you, don’t worry.”

“Thank you, Monsieur, you’re very kind. Did you have someone here yourself you wanted to mourn?”

“Yes, Madame.”

“A lady?”

“Yes, Madame.”

“Your wife?”

“A . . . friend.”

“One can love a friend as much as a wife. Passion has its own laws.”

“Indeed so, Madame.”

‘We walked away together, she leaning on me so heavily that I was almost carrying her along the paths of the cemetery. As we were leaving it, she said: “I think I’m going to faint.”

“Would you like to go in and sit down somewhere? Let me get you something to . . .”

“Yes thank you, I would.”

‘I noticed a place nearby, one of those restaurants where the friends of the recently buried go when they have completed their grim duties. We went in and I made her drink a cup of hot tea which seemed to restore her strength somewhat. A faint smile came to her lips and she began to tell me a little about herself. How sad, how very sad it was to be all alone in the world, to be alone at home day and night, to have no one with whom to share love, trust and intimacy.

‘It all seemed sincere and so genuine the way she told it. I felt my heart softening. She was very young, twenty at most. I flattered her a little and she responded gracefully. Then, as time was getting on, I offered to take her home by cab. She accepted. In the cab we were so close to each other, shoulder to shoulder, that we could feel the warmth of each other’s bodies through our clothing – one of the most disturbing feelings in the world, as you know. When the cab drew up in front of her house she murmured: “I really don’t think I can get up the stairs on my own. I live on the fourth floor. You’ve been so kind . . . could you possibly give me your arm again, please?”

‘I said of course I could, and she went up slowly, breathing hard all the time. Then at her door she added: “Do come in for a few moments so that I can thank you.”

‘In I went, naturally.

‘It was a modest, not to say poor little apartment furnished in simple but good taste. We sat side by side on a little sofa where she started talking again about how lonely she was. She rang for her maid to bring me something to drink. No one appeared. I was delighted about this and imagined that this maid must work mornings only, in other words, she only had a cleaner. She had taken off her hat. She really was quite a charmer. Her lovely, limpid eyes were fixed on me with such a clear, direct gaze that I suddenly felt an irresistible urge. I succumbed on the spot and clasped her in my arms. On her eyelids, which had instantly closed, I rained kiss after kiss after kiss. She struggled, pushing me away and repeating: “Please . . . please . . . please . . . have done!”

‘What exactly did she mean? In the circumstances there were two ways of interpreting the words. To silence her I moved down from the eyes to the mouth and, putting my preferred interpretation on her request to please have done, complied with it. She put up little resistance and when later we looked at each other again after an insult to the memory of the captain killed at Tonkin she wore a languorous expression of tender resignation which dispelled any misgivings of my own.

‘I showed my gratitude by being gallant and attentive, and after an hour or so’s conversation asked: “Where do you normally dine?”

“At a little restaurant nearby.”

“All on your own?”

“Yes, of course.”

“Will you have dinner with me tonight?”

“Where did you have in mind?”

“Oh, a very good restaurant on the boulevard.”

‘She demurred for a while but I insisted and finally she gave in, reasoning that she would otherwise be terribly lonely again. Then she added, “I’d better change into something less severe,” and disappeared into her bedroom. When she emerged she was in half-mourning and wearing a very simple but elegant grey dress in which she looked slender and charming. She obviously had markedly different outfits for the cemetery and for town.

‘Dinner was very pleasant. She drank champagne, became very animated and excited, after which I went back to her apartment with her. This little liaison begun between the tombstones went on for some three weeks or so. But novelty, particularly with regard to women, eventually palls. I dropped her on the pretext of some unavoidable trip I had to make. I was very generous when we parted and she in turn very grateful. She made me promise, no, swear, to come back on my return and really seemed to care a little for me.

‘I lost no time in forming other attachments, however, and about a month went by without my having felt any particular desire to resume my funereal fling. But nor did I forget her. The memory of her haunted me like some unsolved mystery, a psychological teaser, one of those nagging little puzzles you can’t leave alone. One day, for some inexplicable reason, I wondered whether, if I went back to Montmartre Cemetery again, I might bump into her, and decided to return.

‘I walked around for a long time but there was no one there apart from the usual sort of people who visit the place, mourners who have not yet severed all ties with their dead. At the grave of the captain killed at Tonkin no one mourned over the marble slab, no flowers lay there, no wreaths. However, as I was walking through another district of the city of the departed I suddenly saw a couple, a man and a woman in deep mourning, coming towards me down a narrow avenue lined with crosses. To my amazement as they approached, I recognized the woman. It was she! Seeing me she blushed. As I brushed past her she gave me a tiny signal, the merest glance, but conveying in the clearest possible way both: "Don't show you know me," and "Come back and see me, darling."

"The man with her was about fifty, distinguished- looking and well- dressed, with the rosette of the Légion d'honneur in his lapel. He was supporting her just as I had done when we both left the cemetery that day.

"I went off, flabbergasted by what I had just seen and trying to imagine what tribe of creatures she belonged to, hunting as she obviously did on this sepulchral terrain. Was she a single prostitute who had struck on the brilliant idea of frequenting graveyards and picking up unhappy men still haunted by the loss of a wife or a mistress and troubled by the memory of past caresses? Was she unique? Or were there more like her? Was it a professional speciality to work the cemetery like the street? The loved ones of those laid to rest! Or was she alone in having conceived the psychologically sound idea of exploiting the feelings of amorous nostalgia awakened in these mournful venues?

"I was longing to know whose widow she had chosen to be that day.'

打火匣

大路上一名士兵迈着正步走来：一，二！一，二！他背着军包，挎着军刀，因为他刚打完仗，现在要回家了。然后他在大路上遇到一个老巫婆；她丑恶极了，她的下嘴唇一直垂到胸前。她说：“晚上好，士兵！你的军刀真漂亮，军包真大，你是个不折不扣的士兵！现在你想要多少钱就能有多少钱。”

“谢谢你，老巫婆！”士兵说。

“你看见那棵大树了吗？”巫婆指着他们身边的一棵树说，“里面是空的。你要爬到顶上去，那样你就会看到一个洞，你可以从那儿滑进去，进入树干深处。我会在你的腰上系一根绳子，你喊我的时候，我就可以把你再拉上来。”

“那我到树里去干什么？”士兵问。

“取钱呀！”巫婆说，“你会知道的，你钻到树底下之后，就会进入一条宽大的走廊，那儿很明亮，因为那里点着一百多盏灯。你会看到三扇门，都可以打开，门上插着钥匙。走进第一个房间，你就会看到地板中央放着一口大箱子，上面坐着一只狗，它有一对大如茶杯的眼睛，但你别把它当回事！我把我的蓝格子围裙给你，你可以把它铺在地上；尽快走过去抱住那只狗，把它放到我的围裙上，打开箱子，想拿多少钱就拿多少钱。这些钱都是铜币。但如果你想要银币的话，就得进第二个房间，但那儿也坐着一只狗，它有一对大如水车的眼睛，但你别把它当回事，把它放到我的围裙上，然后拿钱！不过，如果你想要金币的话，你也能拿到，你搬得动多少就能拿多少，进第三个房间就行。但坐在钱箱上的那只狗，有一对眼睛，每只都像‘圆塔’^[1] 那么大。那只狗可了不得！但你别把它当回事。只要把它放到我的围裙上，它就动不了你，你就从那个箱子里想拿多少金币就拿多少。”

“听上去不错，”士兵说，“但我拿什么东西给你呢，老巫婆？我想你总会要点什么吧。”

“不要，”巫婆说，“我一个铜子儿都不要！你只要替我把那个旧打火匣拿来，那是我祖母上回落在下面的！”

“一言为定！把绳子系到我腰上吧。”士兵说。

“好嘞！”巫婆说，“还有我的蓝格子围裙。”

于是士兵爬上树，跳进洞里，站起身，正如巫婆说的那样，下面的大走廊里点着上百盏灯。

现在他打开第一扇门。啊！那儿坐着那条狗，眼睛大如茶碗，正瞪着他呢。

“你个好家伙！”士兵说，然后把它抱到巫婆的围裙上，往口袋里塞满铜币，锁上箱子，再把狗儿放上去，接着他走进第二个房间。哎呀！那儿坐着的那条狗，眼睛大如水车。

“你不应该老这么看着我，”士兵说，“眼睛会看疼的！”于是他把狗抱到女巫的围裙上，但当他看到箱子里那么多银币的时候，他把他的所有铜币都扔了，然后往口袋和军包里塞满银币。随后他走进第三个房间！哎呀不好，太可怕了！那里的那条狗真有两只大如“圆塔”的眼睛！它们在它脸上打转，就像两个大转盘！

“晚上好！”士兵说，并举了举军帽，因为他从来没见过这样的狗；但瞧了它一会儿之后，他心里想，这下礼数总算够了吧，于是他把它抱到地上，打开箱子，天哪！那么多金币！用这些金币，他可以把整个哥本哈根都买下来，还有全世界所有蛋糕店的甜点，所有的锡兵、皮鞭和木马。没错，就有这么多钱！于是士兵把他口袋里、军包里装满的所有银币都倒了出来，换成了金币，是的，他的口袋、军包、军帽，还有靴子全都装满，他几乎都挪不开步。这下他可有钱了。他把狗放到箱子上，关上门，透过树干朝外喊：“把我拉上去吧，老巫婆！”

“你拿到打火匣了吗？”巫婆问。

“还真是！”士兵说。“这事儿我忘得一干二净。”于是他去拿打火匣。巫婆把他拉了上来，然后他就又回到大路上，口袋、靴子、军包、军帽里全都塞满了钱。

“你要打火匣干什么？”士兵问。

“这不关你的事，”巫婆说，“你不是已经拿到钱了嘛！把打火匣给我就行了。”

“少废话！”士兵说。“快告诉我你要它干什么，不然我就拔出军刀来，砍掉你的头！”

“不行！”巫婆说。

于是士兵就把她的头砍了下来。她倒在地上！而他把他所有的钱都包进她的围裙里，像包袱一样驮在背上，把打火匣放进口袋向城市走去。

这是一座美丽的城市，他进了一家最美丽的酒店，订了最好的房

间，点了他最喜欢吃的美食，因为他发财了，有的是钱。

要替他擦皮靴的服务员觉得，像他这样一位有钱的先生，穿这么旧的皮鞋真有些滑稽，但他还没来得及买新的；第二天他买了合适的靴子和漂亮的衣服！现在我们的士兵摇身一变成了尊贵的先生，大家把这座城市里发生的一切都告诉了他，包括他们国王的事，以及国王的女儿是一位多么美丽的公主。

“到哪儿可以看到她？”士兵问。

“她可不是随随便便就能看到的，”大家都说，“她住在一座宏伟的铜城堡里，周围壁垒森严塔楼林立！除了国王没人敢随便出入，因为有预言称，她会嫁给一个很普通的士兵，这让国王难以忍受。”

“我一定得看看她。”士兵想，但国王肯定不会允许！

如今他生活得很愉快，看看喜剧表演，逛逛国王花园，还施舍很多钱给穷人，真是一种善举！他以前深有体会，一文不名有多糟糕！现在他有钱了，有漂亮的衣服穿，交了很多朋友，大家都说他是善良的人，一位真正的骑士，这话士兵很爱听！但他每天只往外花钱，却一分钱都赚不回来，就这样，最后他只剩下两个铜币，只好从那些华丽的房间里搬出来，搬到顶楼一间小小的阁楼里去住，他只好自己动手擦靴子，自己用织补针补靴子，他的朋友没有一个来找他，因为需要爬那么多楼梯。

有一天晚上天很黑，他连一根蜡烛都买不起，但他想起来，还有一小截蜡烛装在那个打火匣里，就是那回巫婆帮他下到空树底部，他在那里拿到的那个打火匣。他拿出打火匣和那一小截蜡烛来，正当他打着火，火星从火石上冒出来的时候，房门忽然开了，他在树底下见到的那条眼睛大如茶杯的狗出现在他面前，它说：“有什么吩咐，我的主人！”

“怎么回事！”士兵说，“真是个好玩的打火匣，要是这样我就能想要什么就有什么了！给我弄点儿钱来吧。”他对那条狗说。然后“嗖”的一声，狗就不见了！又是“嗖”的一声，狗又回来了，嘴里衔着一大口袋钱。

这下士兵知道这个打火匣有多美妙了！他打一下，那条坐在铜币箱上的狗就会出现，他打两下，来的就是那条有银币的狗，要是他打三下，来的就是那条有金币的狗。现在士兵又搬回了楼下那些华丽的房间，又穿上了好衣服，他的所有朋友马上又把他认了出来，他们都好喜欢他。

有那么一天他心想：说来真是奇怪，谁都见不到那位公主！她肯定非常美丽，大家都这么说！但要是她整天只能坐在塔楼林立的铜城

堡里的话，这又有什么用？难道我真的就见不到她吗？我的打火匣在哪儿？他打起火来，“嗖”的一声，那只眼睛大如茶杯的狗就跑了出来。

“现在的确是深更半夜，”士兵说，“但我真心想见见那位公主，哪怕只见那么一小会儿。”

那条狗马上跑出了门，士兵还来不及想一想这件事，就已经看到它带着公主回来了，她躺在那条狗的背上熟睡，美得是一个人就能看出来那是个真正的公主；士兵按捺不住吻了她，因为他是个不折不扣的士兵。

然后狗就带着公主回去了，但第二天早上，国王和王后正倒着茶的时候，公主说话了，她说她晚上做了个奇怪的梦，梦见一条狗和一名士兵，她骑在狗背上，那个士兵吻了她。

“这倒是个不错的故事！”王后说。

第二天一个老宫女到公主的床边守夜，来看看这到底真是一场梦还是怎么回事。

士兵迫切地想再见一次那位美丽的公主，于是晚上狗又来了，背上她，竭尽全力飞奔，但那个老宫女穿上雨靴，在后面紧追不舍；当她看到他们跑进一幢大房子之后，她心想，这下我知道这是哪儿了，然后在大门上用一段粉笔画了个大十字。之后她就回去睡觉了，狗也把公主送了回去；但当它看到士兵住处的大门上画着个十字的时候，它也拿了一段粉笔，在全城的所有大门上都画了十字，这件事干得很聪明，因为既然所有的门上都有十字，这下老宫女就找不到正确的大门了。

第二天一大早，国王和王后，还有那个老宫女，以及所有的官员都来了，要看看公主到底去过哪儿！

“就是那儿！”国王说，他看到了第一扇画着十字的门。

“不对，是那儿，我可爱的丈夫！”王后说，她看到另一扇门上有十字。

“那儿有一个，那儿也有一个！”大家都说。不管他们往哪儿看，每扇门上都有十字。于是他们意识到，他们再怎么找也没有用。

但王后毕竟是个非常聪明的女人，她可不是只会坐坐四轮马车那么简单。她取出她的纯金大剪刀，把一大块绸缎剪成几片，缝了一个精致的小袋子，在里面装满了很细很细的荞麦粉，再绑到公主背上。绑好之后，她在袋子上剪了一个小口，这样公主不管走到哪儿，都会在地上撒上粉。

夜里狗又来了，把公主驮到背上，带着她跑到士兵那儿，他已经深深地爱上了她，他多想能成为王子，娶她为妻。

狗背着公主跳上高墙的时候，完全没有注意到，面粉跟着她从城堡一直撒到了士兵的窗口。就这样，第二天早晨，国王和王后马上就看明白他们的女儿去过什么地方，他们抓走了士兵，把他关进了大牢。

他坐在牢里。呜，里面好黑暗好无聊啊，然后大家对他说：明天你就要被绞死了。这话听起来可不好玩，而他把打火匣也忘在了酒店里。第二天早晨，他从小窗的铁栏杆里可以看见人们蜂拥出城，来看他上绞刑架。他听到鼓声，看到士兵们迈着正步。所有人都跑了出来；其中有一个鞋匠的学徒，穿着皮围裙和拖鞋，他跑得太快，一只拖鞋飞了出去，砸在士兵坐着隔着铁栏杆朝外张望的那堵墙上。

“喂，鞋匠小子！你着什么急呀，”士兵对他说，“我到场之前没什么可看的。但你能不能跑到我住的地方，把我的打火匣拿来？这样的话你能得到四个铜币！但你可得撒开腿儿呀。”鞋匠小子很想要那四个铜币，于是撒腿就跑，取来打火匣，交给士兵，这下好戏开场了。

城外架起了一座巨大的绞刑架，周围站满了士兵和成千成万的老百姓。国王和王后坐在华丽的宝座上，面前就是法官和整个议会成员。

那个士兵已经站到了梯子上。但正当他们要把绞索套到他脖子上的时候，他说，总是应该让罪犯在受刑前了却一个无辜的心愿吧。他很想抽一管烟，这将是他在这个世上抽的最后一管烟了。

国王无法拒绝这样的请求，于是士兵拿起他的打火匣，打起火来，一、二、三！三条狗都出现了，眼睛大如茶杯的那条，眼睛大如水车的那条，还有眼睛大如圆塔的那条。

“救救我，别让他们绞死我！”士兵说，于是那几条狗就朝法官和所有议员扑了过去，扯这个人腿，咬那个人鼻子，把他们抛向几丈高的天空，他们掉下来个个摔得粉身碎骨。

“我不要啊！”国王说。但最大的那条狗咬住了他和王后，跟其他所有人一样抛了出去。士兵们都吓坏了，老百姓高喊起来：“小兵，你应该做我们的国王，娶了美丽的公主吧！”

于是他们把这名士兵让进了国王的四轮马车，三条狗一齐在前面欢蹦乱跳，并高呼：“万岁！”男孩子们用手指吹起口哨，士兵们上前行礼。公主走出她的铜城堡，成了王后，对此她心满意足！婚礼持续了八天，那几条狗也坐上了饭桌，眼睛瞪得一个比一个大。

小克劳斯和大克劳斯

很久以前，一个村子里有两个人叫同一个名字，他们都叫克劳斯，但其中一个有四匹马，而另一个只有一匹马；为了可以区分他们，人们管有四匹马的那个叫大克劳斯，而只有一匹马的那个就叫小克劳斯。现在让我们来听听他们俩之间发生了什么，因为这是个真实的故事！

整个星期小克劳斯都必须为大克劳斯耕田，并且把自己唯一的马也借给他；而大克劳斯也会把所有四匹马都拿出来帮他，但每星期只有一次，就是星期日。噶儿驾！小克劳斯挥舞着他的皮鞭同时赶着五匹马，在这一天，它们就像都是他的马一样好使。阳光明媚，所有教堂塔楼的钟一齐敲响，人们都打扮得漂漂亮亮，胳膊下夹着赞美诗集去教堂听神父布道，他们看着小克劳斯赶着五匹马耕地，他看上去那么得意，挥舞鞭子吆喝道：“驾，我的马儿们！”

“你不能这么说，”大克劳斯说，“明明只有一匹是你的！”

但又有人去教堂的路上经过的时候，小克劳斯已经忘了他不能这么说，又吆喝起来：“驾，我的马儿们！”

“好吧，这下我可不能再让你为所欲为了！”大克劳斯说，“你要再这么喊一次，我就砸你马的额头，当场把它砸死，这事儿就算完了！”

“我以后再也不这么说了！”小克劳斯说，但有人经过的时候，他们冲他点头问好，小克劳斯又得意起来，觉得这样有五匹马同时耕自己的地看上去很帅气，于是又挥舞着鞭子吆喝起来：“驾，我的马儿们！”

“就让我来驾你的马吧！”大克劳斯说着，挥起大木槌砸在小克劳斯唯一那匹马的额头上，马应声倒地，奄奄一息。

“啊，我现在一匹马都没有了！”小克劳斯说着哭了起来。之后他剥下了马皮，风干以后装进袋子里，扛在肩上去城里卖马皮。

他要走很长的路，必须穿过一大片黑漆漆的森林，天气非常恶劣；他迷了路，还没等他走上正道，天已经黑了，无论进城还是回家路都太遥远，一会儿就夜深了。

紧挨着路边有一座大农庄，窗户的挡风板掩着，但灯光还是从上

面的缝隙里透了出来。应该会让我和这儿过夜吧，小克劳斯心想，于是就走过去敲门。

农妇打开门，但当她听到了他的请求后，她让他还是赶紧上路走吧，她的丈夫不在家，她不能收留陌生人。

“那我就只能睡在门外了。”小克劳斯说，农妇在他面前关上了门。

紧挨着农庄有一大堆干草，干草和房子之间搭着一个茅草顶的小窝棚。

“我可以睡那上面！”小克劳斯看着茅草顶说，“这不就是一张舒服的床吗，希望那只鹤不会飞下来啄我的腿。”屋顶上站着一只活鹤，它在那儿筑了巢。

小克劳斯爬上窝棚，躺下来翻着身，想找个舒服的姿势。窗户的木挡板并没有挡到顶，他可以看见客厅里去。

“谁那么好口福！”小克劳斯说，朝窗户伸直了脑袋。天哪，他看到了什么，多棒的蛋糕呀！真是一桌丰盛的宴席。

这时他听见有人从大路骑着马朝农庄而来，是农妇的丈夫回来了。

丈夫是个好人，但他有一种奇怪的病，他见不得牧师；只要他一见到牧师就会大发雷霆。正巧牧师来串门，因为他知道丈夫不在家，他来给农妇问个好，农妇因此为他做了一桌美味佳肴；他们听见丈夫来了，害怕起来，农妇求牧师爬进墙脚的一个空箱子里；他照办了，因为他知道那个可怜的丈夫见不得牧师。农妇把一桌好酒好菜都藏进了烤箱里，要是让丈夫看见，他一定会问这是什么意思。

“啊哟！”小克劳斯在窝棚上叹了口气，眼睁睁地看着食物消失。

“上面有人吗？”农夫抬头看着小克劳斯问，“你躺在那儿干吗？快下来进客厅里坐！”

于是小克劳斯就把迷路的事儿都说了，并请求留宿过夜。

“当然可以！”农夫说，“但我们得先弄点东西吃。”

农妇很友好地招待了他们俩，铺了一张长桌子，给他们一大盘粥。农夫饿急了，津津有味地吃起来，但小克劳斯忍不住想起那桌美味的烤肉、肥鱼和蛋糕，他知道它们都藏在烤箱里。

桌下他的脚边放着装马皮的包，我们知道他就是为了进城卖马皮才离家出远门的。他才不要喝什么粥，于是他踩了一脚自己的包，包里干燥的马皮发出的吱嘎声还挺响。

“嘘！”小克劳斯对自己的包说，但同时又踩了一脚，这下吱嘎声比之前更响。

“哟！你袋子里装的是什？”农夫问。

“哦，里面是个魔法师！”小克劳斯说，“他说我们不用喝粥了，他变了一烤箱的烤肉、肥鱼和蛋糕。”

“什！”农夫说。然后打开烤箱，看到农妇在里面藏着的所有美味佳肴，但他以为这都是藏在袋子里的魔法师为他们变出来的。农妇一声都不敢吭，赶紧把食物都端上桌，他们把肥鱼、烤肉和蛋糕都吃得一干二净。然后小克劳斯又踩了一脚自己的袋子，马皮吱嘎响。

“他现在说什么？”农夫问。

“他说他还给我们变了三壶酒，放在烤箱旁的角落里！”这下农妇只好端出她藏的酒来，农夫喝得酣畅淋漓，小克劳斯袋子里这样的魔法师他也想要一个。

“他能把魔鬼变出来吗？”农夫问，“我倒想见见他，反正我现在高兴！”

“行啊，”小克劳斯说，“我的魔法师什么都能变，只要我开口，对不对？”他边问边踩袋子，吱嘎吱嘎，“你听见没有，他说没错。但魔鬼长得太难看，实在不值一看！”

“哦，没关系，他长什么样？”

“嗯，他看上去很像个牧师。”

“呼！”农夫说，“那太糟糕了！要知道，我是见不得牧师的！但现在无所谓了，反正我知道那是魔鬼，应该会好一点！现在我还有点勇气！但别让他靠太近。”

“我来问问我的魔法师。”小克劳斯踩踩袋子，把耳朵凑过去。

“他说什？”

“他说你可以去把那个箱子打开，就在角落里，这样你就可以看到魔鬼了，他就蹲在箱子里，但一定要抓紧盖子，别让他跑了。”

“你能搭把手吗？”农夫说着走到箱子跟前，就是农妇把真正的牧师藏起来的那个箱子，他现在就坐在箱子里害怕得要命。

农夫把箱子盖掀起一条缝，朝里瞥了一眼，“哟！”他喊了一声，向后一闪，“没错，这下我看见他了，他看上去真的挺像我们的牧师！哎呀，太吓人了！”

他不得不喝口酒压压惊，于是他们一直喝到深夜。

“这个魔法师你可得卖给我，”农夫说，“要多少钱尽管开口！对，我可以马上给你一大桶的钱！”

“不行，我可不能卖！”小克劳斯说，“你想想，这个魔法师能给我多少好处！”

“啊，但我太想要他了。”农夫说，开始央求起来。

“好吧，”小克劳斯最后说，“既然你对我这么好，还让我进屋过夜，卖就卖了吧，一大桶钱就一大桶钱，但桶一定要装满。”

“这个没问题，”农夫说，“但那边那个箱子你得带走，我一刻都不想再把它留在房子里，谁知道他是不是还坐在里面。”

小克劳斯于是就把自己那个装着干马皮的袋子给了农夫，换回满满一大桶钱。农夫还给了他一辆手推车，让他装钱和箱子。

“再见！”小克劳斯说，然后就推着他的钱和坐着牧师的大箱子上路了。

树林的另一端有一条水很深的大河，水流湍急，几乎难以逆流游泳。有人在河上造了一座崭新的大桥，小克劳斯停在桥中央，为了让箱子里的牧师听见，他大声说：

“哎呀，我拿这讨厌的箱子怎么办？又那么重，跟装着石头似的！要是再推下去我就快累趴下了，我还是把它扔河里算了，要是它漂回我家就最好，要是不行也无所谓。”

接着他用一只手托住箱子，把它举起来一点点，就想要把它翻到水里去一样。

“不要啊，”箱子里的牧师说，“让我出来吧！”

“噢！”小克劳斯说，假装吃了一惊，“他还坐在里面！我得把他扔到河里去，淹死他再说！”

“哦不，哦不！”牧师喊道，“我给你一整桶的钱，你放了我吧！”

“这就另当别论了！”小克劳斯说着打开箱子。牧师马上爬出来，把空箱子推进了水里，然后回到家里，小克劳斯在那儿又得到一整桶钱，加上他在农夫那儿得到的那桶，这下整辆手推车上都装满了钱。

“看，这匹马还让我赚了不少钱！”回到自家的客厅里后小克劳斯自言自语着，把所有的钱都倒在房间中央堆成一座小钱山，“大克劳斯要是知道我靠一匹马发这么大财该多气恼，但我不会老实告诉他！”

他派了自己的儿子去找大克劳斯借量桶。

“他要量桶干什么！”大克劳斯心想，于是他在量桶底部抹了点焦油，好粘点称的东西回来看看是什么，他还真的得逞了，当他讨回量桶的时候，桶底粘了三枚崭新的银币。

“怎么回事？”大克劳斯立刻飞奔到小克劳斯家，“你从哪儿弄到这么多钱？”

“哦，是我的马皮，我昨天把它卖了！”

“可算卖了大价钱呀！”大克劳斯说着，马上飞奔回家，拿斧子砸开了他所有四匹马的额头，扒下它们的皮来，驾车载着马皮进城去了。

“卖皮啦！卖皮啦！谁要买皮呀！”他沿街吆喝着。

所有鞋匠和皮匠都跑了出来，问他皮怎么卖。

“一桶钱一张。”大克劳斯说。

“你疯了吗？”大家都说，“你真以为我们这么有钱？”

“卖皮啦！卖皮啦！谁要买皮呀！”他继续吆喝，但不管谁问他，马皮多少钱，他都回答：“一桶钱。”

“他是在耍我们。”大家都这么说，于是鞋匠们拿起了皮带，皮匠们拿起了皮围裙，开始抽打大克劳斯。

“卖皮啦！卖皮啦！”他们嘲弄他，“我们把你这一身皮，抽出点猪血来！快滚出城去吧！”他们喊，大克劳斯只好不顾一切地逃，他可从没被谁揍得这么狼狈过。

“哼！”回到家以后他自言自语道，“这笔账得找小克劳斯算，看我不打死他！”

而小克劳斯家里也出了事，他的祖母去世了；虽然她确实一直对小克劳斯很凶很不好，但他还是很难过，他把死去的祖母放到自己温暖的床上，看看她还能不能活过来；她要在那儿躺一整夜，而他自己搬了张椅子坐到角落里，他要坐在椅子上过夜，以前也这么干过。

那天晚上他就这么在椅子上坐着，门开了，大克劳斯举着斧子闯了进来；他当然知道小克劳斯的床在什么地方，他径直走到床边，用斧子砸了已死的祖母的额头，他还以为躺在那儿的是小克劳斯。

“瞧！”他说，“这下你再也没法儿耍我了！”然后他就回家去了。

“可真是个卑鄙的恶人！”小克劳斯心想，“他竟然想打死我，幸好祖母已经死了，要不然她就死在他手上了！”

然后他给老祖母穿上节日盛装，从邻居那里借了匹马，驾上马

车，把祖母放在马车最后排的座位上，这样她就不会倒下来。就这样，他驾着马车穿过森林，太阳升起的时候，他们来到一家大客栈门前，小克劳斯停下马车进去弄点吃的。

客栈老板有许多许多钱，也是个很善良的人，但性情暴躁，就像藏了一肚子胡椒和烟草。

“早上好！”他对小克劳斯说，“你今天来得可真早，穿得也气派！”

“是呀，”小克劳斯说，“我要跟我的老祖母一起进城去，她坐在外面的马车里，我没办法让她进大厅来。你能给她一杯蜜酒吗？但你说话得大声点，因为她耳背听不清。”

“好的，我这就去！”老板说着，倒了一大杯蜜酒，捧去给死去的祖母，马车里一片寂静。

“这儿有您孙子给您的蜜酒一杯！”老板说，但那位已经死了的农妇当然一声不吭，一动不动地坐在那里！

“没听见吗！”老板使出全身力气高喊，“这儿有您孙子给您的蜜酒！”

他把同样的话喊了一遍又一遍，但她还是纹丝不动，这让他火冒三丈，把杯子往她脸上扔过去，蜜酒顺着她的鼻子淌下来，她向后一仰从马车上摔了下来，因为小克劳斯只是把她放在那儿，并没有绑牢。

“天哪！”小克劳斯喊着冲出门来，抓住客栈老板的前襟！“你杀死了我的祖母！你看见没有，她的额头上有个大窟窿！”

“哦，这是个意外！”老板喊道，双手一拍！“都怪我的暴脾气！亲爱的小克劳斯，我给你一整桶钱，还会安葬你的祖母，就像对我自己的祖母一样，但千万别声张，不然的话他们会砍掉我的头，那样就惨了！”

于是小克劳斯得到一整桶钱，客栈老板还亲自安葬了老祖母，就像那是他自己的祖母一样。

小克劳斯又一次满载而归，他马上派自己的儿子去找大克劳斯，向他借量桶。

“怎么回事？”大克劳斯说，“我不是把他打死了吗！我得亲眼看看。”然后亲自给小克劳斯送来了量桶。

“你这又是从哪里弄来的这么多钱？”他问，瞪大了眼睛看着面前的钱堆，好壮观。

“你杀死的是我的祖母，不是我！”小克劳斯说，“我把她卖掉了，赚了一桶钱。”

“这可是卖了大价钱呀！”大克劳斯说着赶回家，拿起斧子立即砸死了自己的老祖母，把她装上马车送进城，到一个药剂师家，问他要不要买死尸。

“死了的是谁，你是怎么得到尸体的？”药剂师问。

“是我的祖母！”大克劳斯说，“我把她打死了，来换一桶钱！”

“上帝饶恕我们吧！”药剂师说，“你说的什么疯话！千万别再说了，你会掉脑袋的！”然后他告诉大克劳斯他干的事多么伤天害理，他是个多邪恶的人，他应该受到惩罚；大克劳斯吓坏了，他从药剂师那儿逃出来，飞奔上了马车，抽打着马匹逃回家，但药剂师和其他人都以为他疯了，就放他走了。

“你要为此付出代价！”大克劳斯跑到大路上以后心想，“没错，你要为此付出代价，小克劳斯！”他回家以后马上拿了一个他能找到的最大的口袋来到小克劳斯家，说：“这次你又耍了我！我先是打死了我的马儿们，然后又打死了我的祖母！这全都是你的错，但你休想再耍我了。”然后他一把抱住小克劳斯的腰，把他塞进口袋里，扛到肩上，对他喊，“我这就出门把你淹死！”

去河边要走的路还挺长，小克劳斯扛着也不轻。路上经过教堂门口，传来里面美妙的风琴声和人们的歌声。于是大克劳斯把装着小克劳斯的口袋紧挨着教堂大门放好，心想，继续赶路之前，先进去听个赞美诗也不错，小克劳斯又跑不了，所有人都在教堂里，于是他就走了进去。

“啊呀！啊呀！”小克劳斯在口袋里叹气。他翻来覆去，但怎么也解不开绑绳。这时来了一个很老很老的牧羊人，满头白发，手里拄着大拐杖，用它赶着一大群牛，它们撞到了装着小克劳斯的口袋，口袋翻倒在地。

“啊呀！”小克劳斯叹息道，“我那么年轻，却马上就要上天堂了！”

“而可怜的我！”牧羊人说，“那么老了却还去不了！”

“把袋子解开！”小克劳斯喊道，“代替我钻进来，这样你很快就能上天堂了！”

“好呀，我非常乐意。”牧羊人说，帮小克劳斯解开口袋，他立刻从里面钻了出来。

“那你帮我照看我的牲口吧。”老人说，钻进袋子里，小克劳斯绑

好绑绳然后赶着所有的公牛母牛上路了。

过了一会儿，大克劳斯从教堂走出来，他又把口袋扛到肩上，感觉到口袋肯定是变轻了，因为那个老牧羊人还不到半个小克劳斯那么重！“他变得好轻呀！肯定是因为我听了赞美诗！”于是他来到河边，河又深又宽，他把装着老牧羊人的口袋扔进水里，然后冲他喊道——因为他当然还以为那是小克劳斯：“瞧！这下你没法儿再耍我了吧！”

然后他朝家走，经过岔路的时候他遇到了小克劳斯，赶着牲口迎面走来。

“怎么回事！”大克劳斯说，“我不是把你淹死了吗？”

“没错，”小克劳斯说，“你不到半小时前是把我扔到河里去了！”

“但你这么多漂亮的牲口是哪儿来的？”大克劳斯问。

“它们是海牛！”小克劳斯说，“我来把来龙去脉都讲给你听。还要感谢你，因为你把我扔到了河里，这下我的财产超过你了，而且真的发了大财，你想得到吗！我在口袋里的时候吓坏了，当时你从桥上把我扔向冰冷的河里，风在耳边呼啸。我很快沉到了河底，但我没有磕到自己，因为下面长着美丽的嫩草。我就掉在草地上，很快袋子就开了，这时来了个世界上最美丽的姑娘，穿着洁白的衣服，湿漉漉的头发上戴着绿色的花环，她拉着我的手说：‘你是小克劳斯吗？先带一些海牛去吧！沿着这条路一英里之外还有一大群，是我赠送给你的！’这下我看到了，河底是一条宽阔的大路，专供海洋人使用。他们就这样从海底或走路或驾车一直到岸上，到大河的尽头。那儿的花美极了，还有最新鲜的嫩草，还有鱼，在水底游来游去，它们在我耳边飞快地穿梭，就像这儿空中的鸟。那儿的人都好漂亮，还有那么多的牲口，漫山遍野到处走！”

“那为什么你这么快就回来了，”大克劳斯问，“下面既然那么美，换我就不回来了！”

“没错，”小克劳斯说，“这就是我机智的地方！你不是听我说了嘛：海姑娘说，沿路一英里之外——她说的路其实就是河，因为她去不了别的地方——还有一大群牲口等着我。但我知道河有多蜿蜒曲折，一会儿东一会儿西，这可是绕了大远路呀，能走捷径当然走捷径啦，上岸抄近路到河的另一边可以省掉将近一半的路程，你看我这么快就已经把我的海牛赶回来了！”

“你运气真是太好了！”大克劳斯说，“你觉得如果我也下到河底的话能不能也弄到几头海牛？”

“当然，我觉得没问题，”小克劳斯说，“但我可不能把你装进袋子里扛到河边，你对我来说太重了，你要不自己走到那儿然后钻进袋子

里，这样的话我很乐意把你扔下去。”

“谢谢你！”大克劳斯说，“但要是我得不到海牛，等我回来看我怎么收拾你，你信不信！”

“别呀！别那么恶狠狠的！”于是他们来到河边。牲口们口渴难耐，看到水立刻撒开腿奔过去喝水。

“看它们跑得多快！”小克劳斯说，“它们着急想回河底呢！”

“快先帮帮我！”大克劳斯说，“不然我揍你了啊！”说着他钻进一只驮在一头公牛背上的那个大口袋，“放块石头，不然我怕我沉不下去。”大克劳斯说。

“肯定可以！”小克劳斯说，但还是在口袋里放了一块大石头，绑紧绳子，往下一推：扑通！大克劳斯掉进河里，很快就沉到水底。

“恐怕他是找不到海牛咯！”小克劳斯说，然后赶着他的牲口回家去了。

豌豆公主

很久以前有一位王子，他想为自己找一位公主，但必须是一位真正的公主。于是他走遍了全世界，为了寻找这样一位公主，他总是到处碰壁，公主倒不少，但是不是真正的公主，他也无从考证，总是有什么地方不对劲。后来他只好闷闷不乐地回家了，他真的非常渴望得到一位真正的公主。

一天晚上，天气异常恶劣；电闪雷鸣，大雨倾盆，可怕极了！这时，有人敲响了城门，老国王过去开门。

城外站着的是一位公主。但是，老天爷呀，狂风暴雨让她看上去那么狼狈！水从她的头发和衣服上直往下淌，从鞋尖淌进去，又从鞋跟流出来，而她却说，她是一位真正的公主。

“好吧，反正我们早晚都会知道。”老王后心想。但她什么都没说，只是走进卧房，把所有的被褥都拿掉，在床板上放了一颗豌豆，然后她拿来二十张床垫，盖在豌豆上，之后又在这些垫子上盖了二十床羽绒被。

这就是公主晚上睡觉的地方。

第二天早上大家问她睡得怎么样。

“哦，糟糕透了！”公主说，“我几乎整夜都没合眼！天知道，我的床上有什么东西？我睡在什么硬邦邦的东西上面，全身青一块紫一块！吓死人了！”

这样大家就看出来，这是一位真正的公主，隔着二十张床垫和二十床羽绒被，她都能感觉到下面的豌豆。除了真正的公主，还会有谁这么敏锐。

于是王子就娶了她做妻子，因为他知道，他终于得到了一位真正的公主，而豌豆则进了国家美术馆，如果没有被人拿走的话，现在大家还能看到它。

瞧，这可是个真实的故事！

坚定的锡兵

很久以前，有二十五个锡做的士兵，他们都是兄弟，因为他们都是同一把旧锡勺生的。他们怀揣步枪、面朝前方。红红蓝蓝的制服还挺美的。他们在这个世界上听到的第一句话是：“锡兵！”他们当时正待在一个盒子里，盒盖掀开，一个农家男孩一边拍着双手一边这么喊；他们是他的礼物，因为那天是他的生日，他现在把他们一个一个摆到桌子上。士兵们个个都长得一模一样，只有一个稍有不同，他只有一条腿，因为他是最后一个铸出来的，锡不够用了；但他用一条腿站得跟别人用两条腿一样稳当，正是他最引人注目。

他们站着的桌子上，还摆着许多其他玩具，但最让人目不转睛的是一座纸糊的美丽城堡。透过那些小窗户可以望到里面的大厅。城堡外面立着几棵小树，围着一面小镜子——可以看成是一面湖。蜡制的天鹅在湖面游弋并欣赏着自己的倒影。一切都很美丽，不过最美的是一个小姑娘，她站在敞开的城堡门口。她也是纸剪出来的，但她穿着一条最纯净的棉布裙，肩上有一条窄窄的蓝丝带，就像一条披肩；场景的中央镶着一枚亮晶晶的闪片——几乎跟她整张脸一样大。小姑娘舒展着双臂——因为她是个舞者，一条腿高高举向天空，高得锡兵几乎望不到，以为她跟自己一样，也只有一条腿。

“她可以做我的妻子！”他心想，“但她太高贵了。她住的是城堡，而我只有一个盒子，而且还挤着我们二十五个人，可不是她该住的地方！尽管如此，我还是得想办法认识认识她！”于是他整个人躺平，藏在桌上的一个鼻烟壶背后；这样他正好可以看到这位漂亮的女士，她一直单腿站着，丝毫没有失去平衡。

夜幕降临的时候，其余的锡兵都回到盒子里，家里的人也都上床睡觉去了。这时候玩具们开始玩起了游戏，串门的串门，打仗的打仗，有的还开起了舞会。锡兵们也在盒子里闹腾起来，因为他们也想参加，但他们掀不开盒盖。胡桃夹子翻起了筋斗，石笔在画板上兴风作浪。骚动吵醒了金丝鸟，她说起话来，还抑扬顿挫的。没有挪窝的只有两个人，一个是锡兵，一个是小舞蹈家。她直挺挺地踮着脚尖，展开双臂。锡兵也坚定地用他的一条腿站立着，目不转睛地看着她。

这时钟敲响了十二下，鼻烟壶的盖子“咔”的一声弹开，但里面装的并不是烟草，而是一个黑黑的小妖怪，原来鼻烟壶只是个幌子。

“锡兵！”妖怪说，“管好自己的眼睛行不行！”

但锡兵假装没听见。

“好吧，明天走着瞧！”妖怪说。

第二天早晨，孩子们起床后，把锡兵摆到了窗台上。不是那个妖怪就是一阵劲风，窗一下子就吹开了，锡兵一头从三楼大厅栽了下去。这一跤跌得好险！他高举着腿，军帽顶着地，刺刀插在石铺的缝隙里。

女佣和那个男孩立刻下楼来找他，尽管他们差点从他身上踩过去，但谁都没有看见他。要是当时锡兵喊一声“我在这儿！”他们就肯定能找到他。但他觉得高声喊叫不合时宜，他还穿着制服呢。

这时下起雨来，雨点越来越密，成了瓢泼大雨；大雨过后，来了两个流浪儿。

“你瞧！”其中一个说，“那儿躺着一个锡兵！他要扬帆远航啦！”

说着他们就用报纸折了一条船，把锡兵放在中央，他就这样沿着排水沟顺流而下；两个男孩都在一旁跟着跑，还边拍着手。哎呀！排水沟里的浪真大，水流真湍急！那可是一场瓢泼大雨呀。纸船上下颠簸，时不时来个急转弯，吓得锡兵心直哆嗦；但他重新振作起来，面不改色，目视前方，紧握步枪。

突然之间，船冲进一条长长的排水管；里面一片漆黑，就像回到了他的盒子里。

“不知道我现在到哪儿了。”他想，“就是，就是，是那个妖怪的错。唉，要是那个姑娘在船里就好了，那样的话再黑一倍也没关系。”

这时突然出现了一只住在水管里的老鼠。

“你有通行证吗？”老鼠问，“交出通行证来！”

但锡兵保持沉默，并把手里的步枪握得更紧。船继续前进，老鼠紧追不舍。哟！瞧它那咬牙切齿还冲着稻草木棍大喊大叫的样子：

“抓住他！抓住他！他没交过路费！他没出示通行证！”

但水流越来越湍急！锡兵已经能看到水管开口处传进来的天光，但他也听到了一阵可怕的声音，足以让再勇敢的人都胆战心惊。想象一下：水管的尽头，水流落入一条大运河里，对他来说，这其中的危险不亚于我们坠入一座大瀑布。

现在他已经近得无法刹车了。船冲了出去，可怜的锡兵尽可能地挺直身体，谁都别想说他眨过一下眼皮子。船旋转了三四圈，里面灌满了水，一直漫到了船沿，船要沉了；锡兵站在没到脖子水中，船

越沉越深，纸也越来越松。此刻水已没过了士兵的头，这时他想起了那个美丽的小舞者，他再也见不到她了；然后锡兵的耳朵里响起了一个声音：

“前进，前进，勇敢的人！”

迎接你的是死神！”

就这样，纸破了，锡兵掉了出来，但与此同时，一条大鱼一口把他吞了下去。

哦不，里面好黑啊！比在水管里还要糟糕，而且地方很窄；但锡兵还是很坚定，直挺挺地躺着，紧握着步枪。

鱼游来游去，做着各种各样可怕的动作；后来它终于平静了下来，就像有一道闪电划过它的身躯。光线明亮起来，有人高声喊道：“锡兵！”原来鱼被人捉住，送到了集市口，卖掉之后进了厨房，女仆用一把大刀把它剖开。她用两根手指把锡兵拦腰夹住，带进客厅，大家都想看看这位在鱼肚子里驰骋过的大人物；但锡兵一点都不骄傲。他们把他放到桌子上，天哪！这世界真是无奇不有！锡兵又回到了他之前待过的同一个客厅，他看着同样的孩子，桌上放着同样的玩具；漂亮的城堡和美丽的小舞者；她仍然单腿站立着，另一条腿高高举在空中，她也很坚定；这让锡兵很感动，几乎要流出锡做的眼泪来，但他觉得这么做不合时宜。他看着她，她也看着他，但他们没有说一句话。

正在这时候，其中一个小男孩拿起锡兵，把他扔进了陶瓷壁炉。他也没有给出任何理由；一定是鼻烟壶里的小妖怪，就是他搞的鬼。

锡兵明晃晃地站在那儿，感到一股热浪，这很可怕，但热浪究竟是来自火焰还是爱情，他也不知道。色彩从他身上褪去，究竟是旅途中发生的，还是悲伤造成的，谁也说不上来。他看着那个小姑娘，她也在看着他，他感觉到自己在融化，但他仍然坚定地站着，紧握步枪。这时忽然开了一扇门，一阵风卷起了舞者，她像风精灵一样飞进陶瓷壁炉，落在锡兵身边，燃起火焰，消失了，然后锡兵也熔成一团。第二天女仆清理炉灰的时候，她发现锡兵已经变成了一颗小小的锡心；而舞者留下的只有那枚闪片，并已经烧成了黑炭。

夜莺

在中国——这你肯定知道——皇帝是个中国人，他周围的人也都是中国人。这是许多年以前的事了，正因为如此才要听听这个故事，趁它还没有被大家忘记！这位皇帝的宫殿是世界上最雄伟壮丽的，一砖一瓦都是用精美的陶瓷制作的，非常昂贵，但也非常易碎，摸起来要非常小心。花园里可以看到各种奇花异草，那些最美艳的花上都系着银铃，铃儿叮当响，为了不让经过的人们错过这些花儿。诚然，御花园里的一切都那么引人注目，花园那么大，连园丁都不知道哪里是尽头；一直走下去，就会进入到最美丽的森林，那里有很高的树和很深的湖；树林一直延伸到大海，海水蔚蓝深邃；巨大的船只可以一直行驶到树枝下，就在这里，住着一只夜莺，它的歌声如此动听，连穷苦的渔夫，哪怕再繁忙劳碌，都会在夜里收网的时候，停下手中的活静静地聆听。“天哪，实在太美了！”他说，然后他不得不继续忙碌，忘掉这只鸟；然而第二天晚上它又唱起了歌，在外劳作的渔夫又会说同样的话：“天哪！实在太美了！”

世界各地的游客来到皇帝的都城，他们叹赏着这座城市，以及宫殿和花园，但当他们听到夜莺歌唱的时候，他们都会说：“这才是最美的！”

旅行家们回家之后，都会分享他们的所见所闻，其中那些学者写了许多关于皇城、宫殿和花园的书，他们也没有忘记那只夜莺，它被放在了第一位；而那些会写诗的人，写出了最美丽的诗篇，每一首写的都是深海边森林里的那只夜莺。

这些书在全世界流传，有几本还传到了皇帝手上。他坐在自己的金龙椅上，孜孜不倦地读着，时不时点点头，因为那些关于皇城、宫殿和花园的壮美描写让他很满意。“但最美的还是那只夜莺！”书上分明写着。

“怎么回事！”皇帝说，“夜莺！朕怎么完全不知道！朕的帝国里还有这么一只鸟，而且居然就在朕的花园里！朕却从来没听到过！朕还是从书上看来的！”

于是他唤来了他的侍臣，那可是个高贵的人，要是有任何比他卑微的人，胆敢跟他说话，或问他问题，他除了“呸！”之外不会多说一个字，而这个字本身也毫无意义。

“这儿应该有一只非常引人注目的鸟，名叫夜莺！”皇帝说，“大家

都说它是朕泱泱大国中最美的东西！为什么从来没人跟朕提起过它！”

“微臣以前从没听说过这个名字！”侍臣说，“从来没人带它来上过朝！”

“朕要让它今晚到这儿来为朕唱歌！”皇帝说，“全世界都知道朕有什么，就朕不知道！”

“微臣以前从没听说过这个名字！”侍臣说，“微臣会去找，微臣会找到它！”

但到哪里去找它呢；侍臣上上下下跑遍所有楼梯，穿过大大小小的厅堂和走廊，但他遇到的人中，没有一个听说过关于夜莺的事，侍臣又跑回皇帝那儿，说这一定是写书的人编出来的寓言。“陛下不能相信书上写的东西！那都是虚构的，也就是所谓的‘无稽之谈’！”

“但朕读到它的那本书，”皇帝说，“是日本那位德高望重的天皇送的，不太可能是胡编乱造的。朕要听夜莺唱歌！今晚就要它在这里出现！这是朕的圣旨！假如它今晚不来，满朝文武吃完晚饭都得在肚子上挨板子。”

“遵旨！”侍臣说，然后又上上下下跑了一遍所有的楼梯，穿过大大小小的厅堂和走廊。半个朝廷都跟着他跑，因为他们不想肚子上挨板子。大家都在找这只奇怪的夜莺——举世闻名，但满朝文武却对它一无所知。

最后他们终于在御膳房里遇到一个贫穷的小女孩，她说：“哦，天哪，夜莺！我当然知道！是呀，它多会唱歌呀！每天晚上我都获准带一些饭桌上的剩菜回家，给我那可怜的、生病的母亲，她住在海边，我回家的路上累了，在森林里休息的时候，就会听到夜莺的歌唱！我听得热泪盈眶，感觉就像母亲吻了我一样！”

“小厨娘！”侍臣说，“我会给你御膳房的固定职位，并准你侍奉吾皇用膳，只要你带我们去找夜莺，因为有圣旨传它今晚进宫！”

于是他们一齐走进夜莺平时唱歌的那片森林；跟来半个朝廷。他们走着走着，一头母牛哞哞叫起来。

“呀！”一位年轻的朝臣说，“终于找到了！这么小的动物身上居然有这么神奇的爆发力！我以前肯定听到过这个声音！”

“不对，这是牛叫！”小厨娘说，“我们还有很长的路要走。”

这下是青蛙在池塘里呱呱叫。

“美妙！”国寺方丈说，“现在我算是听到它的声音了——就像小小的寺庙钟声。”

“不对，这是青蛙！”小厨娘说，“但我想我们很快就能听到它的声音了！”

说着夜莺就开始唱了起来。

“就是它！”小女孩说，“听！听！它就在那儿！”然后她指了指树枝上的一只灰色小鸟。

“真没想到！”侍臣说，“它居然长这样！看上去多普通！一定是因为看到自己身边围了这么多高贵的人它才失去了光彩！”

“小夜莺！”小厨娘高声喊道，“吾皇圣恩，宣你进宫唱歌。”

“荣幸之至！”夜莺说着就兴致盎然地唱了起来。

“宛如琉璃编钟！”侍臣说，“看这副小嗓音，运用得多妙！我们居然从来没听说过，真奇怪！它在宫中一定大获成功！”

“我还要为皇上再唱一次吗？”夜莺问，它还以为皇帝在场。

“我非同凡响的小夜莺！”侍臣说，“能请您入宫参加宫廷夜宴，让您为吾皇一展歌喉以悦龙颜，是在下最大的荣幸。”

“歌儿还是在绿荫下最动听！”夜莺说，但当它听说这是皇帝的希望时，还是欣然答应去了。

宫殿里装点得富丽堂皇！墙和地板都是瓷砖铺成的，被成千上万的金灯照得金碧辉煌！那些最美丽的花朵挂着铃摆在走廊上；只要有人奔跑或一阵穿堂风吹过，所有的铃就会一起叮当响起，没人能听见彼此的说话声。

皇帝正襟危坐的大殿中央，竖着一根金杆，这是给夜莺坐的；满朝文武都到齐了，小厨娘也获准在门后侍应，因为她现在已经正式获得“御厨”的封号。每个人都穿上了最华丽的盛装，大家都望着这只灰色的小鸟，皇帝冲它点点头。

夜莺的歌声如此美妙，听得皇帝热泪盈眶，泪珠从脸颊上滚落，夜莺的歌声越来越优美，动人心弦；皇帝那么高兴，他说要把他的金拖鞋挂到夜莺脖子上。但夜莺谢绝了，它已经得到了足够的酬赏。

“我见到了皇上眼里的泪珠，这对我来说是最珍贵的宝藏！皇上的泪珠有一种神奇的力量。神知道我已经得到了足够的酬赏！”然后它又用天赐的甜美歌喉唱起歌来。

“这是我见过最可爱的尤物！”周围的宫女们说，有人跟她们说话的时候，她们就故意喝口水，在嘴里发出“咯咯”声：她们以为自己也是夜莺。太监和侍女们也表了态，说他们也很满意，这很说明问题，因为这些人是最难伺候的。没错，夜莺首演大获成功。

于是它在宫中住了下来，有了自己的笼子，它还有自由出去散步的时间，白天两次，夜晚一次。每次总有十二个随从跟着，每个人手里都攥着一根系在它腿上的丝线，还都拉得紧紧的，这样散步根本谈不上享受。

整座京城的人都在谈论这只出类拔萃的鸟，两个人在路上相遇，其中一个人别的不必多说，只要说：“夜——！”另一个人就会说：“莺！”然后他们就都叹一口气，彼此心领神会了，的确有十一个小贩的孩子都起名为“夜莺”，但其中没有一个唱歌着调的。

有一天皇帝收到一个大包裹，下面写着：“夜莺”。

“又一本写我们这只名鸟的书吧！”皇帝说。但包裹里不是书，而是一件小工艺品，装在一个盒子里，一只手工制造的夜莺，它很像那只活的夜莺，但全身镶满了钻石、红宝石和蓝宝石；只要给它上好发条，它就会唱一首真的夜莺唱过的歌，尾巴上下摆动着，晶莹剔透。它的脖颈上缠着一根小丝带，上面写着：“日本皇帝的夜莺，无法与中国皇帝的夜莺媲美。”

“太美了！”大家都说。而那个送来手工夜莺的人马上受封：首席皇家夜莺使者。

“现在让它们在一起唱歌吧！那会是多动听的二重唱呀！”

就这样，它们不得不起唱歌，但怎么都不对劲，因为那只真正的夜莺有自己的风格，而人造鸟是上发条的，只会按部就班。“没关系，”乐师说，“节奏很独特，还挺对我口味！”于是人造鸟就要独唱了——它取得了和真鸟不相上下的成功，另外，它的外表要美艳得多：它像手镯和胸针一样闪闪发亮。

同样的曲目，它唱了三十三遍，并且不厌其烦：大家都愿意再听下去，但皇帝却说也该让那只活的夜莺唱点儿什么了——但它去哪儿了？谁都没有注意到，它已经飞出窗外，回它的绿森林里去了。

“这到底是怎么回事！”皇帝说。满朝官员都在咒骂，说那只夜莺是个忘恩负义的畜生。“反正我们有一只最棒的鸟！”他们说，就这样，那只人造鸟不得不又唱了起来，这是他们第三十四次听同一首歌，但他们还是学不会，因为这首歌太难，乐师对这只鸟赞不绝口，可以肯定，它比那只真的夜莺好得多，不仅衣装以及镶有这么多精美钻石的外表，还有它的内在。

“各位大人，特别是皇帝陛下，恕我直言！谁都无法捉摸那只真的夜莺会唱出什么歌来，而这只人造鸟是有定式的！该怎么样就怎么样！大家可以搞清楚它的工作原理，可以把它拆开，看看其中的匠心，发条在哪里，它是怎么转动的，怎么一步接一步工作的——！”

“我差不多也是这么想的！”大家都说。于是乐师获准在下周日向民众展示这只鸟。他们也应该听听它的歌喉，皇帝说。他们听了，也很满意，就像畅饮香茶一般——因为喝茶是件很具中国特色的事，大家都说：“哇！”一边点头一边向天空举起食指。但那些贫穷的渔夫听到过真正夜莺的歌声，他们说：“声音够优美，也很逼真，但就是缺了点什么，我也不知道缺的是什么！”

真正的夜莺已被放逐出这片国土。

人造鸟紧挨着皇帝的床在一个真丝枕头上落了脚：它得到的所有礼品，金玉珠宝，都堆在它的周围，它的封号已经升为“至尊皇家床头歌手”，等级为左手边第一位，因为皇帝认为左边最尊贵，左边是心脏的位置，哪怕是皇帝的心脏。乐师为人造鸟写了长达二十五卷的书，文章渊博而冗长，使用了最繁难的汉字，大家都说他们读过并读懂了这部书，因为不这么说就是愚蠢，肚子上要挨板子的。

就这样过了整整一年；皇帝、群臣，以及所有其余的中国人都能背得出夜莺的歌里每一处细小的转折，但正因为这样大家才觉得最妙；他们可以跟着一起唱了。流浪儿唱着“唧唧唧！咕咕咕！”，皇帝也这么唱！——没错，这样肯定很美妙！

但某天晚上，人造鸟正唱着最拿手的曲目，皇帝躺在床上听着，鸟的身体里突然“噌！”的一声；哪儿断了什么东西，“唰！”，所有轮子都飞转起来，歌声戛然而止。

皇帝立即跳下床，唤来了他的御医，但喊御医有什么用！于是又传了一个钟表匠来，几番口舌和几番检视之后，他总算把鸟修了个八九不离十，但他说这只鸟以后可要省着点用，因为它的机芯已经锈蚀，换新的机芯让音乐恢复正常是不可能的了。这是一件非常悲伤的事！大家只敢让人造鸟一年演唱一次，就这样也已经算是勉为其难了；然而乐师用那些繁难的字眼做了个简短的发言，他说一切都跟过去一样好，于是一切就都算跟过去一样好。

五年过去了，整个国家遭遇了一场最重大的悲伤，因为大家都很喜欢他们的皇帝，而他现在病了，据说不久于人世，新的皇帝已经选好，老百姓都站在大街上，向侍臣打听皇帝的病情。

“唉！”他边说边摇头。

皇帝冰冷苍白地躺在他华丽的大床上。满朝文武都以为他死了，每个人都跑去向新皇帝请安。太监们都跑出来闲言碎语，宫女们开着盛大的茶话会。所有的大厅和走廊里都铺满了布，为了有人经过的时候不发出脚步声，所以到处都很寂静，非常寂静。但皇帝还没有死，他僵硬苍白地躺在华丽的床上，长长的天鹅绒帷幔和沉重的黄金穗饰；高处开着一扇窗，月亮照进来，月光洒在皇帝和人造鸟身上。

可怜的皇帝几乎透不过气来，感觉就像胸口压着什么东西；他勉强睁开眼睛，看到死神坐在他胸口上，头上戴着金冠，一只手握着皇帝的金剑，另一只手举着他那柄华丽的令旗；他的四周，天鹅绒帷幔的褶皱里探出许多奇形怪状的脑袋来，有些很丑陋，有些很祥和：这些都是皇帝的恶业和善行，他们都瞪着他，而死神就坐在他的心坎上。

“你还记得吗？”脑袋一个接一个地低声问，“你还记得吗？”他们对他讲了许多往事，搞得他满头冷汗。

“朕从来都不知道！”皇帝说。“奏乐，奏乐，大鼓敲起来！”他喊道，“别让朕听到他们说的话！”

但他们还是挥之不去，不管说什么，死神都点头。

“奏乐，奏乐！”皇帝大叫，“你这祥瑞的小金鸟！唱呀，唱呀！朕给你穿金戴银，还亲自把朕的金拖鞋挂在你的脖颈上，唱呀，唱呀！”

但那只鸟一声不吭地站在那儿，没人来给它上发条，它也就不会唱歌；但死神仍然用他空洞的大眼睛瞪着皇帝，四周一片寂静，寂静得可怕。

就在这时，紧挨着窗传来了那最美丽的歌声，是那只活着的小夜莺，它站在窗外的树枝上；它听说皇帝病危，所以赶来用歌声送上安慰与希望。随着它的歌声，那些鬼魂越来越苍白，血液在皇帝孱弱的四肢中流淌得越来越快，连死神都在聆听，他说：“唱下去，小夜莺，唱下去吧！”

“好的，但把华丽的金剑交给我吧！把贵重的令旗也给我吧！把皇帝的金冠也给我吧！”

死神用每一件宝物交换一首歌，夜莺就一直唱下去，它唱到寂静的墓园，白色的玫瑰在那儿生长，接骨木树在那儿散发着幽香，嫩草在那儿沐浴着遗属的眼泪；这让死神怀念起自己的花园来，化作一缕冰冷的白雾，飘出窗外。

“谢谢，谢谢！”皇帝说，“你这只天使般的小鸟，朕认得你！是朕把你逐出朕的国土的！而你却用歌唱驱除了朕床边的恶灵，让死神离开朕的心坎！朕该如何酬谢你？”

“你已经酬谢过我了！”夜莺说，“第一次歌唱的时候，我已从你的眼里唱出了泪珠，我将永生不忘！那些泪珠是珍宝，让歌唱的心受益匪浅。但现在快睡吧，变得健康强壮起来！我会为你歌唱！”

于是它唱了起来——而皇帝就这么进入了甜美的梦乡，温柔而祥

和！

他醒来时感觉强健而康明，阳光从窗口洒进来，照耀着他；他的侍从一个都还没有来，因为他们以为，他死了。但夜莺仍在那里唱着歌。

“你要永远和朕在一起！”皇帝说，“只有你想唱的时候才需要唱，那只人造鸟朕要把它摔成碎片。”

“别这样！”夜莺说，“它已经尽力了！永远留着它吧！我无法在宫中安家定居，但让我想来的时候就来吧，那样我会在傍晚停在窗边的树枝上，为你歌唱，这样你就会快乐并格外地深思，我将歌唱那些幸福的人以及那些煎熬的人！我将歌唱善与恶，它们就隐藏在你的周围。我这唱歌的小鸟还要到处飞翔，去找贫穷的渔夫，去农家的屋顶，去每个远离你和你宫殿的地方。我爱你的心远胜于你的皇冠，然而皇冠本身也有某种神圣的气息！——我会前来为你歌唱！——但有一件事你必须向我承诺。”

“任何事！”皇帝说，他亲自穿上自己的龙袍站在那儿，手持沉重而闪耀的金剑抵住自己的心口。

“我只求你一件事！别告诉任何人你有一只会把什么都告诉你的小鸟，这样一切都会变得更美好。”

然后夜莺就飞走了。

侍从们进来想为他们死去的皇帝善后——他们就这么站在那儿，而皇帝却说：“早上好！”

红鞋

有个小女孩，既可爱又漂亮，但一到夏天她就不得不到哪儿都打着赤脚，因为她很穷。冬天她穿一双大木鞋，小脚背都红了，看着挺吓人。

村子的正中央住着年迈的鞋匠姥姥，她坐在那儿穿针引线，竭尽全力，用旧红布条缝出了一双小鞋，很笨拙，但很用心，这双鞋就是给那个小女孩的。小姑娘名叫卡伦。

就在她的母亲下葬的那天，她得到了那双红鞋并第一次穿上了它们；这双鞋哀悼的时候穿的确不合时宜，但她也没有别的鞋子可穿，于是她就光着脚穿着它们，跟在一口简陋的稻草棺材后面走。

这时突然出现了一辆高大的老爷车，里面坐着一位高大的老妇人，她看着这个小姑娘，心里非常地怜惜，于是就对牧师说：“听着，把这个小姑娘给我吧，我会好好待她的！”

卡伦以为这都是因为那双红鞋，但老妇人却说它们太丑了，于是就把鞋烧了。但卡伦自己却穿上了干净得体的衣服；她必须学习读书和缝纫，大家都说她很漂亮。但她的镜子说：“你岂止是漂亮，你美极了！”

有一次王后周游全国，随行的还有她的小女儿，也就是公主，人们蜂拥来到城堡门外，其中就有卡伦，小公主穿一身精致的白衣服，站在窗子里给大家欣赏；她既没有拖着长长的裙摆，也没有戴金冠，但穿着一双美丽的红色萨非皮鞋；它们确实比鞋匠姥姥为小卡伦缝的鞋好看得多。世上没有什么东西能和红鞋相提并论！

现在卡伦长大了，要参加成人礼，她得到了新衣服，还有新鞋子。城里有钱的鞋匠为她的小脚丫量了尺寸，是在他自己家的客厅里量的，厅里立着大玻璃柜，里面摆着迷人的鞋子和光鲜的靴子。那儿看上去很漂亮，但老妇人眼神不好，所以也受用不到。在这些鞋子中间有一双红鞋，像极了公主穿的那双，真是美极了！鞋匠也说这双鞋是为一位伯爵的女儿缝的，但鞋不合脚。

“一定是打光革的！”老妇人说，“好亮！”

“是的，好亮！”卡伦说。鞋子很合脚，于是她们就买了下来；但老妇人并不知道鞋是红色的，不然她决不会让卡伦穿着红鞋参加成人礼，但是她还是这么去了。

所有人都看着她的脚，当她穿过教堂的大厅走向诗班席大门的时候，她觉得就连墓碑上的古画——那些戴着硬邦邦的襕襟穿着黑色长袍的牧师和牧师夫人的肖像，都把目光锁定在她的红鞋上。牧师把手搭在她的头上，讲述神圣的洗礼，对上帝的誓约，说她已经是成年的基督徒，但哪怕这个时候，她想的还是那双鞋；风琴演奏的音乐如此庄严，优美的童声在唱，年迈的领唱也在唱，但卡伦想的只有那双红鞋。

下午连那个老妇人都知道鞋是红色的，她说这太糟糕，太不合时宜，卡伦从此以后去教堂都必须穿黑色的鞋子，哪怕是旧鞋。

下一个星期日是圣餐礼，卡伦看了看那双黑鞋，又看了看那双红鞋——然后她又看了看红鞋，拿起来穿在了脚上。

那天阳光明媚，卡伦和老妇人穿过田间小径，灰尘弥漫。

教堂门口站着一个老兵，拄着一根拐杖，留着一把奇怪的长胡子，胡子的颜色比白色要红，因为它就是红色的；他深深地鞠了个躬，脑袋几乎着了地，并问老妇人他能不能擦擦她的鞋。卡伦也把她的小脚伸了出来。“瞧，多美丽的舞鞋啊！”士兵说，“你跳舞的时候鞋也穿得牢！”说着他用手敲敲鞋底。

老妇人给士兵一个小铜币，然后带着卡伦走进教堂。

教堂里所有人都看着卡伦的红鞋，所有的画像也都在看着它们，当卡伦跪在圣坛前，把圣杯端到嘴边的时候，她想的只有她的红鞋，就像它们在圣杯中为了她游来荡去；她忘了唱赞美诗，她忘了念“亲爱的圣父”。

之后大家都走出教堂，老妇人迈进她的马车。卡伦跟在后面抬起脚，这时那个站在她们身旁的老兵说：“瞧，多美丽的舞鞋啊！”卡伦忍不住想跳几个舞步，她一开始跳起来，双腿就停不下来，就像这双鞋控制了它们；她绕着教堂一角跳了一圈，她忍不住；车夫不得不跟在她身后，跑过来一把抓住她，把她抱进马车里，但她的脚仍在舞蹈，结果她狠狠地踢了那位好心的老妇人。最后他们终于脱下了她的鞋，腿才恢复平静。

回家后，这双鞋放进了柜子里，但卡伦还是忍不住想看看它们。

后来老妇人病倒了，大家都说她将不久于人世！她需要有人照顾护理，她身边没有比卡伦更亲近的人了。但正巧城里举行盛大的舞会，也邀请了卡伦。她看了看那位老妇人，反正她将不久于人世，她又看了看那双红鞋，觉得看看也不算什么罪孽。她穿上这双红鞋，穿穿总可以吧。然而她还是去参加了舞会，并且又开始跳舞。

但她想往右，鞋偏跳向左，她想向前，鞋却偏跳向后，下楼，穿

过大街，出城门。她跳着舞，不得不跳着舞，一直跳到黑暗的森林里。

树丛中亮起一束光，她以为那是月亮，因为她看到一张脸，但那是那个红胡子老兵，他坐在那儿点着头说：“瞧，多美丽的舞鞋啊！”

她害怕起来，想把红鞋扔掉，但它们紧紧地箍着她的脚，她扯下了她的袜子，但鞋已经长在了她的脚上。她跳着舞，不得不跳舞，穿过田野和草坪，无论雨淋还是日晒，无论黑夜还是白昼，而黑夜是最可怕的。

她跳进一座开放的墓园，不过那儿的亡灵不跳舞，他们有比跳舞更重要的事要做；她想在一座长满苦涩菊蒿的陋坟上坐一下，但她根本不得安宁，于是她跳到敞开着教堂门口，在那儿她看到一位身穿白色长袍的天使。他的翅膀一直从肩膀拖到地上，他的表情庄重而严肃，他手中持着一把宽宽的剑。

“你要跳舞！”他说，“穿着你的红鞋跳舞，直到你变得苍白冰冷！直到你的肌肤萎缩，把你变成一具骨架。你要从一户人家跳到另一户人家，那些家里住着傲慢可恶的孩子，你要敲他们的门，让他们听到你的声音并怕你！你要跳舞，跳舞——！”

“宽恕我！”卡伦喊道。但她没有听到天使的回答，因为鞋把她带出了门，带到田野上，穿过大路，穿过小径，她得一直跳舞。

一天早晨她跳过一扇门，她很熟悉的门；里面传出赞美诗来，人们抬出一口棺材，上面装饰着花朵；这时她才知道老妇人死了，她觉得自己已经被所有人遗弃并受到了上帝天使的诅咒。

她跳着舞，不得不跳着舞，在漆黑的夜里跳着舞。鞋带着她穿过满是荆棘和木桩的地方，把她扎出了血；她跳着舞穿过荒地来到一座孤零零的小屋跟前。她知道那个刽子手住在这儿，她用手指敲着玻璃窗上说：“出来！——出来！——我进不来，因为我在跳舞！”

刽子手说：“你难道不知道我是谁？我会砍掉恶人的脑袋，我能感觉到我的斧子已经在颤动了！”

“别砍我的头，”卡伦说，“因为这样我就不能忏悔我的罪过了。但把我的脚砍掉吧，连我的鞋一起！”

于是她坦白了自己所有的罪孽，刽子手砍下了她穿着红鞋的脚，但鞋带着她的小脚跳着舞穿过田野，跳进了茂密的森林深处。

他为她削了一双木脚和一副拐杖，还教给她一首罪人常唱的赞美诗，她吻了那只握斧子的手，然后穿过荒地而去。

“我已经受够了那双红鞋的折磨！”她说，“现在我要去教堂，让大

家看看我！”于是她飞快地走向教堂大门，但她到那儿的时候，红鞋就在她面前跳舞，她吓坏了，只得转身离开。

整个星期她都很悲伤，流了许多沉重的眼泪，但星期天到来的时候，她说：“看吧，我已经受尽折磨竭尽全力！我觉得，我已经和那些昂首坐在教堂里的人一样善良了！”于是她勇敢地去了；但她还是只走到门口，她又看到那双红鞋在面前跳舞，她吓坏了，转过身，并打心底忏悔起她的罪过。

她走到牧师家，请求在那里服务，她会勤勤恳恳地工作，做所有力所能及的事，她无所谓报酬，只求有一个安身之处，有好人为伴。牧师夫人可怜她，收留了她。她的确很勤恳也很用心。晚上牧师朗读《圣经》的时候，她就静静地坐下来听。所有孩子都很喜欢她，但他们说起装饰、城市，以及她像皇后一样美丽的时候，她就摇头。

接下来的星期天，一家人都要去教堂，他们问她愿不愿意一起去，但她噙着眼泪，悲伤地看着她的拐杖，于是其他人都去听上帝的训诫，而她独自走进自己的小房间；地方不大，只够放一张床和一把椅子。她坐下拿起自己的赞美诗；无比虔诚地读起来，随风传来教堂的管风琴声，她抬起头，泪流满面地说：“哦，上帝，救救我！”

阳光如此明媚地照耀着，她的面前出现了上帝的白衣天使，就是那天晚上她在教堂门口见到的那位，但他手中拿着的不再是锋利的剑，而是开满玫瑰的绿枝，他用它触碰了一下天花板，天花板就高高地升了起来，凡是他触碰过的地方，都会有一颗金色的星星在闪烁，他触碰了一下墙壁，墙壁就延展开来，她看到了演奏着的管风琴，她看到了画有牧师和牧师夫人的古画；人们坐在装饰过的座位上，唱着他们的赞美诗。要不是教堂为可怜的小女孩来到这逼仄的小房间里，就是她已经进了教堂；她和牧师家的其他人一起坐在座位上，当他们唱完赞美诗抬起头的时候，他们点点头说：“你来对了，卡伦！”

“这是上帝的恩典！”她说。

风琴鸣响，童声合唱如此温柔优美。明媚的阳光温暖地透过窗户洒在卡伦坐着的教堂长椅上；她的心被阳光、平和与欢乐充盈，直至破碎；她的灵魂顺着阳光飞向上帝，在天堂再也没人问起那双红鞋。

‘There sat the dog with eyes as big as mill wheels.’

The T inderbox

A soldier came marching along the road: left, right! left, right! He had his knapsack on his back and a sword at his side, because he had been off to war, and now he was on his way home. Then he met an old witch on the road. She was so hideous, her lower lip hung all the way down to her breast. She said, 'Good evening, soldier. What a nice sword and big knapsack you have – you must be a real soldier! Now you shall have all the money you could ask for!'

'Well, thanks a lot, you old witch,' said the soldier.

'Do you see that big tree?' said the witch, pointing at a tree right next to them. 'It's completely hollow inside. Climb up to the top and you'll find a hole that you can slip into and slide all the way down inside the tree. I'll tie a rope around your waist so I can hoist you back up when you call me.'

'Why would I go inside that tree?' asked the soldier.

'To get the money!' said the witch. 'You see, when you reach the bottom of the tree, you'll be in a huge passageway that's very bright because it's lit by more than a hundred lamps. Then you'll see three doors, and you'll be able to open them because the keys are in the locks. If you go inside the first chamber you'll see a big chest in the middle of the room, and on top of it sits a dog. He has eyes as big as a pair of teacups, but never mind that. I'll give you my blue- checked apron that you can spread on the floor. Go right over and pick up the dog and set him on my apron. Then open the chest and take as many skillings as you like. They're all made of copper, but if you'd rather have silver, then go into the next room. In there is a dog with eyes as big as a pair of mill wheels, but never mind that. Set him on my apron and take the money. But if it's gold you want, you can have that too, and as much as you can carry, if you go into the third chamber. But the dog sitting on the money chest has two eyes that are each as big as the Round Tower. Now that's a real dog, believe me! But never you mind. Just set him on my apron and he won't harm you. Then take from the chest as much gold as you like.'

'Not bad,' said the soldier. 'But what do I have to give you in return, you old witch? Because I imagine there must be something you want.'

'No,' said the witch, 'I don't want a single skilling. All you have to bring me is an old tinderbox that my grandmother left behind when she was down there last.'

'Fine. Then let's have that rope around my waist,' said the soldier.

'Here it is,' said the witch. 'And here is my blue- checked apron.'

So the soldier climbed up the tree, tumbled down the hole, and then, just as the witch had said, he stood inside the huge passageway where hundreds of lamps were burning.

He opened the first door. Ooh! There sat the dog with eyes as big as teacups, staring at him.

'You're a handsome fellow!' said the soldier and set him on the witch's apron. Then he took as many copper skillings as his pockets would hold, closed the chest, put the dog back, and went into the second room. Eeek! There sat the dog with eyes as big as mill wheels.

'You shouldn't look at me so hard,' said the soldier. 'You might hurt your eyes!' And then he set the dog on the witch's apron, but when he saw all the silver coins inside the chest he threw away the copper coins he was carrying and filled his pockets and his knapsack with nothing but silver. Next he went into the third chamber. Oh, how hideous! The dog in there really did have eyes as big as round towers, and they were spinning around in his head like wheels.

'Good evening,' said the soldier and doffed his cap, for he had never seen a dog like that before. But after he'd looked at him for a while, he thought to himself, 'All right, that's enough.' And he lifted him onto the floor and opened the chest. Good Lord, there was a lot of gold! Enough to buy all of Copenhagen and every single sugar-pig sold by the cake- wives, and all the tin soldiers, whips, and rocking horses in the whole world! Yes, there was certainly plenty of money! So the soldier threw away all the silver coins that filled his pockets and knapsack and took the gold instead. Yes, all his pockets, his knapsack, his cap, and his boots were so full that he could hardly walk. Now he had money! He put the dog back on the chest, slammed the door shut, and called up through the tree:

‘Hoist me up now, you old witch!’

‘Do you have the tinderbox?’ asked the witch.

‘Oh, that’s right,’ said the soldier. ‘I forgot all about it.’ And he went over and picked it up. The witch hoisted him up and he once again stood on the road, with his pockets, boots, knapsack, and cap full of money.

‘What do you want the tinderbox for?’ asked the soldier.

‘That’s none of your business,’ said the witch. ‘You’ve got the money. Now just give me the tinderbox.’

‘Pish posh!’ said the soldier. ‘Tell me right now what you want it for or I’ll pull out my sword and chop off your head!’

‘No,’ said the witch.

So the soldier chopped off her head. There she lay! But he wrapped up all his money in her apron, slung it in a bundle over his shoulder, stuffed the tinderbox in his pocket, and headed straight for the city.

It was a lovely city, and he went inside the loveliest of inns and demanded the very best rooms and his favorite food, because now he had so much money that he was rich.

The servant who was supposed to polish his boots thought they were rather strange old boots for such a rich gentleman to be wearing, but he hadn’t yet bought himself new ones. By the next day he had a good pair of boots and fine clothes to wear. The soldier was now a distinguished gentleman, and the people told him about all the splendid things to be found in their city, and about their king and what a charming princess his daughter was.

‘Where might I catch a glimpse of her?’ asked the soldier.

‘It’s impossible to catch a glimpse of her,’ they all said. ‘She lives in an enormous copper palace surrounded by dozens of walls and towers. No one but the king dares visit her, because it was foretold that she would marry a simple soldier, and that certainly did not please the king.'

'She's someone I'd like to see,' thought the soldier, but that wasn't possible.

He was now leading a merry life, going to the theater, taking drives in the king's gardens, and giving away a great deal of money to the poor, which was a very nice gesture. No doubt he remembered from the old days how miserable it was not to have even a skilling. He was now rich and wore fine clothes, and had so many friends who all said that he was a pleasant fellow, a real gentleman, and that certainly pleased the soldier. But since he was spending money each day and not taking any in, he finally had no more than two skillings left and had to move out of the beautiful rooms where he had been living and into a tiny little garret room right under the roof. He had to brush his own boots and mend them with a darning needle, and none of his friends came to see him because there were too many stairs to climb.

It was a very dark evening, and he couldn't even afford to buy a candle, but then he remembered there was a little stump of one in the tinderbox he had taken from the hollow tree when the witch had helped him inside. He took out the tinderbox and the candle stump, but the minute he struck fire and sparks leaped from the flint, the door flew open and the dog that he had seen inside the tree, the one with eyes as big as two teacups, stood before him and said, 'What is my master's command?'

'What's this?' said the soldier. 'What an amusing tinderbox, if I can wish for whatever I want! Bring me some money,' he said to the dog, and zip, he was gone; zip, he was back, holding a big sack of skillings in his mouth.

Now the soldier realized what a wonderful tinderbox it was. If he struck it once, the dog who sat on the chest of copper coins came; if he struck it twice, the one with the silver coins came; and if he struck it three times, the one with the gold came. Now the soldier moved back downstairs to the beautiful rooms, dressed in fine clothing, and all his friends recognized him again, because they were so fond of him.

One day he thought, 'How odd that no one is allowed to see that princess. Everyone says she's supposed to be so lovely. But what good is it if she's always kept inside that enormous copper palace with all the towers? Couldn't I possibly have a look at her? Where's my tinderbox?' And then he struck fire and zip, the dog with eyes as big as teacups appeared.

'I know it's the middle of the night,' said the soldier, 'but I have such a great desire to see the princess, if only for a moment.'

The dog was out the door at once, and before the soldier knew it, he was back with the princess. She was sitting on the dog's back, asleep, and she was so lovely that anyone could see she was a real princess. The soldier couldn't resist, he had to kiss her, because he was a real soldier.

Then the dog ran back with the princess, but when morning came and the king and queen were pouring their tea, the princess said that she'd had a strange dream in the night about a dog and a soldier. She was riding on the dog's back, and the soldier had kissed her.

'That's certainly a fine story!' said the queen.

One of the old ladies- in- waiting was then ordered to keep watch at the bedside of the princess on the following night, to see if it was really a dream, or what else it might be.

The soldier was longing terribly to see the lovely princess once more, so the dog appeared in the night, picked her up, and ran as fast as he could, but the old lady- in- waiting put on her wading boots and ran just as swiftly right behind. When she saw them disappear inside a large building, she thought to herself: Now I know where it is. And with a piece of chalk she drew a big cross on the door. Then she returned home and went to bed, and the dog came back too, bringing the princess. But when he saw that a cross had been drawn on the door where the soldier lived, he took another piece of chalk and put a cross on all the doors in the whole city. That was a clever thing to do, because now the lady- in- waiting wouldn't be able to find the right door, since there were crosses on all of them.

Early the next morning the king and queen, the old lady- in- waiting, and all the officers went out to see where the princess had been.

‘There it is!’ said the king when he saw the first door with a cross on it.

‘No, it’s over there, my dear husband,’ said the queen, who saw another door with a cross on it.

‘But there’s one there, and one there!’ they all said. Wherever they looked, there was a cross on every door. Then they realized it was no use to go on searching.

But the queen was a very clever woman who was capable of more than just riding around in a coach. She took her big golden scissors, cut a large piece of silk into pieces, and then stitched together a charming little pouch, which she filled with fine grains of buckwheat. She tied it to the back of the princess, and when that was done, she cut a tiny hole in the pouch so the grains would sprinkle out wherever the princess went.

That night the dog appeared once again, put the princess on his back, and ran off with her to the soldier, who loved her so much and wanted dearly to be a prince so that he could make her his wife.

The dog didn’t notice the grain sprinkling out all the way from the palace to the soldier’s window, as he ran along the wall, carrying the princess. In the morning the king and queen could see quite well where their daughter had been, and they seized the soldier and threw him into jail.

And there he sat. Oh, how dark and dreary it was, and then they told him, ‘Tomorrow you will hang.’ That was not a pleasant thing to hear, and he had left his tinderbox behind at the inn. In the morning he could see through the iron bars on the little window that people were hurrying to the outskirts of the city to watch him hang. He heard the drums and saw the marching soldiers. Everyone was in a great rush, including a shoemaker’s apprentice wearing a leather apron and slippers. He was moving along at such a gallop that one of his slippers flew off and struck the wall right where the soldier was sitting, peering out through the iron bars.

‘Hey, shoemaker’s apprentice! You don’t have to be in such a rush,’ said the soldier. ‘Nothing’s going to happen until I get there. But if you run over to the place where I was staying and bring me my tinderbox, I'll give you four skillings . But you have to be quick about it!' The shoemaker's apprentice wanted those four skillings , so he raced off to get the tinderbox, brought it to the soldier, and . . . well, let's hear what happened.

Outside the city a huge gallows had been built, and around it stood the soldiers and many hundreds of thousands of people. The king and queen sat on a lovely throne right across from the judge and the entire council.

The soldier was already standing on the ladder, but as they were about to put the rope around his neck, he said that before a sinner faced his punishment he was always allowed one harmless request. He dearly wanted to smoke a pipe of tobacco; it would be the last pipe he had in this world.

Now, that was not something the king could refuse, and so the soldier took out his tinderbox and struck fire, one, two, three! And there stood all three dogs: the one with eyes as big as teacups, the one with eyes like mill wheels, and the one with eyes as big as the Round Tower.

'Help me now, so I won't be hanged!' said the soldier, and then the dogs rushed at the judge and the entire council, seizing one by the leg and one by the nose, and flinging them high into the air so they fell back down and were crushed to bits.

'Not me!' said the king, but the biggest dog seized both him and the queen and tossed them after all the others. Then the soldiers were afraid, and all the people shouted, 'Little soldier, you shall be our king and wed the lovely princess!'

They put the soldier in the king's coach, and all three dogs danced before it, shouting, 'Hurrah!' The boys whistled through their fingers, and the soldiers presented arms. The princess came out of the copper palace and became queen, and that certainly pleased her! The wedding celebration lasted for a week, and the dogs sat at the table too, making big eyes.

Little Claus and Big Claus

There was a town where two men had the very same name. Both of them were named Claus, but one owned four horses while the other had only one. In order to tell them apart, people called the man with four horses Big Claus, and the man with only one horse Little Claus. Now we're going to hear what happened between those two, because this is a real story!

All week long Little Claus had to do the plowing for Big Claus, lending him his only horse. Then Big Claus would help him in return with all four of his horses, but only once a week, and that was on Sunday. Hee- ya! How Little Claus would crack his whip at all five horses. They might as well have belonged to him on that one day. The sun shone so wondrously, and all the bells in the tower rang, summoning people to church. Everyone was dressed in their best, walking with their hymnals under their arms, on their way to hear the pastor preach. And they looked at Little Claus, who was plowing with five horses, and he was so pleased that he cracked his whip again and shouted, 'Giddy- up, all my horses!'

'You shouldn't say that,' said Big Claus. 'Only one of those horses is yours.'

But when someone else passed by on his way to church, Little Claus forgot that he wasn't supposed to say that and he shouted, 'Giddy- up, all my horses!'

'All right, now I really must ask you to stop that,' said Big Claus. 'Because if you say it one more time, I'm going to strike your horse on the forehead, and he'll drop dead on the spot, and that will be the end of him.'

'Well, I certainly won't say it again,' said Little Claus, but when people came past and nodded hello, he was so pleased and thought it looked so splendid that he had five horses plowing his field that he cracked his whip and shouted, 'Giddy- up, all my horses!'

'I'll giddy- up your horses!' said Big Claus, and he seized the tethering mallet and struck Little Claus's only horse on the forehead so that it fell to the ground, stone dead.

‘Oh no, now I have no horse at all!’ said Little Claus and began to cry. Later he flayed the horse and let the hide dry in the wind. Then he stuffed it in a sack that he hoisted onto his back and set off for town to sell his horsehide.

He had such a long way to go. He had to pass through a big, dark forest, and a terrible storm came up. He completely lost his way, and before he found the right road, dusk had fallen, and it was much too far to reach town or to go back home before night came.

Close to the road stood a large farm. The shutters on all the windows were closed, and yet there was a glimpse of light above. Surely they’ll let me spend the night here, thought Little Claus, and he went over and knocked.

The farmer’s wife opened the door, but when she heard what he wanted, she told him to keep on going. Her husband wasn’t home, and she didn’t take in strangers.

‘Well, then I guess I’ll have to sleep outside,’ said Little Claus, and the farmer’s wife shut the door in his face.

Nearby stood a big haystack, and between the haystack and house a little shed had been built with a flat, thatched roof.

‘I can sleep up there,’ said Little Claus when he saw the roof. ‘That would make a lovely bed, and I’m sure the stork isn’t going to fly down and bite me on the leg.’ A real live stork was standing on the roof, where it had made a nest.

So Little Claus climbed up onto the shed, lay down, and turned onto his side to settle in properly. The wooden shutters on the windows of the house didn’t quite meet at the top, which meant that he could peek into the room.

A great feast had been laid out with wine and a roast and such a lovely fish. The farmer’s wife and the deacon were sitting at the table, all alone. She was pouring wine for him, and he began with the fish, because he was awfully fond of fish.

‘If only I could have a bite too,’ said Little Claus, craning his neck toward the window. Lord, what a lovely cake he could see in there. Oh yes, it was quite a feast.

Then he heard someone come riding along the road toward the house. It was the woman's husband, on his way home.

Now, it's true that he was a good man, but he had a strange affliction: He couldn't stand to see deacons. If he caught sight of a deacon, he would grow quite furious. That was also why the deacon had come to visit the woman when he knew that her husband wasn't home, and that's why the good woman had set out for him the best food she could offer. When they heard her husband coming, they were both terrified. The woman told the deacon to climb into a big empty chest that stood in the corner, which he did, because he knew full well that the poor man couldn't stand the sight of a deacon. The woman quickly hid all the wonderful food and wine inside her baking oven, because if her husband saw it, he was sure to ask what was going on.

'Oh no!' sighed Little Claus up on the shed when he saw all the food disappear.

'Is somebody up there?' asked the farmer, peering up at Little Claus. 'Why are you lying up there? Come on into the house!'

Then Little Claus told him how he had lost his way and asked if he might stay the night.

'Yes, of course,' said the farmer. 'But first we'll have a bite to eat.'

The woman welcomed them both, set dishes on a long table, and brought them a big bowl of porridge. The farmer was hungry and ate with gusto, but Little Claus couldn't help thinking about the wonderful roast, fish, and cake that he knew were hidden in the oven.

Under the table at his feet he had put the sack with the horsehide in it, because we know, after all, that this was what he had brought from home to sell in town. The porridge was not at all to his liking, and so he stepped on his sack, and the dry horsehide inside creaked quite loudly.

'Hush!' said Little Claus to his sack, but at the same instant he stepped on it again, and it creaked even louder than before.

'Tell me, what do you have in your bag?' asked the farmer.

'Oh, it's a troll,' said Little Claus. 'He says we shouldn't eat the porridge because he has conjured a whole oven full of roast and fish and cake.'

'Is that right?' said the farmer and quickly opened the oven. There he saw all the wonderful food that his wife had hidden, but he now thought the troll in the bag had conjured it up. His wife didn't dare say a word but set the food on the table at once, and so they ate the fish and the roast and the cake. Then Little Claus stepped on his sack again, making the hide creak.

'What's he saying now?' asked the farmer.

'He says,' said Little Claus, 'that he has also conjured up three bottles of wine for us, and they're standing over in the corner by the oven.' Then the woman had to bring out the wine she had hidden, and the farmer drank and grew quite merry. A troll like the one that Little Claus had in his bag was something that he would certainly like to own.

'Can he also conjure up the Devil?' asked the farmer. 'That's someone I'd really like to see, now that I'm feeling so merry.'

'Yes,' said Little Claus, 'my troll can do anything I ask. Isn't that right?' he said as he stepped on the bag, making it creak. 'Did you hear him say yes? But the Devil looks so horrid that you wouldn't want to look at him.'

'Oh, I'm not the least bit afraid. How bad do you think he could look?'

'Well, he's going to look exactly like a deacon.'

'Whoa!' said the farmer. 'That's ghastly, all right. I must tell you that I can't stand the sight of deacons. But that doesn't matter, because I'll know it's the Devil, so it won't bother me as much. I'm feeling brave now. But don't let him come too close.'

'Let me ask my troll,' said Little Claus, and he stepped on the bag, cupping his ear.

'What does he say?'

'He says that you can go over and open the chest that's standing in the corner, and you'll see the Devil moping inside, but you have to hold on to the lid so he doesn't get out.'

'Come and help me hold on to it,' said the farmer, and he went over to the chest where his wife had hidden the real deacon, who sat there completely terrified.

The farmer lifted the lid slightly and peeked inside. 'Whoa!' he yelled, jumping back. 'I saw him all right, and he looks just like our deacon! Oh, that was terrible!'

After that they had to have a drink, and then they kept on drinking until late into the night.

'You've got to sell me that troll,' said the farmer. 'Ask whatever price you like. Why, I'd even give you a whole bushelful of money!'

'No, I can't do that,' that Claus. 'Just think how much I'll gain from owning this troll.'

'Oh, but I'd certainly like to have it,' said the farmer, and he kept on begging.

'All right,' said Little Claus at last. 'Since you've been kind enough to give me shelter for the night, I can't refuse. You can have the troll for a bushel of money, but I want the bushel to be full to the brim.'

'And that's what you'll get,' said the farmer, 'but you have to take that chest over there with you. I refuse to have it in the house for even an hour longer. There's no telling whether he's still inside.'

Little Claus gave the farmer the sack with the dried horsehide and got in return a whole bushel of money, full to the brim. The farmer even presented him with a big wheelbarrow for carrying the money and the chest.

'Farewell!' said Little Claus, and then he set off with his money and the big chest in which the deacon was still sitting.

On the other side of the woods was a big, deep river. The water was running so fast that it was almost impossible to swim against the current. A big new bridge had been built across it. Little Claus stopped in the middle of the bridge and said very loudly so that the deacon inside the chest would hear him:

'Well, what do I need this stupid chest for? It's so heavy it feels like it's full of rocks. I'm getting awfully tired of carting it around, so I think I'll throw it in the river. If it floats home to me, that's fine, but if it doesn't, it won't matter at all.'

Then he grabbed one handle of the chest and lifted it slightly, as if he were going to shove it into the water.

‘No, stop!’ yelled the deacon inside the chest. ‘Let me out!’

‘Ooh!’ said Little Claus, pretending to be scared. ‘He’s still inside! I’ve got to toss it in the river as quick as I can so he’ll drown.’

‘Oh no, oh no!’ shouted the deacon. ‘I’ll give you a whole bushelful of money if you don’t.’

‘Well, that’s a different story,’ said Little Claus, and opened the chest. The deacon crawled out at once, shoved the empty chest into the water, and went off to his house, where he gave Little Claus a whole bushelful of money. Little Claus already had one bushel from the farmer; now his whole wheelbarrow was full of money.

‘Look at that, I certainly did get a good price for that horse,’ he said to himself when he came back to his own house and dumped all the money in a big heap in the middle of the floor. ‘Big Claus will be annoyed when he finds out how rich I’ve become from my only horse, but I’m not going to come right out and tell him about it.’

Then he sent a boy over to Big Claus to borrow a bushel measure.

‘I wonder what he wants it for,’ thought Big Claus, and smeared tar inside the bottom so that a little of whatever was being weighed would stick to it. And it did, because when he got the bushel measure back, there were three new silver eight- skilling coins stuck to it.

‘What’s this?’ said Big Claus and ran right over to see Little Claus. ‘Where did you get all this money?’

‘Oh, I got it for my horsehide. I sold it last night.’

‘That was certainly a good price!’ said Big Claus, and he raced back home, picked up an ax, and struck every one of his four horses on the forehead. Then he skinned them and drove into town with the hides.

‘Hides! Hides! Who wants to buy hides?’ he shouted through the streets.

All the shoemakers and tanners came running and asked him how much he wanted for the hides.

‘A bushel of money for each of them,’ said Big Claus.

‘Are you crazy?’ they all said. ‘Do you think we have bushels of money?’

‘Hides, hides! Who wants to buy hides?’ he shouted again, but to everyone who asked how much the hides cost, he replied, ‘A bushel of money.’

‘He’s trying to make fools of us,’ they all said. Then the shoemakers picked up their straps and the tanners their leather aprons, and they all started beating Big Claus.

‘Hides, hides!’ they jeered at him. ‘Oh yes, we’ll give you a hide that bleeds like a pig! Now get out of town!’ they shouted, and Big Claus had to rush off as fast as he could. He had never been beaten so badly in his life.

‘Well!’ he said when he got home. ‘Little Claus is going to pay for this. I’m going to murder him for this!’

But back at Little Claus’s house his grandmother had just died. Now, it’s true that she had been terribly ill-tempered and mean toward him, but even so he was quite sad. He took the dead woman and put her in his warm bed to see whether she might come back to life. There she would lie all night long while he slept in the corner, sitting on a chair; that was something he had done before.

As he was sitting there that night, the door opened and Big Claus came in with an ax. He knew where Little Claus’s bed stood, and he went right over and struck the dead grandmother on the forehead, thinking that it was Little Claus.

‘Take that!’ he said. ‘Now you won’t make a fool of me anymore.’ And then he went back home.

‘What a mean and evil man,’ said Little Claus. ‘He wanted to murder me, but it’s a good thing the old lady was already dead, or he would have taken her life.’

Then he dressed his old grandmother in her Sunday best, borrowed a horse from his neighbor, harnessed it to his wagon, and put his old grandmother on the back seat so that she wouldn’t fall out when he started driving. Then they headed off through the woods. When the sun came up, they were outside a big inn, where Little Claus stopped and went inside to get a bite to eat.

The innkeeper was very, very rich, and he was also a good man, but hot-tempered, as if there were pepper and tobacco inside of him.

‘Good morning,’ he said to Little Claus. ‘You’ve put on your fine clothes awfully early today.’

‘Yes,’ said Little Claus, ‘I’m going to town with my old grandmother. She’s sitting outside in the wagon, and I can’t get her to come indoors. Would you mind taking her a glass of mead? But you’ll have to speak up because she doesn’t hear very well.’

‘Why, certainly,’ said the innkeeper. He poured a big glass of mead and took it outside to the dead grandmother, who was propped up in the wagon.

‘Here’s a glass of mead from your grandson,’ said the innkeeper, but the dead woman didn’t say a word, just sat there without moving.

‘Didn’t you hear me?’ shouted the innkeeper as loud as he could. ‘Here’s a glass of mead from your grandson!’

Once again he shouted the same thing, and then one more time, but when she didn’t budge in the slightest, he got angry and tossed the glass of mead right in her face so it ran down her nose. And she toppled over backward into the wagon, because she had merely been propped up but wasn’t tied down.

‘What’s this?’ shouted Little Claus as he came running out the door and grabbed the innkeeper by the shirtfront. ‘You’ve gone and killed my grandmother! Just look at that big hole in her forehead!’

‘Oh, what bad luck!’ cried the innkeeper, wringing his hands. ‘It’s all the fault of my bad temper. Dear Little Claus, I’ll give you a whole bushful of money and pay for your grandmother’s burial as if she were my own, but don’t say a word or they’ll chop off my head, and that would be awful!’

So Little Claus got a whole bushful of money, and the innkeeper buried the old grandmother as if she were his own.

As soon as Little Claus got back home with all the money, he at once sent his boy over to see Big Claus, to ask if he could borrow a bushel measure.

‘What’s this?’ said Big Claus. ‘I thought I killed him! I’m going to have to see this for myself.’ And so he took the bushel measure over to Little Claus in person.

‘Where on earth did you get all that money?’ he asked, opening his eyes wide when he saw how much more Little Claus had accumulated.

‘It was my grandmother, not me that you killed,’ said Little Claus. ‘But now I’ve sold her for a bushelful of money.’

‘That was certainly a good price,’ said Big Claus, and he rushed home, picked up an ax, and promptly killed his old grandmother. He put her in his wagon, drove into town to the apothecary’s shop, and asked him whether he wanted to buy a dead body.

‘Who is it, and where did you get it?’ asked the apothecary.

‘Good Lord!’ said the apothecary. ‘You don’t know what you’re saying! Don’t say things like that or you could lose your head.’ And then he told him exactly what a dreadful, evil thing he had done, and what a bad person he was, and that he ought to be punished. Big Claus was so scared that he leaped straight from the apothecary’s shop into his wagon, cracked his whip at the horses, and raced off home. The apothecary and everyone else thought he was mad, and so they let him go where he liked.

‘You’re going to pay for this!’ said Big Claus when he was out on the road. ‘Oh yes, you’re going to pay for this, Little Claus!’ As soon as he got home he took the biggest sack he could find and went over to Little Claus and said, ‘You’ve made a fool of me again. First I killed my horses, and then my old grandmother. It’s all your fault, but you’re never going to trick me again.’ And he grabbed Little Claus around the waist and stuffed him into the sack. Then he slung him over his back and shouted, ‘Now I’m going to take you out and drown you!’

It was a long walk to reach the river, and Little Claus wasn’t easy to carry. The road passed very close to the church, where the organ was playing and people were singing so beautifully inside. Then Big Claus put down the sack holding Little Claus right next to the church door, thinking that it might do him good to go inside and listen to a hymn first, before continuing on his way. Little Claus couldn't get out, and everyone else was in church, so Big Claus went inside.

'Oh me, oh my!' sighted Little Claus from inside the sack. He twisted and turned, but it was impossible for him to loosen the cord. At that moment an old, old cattle- driver with chalk- white hair and a big walking stick in his hand came by. He was driving a big herd of cows and bulls in front of him. They trampled over the sack that Claus was in, tumbling it onto its side.

'Oh my,' sighed Little Claus. 'I'm so young, but I'm already headed for Heaven.'

'And what a poor man am I,' said the cattle- driver. 'Here I am so old but it's not yet my time to go.'

'Open the sack!' shouted Little Claus. 'Climb in and take my place, and you'll end up in Heaven at once.'

'Oh, I'd like that very much,' said the cattle- driver, untying the sack. And Little Claus jumped right out.

'Could you take care of the cattle?' said the old man, and he climbed into the bag, which Little Claus tied up and then went on his way, taking along the cows and bulls.

A little while later Big Claus came out of the church and hoisted the sack onto his back, thinking that it certainly was a lot lighter, because the old cattle- driver was no more than half the weight of Little Claus. 'How easy it is to carry him now! Well, that's probably because I've been listening to a hymn.' Then he went over to the river, which was deep and wide, threw the sack with the old cattle- driver into the water, and shouted after him, thinking he was Little Claus, 'Take that! Now you won't be making a fool of me anymore!'

Then he headed home, but when he came to the crossroads, he met Little Claus walking along with all his cattle.

'What's this?' said Big Claus. 'Didn't I drown you?'

‘Yes, you did,’ said Little Claus. ‘You threw me in the river less than half an hour ago.’

‘But where did you get all these wonderful cattle?’ asked Big Claus.

‘They’re sea cattle,’ said Little Claus. ‘Let me tell you the whole story. And by the way, thanks for drowning me, because now I’m back on my feet and let me tell you, I’m as rich as can be! I was so scared when I was inside that sack, and the wind whistled in my ears when you threw me off the bridge and into the cold water. I sank straight to the bottom, but I didn’t hurt myself because the loveliest soft grass grows down there. That’s where I landed, and the bag was opened at once. The loveliest maiden, wearing chalk-white clothing and with a green wreath on her wet hair, took my hand and said, “Is that you, Little Claus? Well, first let me give you these cattle. Five miles up the road there’s another whole herd that I want you to have.” Then I saw that the river was a great highway for the sea folk. Down on the bottom they were walking and driving all the way from the sea toward land, to the place where the river ends. It was so lovely with flowers and the freshest of grass, and fish swimming in the water; they flitted around my ears like the birds in the air. How handsome the people were and how many cattle there were, ambling along the ditches and fences.’

‘But why did you come back to us so soon?’ asked Big Claus. ‘That’s not what I would have done if it was so charming down there.’

‘Well, you see,’ said Little Claus, ‘it was really very cunning of me. You heard me say that the mermaid told me that five miles up the road – and by road she meant the river, of course, since she can’t travel any other way – there was a whole herd of cattle waiting for me. I happen to know where the river starts to bend, first one way and then the other, making a whole detour. It’s much shorter, if you can do it, to come up here on land and head straight across to the river. That way I saved almost two and a half miles and reached my sea cattle much quicker.’

‘Oh, you certainly are a lucky man!’ said Big Claus. ‘Do you think I could get some sea cattle too, if I went down to the bottom of the river?’

‘Oh yes, I imagine so,’ said Little Claus. ‘But I can’t carry you in a sack to the river; you’re much too heavy for me. But if you walk there yourself and then climb into the bag, I’d be more than happy to throw you in.’

‘Thanks so much,’ said Big Claus. ‘But if I don’t get any sea cattle when I get there, I’m going to give you a beating, believe you me!’

‘Oh no! Don’t be so mean!’ And then they went down to the river. The cattle were so thirsty that when they saw the water, they ran as fast as they could down the slope to drink.

‘Look how fast they’re moving,’ said Little Claus. ‘They’re longing to go back down to the bottom.’

‘Yes, but help me first,’ said Big Claus. ‘Otherwise I’ll give you a beating!’ And then he climbed into the big sack that was lying across the back of one of the bulls. ‘Put a rock inside, because otherwise I’m afraid I won’t sink,’ said Big Claus.

‘Oh, I’m sure you will,’ said Little Claus, but just the same, he put a big rock in the sack, tied the cord tight, and then gave it a shove. Plop! Big Claus landed in the river and promptly sank to the bottom.

‘I’m afraid he’s not going to find any cattle,’ said Little Claus, and then he headed home with all he had.

The Princess on the Pea

Once upon a time there was a prince. He wanted a princess, but she had to be a real princess. So he traveled all over the world to find one, but wherever he went there was something wrong. There were plenty of princesses, but he wasn't quite sure if they were real princesses. There was always something that wasn't quite right. Then he went back home and was so sad because he dearly wanted to have a real princess.

One evening there was a terrible storm. Lightning flashed and thunder roared, the rain poured down, it was simply dreadful! Then there was a knock at the town gate, and the old king went to open it.

There was a princess standing outside. But good Lord how she looked because of the rain and terrible weather! Water was streaming from her hair and her clothes, running in the toes of her shoes and out of the heels. Then she said that she was a real princess.

'Well, we'll see about that,' thought the old queen, but she didn't say a word. She went into the bedroom, took off all the bedclothes, and placed a pea at the bottom of the bed. Then she took twenty mattresses and put them on top of the pea, and another twenty eiderdown quilts on top of the mattresses.

That's where the princess was to sleep that night.

The next morning they asked her how she had slept.

'Oh, dreadfully!' said the princess. 'I hardly closed my eyes all night. Lord knows what there was in my bed. I was lying on something hard, and I'm black and blue all over! It's simply dreadful!'

Then they could see that she was a real princess, since she had felt the pea through those twenty mattresses and those twenty eiderdown quilts. No one else could have such tender skin except for a real princess.

And so the prince took her as his wife, because now he knew that he had a real princess. And the pea was placed in the Royal Curiosity Cabinet, where it can still be seen today, as long as no one has taken it.

Now you see, that was a real story!

The Steadfast T in Soldier

Once upon a time there were twenty- five tin soldiers. They were brothers, because they were all born from an old tin spoon. Rifles they held at their shoulders, and their faces looked straight ahead. Red and blue, and oh so lovely were their uniforms. When the lid was removed from the box in which they lay, the very first words they heard in the world were, ‘Tin soldiers!’ That’s what a little boy cried, clapping his hands. They had been given to him because it was his birthday, and now he lined them up on the table. Each soldier looked exactly like the next, except for one who was slightly different. He had only one leg because he was the last to be cast, and there wasn’t enough tin left. Yet he stood just as firmly on one leg as the others did on two, and he’s the one who turned out to be remarkable.

On the table where they stood were many other toys, but the one that was most striking was a charming castle made of paper. Through the tiny windows you could see right into the halls. Outside stood small trees around a little mirror that was meant to look like a lake. Swans made of wax were swimming around on it, reflected in the mirror. The whole thing was so charming, and yet the most charming of all was a little maiden who stood in the open doorway to the castle. She had also been cut out of paper, but she was wearing a skirt of the sheerest tulle and a tiny narrow blue ribbon over her shoulder like a sash. In the middle sat a gleaming spangle as big as her face. The little maiden was stretching out both arms, because she was a dancer, and she was also lifting one leg so high in the air that the tin soldier couldn’t see it at all, and he thought that she had only one leg, just like him.

‘Now there’s a wife for me!’ he thought. ‘But she looks rather refined, and she lives in a castle. I have only a box, and it has to hold twenty- five of us. That’s no place for her! Still, I have to see about making her acquaintance.’ And then he stretched out full-length behind a snuff box that stood on the table. From there he could get a good look at the elegant little lady, who continued to stand on one leg without losing her balance.

Later that evening all the other tin soldiers were put back in their box, and the people of the house went to bed. Then the toys began to play. They gave tea parties, fought battles, and danced. The tin soldiers rattled in their box because they wanted to play too, but they couldn't open the lid. The nutcracker turned somersaults, and the slate pencil scribbled all over the slate. There was such a commotion that the canary woke up and started chattering too, and in verse, of all things. The only two who didn't budge were the tin soldier and the little dancer. She held herself erect on her toes, with her arms held out. He was just as steadfast on one leg, and his eyes didn't leave her for a second.

Then the clock struck twelve, and Bam ! the lid of the snuff box flew open, but there was no tobacco inside – no, there was a little black troll. What a wily trick that was.

'Tin soldier!' said the troll. 'Keep your eyes to yourself!'

But the tin soldier pretended not to hear him.

'Well, just wait till morning,' said the troll.

When morning came and the children got up, the tin soldier was moved over to the windowsill, and whether it was the troll or a gust of wind, all of a sudden the window flew open and the soldier plummeted headfirst from the fourth floor. What a terrifying speed, with his leg turned upward! He landed on his cap, with his bayonet stuck between the cobblestones.

The servant girl and the little boy went downstairs at once to look for him, but even though they nearly stepped on him, they couldn't see him. If the tin soldier had shouted 'Here I am!' they probably would have found him, but he didn't think it was proper to yell when he was in uniform.

Then it started to rain. One drop came down faster than the other; it turned into a regular downpour. When it was over, two street urchins came along.

'Hey, look!' said one of them. 'There's a tin soldier lying here. Let's send him out for a sail.'

And so they made a boat out of newspaper, set the tin soldier in the middle of it, and he sailed off down the gutter. The two boys ran alongside, clapping their hands. God save us, what waves there were in that gutter, and what a current! Well, it's true that there had just been a downpour. The paper boat pitched up and down, and at times it would spin so fast that the tin soldier swayed. But he remained steadfast, his expression unflinching, standing erect with his rifle at his shoulder.

All of a sudden the boat washed in under a plank that lay over the gutter. It grew just as dark as inside his box.

'I wonder where I'll end up now,' he thought. 'Yes, well, this is all the troll's fault. Oh, if only the little maiden were sitting here in the boat, then I wouldn't care if it was twice as dark!'

At that moment a big water rat appeared. It lived under the gutter plank.

'Have you got a travel pass?' asked the rat. 'Let's see your travel pass!'

But the tin soldier didn't say a word, holding his rifle even tighter. The boat raced along, with the rat right behind. Oh, how it gnashed its teeth, shouting to sticks and pieces of straw:

'Stop him! Stop him! He didn't pay the toll! He didn't show his travel pass!'

But the current grew stronger and stronger. The tin soldier could already glimpse daylight up ahead where the plank ended, but he also heard a roaring sound that would scare even a brave man. Just imagine: Where the plank ended, the gutter plunged right into a huge canal. For him it would be just as dangerous as for us to sail over an enormous waterfall.

He was already so close that he couldn't stop. The boat rushed forward; the poor tin soldier held himself as upright as he could. No one was going to say that he so much as blinked an eye. The boat spun around three or four times and filled with water up to the rim. It was going to sink. The tin soldier was standing in water up to his neck, and the boat sank deeper and deeper, the paper began dissolving faster and faster. Then the water was over the soldier's head. That's when he thought about the charming little dancer, whom he would never see again. And in his ears the soldier heard:

'Flee, warrior, flee!

Death is after you!’

Then the paper fell apart, and the tin soldier plunged right through. But at that very instant he was swallowed by a big fish.

Oh, how dark it was inside! It was even worse than under the gutter plank, and it was much more cramped. But the tin soldier was steadfast and stretched out full-length with his rifle at his shoulder.

The fish thrashed about, making the most terrifying movements. Finally it grew quite still, and what looked like a bolt of lightning flashed through it. The light shone so bright, and someone cried loudly, ‘Tin soldier!’ The fish had been caught, brought to market, sold, and then ended up in a kitchen where the servant girl slit it open with a big knife. Putting two fingers around his waist, she plucked out the soldier and carried him into the parlor where everyone wanted to see the remarkable man who had traveled inside the belly of a fish. But the tin soldier was not the least bit proud of himself. They set him on the table and there . . . Oh, what strange things can happen in the world! The tin soldier was in the very same parlor where he had been before. He saw the very same children and the toys on the table and the lovely castle with the charming little dancer. She was still standing on one leg with the other lifted high in the air. She too was steadfast. The tin soldier was touched, he was just about to weep tears of tin, but that wouldn’t be proper. He looked at her and she looked at him, but neither said a word.

At that moment one of the little boys picked up the soldier and tossed him right into the stove, giving no explanation at all. The troll in the box was most certainly to blame.

The tin soldier stood there, brightly lit, and felt a terrible heat, but whether it was from the actual fire or from love, he didn’t know. The paint had worn right off him, but whether this had happened on his journey or from sorrow, no one could say. He looked at the little maiden, she looked at him, and he felt himself melting. But he still stood there, steadfast, with his rifle at his shoulder. Then a door opened, the wind seized hold of the dancer, and she flew like a sylph right into the stove to the tin soldier, burst into flame, and was gone. Then the tin soldier melted into a lump, and the next day, when the servant girl took out the ashes, she found him in the shape of a little tin heart. But all that was left of the dancer was the spangle, and that had been burned black as coal.

The Nightingale

In China, as you probably know, the Emperor is Chinese, and everyone around him is Chinese too. This story happened many years ago, but that's precisely why it's worth hearing, before it's forgotten. The Emperor's palace was the most magnificent in the world, made entirely of fine porcelain, so costly but so fragile, so delicate to the touch that you had to be extremely careful. In the garden you could see the most wondrous flowers. Tied to the most splendid of them were silver bells that jingled, and you couldn't walk past without noticing the flowers. Yes, everything was quite artful in the Emperor's garden, which stretched so far that even the gardener didn't know where it ended. If you kept on walking you would come to the loveliest forest with tall trees and deep lakes. The forest went right down to the sea, which was deep and blue. Great ships could sail right under the branches. And among the branches lived a nightingale who sang so blissfully that even the poor fisherman, who had many other things to tend to, would lie still and listen whenever he heard the nightingale as he pulled in his fishing nets at night. 'Dear Lord, how beautiful she sounds!' he said.

But then he had to go back to his work and forget about the bird. Yet the next night when she sang again and the fisherman appeared, he would say the same thing, 'Dear Lord, how beautiful she sounds!'

Travelers came from countries all over the world to admire the Emperor's city and the palace and the garden. But if they happened to hear the nightingale, they all said, 'That's the best thing of all!'

The travelers would talk about everything when they went back home, and the learned men wrote many books about the city, the palace, and the garden, but they didn't forget the nightingale; she was esteemed above all else. Those who could write poetry wrote the loveliest poems, every single one about the nightingale in the forest by the deep sea.

These books circulated around the world, and one day some of them even reached the Emperor. He sat on his golden chair, reading and reading, as he kept nodding his head, because it pleased him to hear the magnificent descriptions of the city, the palace, and the garden. 'Yet the nightingale is the best of all!' he read in the book.

'What's this?' said the Emperor. 'The nightingale? I know nothing about it! Is there such a bird in my empire, let alone in my own garden? I've never heard of her. To think I had to learn about her from a book!'

And then he called for his Lord Chamberlain, who was so refined that if anyone lower in rank dared speak to him or ask him about something, his only reply was 'P!' And that means nothing at all.

'Supposedly there is a truly extraordinary bird here called the nightingale,' said the Emperor. 'They say that she's the best thing in all my vast domain. Why hasn't anyone told me about her?'

'I've never heard her mentioned before,' said the Lord Chamberlain. 'She has never been presented at court.'

'I want her to come here tonight and sing for me,' said the Emperor. 'The whole world knows what I have, but I do not.'

'I've never heard her mentioned before,' said the Lord Chamberlain. 'I'll search for her, I'll find her!'

But where was she to be found? The Lord Chamberlain ran up and down all the stairs, through the halls and corridors. Not a single person he met had ever heard mention of the nightingale. So the Lord Chamberlain ran back to the Emperor and said that she must be a fable concocted by those who write books. 'Your Imperial Majesty should not believe what people write. It's all fabrication and what's called black magic.'

'But the book I was reading was sent to me by the mighty Emperor of Japan,' said the Emperor, 'so it must be true. I want to hear the nightingale. She must be here tonight! I bestow on her my highest favor! And if she doesn't come, then all the members of the court will be punched in the stomach after they've eaten their supper.'

'Xing-pei!' said the Lord Chamberlain, and once again he ran up and down all the stairs, through all the halls and corridors. And half the court ran along with him, because they didn't want to be punched in the stomach. Everyone was asking about the remarkable nightingale that was known to the whole world but to no one at court.

Finally they came upon a poor little girl in the kitchen, and she said, 'Oh Lord, the nightingale! I know her well. Yes, how she can sing! Every evening I'm allowed to take home a few scraps from the table for my poor sick mother. She lives down near the shore, and when I walk back feeling tired, I take a rest in the forest, and then I hear the nightingale singing. It makes my eyes fill with tears. It's as if my mother were kissing me.'

'Little kitchen maid,' said the Lord Chamberlain, 'I shall arrange a permanent post for you in the kitchen and permission to watch the Emperor eat if you can lead us to the nightingale. She has been summoned here tonight.'

And so they all set off for the forest, to the place where the nightingale usually sang. Half the court went along. As they were walking, a cow began to moo.

'Oh!' said the royal squires. 'Now we've found her. What remarkable power for such a small creature! We're quite certain we've heard her before.'

'No, those are the cows mooing,' said the little kitchen maid. 'We're still quite far from the place.'

Now the frogs began croaking in the bog.

'Lovely!' said the Chinese Court Chaplain. 'Now I can hear her. It sounds just like little church bells.'

'No, those are the frogs,' said the little kitchen maid. 'But I think we'll hear her soon.'

Then the nightingale began to sing.

'There she is,' said the little girl. 'Listen! Listen! And there she sits!' And then she pointed at a little gray bird up in the branches.

'Is it possible?' said the Lord Chamberlain. 'That's not at all how I imagined her. How plain she looks! She must have lost her color from seeing so many refined people all around.'

‘Little nightingale!’ cried the little kitchen maid in a loud voice. ‘Our Most Gracious Emperor would like so much for you to sing for him.’

‘With the greatest pleasure,’ said the nightingale and sang so it was sheer delight.

‘It sounds just like glass bells,’ said the Lord Chamberlain. ‘And look at her little throat – she’s singing with all her might. It’s strange that we’ve never heard this bird before. She will be a huge success at court.’

‘Shall I sing some more for the Emperor?’ asked the nightingale, who thought the Emperor was among them.

‘My splendid little nightingale,’ said the Lord Chamberlain, ‘I have the great pleasure of summoning you to a royal celebration this evening, where you will enchant His Exalted Imperial Grace with your charming song.’

‘My song sounds best out in nature,’ said the nightingale, but she willingly went along with them when she heard that this was the Emperor’s wish.

At the palace everything had been properly cleaned and polished. The walls and floors, which were made of porcelain, gleamed with thousands of golden lamps. The loveliest flowers, the ones with bells attached, had been placed in the corridors; there was a draft and a great commotion, making all the bells ring. You couldn’t hear yourself think.

In the middle of the great hall, where the Emperor was seated, a golden perch had been placed, and that was where the nightingale was to sit. The entire court was present, and the little kitchen maid had been given permission to stand behind the door, since she now held the title of Real Kitchen Maid. Everyone was dressed in his very finest, and everyone was looking at the little gray bird, to whom the Emperor nodded.

And the nightingale sang so wondrously that tears filled the Emperor’s eyes. Tears rolled down his cheeks, and then the nightingale sang even more beautifully; the song went straight to the heart. The Emperor was so happy that he said the nightingale must wear his golden slipper around her neck. But the nightingale thanked him and said that she had already received reward enough.

'I've seen tears in the Emperor's eyes. For me that is the richest treasure. An emperor's tears have a wondrous power. God knows, that is reward enough.' And then she sang again in her sweet, blessed voice.

'This is the most lovable coquetry we've ever known,' said the women all around, and then they put water in their mouths in order to cluck whenever anyone spoke to them. They thought they too could be nightingales. Even the lackeys and chambermaids announced that they were satisfied, and that is saying a great deal because they're the most difficult of all to please. Yes, the nightingale certainly was a success!

Now she would stay at court, and have her own cage, as well as the freedom to promenade twice a day and once at night. Twelve servants were sent along, each of them holding tight to a silk ribbon attached to her leg. There wasn't the least bit of pleasure in those excursions.

The whole city was talking about the extraordinary bird. If two people met, one of them would say to the other 'Night!' and the other would say 'Gale!' and then they would sigh, fully understanding each other. Why, eleven grocers' children were named after her, but not one of them could even carry a tune.

One day a big package arrived for the Emperor. On the outside it said: 'Nightingale.'

'Here we have a new book about our famous bird,' said the Emperor. But it wasn't a book. A little work of art lay inside the box, a mechanical nightingale that was supposed to look like the live one, although it was completely encrusted with diamonds, rubies, and sapphires. As soon as they wound up the mechanical bird it sang one of the tunes that the real bird sang, and its tail moved up and down, glittering with silver and gold. Around its neck hung a little ribbon, and on it were the words: 'The Emperor of Japan's nightingale is paltry compared to the Emperor of China's.'

'It's lovely!' they all said, and the person who had brought the mechanical bird was at once given the title of Supreme Imperial Nightingale Bringer.

'Let's have them sing together. What a duet that will be!'

And then they had to sing together, but it was not a success, because the real nightingale sang in her own way, while the mechanical bird ran on cylinders. 'There's nothing wrong with that,' said the Music Master. 'It keeps perfect time and is obviously a follower of my own methods.' Then the mechanical bird had to sing alone. It brought just as much joy as the real bird, and on top of that it was much more charming in appearance. It glittered like bracelets and brooches.

Thirty- three times it sang the very same tune, and yet it never grew tired. Everyone could have listened to it all over again, but the Emperor felt that the live nightingale should also sing a little. But where was she? No one had noticed that she had flown out the open window, off to her green forests.

'Well, what sort of behavior is that?' said the Emperor. And all the members of court began scolding, saying that the nightingale was a most ungrateful creature. 'Yet we have the best bird of all,' they said, and then the mechanical bird had to sing some more, and that was the thirty- fourth time they heard the same tune. But they didn't yet know it by heart, because it was so complicated, and the Music Master lavished great praise on the bird. Yes, he assured them that it was better than the real nightingale, not only in terms of its attire and the scores of lovely diamonds, but also internally.

'For you see, ladies and gentlemen, and above all Your Imperial Highness! You can never count on what will come out of the real nightingale, but with the mechanical bird everything is certain. This is how it will sound, and no other way. You can explain it, you can open it up and demonstrate the human reasoning, how the cylinders are arranged, how they operate, and how one turns the other.'

'Those are my thoughts exactly,' they all said. And the Music Master was granted permission, on the following Sunday, to display the bird to the people. They too should hear it sing, said the Emperor. And they heard it and were as pleased as if they had drunk themselves giddy on tea; that was so typically Chinese. And everyone said 'Oh!' and held up in the air the finger that we call 'pot- licker' and then they nodded. But the poor fishermen who had heard the real nightingale said, 'It sounds nice enough, and it does look quite like it, but something is missing, we don't know what.'

The real nightingale was banished from the realm.

The mechanical bird had its place on a silk pillow close to the Emperor's bed. All the gifts it had been given, gold and precious stones, were spread around it, and in title it had risen to Supreme Imperial Nightstand Singer. In rank it was number one on the left, because the Emperor considered the side of the heart to be the most noble, and even in an Emperor the heart is on the left. The Music Master wrote twenty-five volumes about the mechanical bird, books that were so learned and so lengthy, and written in the most difficult of Chinese words, that everyone said they had read and understood them, because otherwise they would have seemed stupid and then they would have been punched in the stomach.

A whole year passed in this fashion. The Emperor, the court, and all the other Chinese people knew by heart every little cluck of the mechanical bird's song, but that was precisely why they liked it above all else. They could sing it themselves, and they did. The street urchins sang 'Xi- xi- xi! Cluck- cluck- cluck!' And the Emperor sang it too. Oh yes, it was certainly lovely!

But one evening when the mechanical bird was singing its best and the Emperor was lying in bed and listening, it went 'Clunk!' inside. Something burst. 'Buzzzzzz!' all the gears spun around, and then the music stopped.

The Emperor sprang out of bed at once and called for his royal physician, but what good could he do? Then they summoned the watchmaker. After much discussion and a great deal of study, he managed to get the bird working fairly well, but he said that it would have to be played sparingly because the cylinder pegs were worn out. It would be impossible to replace them with new ones so that the music would play properly. That was a terrible shame! Only once a year did they dare let the mechanical bird sing, and even that was almost too often. But then the Music Master gave a little speech using big words and said that it was just as good as new, and so it was just as good as new.

Five years passed, and the whole land suffered a great sadness, because everyone was truly very fond of their Emperor. Now they said he was ill and about to die. A new emperor had already been chosen, and the people stood outside on the street and asked the Lord Chamberlain how things were going with their Emperor.

'P!' he said and shook his head.

Cold and pale, the Emperor lay in his big, magnificent bed. The entire court thought he was dead, and all of them had run off to greet the new Emperor. The valets had run outside to talk about it, and the palace maids were holding a big coffee party. All around in the halls and corridors cloth had been laid down so that no one's footsteps could be heard. That's why it was so quiet, so quiet. But the Emperor was not yet dead. Rigid and pale, he lay in the magnificent bed with the long velvet curtains and the heavy gold tassels. High above, a window stood open, and the moon was shining on the Emperor and the mechanical bird.

The poor Emperor could hardly breathe; it felt as if something were sitting on his chest. He opened his eyes and saw that it was Death sitting on his chest. He had put on the gold crown and was holding in one hand the Emperor's gold sword, and in the other his magnificent banner. All around in the folds of the great velvet bed curtains peculiar heads were sticking out, some of them quite horrid, others so blessedly gentle. They were all of the Emperor's good and bad deeds, looking at him, now that Death was sitting on his heart.

'Do you remember this?' one after the other whispered. 'Do you remember this?' And then they told him so many things that the sweat poured from his brow.

'I never knew that!' said the Emperor. 'Music, music, the great Chinese drum!' he shouted. 'So I won't have to listen to everything they're saying.'

But they kept on, and Death nodded, as the Chinese do, at everything that was said.

'Music, music!' screamed the Emperor. 'You blessed little golden bird! Sing now, sing! I've given you gold and precious things. I myself have hung my golden slipper around your neck. So sing now, sing!'

But the bird stood silent. There was no one to wind it up, and otherwise it couldn't sing. But Death kept on looking at the Emperor with his big, empty eye sockets, and it was so quiet, so horribly quiet.

At that moment, close to the window, the loveliest song was heard. It was the live little nightingale, who was sitting on a branch outside. She had heard about the Emperor's distress, and that's why she had come, to offer solace and hope. And as she sang, the figures grew more and more pale, the blood began to flow faster and faster through the Emperor's weak limbs, and Death himself listened and said, 'Keep singing, little nightingale! Keep singing!'

'Yes, if you give me the magnificent gold sword! Yes, if you give me the opulent banner! If you give me the Emperor's crown!'

And Death returned each treasure for a song, and the nightingale still kept singing. She sang of the silent churchyard where the white roses grow, where the fragrant elder tree stands, and where the fresh grass is watered by the tears of the bereaved. Then Death had such a longing for his own garden that he floated out like a cold white fog, out the window.

'Thank you, thank you!' said the Emperor. 'You heavenly little bird, of course I recognize you! You're the one I chased from my realm. And yet you have sung the evil visions away from my bed and driven Death from my heart. How shall I reward you?'

'You have already rewarded me,' said the nightingale. 'I won tears from your eyes the first time I sang. I will never forget that about you. They are the jewels that make a singer's heart glad. But sleep now and grow strong and healthy. I will sing for you.'

And she sang. The Emperor fell into a sweet slumber, so gentle and refreshing was his sleep.

The sun was shining through the windows when he awoke, strong and healthy. None of his servants had yet returned, because they all thought he was dead. But the nightingale was still sitting there, singing.

'You must stay with me forever,' said the Emperor. 'You shall only sing when you want to, and I will smash the mechanical bird into a thousand pieces.'

'Don't do that,' said the nightingale. 'It has done the best it could. Keep it as you always have. I can't live in the palace, but let me come whenever I wish. Then in the evening I will sit on the branch by your window and sing for you, to make you both joyous and pensive. I will sing about those who are happy and those who suffer. I will sing about the evil and the good that is kept hidden from you. The little songbird flies far and wide, to the poor fisherman, to the farmer's rooftop, to everyone who is far from you and your court. I love your heart more than your crown, and yet the crown has a scent of something sacred about it. I will come, I will sing for you. But one thing you must promise me.'

'Anything!' said the Emperor, standing there in his imperial robes, which he had donned himself, and holding the sword that was heavy with gold pressed to his heart.

'One thing I ask of you. Tell no one that you have a little bird who tells you everything, and things will go even better.'

And then the nightingale flew off.

The servants came in to tend to their dead Emperor. Oh yes, there they stood. And the Emperor said, 'Good morning!'

The Red Shoes

There was a little girl who was so delicate and charming, but in the summer she always had to go barefoot because she was poor. In the winter she wore big wooden clogs that made her little ankles turn quite red, and that was awful.

In the middle of the village lived old Mother Shoemaker. She sat and sewed as best she could, using old strips of red cloth to make a little pair of shoes. Quite clumsy they were, but well-intended, and the little girl was to have them. The little girl's name was Karen.

On the very day that her mother was buried, Karen was given the red shoes, and she wore them for the first time. Now, it's true that they weren't the proper shoes for mourning, but she didn't have any others, and so she wore them on her bare feet, walking behind the humble coffin made of straw.

All at once a grand old carriage appeared, and inside sat a grand old woman. She looked at the little girl and felt sorry for her. Then she said to the pastor, 'Listen here, give me that little girl and I will be kind to her!'

Karen thought she said this because of her red shoes, but the old woman said they were awful, and they were burned, while Karen was dressed in nice, clean clothes. She had to learn to read and sew, and people said that she was charming, but the mirror said, 'You are much more than charming, you're lovely!'

Then the queen happened to travel through the land, and she brought along her little daughter, who was a princess. People came flocking to the palace, and Karen was there too. The little princess stood in a window for all to see dressed in fine white clothes. She wore neither a train nor a golden crown, but she had lovely, red kidskin shoes. Of course they were much prettier than the ones that Mother Shoemaker had sewn for little Karen. But nothing in the world could compare with red shoes!

Then Karen was old enough to be confirmed. She was given new clothes and she was also to have new shoes. The rich shoemaker in town measured her little foot. This was at home in his own parlor, where big glass cupboards stood filled with elegant shoes and shiny boots. Everything looked charming, but the old woman didn't see well, so it gave her no pleasure. In the midst of all the shoes stood a pair of red ones just like the ones the princess had worn. How beautiful they were! The shoemaker said they had been sewn for the child of a count, but they didn't fit properly.

'They must be made of the finest leather,' said the old woman. 'How they shine!'

'Yes, how they shine!' said Karen. And they fit, so they were bought. But the old woman didn't know that they were red, because she would never have allowed Karen to be confirmed wearing red shoes, and yet she did.

Everyone looked at her feet. When she walked up the church aisle toward the chancel doorway, she thought even the old paintings on the crypts, those portraits of pastors and their wives wearing stiff collars and long black gowns, had fixed their eyes on her red shoes. And that was all she could think of when the pastor placed his hand on her head and spoke of the holy baptism, of the pact with God, and the fact that she should now be a good Christian. The organ played so solemnly, the children sang so beautifully, and the old cantor sang too, but Karen thought only of her red shoes.

By that afternoon the old woman had heard from everyone that the shoes were red, and she said how dreadful that was. It wasn't the least bit proper. From that day on, whenever Karen went to church, she would always wear black shoes, even if they were old.

The following Sunday was her first communion, and Karen looked at the black shoes, she looked at the red ones –and then she looked at the red ones again and put them on.

It was lovely sunny weather. Karen and the old woman walked along the path through the grain fields where it was rather dusty.

At the church door stood an old soldier with a crutch and a long, odd- looking beard that was more red than white; in fact, it was red. He bowed all the way to the ground and asked the old woman whether he might wipe off her shoes. Karen stretched out her little foot too. 'Oh look, what lovely dancing shoes!' said the soldier. 'Stay on tight when you dance!' Then he slapped his hand on the soles.

The old woman gave the soldier a little skilling and then went with Karen into the church.

Everyone inside looked at Karen's red shoes; all the paintings looked at them too. And when Karen knelt before the altar and put the golden chalice to her lips, she thought only of the red shoes. They seemed to be swimming around in the chalice before her, and she forgot to sing the hymn, she forgot to say the Lord's Prayer.

Then everyone left the church, and the old woman climbed into her carriage. As Karen lifted her foot to climb in after her, the old soldier who was standing close by said, 'Oh look, what lovely dancing shoes!' And Karen couldn't help herself, she had to take a few dance steps. As soon as she started, her feet kept on dancing. It was as if the shoes had taken control. She danced around the corner of the church, she couldn't stop herself. The coachman had to run after and grab her, and he lifted her into the carriage, but her feet kept on dancing and she kicked hard at the kind old woman. Finally they managed to take off the shoes, and her feet stopped moving.

At home the shoes were put in a cupboard, but Karen couldn't help looking at them.

Then the old woman fell ill, and they said she wouldn't live long. She needed someone to nurse and tend her, and who should do it but Karen? But over in town there was to be a great ball, and Karen was invited. She looked at the old woman, who didn't have long to live, after all. She looked at the red shoes, and she didn't think there was any sin in that. She put on the red shoes. Why shouldn't she? And then she went to the ball and began to dance.

But when she wanted to turn right, the shoes danced to the left, and when she wanted to move up the floor, the shoes danced down the floor, down the stairs, along the street, and out the town gate. Dance she did, and dance she must, right out into the dark forest.

Then she saw a light overhead among the trees, and she thought it must be the moon, because it had a face, but it was the old soldier with the red beard. He sat there nodding and said, 'Oh look, what lovely dancing shoes!'

Then Karen was horrified and tried to take off the red shoes, but they wouldn't come off. She tore off her stockings, but the shoes had grown onto her feet; dance she did and dance she must, over field and meadow, in rain and in sunshine, night and day, but nighttime was the most terrible of all.

She danced into the open churchyard, but the dead weren't dancing. They had better things to do than dance. She wanted to sit down on the pauper's grave where bitter tansy grew, but for her there was no peace or rest. And when she danced toward the open church door, she saw an angel there in long white robes, with wings that reached from his shoulders to the ground. His face was stern and solemn, and in his hand he held a sword, gleaming and wide.

'Dance you shall!' he said. 'Dance in your red shoes until you turn pale and cold! Until your skin shrivels up like a mummy's! Dance from door to door. And wherever proud and vain children live, you will knock so they hear and fear you! Dance you shall, dance—!'

'Have mercy!' cried Karen. But she didn't hear what the angel replied, because her shoes carried her through the gate, out to the field, across the road, and along the path, and always she had to keep dancing.

Early one morning she danced past a door she knew quite well. Inside a hymn could be heard, and they carried out a coffin that was adorned with flowers. Then she knew that the old woman was dead, and she felt as if she had now been forsaken by everyone and cursed by the angel of God.

Dance she did, and dance she must, dance into the dark night. Her shoes carried her over thickets and stumps, her feet were worn bloody. She danced across the heath to a lonely little house. She knew that this was where the executioner lived. She tapped her finger on the windowpane and said, 'Come out! Come out! I can't come inside, because I'm dancing!'

And the executioner said, 'Don't you know who I am? I chop off the heads of evil people, and I can feel my ax is trembling!'

'Don't chop off my head,' said Karen. 'Because then I won't be able to repent my sin. But chop off my feet with the red shoes!'

Then she confessed to her sin, and the executioner chopped off her feet with the red shoes. But the shoes kept dancing with the little feet across the fields and into the deep forest.

And he carved wooden feet and crutches for her, taught her a hymn that sinners always sing, and she kissed the hand that had wielded the ax and set out across the heath.

‘Now I’ve suffered enough for those red shoes,’ she said. ‘Now I’m going to church so they can see me.’ And she walked as fast as she could toward the church door, but when she got there, the red shoes were dancing in front of her. She was horrified and turned away.

All week long she was sad and wept many bitter tears, but when Sunday came, she said, ‘All right! Now I’ve suffered and struggled enough! I should think that I’m just as good as many of those people sitting so proudly inside the church.’ Then she set off quite boldly, but she got no farther than to the gate when she saw the red shoes dancing in front of her. She was horrified and turned away, repenting her sin with all her heart.

She went over to the parsonage and asked if she might be taken into service there. She would work hard and do everything she could. She had no wish for wages; all she asked for was a roof over her head and permission to stay with good people. The pastor’s wife felt sorry for her and gave her a position. And she was hardworking and thoughtful. Quietly she would sit and listen when the pastor read aloud from the Bible in the evening. All the children were very fond of her, but whenever they spoke of adornments and finery and being as lovely as a queen, she would shake her head.

The next Sunday they all went to church and they asked if she would like to come along, but with tears in her eyes she looked sadly at her crutches. Then the others went to hear God’s Word while she went alone into her tiny room. It was only big enough for a bed and a chair. There she sat with her hymnbook. As she began reading with a pious heart, the wind carried the tones of the organ from the church to her. She raised her tear- stained face and said, ‘Oh, help me, God!’

Then the sun shone so bright, and right in front of her stood the angel of God in the white robes, the one she had seen that night at the church door. He was no longer holding a sharp sword but a lovely green bough that was covered with roses. He touched it to the ceiling, which raised up high, and at the spot he had touched shone a golden star. He touched the walls and they moved outward. She saw the organ that was playing; she saw the old paintings of the pastors and their wives. The congregation was sitting in the carved pews and singing from their hymnals.

The church itself had come home to the poor girl in the tiny, cramped room, or perhaps she had gone to the church. She was sitting in a pew with the others from the parsonage. When they finished the hymn and looked up, they nodded and said, 'It was right for you to come, Karen.'

'It was God's mercy,' she said.

The organ soared, and the children's voices in the choir sounded gentle and lovely. The bright, warm sunshine streamed through the window, reaching the church pew where Karen sat. Her heart was so filled with sunlight, with peace and joy, that it burst. Her soul flew on the sunlight to God, and no one asked about the red shoes.

被偷的白象

下面这个稀奇的故事是我在火车上偶然相识的一个人讲给我听的。他是一位年过七十的老先生，他那和善而斯文的面貌和真挚而诚实的态度使他嘴里说出来的每一桩事情都给人以无可置疑的真实的印象。他说：

你知道暹罗的皇家白象在那个国家是多么受人尊敬的吧。你也知道，它是国王御用的。只有国王才能养它，而且它实际上甚至比国王多少还要高出几分，因为它不仅受人尊敬，而且还受人崇拜。好吧，五年前，大不列颠和暹罗两国之间发生国界纠纷的时候，没过多久，事实就证明了错误在暹罗方面。因此一切赔偿手续被迅速执行，英国代表说他很满意，过去的嫌隙也应该忘记才行。这使暹罗国王大为安心，于是一方面为了表示感激，一方面也许是为了要消除英国对他可能还存在着的一点儿残余的不满情绪，他愿意给英国女王送一份礼物——照东方人的想法，这是与敌方和解的唯一妥当的方法。这份礼物不但应该是高贵的，而且必须是超乎一切的高贵才行。那么，还有什么礼物能比一只白象更适当呢？当时我在印度担任着一种特殊的文官职位，因此被认为特别配得上给女皇陛下献礼的荣幸任务。暹罗政府特地给我备了一只船，还配备了侍从、随员和伺候象的人。经过相当长的时间，我到了纽约港，就把我那受皇家重托的礼物安顿在泽西城，叫它住在很讲究的地方。为了恢复这只牲口的健康，然后继续航行，我们不得不停留一些时候。

过了两个星期，一切安然无事——然后我的灾祸就开始了。白象被偷了！深夜有人把我叫醒，通知我这个可怕的不幸事件。我一时简直因恐惧和焦急而发狂，我真不知如何是好。然后我渐渐平静下来，恢复了神志。我不久就想出了办法——因为事实上一个有头脑的人所能采取的有且只有一个办法。那时候虽然已经是深夜，我还是赶到纽约，找到一位警察引我到侦缉总队去。幸好我到的正是时候，侦缉队的头目、有名的督察长布朗特正准备动身回家。他是个中等身材、体格结实的人，当他深思的时候，他惯爱皱起眉头、凝神地用手指头敲着额部，这会马上给你一个印象，使你深信自己站在一个不平凡的人物面前。一看他那样子，就使我有信心、有了希望。我向他申述了我的来意。这桩事情丝毫不使他惊慌，看样子，他还是铁一般的镇定，并没有引起他多大的反应，就好像我告诉他的事情是有人偷了我

的狗一般。他挥手叫我坐下，沉着地说道：

“请让我想一会儿吧。”

他一面这么说，一面在他的办公桌前面坐下，用手托着头。好几个书记正在办公室的另一头工作，往后的六七分钟里，我所听到的声音就只有他们的笔在纸上划出的响声。同时，督察长坐在那儿，凝神沉思。最后，他抬起头来，他的面孔那种坚定的轮廓表现出一种胸有成竹的神气，这向我说明他的脑子里已经想出了主意，计划已经拟订了。他说（声音低沉而且给人深刻的印象）：

“这不是个普通案件。一切步骤都要小心周到，每一步都要站稳脚跟，然后再放胆走下一步。一定要保守秘密才行——深深的、绝对的秘密。无论对什么人都不不要谈起这件事，连对报馆记者也不要提。他们这批人归我来对付吧，我会只叫他们得到一点儿符合我的目的、故意告诉他们的消息。”他按了按铃，一个年轻人走过来。“阿拉里克，叫记者们暂时不要走。”那个小伙子出去了。“现在再继续来谈正经事吧——要有条有理地谈。干我这一行，要是不用严格和周密的方法，什么事也办不好。”

他拿起笔和纸来：“那么——象的名字？”

“哈森·本·阿里·本·赛林·阿布达拉·穆罕默德·摩伊赛·阿汉莫尔·杰姆赛杰吉布荷伊·都里普·苏丹·爱布·布德普尔。”

“好的。教名是什么？”

“大壮。”

“好的。出生的地方呢？”

“暹罗首都。”

“父母还在吗？”

“不——死了。”

“除了他而外，他们还生过别的孩子吗？”

“没有——他是独生子。”

“好的。在这一项底下，有这几点就够了。现在请你描述一下这只象的样子，千万不要遗漏细节，无论多么不重要的——这就是说，照你的看法认为不重要的。对于我们这一行的人，根本就没有什么不重要的细节，这种事情根本就不存在。”

于是我一边描述，他一边记录。我说完的时候，他说：

“好吧，你听着。要是我有弄错的地方，请你更正。”

他照下面这样念：

“身高十九英尺 [1]，身長从额顶到尾根二十六英尺，鼻长十六英尺，尾长六英尺，全长，包括鼻子和尾巴，四十八英尺，牙长九英尺，耳朵大小与这些尺寸相称。脚印好像一只桶子立在雪里印上的痕迹。象的颜色，灰白。每只耳朵上有一个装饰珠宝的洞，像碟子那么大。特别喜欢给旁观的人喷水，并且爱拿鼻子作弄

人，不仅是那些和他相识的，连完全陌生的人也是一样。右后腿略跛，左腋下因从前生过疮，有一个小疤。被偷时背上有一个包括十五个座位的乘厢，披着——一张普通地毯大小的金丝缎鞍毯。”

他写的没有错误。督察长按了按铃，把这份说明书交给阿拉里克，吩咐他说——

“把这张东西马上印五万份，寄到全州各地的侦缉队和当铺去。”阿拉里克出去了。

“哈——说了半天，总算还不错。另外我还得要一张这个东西的相片才行。”我给了他一张。他很认真地把它仔细看了一阵，说道：

“只好将就吧，反正找不到更好的。可是他把鼻子卷起来，塞在嘴里，这未免太不凑巧，一定要使人产生误会，因为他平常当然不会把鼻子卷成这个样子。”他又按了按铃。

“阿拉里克，把这张相片拿去印五万份，明天早上先办这件事，和那张说明书一同寄出。”

阿拉里克出去执行他的命令。督察长说——

“当然非悬赏不可了。那么，数目怎么样？”

“你看多少合适呢？”

“第一步，我认为——唔，先来个两万五千块钱吧。这桩事情很复杂、很难办，不知有多少逃避的路子和隐藏的机会哩。这些小偷到处都有朋友和伙伴——”

“哎呀，您知道那些人是谁吗？”

那张习惯于把思想和感情隐藏在心里的谨慎的面孔使我猜不出一点儿影子，他那说得若无其事的回答也是一样：

“那个你不用管。我可能知道，也可能不知道。我们通常都是看

犯案的人下手的方法和他所要弄到手的東西的大小，從這裡去找到一點兒巧妙的線索，推測他是誰。我們現在要對付的不是一個扒手，也不是一個普通的小偷，這個你可要弄明白。這回被偷的東西不是一個生手隨便‘扒’了去的。剛才我說過，辦這個案子是要跑許多地方的，小偷們一路往別處跑，還要隨時掩蓋他們的踪跡，查起來也很費勁，所以照這些情形來看，兩萬五千塊錢也許還太少一點兒，不過我想起頭先給這個數目還是可以的。”

於是我們就商定了這個數目，作為初步的懸賞，然後這位先生說道：

“在偵探史里有些案子說明某些犯人是根據他們的胃口方面的特點而破案的。那麼，這只象究竟吃什麼東西、吃多少分量呢？”凡是可以做線索的事情，這位先生沒有不注意的。

“啊，說到 he 吃的東西嘛——他不管什麼都吃。人也吃，《聖經》也吃——人和《聖經》之間的東西，不管什麼他都吃。”

“好——真是好得很，可是太籠統了。必須說得仔細些——干我們這一行，最講究的就是仔細。好吧，先說人。每一頓——再不然你愛說每一天也行——他要吃幾個人呢，要是新鮮的話？”

“他不管新鮮不新鮮，每一頓他要吃五個普通的人。”

“好極了！五個人，我把這個記下來。他最愛吃哪些國家的人呢？”

“他對國籍也不大在乎。他特別愛吃熟人，可是對生人也並沒有成見。”

“好極了。那麼再說《聖經》吧，他每一頓要吃幾部《聖經》呢？”

“他可以吃得下整整的一版。”

“這說得不够清楚，你指的是普通的八開本，還是家庭用的插圖本呢？”

“我想他對插圖是不在乎的。那就是說，我覺得他並不會把插圖看得比簡單的文本更寶貴。”

“不，你没听明白我的意思。我说的是本子的大小。普通八开本的《圣经》大概是两磅半重，可是带插图的四开大本有十磅到十二磅重。他每顿能吃几本多莱版的《圣经》呢？”

“你要是认识这只象的话，就不会问这些了。人家有多少他就吃多少。”

“好吧，那么照钱数来计算吧，这点我们总得大概弄清楚才行。多莱版每本要一百块钱，俄国皮子包书角的。”

“他大概要五万块钱的才够吃——就算是五百本吧。”

“对，这倒是比较明确一点儿，我把这个记下来。好吧，他爱吃人和《圣经》，这些都说得很不错。另外他还吃什么呢？我要知道详细情形。”

“他会丢开《圣经》去吃砖头，他会丢开砖头去吃瓶子，他会丢开瓶子去吃衣服，他会丢开衣服去吃猫儿，他会丢开猫儿去吃牡蛎，他会丢开牡蛎去吃火腿，他会丢开火腿去吃糖，他会丢开糖去吃馅儿饼，他会丢开馅儿饼去吃洋芋，他会丢开洋芋去吃糠皮，他会丢开糠皮去吃干草，他会丢开干草去吃燕麦，他会丢开燕麦去吃大米，因为他主要是靠这个喂大的。除了欧洲的奶油，无论什么东西他都来者不拒的，就连奶油，他要是尝出了味道，那也会吃的。”

“好极了。平常每顿的食量是……大概要……”

“噢，从四分之一吨到半吨之间，随便多少都行。”

“他爱喝……”

“凡是液体的东西都行。牛奶、水、威士忌、糖浆、蓖麻油、樟脑油、石炭酸 [2] ——这样说下去是没有用处的。你无论想到什么液体的东西都记下就是了。只要是液体的东西，他什么都喝，只除了欧洲的咖啡。”

“好极了。喝多大分量呢？”

“你就写五至十五桶吧——他口渴的程度一时一样，别的方面，他的胃口是没有变化的。”

“这些事情都非常重要。这对于寻找他应该是可以提供很好的线索。”

他按了按铃。

“阿拉里克，把伯恩斯队长找来吧。”

伯恩斯来了。布朗特督察长给他说明全部案情，一五一十地说得很详细。然后他用爽朗而果断的口吻说（由他的声调可以听出他的办法已经拟订得很清楚，而且也可以知道他是惯于下命令的）：

“伯恩斯队长，派琼斯、戴维斯、哈尔西、贝茨、哈克特他们这几个侦探去追寻这只象吧。”

“是，督察长。”

“派摩西、戴金、墨菲、罗杰斯、塔珀、希金斯和巴塞洛缪他们这几个侦探去追寻小偷。”

“是，督察长。”

“在那只象被偷出去的地方安排一个强有力的卫队——三十个精选的弟兄组成的卫队，还要三十个换班的——叫他们在那儿日夜严格守卫，没有我的书面手令，谁也不许走出去——除了记者。”

“是，督察长。”

“派些便衣侦探到火车上、轮船上和码头仓库那些地方去，还有由泽西城往外面去的大路上，命令他们搜查所有形迹可疑的人。”

“是，督察长。”

“把那只象的照片和附带的说明书拿给这些人，吩咐他们搜查所有的火车和往外开的渡船以及其他的船。”

“是，督察长。”

“象要是找到了，就把他捉住，打电报通知我。”

“是，督察长。”

“要是找出了什么线索，也要马上通知我——不管是这畜生的脚印，还是诸如此类的踪迹。”

“是，督察长。”

“发一道命令，叫港口警察留心巡逻河边一带。”

“是，督察长。”

“赶快派便衣侦探到所有的铁路上去，往北直到加拿大，往西直到俄亥俄，往南直到华盛顿。”

“是，督察长。”

“派一批专家到所有的电报局去，收听所有的电报，叫他们要求电报局把所有的密码电报都译给他们看。”

“是，督察长。”

“这些事情千万要做得极其秘密——注意，要秘密得绝对不走漏消息才行。”

“是，督察长。”

“照通常的时刻准时向我报告。”

“是，督察长。”

“去吧！”

“是，督察长。”

他走了。

布朗特督察长沉思了一会儿，没有作声，同时他眼睛里的那股子火气渐渐冷静下来，终于消失了。然后他向我转过身来，用平静的声音说道：

“我不喜欢吹牛，那不是我的习惯，可是——我们一定能找到那只象。”

我热情地和他握手，向他道谢，而且心里也确实是感谢他。我越看这位先生，就越喜欢他，也越对他这职业当中那些神秘且不可思议的事情感到羡慕和惊讶。然后我们在这天晚上暂时分手了，我回寓所的时候，比到他的办公室的时候心里快活得多了。

二

第二天早上，一切都登在报上，登得非常详细，甚至还增加了新的内容——包括：侦探甲、侦探乙和侦探丙的“推测”，估计这次的盗窃案是怎么干的，盗窃犯是谁，以及他们带着赃物到什么地方去了。一共有十一种推测，把一切可能的估计都包括了，单是这一个事实就表示侦探们是些怎样的别出心裁的思想家。没有哪两种推测是相同的，甚至连大致相似的都没有，唯一相同的只有一个显著的情节，关于这一点，十一个人的见解倒通通是绝对一致的。那就是，虽然我的房子后面被人拆开了墙，而唯一的门又照旧是锁着的，那只象却并不是由那个口子被牵出去的，而是由另外一条出路（还没有发现的）出去的。大家一致认为盗窃犯是故意拆开一个豁口，迷惑侦探们。像我或是任何其他外行，恐怕绝不会想得出这个，可是却一会儿都骗不了侦探们。所以我认为没有什么奥妙的唯一的一桩事情实际上正是我弄得最迷糊的一桩事情。十一种见解都指出了盗窃嫌疑犯，可是没有两个人说的盗窃犯是相同的，嫌疑犯总数共计三十七人。报纸上的各种记载末尾都提到了一切意见中最重要的一种——布朗特督察长的意见。这种叙述有一部分是像下面这样说的：

督察长知道两个主犯是谁，即“好汉”达菲和“红毛”麦克法登。在这次盗窃事件发生前十天，他就感觉到会
有人打算干这桩事，并

且还暗中跟踪这两个有名的坏蛋。可是不幸在事件发生的那天晚上，他们忽然去向不明，还没有来得及找到他们的下落，那家伙已经不见了——也就是那只

象。

达菲和麦克法登是干这一行的最大胆的匪徒，警察长有理由相信去年冬天在一个严寒的夜里从侦缉总队把火炉偷出去的就是他们——结果还没有到第二天早上，警察长和在场的每个侦探都归医生照料了，有些人冻坏了脚，有些人冻坏了手指头、耳朵和其他部分。

我看了这段头一半的时候，对于这位奇特的人的了不起的智慧比以前更加惊叹。他不但以明亮的眼光看透目前的一切，就连未来的事情也瞒不住他。我不久就到了他的办公室，并且对他说，我不能不认为他早该把那两个人逮捕起来，预先防止这桩麻烦事和一切损失才对。可是他的回答很简单，而且是无可辩驳的：

“预防罪行发生不是我们的责任范围以内的事，我们的任务是惩治罪行。在罪行发生之前，我们当然不能先行惩治。”

我说我们第一步的秘密被报纸破坏了，不但我们的一切事实，连我们所有的计划和目的通通被泄露了，甚至所有的嫌疑犯的名字也被宣布出来，这些人现在当然就会伪装起来，或是隐藏着不露面。

“随他们去吧。叫他们看看我的本事，知道我要是打定了主意要抓他们的时候，我的手就会落在他们身上，把他们从秘密地方捉到，就像命运之神的手那么准确。至于报纸呢，我们非和他们通声气不可。名誉、声望，经常被大家谈到——这些事就是当侦探的人的命根子。他必须发表他的事实，否则人家还以为他根本不知道什么事实；他也必须发表他的推测，因为无论什么事情也赶不上一个侦探的推测那么稀奇、那么惊人，而且这也最能使人对他敬佩万分；我们还必须发表我们的计划，因为报纸刊物非要这个不可，我们要是不给他们，就不免要得罪他们。我们必须经常让大家知道我们在干什么，否则他们就会以为我们什么也没干。我们与其让报纸上说些刻薄话，或者更糟糕，说些讽刺话，就不如让它说‘布朗特警察长的聪明和非凡的推测是如此这般’，那要痛快得多。”

“我知道您的话是很有道理的。可是我看了今天早上报纸发表的您的谈话，里面有一段说到您对某一个小小问题不肯吐露您的意见。”

“是呀，我们常来这一手，这是颇有作用的，并且我对那个问题根本还没有一定的主张哩。”

我交了一笔数目相当大的款子给警察长，作为临时开支，接着就是坐下来等待消息。现在我们随时都准备着电报会陆续拍来。我把报

纸重新拿来看，又看看我们那份说明的传单，结果发现那二万五千元的悬赏似乎是专给侦探们的。我说我认为这笔奖金应该给任何捉到那只象的人。督察长却说：

“将来找到象的总是侦探们，所以奖金反正会归给应得的人。要是别人找到这只畜生，那也无非是靠着留心侦探们的行动，利用从他们那儿偷来的线索和踪迹才办得到。那么归根结底，奖金也还是应该归侦探们得才对。奖金的正当作用是要鼓励那些贡献他们的时间和专门智慧来干这类事情的人，而不是要把好处拿给那些幸运儿，他们不过是碰巧发现一件悬赏寻找的东西，并不是靠他们的才能和辛苦来赚得这些奖金的。”

不消说，这当然是很有道理的。现在角落上的电报机开始噤噤地响起来了，结果收到下面这封急电：

纽约州，花站，上午七时半

已有线索。附近农场上发现连串足迹甚深。向东跟踪两英里 [3]，无结果；料象已西去。拟向该方追踪。

达利侦探

“达利是我们队里最得力的侦探之一，”督察长说，“我们不久就可以再接到他的消息。”

第二封电报又来了：

新泽西，巴克镇，上午七时四十分

刚到此地。玻璃工厂夜间被闯入，吞去瓶子八百只。附近唯一多水处在五英里外。必向该地前进。象必渴。所吞系空瓶。

贝克侦探

“这也表示很有希望。”督察长说，“我跟你说过这家伙的胃口可以做很好的线索吧。”

第三封电报是：

长岛，泰勒维尔，上午八时十五分

附近一干草堆夜间失踪。想系食去。已有线索，再前进。

哈伯德侦探

“你看他这么东奔西跑的！”督察长说：“我早就知道这件事情够麻烦，可是我们终归还是可以把他抓到。”

纽约州，花站，上午九时

向西跟踪三英里。足迹大而深，不整齐。适遇一农民，据云并非象脚印，乃冬寒地冻时挖出树秧之坑。请示机宜。

达利侦探

“啊哈！偷儿的同党！这事情越来越热闹了。”督察长说。

他口授了下面这封电报给达利：

逮捕此人，逼供同伙。继续跟踪——必要时直抵太平洋岸。

布朗特督察长

其后一封电报是：

宾夕法尼亚州，康尼点，上午八时四十五分

煤气公司营业部夜间被闯入，食去三个月未付款煤气账单。已获线索，续进。

墨菲侦探

“天哪！”督察长说，“他连煤气账单也吃吗？”

“他大概不知道——当然吃啰，可是这不能饱肚子。至少没有别的东西一起吃下去是不行的。”

这时候又来了这封令人兴奋的电报：

纽约州，艾恩维尔，上午九时半

初抵此。全村惊惶万状。象于今晨五时过此村。或谓象已西去，一说东行，一说北行，一说南行——但众人均称彼等未及细察。象触毙一马，已割取小块供线索。此系象鼻击毙者；由打击方式推断，似系自左方袭击。由此马卧地姿势判断，料象已沿柏克莱铁路北去。先行四小时半，拟立即跟踪追捕。

霍斯侦探

我发出了欢呼。督察长还是像一尊雕像似的不动声色。他镇静地按了按铃。

“阿拉里克，请伯恩斯队长到这儿来。”

伯恩斯来了。

“有多少人可以马上派去出勤？”

“九十六个，督察长。”

“立刻派他们往北去，叫他们集中在柏克莱铁路沿线艾恩维尔以北一带。”

“是，督察长。”

“叫他们极其秘密地行动。另外还有别的人下班的时候，马上叫他们准备出勤。”

“是，督察长。”

“去吧！”

“是，督察长。”

马上又来了另外一封电报：

纽约州，赛奇角，十时半

初抵此。八时十五分象过此地。全镇人已逃空，仅留一警察。象显然未向警察袭击，而欲击灯柱。但击中两者。已自警察尸体割肉一块做线索。

斯图曼侦探

“原来象已经转向西边去了，”督察长说，“可是他逃不掉，因为我派出的人已经在那一带地方分布到各处了。”

其后的一封电报说：

格罗佛站，十一时十五分

初抵此。全村人已逃空，仅余老弱病夫。三刻钟前象由此经过。正值反禁酒群众大会召

开，象由窗中伸入其鼻，自蓄水池吸水将大会冲散，有人遭水灌注——旋即死去，数人淹毙。侦探克洛斯与奥少夫纳西曾过此镇，但向南行——故与象相左。周围数英里地区均大为惊恐——居民均由家中逃出。

逃往各处，均遇此象，丧命者颇多。

布朗特侦探

我简直要流泪，因为这场灾难太使我难受了。可是督察长只说：

“你看——我们正在一步步把他包围起来。他觉出了我们已经来到，又往东转了。”

可是还有许多叫我们伤脑筋的消息在后面。电报又带来了这个消息：

霍艮港，十二时十九分

初到此。半小时前象行经此地，曾引起极度惊恐与兴奋。象在各街横行——装管工二人路过，一人丧命，一人得解脱，众皆悲恸。

欧弗拉赫第侦探

“这下子他可是让我的弟兄们包围住了，”督察长说，“怎么也逃不掉了。”

分布到新泽西和宾夕法尼亚各地的侦探们又拍来了一连串的电报，他们都在追踪各种线索，其中包括被蹂躏的粮仓、工厂、主日学校的图书馆，大家都怀着很大的希望——实际上这些希望简直成了确有把握的事。督察长说：

“我很想能够和他们通消息，叫他们往北去，可是这办不到。侦探只到电报局去发电报来向我报告；马上他又走了，你简直不知在哪儿找得到他。”

然后又来了这封电报：

康涅狄格州，桥港，十二时十五分

巴南愿出每年四千元代价，获使用此象供张贴流动广告之特权，由目前至侦探寻获此象时为止。拟在象身贴马戏团招贴画。盼即复。

波格斯侦探

“这简直是荒谬绝伦！”我大声地说。

“当然是啰，”督察长说，“巴南先生自以为非常精明，可是他显然还看不透我——我可看透了他。”

于是他给这封急电口授回电：

谢绝巴南所提条件。需七千元，否则作罢。

布朗特督察长

“看吧。不要等多久就会有回电。巴南先生不在家，他在电报局——他在交涉生意的时候有这个习惯。不消三分钟……”

同意。

巴南

电报机嘟嘟嘟的声音打断了督察长的谈话。我对这个非常离奇的插曲还没有来得及发表意见，下面这封急电就把我的心思引到另一个恼人的方面去了：

纽约州，波利维亚，十二时五十分

象由南方抵此，十一时五十分过此向森林

前进。途中驱散出殡行列，送葬者牺牲二人。居民放小炮击象后逃散。侦探伯克与我于十分钟后由北方赶到，但因误认若干地下土坑为象踪，致延误甚久；但终获象踪，追至森林。然后伏地爬行，继续注视象踪，追随至丛林中。伯克先行，不幸象已停步休息；故伯克因低头察看象踪，尚未发觉象在眼前，头已触其后腿。伯克即刻起立，手握象尾欢呼“奖金应归……”但出言未毕，象鼻一击已使此勇士粉身碎骨而死。我向后逃，象转身穷追，直至林边，速度惊人，我本非丧命不可，幸因老天保佑，送葬行列所余数人又与象遭遇，使其转移目标。现闻送葬者无一人还，但也不算损失过重，剩余送葬用品足以再举办另一丧葬活动。象已再行失踪。

马尔鲁尼侦探

分派到新泽西、宾夕法尼亚、得拉维尔和弗吉尼亚等地的那些苦干和有信心的侦探们都在跟着有希望的新线索追寻，我们除了从他们那里以外，始终没有得到任何消息，直到下午两点过后，才接到这封电报：

巴克斯特中心，二时十五分

象曾到此地，周身贴马戏团广告，驱散一奋兴会，将改过自新者毙伤甚多。居民将象囚于栏中，派人守

卫。其后侦探布朗与我来此，即入栏持照片与说明书对此象进行鉴定。各种特征一概相符，仅有一项不得见——即腋下疮疤。布郎为查明起见，匍匐至象体下细察，结果立即丧命——头部被击碎，但碎脑中一无所有。众皆奔逃，象亦匿去，横冲直撞，伤亡多人。象虽逃去，但因炮伤，沿途均留显著之血迹。定能再度寻获。现象已穿越茂林向南前进。

布朗特侦探

这是最后一封电报。晚上起了雾，非常之浓，以至三英尺外的东西都看不见。浓雾整夜没有散。渡船不得不停开，甚至连公共汽车都不能行驶。

三

第二天早晨，报纸上还是像从前一样，登满了侦探们的推测；我们那些惨剧也通通登出来了，另外还登了许多消息，都是报馆从各地电报通讯员方面得来的。篇幅占了一栏又一栏，一直占到一版三分之一的地位，还加上一些显眼的标题，使我看了心里发烦。这些标题一般的情状大致是这样：

白象尚未捕获！

仍在继续前进，到处闯祸！

各处村庄居民惊骇欲狂，逃避一空！

白色恐怖在他前面传播，死亡与

糜烂接踵而至！

侦探尾随其后。粮仓被毁，工厂被劫一空，收成被吃光，公众集会被驱散，酿成惨剧无法形容！侦缉队中三十四位最出色的侦探的推测！督察长布朗特的推测！

“啊哈！”督察长布朗特几乎露出兴奋的神色，说道，“这可真是了不起！这是任何侦探机关从来没有碰到过的好运道。这个案件的名声会传到天涯地角，永垂不朽，我的名字也会跟着传出去的。”

但是我没有什麼可高兴的。我觉得所有那些血案似乎都是我干出来的，那只象只不过是我不负责任的代理人罢了。受害的人数增加得

多么快呀！有一个地方，他“干涉了一次选举，弄死了五个投重票的违法选民”。在这个举动之后，他又杀害了两个不幸的人，他们名叫奥唐诺休和麦克弗兰尼根，“前一天才来到这全世界被压迫者的家乡来避难，正想要第一次运用美国公民选举投票的光荣权利，恰好遭到这个暹罗煞星的毒手而丧命了”。到另一处，他“发现了一个疯狂的兴风作浪的传教士，正在准备他新一轮的对跳舞、戏剧和其他不能还击的事物所要进行的英勇的攻击，一脚就把他踩死了”。又在另一个地方，他“杀害了一个避雷针经纪人”。遇难的人数越来越多，血腥气越来越重，伤心惨目的事件越来越多。丧命的共达六十人，受伤的二百四十人，一切记载都证明了侦探们的活动和热心，而且结尾都是说“有三十万老百姓和四个侦探看见过这个可怕的畜生，而这四个侦探之中有两个被他弄死了”。

电报机又噤噤地响起来，我简直听了就害怕。随即消息就一条一条传过来，可是这些消息的性质却使我感到快慰的失望。不久就明白了，象已不知去向。雾使他得以找到一个很好的藏身之所，没有被人发觉。从一些极荒谬的遥远地点打来的电报说是在某时某刻有人在雾里瞥见过一个隐隐约约的庞然大物，那“无疑是象”。这个隐隐约约的庞然大物曾在新港、新泽西、宾夕法尼亚、纽约州内地、布鲁克林，甚至在纽约市区，处处都曾有人瞥见过！但是处处都是这个隐隐约约的庞然大物很快就不见了，丝毫没有留下什么痕迹。强大的侦缉队分派到广大地区的那许多侦探，每人都按时来电报告，个个都有线索，而且都在跟踪，拼命往前穷追。

但是那一天过去了，并无其他结果。

第二天又是一样。

再往后一天还是一样。

报纸上的消息渐成千篇一律，其中的各种事实都是毫无价值的，各种线索都是没有结果的，各种推测几乎都是搜尽枯肠想出来故意使人惊讶、使人高兴、使人眼花缭乱的。

我遵照督察长的建议，把奖金加了一倍。

又过了四个沉闷的日子，然后那些可怜的、干得很起劲的侦探遭到了一次严重的打击——报馆记者们谢绝发表他们的推测，很冷淡地说：“让我们歇一歇吧。”

白象失踪两个星期之后，我遵照督察长的意见，把奖金增加到七万五千元。这个数目是很大的，但是我觉得我宁肯牺牲我的全部私人财产，也不要失掉我的政府对我的信任。现在侦探们倒了霉，报纸上就转过笔锋来攻击他们，对他们加以最令人难堪的讽刺。这使一些卖艺的歌手们想出了一个好主意，他们把自己打扮成侦探，在舞台上用

可笑至极的方法追寻那只象。漫画家们画出那些侦探拿着小望远镜在全国各地一处一处地仔细察看，而象却在他们背后从他们口袋里偷苹果吃。他们还把侦探们戴的徽章画成各式各样的可笑的漫画——侦探小说的封底上用金色印着这个徽章，你一定是看到过的——那是一只睁得很大的眼睛，配上“我们永远不睡”这几个字。侦探们到酒店去喝酒的时候，那故意逗笑的掌柜就恢复一句早已作废的话，说道：“您喝杯醒眼酒好吗？”空气中弥漫着浓厚的讽刺气氛。

但是有一个人在这种气氛中始终保持镇定，处之泰然，不动声色，那就是坚定不移的督察长。他那双大胆的眼睛永不表示丧气，他那沉着的信心永不动摇。他老是说：

“让他们去嘲笑吧！谁最后笑就笑得最痛快。”

我对这位先生的敬仰变成了一种崇拜。我经常在他身边。他的办公室对他而言已经成为一个不愉快的地方，现在一天比一天更加厉害了。可是他既然受得了，我当然也要撑持下去——至少是能撑多久就撑多久。所以我经常到他这里来，并且停留很久——我好像是唯一能够忍受得了的外人。大家都不知道我怎么会熬得下去。我每每似乎觉得非开小差不可，可是一到这种时候，我就看看那张沉着而且显然是满不在乎的脸，于是又坚持下去了。

白象失踪以后，大约过了三个星期，有一天早上，我正想要说我不得不息鼓收兵的时候，那位大侦探却提出一个绝妙的拿手办法来，这下子可阻止了我那个念头。

这个办法就是和窃犯们妥协。我虽然和世界上最有机智的天才有过广泛的接触，可是这位先生的思想之丰富实在是我生平从来没有见过的。他说他相信可以出十万元和对方妥协，把那只象找回来。我说我相信可以勉强凑这个数目。可是那些可怜的侦探非常忠心地努力干了一场，怎么办呢？他说：

“按照妥协的办法，他们照例得一半。”

这就打消了我唯一的反对理由，于是督察长写了两封信，内容如下：

亲爱的夫人。——你的丈夫只要和我立即约谈一次，就可以得一笔巨款（而且完全保证不受法律干涉）。

督察长布朗特

他派他信任的信差把这两封信送一封给“好汉”达菲“不知是真是假的妻子”，另一封给“红毛”麦克法登的“不知真假的妻子”。

一小时之内，来了这么两封无礼的回信：

你这老糊涂蛋：“好汉”达菲已经死了两年了。

布里奇特·马奥尼

瞎子督察长，——“红毛”麦克法登早就被绞死了，他已经升天一年半了。除了当侦探

的，随便哪个笨蛋也知道这桩事情。

玛丽·奥胡里根

“早就猜想到这些事情了，”督察长说，“这一证明足见我的直觉真是千真万确。”

一个办法刚刚行不通，他又想出另外一个主意来了。他马上写了一则广告拿到早报上去登，我把它抄了一份：

子——亥戌丑卯酉。二四二辰。未丑寅卯——辰亥三
二八成酉丑卯。寅亥申寅，——；二已！寅丑酉。
密。

他说只要偷儿还活着，见了这则广告就会到往常约会的地点去。他还说明了这个往常约会的地点是侦探和罪犯之间进行一切谈判的地方。这次的约会定在第二天晚上十二点举行。

在那个时刻来到之前，我们什么事情也不能做，所以我赶快走出这个办公室，而且心里实在因为得到这个喘息的机会而有谢天谢地的感觉。

第二天晚上十一点，我带着十万元现钞，交到督察长手里，过了一會兒他就告辞了，眼睛里流露出那勇往直前的、一向没有消失的信心。一个钟头几乎无法忍受的时光终于熬过去了，然后我听见他那可喜的脚步声，于是我喘着气站起来，一歪一倒地跑过去迎接他，他那双明亮的眼睛里发出多么得意的闪光啊！他说：

“我们妥协了！那些开玩笑的家伙明天就要改变论调了！跟我去！”

他拿着一支点着的蜡烛大步地走进一个绝大的圆顶地窖，那儿经常有六十个侦探在睡觉，这时候还有二十来个在打牌消遣。我紧跟在他后面。他飞快地一直往地窖里老远的、阴暗的那一头走过去。我正在闷得要命、简直要晕倒的时候，他一下子绊倒了，倒在一个家伙的伸开的肢体上。我听见他一面倒下去，一面欢呼道：

“我们这种高贵的职业果然是名不虚传的。你的象在这儿哪！”

我被人抬到上面那办公室里，他们用石炭酸使我清醒过来了。整个侦缉队都拥了进来，随后那一番欢天喜地的祝贺真是热闹非凡，我从来没有见过那种场面。他们把记者们邀请过来，打开一桶一桶的香槟酒来痛饮祝贺，大家握手、道贺，简直没有个完，兴头十足。当时的英雄人物当然是督察长，他的快乐到了顶点了，而且也是靠他的耐心、品德和勇敢换来的，所以叫我看了很欢喜。虽然我站在那儿，已经成了一个无家可归的穷光蛋，我受托的那个无价之宝也死了，我为本国服务的职位也完蛋了，一切都由于我向来似乎有个致命的老毛病——对于一个重大的托付老是粗心大意地执行。一双双传神的眼睛对督察长表示了深切的敬仰，还有许多侦探的声音悄悄地说：“你瞧瞧人家——实在是这一行的大王——只要给他一点儿线索就行，他就只需要这个，不管什么东西藏起来了，他没有找不着的。”大家分那五万元奖金的时候，真是兴高采烈；分完之后，督察长一面把他那一份塞进腰包，一面发表了一篇简短的谈话。他在这篇谈话里说道：“痛痛快快地享受这笔奖金吧，伙计们，因为这是你们赚来的；并且还不只这个——你们还给侦探这种职业博得了不朽的名声。”

又来了一封电报，内容是：

密歇根，孟禄，上午十时

三星期来，初遇一电报局。随象踪骑马穿过森林，抵此地时已奔波千英里，脚印日见其

重，日见其大，且日益显明。望勿急躁——至多再一星期，定能将象寻获。万无一失。

达利侦探

督察长叫大家给达利三呼喝彩，给“侦缉队里这位能手”欢呼，然后吩咐手下给他打电报去，叫他回来领取他那一份额奖金。

被偷的象这场惊人的风波就这样完结了，第二天报纸上又是满篇好听的恭维话，只有一个无聊的例外。这个报纸说：“侦探真是伟大！像一只失踪了的象这么个小小的东西，他找起来也许是慢一点儿——白天他尽管整天寻找，夜里就跟象的尸体睡在一起，一直拖到三个星期，可是他终归还是会把他找着——只要把象错放在那里的人给他说明地点就行了！”

我永远失去了可怜的大壮。炮弹给了他致命伤，他在雾里悄悄地走到那个倒霉的地方；在敌人的包围之中，又经常受到侦缉的危险，他连饿带熬，一直瘦下来，最后死神才给了他安息。

最后的妥协花掉了我十万元，侦探的费用另外花掉四万二千元，我再也没有向我本国政府去申请一个职位，我成了个倾家荡产的人，成了个落魄人间的流浪汉——可是我始终觉得那位先生是全世界空前的大侦探，我对他的敬仰至今还是没有减退，而且一辈子都不会改变。

一个顺风顺水的坏小子的故事

从前，有个叫吉姆的坏小子——然而，如果你留意一下，就会发现你在主日学校 [1] 读到的那些书里，几乎所有坏小子都叫詹姆斯。这着实很奇怪，不过，咱们这位主人公确实叫吉姆，千真万确。

吉姆没有一位患病的母亲——一位笃信宗教、痼疾缠身、十分乐于从此躺进坟墓长眠不起的母亲，但是，因为对儿子强烈的爱，她最终还是生下了他，心中满是焦虑，害怕自己哪天撒手人寰，她的儿子将被留下独自面对这个残暴而冷酷的世界。在主日学校的那些书里，大多数坏小子都叫詹姆斯，并且有个患病的母亲。她们会对詹姆斯说，“好，我现在躺下啦”，诸如此类的话，然后用甜蜜而哀伤的语调唱歌哄他们入睡，再给他们一个晚安吻。最后，詹姆斯入眠后，母亲则跪在他的床边哀哭。但是，我们这位主人公可不一样。他叫吉姆，母亲没病没灾——没有痼疾，也没有任何如此这般的毛病，反之，她身体还挺壮实。而且，她也并不虔诚信教。更甚者，她也没那么担心吉姆。她曾经说，吉姆要是不小心伤到了脖子，那也没什么大不了。晚上睡觉前，她经常打吉姆的屁股，且从来没给过他什么晚安吻；相反，她所谓的“晚安”就是离开前扇吉姆一顿耳光。

有一次，这个坏小子偷了食品柜的钥匙，伸手进去偷吃果酱。为了不让母亲看出来，他还往果酱罐里倒焦油来掩人耳目。不过，他做这些的时候，心里可没有突然间掠过什么糟糕的感觉，也没有一个声音在他耳边说：“我这样忤逆妈妈对吗？这么做是不是太罪恶了？那些偷吃善良母亲果酱的坏孩子后来都怎么样了？”接下来，他也没有一个人孤零零地跪在地上，心中暗暗保证再也不做坏事，继而，捧着一颗轻盈、愉悦的心站起来去找妈妈，跟她道出个中缘由并乞求原谅。不用说，他母亲也没有被感动得双眼满是骄傲的泪水，心怀感激地祝福他。不，那是其他坏小子在书本中的境遇；奇怪的是，咱们这位吉姆的遭遇可谓与众不同。他吃了果酱，还用他一贯粗鄙而应受谴责的方式说“棒呆了！”。然后，他又往里面倒了倒焦油，再次说，“棒呆了！”。接着哈哈大笑，断言道，当他母亲发现这一切，那个老婆子一定会暴跳如雷。然而，当她真的有所察觉，他坚称自己毫不知情，而她则狠狠地抽了他一顿鞭子，弄得自己号啕大哭。关于这个小男孩的一切都如此稀奇——一切都和那些在其他书中司空见惯的坏小子詹姆斯大相径庭。

有一次，他爬到橡子果园的苹果树上去偷苹果。树枝没有折断，

他也没有摔着胳膊、被农场主家的神犬咬伤，更没有因此连续几个星期卧病在床，进而在病中忏悔，从此摇身一变，成为一个乖孩子。哦，根本没有！他随心所欲地偷了好多苹果，又安然无恙地返回地面。他连怎么对付那只狗都盘算好了，当它跑过来准备咬他的时候，他举起一块砖头将它砸了个四仰八叉。这实在太奇怪了，其他那些劝人向善的书里（通常封底绘有大理石花纹，插图里满是身穿燕尾服、短马裤，头戴大檐帽的男士，以及长裙的腰线在胳膊以下、没有加束腰的女士），可从来没发生过这种事儿。主日学校的书里从来没有这档子事儿。

有一次，他偷了老师的铅笔刀。一想到被发现就要挨一顿鞭子，吉姆不禁十分害怕，于是，他将铅笔刀塞进了乔治·威尔逊的帽子里——可怜的威尔逊，寡妇威尔逊太太的孩子，道德小标兵，全村公认的好孩子。威尔逊总是很听妈妈的话，从不说谎，勤奋好学，对主日学校简直着了迷。当那把小刀从威尔逊的帽子里掉出来，这个可怜的小男孩一下垂下头，羞红了脸，好像自己真的犯了错。气急败坏的老师认定他就是小偷，就在老师的戒尺马上要打到威尔逊瑟瑟发抖的肩膀上时，他们中间并没有突然出现一位纯属虚构的白发太平绅士 [2]，更见不到他拿腔拿调地说：“放了那个高尚的小男孩——那个真正犯错的懦夫就在这里！课间休息的时候，我正好路过校门口，没人注意到我，而我却看到了真正偷东西的人！”没有这样的事情发生，吉姆也没有因此挨一顿揍。自然，那位受人尊敬的绅士也没有在这些哭哭啼啼、感激涕零的师生面前进行什么长篇的说教。他也没有牵起乔治的手说，这样的小男孩值得被夸奖，然后邀请他上门与自己同住，让他帮忙打扫办公室，生上火，跑跑腿，砍砍柴，之后，再让乔治去学法律，平时帮自己的妻子做做家务，再空出些时间去消遣，最后，这个小男孩月入四十美分，幸福无忧。不，故事本该是这样的，但吉姆的版本不是这样的。没有一位爱管闲事的老绅士突然闯入，找吉姆的麻烦，所以，好孩子乔治挨了打，吉姆则在一旁幸灾乐祸。因为，你知道的，吉姆讨厌好孩子。吉姆说：“他看不起那些没种的。”多么粗鄙的语言啊，这个又坏又疏于管教的臭小子。

然而，吉姆身上最让人啧啧称奇的地方就是当他星期日 [3] 去划船的时候，居然没有溺水；又一个星期天，吉姆去钓鱼，正赶上暴风雨，却没有被闪电击中。怎么会这样？你也许翻了又翻，翻遍了主日学校的书，然而，从现在到下一个圣诞节你也找不到一个相似的故事。哦，不！你能找到的那些星期日去划船的坏小子全都会无一例外地溺水；而他们如果星期日去钓鱼，则一定会遭雷击。那些星期日载着小坏蛋的船都不太好过。而当那些小坏蛋在安息日 [4] 跑去钓鱼，则十有八九会遭遇暴风雨。咱们这位吉姆是怎么躲过这一切的，对我来说可真是个谜。

这位吉姆的日子过得有如神助——一准儿是这样。什么都伤不到他。有一次，他甚至给兽栏里的大象喂了一块口嚼烟，也没有被大象用鼻子敲得脑袋落地。他在橱柜里翻翻拣拣，找一瓶薄荷露，可从来没有因此把硝酸喝进肚。他偷走了父亲的枪，在安息日那天跑出去打猎，也没有崩掉自己三四根手指。他一时气急，挥拳打向自己妹妹的太阳穴，但她也没有因此整个夏天都病恹恹，接着不幸离世，更没有在弥留之际，留下温柔宽恕的蜜语，让他备受谴责的内心更受打击。不，她挺过来了。故事的最后，他离开了，走到海边，再也没有回来。他发现自己在这个世界上悲伤而孤独，他心爱的人都已经长眠地下，而他孩童时代那藤蔓掩映中的家也已经轰隆隆倒塌，走向破败。啊，不！这些都没有发生。他回来了，醉醺醺的，像个浪人似的，先进了警察局。

他长大了，结婚了，拥有了一个庞大的家庭。一天晚上，他用斧头一个个敲碎了他们的脑袋。后来，他凭着一整套的偷奸耍滑发了家，现在已经成了村子里最可鄙、最恶毒的无赖了。可他广受尊敬，已经是州议会的一员了。

所以，你看到了，主日学校那些书里的可从来没有一个詹姆斯能有咱们这位有如神助的坏蛋吉姆的好运气。

[4] 安息日（the Sabbath）被普遍认为是犹太教（Judaism）主要节日之一。Sabbath一词源于阿卡德语，本意为“七”，希伯来语意为“休息”“停止工作”，犹太历每周的第七日（每逢星期五日落到星期六日落）。犹太人谨守安息日为圣日，不许工作。

一个不得善终的好孩子的故事

本文是在几个文友的坚持之下写就的，他们认为，如果我之前写的道德小品《一个顺风顺水的坏小子的故事》值得被印制发售并保存上几个星期，那么，一个合理而不带偏见的姊妹篇理应获得同样的不朽。

——写在前面的话

从前，有个叫雅各布·比利文斯的好孩子。他总是很听父母的话，无论他们的要求多么不可理喻，他总是认真读书，去主日学校的时候从来没有迟到过。他不会逃学，即使冷静下来想想，发现逃学将是他能做到的最有利可图的事儿。从来没有一个小孩能把他约出来玩，他实在太奇怪了。无论谎言多么便利，他也不会撒谎。他只是说撒谎是不对的，而这个理由对他来说就足够了。他太诚实，简直有些可笑了。雅各布这套古怪的行为方式简直超越了世间万物。他不会在星期天玩弹球，不会掏鸟窝，也不会给街头艺人的猴子们几枚辣味糖果；他看上去对一切合情合理的娱乐活动都兴致缺乏。因此，其他几个男孩总是试图推测并理解他，可是他们完全得不出任何令人满意的答案；就像我之前说过的一样，他们只能得出一些模模糊糊的答案——他一定是“有毛病”了。因此，他们将他纳入自己的保护，从不允许任何人伤害他。

这个好孩子读了主日学校所有的书，这些书是他最大的慰藉——这就是全部奥秘所在了。他相信主日学校书里那些优秀的小男孩，并对他们充满信心，希望可以邂逅他们中的一员；但他从来没有真的遇到过。也许，他们全都在他出生前就去世了吧。无论什么时候，只要他读到一个好孩子的故事，马上就会翻到结局去看这个孩子结局如何，因为他想不远万里地去找他，好好端详端详他。但这些都无济于事，那些好孩子全都在故事结尾过世了。你能在书页里看到一张葬礼的图片——所有亲朋好友和主日学校的孩子都来了，他们穿着十分短小的马裤，搭配过大的女帽，站在墓碑前，每个人都拿着一码半长的纸巾哭哭啼啼。他经常这样寻不到结果，从来没有亲眼见过任何一个好孩子，谁让他们在故事最后都死了呢。

雅各布有一个崇高的理想——他希望被写进主日学校的书里。他希望被写进去，再配上一幅画，画面中，他满怀光荣地坚决不肯对自己的母亲撒谎，而她则因为他的“成就”喜极而泣；或者另一幅画，画

中，他站在门廊上，给一位可怜兮兮、抚养着六个孩子、无家可归的女乞丐一便士，告诉她想怎么花就怎么花，但是不能挥霍无度，因为挥霍可是一种罪行；抑或另一幅画，画面中，他宽宏大量地拒不告发一个坏小子，而这家伙总是在雅各布从学校出来的路上躲在拐角处等着他，抄起一块板子猛打他的脑袋，一路“嘿！嘿！”地大叫，追着雅各布回家。这就是年轻的雅各布·比利文斯的志向——他渴望被写入主日学校的书里。但是，有时当他想起所有好孩子都死了的时候，心里多多少少有些不舒服。他喜欢活着，你知道的，而那些主日学校书里的好孩子却都死了，这实在是“成为他们”最让人感到不舒服的地方了。他知道，做个好孩子是有损健康的；他知道，想要和书里那些好孩子一样好到不可思议的程度可是比得了痼疾还要致命的；他知道，他们之中没有一个人能够活得长久，而一想到如果他真的被写进书里自己也看不到，他就十分痛苦；然而，如果他们在他去世之前就出了书，那这本书可就流行不起来了——没有葬礼画面可不行。如果书里不写上他弥留之际给身边人的箴言，那可算不上一本主日学校藏书。所以，到了最后一刻，他当然只好拿定了主意，竭尽全力，好好活着，尽量坚持，并且在死期将近时准备好自己的遗言。

但是，不知为何，这个好孩子一直诸事不顺，发生在他身上的事儿和其他书里那些好孩子的经历一直大相径庭。那些好孩子一路顺风顺水，而坏小子们都摔断了腿；但是，在他的故事里，一定是哪颗螺母松动了，哪里出了岔子，一切都对不上。他发现吉姆^[1]·布莱克在偷苹果，便走到树下，给他讲书里那些坏小子的下场——从邻居家的树上摔下来，伤了胳膊。吉姆也从树上摔了下来，但是，吉姆摔到了他身上，伤到了他的胳膊，自己却毫发无伤。雅各布搞不懂这是怎么回事。书里可从来没发生过这种事。

还有一次，那些坏小子将一位盲人推到泥坑里，雅各布冲上去帮忙，满心以为会得到盲人的祝福。然而，那个盲人根本毫无谢意，而是举起拐杖狠狠打了他的脑瓜子一下，并称下次雅各布要是再敢先推他、再假意帮助他，他就要抓他个现行——这和哪本书里写的都对不上，雅各布把所有书都重新看了一遍。

雅各布一直想要找一只无家可归、饥肠辘辘且饱受折磨的牧羊犬。他想把它带回家，好好喂养，并得到狗狗长久的感激。终于被他找到了一只，雅各布高兴坏了。他把它带回家喂养，不过，正当他想要好好摸摸它的时候，那只狗猛地扑向他，咬碎了他身上所有的衣服，只有前裆的布片还稍有保留，让他狠狠出了个大洋相。这可够奇怪的。它和书里的狗是同一种品种，但习性却大相径庭。这个男孩无论做什么都会弄得一团糟。那些书里的孩子屡屡被嘉奖的地方，恰恰成了雅各布最徒劳倒霉的地方。

有一次，他在去主日学校的路上看到一群坏小子出发去划帆船。他吓坏了，要知道，在他受过的教育里那些星期日去开帆船的男孩无一例外都溺水了。所以，他赶紧划着一个小木筏去警告他们，不过，一根原木挡了他的路，他脚下一滑，栽进了水里。很快，有人把他捞出水里，医生帮他身体里的水挤出来，大吼着将他叫醒了。但他还是感冒了，足足卧床了九个星期。最莫名其妙的就是，那些坏小子倒是一整天都玩得很尽兴，最后活蹦乱跳地回家了，实在不可思议。雅各布·比利文斯说，书里可从来没有发生过这样的事。他完全惊呆了。

痊愈后，雅各布有些心灰意冷。但无论如何，他还是决定继续干下去。他知道，直到目前为止，他的经历还不足以成书。他还没有过上好孩子的生活，如果他可以坚持到最后，那么他希望有一天可以做到最好。如果一切都不尽如人意，他还能靠着临终遗言扳回一城。

看过书，雅各布发现现在是他出海去当船上侍者的时候了。他拜访了一位船长，提出了自己的申请。当船长管他要介绍信的时候，他骄傲地掏出一个小册子，指着上面的话：“致雅各布·比利文斯，来自他慈爱的老师”。但那位船长是个粗鄙野蛮的汉子，他说道，“哦！这算什么！”这根本证明不了雅各布能刷好盘子、使好饮料机。他可不需要雅各布。这简直是雅各布一生中最不可理喻的一件事了。在如何唤起船长的恻隐之心这方面，一本写着老师溢美之词的小册子可从来没有失手过，它们通常能为被推荐者带来各种既光荣又赚钱的职务——他从来没在任何一本书上读到自己这种境遇。他实在无法相信发生在自己身上的事。

这个男孩总是四处碰壁。发生在他身上的事儿从来都和书上对不上。终于有一天，当他正四处寻觅坏孩子想要加以劝诫时，他发现他们都聚在一个老铸铁厂里，正在拿十四五只狗取乐。他们将这群狗拴成长长的一列，正准备往它们的尾巴上紧紧地系上空炸药罐。雅各布心有所动。他坐在一个罐子上，使命将至，他毫不介意沾上油腻。他抓住打头那只狗的脖子，转眼充满责备地望着最调皮的汤姆·琼斯。但就在此时，麦克沃尔特总督盛怒着走进来了。所有坏小子都跑了，雅各布却特意满脸无辜地站起来，并开始了主日学校书里那一套庄重的发言，开头不外乎“哦，先生！”。然而，现实中，无论乖小孩还是坏小子都没能就着“哦，先生！”来一番高谈阔论。总督根本等不及听下面的话。他抓着雅各布的耳朵就将其提起来转了个圈儿，举起手狠狠打了他背后一下，瞬间，雅各布被弹出屋顶，朝着太阳一路高飞，那些狗则像风筝一样跟着他飞。地面上，一点儿总督和老铸铁厂的影子都看不见了。而雅各布·比利文斯呢，他根本没机会留下精心准备的遗言了，除非是说给鸟听。最后，虽然他身体的主要部分算是落在了邻郡树顶上，他身体的其他部分却散落在四个小镇上，所以，人们不得不验了五次尸来看他是不是死了，是怎么死的。从来没有一个男孩被

这么惨烈地分尸过。

这个已故的好孩子，事事竭尽全力，却从来得不到书中的待遇。除了他之外，其他男孩照他那么做都兴旺发达了。他的故事实在卓绝，个中缘由也许永远也弄不清了。

加利维拉县有名的跳蛙

有一位朋友从东部给我写信，托我去拜访和蔼而多话的西蒙·惠勒老先生，探听我朋友的朋友留尼达·斯迈利的消息。我遵照他的嘱咐去拜访，下面所写的故事就是这次拜访的结果。我内心至今有一个疑团。总觉得所谓留尼达·斯迈利是一位乌有先生，我的朋友根本不认识这么一个人物。大概是他猜想着我要是向惠勒老先生问起他，就会使他联想到他那位无聊的吉姆·斯迈利，于是他就会打开话匣子，搬出关于那个人的一些令人生气的回忆，说得又长又讨厌，对我也毫无益处，徒然把我烦得要命。如果我的朋友的话是这样，结果是很成功的。

找到西蒙·惠勒的时候，发现他正在那业已衰落的安奇尔矿区市镇上一所快要坍塌的酒店里酒吧间的火炉旁边舒舒服服地打盹，我看出他是个肥胖和秃头的人，在他那安闲的面容上，露出一一种可亲的温和朴实的表情，他醒过来给我问好。我告诉他说，我有一位朋友托我来探访他并打听他少年时代的一个名叫留尼达·斯迈利的亲爱的伴侣——留尼达·斯迈利牧师，福音会的一个年轻的牧师，我的朋友听说他曾有一个时期住在安奇尔矿区镇上，我还说惠勒先生如果能够告诉我一点儿关于这位留尼达·斯迈利牧师的消息，我是很感谢他的。

西蒙·惠勒把我逼到一个角落里，用他的椅子把我拦住，然后坐下来，喋喋不休地叙述这一段后面接着的那个单调的故事。他一直不笑，不皱眉头，甚至不改变声音，始终保持着他开始说第一句话所用的那种细水长流似的音调，一直没有丝毫起劲的表现；可是在他叙述这个冗长的故事的时候，从头到尾，老有一股令人感动的认真和诚恳的情调，这使我分明地体会到他虽然决不认为他这个故事有什么可笑或好玩的地方，他可是把它当作一桩重要事情，并且还佩服那里面的两位主角，觉得他们是斗智的奇才。我让他随意地说下去，一次也没有打搅过他。

留尼达牧师，嗯，留尼达牧师——唉，这儿从前有过一个家伙，叫作吉姆·斯迈利，那是在1849年冬天——也许是1850年春天吧——不知怎么的，我记不清楚了，不过我之所以觉得反正总是那两个年头，是因为我记得他初到这市镇上来的时候，那道大水槽还没有修成。可是不管怎样，你在这儿再也找不出一个比他更奇怪的人，他无论碰到什么事情，只要找得到一个人在对立方下赌注，他就要和人家打赌；要是找不到，他就换到另外一边来也行。别人乐意怎么赌，他

就怎么赌——只要他能和人家打成赌，他就心满意足。可是虽然这样，他还是运气好，简直好得不得了。差不多老是他赌赢了。他老是一心一意找机会；不管一桩什么事情，只要有人提起，那家伙就要和人家打赌，随你挑选哪一边都行，就像我刚才说的那样。要是举行赛马，赛完的时候你就会发现他大赢特赢或是赌得两手空空；要是有人斗狗，他也要赌；有人斗猫，他也要赌；有人斗鸡，他也要赌；嗯，哪怕有两只鸟落在篱笆上，他也要和你赌一赌哪一只先飞；要是举行野外的布道会，他一定准时到场，拿华克尔牧师来打赌，照他看来，华克尔牧师是这一带地方讲道讲得最好的，本来也是，他的确是好人。他哪怕是看见一只屎壳郎在往什么地方走，他也要和你赌一赌它走多大工夫才走得到它要去的地方，要是你答应和他打赌，他就跟着那只屎壳郎一直到墨西哥去，也要弄清楚它究竟到什么地方，以及它在路上走多久。这儿有许多小伙子看见过那个斯迈利，都可以给你谈谈他的事情。嗯，不管是什么，对他都是一样——他赌什么都行——那才是个顶有趣的角色哩。有一回华克尔牧师的太太得了一场大病，病了很久，好像是没有救了。可是有一天早上他走进来，斯迈利马上跑过去问他的太太的病怎么样，他说她好得多了——感谢天主无限的慈悲——看情形大有起色，靠老天的保佑，她还可以恢复健康。可是斯迈利连想也没有想一下，就冲口而出地说：“嗯，我敢跟你赌两块半钱，准保她决不会好。”

这个斯迈利买了一匹母马——小伙子们把它叫作十五分钟的老爷马，可是那不过是开玩笑，你明白吗，因为它当然比这跑得快些——而且他还常常靠那匹马赢钱，虽然它跑得慢，并且老害气喘病，或是害瘟热病，要不就害肺病，或是这一类的毛病。他们老是让它先跑两三百码，然后把它撵过去；可是每次到了比赛的终点，它就上了劲头，简直是拼命地跑，一跳一跳地赶着大步往上撵，它把腿轻快地乱甩，一时甩到空中，一时甩到一边，踢到围栏上，掀起的灰尘越来越多，它的咳嗽、打喷嚏和喷鼻息的声音越来越响——结果每次老是赶到裁判台前，恰好赶过人家一个脖子那么点儿远，刚刚叫它能够算得清楚。

他还有一只小斗狗，你看它那样子，还会以为它一钱不值，只会坐在那儿闲着，显得古里古怪的神气，光等着找机会偷东西吃。可是只要给它押上了赌注，它马上就不同了：它那下半边嘴巴就伸出来，活像一只轮船前面的水手舱那样，它的牙齿也就露出来，像火炉那样发亮。别的狗尽管抓住它、欺负它、咬它，接二连三地把它甩过肩头。可是安得鲁·杰克逊——这是那小狗的名字——老是装出并没有什么不满意的样子，好像是情愿受欺负——那么大家一直在它的手那一边下赌注，一倍又一倍地往上加，一直把钱都押光了。这时候它才突然一下子咬住对方那只狗的后腿拐子，死咬住不放——并不嚼，你明

白吗，光只咬住不松嘴，直到人家认输的时候，哪怕拖一年它也不在乎。斯迈利拿这个小狗儿打赌，老是赢，直到后来有一次它干上了一只没有后腿的狗，因为它的腿让圆锯给锯掉了。等到斗了好一阵的时候，赌注通通押上了，杰克逊就去咬它最爱咬的地方，它马上就看出它上了当，知道另外那只狗叫它扑了个空。可以这么说吧，它好像吃了一惊，这下子它就有点儿泄气的样子，再也不打算斗赢了，所以它就吃了个大亏。它望了斯迈利一眼，好像是说它伤心透了，觉得这是他的错，不应该弄一只没有后腿的狗来叫它去斗，因为它斗起来就专靠咬人家的后腿，后来它就一瘸一瘸地走到一边，躺在地下死了。那是个很好的小狗儿，那安得鲁·杰克逊，它要是活着的话，一定是出了名，因为它有一套本事，还很聪明——这我知道，因为它根本说不上有什么占便宜的地方，要是它不聪明的话，碰到那些厉害的对手还能斗得过，那实在说不通。我一想起它最后斗的那一场，心里就难受。

嗯，这个斯迈利还养了捉耗子的小狗、小雄鸡和公猫，还有别的这类东西，简直叫你赌个没完，不管你拿什么和他打赌，他准和你做对手。有一天他捉到一只青蛙，就把它带回家来，他说他打算教一教它。所以他整整三个月，什么事也没干，专在后院里教那青蛙跳。果然不错，他真把它教会了。他在后面推一下，马上你就看见那青蛙在空中打转，好像一块炸面卷似的——看见它翻一个筋斗，要是劲头使对了，也许还能翻两下，再好好地落下来，稳稳当当地，就像一只猫那样。他又教它学会了捉苍蝇，常常叫它练习，后来它每回都能把苍蝇捉到，不管多远，只要它能看得见。斯迈利说青蛙只要教一教就行，它差不多什么事都会干——我相信他说的不错。嘿，我看见过他把丹尼尔·韦伯斯特放在这儿的地板上——那只青蛙的名字叫作丹尼尔·韦伯斯特——大声叫起来：“苍蝇，丹尼尔，苍蝇！”你简直还来不及眨一下眼睛，它就往上一跳，从那个柜台上捉住一只苍蝇，吧嗒一下掉在地下，就像一团泥似的，这下子它就拿后腿抓它的脑袋旁边，简直就跟没有那回事一样，好像它根本不觉得它比别的青蛙本事大。它虽然那么聪明，可是你再也找不到像它那么谦虚、那么爽快的青蛙。要是规规矩矩从平地跳起来的时候，它使一把劲往上一跳，就比你看到过的和它同类的动物随便哪一个都跳得高。从平地往上一跳是它的拿手戏，你明白吗？赛起这个来的时候，斯迈利就拼命在他这一边押赌注，连最后一个钱都押上。斯迈利对他这个青蛙简直是得意得要命，也难怪，因为那些到各处跑过码头、见过世面的人都说它比他们看见过的青蛙随便哪一只都强。

嗯，斯迈利把这小家伙放在一只小笼子里，有时候就把它带到城里去，跟人家打赌。有一天来了一个人——他还是头一次到这市镇上来的——他碰见斯迈利拿着那只小笼子，就说：

“你那小笼子里装着什么好东西呀？”

斯迈利爱理不理地说：“照说这也许是只鸚鵡，也许是只金丝雀，这很难说，可就偏不是——这倒偏偏是只青蛙。”

那位老兄把这小笼子接过来，仔细看了一阵，把它转来转去，他说：“哼，原来是这么回事，它有什么用处呀？”

“噢，”斯迈利满不在乎地说，“它有一个本事很了不起，据我看——它能比加利维拉县随便哪只青蛙都跳得高。”

这家伙又把小笼子拿过来，再仔仔细细地看了好一阵，又把它交还斯迈利，从从容容地说：“哼，”他说，“我可看不出这只青蛙有什么了不起，还不是和别的青蛙一样嘛。”

“也许你是看不出，”斯迈利说，“也许你对青蛙是内行，也许是外行；也许你有经验，也许你不过是个客串，不客气地说。可是不管怎样，我有我的看法，我敢跟你赌四十块钱，管保它比加利维拉县随便哪一只青蛙都跳得高。”

那个人盘算了一会儿，后来就显得有点儿为难的样子，他说：“嘿，我在这儿是个陌生人，没带着青蛙；我要是有青蛙的话，那我就愿意和你赌一下。”

于是斯迈利就说：“那不要紧——那不要紧——你要是能替我把这小笼子拿一会儿，我就去给你抓一只青蛙来。”所以那位老兄就拿着那只小笼子，取出四十块钱来和斯迈利的放在一起，坐下来等着。

他在那儿坐了很久，心里翻来覆去地想，后来他就把那青蛙拿出来，把它的嘴撬开，拿一只茶匙给它灌了一肚子打鹌鹑用的弹子——差不多给它灌得齐了下巴那儿——然后把它放在地上。斯迈利跑到了泥塘里去，在烂泥里稀里哗啦找了一阵，终归抓到了一只青蛙，就把它拿进来，交给那个人，他说：

“好吧，你要是预备好了的话，就把它跟丹尼尔并排放着，让它的前脚和丹尼尔的一般齐，我来发口令。”于是他就说：“一——二——三——跳！”他和那个人都从后面轻轻地推了推他们的青蛙，新抓来的那只青蛙就跳得很有劲头，可是丹尼尔鼓了一把劲，耸起肩膀——像这样——就和一个法国人似的，可是没有用——它连动也不能动。它稳稳地蹲在那儿，好像一座教堂，它再也不能动弹了，跟一只船抛了锚一样。斯迈利简直莫名其妙，他还觉得很伤脑筋，可是他当然一点儿也不明白究竟是怎么回事。

那个人拿起钱就走，当他走出门去的时候，他从肩膀上伸出大拇指——像这样——向着丹尼尔摆一摆，很从容地再说了一遍：“哼，我可看不出这只青蛙有什么了不起，还不是和别的青蛙一样嘛。”

斯迈利就站着直挠头，朝着地下的丹尼尔望了很久，后来他

说：“我实在不懂这个青蛙这回究竟为什么泄了气——说不定它出了什么毛病——它好像是肚子胀得很大哩。”于是他就揪住丹尼尔的脖子上面，把它拿起来掂了一下分量，说：“嗨，它要没有五磅重才怪哪！”他就把它倒起来提着，它呼噜呼噜吐出了两把弹子。这下他才明白是怎么回事，简直气疯了——他把青蛙放下，赶快跑出去追那个坏蛋，可是他始终没有追着。后来……

西蒙·惠勒说到这里，听见前院里有人叫他的名字，他就站起来去看外面有什么事情要找他。他一面往外走，一面转过脸来对我说：“你就在那儿坐着别动吧，先生，请你别着急——我马上就回来。”

可是对不起，我觉得他再把那个有赌癖的流氓吉姆·斯迈利的故事说下去，也不能给我多少关于留尼达·斯迈利牧师的消息，所以我就开步走了。

我在门口碰见那个好客的惠勒回来了，他把我留住，又往下说：

“噢，这位斯迈利有一头一只眼的黄牛，没有尾巴，矮墩墩的，像只香蕉似的，并且……”

可是我既没有工夫，也没有兴致，所以我没有在他那儿等着听他讲那头倒霉的牛的故事。就告辞了。

The Stolen White Elephant

The following curious history was related to me by a chance railway acquaintance. He was a gentleman more than seventy years of age, and his thoroughly good and gentle face and earnest and sincere manner imprinted the unmistakable stamp of truth upon every statement which fell from his lips. He said:

You know in what reverence the royal white elephant of Siam is held by the people of that country. You know it is sacred to kings, only kings may possess it, and that it is indeed in a measure even superior to kings, since it receives not merely honour but worship. Very well; five years ago, when the troubles concerning the frontier line arose between Great Britain and Siam, it was presently manifest that Siam had been in the wrong. Therefore every reparation was quickly made, and the British representative stated that he was satisfied and the past should be forgotten. This greatly relieved the King of Siam, and partly as a token of gratitude, but partly also, perhaps, to wipe out any little remaining vestige of unpleasantness which England might feel toward him, he wished to send the Queen a present – the sole sure way of propitiating an enemy, according to Oriental ideas. This present ought not only to be a royal one, but transcendently royal. Wherefore, what offering could be so meet as that of a white elephant? My position in the Indian civil service was such that I was deemed peculiarly worthy of the honour of conveying the present to her Majesty. A ship was fitted out for me and my servants and the officers and attendants of the elephant, and in due time I arrived in New York harbour and placed my royal charge in admirable quarters in Jersey City. It was necessary to remain awhile in order to recruit the animal's health before resuming the voyage.

All went well during a fortnight – then my calamities began. The white elephant was stolen! I was called up at dead of night and informed of this fearful misfortune. For some moments I was beside myself with terror and anxiety; I was helpless. Then I grew calmer and collected my faculties. I soon saw my course – for indeed there was but the one course for an intelligent man to pursue. Late as it was, I flew to New York and got a policeman to conduct me to the headquarters of the detective force. Fortunately I arrived in time, though the chief of the force, the celebrated Inspector Blunt, was just on the point of leaving for his home. He was a man of middle size and compact frame, and when he was thinking deeply he had a way of knitting his brows and tapping his forehead reflectively with his finger, which impressed you at once with the conviction that you stood in the presence of a person of no common order. The very sight of him gave me confidence and made me hopeful. I stated my errand. It did not flurry him in the least; it had no more visible effect upon his iron self-possession than if I had told him somebody had stolen my dog. He motioned me to a seat, and said calmly, ‘Allow me to think a moment, please.’

So saying, he sat down at his office table and leaned his head upon his hand. Several clerks were at work at the other end of the room; the scratching of their pens was all the sound I heard during the next six or seven minutes. Meantime the inspector sat there, buried in thought. Finally he raised his head, and there was that in the firm lines of his face which showed me that his brain had done its work and his plan was made. Said he – and his voice was low and impressive, ‘This is no ordinary case. Every step must be warily taken; each step must be made sure before the next is ventured. And secrecy must be observed – secrecy profound and absolute. Speak to no one about the matter, not even the reporters. I will take care of them ; I will see that they get only what it may suit my ends to let them know.’ He touched a bell; a youth appeared. ‘Alaric, tell the reporters to remain for the present.’ The boy retired.

‘Now let us proceed to business – and systematically. Nothing can be accomplished in this trade of mine without strict and minute method.’

He took a pen and some paper. ‘Now – name of the elephant?’

‘Hassan Ben Ali Ben Selim Abdallah Mohammed Moisé Alhammal Jamsetjeebhoy Dhuleep Sultan Ebu Bhudpoor.’

‘Very well. Given name?’

‘Jumbo.’

‘Very well. Place of birth?’

‘The capital city of Siam.’

‘Parents living?’

‘No – dead.’

‘Had they any other issue besides this one?’

‘None. He was an only child.’

‘Very well. These matters are sufficient under that head. Now please describe the elephant, and leave out no particular, however insignificant – that is, insignificant from your point of view. To men in my profession there are no insignificant particulars; they do not exist.’

I described – he wrote. When I was done, he said, ‘Now listen. If I have made any mistakes, correct me.’

He read as follows:

‘Height, 19 feet; length from apex of forehead to insertion of tail, 26 feet; length of trunk, 16 feet; length of tail, 6 feet; total length, including trunk and tail, 48 feet; length of tusks, 9 feet; ears in keeping with these dimensions; footprint resembles the mark left when one up-ends a barrel in the snow; colour of the elephant, a dull white; has a hole the size of a plate in each ear for the insertion of jewellery, and possesses the habit in a remarkable degree of squirting water upon spectators and of maltreating with his trunk not only such persons as he is acquainted with, but even entire strangers; limps slightly with his right hind leg, and has a small scar in his left armpit caused by a former boil; had on, when stolen, a castle containing seats for fifteen persons, and a gold- cloth saddle- blanket the size of an ordinary carpet.’

There were no mistakes. The inspector touched the bell, handed the description to Alaric, and said, ‘Have fifty thousand copies of this printed at once and mailed to every detective office and pawnbroker's shop on the continent.' Alaric retired. 'There – so far, so good. Next, I must have a photograph of the property.'

I gave him one. He examined it critically, and said, 'It must do, since we can do no better; but he has his trunk curled up and tucked into his mouth. That is unfortunate, and is calculated to mislead, for of course he does not usually have it in that position.' He touched his bell.

'Alaric, have fifty thousand copies of this photograph made, the first thing in the morning, and mail them with the descriptive circulars.'

Alaric retired to execute his orders. The inspector said, 'It will be necessary to offer a reward, of course. Now as to the amount?'

'What sum would you suggest?'

'To begin with, I should say – well, twenty- five thousand dollars. It is an intricate and difficult business; there are a thousand avenues of escape and opportunities of concealment. These thieves have friends and pals everywhere –'

'Bless me, do you know who they are?'

The wary face, practised in concealing the thoughts and feelings within, gave me no token, nor yet the replying words, so quietly uttered: 'Never mind about that. I may, and I may not. We generally gather a pretty shrewd inkling of who our man is by the manner of his work and the size of the game he goes after. We are not dealing with a pickpocket or a hall thief, now, make up your mind to that. This property was not "lifted" by a novice. But, as I was saying, considering the amount of travel which will have to be done, and the diligence with which the thieves will cover up their traces as they move along, twenty- five thousand may be too small a sum to offer, yet I think it worthwhile to start with that.'

So we determined upon that figure, as a beginning. Then this man, whom nothing escaped which could by any possibility be made to serve as a clue, said: 'There are cases in detective history to show that criminals have been detected through peculiarities in their appetites. Now, what does this elephant eat, and how much?'

'Well, as to what he eats – he will eat anything. He will eat a man, he will eat a Bible – he will eat anything between a man and a Bible.’

‘Good – very good indeed, but too general. Details are necessary, details are the only valuable things in our trade. Very well – as to men. At one meal – or, if you prefer, during one day – how many men will he eat, if fresh?’

‘He would not care whether they were fresh or not; at a single meal he would eat five ordinary men.’

‘Very good; five men; we will put that down. What nationalities would he prefer?’

‘He is indifferent about nationalities. He prefers acquaintances, but is not prejudiced against strangers.’

‘Very good. Now, as to Bibles. How many Bibles would he eat at a meal?’

‘He would eat an entire edition.’

‘It is hardly succinct enough. Do you mean the ordinary octavo, or the family illustrated?’

‘I think he would be indifferent to illustrations; that is, I think he would not value illustrations above simple letter-press.’

‘No, you do not get my idea. I refer to bulk. The ordinary octavo Bible weighs about two pounds and a half, while the great quarto with the illustrations weighs ten or twelve. How many Doré Bibles would he eat at a meal?’

‘If you knew this elephant, you could not ask. He would take what they had.’

‘Well, put it in dollars and cents, then. We must get at it somehow. The Doré costs a hundred dollars a copy, Russia leather, bevelled.’

‘He would require about fifty thousand dollars’ worth –say an edition of five hundred copies.’

‘Now that is more exact. I will put that down. Very well; he likes men and Bibles; so far, so good. What else will he eat? I want particulars.’

‘He will leave Bibles to eat bricks, he will leave bricks to eat bottles, he will leave bottles to eat clothing, he will leave clothing to eat cats, he will leave cats to eat oysters, he will leave oysters to eat ham, he will leave ham to eat sugar, he will leave sugar to eat pie, he will leave pie to eat potatoes, he will leave potatoes to eat bran, he will leave bran to eat hay, he will leave hay to eat oats, he will leave oats to eat rice, for he was mainly raised on it. There is nothing whatever that he will not eat but European butter, and he would eat that if he could taste it.'

'Very good. General quantity at a meal – say about –'

'Well, anywhere from a quarter to half a ton.'

'And he drinks –'

'Everything that is fluid. Milk, water, whiskey, molasses, castor oil, camphene, carbolic acid – it is no use to go into particulars; whatever fluid occurs to you set it down. He will drink anything that is fluid, except European coffee.'

'Very good. As to quantity?'

'Put it down five to fifteen barrels – his thirst varies; his other appetites do not.'

'These things are unusual. They ought to furnish quite good clues toward tracing him.'

He touched the bell. 'Alaric, summon Captain Burns.'

Burns appeared. Inspector Blunt unfolded the whole matter to him, detail by detail. Then he said in the clear, decisive tones of a man whose plans are clearly defined in his head, and who is accustomed to command, 'Captain Burns, detail Detectives Jones, Davis, Halsey, Bates, and Hackett to shadow the elephant.'

'Yes, sir.'

'Detail Detectives Moses, Dakin, Murphy, Rogers, Tupper, Higgins, and Bartholomew to shadow the thieves.'

'Yes, sir.'

'Place a strong guard – a guard of thirty picked men, with a relief of thirty – over the place from whence the elephant was stolen, to keep strict watch there night and day, and allow none to approach – except reporters –without written authority from me.'

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Place detectives in plain clothes in the railway, steamship, and ferry depots, and upon all roadways leading out of Jersey City, with orders to search all suspicious persons.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Furnish all these men with photograph and accompanying description of the elephant, and instruct them to search all trains and outgoing ferry- boats and other vessels.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘If the elephant should be found, let him be seized, and the information forwarded to me by telegraph.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Let me be informed at once if any clues should be found – footprints of the animal, or anything of that kind.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Get an order commanding the harbour police to patrol the frontages vigilantly.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Despatch detectives in plain clothes over all the railways, north as far as Canada, west as far as Ohio, south as far as Washington.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Place experts in all the telegraph offices to listen to all messages; and let them require that all cipher despatches be interpreted to them.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Let all these things be done with the utmost secrecy –mind, the most impenetrable secrecy.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Report to me promptly at the usual hour.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Go!’

‘Yes, sir.’

He was gone.

Inspector Blunt was silent and thoughtful a moment, while the fire in his eye cooled down and faded out. Then he turned to me and said in a placid voice, ‘I am not given to boasting, it is not my habit but – we shall find the elephant.’

I shook him warmly by the hand and thanked him; and I felt my thanks, too. The more I had seen of the man the more I liked him, and the more I admired him and marvelled over the mysterious wonders of his profession. Then we parted for the night, and I went home with a far happier heart than I had carried with me to his office.

Next morning it was all in the newspapers, in the minutest detail. It even had additions – consisting of Detective This, Detective That, and Detective The Other’s ‘Theory’as to how the robbery was done, who the robbers were, and whither they had flown with their booty. There were eleven of these theories, and they covered all the possibilities; and this single fact shows what independent thinkers detectives are. No two theories were alike, or even much resembled each other, save in one striking particular, and in that one all the eleven theories were absolutely agreed. That was, that although the rear of my building was torn out and the only door remained locked, the elephant had not been removed through the rent, but by some other(undiscovered) outlet. All agreed that the robbers had made that rent only to mislead the detectives. That never would have occurred to me or to any other layman, perhaps, but it had not deceived the detectives for a moment. Thus, what I had supposed was the only thing that had no mystery about it was in fact the very thing I had gone furthest astray in. The eleven theories all named the supposed robbers, but no two named the same robbers; the total number of suspected persons was thirty- seven. The various newspaper accounts all closed with the most important opinion of all – that of Chief Inspector Blunt. A portion of this statement read as follows:

The chief knows who the two principals are, namely, ‘Brick’ Duffy and ‘Red’ McFadden. Ten days before the robbery was achieved he was already aware that it was to be attempted, and had quietly proceeded to shadow these two noted villains; but unfortunately on the night in question their track was lost, and before it could be found again the bird was flown – that is, the elephant.

Duffy and McFadden are the boldest scoundrels in the profession; the chief has reasons for believing that they are the men who stole the stove out of the detective headquarters on a bitter night last winter – in consequence of which the chief and every detective present were in the hands of the physicians before morning, some with frozen feet, others with frozen fingers, ears, and other members.

When I read the first half of that I was more astonished than ever at the wonderful sagacity of this strange man. He not only saw everything in the present with a clear eye, but even the future could not be hidden from him. I was soon at his office, and said I could not help wishing he had had those men arrested, and so prevented the trouble and loss; but his reply was simple and unanswerable: ‘It is not our province to prevent crime, but to punish it. We cannot punish it until it is committed.’

I remarked that the secrecy with which we had begun had been marred by the newspapers; not only all our facts but all our plans and purposes had been revealed; even all the suspected persons had been named; these would doubtless disguise themselves now, or go into hiding.

‘Let them. They will find that when I am ready for them my hand will descend upon them, in their secret places, as unerringly as the hand of fate. As to the newspapers, we must keep in with them. Fame, reputation, constant public mention – these are the detective’s bread and butter. He must publish his facts, else he will be supposed to have none; he must publish his theory, for nothing is so strange or striking as a detective’s theory, or brings him so much wondering respect; we must publish our plans, for these the journals insist upon having, and we could not deny them without offending. We must constantly show the public what we are doing, or they will believe we are doing nothing. It is much pleasanter to have a newspaper say, "Inspector Blunt's ingenious and extraordinary theory is as follows," than to have it say some harsh thing, or, worse still, some sarcastic one.'

'I see the force of what you say. But I noticed that in one part of your remarks in the papers this morning you refused to reveal your opinion upon a certain minor point.'

'Yes, we always do that; it has a good effect. Besides, I had not formed any opinion on that point, anyway.'

I deposited a considerable sum of money with the inspector, to meet current expenses, and sat down to wait for news. We were expecting the telegrams to begin to arrive at any moment now. Meantime I reread the newspapers and also our descriptive circular, and observed that our $25,000 reward seemed to be offered only to detectives. I said I thought it ought to be offered to anybody who would catch the elephant. The inspector said: 'It is the detectives who will find the elephant, hence the reward will go to the right place. If other people found the animal, it would only be by watching the detectives and taking advantage of clues and indications stolen from them, and that would entitle the detectives to the reward, after all. The proper office of a reward is to stimulate the men who deliver up their time and their trained sagacities to this sort of work, and not to confer benefits upon chance citizens who stumble upon a capture without having earned the benefits by their own merits and labours.'

This was reasonable enough, certainly. Now the telegraphic machine in the corner began to click, and the following despatch was the result:

Flower Station, N.Y., 7.30 a.M.

Have got a clue. Found a succession of deep tracks across a farm near here. Followed them two miles east without result; think elephant went west. Shall now shadow him in that direction.

Darley, Detective

‘Darley’s one of the best men on the force,’ said the inspector. ‘We shall hear from him again before long.’ Telegram No. 2 came:

Barker’s, N.J., 7.40 a.M.

Just arrived. Glass factory broken open here during night, and eight hundred bottles taken. Only water in large quantity near here is five miles distant. Shall strike for there. Elephant will be thirsty. Bottles were empty.

Baker, Detective

‘That promises well, too,’ said the inspector. ‘I told you the creature’s appetites would not be bad clues.’

Telegram No. 3:

Taylorville, L.I., 8.15 a.M.

A haystack near here disappeared during night. Probably eaten. Have got a clue, and am off.

Hubbard, Detective

‘How he does move around!’ said the inspector. ‘I knew we had a difficult job on hand, but we shall catch him yet.’

Flower Station, N.Y., 9 a.M.

Shadowed the tracks three miles westward. Large, deep, and ragged. Have just met a farmer who says they are not elephant tracks. Says they are holes where he dug up saplings for shade- trees when ground was frozen last winter. Give me orders how to proceed.

Darley, Detective

‘Aha! a confederate of the thieves! The thing grows warm,’ said the inspector.

He dictated the following telegram to Darley:

Arrest the man and force him to name his pals.

Continue to follow the tracks – to the Pacific, if necessary.

Chief Blunt

Next telegram:

Coney Point, PA., 8.45 a.M.

Gas office broken open here during night and three months' unpaid gas bills taken. Have got a clue and am away.

Murphy, Detective

'Heavens!' said the inspector; 'would he eat gas bills?'

'Through ignorance – yes; but they cannot support life. At least, unassisted.'

Now came this exciting telegram:

Ironville, N.Y., 9.30 a.M.

Just arrived. This village in consternation. Elephant passed through here at five this morning. Some say he went east, some say west, some north, some south – but all say they did not wait to notice particularly. He killed a horse; have secured a piece of it for a clue. Killed it with his trunk; from style of blow, think he struck it left-handed. From position in which horse lies, think elephant travelled northward along line of Berkley railway. Has four and a half hours' start, but I move on his track at once.

Hawes, Detective

I uttered exclamations of joy. The inspector was as self-contained as a graven image. He calmly touched his bell.

'Alaric, send Captain Burns here.'

Burns appeared.

'How many men are ready for instant orders?'

‘Ninety- six, sir.’

‘Send them north at once. Let them concentrate along the line of the Berkley road north of Ironville.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Let them conduct their movements with the utmost secrecy. As fast as others are at liberty, hold them for orders.’

‘Yes, sir.’

‘Go!’

‘Yes, sir.’

Presently came another telegram:

Sage Corners, N.Y., 10.30 a.M.

Just arrived. Elephant passed through here at 8.15. All escaped from the town but a policeman. Apparently elephant did not strike at policeman, but at the lamp-post. Got both. I have secured a portion of the policeman as clue.

StuMM, Detective

‘So the elephant has turned westward,’ said the inspector. ‘However, he will not escape, for my men are scattered all over that region.’

The next telegram said:

Glover’s, 11.15 a.M.

Just arrived. Village deserted, except sick and aged. Elephant passed through three quarters of an hour ago. The anti- temperance mass meeting was in session; he put his trunk in at a window and washed it out with water from cistern. Some swallowed it – since dead; several drowned. Detectives Cross and O’Shaughnessy were passing through town, but going south – so missed elephant. Whole region for many miles around in terror – people flying from their homes. Wherever they turn they meet elephant, and many are killed.

Brant, Detective

I could have shed tears, this havoc so distressed me. But the inspector only said, 'You see – we are closing in on him. He feels our presence; he has turned eastward again.'

Yet further troublous news was in store for us. The telegraph brought this:

Hoganport, 12.19 p.M.

Just arrived. Elephant passed through half an hour ago, creating wildest fright and excitement. Elephant raged around streets; two plumbers going by, killed one – other escaped. Regret general.

O'Flaherty, Detective

'Now he is right in the midst of my men,' said the inspector. 'Nothing can save him.'

A succession of telegrams came from detectives who were scattered through New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and who were following clues consisting of ravaged barns, factories, and Sunday-school libraries, with high hopes – hopes amounting to certainties, indeed. The inspector said, 'I wish I could communicate with them and order them north, but that is impossible. A detective only visits a telegraph office to send his report; then he is off again, and you don't know where to put your hand on him.'

Now came this despatch:

Bridgeport, CT., 12.15 p.M.

Barnum offers rate of $4,000 a year for exclusive privilege of using elephant as travelling advertising medium from now till detectives find him. Wants to paste circus-posters on him. Desires immediate answer.

Boggs, Detective

‘That is perfectly absurd!’ I exclaimed. ‘Of course it is,’ said the inspector. ‘Evidently Mr Barnum, who thinks he is so sharp, does not know me – but I know him.’

Then he dictated this answer to the despatch:

Mr Barnum’s offer declined. Make it $7,000 or nothing.

Chief Blunt

‘There. We shall not have to wait long for an answer. Mr Barnum is not at home; he is in the telegraph office – it is his way when he has business on hand. Inside of three –’

Done. – P. T. Barnum.

So interrupted the clicking telegraphic instrument. Before I could make a comment upon this extra ordinary episode, the following despatch carried my thoughts into another and very distressing channel:

Bolivia, N.Y., 12.50 p.M.

Elephant arrived here from the south and passed through toward the forest at 11.50, dispersing a funeral on the way, and diminishing the mourners by two. Citizens fired some small cannonballs into him, and then fled. Detective Burke and I arrived ten minutes later, from the north, but mistook some excavations for footprints, and so lost a good deal of time; but at last we struck the right trail and followed it to the woods. We then got down on our hands and knees and continued to keep a sharp eye on the track, and so shadowed it into the brush. Burke was in advance. Unfortunately the animal had stopped to rest; therefore, Burke having his head down, intent upon the track, burred up against the elephant’s hind legs before he was aware of his vicinity. Burke instantly rose to his feet, seized the tail, and exclaimed joyfully, 'I claim the re -' but got no further, for a single blow of the huge trunk laid the brave fellow's fragments low in death. I fled rearward, and the elephant turned and shadowed me to the edge of the wood, making tremendous speed, and I should inevitably have been lost, but that the remains of the funeral providentially intervened again and diverted his attention. I have just learned that nothing of that funeral is now left; but this is no loss, for there is an abundance of material for another. Meantime, the elephant has disappeared again.

Mulrooney, Detective

We heard no news except from the diligent and confident detectives scattered about New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Virginia – who were all following fresh and encouraging clues – until shortly after 2 p.m., when this telegram came:

Baxter Center, 2.15 p.M.

Elephant been here, plastered over with circus-bills, and broke up a revival, striking down and damaging many who were on the point of entering upon a better life. Citizens penned him up, and established a guard. When Detective Brown and I arrived, sometime after, we entered enclosure and proceeded to identify elephant by photograph and description. All marks tallied exactly except one, which we could not see – the boil- scar under armpit. To make sure, Brown crept under to look, and was immediately brained – that is, head crushed and destroyed, though nothing issued from debris. All fled; so did elephant, striking right and left with much effect. Has escaped, but left bold blood- track from cannon- wounds.

Rediscovery certain. He broke southward, through a dense forest.

Brent, Detective

That was the last telegram. At nightfall a fog shut down which was so dense that objects but three feet away could not be discerned. This lasted all night. The ferry- boats and even the omnibuses had to stop running.

Next morning the papers were as full of detective theories as before; they had all our tragic facts in detail also, and a great many more which they had received from their telegraphic correspondents. Column after column was occupied, a third of its way down, with glaring headlines, which it made my heart sick to read. Their general tone was like this:

‘THE WHITE ELEPHANT AT LARGE!

HE MOVES UPON HIS FATAL MARCH!

WHOLE VILLAGES DESERTED BY THEIR FRIGHT-

STRICKEN OCCUPANTS!

PALE TERROR GOES BEFORE HIM, DEATH AND DEVASTATION FOLLOW AFTER!

AFTER THESE, THE DETECTIVES.

BARNS DESTROYED, FACTORIES GUTTED, HARVESTS

DEVOURED, PUBLIC ASSEMBLAGES DISPERSED,

ACCOMPANIED BY SCENES OF CARNAGE IMPOSSIBLE

TO DESCRIBE!

THEORIES OF THIRTY- FOUR OF THE MOST DISTINGUISHED DETECTIVES ON THE FORCE!

THEORY OF CHIEF BLUNT!’

‘There!’ said Inspector Blunt, almost betrayed into excitement, ‘this is magnificent! This is the greatest windfall that any detective organisation ever had. The fame of it will travel to the ends of the earth, and endure to the end of time, and my name with it.’

But there was no joy for me. I felt as if I had committed all those red crimes, and that the elephant was only my irresponsible agent. And how the list had grown! In one place he had ‘interfered with an election and killed five repeaters.’ He had followed this act with the destruction of two poor fellows, named O’Donohue and McFlannigan, who had ‘found a refuge in the home of the oppressed of all lands only the day before, and were in the act of exercising for the first time the noble right of American citizens at the polls, when stricken down by the relentless hand of the Scourge of Siam.’ In another, he had ‘found a crazy sensation- preacher preparing his next season’s heroic attacks on the dance, the theatre, and other things which can’t strike back, and had stepped on him.’ And in still another place he had ‘killed a lightning- rod agent.’ And so the list went on, growing redder and redder, and more and more heartbreaking. Sixty persons had been killed, and two hundred and forty wounded. All the accounts bore just testimony to the activity and devotion of the detectives, and all closed with the remark that ‘three hundred thousand citizens and four detectives saw the dread creature, and two of the latter he destroyed.’

I dreaded to hear the telegraphic instrument begin to click again. By and by the messages began to pour in, but I was happily disappointed in their nature. It was soon apparent that all trace of the elephant was lost. The fog had enabled him to search out a good hiding place unobserved. Telegrams from the most absurdly distant points reported that a dim vast mass had been glimpsed there through the fog at such and such an hour, and was ‘undoubtedly the elephant.’ This dim vast mass had been glimpsed in New Haven, in New Jersey, in Pennsylvania, in interior New York, in Brooklyn, and even in the city of New York itself! But in all cases the dim vast mass had vanished quickly and left no trace. Every detective of the large force scattered over this huge extent of country sent his hourly report, and each and every one of them had a clue, and was shadowing something, and was hot upon the heels of it.

But the day passed without other result.

The next day the same.

The next just the same.

The newspaper reports began to grow monotonous with facts that amounted to nothing, clues which led to nothing, and theories which had nearly exhausted the elements which surprise and delight and dazzle.

By advice of the inspector I doubled the reward.

Four more dull days followed. Then came a bitter blow to the poor, hard- working detectives – the journalists declined to print their theories, and coldly said, ‘Give us a rest.’

Two weeks after the elephant’s disappearance I raised the reward to $75,000 by the inspector’s advice. It was a great sum, but I felt that I would rather sacrifice my whole private fortune than lose my credit with my government. Now that the detectives were in adversity, the newspapers turned upon them, and began to fling the most stinging sarcasms at them. This gave the minstrels an idea, and they dressed themselves as detectives and hunted the elephant on the stage in the most extravagant way. The caricaturists made pictures of detectives scanning the country with spyglasses, while the elephant, at their backs, stole apples out of their pockets. And they made all sorts of ridiculous pictures of the detective badge – you have seen that badge printed in gold on the back of detective novels, no doubt – it is a wide- staring eye, with the legend, ‘We Never Sleep .’ When detectives called for a drink, the would- be facetious bar- keeper resurrected an obsolete form of expression and said, ‘Will you have an eye- opener?’ All the air was thick with sarcasms. But there was one man who moved calm, untouched, unaffected, through it all. It was that heart of oak, the Chief Inspector. His brave eye never drooped, his serene confidence never wavered. He always said, ‘Let them rail on; he laughs best who laughs last.’

My admiration for the man grew into a species of worship. I was at his side always. His office had become an unpleasant place to me, and now became daily more and more so. Yet if he could endure it I meant to do so also; at least, as long as I could. So I came regularly, and stayed –the only outsider who seemed to be capable of it. Everybody wondered how I could; and often it seemed to me that I must desert, but at such times I looked into that calm and apparently unconscious face, and held my ground.

About three weeks after the elephant's disappearance, I was about to say one morning that I should have to strike my colours and retire, when the great detective arrested the thought by proposing one more superb and masterly move.

This was to compromise with the robbers. The fertility of this man's invention exceeded anything I have ever seen, and I have had a wide intercourse with the world's finest minds. He said he was confident he could compromise for $100,000 and recover the elephant. I said I believed I could scrape the amount together, but what would become of the poor detectives who had worked so faithfully? He said, 'In compromises they always get half.'

This removed my only objection. So the inspector wrote two notes, in this form:

Dear MadaM – Your husband can make a large sum of money (and be entirely protected from the law) by making an immediate appointment with me. Chief Blunt

He sent one of these by his confidential messenger to the 'reputed wife' of Brick Duffy, and the other to the reputed wife of Red McFadden.

Within the hour these offensive answers came:

YE OWLD FOOL: brick McDuffys bin ded 2 yere.

Bridget Mahoney

CHIEF Bat – Red McFadden is hung and in heving 18 month. Any Ass but a detective knose that.

Mary O'Hooligan

'I had long suspected these facts,' said the inspector; 'this testimony proves the unerring accuracy of my instinct.'

The moment one resource failed him he was ready with another. He immediately wrote an advertisement for the morning papers, and I kept a copy of it:

A. – xwblv. 242 N. Tjnd – fz328wmlg. Ozpo – ; 2

He said that if the thief was alive this would bring him to the usual rendezvous. He further explained that the usual rendezvous was a place where all business affairs between detectives and criminals were conducted. This meeting would take place at twelve the next night.

We could do nothing till then, and I lost no time in getting out of the office, and was grateful indeed for the privilege.

At 11 the next night I brought $100,000 in banknotes and put them into the chief's hands, and shortly afterward he took his leave, with the brave old undimmed confidence in his eye. An almost intolerable hour dragged to a close; then I heard his welcome tread, and rose gasping and tottered to meet him. How his fine eyes flamed with triumph! He said, 'We've compromised! The jokers will sing a different tune tomorrow! Follow me!'

He took a lighted candle and strode down into the vast vaulted basement where sixty detectives always slept, and where a score were now playing cards to while the time. I followed close after him. He walked swiftly down to the dim remote end of the place, and just as I succumbed to the pangs of suffocation and was swooning away he stumbled and fell over the outlying members of a mighty object, and I heard him exclaim as he went down, 'Our noble profession is vindicated. Here is your elephant!'

I was carried to the office above and restored with carbolic acid. The whole detective force swarmed in, and such another season of triumphant rejoicing ensued as I had never witnessed before. The reporters were called, baskets of champagne were opened, toasts were drunk, the hand-shakings and congratulations were continuous and enthusiastic. Naturally the chief was the hero of the hour, and his happiness was so complete and had been so patiently and worthily and bravely won that it made me happy to see it, though I stood there a homeless beggar, my priceless charge dead, and my position in my country's service lost to me through what would always seem my fatally careless execution of a great trust. Many an eloquent eye testified its deep admiration for the chief, and many a detective's voice murmured, 'Look at him – just the king of the profession – only give him a clue, it's all he wants, and there ain't anything hid that he can't find.' The dividing of the $50,000 made great pleasure; when it was finished the chief made a little speech while he put his share in his pocket, in which he said, 'Enjoy it, boys, for you've earned it; and more than that you've earned for the detective profession undying fame.'

A telegram arrived, which read:

Monroe, MiCh., 10 p.M.

First time I've struck a telegraph office in over three weeks. Have followed those footprints, horseback, through the woods, a thousand miles to here, and they get stronger and bigger and fresher every day. Don't worry – inside of another week I'll have the elephant. This is dead sure.

Darley, Detective

The chief ordered three cheers for 'Darley, one of the finest minds on the force', and then commanded that he be telegraphed to come home and receive his share of the reward.

So ended that marvellous episode of the stolen elephant. The newspapers were pleasant with praises once more, the next day, with one contemptible exception. This sheet said, 'Great is the detective! He may be a little slow in finding a little thing like a mislaid elephant – he may hunt him all day and sleep with his rotting carcass all night for three weeks, but he will find him at last – if he can get the man who mislaid him to show him the place!'

Poor Hassan was lost to me forever. The cannon- shots had wounded him fatally, he had crept to that unfriendly place in the fog, and there, surrounded by his enemies and in constant danger of detection, he had wasted away with hunger and suffering till death gave him peace.

The compromise cost me $100,000; my detective expenses were $42,000 more; I never applied for a place again under my government; I am a ruined man and a wanderer in the earth – but my admiration for that man, whom I believe to be the greatest detective the world has ever produced, remains undimmed to this day, and will so remain unto the end.

The Story of the Bad Little Boy Who Didn't Come to Grief

Once there was a bad little boy, whose name was Jim –though, if you will notice, you will find that bad little boys are nearly always called James in your Sunday- school books. It was very strange, but still it was true, that this one was called Jim.

He didn't have any sick mother, either – a sick mother who was pious and had the consumption, and would be glad to lie down in the grave and be at rest, but for the strong love she bore her boy, and the anxiety she felt that the world would be harsh and cold toward him when she was gone. Most bad boys in the Sunday books are named James, and have sick mothers, who teach them to say, 'Now I lay me down,' etc., and sing them to sleep with sweet plaintive voices, and then kiss them goodnight, and kneel down by the bedside and weep. But it was different with this fellow. He was named Jim, and there wasn't anything the matter with his mother – no consumption, nor anything of that kind. She was rather stout than otherwise, and she was not pious; moreover, she was not anxious on Jim's account. She said if he were to break his neck, it wouldn't be much loss. She always spanked Jim to sleep, and she never kissed him goodnight; on the contrary, she boxed his ears when she was ready to leave him.

Once this little bad boy stole the key of the pantry and slipped in there and helped himself to some jam, and filled up the vessel with tar, so that his mother would never know the difference; but all at once a terrible feeling didn't come over him, and something didn't seem to whisper to him, 'Is it right to disobey my mother? Isn't it sinful to do this? Where do bad little boys go who gobble up their good kind mother's jam?' and then he didn't kneel down all alone and promise never to be wicked anymore, and rise up with a light, happy heart, and go and tell his mother all about it, and beg her forgiveness, and be blessed by her with tears of pride and thankfulness in her eyes. No; that is the way with all other bad boys in the books; but it happened otherwise with this Jim, strangely enough. He ate that jam, and said it was bully, in his sinful, vulgar way; and he put in the tar, and said that was bully also, and laughed, and observed that 'the old woman would get up and snort' when she found it out; and when she did find it out, he denied knowing anything about it, and she whipped him severely, and he did the crying himself. Everything about this boy was curious – everything turned out differently with him from the way it does to the bad Jameses in the books.

Once he climbed up in Farmer Acorn's apple- tree to steal apples, and the limb didn't break, and he didn't fall and break his arm, and get torn by the farmer's great dog, and then languish on a sickbed for weeks, and repent and become good. Oh! no; he stole as many apples as he wanted, and came down all right; and he was all ready for the dog, too, and knocked him endways with a brick when he came to tear him. It was very strange – nothing like it ever happened in those mild little books with marbled backs, and with pictures in them of men with swallow- tailed coats, and bell-crowned hats, and pantaloons that are short in the legs, and women with the waists of their dresses under their arms and no hoops on. Nothing like it in any of the Sunday- school books.

Once he stole the teacher's penknife, and when he was afraid it would be found out, and he would get whipped, he slipped it into George Wilson's cap – poor Widow Wilson's son, the moral boy, the good little boy of the village, who always obeyed his mother, and never told an untruth, and was fond of his lessons and infatuated with Sunday- school. And when the knife dropped from the cap, and poor George hung his head and blushed, as if in conscious guilt, and the grieved teacher charged the theft upon him, and was just in the very act of bringing the switch down upon his trembling shoulders, a white- haired improbable justice of the peace did not suddenly appear in their midst and strike an attitude and say, 'spare this noble boy – there stands the cowering culprit! I was passing the school- door at recess, and, unseen myself, I saw the theft committed!' And then Jim didn't get whaled, and the venerable justice didn't read the tearful school a homily, and take George by the hand and say such a boy deserved to be exalted, and then tell him to come and make his home with him, and sweep out the office, and make fires, and run errands, and chop wood, and study law, and help his wife do household labours, and have all the balance of the time to play, and get forty cents a month, and be happy. No; it would have happened that way in the books, but it didn't happen that way to Jim. No meddling old clam of a justice dropped in to make trouble, and so the model boy George got thrashed, and Jim was glad of it; because, you know, Jim hated moral boys. Jim said he was 'down on them milksops.' Such was the coarse language of this bad, neglected boy.

But the strangest thing that ever happened to Jim was the time he went boating on Sunday and didn't get drowned, and that other time that he got caught out in the storm when he was fishing on Sunday, and didn't get struck by lightning. Why, you might look, and look, all through the Sunday-school books, from now till next Christmas and you would never come across anything like this. Oh! no; you would find that all the bad boys who go boating on Sunday invariably get drowned; and all the bad boys who get caught out in storms, when they are fishing on Sunday, infallibly get struck by lightning. Boats with bad boys in them always upset on Sunday, and it always storms when bad boys go fishing on the Sabbath. How this Jim ever escaped is a mystery to me.

This Jim bore a charmed life – that must have been the way of it. Nothing could hurt him. He even gave the elephant in the menagerie a plug of tobacco, and the elephant didn't knock the top of his head off with his trunk. He browsed around the cupboard after essence of peppermint, and didn't make a mistake and drink aqua fortis. He stole his father's gun and went hunting on the Sabbath, and didn't shoot three or four of his fingers off. He struck his little sister on the temple with his fist when he was angry, and she didn't linger in pain through long summer days, and die with sweet words of forgiveness upon her lips that redoubled the anguish of his breaking heart. No; she got over it. He ran off and went to sea at last, and didn't come back and find himself sad and alone in the world, his loved ones sleeping in the quiet churchyard, and the vine-embowered home of his boyhood rumbled down and gone to decay. Ah! no; he came home drunk as a piper, and got into the station house the first thing.

And he grew up, and married, and raised a large family, and brained them all with an axe one night, and got wealthy by all manner of cheating and rascality, and now he is the infernalesst wickedest scoundrel in his native village, and is universally respected, and belongs to the Legislature.

So you see there never was a bad James in the Sunday- school books that had such a streak of luck as this sinful Jim with the charmed life.

The Story of the Good Little Boy Who Did Not Prosper

[The following has been written at the insistence of several literary friends, who thought that if the history of 'The Bad Little Boy Who Didn't Come to Grief' (a moral sketch which I published five or six years ago) was worthy of preservation several weeks in print, a fair and unprejudiced companion piece to it would deserve a similar immortality.

editorial MeMorandum]

Once there was a good little boy by the name of Jacob Blivens. He always obeyed his parents, no matter how absurd and unreasonable their demands were; and he always learned his book, and never was late at Sabbath school. He would not play hookey, even when his sober judgment told him it was the most profitable thing he could do. None of the other boys could ever make that boy out, he acted so strangely. He wouldn't lie, no matter how convenient it was. He just said it was wrong to lie, and that was sufficient for him. And he was so honest that he was simply ridiculous. The curious ways that that Jacob had surpassed everything. He wouldn't play marbles on Sunday, he wouldn't rob birds' nests, he wouldn't give hot pennies to organ-grinders' monkeys; he didn't seem to take any interest in any kind of rational amusement. So the other boys used to try to reason it out and come to an understanding of him, but they couldn't arrive at any satisfactory conclusion; as I said before, they could only figure out a sort of vague idea that he was 'afflicted,' and so they took him under their protection, and never allowed any harm to come to him.

This good little boy read all the Sunday-school books; they were his greatest delight. This was the whole secret of it. He believed in the good little boys they put in the Sunday-school books; he had every confidence in them. He longed to come across one of them alive, once; but he never did. They all died before his time, maybe. Whenever he read about a particularly good one, he turned over quickly to the end to see what became of him, because he wanted to travel thousands of miles and gaze on him; but it wasn't any use; that good little boy always died in the last chapter, and there was a picture of the funeral, with all his relations and the Sunday- school children standing around the grave in pantaloons that were too short, and bonnets that were too large, and everybody crying into handkerchiefs that had as much as a yard and a half of stuff in them. He was always headed off in this way. He never could see one of those good little boys, on account of his always dying in the last chapter.

Jacob had a noble ambition to be put in a Sunday- school book. He wanted to be put in, with pictures representing him gloriously declining to lie to his mother, and she weeping for joy about it; and pictures representing him standing on the doorstep giving a penny to a poor beggar- woman with six children, and telling her to spend it freely, but not to be extravagant, because extravagance is a sin; and pictures of him magnanimously refusing to tell on the bad boy who always lay in wait for him around the corner, as he came from school, and welted him over the head with a lath, and then chased him home, saying 'Hi! hi!' as he proceeded. That was the ambition of young Jacob Blivens. He wished to be put in a Sunday- school book. It made him feel a little uncomfortable sometimes when he reflected that the good little boys always died. He loved to live, you know, and this was the most unpleasant feature about being a Sunday- school- book boy. He knew it was not healthy to be good. He knew it was more fatal than consumption to be so supernaturally good as the boys in the books were; he knew that none of them had ever been able to stand it long, and it pained him to think that if they put him in a book he wouldn't ever see it, or even if they did get the book out before he died, it wouldn't be popular without any picture of his funeral in the back part of it. It couldn't be much of a Sunday- school book that couldn't tell about the advice he gave to the community when he was dying. So, at last, of course he had to make up his mind to do the best he could under the circumstances – to live right, and hang on as long as he could, and have his dying speech all ready when his time came.

But somehow, nothing ever went right with this good little boy; nothing ever turned out with him the way it turned out with the good little boys in the books. They always had a good time, and the bad boys had the broken legs; but in his case there was a screw loose somewhere, and it all happened just the other way. When he found Jim Blake stealing apples, and went under the tree to read to him about the bad little boy who fell out of a neighbour's apple tree, and broke his arm, Jim fell out of the tree too, but he fell on him , and broke his arm, and Jim wasn't hurt at all. Jacob couldn't understand that. There wasn't anything in the books like it.

And once, when some bad boys pushed a blind man over in the mud, and Jacob ran to help him up and receive his blessing, the blind man did not give him any blessing at all, but whacked him over the head with his stick and said he would like to catch him shoving him again and then pretending to help him up. This was not in accordance with any of the books. Jacob looked them all over to see.

One thing that Jacob wanted to do was to find a lame dog that hadn't any place to stay, and was hungry and persecuted, and bring him home and pet him and have that dog's imperishable gratitude. And at last he found one, and was happy; and he brought him home and fed him, but when he was going to pet him the dog flew at him and tore all the clothes off him except those that were in front, and made a spectacle of him that was astonishing. He examined authorities, but he could not understand the matter. It was of the same breed of dogs that was in the books, but it acted very differently. Whatever this boy did, he got into trouble. The very things the boys in the books got rewarded for turned out to be about the most unprofitable things he could invest in.

Once when he was on his way to Sunday- school he saw some bad boys starting off pleasuring in a sailboat. He was filled with consternation, because he knew from his teaching that boys who went sailing on Sunday invariably got drowned. So he ran out on a raft to warn them, but a log turned with him and slid him into the river. A man got him out pretty soon, and the doctor pumped the water out of him and gave him a fresh start with his bellows, but he caught cold and lay sick abed nine weeks. But the most unaccountable thing about it was that the bad boys in the boat had a good time all day, and then reached home alive and well, in the most surprising manner. Jacob Blivens said there was nothing like these things in the books. He was perfectly dumbfounded.

When he got well he was a little discouraged, but he resolved to keep on trying, anyhow. He knew that so far his experiences wouldn't do to go in a book, but he hadn't yet reached the allotted term of life for good little boys, and he hoped to be able to make a record yet, if he could hold on till his time was fully up. If everything else failed, he had his dying speech to fall back on.

He examined his authorities, and found that it was now time for him to go to sea as a cabin boy. He called on a ship captain and made his application, and when the captain asked for his recommendations he proudly drew out a tract and pointed to the words: 'To Jacob Blivens, from his affectionate teacher.' But the captain was a coarse, vulgar man, and he said, 'Oh, that be blowed!' That wasn't any proof that he knew how to wash dishes or handle a slush- bucket, and he guessed he didn't want him. This was altogether the most extraordinary thing that ever had happened to Jacob in all his life. A compliment from a teacher, on a tract, had never failed to move the tenderest of emotions of ship captains and open the way to all offices of honour and profit in their gift – it never had in any book that ever he had read. He could hardly believe his senses.

This boy always had a hard time of it. Nothing ever came out according to the authorities with him. At last, one day, when he was around hunting up bad little boys to admonish, he found a lot of them in the old iron foundry fixing up a little joke on fourteen or fifteen dogs, which they had tied together in long procession and were going to ornament with empty nitroglycerine cans made fast to their tails. Jacob's heart was touched. He sat down on one of those cans – for he never minded grease when duty was before him – and he took hold of the foremost dog by the collar, and turned his reproving eye upon wicked Tom Jones. But just at that moment Alderman McWelter, full of wrath, stepped in. All the bad boys ran away; but Jacob Blivens rose in conscious innocence and began one of those stately little Sunday- school- book speeches which always commence with 'Oh, Sir!' in dead opposition to the fact that no boy, good or bad, ever starts a remark with 'Oh, Sir!' But the Alderman never waited to hear the rest. He took Jacob Blivens by the ear and turned him around, and hit him a whack in the rear with the flat of his hand; and in an instant that good little boy shot out through the roof and soared away toward the sun, with the fragments of those fifteen dogs stringing after him like the tail of a kite. And there wasn't a sign of that Alderman or that old iron foundry left on the face of the earth; and as for young Jacob Blivens, he never got a chance to make his last dying speech after all his trouble fixing it up, unless he made it to the birds; because, although the bulk of him came down all right in a treetop in an adjoining county, the rest of him was apportioned around among four townships, and so they had to hold five inquests on him to find out whether he was dead or not, and how it occurred. You never saw a boy scattered so.

Thus perished the good little boy who did the best he could, but didn't come out according to the books. Every boy who ever did as he did prospered, except him. His case is truly remarkable. It will probably never be accounted for.

The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County

Mr A. Ward,

Dear Sir: – Well, I called on good- natured, garrulous old Simon Wheeler, and I inquired after your friend Leonidas W. Smiley, as you requested me to do, and I hereunto append the result. If you can get any information out of it you are cordially welcome to it. I have a lurking suspicion that your Leonidas W. Smiley is a myth – that you never knew such a personage, and that you only conjectured that if I asked old Wheeler about him it would remind him of his infamous Jim Smiley, and he would go to work and bore me nearly to death with some infernal reminiscence of him as long and tedious as it should be useless to me. If that was your design, Mr Ward, it will gratify you to know that it succeeded.

I found Simon Wheeler dozing comfortably by the barroom stove of the little old dilapidated tavern in the ancient mining camp of Boomerang, and I noticed that he was fat and bald- headed, and had an expression of winning gentleness and simplicity upon his tranquil countenance. He roused up and gave me good- day. I told him a friend of mine had commissioned me to make some inquiries about a cherished companion of his boyhood named Leonidas W. Smiley – Rev Leonidas W. Smiley – a young minister of the gospel, who he had heard was at one time a resident of this village of Boomerang. I added that if Mr Wheeler could tell me anything about this Rev Leonidas W. Smiley, I would feel under many obligations to him.

Simon Wheeler backed me into a corner and blockaded me there with his chair – and then sat down and reeled off the monotonous narrative which follows this paragraph. He never smiled, he never frowned, he never changed his voice from the quiet, gently- flowing key to which he tuned the initial sentence, he never betrayed the slightest suspicion of enthusiasm – but all through the interminable narrative there ran a vein of impressive earnestness and sincerity, which showed me plainly that so far from his imagining that there was anything ridiculous or funny about his story, he regarded it as a really important matter, and admired its two heroes as men of transcendent genius in finesse. To me, the spectacle of a man drifting serenely along through such a queer yarn without ever smiling was exquisitely absurd. As I said before, I asked him to tell me what he knew of Rev Leonidas W. Smiley, and he replied as follows. I let him go on in his own way, and never interrupted him once.

There was a feller here once by the name of Jim Smiley, in the winter of '49 – or maybe it was the spring of '50 – I don't recollect exactly, somehow, though what makes me think it was one or the other is because I remember the big flume wasn't finished when he first come to the camp; but anyway, he was the curiousest man about always betting on anything that turned up you ever see, if he could get anybody to bet on the other side, and if he couldn't he'd change sides – any way that suited the other man would suit him – any way just so's he got a bet, he was satisfied. But still, he was lucky – uncommon lucky; he most always come out winner. He was always ready and laying for a chance; there couldn't be no solitary thing mentioned but what that feller'd offer to bet on it – and take any side you please, as I was just telling you: if there was a horse race, you'd find him flush or you find him busted at the end of it; if there was a dogfight, he'd bet on it; if there was a catfight, he'd bet on it; if there was a chickenfight, he'd bet on it; why if there was two birds setting on a fence, he would bet you which one would fly first – or if there was a camp meeting he would be there reglar to bet on parson Walker, which he judged to be the best exhorter about here, and so he was, too, and a good man; if he even see a straddle- bug start to go anywheres, he would bet you how long it would take him to get wherever he was going to, and if you took him up he would foller that straddle- bug to Mexico but what he would find out where he was bound for and how long he was on the road. Lots of the boys here has seen that Smiley and can tell you about him. Why, it never made no difference to him – he would bet on anything – the dangdest feller. Parson Walker's wife laid very sick, once, for a good while, and it seemed as if they warn't going to save her; but one morning he come in and Smiley asked him how she was, and he said she was considerable better – thank the Lord for his inf'nit mercy – and coming on so smart that with the blessing of Providence she'd get well yet – and Smiley, before he thought, says, 'Well, I'll resk two and a half that she don't anyway.'

Thish- yer Smiley had a mare – the boys called her the fifteen-minute nag, but that was only in fun, you know, because, of course, she was faster than that – and he used to win money on that horse, for all she was so slow and always had the asthma, or the distemper, or the consumption, or something of that kind. They used to give her two or three hundred yards' start, and then pass her under way; but always at the fag- end of the race she'd get excited and desperate- like, and come cavorting and spraddling up, and scattering her legs around limber, sometimes in the air, and sometimes out to one side amongst the fences, and kicking up m- o- r- e dust, and raising m- o- r- e racket with her coughing and sneezing and blowing her nose – and always fetch up at the stand just about a neck ahead, as near as you could cipher it down.

And he had a little small bull- pup, that to look at him you'd think he warn't worth a cent, but to set around and look ornery, and lay for a chance to steal something. But as soon as money was up on him he was a different dog –his under- jaw'd begin to stick out like the for'castle of a steamboat, and his teeth would uncover, and shine savage like the furnaces. And a dog might tackle him, and bully- rag him, and bite him, and throw him over his shoulder two or three times, and Andrew Jackson – which was the name of the pup – Andrew Jackson would never let on but what he was satisfied, and hadn't expected nothing else – and the bets being doubled and doubled on the other side all the time, till the money was all up –and then all of a sudden he would grab that other dog just by the joint of his hind legs and freeze to it – not chaw, you understand, but only just grip and hang on till they throwed up the sponge, if it was a year. Smiley always came out winner on that pup till he harnessed a dog once that didn't have no hind legs, because they'd been sawed off in a circular saw, and when the thing had gone along far enough, and the money was all up, and he came to make a snatch for his pet holt, he saw in a minute how he'd been imposed on, and how the other dog had him in the door, so to speak, and he 'peared surprised, and then he looked sorter discouraged like, and didn't try no more to win the fight, and so he got shucked out bad. He gave Smiley a look as much as to say his heart was broke, and it was his fault, for putting up a dog that hadn't no hind legs for him to take holt of, which was his main dependence in a fight, and then he limped off a piece, and laid down and died. It was a good pup, was that Andrew Jackson, and would have made a name for hisself if he'd lived, for the stuff was in him, and he had genius – I know it, because he hadn't had no opportunities to speak of, and it don't stand to reason that a dog could make such a fight as he could under them circumstances, if he hadn't no talent. It always makes me feel sorry when I think of that last fight of his'on, and the way it turned out.

Well, thish- yer Smiley had rat- terriers and chicken cocks, and tomcats, and all them kind of things, till you couldn't rest, and you couldn't fetch nothing for him to bet on but he'd match you. He ketched a frog one day and took him home and said he cal'lated to educate him; and so he never done nothing for three months but set in his back yard and learn that frog to jump. And you bet you he did learn him, too. He'd give him a little hunch behind, and the next minute you'd see that frog whirling in the air like a doughnut – see him turn one summerset, or maybe a couple, if he got a good start, and come down flat- footed and all right, like a cat. He got him up so in the matter of ketching flies, and kept him in practice so constant, that he'd nail a fly every time as far as he could see him. Smiley said all a frog wanted was education, and he could do most anything – and I believe him. Why, I've seen him set Dan'l Webster down here on this floor –Dan'l Webster was the name of the frog – and sing out, 'Flies! Dan'l, flies,' and quicker'n you could wink, he'd spring straight up, and snake a fly off'n the counter there, and flop down on the floor again as solid as a gob of mud, and fall to scratching the side of his head with his hind foot as indifferent as if he hadn't no idea he'd done any more'n any frog might do. You never see a frog so modest and straightfor'ard as he was, for all he was so gifted. And when it come to fair- and- square jumping on a dead level, he could get over more ground at one straddle than any animal of his breed you ever see. Jumping on a dead level was his strong suit, you understand, and when it come to that, Smiley would ante up money on him as long as he had a red. Smiley was monstrous proud of his frog, and well he might be, for fellers that had travelled and ben everywheres all said he laid over any frog that ever they see.

Well, Smiley kept the beast in a little lattice box, and he used to fetch him downtown sometimes and lay for a bet.

One day a feller – a stranger in the camp, he was – come across him with his box, and says: ‘What might it be that you’ve got in the box?’

And Smiley says, sorter indifferent like, ‘It might be a parrot, or it might be a canary, maybe, but it ain’t – it’s only just a frog.’

And the feller took it, and looked at it careful, and turned it round this way and that, and says, ‘H’m – so’tis. Well, what’s he good for?’

‘Well,’ Smiley says, easy and careless, ‘he’s good enough for one thing I should judge – he can out- jump any frog in Calaveras county.’

The feller took the box again, and took another long, particular look, and give it back to Smiley and says, very deliberate, ‘Well – I don’t see no points about that frog that’s any better’n any other frog.’

‘Maybe you don’t,’ Smiley says. ‘Maybe you understand frogs, and maybe you don’t understand ’em; maybe you’ve had experience, and maybe you ain’t only a amature, as it were. Anyways, I’ve got my opinion, and I’ll resk forty dollars that he can out- jump any frog in Calaveras county.’

And the feller studied a minute, and then says, kinder sad, like, ‘Well – I’m only a stranger here, and I ain’t got no frog – but if I had a frog I’d bet you.’

And then Smiley says, ‘That’s all right – that’s all right – if you’ll hold my box a minute I’ll go and get you a frog;’ and so the feller took the box, and put up his forty dollars along with Smiley’s, and set down to wait.

So he set there a good while thinking and thinking to hisself, and then he got the frog out and prised his mouth open and took a teaspoon and filled him full of quail- shot – filled him pretty near up to his chin – and set him on the floor. Smiley he went out to the swamp and slopped around in the mud for a long time, and finally he ketched a frog and fetched him in and give him to this feller and says:

‘Now if you’re ready, set him alongside of Dan’l, with his forepaws just even with Dan’l’s, and I’ll give the word.’ Then he says, 'One – two – three – jump!' and him and the feller touched up the frogs from behind, and the new frog hopped off lively, but Dan'l give a heave, and hysted up his shoulders – so – like a Frenchman, but it wasn't no use – he couldn't budge; he was planted as solid as an anvil, and he couldn't no more stir than if he was anchored out. Smiley was a good deal surprised, and he was disgusted too, but he didn't have no idea what the matter was, of course.

The feller took the money and started away, and when he was going out at the door he sorter jerked his thumb over his shoulder – this way – at Dan'l, and says again, very deliberate, 'Well – I don't see no points about that frog that's any better'n any other frog.'

Smiley he stood scratching his head and looking down at Dan'l a long time, and at last he says, 'I do wonder what in the nation that frog throwed off for – I wonder if there ain't something the matter with him – he 'pears to look might baggy, somehow' – and he ketched Dan'l by the nap of the neck, and lifted him up and says, 'Why blame my cats if he don't weigh five pound' – and turned him upside down, and he belched out about a double- handful of shot. And then he see how it was, and he was the maddest man – he set the frog down and took out after that feller, but he never ketched him. And –

[Here Simon Wheeler heard his name called from the front yard, and got up to go and see what was wanted.] And turning to me as he moved away, he said: 'Just sit where you are, stranger, and rest easy – I ain't going to be gone a second.'

But by your leave, I did not think that a continuation of the history of the enterprising vagabond Jim Smiley would be likely to afford me much information concerning the Rev Leonidas W. Smiley, and so I started away.

At the door I met the sociable Wheeler returning, and he buttonholed me and recommenced: 'Well, this- yer Smiley had a yaller one- eyed cow that didn't have no tail only just a short stump like a bannanner, and –'

'O, curse Smiley and his afflicted cow!' I muttered, good-naturedly, and bidding the old gentleman good- day, I departed.

Yours, truly,

Mark Twain

无神论者做弥撒

献给奥居斯特·博尔热

——他的朋友德·巴尔扎克

皮安训大夫是一个以出色的生理学理论对科学做出贡献的医生，他年纪轻轻，就跻身于巴黎大学医学院名教授的行列，而这个医学院是欧洲医学界人士敬仰的中心。在行医以前，皮安训大夫曾经在很长的一段时间内在外科实习。他早期的实习，受法国最伟大的外科医生，声名显赫的德斯普兰指导。德斯普兰在科学界的出现，就像流星一样转瞬即逝。连他的敌人也承认，他把一种不能传授的方法带进坟墓里了。像所有的天才一样，他也没有继承人，他的一切与生俱来，又随身带走。外科医生的光荣，好像演员的光荣一样，只在他们活着的时候存在，人一死，他们的天才就再也不受重视了。因此演员、外科医生、伟大的歌手，还有以他们的演奏使音乐的威力增加十倍的天才乐师，都是些一时的英雄。德斯普兰自己就可以证明这些短暂的天才的命运是相同的。他的名字，昨天还那么震耳，今天几乎被忘却了，只能在他自己的专业内流传，而不能越出界外。是否要有一些非常特殊的环境，才能使一个科学家的名字越出科学界而进入人类史册呢？德斯普兰有那么广泛的知识，使他能够成为一个世纪的“声音”或者“代表人物”吗？德斯普兰具有神奇的眼光：他能凭先天的或后天培养的直觉，一眼看透病人和他的毛病。他凭这种直觉，能够对一个人的病情了如指掌。他能够考虑到环境气氛和病人的气质、情绪等条件，决定动手术的准确时间，可以具体到几点钟和几分钟。难道他紧跟大自然的步子，研究过生命和基本养分的不断结合——这种养分蕴藏在空气中，或者由大地提供给人类，人类吸收、消化以后会流露出一种特殊的表情吗？还是他运用演绎法和类推法，像天才的居维埃

[1] 那样呢？不管怎样，这个人深知“人体”的秘密，他能根据现在看透它的过去和未来。他有没有把整个科学汇总于一身，像希波克拉底、加利安 [2]、亚里士多德那样呢？他有没有领导一个新学派走向新世界呢？没有。我们不得不承认这个人体化学变化的永恒观察者掌握古代魔术，换句话说，就是具有元素融合的知识，懂得生命的起源，未有生命以前的生命，和生命的将来。但是，可惜的是他的一切都是个人的：他活着的时候利己心使他与世隔绝，到了今天，利己心又消灭了他的荣誉。他的坟上没有竖立一个能够传声的雕像，可以将“天才”利用他来找寻的秘密复述给将来一代听。不过德斯普兰的天

才也许同他的信仰有连带关系，因而也是可以死亡的。他认为地球的大气层是一种有生殖力的液汁，地球好像是蛋壳里面的鸡蛋，既然他不能够断定到底是先有鸡，还是先有蛋，他就既不承认鸡，也不承认蛋。他既不相信人性以前的兽性，也不相信人性以后的灵性。德斯普兰并不怀疑，他肯定。他纯粹而坦率的无神论同许多学者的无神论相同，这些学者是世界上最好的人，然而也是顽固的无神论者，顽固的程度与有宗教信仰的人不相信世间有无神论者相同。像德斯普兰这样的人，不可能有别的信仰，因为他从年轻时起便习惯于解剖人，从人有生命以前，到有生命期间，以至生命消失以后，他都解剖过，他搜遍了人体的一切组织，却找不到在宗教理论上占唯一重要地位的靈魂。他认为人体有一个大脑中枢、一个神经中枢、一个血气中枢，前两者互相交替补充得那么密切，以至于到他临死前几天，他坚信听的官能对听觉并非绝对必要，视的官能对视觉也不是绝对必要的，太阳神经丛可以代替它们，代替了还不容易使人发觉。德斯普兰既然在人身找到两个灵魂，便用这个事实证实了他的无神论，虽然他对于上帝是没有丝毫成见的。据说这个人临死前并没有忏悔和认罪，像许多伟大的天才一样可怜地死去，请上帝宽恕他们吧。

在德斯普兰身上，荣誉和科学知识既然无懈可击，他的仇人只好攻击他的古怪脾气和他的性格；他也有英国人称为“怪癖” [4] 的那种品质。有时他的衣着非常考究，穿得有点像悲剧诗人克雷比庸 [5] 那样，有时却故意不修边幅，有时人们看见他坐车子，有时人们看见他步行。他有时粗鲁，有时和善；外表看来既狠心又吝啬，而他却能够把财产献给他的流亡在国外的老师，这些老师们也领他的情，有好些日子都受着他的捐助。没有人比他更能引起各种互相矛盾的批评了。虽然他为了获得一枚一般医生所不应希冀的圣米歇尔勋章 [6]，可以在宫廷里让一本祈祷书从他的衣袋里掉下来，可是请你相信他的心里是嘲笑这一切的。他从上到下观察过人类，在人生最庄严的行为和最卑鄙的行为中发现过他们的真面目，因此他对人类有极大的轻蔑。在一个伟人身上，所有品质往往是有连带关系的。如果这些巨人中有一个人才能比见识高，那么他的见识起码也比仅仅被人称

为“有见识的人”的见识广泛得多。一切天才都有一个道德观，这个道德观能够适用于一种专业，可是凡是看见花儿的人，都应该看见太阳。这位大夫听见被自己救活的外交官问：“皇帝健康如何？”居然回答：“朝臣已恢复了健康，他也会随着恢复！”他不仅是一位外科或内科医生，而且是绝顶聪明的人。因此耐心而热诚地观察人类的人，会原谅德斯普兰的过度自负，而且会跟德斯普兰一样，相信他能当一个伟大的部长，正如他是一个伟大的外科医生一样。

德斯普兰的几个同时代人认为德斯普兰的一生中有几件令人迷惑不解的事情，我们选择了其中最令人感兴趣的一件叙述于下，因为这件事的谜底就在故事的结尾，而且可以为他澄清某些愚蠢的诽谤。

在医院的所有学生中，德斯普兰最疼爱的是荷拉斯·皮安训。在进入市立医院当实习医生以前，荷拉斯·皮安训是一个医科大学生，寄居在拉丁区一所名为伏盖公寓的破旧宿舍里。这个可怜的青年在那里经受贫困的煎熬，仿佛落在一个炽热的熔炉里，而许多伟大的天才人物都从这类熔炉里毫无损伤和纯洁无瑕地走出来，好像金刚钻不论怎样磕碰也不致碎裂一样。他们奔放的热情像一团烈火，他们从烈火中锻炼出永恒的正直。他们不断地工作，用工作来抑制住自己不能满足的欲望，从工作中养成了斗争的习惯，这些斗争是天才人物必然要遇到的。荷拉斯是一个正直的青年，在荣誉问题上从不转弯抹角，总是单刀直入，一针见血。既肯为朋友当掉自己的大衣，又肯为朋友牺牲自己的时间，甚至彻夜不眠。总之，荷拉斯是这样一种朋友：他们从不计较给予人家的和从人家那里接受的是否相等，因为他们肯定自己得到的一定比付出的多。荷拉斯的大多数朋友都从内心对他崇敬，因为他有一种毫不夸张的美德，其中有些朋友甚至害怕他的谴责。荷拉斯显示他的优点的时候，丝毫不带学究气。他既不是一个清教徒，也不是一个宣教士，他给你忠告的时候也很自然地骂街，有机会的时候，他也会愉快地大吃一顿。他是个好伙伴，像大兵那样不会假作正经，行动又痛快又坦率，但又不像水手，因为这年头的水手都是狡猾的外交家，他像一个事无不可对人言的诚实青年，走起路来总是昂着头，心情舒畅。总之，用一句话概括，荷拉斯是许多奥莱斯特的比拉德，债主们就是古代复仇三女神在今天的最真实的形象^[7]。他带着高兴的心情来忍受贫困，这种心情也许就是使他勇气百倍的主要原因之一，何况他又像一切身无长物的人一样，欠的债很少。他像骆驼那样少食，像牡鹿那样轻灵，他的思想和行为却都非常坚定。他的缺点正如他的优点一样，使荷拉斯·皮安训大夫在他的朋友们的心目中倍觉可亲。自德斯普兰确实掌握了皮安训的优点和缺点那天起，皮安训的幸福生活便开始了。正如人家说的，一个诊所的主任医师把一个青年人带在身边，这个青年人便开始飞黄腾达了。德斯普兰每次到富贵人家出诊的时候，总要带着皮安训做他的助手，而且几乎每次都有一些礼

金落到这位助手的钱袋里。巴黎生活的秘密也在那里不知不觉地展现在这位外省青年的眼前。德斯普兰门诊的时候，也把皮安训留在诊所里，而且派他工作。有时，他会派他陪同一个有钱的病人到矿泉去疗养。总之，他总在为他安排好的雇主。这样做的结果就是过了一段日子，这位外科的暴君，便有了一个忠心耿耿的塞伊德 [8]。这两个人，一个在地位上和学问上都已登峰造极，享有巨大的财富和无限的光荣，另一个则是刚起步的无名小卒 [9]，既没有钱也没有名，这两个人竟成了密友。伟大的德斯普兰什么事都告诉他的弟子；他的弟子也知道哪个妇女曾经在老师旁边的椅子上坐过，或者在诊所里那张尽人皆知的、德斯普兰在上面睡觉的长躺椅上坐过。皮安训熟知这个狮子兼雄牛的体质的秘密，这个体质终于使这位伟大人物的上半身无限扩大，最后由于心脏扩张而死。他研究他忙碌一生中的奇闻逸事，研究他怪吝的计划，他具有政治头脑的科学家的希望。他的心即使不是冷酷的，也是久经考验的，心里埋藏着唯一的一种感情，皮安训能预见到等待着这种感情的是幻灭。

有一天，皮安训告诉德斯普兰：圣雅克区有一个穷苦的挑水夫由于疲劳和贫困得了很严重的病。这个可怜的挑水夫是奥韦尼省人 [10]，在1821年漫长的冬天里只吃得上土豆。德斯普兰马上扔下所有的病人，驾着马车，由皮安训跟随着，冒着把马累死的危险，飞驰到病人那里，亲自把他运送到著名的杜博瓦 [11] 在圣丹尼郊区创立的疗养院里去。他每天去医治病人，等到病人恢复健康以后，他又给了病人一笔钱使他够买一匹马和一只水桶。这个奥韦尼省挑水夫有一点特别的地方。每逢他有一个朋友病了，他马上就把朋友带到德斯普兰那里去，对他的恩人说：“我决不让他到别的大夫那里去。”德斯普兰虽然脾气很坏，在这种时候却总是和挑水夫握握手，对他说：“把他们全都带来给我吧。”于是他便让这个康塔尔的子孙 [12] 住进了市立医院，而且对他尽心医治。皮安训已经有好几次注意到他的老师对奥韦尼省人，尤其是对挑水夫，有一种偏爱。可是由于德斯普兰对于他在市立医院的医疗工作颇为自豪，因此学生也就不觉得这中间有什么特别可怪的了。

有一天，皮安训约在上午九点钟穿过圣絮尔皮斯广场 [13] 的时候，瞥见他的老师正在走进教堂。德斯普兰向来是没有他的二轮马车连一步都不肯走的，这时候却在步行，偷偷摸摸地从小狮街那道门走进去，仿佛走进暗栈私寮似的。实习医生是深知他的老师的信仰的，而且他自己也是一个百分之一百二十的卡巴尼斯主义者 [14]，自然觉得非常奇怪。皮安训也潜进了圣絮尔皮斯教堂，一看吃惊得非同小可。原来伟大的德斯普兰，这位对天使们毫无感情的无神论者，因为天使们既不受制于解剖刀，又不会患痔瘡或者胃炎，总之，这位无畏的嘲弄鬼神的人，竟恭恭敬敬地跪在……跪在什么地方？跪在圣母小

教堂前面，在那里参加弥撒，付弥撒费，接济贫困，态度非常严肃，仿佛在动手术似的。

“他肯定不是来弄清楚关于圣母生孩子的问题的吧？”皮安训这样想，他的惊讶达到了想象不到的程度，“如果我在圣体节看见他在游行的人丛中持着遮盖圣体的天帏的一根流苏，那只不过是开玩笑的吧，可是在这时候，独自一个人，没有人看见，那就耐人寻味了！”

皮安训不愿意显得像是在侦察市立医院外科主任医生的行动，便走开了。凑巧这一天德斯普兰请他吃晚饭，不是在家里吃，而是在饭馆里。吃到梨子和奶酪的时候，皮安训用巧妙的办法，把话题转到弥撒上面，将弥撒比拟为虚伪的礼节，一种滑稽剧。

“这种滑稽剧，”德斯普兰说，“使基督徒流过的血比拿破仑的所有战役和布鲁塞的所有水蛭 [15] 所付出的血还要多！弥撒是教皇创立的，最早出现于6世纪，它的根据是Hoc est corpus [16]。为了建立圣体节，不知流尽了多少血！罗马教廷想借这个节日的建立，证明他们在圣餐是耶稣的血和肉这个有争议的问题上得到了胜利，这个有争议的问题曾经使教会纷乱了三个世纪！德·图卢兹伯爵和阿耳比人的战争 [17]，就是这一事件的尾声。沃杜瓦教派 [18] 和阿耳比教派的信徒都拒绝承认这个新事物。”

接着德斯普兰兴高采烈地大肆发挥无神论者的想象力，说了一长串伏尔泰式的笑话 [19]，或者更正确点说，是可恶地引用了一大套《语录》 [20] 上的话。

“噢？”皮安训心里想，“今天早上那个虔诚的信徒哪里去了？”

他没有问出口，他怀疑自己有没有在圣絮尔皮斯教堂看见他的上司。德斯普兰用不着对皮安训说谎：他们彼此相知太深了，他们在类似的严肃问题上交换过思想，讨论过《事物本性》 [21] 的各种学说，深入地探讨过这些问题，或者用不信鬼神的利刃和解剖刀将它们剖析过。三个月过去了。皮安训没有追究这件事，虽然这件事已经深深地印在他的记忆里。同一年，有一天，市立医院的一个大夫当着皮安训的面抓住德斯普兰的胳膊，似乎要审问他。

“我亲爱的老师，您到圣絮尔皮斯教堂去干什么？”他问他。

“到那里去看一位膝盖上生骨疽的教士，是安古兰末公爵夫人介绍给我的病人。”德斯普兰回答。

提问的大夫满意了，皮安训却不然。

“咳！他到教堂去看膝盖生病的病人！他去听他的弥撒！”实习医生心里想。

皮安训决定侦察德斯普兰，他记住他看见老师走进圣絮尔皮斯教堂的日子和时刻，打定主意在来年同一日子、同一时刻再来看看，看是否能再遇见他的老师。如果再遇见了，他的周期性的宗教信仰就值得做一次科学调查了，因为在这样一个人物身上，他的思想和行为之间不应该有这样直接的矛盾。

第二年，皮安训已经不再是德斯普兰的实习医生，在同一日期和时刻，皮安训看见外科医生的二轮马车停在图尔农街和小狮街的街角，他的朋友从车上下来，诚惶诚恐地沿着墙走进圣絮尔皮斯教堂，又在圣母小教堂参加了弥撒。这的确是德斯普兰！的确是那位外科主任医生，秘密的 [22] 无神论者，偶然的信徒。事情复杂化了。这位著名科学家的固执的行为使一切都陷入混乱。等到德斯普兰走出去以后，皮安训走到圣器监守人的身边，监守人正走过来收拾小堂里的圣器，皮安训问他那位先生是否常到这里来。

“我在这里二十年了，”圣器监守人说，“二十年以来德斯普兰先生每年四次到这儿来参加这个弥撒，这场弥撒是他举办的 [23] 。”

“他举办的弥撒！”皮安训一边走开，一边想，“这和圣母怀孕同样神秘，光这件事就可以使一个医生对一切都怀疑了。”

皮安训虽然是德斯普兰的朋友，后来过了好久却还没有机会同他谈谈他生活中的这件怪事。即使他们在诊病的时候或者在交际场中遇见了，也很难找到两个人可以把脚搁在火炉的薪架上、头靠在沙发的靠背上，清静地、推心置腹地谈心的机会。最后，过了七年，经过1830年的革命 [24] 以后，当人民冲进大主教官邸 [25] 的时候，当民主的思潮促使人民摧毁那些在房屋的海洋上像闪电似的直指天空的金色十字架的时候，当反宗教和叛乱盘踞在各处街道上的时候，皮安训又一次出其不意地发现德斯普兰走进圣絮尔皮斯教堂。皮安训马上跟着他进去，跪在他旁边，德斯普兰见到他没有丝毫表示，也没有表现出惊讶。两个人一起参加了他举办的那场弥撒。

“亲爱的老师，”他们走出教堂以后皮安训对德斯普兰说，“您能告诉我您这样过分虔诚的理由吗？我已经三次发现您来参加弥撒了，的确是您！您要告诉我这个秘密，解释给我听为什么在您的信仰和行为之间有这样明显的矛盾。您不相信上帝，而您参加弥撒！我亲爱的老师，您一定要回答我！”

“我跟许多信徒，许多外表上非常虔诚的人相似，其实他们心里同你和我一样，都是无神论者。”

接着他便对几个政治上的大人物 [26] 大肆讽刺，其中最著名的一个可以让我们在本世纪内写一本新版的莫里哀的《伪君子》。

“我要问您的不是这些，”皮安训说，“我想知道的是：为什么您要

到这儿来？为什么您要举办这场弥撒？”

“说老实话，我亲爱的朋友，”德斯普兰说，“我已经到了坟墓的边缘，我当然可以对你谈谈我早期的生活。”

这时候，皮安训和那位伟人正走到四风街上，这条街是巴黎最糟的街道之一。德斯普兰指给他看一座形状像方尖塔的房屋第七层楼，这座房屋的角门通向一条甬道，甬道的尽头有一道曲曲折折的楼梯，被邻墙上小窗透进的光线照亮，这种小窗很恰当地被称为“气窗”。这是一座暗绿色的房屋，底层住着一个家具商人，这个商人似乎使他的每一层楼都寄居着一种不同类型的贫困。德斯普兰举起臂膀，做了一个有力的手势，对皮安训说：“我在那上面住过两年！”

“我知道，德·阿泰兹也在这里住过，我年轻时几乎天天来这里，当时我们把这阁楼称为熔炼伟人的短颈大口瓶！后来呢？”

“我刚才听弥撒，跟我当时住在阁楼里发生的事情有关。您对我说，德·阿泰兹也住过那间阁楼，就是窗口摆着一盆花，上面荡着一根绳子，晾满了衣物那一间。亲爱的皮安训，早年我生活非常艰难，巴黎的困苦生活就数我忍受得多。我样样苦都熬过：饥饿，口渴，缺钱，没有外衣、鞋子和内衣，贫困交加，一一尝遍。我曾在这熔炼伟人的短颈大口瓶里，哈着冻僵的手指。我真想同您一起再去看看这个阁楼。整个冬天，我在用功时看见自己脑袋冒烟，只见一片热气，就像结冰的日子里马身上冒出来的热气一样。我才知道怎么才能支撑住，忍受这种生活。我孑然一身，孤苦无援，无钱去买书和支付学医的费用。我没有朋友：我的性格暴躁易怒，疑心重重，不安好动，帮了我的倒忙。没有人愿意看到，在我的一触即怒中，有着一个想从社会底层挣扎到上面来的人的苦恼和劳累。在您面前我用不着遮遮掩掩，我可以告诉您，我本性善良，非常敏感，这始终会成为意志坚强，在贫困的沼泽里长期跋涉，然后攀登上高峰的人具有的特性。除了一笔人们给我的、不够用的膳宿费以外，我从我的家庭和故乡什么也得不到。总之，在那个时期，我每天早上吃一块小面包，是小狮街的面包店老板贱卖给我的，因为面包是隔日或前天的，我掰碎了浸在牛奶中——这样，我的早饭只花两个苏。我每隔一天在一家膳宿公寓吃晚饭，每顿晚饭花十六个苏。这样，我平均每天只花九个苏。您跟我一样清楚，我对自己的衣服和鞋子多么爱惜！我不知道后来您和我，我们被同行暗算时，心里感到的难过，是否抵得上当初看到一只脱了线的鞋咧嘴怪笑，或听到礼服袖笼绷开的响声那样的难受。我只喝清水，我对咖啡馆敬而远之。对我来说，佐皮咖啡馆好像一块乐土，只有拉丁语国家吕库吕斯那样的人才有权出入。我有时心想：‘我也能在里面喝一杯牛奶咖啡，玩一局多米诺骨牌吗？’总之，我把贫困使我产生的狂热转化为用功。我千方百计获得有用的知识，使自身拥

有巨大的价值，一旦我摆脱了默默无闻，便能配得上那时所达到的地位。我点灯用掉的油多过吃掉的面包：在那些苦读的夜晚，我用于照明的费用超过了我的伙食费。这场战斗是漫长、持久、得不到安慰的。我没有唤起周围人的任何同情。要有朋友，不就是结交年轻人，身上有几个钱好跟他们去品尝几杯，到大学生们想去的地方嘛！我身无分文！在巴黎，没有人想象得出一无所有意味着什么。当有人看出我的贫穷时，我的喉咙便感到一种神经性的痉挛，这种痉挛常使病人以为，有一样圆东西从食道升到喉咙。后来我遇到一些生来有钱的人，他们从来没有短缺过什么。这些有钱的傻瓜问我：‘那时您为什么要欠债呢？您为什么借利息那么高的债呢？’他们使我想起那位王后，她听说老百姓饿得要命时，这样说：‘为什么他们不去买点奶油圆球蛋糕呢？’我很想看到一个富人，抱怨我给他动手术收费昂贵。他在巴黎孤零零，一文不名，没有朋友，告贷无门，不得不靠自己的五根手指干活谋生。怎么办呢？他将怎样解除他的饥饿呢？皮安训，如果有时你看见我刻薄无情，那是因为我将早年我经受的痛苦，加到我在上流社会所经历的几千次的无情和自私上面；或者是因为我想起了仇恨、贪欲、嫉妒、诽谤在成功和我之间所树立起的障碍。在巴黎，有人看见你踏镫上马开始发迹的时候，马上有些人来扯住你的衣襟，另一些人松开马肚带的扣子，使你跌下来摔破脑袋。这一个除去你的马蹄铁，那一个偷去你的马鞭子。最不阴险的还算是那个跑过来对准你用手枪打你一枪的人。你相当有天赋，我的亲爱的孩子，你不久就可以知道那些庸俗的人对有天赋的人所发动的可怕的、无休止的战争：如果你在一天晚上输掉二十五个路易，第二天人家便咬定你是一个赌徒，你的最好的朋友会说你昨天晚上输掉了二万五千法郎；如果你头痛两下，人家便认为你有神经病；如果你态度生硬一点，人家便说你难以交往；如果你集中优势兵力来对付这些侏儒，你的最好的朋友便要叫嚷，说你想鲸吞一切，说你有意横行霸道，压制别人。总之，你的优点都会变成缺点，你的缺点变成罪恶，而你的德行都成了犯罪。如果你救了一个人，人家会说你的本意是想杀死他；如果你的病人没有死，人家肯定会说你为了保证他的现在，损害了他的将来。他现在没有死，将来也会死的。只要你稍一踉跄，你便会跌倒在地上爬不起来！随便你发明什么，只要你主张你的权利，人家就会说你是个喜欢刁难的人，是个狡猾的人，不肯让青年人有飞黄腾达的机会。因此，我的朋友，如果我不相信上帝，我更不相信人类。你难道看不出在我身上有一个与被每一个人恶语中伤的德斯普兰完全不同的德斯普兰吗？可是这些不堪回首的往事，不去想它也罢。却说我住在那所房子里，正在用功读书，准备我的第一次考试，我身边没有一个子儿。你知道，我已经到了要说‘我当兵去’那种穷途末路了！我只有一个希望。我正等待着一箱子从我故乡运来的衬衣，这是那些老姑母们送给我的，她们因为不认识巴黎，以为她们的侄子每月花三十个法郎就可

以整天吃山珍海味，所以只想着你的衬衫。箱子运到时，我正在医学院里，搬运费要四十个法郎，看门人是一个德国鞋匠，住在小阁楼里，代我付了运费，把箱子留在他那里。我一个人在福塞圣日耳曼草场街和医学院街走来走去，想不出一个计策来取回箱子，使我可以先不付那四十个法郎，等我卖了那些衬衣再付。我在这种事情上的愚蠢使我明白了除了当外科医生，我不能干别的职业。我的朋友，有些高尚的心灵，他们的能力只适合在较高级的范围中发挥，他们缺少阴谋诡计的机智，这种机智能产生种种手段和计划；他们的才气靠运气：他们本身不去找寻，他们靠偶然碰上。总之，到了晚上，我回家了，这时候，我的邻居，一个名叫布尔雅的挑水夫，是圣夫卢尔 [27] 人，也回来了。我们中间的交情也不过是同住在一层楼的不同房间，每天听见彼此睡觉、咳嗽、穿衣的声音而终于彼此习惯下来的两个互相认识的房客而已。我的邻居告诉我说，我欠了房东三个月租金，房东赶我搬家，我第二天就要搬走。他自己也因他从事的职业被赶搬家。那天晚上是我生平最痛苦的一夜。‘到哪里去找一个搬运工人来搬走我那些不值钱的行李和书籍呢？拿什么来付给那个搬运工人和看门人呢？搬到哪里去呢？’这些不能解决的问题，我含着眼泪将它们说了一遍又一遍，像疯子总是重复他习惯的那两句话一样。我睡了。困苦的人自有他们充满甜蜜的梦的美妙睡眠。第二天早上，我正在吃着我那碗牛奶浸面包的时候，布尔雅走进来用发音和语法都不准确的法语对我说：‘大学生先生，我是一个穷苦的人，是圣夫卢尔医院的一个孤儿，无父无母，穷得娶不起亲。您的亲戚也不多，钱也不多吧。您听我说，楼下有一辆手推车，是我按每个钟头两个苏的价钱租来的，我们俩所有的东西都能装得下，假使您愿意，我们可以合起来到别处租房子住，既然这儿已经将我们赶了出来。这儿到底不是地上乐园呀！’我知道，我的好布尔雅，我对他说，‘可是我在发愁，在楼下我有一个箱子，装着的衬衫内衣值一百个艾居 [28]，我可以拿来付清欠租和还钱给看门人，可是我连一百个苏也没有。’‘好吧，我这里面还有点钱，’布尔雅愉快地回答我，指给我看一个沾满油污的破旧皮包，‘留着您的衬衣吧。’于是布尔雅替我付清了三个月欠租，付了自己的租金，而且还了钱给看门人。然后他把我的家具和衬衫装到他的手推车上，推着车穿街走巷，看见有出租牌子就停下来。我呢，我走上楼去看看出租的房间对我们是否合适。到了中午我们还在拉丁区徘徊，一无所获。租金是最大的障碍。布尔雅向我提议在一家酒铺里吃午饭，我们把手推车停放在酒铺门口。快到黄昏时分，我终于发现在商业胡同、罗昂大院一家房子的顶层，屋顶下面有两个被楼梯隔开的房间。我们每人每年只要付六十个法郎的房租。于是我同我那位微贱的朋友便安顿下来了。我们一起吃饭。布尔雅每天约可赚到五十个苏，已经有差不多一百艾居的存款，不久便可实现他的野心，买一只水桶和一匹马了。他用一种狡猾的方法和亲切的态度把我的秘密都挖

了出来，他的亲切态度一直到现在回忆起来都使我的心震动。等到他知道我的全部情况以后，他就暂时放弃他憧憬了一生的野心：布尔雅当挑水夫已经二十二年了，他为了我的前途牺牲了他的一百艾居。”

说到这里德斯普兰紧紧抓住皮安训的胳膊。

“他给了我必要的钱，让我准备考试！我的朋友，这个人懂得我有一个使命，知道我的才智的需要比他的需要更重要。他照顾我，管我叫他的‘孩子’，借给我必要的钱让我买书，有时还蹑手蹑脚地走过来看我用功，最后，他还像慈母般采取措施，把我以前不得不吃的数量不足、质量低劣的食物，换成卫生可口、数量充足的食物。布尔雅是一个四十岁左右的人，相貌很像中世纪时的市民，前额突出，脑袋可以给一个画家用来作为李居尔格 [29] 的模特儿。这个可怜的人觉得自己心中充满爱，无处发泄。他从来没有被人爱过，只有不久以前死去的一只卷毛狗爱过他。他经常对我谈起这只狗，总是问我是否相信天主教堂会同意为它的灵魂的安息举办弥撒。据他说，他的狗是一个真正的教徒，十二年来，一直跟随他到教堂去，从来不吠一声，总是闭着嘴聆听风琴的乐声，蹲在他的身边，那样子使他相信它正在同他一起祈祷。这个人把他的全部的爱倾注到我身上：他把我当作一个孤独的、受苦的人，他变成了我的无微不至的慈母，面面俱到的恩人，总之，他是无私地做好事的典型。每当我在街上遇见他，他总向我会意地望上一眼，眼光里充满难以想象的崇高的感情。那时候他就装出不在挑水的样子走着，他看见我身体健康，衣服齐整，似乎显得很高兴。他的所作所为，是普通人的献身精神和村姑的爱情应用到高一级的范围。布尔雅替我办事，晚上在约好的钟点把我叫醒，为我揩拭灯罩，擦我们的地板，他既是好仆人，又是好父亲，而且像个英国姑娘那么干净。他负责我们的家务。像菲洛珀芒 [30] 一样，他锯我们自己的木柴，他做一切事情都简单、自然，同时保持他的尊严，因为他似乎明白只要目的高贵，便连带使一切都高贵起来。当我离开这个老实人进入市立医院当实习医生的时候，他一想到再也不能同我一起生活了，便感到异乎寻常的悲痛，可是他还自我安慰，希望积些钱来为我准备论文，而且叫我答应在休息的日子去看他。布尔雅为我感到骄傲，他爱我是为了我也为他自己。如果你翻开我的论文，你一定会看到这是献给他的。在我当实习医生的最后一年，我攒了足够的钱，可以买一匹马和一只水桶，以偿还我欠这位可敬的奥韦尼人的一切。他知道我花了许多钱，非常生气，然而看见他的希望实现了，又非常高兴。他一边笑一边责备我，他凝视着他的水桶和他的马，一边抹去眼泪一边对我说：‘这不好！啊！多漂亮的水桶！你做错了，这马真和一个奥韦尼人一样结实。’我从来没有见过比这更动人的场面。布尔雅一定要给我买一个医用器械包，就是你在我的诊所里看见的镶银的那一个，这对我是生平最宝贵的东西。虽然他对我早期的成功感到万分兴

奋，但是他从来不漏出一句话、一个手势表示：‘这个人多亏了我！’而事实上没有他，贫困早已要了我的命。这个可怜的人为我牺牲了他自己。为了使我有咖啡喝来开夜车，他只吃大蒜抹面包。他病了，你想象得出，我在他的床头守夜，第一次我把他救过来了。可是两年以后病又复发，尽管有热情的照顾，有医学上的种种巨大努力，他终于还是一病不起。国王从来也没有像他那样受到医疗照料。是的，皮安训，为了从死神手里夺回这条生命，我尝试过从来没有试过的方法。我想让他活下去，使他能够看到他亲手促成的成果，看到他的愿望全部实现，同时满足充斥我心中的唯一感恩之情，从而熄灭至今还燃烧着我的火焰！”

“布尔雅，”德斯普兰显然非常激动，停顿了一会儿又说，“我的第二个父亲，死在我的怀里，用遗嘱把他的全部财产遗留给我。遗嘱是他找一个街头代书人写的，订立的日期是我们搬进罗昂大院的那一年。这个人的宗教信仰天真而单纯。他爱圣母仿佛爱他自己的妻子。他是虔诚的天主教徒，但是对我的无宗教信仰从来不发一言。他病危的时候，他求我用尽一切方法使他得到教会的帮助。我叫教堂每天为他奉献一场弥撒。他经常在夜里向我表达他对来世的恐惧，他害怕他今世的生活还过得不够圣洁。可怜的人！他从早到晚劳动。假如真有天堂的话，除了他还有什么人能进天堂呢？他像一个圣者一样接受了临终圣事，他的死配得上他的一生。送殡的人，除了我没有别人。我将我唯一的恩人埋葬以后，我考虑用什么方法可以报他的恩，我发觉他既没有家庭，也没有朋友、妻子、儿女。但是他信上帝！他有一个宗教信仰，我有权利和他争辩吗？他曾经小心翼翼地和我谈起过用弥撒来使死者的亡灵安息，但是他不想把这个负担加到我的身上，因为他认为这就等于叫我报他的恩。因此等到我有财力可以举办一场弥撒的时候，我就给了圣絮尔皮斯教堂足够的钱，使他们每年举行四次弥撒。我唯一可以献给布尔雅的，就是满足他的虔诚的愿望。因此每季度的开始，举行这场弥撒的日子，我就以他的名义去参加弥撒，而且背诵他所希望背诵的经文。我以一个无神论者的诚意祷告：‘我的上帝啊，如果你有一个地方去安置那些生前十全十美的人，请你想到善良的布尔雅吧。如果你要叫他受苦，请把痛苦给我，使他得以更快地进入人们所谓的天堂吧。’我的朋友，这就是像我这样有非宗教信仰的人所能做的一切。上帝应该是一个善良的家伙，他不会因此而恨我的。我向你发誓，如果有人能使布尔雅的信仰进入我的脑子，我愿意将我的全部财产送给他。”

皮安训在德斯普兰最后一次生病的时候看护过德斯普兰，现在他不敢肯定这位著名的外科医生死时还是个无神论者。信神的人们也许喜欢想象那位微贱的奥韦尼人会来给他打开天国的门，正如从前他曾为他打开地上神殿的门一样，这神殿 [31] 的门楣上写着：“祖国感谢 所有的伟人”！

新兵

他们发现，有些时候，借助某个想法或举动，他可以在时间与距离两种模式中废除空间，一种是思想的，另一种是物理的。

——《路易·朗贝尔的思想史》

1793年11月的一个晚上，卡朗唐镇的重要人士都聚集在戴伊夫人家的客厅，集会每天在这里进行。有些事情，在大城市不会引起一丁点的注意，但是，在小城镇却会牵动所有人的神经。这种常规性的集会在小地方就格外引人注目。两天前，戴伊夫人以身体不适为由，闭门谢客，前一天也没有接待任何人。普普通通的日子里，这两件事情在卡朗唐产生的影响，堪比巴黎所有的剧院关门停演。这样的生活好像是不完整的。然而，在1793年，戴伊夫人的举动无疑会招来最致命的后果。对于贵族来说，即便是很小的冒险举动，都可能变成关乎生存与死亡的问题。这一晚，诺曼底人的脸上挂着强烈的好奇和高度的敏感，为了清楚了解诺曼底人的反应，尤其是戴伊夫人内心的挣扎，有必要解释一下她在卡朗唐扮演的角色。她此刻的危险处境，许多人在革命期间也经历过。此外，读者的怜悯之心也会使这个故事更加有声有色。

戴伊夫人，是个寡妇，在贵族流亡时期离开了宫廷，她已故的丈夫是一位中将，曾获骑士勋章。她在卡朗唐一带拥有大量财产，避难于此，期许躲避恐怖浪潮的影响。基于对小镇的充分了解，她的预期十分准确。革命没有对下诺曼底地区带来大面积的破坏。尽管从前戴伊夫人只是在巡视自己的地产时与当地的贵族有过几面之缘，但是，现在她决计向当地的大资本家和新权威人士敞开家门，努力让他们因能和自己攀上关系而感到沾沾自喜，又不引起仇恨和嫉妒。优雅、和善，骨子带着不可言喻的温柔，她不必奴颜婢膝，也无须求天告地，便可以轻松取悦他人。借助巧妙的策略，她成功赢得了广泛的尊重。机敏的性格使得她在微妙之处也游刃有余，满足不同社会阶级要求的同时，既不伤害倔强的新贵的自尊心，也不冒犯老朋友。

不同于下诺曼底女子的光鲜、丰满的美，三十八岁的她有着纤弱的美，或者说贵族的高雅。外貌俊美、端庄；体态轻盈、纤细。说起话来，苍白的脸色就会变得光彩照人，充满活力。黑色的大眼睛散发着和蔼与亲切，平静与虔诚的眼神又仿佛在昭示，她的人生已经由不

得她了。在如花的年纪嫁给了一个年老又多疑的军人。丈夫在风流宫廷中有名无实的地位在她脸上罩上了深沉的忧郁。曾经这张脸上肯定也焕发过迷人的魅力和爱情的活力。她不得不始终压抑女人的天真与任性，尽管依旧感受得到，只是不去想，总之，在她心底埋藏着少女的激情。其实她的魅力源于这种内在的青春。只是，有时候内在的青春会在神情上出卖她，让人觉得是内心欲望的天真表达。她的眼神使人生敬，举止言谈中却总是夹杂着少女对未知的将来的渴望与冲动；很快，再不敏感的男人也会爱上她，尽管如此，迫于她端庄的举止，也只能敬而远之。她的心灵生而高贵，又因经历多番残酷斗争的磨砺，超乎众人，连男人都自叹不如。这般性格势必内含某种强大的激情。戴伊夫人的爱都集中一处——母爱。嫁为人妻，她在对儿子过分的疼爱中找回被生活剥夺的幸福与快乐。她不仅仅以纯洁、无私的母爱去爱他，还带着情人的妩媚，妻子的嫉妒。儿子不在眼前时，她就感到难过。儿子不在家时，她就坐立不安。永远也看不够，她只因儿子活着，也只为他活着。为了让大体会这种情感的力量，只需要略做一点补充，这孩子不单单是戴伊夫人唯一的儿子，也是她在世上唯一的亲人，她唯一可以寄托人生的忧虑、期望、快乐的人。已故的丈夫戴伊伯爵是家族最后的香火，她也是自己家族最后的继承人。人世利益的盘算和人心灵深处最崇高的渴望相并而行，使得在女人身上本来就很强烈的情感，在伯爵夫人心里越燃越烈。她对儿子百般呵护，养儿的艰辛也使得孩子对她来说更加宝贵；医生不止一次预言，她可能会失去他，但是，她只相信自己的直觉，从不灰心。不管医生怎么说，她还是幸福地陪着儿子闯过童年的难关，看他身体日益强壮，有种不可名状的开心。

多亏她持续不断的照料，孩子日渐长大，长成风度优雅的小伙子。二十岁的时候，就已经是凡尔赛镇最出色的骑兵之一。诚然，不是所有母亲的付出都会得到回报，但是戴伊夫人很幸运，她的儿子非常爱她；他们心灵共通，情同挚友。即便没有血缘关系，他们也一定可以像兄弟一样相互感知，这种友谊在生活中是十分罕见的。十八岁时，这位年轻的伯爵被任命为龙骑兵团少尉，依当时的处境，为了捍卫荣誉，不得不跟随贵族流亡。

戴伊夫人，高贵、富有，作为流亡贵族的母亲，不可能对自己严峻的处境视而不见。除了给儿子保留一笔丰厚的财产，别无他求。她放弃了与他一同流亡的幸福。当读到那些严苛的法条，得知共和派每天都依照它们没收卡朗唐流亡贵族的家产时，她为自己大胆的举动拍手叫好。难道她不是冒着生命危险来守护儿子的财富吗？后来，听说国民议会判决残忍的死刑时，她确认自己唯一的宝贝安好，远离危险、远离断头台，便安心地睡了。她快乐地认为自己做出了最明智的选择，可以同时保全所有的财产。保守着自己心中的秘密，对不幸的

年代做出所有必需的妥协，为了不损害女人的尊严和牺牲贵族信念，她把自己的痛苦包裹在冷酷的神秘中。在卡朗唐等待她的重重困难，她早已了然于心。在这里占居首户，岂不是每天都有被推上断头台的可能？可是，被作为母亲所拥有的勇气支撑，她知道如何平等对待穷人，减轻他们的痛苦，以赢得拥护；她也知道如何保护富人的财产，取悦他们，让自己变得不可或缺。她接待市镇检察官、镇长、地方法院庭长、公诉人，甚至革命法庭的法官。这群人中，前面四位都未婚，百般献殷勤，想要娶她为妻。为了得到她，他们不是恐吓她，自己可以给她带来多少麻烦，就是告诉她，自己可以向她提供怎样的庇护。这位公诉人是卡昂的前任律师，从前负责照管伯爵夫人的财产利益，试图以忠心与慷慨，博得她的爱情。危险的手段！他是所有追求者中，最可怕的一位。他也是唯一对伯爵夫人巨额财产状况了如指掌的人，因为她曾经是他的客户。仗着拥有巨大的权力，可以说是这个地区的生杀大权，他的贪婪与日俱增。这个男人，尚年轻，举止如此高贵优雅，以至于戴伊夫人无法辨清他的为人。然而，无视与诺曼底人明争暗斗的危险，她运用女人天生的才智和狡黠，使情敌之间相互牵制。竭力争取时间，她希望可以安然无损地度过混乱期。当时，国内保皇主义分子每天自信地认为革命结束指日可待，而这一执念断送了他们其中很多人的性命。

尽管困难重重，戴伊夫人还是很巧妙地保持着自身的独立，直到这一天，以一种令人费解的轻率，她毫无顾忌地关上了家门。她的反常举动勾起了大家浓厚、真切的兴趣。当晚来访的客人得知伯爵夫人无法接待他们的时候，表现出强烈的不安。再者，出于当地人特有的、赤裸裸的好奇，他们打探戴伊夫人是遭遇了不幸，遇到了烦心事，还是得了重病。名叫布丽吉特的老管家解答了大家的疑惑。她说，夫人把自己关在房间里，谁也不想见，甚至家仆。生活在修道院似的小镇，人们养成了分析和解释他人行为举止的习惯。自然，在对戴伊夫人略表同情之后，不知道她到底是高兴还是悲伤，每个人都开始搜寻她突然闭门谢客的原因。

“如果她生病了，她应该打发人去找医生，”第一个好奇者揣测道，“但是医生今天一天都在我家下棋。他笑着对我说，现今只有一种病……并且这种病无药可救。”

他小心翼翼地抛出这个笑话。于是，女人、男人、老人和年轻的女孩开始了形形色色的猜测。每个人都觉得自己瞥见了一个秘密，这个秘密充满了大胆的想象。第二天，他们的猜疑持续加重。一如小镇的生活很难掩人耳目，女人们首先察觉到布丽吉特采购的食物比往常要多得多。这一点无可争议。一大早，就有人在集市上看见了老管家，不同往常的是，她买了市场上唯一的野兔。小镇上的人都知道，戴伊夫人不喜欢吃野味。野兔也就成了种种猜疑的出发点。与平常一

样，老人们出来散散步，他们察觉伯爵夫人家里可能正在进行某种秘密集会，家仆的谨小慎微和遮遮掩掩可以提供佐证。仆人在花园里拍打地毯，要是在前一天，没有人会注意这件事情，可是现在，这张地毯成了故事的线索，大家都借此发挥。每个人都有自己的版本。第二天，听说戴伊夫人自称身体不适，当晚，卡朗唐所有的大人物聚集在镇长的兄弟家。他是一位已婚的老商人，为人正直，受人敬重，连戴伊夫人都很尊重他。聚会中，这位富有孀妇的追求者们都讲出了自己大大小小的猜测；每个人都想让此次迫使她名誉受损的神秘事件对自己有利。公诉人编了一整出戏，故事的结局是戴伊夫人的儿子连夜赶回了家中。镇长认为是有一位旺代的反抗派教士，逃亡于此，请求庇护。但是，这天是周五，买野兔的事情让镇长觉得很尴尬。地方法院庭长则坚信她收留的是被严密追捕的朱安党人或西部保皇党人的某个头目。其他人觉得她收留的是一个从巴黎监狱逃脱的贵族。总之，大家都怀疑伯爵夫人做出了一个大胆的举动，而这一举动依照当时的法律是重罪，足以把她送上断头台。公诉人小声说，大家最好保守这个秘密，尽力去拯救这个大步迈向深渊的不幸女人。

“如果你们散播这件事，”他补充道，“我就不得不介入，去搜查她的家，这样的话……”他没有把话说完，但是大家都明白他的意思。

伯爵夫人的挚友都十分担心她，以至于第三天的一大早，镇行政长官让他的妻子给她写信，鼓励她当晚像往常一样接待客人。更果断的是老商人，这天早上，他直接去了戴伊夫人家。他决心伸出援手，执意要见她，不过令他感到吃惊的是，当他看到戴伊夫人时，她正忙着在小花园里摘花，准备把它们插在花瓶里。

“她肯定在庇护她的情人。”老商人自言自语道，突然十分同情这个迷人的女人。伯爵夫人反常的神情证实了他的猜疑。老商人被女人天生的献身精神深深打动了，因为男人都会因女人甘心为他们牺牲而感到欣喜。老商人告诉了戴伊夫人镇上关于她的流言，以及她危险的处境。

“因为，”他最后说道，“尽管有些公职人员会欣然宽恕保护神父的英勇行为，但是没有人会同情您，如果他们发现您是为爱献身。”

听了这一席话，戴伊夫人用疑惑又疯狂的眼神盯着老商人，看得他瑟瑟发抖。

“跟我来。”她一边说一边拉着他的手往卧室走。确定只有他们两个人的时候，她从胸口掏出一封脏兮兮、皱巴巴的信。“读。”她使出全身的力气从牙缝里挤出这个字。

她瘫在扶手椅上，像丢了魂。老商人掏出眼镜擦拭时，她抬起头来，第一次用好奇的目光打量着他。她有点变腔，轻声对他说：“我

十分信任您。”

“我不是来分担您的罪行了吗？”这位老好人直率地回答道。

她浑身战栗。在这个小镇上，她第一次感到自己的灵魂与另一个灵魂相契合。老商人一下子就明白了伯爵夫人的沮丧与欢乐。她的儿子参加了格朗维勒远征，被捕，这封信是儿子在狱中写给她的。这封信给她带来的可能是喜讯，也可能是噩耗。儿子在信中说，对自己的越狱计划很有把握，这三天，他会乔装打扮回到家中。这封致命的信也预示着，如果他第三天晚上没有出现，等待伯爵夫人的将是撕心裂肺的永别。他恳请母亲给冒生命危险捎信的人一大笔钱。老商人拿着信的手不听使唤地颤抖。

“已经是第三天了！”戴伊夫人吼道，她迅速站起来，抢过信，焦急地在房间里走来走去。

“您之前太不小心了，”老商人说道，“为什么让女管家买那些食物？”

“他回来的时候可能饿得要死，累得要命，还有……”她说不下去了。

“我还是很了解我弟弟的，”老商人接过话来，“我这就去说服他站在您这边。”

在这个事情上，老商人重新找回了自己从前在生意场上的机敏，给戴伊夫人出了很谨慎又很有远见的主意。在商量妥当他们各自该说和该做的事情以后，老商人利用各种巧妙的理由，去走访卡朗唐所有的大人物，通知他们，尽管戴伊夫人身体抱恙，今晚还是会在家中接待他们。机智地与诺曼底人周旋，巧妙地回答了大家对伯爵夫人病情的询问，他成功瞒过了所有关心此神秘事件的人。他的初次走访可谓十分成功。他跟一个患痛风的老妇人说，戴伊夫人急性痛风发作，差点要了她的命。从前发生类似状况的时候，著名的特罗尚医生给她开过一个方子。在胸口上贴一张新鲜的兔皮，卧床静养。幸好及时用了这个神奇的偏方，这两天戴伊夫人才脱离生命危险。目前已经痊愈，今晚可以接待来访的客人。故事取得了惊人的效果。这位卡朗唐的医生是一位秘密保皇党人。他进一步解释了药方的原理，借助自己的声望加强了故事的影响力。尽管如此，种种猜疑已经深深扎根在一些顽固分子和理性主义者的心里，不可能一下完全消除。这天晚上，客人早早来到戴伊夫人家中，其中一些人来窥探她的脸色，另一些是出于友谊，大部分人都被她奇迹般的康复吸引而来。他们看见伯爵夫人坐在客厅的壁炉旁。戴伊夫人家的客厅和卡朗唐人家的装修一样简朴。为了不伤害来访客人的狭隘胸襟，她放弃了从前奢华的生活，房间还都是老样子，甚至接待室的地砖都没打磨。她还留着墙上灰暗的旧挂

毯，具有乡村特色的家具，点起了蜡烛。入乡随俗，在吝啬与拮据的生活面前，她没有退缩。但是她知道，她的客人会原谅她的奢华，如果是对他们有益的话。她从来不会忽略任何一个能够取悦客人的细节，比如给他们提供丰盛的晚餐。她甚至假装吝啬去迎合爱算计的人。她佯装在奢华面前做出让步，她懂得优雅地服从。所以，这天晚上七点左右，卡朗唐最优秀也是最糟糕的小集团就已经聚集在戴伊夫人家中，围坐在壁炉旁。在老商人同情、关切的目光的支持下，房间的女主人带着难以想象的勇气，应付着客人琐碎的问题、无聊愚蠢的争论。但是，每当有人敲门，或者听到路上有脚步回声时，她便会问一些关乎小镇利益的问题，以掩盖自己的不安。她引发了大家对苹果酒的热议，在老商人的积极应和下，大家似乎已经忘了去窥探她的神情，觉得她举止得体，落落大方。公诉人和其中一位革命法庭的法官则沉默不语，仔细观察着戴伊夫人面部表情的细微变化，尽管房间里十分嘈杂，他们还是静下心来仔细地听。他们多次提出了使她很尴尬的问题，但是，她都灵活应对了。这是母亲才有的勇气啊！戴伊夫人组织了牌局，大家分别围坐在牌桌前，玩波士顿、翻转棋、惠斯特牌。她自己依旧和几个年轻人攀谈，十分悠然自得，像极了老练的演员。戴伊夫人提议玩罗多游戏，假称只有自己知道游戏用具在哪儿，然后就消失了。

“亲爱的布丽吉特，我快要被闷死了。”她一边喊叫，一边擦着喷涌而出的泪水，泪光闪烁的双眸里充满了躁动、痛苦和焦虑。“他还没有来。”她接着说道，爬上楼梯，看了看卧室，“在这里，我呼吸和生存。再过几分钟，他就会来的，无论如何！因为他还活着，我确定他还活着。我的心这么对我说的。你什么也没听到吗，布丽吉特？老天爷，我愿意用我的余生作为交换，只为知道他在监狱中，还是正走在乡间的路上！我忍不住去想！”

她又一次检查房间是否布置妥当。壁炉里火烧得正旺。百叶窗关得严严实实。家具也擦得锃亮。从床铺的细节也可看出所有的东西都是她和布丽吉特一起准备的。她的期待体现在每一个精心的小细节，房间的花香里，飘荡着甜蜜的温柔和最纯洁的爱。只有母亲可以预知一个士兵的渴望，并完完全全地满足他。可口的菜肴，精心挑选的酒，鞋子，换洗衣物，总之，一个劳累的旅行者归家所需要的一切都准备好了，什么也不缺。一个母亲的爱尽现眼前。

“布丽吉特？”她用让人心碎的嗓音叫了她一声，她正把椅子挪到桌子前，仿佛她的梦想就要成真，又仿佛在加强自己的幻想。

“会的！夫人，他肯定会回来的。他肯定不远了。我保证他肯定活着，正在回来的路上。”布丽吉特回应道，“我在《圣经》里放了一把钥匙，珂丹读《约翰福音》的时候，我把钥匙捧在手上。夫人，您 知道吗？钥匙没有转动。”

“这可信吗？”伯爵夫人问道。

“当然了，夫人，很灵验的。我以我的灵魂得救向您担保，他还活着。上帝从不欺人。”

“尽管在这里等待他的是危险，我还是十分想见他。”

“可怜的奥古斯特先生，”布丽吉特哭喊道，“他肯定是靠双脚走回来的。”

“八点的钟已经敲响了！”伯爵夫人惊恐地叫道。

她担心自己在房间里待太久了，她本不应该来的。看着房间里的一切，她相信儿子还活着。她下了楼。在走进客厅之前，她在楼梯的廊柱旁停留了片刻，听听寂静的小城里是否有回声。她对守在门口的布丽吉特的丈夫笑了笑。他因为长时间集中精力听外面的动静，目光显得有些呆滞。她无论看什么，都能看见儿子的影子。她迅速回到客厅，假装一副很开心的样子，和小姑娘们一起玩罗多游戏。玩的过程中，她时不时说自己有点不舒服，就又回到了壁炉旁边的扶手椅上休息。这就是当时戴伊夫人家的活动情况和大家的精神状态。

与此同时，一个身着褐色卡马尼奥拉服的年轻人——那个年代十分典型的着装——正在从巴黎到瑟堡的路上，赶往卡朗唐。刚开始征兵的时候，没有什么规章制度。当时需求紧急，共和派没有时间给士兵提供装备，在路上碰到穿着平民便服的新兵，也不稀奇。这些年轻人，有人走在队伍的前面，有人拖在队伍的后面，他们前进的步伐主要取决于他们承受劳累的长途跋涉的方式。大家关心的“旅行者”，正走在向瑟堡进发的特遣部队前面。卡朗唐的镇长已经等了他们好几小时，想要给他们分发士兵借宿证。这位年轻人的脚步沉重又坚定，仿佛在宣示，他早已习惯了粗野的军旅生活。尽管皎洁的月光洒满卡朗唐周围丛生的杂草，他早已注意到云层积得很厚，仿佛要下雪了。害怕被暴风围困，他加快了脚步，顾不上劳累。他背上背着一个差不多空了的包，手里拿着黄杨手杖，是从高大的树篱上砍下来的，这种形状的灌木在下诺曼底地区十分常见。孤独的旅行者一走进卡朗唐，就看见沐浴在冷寂的月光中的楼塔。他的脚步声回荡在寂静无人的街上。他不得不向一个还在工作的纺织工打听镇长的住处。镇长家并不远，他很快就走到他家门廊下，申请了士兵借宿证，坐在石椅上等待。但是，他却被叫到镇长跟前，被从头到脚，仔细打量了一番。这个新兵风度翩翩，不像是一般人家的孩子，神情透露出贵族的气质，脸上的智慧也暗示着他曾经接受过良好的教育。

“你叫什么名字？”镇长一边问，一边向他投去耐人寻味的目光。

“于连·朱西厄。”新兵回答道。

“你从哪里来？”他接着问，嘴角露出一丝狐疑的微笑。

“巴黎。”

“你的战友应该离这里还有一段距离吧？”他操着诺曼底人嘲讽的口吻继续问道。

“我比大部队快十二公里。”

“一定有什么特殊的情感吸引你来到卡朗唐吧，新兵？”镇长狡猾地问道。“这样也好，”他摆手止住了将要开口讲话的年轻人，“我知道该把你送到哪里了。拿着，这是你的士兵借宿证明，走吧，公民朱西厄！”

镇长在说“公民”二字时，带着一股嘲讽的意味。借宿证上有戴伊夫人提前安排好的住处。年轻人好奇地看着地址。

“他知道他不用走太远。他出门后，要穿过广场！”年轻人离开时，镇长自己吼道，“他可真是胆大！愿上帝带领他！看来他早就想好了如何应对一切。但是，如果不是我，而是其他人要求看他的证件，他就完蛋了！”

就在这时，卡朗唐九点半的钟声响起。戴伊夫人家前厅的风灯点着了，家仆帮他们的女主人和男主人们穿好鞋子，披上外套或者斗篷。打牌的人算清账目。按照小城当地的风俗，大家一起离开。

“公诉人好像不想离开。”一位夫人说道。他们在广场上相互道别，准备各自归家时，她发现这位重要的人物不在。

事实上，这位可怕的公诉人正和伯爵夫人单独待在一起。她浑身颤抖，期待他赶紧离开。

“女公民，”在漫长、恐怖的沉寂后，他终于开了口，“我在这里是为了看看共和国的法律是如何执行的……”

戴伊夫人打了个寒战。

“您没有什么想对我说的吗？”他问道。

“没有。”她吃惊地答道。

“啊！夫人！”他一边喊一边坐在她旁边，换了另外一种口吻，继续说，“这个节骨眼上，说错一个字，你、我都有可能被送上断头台。我观察您的性格、您的精神状况、您的行为举止很久了，才不会被您今晚演的这出戏欺骗。您在等您的儿子，我确信无疑。”

伯爵夫人摆手否认。尽管她已经面色苍白，为了显示自己的坚

定，依旧紧绷着脸上的肌肉。她所有的举动都没有逃脱公诉人犀利的目光。

“那么，就接他回家吧，”这位革命的官员接着说道，“但是他最迟只能在家里待到明天早上七点。明天，天一亮，我就会带着一封起草好的告发信登门……”

她惊愕地看着他，神情足以使老虎心生怜悯。

他又用温柔的口气继续说：“我会用细致的搜查证实这封告发信是无稽之谈。有了我的报告，今后您就可以彻底摆脱大家的猜疑。我会高谈您的爱国情操，您的公民责任感，不会有任何闪失。”

戴伊夫人害怕这是一个陷阱，她一动不动，但是她的脸已经憋得通红，舌头也僵住了。突然传来了敲门声……

“天哪！”这个母亲惊恐地叫道，瘫在了地上，“救救他吧，救救他吧！”

“没有问题，我会救他的！”公诉人充满激情地答道，“就算搭上我们的性命，也要保全他。”

“我要死了！”她叫道。公诉人礼貌地扶她起来。

“夫人，”他摆出演说家的架势说，“我不想您有任何的亏欠，包括您自己。”

“夫人，他……”布丽吉特惊呼，她原本以为只有女主人一个人在家。

看见公诉人的瞬间，兴奋、开心的老仆人愣住了，吓得脸色苍白。

“谁来了，布丽吉特？”他温和、优雅地问道。

“一个新兵，镇长让他暂住这里。”仆人答道，顺手递出了士兵借宿证。

“的确，”公诉人看了证明之后说，“今天会有一个部队抵达卡朗唐！”

他离开了。

伯爵夫人此刻需要百分之百信任她的前任律师，容不得半点怀疑。尽管已经没有站立的力气，她还是迅速爬上楼。打开门，看见儿子，跌进他的怀里：“哦！我的孩子，我的孩子！”她抽泣着叫道，疯狂地亲吻他。

“夫人。”陌生人说道。

“天哪！这不是他！”她向后跌了几步，在新兵面前站定，用惊恐的目光盯着他。

“老天爷，怎么会长得如此相像！”布丽吉特惊叹道。

一瞬间，大家陷入了沉寂。年轻人看着戴伊夫人的神情紧张得发抖。

“先生，”她说，靠着布丽吉特的丈夫，痛苦侵袭了她全身，这第一次打击就足以要了她的命，“抱歉，我不能继续待在这里陪您了，如果您不介意的话，让我的家仆来服侍您。”

她被布丽吉特和她的丈夫扶下楼梯。

“怎么会这样，夫人？”老女仆一边安顿女主人，一边叫道，“这个男人竟然要睡在奥古斯特先生的床上，穿奥古斯特先生的拖鞋，吃我精心为奥古斯特先生准备的馅饼！我要是被推上断头台，我……”

“布丽吉特！”戴伊夫人吼道。

老仆人默不作声。

“闭嘴，你这个话痨，”她的丈夫小声说，“难道你想害死夫人吗？”

就在这时，新兵的房间里传出来一些动静，他准备吃饭了。

“我不能待在这里了，”戴伊夫人喊道，“我要去花房，在那里，夜间更方便听外面的声音。”

她在失去儿子的恐惧和重逢的希望之间挣扎。夜，一片可怕的死寂。当新兵大部队到达卡朗唐，每个人都找到自己的住处时，对于伯爵夫人来说，是可怕的时刻。每个脚步，每个动静都会激起她的希望，但紧跟而来的安静，又会让希望变成泡影。

清晨，伯爵夫人不得不回她自己的房间。布丽吉特留心主人的一举一动，看她没有出来，就走进房间，发现夫人已经死了。

“她肯定听见了新兵穿好衣服后，在奥古斯特先生的房间里走来走去，唱那首该死的《马赛曲》，像在马槽里一样，”布丽吉特哭喊道，“这足以要了她的命！”

导致伯爵夫人死亡的痛苦远比这个要沉重得多，很可能是可怕的幻象。戴伊夫人在卡朗唐逝世的那一刻，她的儿子在莫尔比昂被枪决了。我们可以将这出悲剧纳入所有超越法律空间，关乎同情的观察里。孤独的人们带着好奇收集的资料，有一天会成为一门新兴科学的基础，只是今天，这个天才还没有出现。

The Atheist's
Mass

The Atheist's Mass

A doctor to whom science owes a fine physiological theory and who, while still young, achieved a place amongst the celebrities of the Paris school of medicine (that centre of enlightenment to which all the doctors of Europe pay homage), Doctor Bianchon, practised surgery for a long time before devoting himself to medicine. His early studies were directed by one of the greatest of French surgeons, by the celebrated Desplein who passed through the world of science like a meteor. Even his enemies admit that he took with him to the grave a method that could not be handed on to others. Like all men of genius he had no heirs; he carried his skill within him and he carried it away with him. A surgeon's fame is like an actor's. It exists only so long as he is alive and his talent can no longer be appreciated once he has gone. Actors and surgeons, great singers too, and virtuoso musicians who by their playing increase tenfold the power of music, are all heroes of the moment. Desplein's life is a proof of the resemblance between the destinies of these transitory geniuses. His name which was so famous yesterday is almost forgotten today. It will remain only in his own field without going beyond it. But extraordinary conditions are surely necessary for the name of a scholar to pass from the domain of Science into the general history of humanity. Did Desplein have that width of knowledge which makes a man the mouthpiece or the representative of an age? Desplein possessed a god-like glance; he understood the patient and his disease by means of a natural or acquired intuition which allowed him to appreciate the diagnosis appropriate to the individual, to decide the precise moment, the hour, the minute at which he should operate, taking into account atmospheric conditions and temperamental peculiarities. To be able to collaborate with Nature in this way, had he then studied the endless combination of beings and elemental substances contained in the atmosphere or provided by the earth for man, who absorbs them and uses them for a particular purpose? Did he use that power of deduction and analogy to which Cuvier owes his genius? However that may be, this man understood the secrets of the flesh; he understood its past as well as its future, by studying the present. But did he contain all science in his person as did Hippocrates, Galen, Aristotle? Did he lead a whole school towards new worlds? No. If it is impossible to refuse to this constant observer of human chemistry the ancient science of Magism, that is to say, the knowledge of the elements in fusion, of the causes of life, of life before life, of what it will be, judging from its antecedents before it exists, all this unfortunately was personal to him. In his life he was isolated by egoism, and today that egoism is the death of his fame. Over his tomb there is no statue proclaiming to the future, in ringing tones, the mysteries which Genius seeks out at its own expense. But perhaps Desplein's talent was in keeping with his beliefs, and consequently mortal. For him the terrestrial atmosphere was like a generative bag; he saw the earth as if it were an egg in its shell, and unable to know whether the egg or the hen came first, he denied both the fowl and the egg. He believed neither in the animal anterior to man nor in the spirit beyond him. Desplein was not in doubt, he affirmed his opinion. He was like many other scholars in his frank, unmixed atheism. They are the best people in the world but incorrigible atheists, atheists such as religious people don't believe exist. It was hardly possible for such a man to hold a different opinion, for from his youth he was used to dissecting the living being par excellence, before, during and after life, and to examining all its functions without finding the unique soul that is indispensable to religious theories. Desplein recognized a cerebral centre, a nervous centre and a circulatory centre, of which the first two do duty for each other so well that at the end of his life he was convinced that the sense of hearing was not absolutely necessary to hear, nor the sense of sight absolutely necessary to see, and that the solar plexus could replace them without anyone noticing it. He thus found two souls in man and this fact confirmed his atheism, although it still tells us nothing about God. He died, they say, impenitent to the last, as unfortunately do many fine geniuses. May God forgive them!

This really great man's life exhibited many pettinesses, to use the expression of his enemies who in their jealousy wanted to diminish his fame, but it would be more appropriate to call them apparent contradictions. Envious or stupid people who do not know the reasons which explain the activities of superior minds immediately take advantage of a few superficial contradictions to make accusations on which they obtain a momentary judgement. If, later on, the plans which have been attacked are crowned with success, when the preparations are correlated with the results, some of the calumnies which were made beforehand remain. Thus, in our own time, Napoleon was condemned by our contemporaries when he spread out the wings of his eagle over England: but we needed the events of 1822 to explain 1804 and the flat-bottomed boats at Boulogne. [1]

Since Desplein's fame and scientific knowledge were unassailable, his enemies attacked his strange disposition and his character, while in fact he was simply what the English call eccentric. At times he dressed magnificently like the tragedian Crébillon, at times he seemed unusually indifferent to clothes. Sometimes he was to be seen in a carriage, sometimes on foot. He was now sharp-tempered, now kind, apparently hard and stingy, yet capable of offering his fortune to his exiled rulers who honoured him by accepting it for a few days. No man has inspired more contradictory judgements. Although, to obtain the Order of Saint Michael (which doctors are not supposed to solicit), he was capable of dropping a Book of Hours from his pocket at Court, you can be sure that inwardly he laughed at the whole thing. He had a profound contempt for mankind, having studied them from above and from below, having surprised them without pretence, as they performed the most solemn as well as the pettiest acts of life. A great man's gifts often hang together. If one of these giants has more talent than wit, his wit is still greater than that of a man of whom one says simply, 'He is witty.' All genius presupposes moral insight. This insight may be applied to some speciality, but he who sees the flower must see the sun. The doctor who heard a diplomat whose life he had saved ask, 'How is the Emperor?', and who replied, 'The courtier is coming back to life, the man will follow!' was not only a surgeon or a physician, he was also extremely witty. Thus the close and patient observer of humanity will justify Desplein's exorbitant pretensions and will realize, as he himself realized, that he was capable of being as great a minister as he was a surgeon.

Among the riddles which Desplein's life reveals to his contemporaries we have chosen one of the most interesting, because the solution will be found at the end of this tale and will answer some of the foolish accusations which have been made against him.

Of all the pupils whom Desplein had at his hospital, Horace Bianchon was one of those to whom he became most warmly attached. Before doing his internship at the Hôtel Dieu, [2] Horace Bianchon was a medical student, living in a miserable boarding-house in the Latin Quarter, known by the name of La Maison Vauquer. [3] There this poor young man experienced that desperate poverty which is a kind of melting-pot whence great talents emerge pure and incorruptible, just as diamonds can be subjected to any kind of shock without breaking. In the violence of their unleashed passions, they acquire the most unshakeable honesty, and by dint of the constant labour with which they have contained their balked appetites, they become used to the struggles which are the lot of genius. Horace was an upright young man, incapable of double-dealing in affairs of honour, going straight to the point without fuss, as capable of pawning his coat for his friends as of giving them his time and his night's rest. In short, Horace was one of those friends who are not worried about what they receive in exchange for what they give, certain as they are to receive in their turn more than they will give. Most of his friends had for him that inner respect which is inspired by unostentatious goodness, and several of them were afraid of his strictures. But Horace exercised these virtues without being prudish. He was neither a puritan nor a preacher; he swore quite readily when giving advice, and enjoyed a good meal in gay company when opportunity offered. He was good company, no more squeamish than a soldier, bluff and open, not like a sailor – for the sailor of today is a wily diplomatist – but like a fine young man who has nothing to hide in his life; he walked with his head high and his heart light. In a word, Horace was the Pylades of more than one Orestes, creditors being today the most real shape assumed by the ancient Furies. He wore his poverty with that gaiety which is perhaps one of the greatest elements of courage, and like all those who have nothing, he contracted few debts. Sober as a camel, brisk as a stag, he was unwavering both in his principles and in his behaviour. The happiness of Bianchon's life began on the day when the famous surgeon obtained evidence of the good qualities and failings which, the one as much as the other, made Doctor Horace Bianchon doubly precious to his friends. When a clinical chief adopts a young man, that young man has, as they say, his foot in the stirrup. Desplein always took Bianchon with him to act as his assistant in well- to- do homes, where some reward would nearly always find its way into the student's purse, and where little by little the mysteries of Parisian life were revealed to the young provincial. Desplein also kept him in his surgery during consultations and gave him work to do there. Sometimes he would send him to accompany a rich patient to a spa. In short, he was making a practice for him. The result of all this was that after a time the lord of surgery had a devoted slave. These two men, the one at the height of his fame and leader of his profession, enjoying an immense fortune and an immense reputation, the other, a modest Omega, having neither fortune nor fame, became intimate friends. The great Desplein told his assistant everything. He knew if a certain lady had sat down on a chair beside the master, or on the famous surgery couch where Desplein slept. Bianchon knew the mysteries of that temperament, both lion- like and bull- like, which in the end expanded and abnormally developed the great man's chest and caused his death from enlargement of the heart. The student studied the eccentricities of Desplein's very busy life, the plans made by his sordid avarice, the hopes of the politician concealed behind the scientist; he foresaw the disappointments in store for the only feeling hidden in that heart which was hardened rather than hard.

One day Bianchon told Desplein that a poor watercarrier from the Saint- Jacques quarter had a horrible illness caused by fatigue and poverty; this poor Auvergnat had eaten only potatoes during the severe winter of 1821. Desplein left all his patients. At the risk of working his horse to death, he rode as fast as he could, followed by Bianchon, to the poor man's house and himself had him carried to the nursing- home founded by the famous Dubois in the Faubourg Saint- Denis. Desplein attended the man, and when he had cured him, gave him the money to buy a horse and a water-cart. This Auvergnat was remarkable for one original characteristic. One of his friends fell ill; he took him straight away to Desplein and said to his benefactor, 'I would not have allowed him to go to another doctor.' Surly as he was, Desplein grasped the water-carrier's hand and said, 'Bring them all to me.' And he had the peasant from the Cantal admitted to the Hôtel Dieu, where he took the greatest care of him. Bianchon had already noticed several times that his chief had a predilection for Auvergnats, and especially for water- carriers. But as Desplein had a kind of pride in his treatments at the Hôtel Dieu, his pupil didn't see anything very strange in that.

One day, as Bianchon was crossing the Place Saint- Sulpice, he noticed his master going into the church about nine o'clock in the morning. Desplein, who at that period of his life never moved a step except by carriage, was on foot and slipping in by the door of the Rue du Petit- Lion, as if he had been going into a house of doubtful reputation. Bianchon's curiosity was naturally aroused, since he knew his master's opinions and that he was a 'devyl' of a Cabanist [4] (devyl with a y, which in Rabelais seems to suggest a superiority in devilry). Slipping into Saint- Sulpice, he was not a little astonished to see the great Desplein, that atheist without pity for the angels, who cannot be subjected to the surgeon's knife, who cannot have sinus or gastric trouble, that dauntless scoffer, kneeling humbly, and where? . . . in the chapel of the Virgin, where he listened to a Mass, paid for the cost of the service, gave alms for the poor, all as solemnly as if he had been performing an operation.

'He certainly didn't come to clear up questions about the Virgin birth,' said Bianchon in boundless astonishment. 'If I had seen him holding one of the tassels of the canopy on Corpus Christi day, I would have taken it as a joke; but at this hour, alone, with no one to see him, that certainly gives one food for thought!'

Bianchon did not want to look as if he was spying on the chief surgeon of the Hôtel Dieu and he went away. By chance Desplein invited him to dinner that very day, not at home but at a restaurant.

Between the fruit and the cheese, Bianchon managed skilfully to bring the conversation round to the subject of the Mass, calling it a masquerade and a farce.

'A farce,' said Desplein, 'which has cost Christendom more blood than all Napoleon's battles and all Broussais'leeches! The Mass is a papal invention which goes no further back than the sixth century and which is based on Hoc est corpus . What torrents of blood had to be spilt to establish Corpus Christi day! By the institution of this Feast the court of Rome intended to proclaim its victory in the matter of the Real Presence, a schism which troubled the Church for three centuries. The wars of the Counts of Toulouse and the Albigenians are the tail- end of this affair. The Vaudois and the Albigenians [5] refused to recognize this innovation.'

In short Desplein enjoyed himself, giving free rein to his atheistic wit, and pouring out a flood of Voltairean jokes, or, to be more precise, a horrible parody of the Citateur . [6]

'Well,' Bianchon said to himself, 'where is the pious man I saw this morning?'

He said nothing; he had doubts whether he really had seen his chief at Saint- Sulpice. Desplein would not have bothered to lie to Bianchon. They both knew each other too well; they had already exchanged ideas on subjects which were just as serious, and they had discussed systems de natura rerum , probing or dissecting them with the knives and the scalpel of incredulity. Three months went by. Bianchon did not follow up the incident, although it remained stamped on his memory. One day in the course of that year, one of the doctors at the Hôtel Dieu took Desplein by the arm, in Bianchon's presence, as if to ask him a question.

'What were you going to do at Saint- Sulpice, my dear chief?' he asked.

'I went to see a priest who had a diseased knee. Madame la Duchesse d'Angoulême did me the honour of recommending me,' said Desplein.

The doctor was satisfied with this excuse, but not so Bianchon.

'Oh! So he goes to see bad knees in church! He was going to hear Mass,' the student said to himself.

Bianchon determined to keep a watch on Desplein. He recalled the day and the time on which he had surprised him going in to Saint- Sulpice and he determined to go there the following year on the same day and at the same time, to find out if he would surprise him there again. If that happened, the regularity of his worship would justify a scientific investigation, for in such a man there should not be a direct contradiction between thought and deed. The following year, on the day and at the hour in question, Bianchon, who was by this time no longer Desplein's assistant, saw the surgeon's carriage stop at the corner of the Rue de Tournon and the Rue du Petit- Lion. From there his friend crept stealthily along by the walls of Saint- Sulpice where he again heard Mass at the altar of the Virgin. It was certainly Desplein, the chief surgeon, the atheist in petto , the pious man on occasion. The plot became more involved. The famous scientist's persistence complicated everything. When Desplein had left the church, Bianchon went up to the sacristan who came to minister to the chapel, and asked him if the gentleman was a regular attendant.

'I have been here for twenty years,' said the sacristan, 'and for all that time Monsieur Desplein has been coming four times a year to hear this Mass; it was he who founded it.'

'He founded it!' said Bianchon as he walked away. 'This is as much a mystery as the Immaculate Conception, which of itself must make a doctor an unbeliever.'

Although Dr Bianchon was a friend of Desplein's, some time went by before he was in a position to speak to him about this strange circumstance of his life. If they met at a consultation or in society, it was difficult to find that moment of confidence and solitude when, with feet up on the fire-dogs and heads leaning against the backs of their chairs, two men tell each other their secrets. Finally, seven years later, after the 1830 Revolution, when the people stormed the Archbishopric, when, inspired by Republican sentiments, they destroyed the golden crosses which appeared, like flashes of lightning, in this vast sea of houses, when Disbelief and Violence swaggered together through the streets, Bianchon surprised Desplein going into Saint-Sulpice. The doctor followed him in and took a place near him without his friend making the least sign or showing the least surprise. Both of them heard the foundation Mass.

'Will you tell me, my friend,' Bianchon said to Desplein when they were outside the church, 'the reason for this display of piety? I have already caught you three times going to Mass, you! You must tell me the reason for this mysterious activity, and explain to me the flagrant discrepancy between your opinions and your behaviour. You don't believe in God, yet you go to Mass! My dear chief, you must answer me.'

'I am like many pious men, men who appear to be profoundly religious but are quite as atheistic as we are, you and I.'

And he let forth a torrent of epigrams about political personalities of whom the best known provides us in this century with a new edition of Molière's Tartuffe.

'That's not what I am talking about,' said Bianchon. 'I want to know the reason for what you have just been doing here. Why did you found this Mass?'

'Well, my dear friend,' said Desplein, 'since I am on the brink of the grave, there is no reason why I shouldn't speak to you about the beginning of my life.'

At this moment Bianchon and the great man happened to be in the Rue des Quatre- Vents, one of the most horrible streets in Paris. Desplein pointed to the sixth storey of one of those houses which are shaped like an obelisk and have a medium- sized door opening on to a passage. At the end of the passage is a spiral staircase lit by apertures called jours de souffrance . The house was a greenish colour; on the ground floor lived a furniture dealer; a different kind of poverty seemed to lodge on each floor. Raising his arm with an emphatic gesture, Desplein said to Bianchon, 'I lived up there for two years.'

'I know the place; d'Arthez lived there and I came here almost every day in my youth. At that time we called it the "jar of great men"! Well, what of it?'

'The Mass that I have just heard is linked to events which took place at the time when I lived in the attic where, so you tell me, d'Arthez lived. It is the one where a line of washing is dangling at the window above a pot of flowers. I had such a difficult time to start with, my dear Bianchon, that I can dispute the palm of the sufferings of Paris with anyone. I have put up with everything, hunger, thirst, lack of money, lack of clothes, of footwear, of linen, everything that is hardest about poverty. I have blown on my numbed fingers in that "jar of great men" which I should like to visit again with you. I worked during one winter, when I could see my own head steaming and a cloud of my own breath rising like horses'breath on a frosty day. I don't know what enables a man to stand up to such a life. I was alone, without help, without a farthing either to buy books or to pay the expenses of my medical education. I had no friends and my irritable, sensitive, restless temperament did me no good. No one could see that my bad temper was caused by the difficulties and the work of a man who, from his position at the bottom of the social ladder, was striving to reach the top. But I can tell you, you to whom I don't need to pretend, that I had that basis of good feeling and keen sensitivity which will always be the prerogative of men who, after having been stuck for a long time in the slough of poverty, are strong enough to climb to any kind of summit. I could get nothing from my family or my home beyond the inadequate allowance they made me. In short, at this period of my life, all I had to eat in the mornings was a roll which the baker in the Rue du Petit- Lion sold me more cheaply because it was yesterday's, or the day before yesterday's. I crumbled it up into some milk and so my morning meal cost me only two sous. I dined only every other day at a boarding- house where dinner cost sixteen sous. In this way I spent only nine sous a day. You know as well as I do the care I had to take of my clothes and my footwear. I don't think, later on in life, we are as much distressed by a colleague's disloyalty as you and I were when we saw the mocking grin of a shoe that was becoming unsewn, or heard the armhole of a frock-coat split. I drank only water; I had the greatest respect for cafés. Zoppi's seemed to me like a promised land which the Luculli of the Latin Quarter alone had the right to patronize. Sometimes I wondered whether I would ever be able to have a cup of white coffee there, or play a game of dominoes. In short, I transferred to my work the fury which poverty inspired in me. I tried to master scientific knowledge so that I should have an immense personal worth deserving of the place I would reach when I emerged from my obscurity. I consumed more oil than bread; the light which lit up those stubborn vigils cost me more than my food. The struggle was long, hard and unrelieved. I aroused no feelings of friendship in those around me. To make friends, you must mix with young people, have a few sous so that you can go and have a drink with them, go with them everywhere where students go. I had nothing. And no one in Paris realizes that "nothing" is "nothing". When there was any question of revealing my poverty I experienced that nervous contraction of the throat which makes our patients think that a ball is rising up from the gullet into the larynx. Later on I met people who, born rich and never having lacked for anything, don't know the problem of this rule of three: "A young man is to crime as a hundred sous piece is to X." These gilded fools say to me, "Why did you get into debt? Why did you take on such crushing obligations?" They remind me of the princess who, knowing that the people were dying of hunger, asked, "Why don't they buy cake?" I should very much like to see one of those rich people, who complains that I charge too much for operating on him, alone in Paris, without a penny, without a friend, without credit and forced to work with his two hands to live. What would he do? Where would he satisfy his hunger? Bianchon, if at times you have seen me bitter and hard, it was because I was superimposing my early sufferings on the lack of feeling, the selfishness, of which I had thousands of examples in high places; or I was thinking of the obstacles which hatred, envy, jealousy, and calumny have placed between me and success. In Paris, when certain people see you ready to put your foot in the stirrup, some of them pull you back by the coat- tail, others loosen the buckle of the saddle- girth so that you'll fall and break your head; this one takes the shoes of your horse, that one steals your whip. The least treacherous is the one you see coming up to shoot you at point- blank range. You have enough talent, my dear fellow, soon to be acquainted with the horrible, unending battle which mediocrity wages against superiority. If one evening you lose twenty- five louis, the next day you will be accused of being a gambler and your best friends will say that the day before you lost twenty- five thousand francs. If you have a headache, you will be called a lunatic. If you have one outburst of temper, they will say you are a social misfit. If, in order to resist this army of pygmies, you muster your superior forces, your best friends will cry out that you want to eat up everything, that you claim to have the right to dominate and lord it over others. In short, your good qualities will become failings, your failings will become vices, and your virtues will be crimes. If you have saved a man, they'll say you have killed him; if your patient is in circulation again, they will affirm that you have sacrificed the future to the present; if he is not dead, he will die. Hesitate, and you will be lost! Invent anything at all, claim your just due, you will be regarded as a sly character, difficult to deal with, who is standing in the way of the young men. So, my dear fellow, if I don't believe in God, I believe still less in man. You recognize in me a Desplein very different from the Desplein everyone speaks ill of, don't you? But let's not rummage in this muck heap. Well, I used to live in this house; I was busy working to pass my first examination and I hadn't a sou. I had reached one of those extreme situations where, you know, a man says to himself, "I shall join the army." I had one last hope. I was expecting from home a trunk full of linen, a present from old aunts of the kind who, knowing nothing of Paris, think of your shirts and imagine that with thirty francs a month their nephew lives on caviar. The trunk arrived while I was at the school; the carriage cost forty francs. The porter, a German cobbler who lived in a garret, had paid the money and was keeping the trunk. I went for a walk in the Rue des Fossés- Saint-Germain- des- Prés and in the Rue de l' Ecole- de- Médecine, but I could not think up a plan which would deliver my trunk to me without my having to pay the forty francs; naturally I would have paid them after I had sold the linen. My stupidity made me realize that I was gifted for nothing but surgery. My dear fellow, sensitive souls whose gifts are deployed in a lofty sphere are lacking in that spirit of intrigue which is so resourceful in contriving schemes. Their genius lies in chance; they don't seek for things, they come on them by chance. Well, I returned at nightfall at the same time that my neighbour, a water- carrier named Bourgeat, a man from Saint- Flour, was going home. We knew each other in the way two tenants do who have rooms on the same landing, and who hear each other sleeping, coughing, and dressing, till in the end they get used to one another. My neighbour informed me that the landlord, to whom I owed three quarters' rent, had turned me out; I would have to clear out the next day. He himself had been given notice because of his calling. I spent the most unhappy night of my life. Where would I find a carrier to remove my poor household affairs and my books? How would I be able to pay the carrier and the porter? Where was I to go? I kept on asking myself these unanswerable questions through my tears, like a madman repeating a refrain. I fell asleep. Poverty has in its favour an exquisite sleep filled with beautiful dreams. The next morning, just as I was eating my bowlful of crumbled bread and milk, Bourgeat came in and said in his bad French, "Monchieur l'étudiant , I'm a poor man, a foundling from the Chain- Flour hospital. I've no father or mother and I'm not rich enough to get married. You haven't many relations either, or much in the way of hard cash. Now listen. I've got a hand- cart downstairs which I've hired for two chous an hour. It'll take all our things. If you're willing, we'll look for digs together since we're turned out of here. After all, this place isn't an earthly paradise."

“ I know that alright, Bourgeat, my good fellow,” I replied. “But I'm in rather a jam. Downstairs I have a trunk containing linen worth a hundred crowns. With that I could pay the landlord and what I owe the porter, but I haven't got a hundred sous."

"That doesn't matter, I've got some cash," Bourgeat replied cheerfully, showing me a filthy old leather purse. "Keep your linen."

'Bourgeat paid my three quarters' rent and his own and settled with the porter. Then he put our furniture and my linen on to his cart and dragged it through the streets, stopping in front of every house which had a "to let" sign hanging out. My job was to go up and see if the place to let would suit us. At midday we were still wandering about the Latin Quarter without having found anything. The price was a great difficulty. Bourgeat suggested that we should have lunch at a wine-shop; we left our cart at the door. Towards evening, I discovered in the Cour de Rohan, Passage du Commerce, two rooms, separated by the stair in the attic at the top of a house. The rent was sixty francs a year each. We were housed at last, my humble friend and I. We had dinner together. Bourgeat, who earned about fifty sous a day, had about a hundred crowns. He was soon going to be able to realize his ambition and buy a water-cart and a horse. When he learned about my situation (for he dragged my secrets out of me with a deep cunning and a good nature the memory of which still touches my heart), he gave up for some time his whole life's ambition. Bourgeat had been a street-merchant for twenty-two years; he sacrificed his hundred crowns to my future.'

Desplein gripped Bianchon's arm with emotion.

'He gave me the money I needed for my exams. My friend, that man realized that I had a mission, that the needs of my intelligence were more important than his own. He took care of me; he called me his child and lent me the money I needed to buy books. Sometimes he would come in very quietly to watch me working. Last but not least, he took care, as a mother might have done, to see that instead of the bad and insufficient food which I had been forced to put up with, I had a healthy and plentiful diet. Bourgeat, who was a man of about forty, had the face of a medieval burgess, a dome-like forehead and a head that a painter might have used as a model for Lysippus. The poor man's heart was filled with affections which had no outlet. The only creature that had ever loved him was a poodle which had died a short time before. He talked to me continually about it and asked me if I thought that the Church would be willing to say Masses for the repose of its soul. His dog was, so he said, a true Christian and it had gone to church with him for twelve years, without ever barking there. It had listened to the organ without opening its mouth and squatted beside him with a look that made him think it was praying with him. This man transferred all his affections to me; he accepted me as a lonely and unhappy creature. He became for me the most attentive of mothers, the most tactful of benefactors, in short, the ideal of that virtue which delights in its own work. Whenever I met him in the street, he would glance at me with an understanding look filled with remarkable nobility; then he would pretend to walk as if he was carrying nothing. He seemed happy to see me in good health and well-dressed. In short, it was the devotion of a man of the people, the love of a working-girl transferred to a higher sphere. Bourgeat did my errands; he woke me up at night at the hours I asked him to. He cleaned my lamp and polished our landing. He was as good a servant as he was a father, and tidy as an English girl. He did the housework. Like Philopoemen he used to saw up our wood, doing everything with simplicity and dignity, for he seemed to realize that his objective added nobility to everything he did. When I left this good man to do my residence at the Hôtel Dieu, he felt an indescribable grief at the thought that he could no longer live with me. But he consoled himself with the prospect of saving up the money needed for the expenses of my thesis, and made me promise to come and see him on my days off. Bourgeat was proud of me; he loved me both for my sake and for his own. If you look up my thesis you will see that it was dedicated to him. During the last year of my internship, I had earned enough money to pay back everything I owed to this admirable Auvergnat, by buying him a horse and a water-cart. He was furious when he knew that I had been depriving myself of my money, and nevertheless he was delighted to see his wishes realized. He both laughed and scolded me. He looked at his cart and his horse, wiping a tear from his eyes as he said, "That's bad! Oh, what a splendid cart! You shouldn't have done it. The horse is as strong as an Auvergnat." I have never seen anything more moving than this scene. Bourgeat absolutely insisted on buying me that case of instruments mounted in silver which you have seen in my study, and which is for me the most valuable thing I have there. Although he was thrilled by my first successes, he never let slip the least word or gesture which implied, "That man's success is due to me." And yet, without him, poverty would have killed me. The poor man had dug his own grave to help me. He had eaten nothing but bread rubbed with garlic, so that I could have coffee to help me work at night. He fell ill. As you can imagine, I spent the nights at his bedside. I pulled him through the first time, but he had a relapse two years later, and in spite of the most constant care, in spite of the greatest efforts of medical science, his end had come. No king was ever as well cared for as he was. Yes, Bianchon, to snatch that life from death I made supreme efforts. I wanted to make him live long enough for me to show him the results of his work and realize all his hopes for me; I wanted to satisfy the only gratitude which has ever filled my heart and put out a fire which still burns me today.'

After a pause, Desplein, visibly moved, resumed his tale. 'Bourgeat, my second father, died in my arms leaving me everything he possessed in a will which he had had made by a public letter-writer and dated the year when we went to live in the Cour de Rohan. This man had the simple faith of a charcoal-burner. He loved the Blessed Virgin as he would have loved his wife. Although he was an ardent Catholic, he had never said a word to me about my lack of religion. When his life was in danger, he begged me to do everything possible to enable him to have the help of the Church. I had Mass said for him every day. Often, during the night, he would express fears for his future; he was afraid that he had not lived a sufficiently holy life. Poor man! He worked from morning to night. To whom then would Paradise belong – if there is a Paradise? He received the last rites like the saint he was and his death was worthy of his life. I was the only person to attend his funeral. When I had buried my only benefactor, I tried to think of a way of paying my debt to him. I realized that he had neither family nor friends, wife nor children. But he was a believer, he had a religious conviction. Had I any right to dispute it? He had spoken to me shyly about Masses said for the repose of the dead. He didn't want to impose this duty upon me, thinking that it would be like asking payment for his services. As soon as I could establish an endowment fund, I gave Saint-Sulpice the necessary amount to have four Masses said there a year. As the only thing I can give to Bourgeat is the satisfaction of his religious wishes, the day when this Mass is said at the beginning of each season, I say with the good faith of a doubter, "Oh God, if there is a sphere where, after their death, you place all those who have been perfect, think of good Bourgeat. And if there is anything for him to suffer, give me his sufferings so that he may enter more quickly into what is called Paradise.”That, my dear fellow, is the most that a man with my opinions can allow himself. God must be a decent chap; he couldn’t hold it against me. I swear to you, I would give my fortune to be a believer like Bourgeat.’

Bianchon, who looked after Desplein in his last illness, dares not affirm nowadays that the distinguished surgeon died an atheist. Believers will like to think that the humble Auvergnat will have opened the gate of heaven for him as, earlier, he had opened for him the gate of that earthly temple on whose doorway is written Aux grands hommes la patrie reconnaissante . Histoire Intellectuelle de Louis Lambert .

One evening in the month of November 1793, the most important people in Carentan were gathered together in the drawing- room of Madame de Dey, who received company every day. Certain circumstances, which would not have attracted attention in a large town but which were bound to arouse curiosity in a small one, gave an unwonted interest to this everyday gathering. Two days earlier, Madame de Dey had closed her doors to visitors, and she had not received any the previous day either, pretending that she was unwell. In normal times these two events would have had the same effect in Carentan as the closing of the theatres has in Paris. On such days existence is, in a way, incomplete. But in 1793 Madame de Dey's behaviour could have the most disastrous consequences. At that time if an aristocrat risked the least step, he was nearly always involved in a matter of life and death. To understand properly the eager curiosity and the narrow- minded cunning which, during that evening, were expressed on the faces of all these Norman worthies, but above all to appreciate the secret worries of Madame de Dey, the part she played at Carentan must be explained. As the critical position in which she was placed at that time was, no doubt, that of many people during the Revolution, the sympathies of more than one reader will give an emotional background to this narrative.

Madame de Dey, the widow of a lieutenant- general, a chevalier of several orders, had left the Court at the beginning of the emigration. As she owned a considerable amount of property in the Carentan region, she had taken refuge there, hoping that the influence of the Terror would be little felt in those parts. This calculation, founded on an accurate knowledge of the region, was correct. The Revolution wrought little havoc in Lower Normandy. Although, in the past, when Madame de Dey visited her property in Normandy, she associated only with the noble families of the district, she now made a policy of opening her doors to the principal townspeople and to the new authorities, trying to make them proud of having won her over, without arousing either their hatred or their jealousy. She was charming and kind, and gifted with that indescribable gentleness which enabled her to please without having to lower herself or ask favours. She had succeeded in winning general esteem thanks to her perfect tact which enabled her to keep wisely to a narrow path, satisfying the demands of that mixed society without humiliating the touchy amour propre of the parvenus, or upsetting the sensibilities of her old friends.

She was about thirty- eight years old, and she still retained, not the fresh, rounded good looks which distinguish the girls of Lower Normandy, but a slender, as it were aristocratic, type of beauty. Her features were neat and delicate; her figure was graceful and slender. When she spoke, her pale face seemed to light up and come to life. Her large black eyes were full of friendliness, but their calm, religious expression seemed to show that the mainspring of her existence was no longer within herself. In the prime of her youth she had been married to a jealous old soldier, and her false position at a flirtatious court no doubt helped to spread a veil of serious melancholy over a face which must once have shone with the charms and vivacity of love. Since, at an age when a woman still feels rather than reflects, she had always had to repress her instinctive feminine feelings and emotions, passion had remained unawakened in the depths of her heart. And so her principal attraction stemmed from this inner youthfulness which was, at times, revealed in her face and which gave her thoughts an expression of innocent desire. Her appearance commanded respect, but in her bearing and in her voice there was always the expectancy of an unknown future as with a young girl. Soon after meeting her the least susceptible of men would find himself in love with her and yet retain a kind of respectful fear of her, inspired by her courteous, dignified manner. Her soul, naturally great but strengthened by cruel struggles, seemed far removed from ordinary humanity, and men recognized their inferiority. This soul needed a dominating passion. Madame de Dey's affections were thus concentrated in one single feeling, that of maternity. The happiness and the satisfactions of which she had been deprived as a wife, she found instead in the intense love she had for her son. She loved him not only with the pure and profound devotion of a mother, but with the coquetry of a mistress and the jealousy of a wife. She was unhappy when he was away, and, anxious during his absence, she could never see enough of him and lived only through and for him. To make the reader appreciate the strength of this feeling, it will suffice to add that this son was not only Madame de Dey's only child, but also her last surviving relative, the one being on whom she could fasten the fears, the hopes and the joys of her life. The late Comte de Dey was the last of his family and she was the sole heiress of hers. Material motives and interests thus combined with the noblest needs of the soul to intensify in the countess's heart a feeling which is already so strong in women. It was only by taking the greatest of care that she had managed to bring up her son and this had made him even more dear to her. Twenty times the doctors told her she would lose him, but confident in her own hopes and instincts, she had the inexpressible joy of seeing him safely overcome the perils of childhood, and of marvelling at the improvement in his health, in spite of the doctors' verdict.

Due to her constant care, this son had grown up and developed into such a charming young man that at the age of twenty he was regarded as one of the most accomplished young courtiers at Versailles. Above all, thanks to a good fortune which does not crown the efforts of every mother, she was adored by her son; they understood each other in fraternal sympathy. If they had not already been linked by the ties of nature, they would instinctively have felt for each other that mutual friendship which one meets so rarely in life. At the age of eighteen the young count had been appointed a sub-lieutenant of dragoons and in obedience to the code of honour of the period he had followed the princes when they emigrated.

Madame de Dey, noble, rich and the mother of an émigré, thus could not conceal from herself the dangers of her cruel situation. As her only wish was to preserve her large fortune for her son, she had denied herself the happiness of going with him, and when she read the strict laws under which the Republic was confiscating every day the property of émigrés at Carentan, she congratulated herself on this act of courage. Was she not watching over her son's wealth at the risk of her life? Then, when she heard of the terrible executions decreed by the Convention, she slept peacefully in the knowledge that her only treasure was in safety, far from the danger of the scaffold. She was happy in the belief that she had done what was best to save both her son and her fortune. To this private thought she made the concessions demanded by those unhappy times, without compromising her feminine dignity or her aristocratic convictions, but hiding her sorrows with a cold secrecy. She had understood the difficulties which awaited her at Carentan. To come there and occupy the first place, wasn't that a way of defying the scaffold every day? But, supported by the courage of a mother, she knew how to win the affection of the poor by relieving all kinds of distress without distinction, and made herself indispensable to the rich by ministering to their pleasures. She entertained at her house the procureur ^[1] of the commune, the mayor, the president of the district, the public prosecutor and even the judges of the revolutionary tribunal. The first four of these were unmarried and so they courted her, hoping to marry her either by making her afraid of the harm they could do her or by offering her their protection. The public prosecutor, who had been procureur at Caen and used to look after the countess's business interests, tried to make her love him, by behaving with devotion and generosity – a dangerous form of cunning! He was the most formidable of all the suitors. As she had formerly been a client of his, he was the only one who had an intimate knowledge of the state of her considerable fortune. His passion was reinforced by all the desires of avarice and supported by an immense power, the power of life and death throughout the district. This man, who was still young, behaved with such an appearance of magnanimity that Madame de Dey had not yet been able to form an opinion of him. But, despising the danger which lay in vying in cunning with Normans, she made use of the inventive craftiness with which Nature has endowed women to play off these rivals against each other. By gaining time, she hoped to survive safe and sound to the end of the revolutionary troubles. At that period, the royalists who had stayed in France deluded themselves each day that the next day would see the end of the Revolution, and this conviction caused the ruin of many of them.

In spite of these difficulties, the countess had very skilfully maintained her independence until the day on which, with unaccountable imprudence, she took it into her head to close her door. The interest she aroused was so deep and genuine that the people who had come to her house that evening became extremely anxious when they learned that it was impossible for her to receive them. Then, with that frank curiosity which is engrained in provincial manners, they made inquiries about the misfortune, the sorrow, or the illness which Madame de Dey must be suffering from. An old servant named Brigitte answered these questions saying that her mistress had shut herself up in her room and wouldn't see anyone, not even the members of her own household. The almost cloister-like existence led by the inhabitants of a small town forms in them the habit of analysing and explaining the actions of others. This habit is naturally so invincible that after pitying Madame de Dey, and without knowing whether she was really happy or sad, everyone began to look for the causes of her sudden retreat.

'If she were ill,' said the first inquirer, 'she would have sent for the doctor. But the doctor spent the whole day at my house playing chess. He said to me jokingly that nowadays there is only one illness . . . and that unfortunately it is incurable.'

This jest was made with caution. Men and women, old men and girls then began to range over the vast field of conjectures. Each one thought he spied a secret, and this secret filled all their imaginations. The next day their suspicions had grown nastier. As life is lived in public in a small town, the women were the first to find out that Brigitte had bought more provisions than usual at the market. This fact could not be denied. Brigitte had been seen first thing in the morning in the market-square and –strange to relate – she had bought the only hare available. The whole town knew that Madame de Dey did not like game. The hare became a starting point for endless conjectures. As they took their daily walk, the old men noticed in the countess's house a kind of concentrated activity which was revealed by the very precautions taken by the servants to conceal it. The valet was beating a carpet in the garden. The previous day no one would have paid any attention to it, but this carpet became a piece of evidence in support of the fanciful tales which everyone was inventing. Each person had his own. The second day, when they heard that Madame de Dey said she was unwell, the leading inhabitants of Carentan gathered together in the evening at the mayor's brother's house. He was a retired merchant, married, honourable, generally respected, and the countess had a high regard for him. That evening all the suitors for the hand of the rich widow had a more or less probable tale to tell, and each one of them considered how to turn to his own profit the secret event which forced her to place herself in this compromising position. The public prosecutor imagined a whole drama in which Madame de Dey's son would be brought to her house at night. The mayor thought that a non-juring priest had arrived from La Vendée and sought asylum with her. [2] But the purchase of a hare on a Friday couldn't be explained by this story. The president of the district was convinced that she was hiding a chouan [3] or a Vendéen leader who was being hotly pursued. Others thought it was a noble who had escaped from the Paris prisons. In short, everyone suspected the countess of being guilty of one of those acts of generosity which the laws of that period called a crime and which could lead to the scaffold. The public prosecutor, however, whispered that they must be silent and try to save the unfortunate woman from the abyss towards which she was hastening.

'If you make this affair known,' he added, 'I shall be obliged to intervene, to search her house, and then! . . .' He said no more but everyone understood what he meant.

The countess's real friends were so alarmed for her that, on the morning of the third day, the procureur- syndic [4] of the commune got his wife to write her a note urging her to receive company that evening as usual. Bolder still, the retired merchant called at Madame de Dey's house during the morning. Very conscious of the service which he wanted to render her, he insisted on being allowed in to see her, and was amazed when he caught sight of her in the garden, busy cutting the last flowers from her borders to fill her vases.

'She must have given refuge to her lover,' the old man said to himself, as he was overcome with pity for this charming woman. The strange expression of the countess's face confirmed his suspicions. The merchant was deeply moved by this devotion which is so natural to women, but which men always find touching because they are all flattered by the sacrifices which a woman makes for a man; he told the countess about the rumours which were all over the town, and of the danger in which she was placed.

‘For,’ he said in conclusion, ‘though some of our officials may be willing to forgive you for acting heroically to save a priest, nobody will pity you if they find out you are sacrificing yourself for the sake of a love affair.’

At these words, Madame de Dey looked at the old man with a distraught and crazy expression which made him shudder, despite his age.

‘Come with me,’ she said taking him by the hand and leading him into her room where, having first made sure that they were alone, she took a dirty crumpled letter from the bodice of her dress. ‘Read that,’ she cried pronouncing the words with great effort.

She collapsed into her chair, as if she were overcome. While the old merchant was looking for his glasses and cleaning them, she looked up at him, examined him for the first time with interest and said gently in a faltering voice, ‘I can trust you.’

‘Have I not come to share in your crime?’ replied the worthy man simply.

She gave a start. For the first time in this little town, her soul felt sympathy with another’s. The merchant understood at once both the dejection and the joy of the countess. Her son had taken part in the Granville expedition; [5] his letter to his mother was written from the depths of his prison, giving her one sad, yet joyful hope. He had no doubts about his means of escape, and he mentioned three days in the course of which he would come to her house, in disguise. The fatal letter contained heart- rending farewells in case he would not be at Carentan by the evening of the third day, and he begged his mother to give a fairly large sum of money to the messenger who, braving countless dangers, had undertaken to bring her this letter. The paper shook in the old man’s hands.

‘And this is the third day,’ cried Madame de Dey as she got up quickly, took back the letter, and paced up and down the room.

‘You have acted rashly,’ said the merchant. ‘Why did you have food bought in?’

‘But he might arrive, dying with hunger, exhausted, and . . .’ She said no more.

‘I can count on my brother,’ continued the old man, ‘I will go and bring him over to your side.’

In this situation the merchant deployed again all the subtlety which he had formerly used in business and gave the countess prudent and wise advice. After they had agreed on what they both should say and do, the old man, on cleverly invented pretexts, went to the principal houses in Carentan. There he announced that he had just seen Madame de Dey, who would receive company that evening, although she was not very well. As he was a good match for the cunning Norman minds who, in every family, cross-examined him about the nature of the countess’s illness, he managed to deceive nearly everybody who was interested in this mysterious affair. His first visit worked wonders. He told a gouty old lady that Madame de Dey had nearly died from an attack of stomach gout. The famous Doctor Tronchin had on a former, similar occasion advised her to lay on her chest the skin of a hare, which had been flayed alive, and to stay absolutely immobile in bed. The countess who, two days ago, had been in mortal danger, was now, after having punctiliously obeyed Tronchin’s extraordinary instructions, well enough to receive visitors that evening. This tale had an enormous success, and the Carentan doctor, a secret royalist, added to the effect by the seriousness with which he discussed the remedy. Nevertheless, suspicions had taken root too strongly in the minds of some obstinate people, or of some doubters, to be entirely dissipated. So, that evening, Madame de Dey’s visitors came eagerly, in good time, some to observe her face carefully, others out of friendship, most of them amazed at her recovery. They found the countess by the large fireplace in her drawing- room, which was almost as small as the other drawing- rooms in Carentan, for to avoid offending the narrow- minded ideas of her guests, she had denied herself the luxuries she had been used to and so had made no changes in her house. The floor of the reception room was not even polished. She left dingy old hangings on the walls, kept the local furniture, burnt tallow candles and followed the fashions of the place. She adopted provincial life, without shrinking from its most uncomfortable meannesses or its most disagreeable privations. But, as she knew that her guests would forgive her any lavishness conducive to their comfort, she left nothing undone which would minister to their personal pleasures. And so she always provided excellent dinners. She went as far as to feign meanness in order to please these calculating minds and she skilfully admitted to certain concessions to luxury, in order to give in gracefully. And so, about seven o'clock that evening, the best of Carentan's poor society was at Madame de Dey's house and formed a large circle around the hearth. The mistress of the house, supported in her trouble by the old merchant's sympathetic glances, endured with remarkable courage her guests'detailed questioning and their frivolous and stupid arguments. But at every knock on the door, and whenever there was a sound of footsteps in the street, she hid her violent emotion by raising questions of importance to the prosperity of the district. She started off lively discussions about the quality of the ciders and was so well supported by her confidant that the company almost forgot to spy on her, since the expression of her face was so natural and her self- possession so imperturbable. Nevertheless the public prosecutor and one of the judges of the revolutionary tribunal said little, watching carefully the least changes in her expression and, in spite of the noise, listening to every sound in the house. Every now and then they asked the countess awkward questions but she answered them with admirable presence of mind. A mother has so much courage! When Madame de Dey had arranged the card- players, and settled everyone at the tables to play boston or reversis or whist, she still lingered in quite a carefree manner to chat with some young people. She was playing her part like a consummate actress. She got someone to ask for lotto, pretended to be the only person who knew where the set was, and left the room.

'I feel stifled, my dear Brigitte,' she exclaimed as she wiped the tears springing from her eyes which shone with fever, grief and impatience. 'He is not coming,' she continued, as she went upstairs and looked round the bedroom. 'Here, I can breathe and live. Yet in a few more moments he will be here! For he is alive, of that I am sure. My heart tells me so. Don't you hear anything, Brigitte? Oh! I would give the rest of my life to know whether he is in prison or walking across the countryside. I wish I could stop thinking.'

She looked round the room again to see if everything was in order. A good fire was burning brightly in the grate, the shutters were tightly closed, the polished furniture was gleaming, the way the bed had been made showed that the countess had discussed the smallest details with Brigitte. Her hopes could be discerned in the fastidious care which had obviously been lavished on this room; in the scent of the flowers she had placed there could be sensed the gracious sweetness and the most chaste caresses of love. Only a mother could have anticipated a soldier's wants and made preparations which satisfied them so completely. A superb meal, choice wines, slippers, clean linen, in short everything that a weary traveller could need or desire was brought together so that he should lack for nothing, so that the delights of home should show him a mother's love.

'Brigitte,' cried the countess in a heart-rending voice as she went to place a chair at the table. It was as if she wanted to make her prayers come true, as if she wanted to add strength to her illusions.

'Ah, Madame, he will come. He is not far away – I am sure that he is alive and on his way. I put a key in the Bible and I kept it on my fingers while Cottin read the Gospel of St John . . . and, Madame, the key didn't turn.'

'Is that a reliable sign?' asked the countess.

'Oh, yes! Madame, it's well known. I would stake my soul he's still alive. God cannot be wrong.'

'I would love to see him, in spite of the danger he will be in when he gets here.'

'Poor Monsieur Auguste,' cried Brigitte, 'he must be on the way, on foot.'

'And there's the church clock striking eight,' exclaimed the countess in terror.

She was afraid that she had stayed longer than she should have done in this room where, as everything bore witness to her son's life, she could believe that he was still alive. She went downstairs but before going into the drawing-room, she paused for a moment under the pillars of the staircase, listening to hear if any sound disturbed the silent echoes of the town. She smiled at Brigitte's husband, who kept guard like a sentinel and seemed dazed with the effort of straining to hear the sounds of the night from the village square. She saw her son in everything and everywhere. She soon went back into the room, putting on an air of gaiety, and began to play lotto with some little girls. But every now and then she complained of not feeling well and sat down in her armchair by the fireplace.

That is how people and things were in Madame de Dey's house while on the road from Paris to Cherbourg a young man wearing a brown carmagnole, the obligatory dress of the period, was making his way to Carentan. When the conscription of August 1793 first came into force, there was little or no discipline. The needs of the moment were such that the Republic could not equip its soldiers immediately, and it was not uncommon to see the roads full of conscripts still wearing their civilian clothes. These young men reached their halting places ahead of their battalions, or lagged behind, for their progress depended on their ability to endure the fatigues of a long march. The traveller in question was some way ahead of a column of conscripts which was going to Cherbourg and which the mayor of Carentan was expecting from hour to hour, intending to billet the men on the inhabitants. The young man was marching with a heavy tread, but he was still walking steadily and his bearing suggested that he had long been familiar with the hardships of military life. Although the meadow-land around Carentan was lit up by the moon, he had noticed big white clouds threatening a snowfall over the countryside. The fear of being caught in a storm probably made him walk faster, for he was going at a pace ill-suited to his fatigue. On his back he had an almost empty rucksack, and in his hand was a boxwood stick cut from one of the high, thick hedges which this shrub forms around most of the estates of Lower Normandy. A moment after the solitary traveller had caught sight of the towers of Carentan silhouetted in the eerie moonlight, he entered the town. His step aroused the echoes of the silent, deserted streets and he had to ask a weaver who was still at work the way to the mayor's house. This official did not live far away and the conscript soon found himself in the shelter of the porch of the mayor's house. He applied for a billeting order and sat down on a stone seat to wait. But he had to appear before the mayor who had sent for him and he was subjected to a scrupulous cross-examination. The soldier was a young man of good appearance who seemed to belong to a good family. His demeanour indicated that he was of noble birth and his face expressed that intelligence which comes from a good education.

'What's your name?' asked the mayor looking at him knowingly.

‘Julien Jussien,’ replied the conscript.

‘And where do you come from?’ asked the official with an incredulous smile.

‘From Paris.’

‘Your comrades must be some distance away,’ continued the Norman half jokingly.

‘I am three miles ahead of the battalion.’

‘Some special feeling attracts you to Carentan, no doubt, citoyen réquisitionnaire,’ [6] said the mayor shrewdly.

‘It is all right,’ he added, as with a gesture he imposed silence on the young man who was about to speak. ‘We know where to send you. There you are,’ he added giving him his billeting order. ‘Off you go, citoyen Jussien.’

There was a tinge of irony in the official’s tone as he pronounced these last two words and handed out a billet order giving the address of Madame de Dey’s house. The young man read the address with an air of curiosity.

‘He knows quite well that he hasn’t far to go. And once he’s outside he’ll soon be across the square,’ exclaimed the mayor talking to himself as the young man went out. He’s got some nerve! May God guide him! He has an answer to everything. Yes, but if anyone but me had asked to see his papers, he would have been lost.’

At this moment, the Carentan clocks had just struck half past nine. The torches were being lit in Madame de Dey’s ante-chamber; the servants were helping their masters and mistresses to put on their clogs, their overcoats or their capes; the card-players had settled their accounts and they were all leaving together, according to the established custom in all little towns.

‘It looks as if the prosecutor wants to stay,’ said a lady, who noticed that this important personage was missing when, having exhausted all the formulae of leave-taking, they separated in the square to go to their respective homes.

In fact that terrible magistrate was alone with the countess who was waiting, trembling, till he chose to go.

After a long and rather frightening silence, he said at last, 'I am here to see that the laws of the Republic are obeyed . . .'

Madame de Dey shuddered.

'Have you nothing to reveal to me?' he asked.

'Nothing,' she replied, amazed.

'Ah, Madame,' cried the prosecutor sitting down beside her and changing his tone, 'at this moment, one word could send you or me to the scaffold. I have observed your character, your feelings, your ways too closely to share the mistake into which you managed to lead your guests this evening. I have no doubt at all that you are expecting your son.'

The countess made a gesture of denial, but she had grown pale and the muscles of her face had contracted under the necessity of assuming a false air of calmness.

'Well, receive him,' continued the magistrate of the Revolution, 'but don't let him stay under your roof after seven o'clock in the morning. At daybreak, tomorrow, I shall come to your house armed with a denunciation which I shall have drawn up . . .'

She looked at him with a dazed expression which would have melted the heart of a tiger.

He went on gently, 'I shall demonstrate the falsity of the denunciation by a minute search, and by the nature of my report you will be protected from all further suspicion. I shall speak of your patriotic gifts, of your civic devotion, and we shall all be saved.'

Madame de Dey was afraid of a trap. She stood there motionless but her face was burning and her tongue was frozen. The sound of the door-knocker rang through the house.

'Ah,' cried the terrified mother, falling on her knees. 'Save him, save him!'

'Yes, let us save him!' replied the public prosecutor, looking at her passionately, 'even at the cost of our lives.'

'I am lost,' she cried as the prosecutor politely helped her to rise.

‘Ah! Madame,’ he replied with a fine oratorical gesture, ‘I want to owe you to nothing . . . but yourself.’

‘Madame, he’s –,’ cried Brigitte thinking her mistress was alone.

At the sight of the public prosecutor, the old servant who had been flushed with joy, became pale and motionless.

‘Who is it, Brigitte?’ asked the magistrate gently, with a knowing expression.

‘A conscript sent by the mayor to be put up here,’ replied the servant showing the billet order.

‘That’s right,’ said the prosecutor after reading the order. ‘A battalion is due in the town tonight.’ And he went out.

At that moment the countess needed so much to believe in the sincerity of her former lawyer that she could not entertain the slightest doubt of it. Quickly she went upstairs, though she scarcely had the strength to stand. Then she opened her bedroom door, saw her son, and fell half- dead into his arms. ‘Oh, my child, my child,’ she cried sobbing and covering him with wild kisses.

‘Madame,’ said the stranger.

‘Oh! It’s someone else,’ she cried. She recoiled in horror and stood in front of the conscript, gazing at him with a haggard look.

‘Oh, good God, what a strong resemblance!’ said Brigitte.

There was silence for a moment and even the stranger shuddered at the sight of Madame de Dey.

She leaned for support on Brigitte’s husband and felt the full extent of her grief; this first blow had almost killed her. ‘Monsieur,’ she said, ‘I cannot bear to see you any longer; I hope you won’t mind if my servants take my place and look after you.’

She went down to her own room half carried by Brigitte and her old manservant.

‘What, Madame!’ cried the housekeeper as she helped her mistress to sit down. ‘Is that man going to sleep in Monsieur Auguste’s bed, put on Monsieur Auguste’s slippers and eat the pâté that I made for Monsieur Auguste? If I were to be sent to the guillotine, I . . .’

‘Brigitte,’ cried Madame de Dey.

Brigitte said no more.

‘Be quiet, you chatterbox,’ said her husband in a low voice. ‘You’ll be the death of Madame.’

At this moment, the conscript made a noise in his room as he sat down to table.

‘I can’t stay here,’ exclaimed Madame de Dey. ‘I shall go into the conservatory. From there I shall be able to hear better what’s going on outside during the night.’

She was still wavering between the fear of having lost her son and the hope of seeing him come back. The silence of the night was horrible. When the conscript battalion came into town and each man had to seek out his lodgings, it was a terrible time for the countess. Her hopes were dashed at every footstep, at every sound; then soon the awful stillness of Nature returned. Towards morning, the countess had to go back to her own room. Brigitte, who was watching her mistress’s movements, did not see her come out; she went into the room and there found the countess dead.

‘She must have heard the conscript finishing dressing and walking about in Monsieur Auguste’s room singing their damned Marseillaise, as if he were in a stable,’ cried Brigitte. ‘That will have killed her!’

The countess’s death was caused by a more important feeling and, very likely, by a terrible vision. At the exact moment when Madame de Dey was dying in Carentan, her son was being shot in Le Morbihan. We can add this tragic fact to all the observations that have been made of sympathies which override the laws of space. Some learned recluses, in their curiosity, have collected this evidence in documents which will one day serve as a foundation for a new science – a science that has hitherto failed to produce its man of genius.

墙中门

显微镜下的失误

The Door in the Wall

A Slip under the Microscope

“我会走进去，
离开这片 尘嚣和嘈杂之地，
抛下这枯燥乏味的
耀眼虚荣，
远离这些劳神费心的
徒劳无功。
我要走进去，
永不回头。”

墙中门

第一章

不到三个月前，莱昂内尔·华莱士在向我推心置腹那个夜晚，给我讲了“墙中门”的故事。当时，我认为至少在他看来，这是一个真实的故事。

在讲述的过程中，他那坚信不疑的态度直接而单纯，让我无法不相信他。但第二天清晨，我从自己的公寓醒来后，却有了不同的感受。我躺在床上，回忆起昨晚他告诉我的一切，剥去他诚挚而缓慢的声线魅惑，抛开那光线集中而幽暗的桌灯，在那样的夜晚，包裹着我俩的暧昧气氛，那些让人愉悦的闪闪发光的物件，我俩在晚餐间分享的甜点、酒杯以及餐巾——这所有的一切都让我们置身于彻底与现实脱离的明亮小世界当中，坦白说，我觉得这一切太难以令人相信了。“他在故弄玄虚！”我恍然大悟，“他装得也太像了！我万万没想到的是，他能装得这么好。”

随后，我起身坐在床上，啜着清晨的第一杯茶，试图从中重新品味出现实的味道，因为他的记忆太难以置信，让我不知所措，可不得不承认，它们的确在某种程度上暗示、呈现或是传达——我都不知道该用哪个词——出了只能以这种方式讲述的经历。

好吧，无论如何，现在我并不太倾向于这个解释，该怀疑的我也怀疑过了。我现在就如同昨晚一样，相信华莱士尽他最大的努力把自己秘密中最真实的部分剥离出来告诉我。但究竟他是否曾经看见，还是他自认为看到过，究竟自己是无价特权的持有者还是痴人说梦的受害者，我无法肆意妄测。就连他身亡这一事实，虽然彻底地了断了我的各种猜疑的念头，却也没有给我带来任何答案。

这只能由读者自己判断了。

我一时半会儿也想不起来，究竟是我发表过的什么意见或者是评论，能够打动如此沉默寡言的一个男人，让他产生向我吐露心声的想法。在一次重大公共运动中，我曾因为他的懈怠和不靠谱而谴责过他，那次他让我失望透顶，我觉得他当时是在为自己辩护。他突然插进来说：“我被其他事情占据了思绪……”他在停顿了一下后继续说道：“我知道，我最近有些玩忽职守。事实是——这并不是鬼魂或者是幽灵什么的——但，这实在是太难以启齿了。列德蒙，我被缠上了。我被什么东西给缠上了——它让一切都黯淡无光，它让我充满渴

求……”

他停了下来，每当我们英国人谈论到感人的、严肃的或是其他美丽事物的时候所呈现出特有的羞怯打断了他。“你一直都在圣·阿瑟尔斯坦吧。”他说道。当时在我看来，这根本毫无关联。“好吧。”他又顿了一下。然后，他起初讲话的时候支支吾吾，慢慢地顺畅起来。他开始讲述一直掩藏在生命当中，那段让他念念不忘的回忆，这段美好回忆使他内心充满幸福和无法满足的渴望，却同时也让尘世间的一切利益和奇观显得枯燥乏味和徒有其表。

既然我现在有了头绪，那时他脸上的表情其实说明了一切。我有这么一张照片，他那疏离的神情彻底呈现在照片之上，甚至更加凸显了。这让我想起有一位女士曾这样描述过他——这位女士曾深深地爱着他。“突然间，”她说，“他对一切都失去了兴趣。他忘记了你的存在，哪怕你在他鼻子底下，他也一点都不在乎……”

但是华莱士并不是一直对什么都毫无兴趣，当他全神贯注的时候，他能够设法取得巨大的成功。毫无疑问，他的事业打从一开始就非常成功。他早就把我甩在了身后；他在我身旁一飞冲天，在社会上占据了一席之地，无论如何，那是我所无法达成的。他还差一年才满四十岁，现在人们都说，如果他还活着的话，肯定能继续任职，还很有可能进入内阁。在学校的时候，他总是能够毫不费力地击败我——就好像他天生理当如此。我们是一起在西肯辛顿的圣·阿瑟尔斯坦学院上学的，一起度过了整个学生生涯。他入校的时候和我旗鼓相当，但很快就凭借奖学金和出色的表现远远地超越了我。当然我觉得我也差不多尽力了。正是在学校里，我第一次听到了“墙中门”——在他去世的一个月前，是我第二次听到它。

至少对他来说，“墙中门”是一扇真实存在的门，穿过真实存在的墙到达永恒的现实。对于这点，我现在是十分确信的。

而这扇门出现在他人生很早期，大概还是五六岁小孩的时候。我之所以记得，是因为他在向我坦白的时候，沉重而缓慢地推理和计算出了当时的日期。“当时有，”他说，“一株猩红色的五叶地锦，在琥珀色的阳光下，一整片深红色在白墙的映衬下格外显眼。我还记得，虽然不是特别清晰，绿色门外的人行道上散落着七叶树的叶子。它们是斑驳的黄绿色的，你知道，并不是棕色，也不脏，所以肯定刚从树上落下来。我觉得这意味着那是十月份。我每年都留意着七叶树树叶，我肯定知道的。”

“如果没记错的话，那我当时应该是五岁零四个月大。”

他说自己是个早熟的孩子——他学会讲话的年龄异常早，条理清晰，还有点“老派”，正如人们所说，这让他获取了其他小孩在七八岁

不可能得到的自主权。他的母亲在他两岁时去世了，家庭教师的管教相对来说没有那么严苛。他的父亲是一名严肃的、业务繁忙的律师，他的注意力没过多地放在儿子身上，却对他期待很高。我觉得作为一个聪明绝顶的小孩，他认为生活单调乏味。有一天，他溜了出去。

他已经记不清具体是谁的疏忽让他能有机会溜出来的，也记不清走的是西肯辛顿哪一条路。所有的一切都从模糊的记忆中彻底褪去。但关于白墙和绿门的记忆是清晰可见的。

追溯儿时的记忆，他记得第一眼看到那扇门，就感受到一种特别的情绪，那是一种吸引力，一种让他想要打开门走进去的欲望。但与此同时，他又确信向这吸引力屈服是不理智或是错误的——究竟是不理智还是错误，他无从知晓。自打一开始，他就知道那扇门并没有锁，而且如果他乐意，就可以走进来，为什么对这件事如此肯定，他也觉得很奇怪——当然除非这一切都是记忆和他开了一个最诡异的玩笑。

我似乎都能看见那个内心挣扎着的小男孩的样子，而且他脑袋里清楚地知道——虽然也没法儿解释他为什么会知道——如果父亲发现他进入那扇门会勃然大怒。

华莱士极其详尽地向我描述了他的犹豫不决。他走过了那扇门，双手插着口袋，笨拙地吹着口哨，溜达到了墙的尽头。他记得那里有几家寒酸、脏乱的商店，他尤其记得有一个水管工和装潢工人在卖缸瓦管、薄铅板、浮球栓和墙纸的样品簿，还有一罐瓷漆，东西都布满灰尘，堆得乱七八糟。他停下来，假装在打量这些东西，觊觎着，热烈地渴望着那扇绿色的门。

他说，接下来有一股强烈的情绪涌上心头。这一丁点的犹豫不决无法再阻挠他，他直接奔向那扇门，蓦地一冲，伸手打开绿门，只身进入，把门甩在自己身后。于是就在一转眼间，他走进了那座纠缠他至今的花园。

对华莱士来说，他很难向我表达走进那座花园的全部感受。

那里的空气中有一股让人愉悦的气氛，它让人感到轻松，有种好事将至的幸福感；它让一切颜色看起来干净、完美并且微微地透着光。人一走进这里，立刻感到快乐至极——因为在我们生活的世界里，只有在很少数的时刻，当人们在年轻和愉快的时候，才会感到快乐，而且那里的一切都那么美丽……

华莱士在告诉我之前冥思了一阵。“你看，”他的声音就像普通人讲到让人无法置信的事情时，会变得有点可疑，“那里有两头美洲豹，就在那儿，是的，长着斑点的美洲豹。而我一点都不害怕。那里

还有一条宽敞而悠长的道路，两旁的花径用的是大理石镶边，这两头柔软的野兽在那儿玩着球。有一头美洲豹抬起头，向我走来，看起来有点好奇。它径直走向我，用它柔软的圆耳朵轻轻地蹭着我伸出去的小手，发出咕噜咕噜的声响。我告诉你，这是一座施了魔法的花园。我确定。而它有多大？噢！它延绵不绝伸向四面八方。我相信在更远处还有山丘。天知道突然之间西肯辛顿跑到哪儿去了。但不知为何，那种感觉就像是回到了故乡。”

“你要知道，就在我关上那道门的那一刻，我忘记了门外飘落在道路上的七叶树树叶；我忘记了门外的马车和商人的货车；我忘记了那股像引力一样把我拉回充满纪律和服从的家中的力量；我忘记了所有的犹豫和恐惧，忘记了谨慎，忘记了现实生活中所熟悉的一切。在那一瞬间，我——在另一个世界里——成为一个快乐并且超级幸福的小男孩。那个世界有着不同的特质，那里更温暖，阳光更有穿透力却更柔软，空气里弥漫着一丝丝清澈而愉悦的味道，头顶湛蓝的天空中飘浮着一撮撮被阳光拂过的云朵。在我面前，这条又宽又长的道路延伸向前方，路两旁没有多余的杂草，花团锦簇但疏于打理，还有这两头神奇的美洲豹，仿佛都在对我发出邀请。我无畏地把双手放在它们柔软的皮毛上，轻抚着它们圆圆的耳朵和耳下敏感的地方，和它们嬉戏玩耍，那种感觉就像它们在欢迎我回家。在我脑海中，有一种强烈的回到家的感觉，紧接着一位高挑美丽的女孩出现在路上来接我，她微笑着对我说：‘来吧。’然后把我举起来亲了一口，又放了下来，拉着我往前走。当这一切发生的时候，我丝毫没有感到吃惊，反而有一种理所当然的愉悦之感，这种感觉就像是再次回忆起能够让你感到快乐的事情，而这种感觉不知为何早已被忽略。我记得那里有巨大的红色阶梯，越爬越高，映入眼帘的是一穗穗飞燕草，最后我们来到了一大片林荫道，道路两侧栽种着古老而暗沉的树木。你知道，在整条林荫道上红色的龟裂树干之间，摆放着大理石雕刻的贵宾席、雕像，还有温驯友好的白鸽……

他停了下来。“继续啊。”我说。“我记不住多少了，只记得我们经过了在月桂花丛中沉思的老人，还有一处栖息着各种长尾小鸮的地方，穿过了荫蔽的柱廊，来到了一个宽敞而凉爽的宫殿，在那里，四处可见的是可爱的喷泉，布满了美丽的事物，都是人们内心所向往的

特质和希望。而且那里有许多事、许多人，有的还让我记忆犹新，有的已经模糊不清，但所有人都美丽和善。某种程度来说——我也说不清为什么——我能够感受到他们对我的友好，我的到来让他们快乐，他们的一举一动都让我感到快乐，他们触碰我的双手、他们对我的热情以及他们眼中的关爱。是的……”

他沉思了一阵。“我在那儿找到了玩伴。这对我来说非常重要，因为我是一个孤独的小男孩。他们在铺着草皮的庭院中玩着有意思的游戏，那里有一个用花朵做成的日晷。那游戏让人爱不释手……”

“但奇怪的是，我的记忆中有一个空缺。我不记得我们玩了什么游戏。我从没记起过。在此以后，我在孩童时花了很长的时间试图记起让我感到如此幸福的游戏究竟是什么，我甚至因此而落泪。我想在幼儿园独自再玩一次这个游戏，可是都失败了！我唯一能记得的就是我当时感到多么幸福以及那两个一直陪我玩耍的玩伴……随后出现了一个阴郁的女人，她脸色苍白、神情严肃、眼神涣散，这个阴郁的女人穿着柔软的紫色长袍，她拿着一本书，召唤我到一边，带着我来到了大厅之上的画廊里——虽然我的小伙伴非常不情愿让我离开，他们停下了手中的游戏，站在那儿眼睁睁看着我被带走。‘回来找我们！’他们喊道，‘快回来找我们！’我抬头看着她，但她根本没留意到小伙伴的存在。她的表情温和而严肃。她把我带到画廊的一个座位边，我站在她身旁，她在膝盖上把书翻开，我准备看看书里面是些什么。打开书，她手指到哪儿，我看到哪儿，简直太神奇了，因为在栩栩如生的故事中，我看到了我自己——这是关于我的故事，里面讲述的是我从出生到现在所发生的一切……”

“这对我来说太奇妙了，因为书里面的每一页都不是照片，你知道的，它们是真实的。”

华莱士凝重地顿了顿，疑惑地看着我。“你继续说，我明白。”我说。“那些都是真实的，是的，一定没错。里面的人和物都是鲜活的，我亲爱的母亲，我几乎都快忘记她了，还有我那严厉正直的父亲、家里的仆人，幼儿园，所有家中熟悉的一切。还有家里的前门，门外忙碌的街道，街道上的车来车往。我看着书，彻底惊呆了，再次充满疑惑地抬头看着那个女人的脸庞，然后继续翻着书，为了看更多的内容，跳过了中间的几页，翻着翻着，直到最后，我看见自己站在长长的白墙中的绿门前徘徊不定、犹豫不决，我再次感到了内心的挣扎和恐惧。”

“还有呢？”

“我哭喊起来，想要继续翻页，但严肃女人冰冷的手制止了我。”

“接下来呢？”

“我坚持着，在她手中轻轻挣扎，用一个孩子那可笑的力量扳开她的手指。最后她放弃了，我翻到了下一页，与此同时她弯下腰，一层阴影笼罩在我上方，她在我额头上亲了一下。

“但接下来的书中并没有出现那魔法花园，也没有美洲豹，没有拉着我的手的女孩，更没有不情愿放我离开的玩伴们。在里面出现的是西肯辛顿冗长而灰暗的街道，在路灯点亮前的下午空旷无人。而我，这个可怜的小家伙，在那儿放声痛哭。我竭尽所能压抑自己，而我痛哭是因为不能回到我的玩伴身边了，我还能听到他们的呼唤——‘回来找我们！快回来找我们！’我在那儿，这不是书里面的某一页，而是残酷的现实，那个充满魔力的地方，我曾站在那位严肃的母亲的膝边，她制止我的手，这一切都消失了——他们都到哪里去了？”

他再次停下来，好长一段时间都只是盯着燃烧的炉火。

“噢！返回到现实世界是如此痛苦！”他喃喃自语道。“然后呢？”我等了一分多钟后问。“当时的我太可怜了！再次被带回这个灰暗的世界！当我意识到刚刚所发生的一切，便深陷于无法掌控的悲伤之中。那次在公共场合哭泣和如此丢人的回归方式给我带来的侮辱和羞愧，我直到现在还记忆犹新。我又看见那位相貌慈祥、戴着金边眼镜的老绅士，他停下来先用雨伞戳了戳我，对我说：‘可怜的小家伙，你迷路了吗？’而我不过是个五岁多大的伦敦男孩！他想必是找了一位亲切的年轻警察，在众人的围观下，把我护送回家。我害怕得边走边哭，非常引人注目，就这样从魔法花园回到了父亲住宅门前的台阶上。”

“这也就是我能记得的关于这个花园的一切——那个让我魂牵梦绕至今的花园。当然，我无法传达出那种难以描述的特质，那种清澈透明的不真实感，它与我们平常所经历到的一切完全不同，但这——这就是过去所发生的。如果这只是一场梦，我肯定它发生在大白天，而总体来说是一场非凡好梦……嗯！——自然而然，随之而来的是一系列可怕的审问，有我的姨妈、我的父亲、我的保姆，还有家教——所有人……

“我试图告诉他们，而父亲因为我说谎，第一次痛打了我一顿。之后我试着告诉姨妈，她因为我顽劣的坚持，又惩罚了我一次。之后，正如我说的，他们禁止所有人听我的故事，一个字也不准听。最后甚至把我的童话故事书也没收了一段时间——因为我的想象力太‘丰富’。呃？是的，他们真的那么做了！我父亲很保守……于是我只能自己给自己讲故事。我躺在枕头上对自己低语——枕头经常被我的口水或泪水浸湿，潮潮的、咸咸的。而我总是在每日的祷告——没那么虔诚的祷告——中加上衷心的请求：‘求求你上帝，请让我梦见那个花园。噢！把我带回到那个花园吧！’让我回到那个花园！我经常梦到那 个花园。我可能添油加醋，我不确定……所有的这一切，你要知道，都是我试图重组早年经历过的破碎记忆。在小时候的那次经历和其他连续性的回忆之间，仿佛有一道鸿沟。有一阵子，我觉得甚至不应该再提到那神奇的惊鸿一瞥。”

我问了一个显而易见的问题。

“没有，”他回答说，“在早些年我不记得曾试图重返花园。现在看来有些奇怪，但我觉得很有可能是因为在那次‘历险’过后，他们对我严加看管，以防我再次走失。不，一直到我们相识，我才再次尝试寻找那个花园。而我相信有那么一段时间——现在看起来难以置信——我彻底忘记了那个花园，大概是我八九岁的时候吧。你还记得我在圣·阿瑟尔斯坦是个怎样的小孩吗？”

“记得非常清楚！”

“在那些日子里，我并没有显露出藏着一个秘密的梦境的迹象，对吧？”

第二章

他突然笑着抬起头：“你和我玩过‘西北通道’吗？”

不，你和我当然不是一路的。

“那种游戏，”他继续说，“想象力丰富的小孩整天都在玩。大致上就是找一条通往学校的‘西北通道’。每天上学的路十分无聊，游戏目标在于找一条不那么无趣的上学之路，提前十分钟出发，选一个看起来完全无望的方向，在不熟悉的街道上探索前往学校的新径。有一天，我在坎佩切山那侧的底层街区迷了路，还以为输掉游戏的这一天终于来临了，这下上学要迟到了。绝望之中，我选了一条看起来像死胡同的路，但却在小巷尽头，找到了一个出口。希望再次燃起，我快速走了出去。‘我能行的。’我边想边走过了一排乱糟糟的商铺，这种似曾相识的感觉让人费解，天哪，那不是把我带到魔法花园的白色长墙和绿色的门吗？”

“那时的记忆有如潮水向我猛然袭来。而那花园，那美好的花园，终归不仅仅是一场梦。”

他停了下来。

“我觉得和绿门的第二次相遇标志着忙碌的中学生活和童年时期无尽的闲暇时光有着天壤之别。无论如何，第二次的时候，我完全没有想要立刻走进去。你看……首先，我一股脑儿想着的都是如何按时到达学校——为的是不能中断每天按时到校的记录。我肯定也有一点点的冲动想要去试试那扇门——是的，我肯定也感受到了那股冲动

——但在我记忆中，似乎只把那扇门的吸引力看成是阻挠我雷打不动想要准时到校的障碍。当然这次发现引起了巨大的兴趣——我满脑子都是它——可我还是继续前行。那扇门并没有让我停下脚步。我边跑边拉出怀表，发现距离上课还有十分钟，而我已经下坡回到了熟悉的环境中。我上气不接下气地赶到学校，可没骗你，我跑得一身大汗，连衣服都湿了，可我准时到校了。我还记得把大衣和帽子挂起来……就这样经过了那扇门，把它抛在身后。很奇怪，对吧？”

他若有所思地看着我。“当然我当时并不知道那扇门并不会一直在那儿。中学生的想象力有限。我觉得知道门在那儿、知道怎样走回去让我非常开心，但当时有学校拖着我。我觉得那天早晨我肯定特别心神不宁、心不在焉，回想着，如果再次与不久前见到的那些美丽的陌生人重逢会是怎样的情形。奇怪的是，当时我脑中如此确信他们再次见到我一定会感到高兴。没错，那天早晨我肯定把花园当成了一个让人可以暂时逃离紧张学业的愉快场所。”

“我那天根本没去找那扇门。第二天有半天假期，这可能影响了我的决定。或者，我漫不经心的状态给我造成了负担，让我错过了重返花园的最佳时机。我也不知道。与此同时，我只知道那个魔法花园在脑海中挥之不去，我根本无法保守这个秘密。”

“我告诉了——他叫什么名字来着？——一个长得像雪貂的小孩，我们以前管他叫呆呆。”

“小霍普金斯。”我回答说。

“就是霍普金斯。我也不想告诉他，因为总觉得告诉他是违反规矩的，但我还是说了。回家有段路我俩一起走，他太能说了，而如果我们不聊魔法花园，我们就得说点别的，而对我来说，当时脑子里根本容不下其他任何话题。我就这么说漏嘴了。”

“好吧，他把我的秘密说出去了。第二天课间玩耍的时候，我被六个高年级男生包围了，他们半开着玩笑，都想听我说更多关于魔法花园的事。其中有大块头福西特——你还记得他吗？还有卡纳比和莫雷·雷诺兹。你当时不会也在那儿吧？不，如果你在的话我应该会记得的……”

“男孩这种生物太奇特了。抛开掩藏在内心深处的自我厌恶不说，我当时对于能够得到这么多高年级生的关注，内心深处是有点沾沾自喜的，至少我是这么认为的。我记忆尤其深刻的是得到克罗肖表扬的那一刻——你记得大一点的克罗肖，作曲家克罗肖的儿子？——他说这是他所听过的最棒的谎话。可与此同时，把在我眼中如此神圣的秘密透露出去的羞耻之感有如逆流般向我袭来。福西特那个禽兽还开起了花园里女孩的玩笑……”

因为沉浸在那段羞耻的回忆当中，华莱士的声音也低沉下来。“我假装没听见他说的是什麼，”他说，“然后卡纳比突然管我叫‘小骗子’，我坚持这些都是真的，可他一点都不相信。我说我知道绿门在哪里，十分钟就可以把他们带过去。卡纳比这次已经出乎意料地善良了，他说我必须证明所说的一切，不然就要我好看。卡纳比可曾扭过你的手臂？如果有的话，那恐怕你就能理解我的处境了。我发誓我的故事是真的。当时学校里没有一个人能从卡纳比手中救下一个小屁孩，虽然克罗肖可能替我说了几句好话。卡纳比奸计得逞，我变得越来越激动，面红耳赤，也有点害怕。总体来说，我表现得就像是一个傻不拉叽的小屁孩，而最后结果就是，本该由我独自寻找的魔法花园的计划，变成了由我带领着六个恐吓我的同学一起去。他们既嘲讽，又好奇，而我则是满脸通红、耳根火热、双眼刺痛，灵魂深处饱受痛苦和屈辱的煎熬。”

“我们一直没有找到白墙和绿门……”

“你的意思是？”

“我的意思是我找不到那扇门。如果能的话，我也想找到。可就算是之后我自己一个人去，也找不到。我再也没找到过那扇门。想起来，似乎在我整个中学求学期间，都在找寻那扇门，但我再也没有见过它——再也没有。”

“那帮人——没让你好过吧？”

“卡纳比……那个禽兽，他以我荒唐的谎言为由开了会。我还记得为了不让人看见我满脸泪痕，后来我是如何悄悄回家溜上楼的。但让我哭着入睡的原因并不是卡纳比，而是那花园——我全心向往的那美丽的午后、那可爱友善的女士、那些还在等待着我的玩伴、我想要学会的游戏、遗忘的美丽游戏——我的眼泪是为它们而流的。”

“我坚信如果我没有说出去……在那之后好些日子里，我状态都很糟——无数个哭泣的黑夜和心不在焉的白日。足足有两个学期，我松懈下来了，成绩下滑。你还记得吗？你当然记得！因为是你——是你数学成绩打败我这事让我重新开始用功的。”

第三章

我的朋友安静地盯着壁炉中的火苗好一阵子。随后他开口道：“直到我十七岁时，才再次见到那扇门。”

“它第三次赫然出现在我面前——我当时正在去牛津领取奖学金的路上，路过帕丁顿，就瞥了一眼。当时我正把头伸出马车挡板外抽烟，毫无疑问，觉得自己特别老成世故，而突然间，眼前一闪而过的是那扇门和那道墙，那种无法忘怀而又触手可得的珍贵感觉。”

“马车咔嗒咔嗒地路过——我也吃了一惊，直到马车走到转弯处才让它停下。随后那一瞬间对我来说特别诡异，我内心陷入了怀疑和挣扎——我敲了敲马车顶的小门，伸出手掏出了怀表。‘是的，先生！’车夫利索地回答。‘呃，好吧，没什么。’我喊道，‘我的错。我们没多少时间了！继续走吧！’然后他继续前行……”

“我拿到了奖学金。收到通知的第二天晚上，我回到父亲家，坐在楼上我书房的壁炉前，父亲很罕见地表扬了我，他那些合理的建议在我耳边作响，我抽着最爱的烟斗——青春期陪伴着我的斗牛犬大烟斗——想的却是嵌在白色长墙上的那一扇门。‘如果我停下来了，’我想，‘那肯定就要错过奖学金、错过牛津，把未来的大好前程搅得一团糟！我头脑更加清晰起来！’虽然思绪凝重，但当时我对于为事业牺牲这件事，没有丝毫的怀疑。”

“那些亲爱的朋友和明朗的氛围的确对我很好，非常美好，却十分遥远。我的注意力现在专注于这个世界。我看到了另一扇门向我打开——事业的大门。”

他再次凝视着炉火。有那么一瞬间，他的脸庞在红色火光的映照下，露出了一丝丝坚韧的表情，可它随即便消失不见了。

“好吧，”他叹息着说道，“我已经为事业付出了很多。我非常用心地工作，非常努力。但在那之后，我上千次地梦见过那座魔法花园，也看到过那扇门，它至少四次在我面前一闪而过。在好长一段时间里，这个世界的一切看起来是如此光明而有趣，看起来是那么充满意义和可能性，而对比之下，花园日益消减的吸引力让人觉得温和而遥远。谁愿意在赶去和美丽女子、出色男子共进晚餐的途中抚摸美洲豹？我从牛津来到伦敦，必须要成就一番事业以履行我大胆的承诺。事业——当然其中也有失望……”

“我一共谈过两次恋爱——我就不细说了——但有一次和某人约会，我知道她怀疑我是否敢现身，于是我冒险抄了一条近路，那条路在伯爵阁附近，不经常走，可白墙和绿门就在那里出现了。‘奇怪，’我自言自语道，‘可我以为它在坎佩切山。那是我怎么也找不到的地方——就像数巨石阵——那个诡异的白日梦中所出现的场所。’而我心无旁骛地走过了那扇门，那天下午，它对我没有丝毫的吸引力。”

“有那么一瞬间，我有股冲动想要试着打开那扇门，最多就是再走三步——虽然心底确信那扇门会为我而开，可我随即意识到这么做就会迟到，而这关乎我的荣誉。之后我情愿自己没准时到达——我至少应该偷偷看一眼花园，向那些美洲豹招招手，但这次我清楚地认识到不应该紧抓着错过的事物不放。是的，那一次让我非常后悔……”

“在那之后，我努力工作好多年，一直也没再见过那扇门，直到

最近它才再次出现。随之而来的，我感到似乎有一层薄锈蔓延开来，笼罩着我的世界。我开始为再也看不到这扇门而感到悲伤和苦痛。或许是因为我同样也备受超负荷工作量的折磨——或许那就是别人口中的年到四十的感觉。我也不知道。但我所肯定的是，那种让人对努力工作感到轻而易举的强烈愉悦之感已经不复存在，在所有这些新政治趋势发展的时机下，正是我应该努力工作的时候。奇怪，对吧？但生活的确开始让我感到疲惫不堪，而它的回报，当那些回报慢慢变得触手可得时，我觉得它们很廉价。就在不久前，我开始迫切地渴望那个花园。是的——而我又见过它三次。”

“你走进花园了？”

“不——是那扇门！而我并没有进去！”他朝着我的方向靠向桌子，声音里承载着巨大的伤痛，“我有三次机会——三次！如果那门再出现在我面前，我发誓，我会走进去，离开这片尘嚣和嘈杂之地，抛下这枯燥乏味的耀眼虚荣，远离这些劳神费心的徒劳无功。我要走进去，永不回头。这次我会留下……我发誓，可当时机来临——我没有走进去。”

“这一年中，我有三次路过那扇门的机会，却没能走进去。去年一年有三次。”

“第一次是在租户救赎法案的紧急投票之夜，最后以三票多数票保住了政府。你还记得吗？我们这边没人——可能对方也没几个人——预料到当晚的结果。随后的讨论像蛋壳一样分崩离析。我和霍奇基斯当时正和他的表亲在布伦特福德用餐，我俩都没携伴出席。电话一打来，我们立刻开着他表亲的车出发，差点就迟到了。在赶路的时候，经过了 my 墙和门——在月光的照耀下一片苍白，刺眼的路灯在墙上投射出一大块炙热的黄斑，但不会错的。‘我的天。’我脱口而出。‘怎么了？’霍奇基斯问道。我回答说：‘没事！’然后就错过了那个时机。”

“‘我做出了极大的牺牲。’在进门的时候我告诉党鞭。‘大家都是。’他匆匆走过的时候回答道。”

“我不知道当时不这么做还能怎样。第二次机会是在我赶去父亲的床前，去跟这个严厉的老头子告别的时候。那一次也是，在生命的面前，这选择是毋庸置疑的。但第三次不一样，它发生在一周前。光是回忆起来，都让我悔恨不已。我当时和古尔克及拉尔夫在一起——现在已经不是什么秘密了，你知道的，我和古尔克谈过了。我们当时在弗罗比舍用餐，聊得越来越深入。而我在内阁重组当中的位置总游走在我们的话题之间。是的——是的。已经尘埃落定了。虽然还不能对外公布，不过我不认为需要向你保守秘密……是的——非常感谢！”

非常感谢！但让我继续给你讲我的故事。

“然后，在那个晚上，似乎一切都悬而未决。我的处境有些微妙。我非常迫切地想要从古尔克口中得到确切的答复，但拉尔夫的出现阻碍了这一切。我绞尽脑汁让那晚的对话显得轻松愉快，尽可能不把话题转移到我最关注的地方。我必须如此。拉尔夫随后的表现证实了我的谨慎是正确的。我知道拉尔夫走到肯辛顿大街就会和我们分道扬镳，之后我就可以和古尔克打开天窗说亮话。有时候人必须借助于这种小手段……而正在此时，我眼角的余光瞄见了白墙和绿门，就在路的前方。

“我们聊着天经过了那扇门。我走过了它。直到现在，我还记得古尔克醒目的侧脸所投射出的阴影，他的大礼帽向前倾斜，滑落在挺拔的鼻子上方，我们漫步在街道时，他脖间围了好几层围巾的投影总是走在我和拉尔夫的影子之前。

“路过的时候，我距离那扇门也就二十英寸¹的距离。‘如果我跟他们说晚安告别，然后走进门里，’我问自己，‘接下来会发生什么？’而我当时一心想着要和古尔克谈话。在心里被其他问题占据的同时，我没法儿回答这个问题。‘他们会以为我疯了，’我想，‘而假如我现在失踪了——杰出的政治家离奇消失事件！’这影响了我当时的决定。在那紧要关头，各种各样难以想象的尘世间琐事占据了我的思绪。

“随后古尔克转过身，抱歉地笑了笑，缓慢地说：‘我到了！’

1.1英寸约等于2.5厘米。（说明：书中脚注除特别标明的之外，均为译者注。）

“‘我到了！’他重复了一次。而我彻底失去了我的机会。一年中，有三次进入那扇门的机会——那扇引导你走向平静、走向愉悦、走向比梦境更美、走向世上无人知晓之善的大门。而我拒绝了它，雷德蒙，它现在离我而去——”

“你怎么知道？”

“我知道。我就知道。现在我被留下来面对这一切，我曾经有机会离开，当时拖着我后腿的任务把我困在此处。你说我取得了成功——这庸俗、花哨、讨人厌、惹人妒忌的东西。我得到了。”他大手拿着一个核桃。“如果这就是我的成功……”他说着，把手中的核桃捏碎了，随后把手伸出来让我看。

“让我告诉你吧，雷德蒙。这次的擦肩而过正在摧毁我。过去两个月里，到现在为止快十周了，除去那些必要和紧急的任务，我什么工作都没做。我的灵魂被无法平息的悔恨之感所占据。我在夜晚出门——那时候不太容易被认出来。我在街头游荡。是的，我好奇如果人

们知道，会怎么看我。一个内阁大臣，所有部门里最重要的负责人在大街上独自游荡——为一扇门、一座花园默哀——有时候那悲伤过于沉重，似乎都能被听到。”

第四章

直到现在，我才意识到那晚他脸色多么苍白，眼中燃起了我所不熟悉的阴郁火光。今天晚上，他在我眼中是如此鲜活。我坐在这里，回想着他的辞藻、他的语气，而最新一期的《威斯敏斯特公报》还躺在我的沙发上，里面刊登的是他的死讯。今日午餐的时候，俱乐部里人人都关注着他的死讯。除了这个，我们没有探讨任何其他事情。

他们昨天一大早在肯辛顿站附近的一个深坑里找到了他的尸首。为了连接向南延伸的铁路，工人挖了两个竖井。为了防止公众进入，在大街上用栅墙把坑遮挡起来，在墙上留了一个小门，以便住在另一侧的工人进出。而因为监工交接的失误，这扇门没有锁好，他就是穿过那扇门走了进去。

心中的疑惑和迷思让我心情越发沉重。

看起来他似乎当晚从议院一路走回家——在过去这段会期内，他经常走回家——因此，我猜，那个专注地走在空荡荡的街道上，包裹得严严实实的身影，就是他。是不是车站附近电灯那苍白的光线蒙骗了他，让他误以为粗糙的木板是白色的？是不是那扇致命的、没上锁的门唤醒了某些回忆？

究竟，是否存在着这样一面白墙，墙上嵌着一扇绿门？

我不知道。我一字不漏地把他讲的故事转述出来。有时候我也想相信华莱士不过是一个意外的受害者，被困在幻觉和无心的陷阱之中，这种情况很鲜有，却并不是毫无先例，但这肯定不是我最坚定的信念。如果要这么想的话，你或许认为我很迷信，还很傻，但实际上我更倾向于相信他是真的拥有某种非同寻常的天赋，一种感知力还是什么的，我也说不清楚，可这种感知力以墙和门为幌子，给他提供了一个出口、一个秘密的特别通道，让他可以逃到另一个更美好的世界。无论如何，你或许会说，这种力量最终还是背叛了他。可你确定吗？在那里，你碰触到这些造梦之人内心最深处的秘密，这些人有如此的远见和想象力。这个世界在我们眼中普通而平凡，就像那个栅墙和土坑。以日常准则看来，他走出安全区，走进了黑暗，走进了危险，走进了死亡。

可在他眼中，又是否如此呢？

显微镜下的失误

实验室的窗外湿雾弥漫，桌子对面分别摆放着两盏绿色的瓦斯灯，离得很近，昏黄的光线透着一丝暖意。每张桌子上都放着几个学生们做实验用的玻璃罐，里面装着龙虾、贻贝、青蛙以及豚鼠的残骸。房间另一头的架子正对着窗户，架上存放着解剖体，漂白过后，泡在酒精里。一排精美的解剖图悬挂在架子上方，它们镶嵌在白木框里，架子下方是一列方形的储物柜。实验室的每道门上都嵌着黑板，上面还写着前一天上课留下的部分图解。实验室里除了助教空无一人，他安静地坐在备课室的门附近，偌大空间内，只听见他手中的摇杆切片机在絮絮叨叨、低声细语。环视房内，不少学生曾驻足的痕迹还是随处可见：有手提包若干，亮闪闪的仪器箱数只；在某个角落还有藏在报纸下的巨大画幅；另外还有一册装帧得非常精致的《乌有乡消息》，这本书出现在这样的环境中，显得有些格格不入。学生们都赶着去隔壁的阶梯教室抢占座位，随手把这些东西摆放在桌上。紧闭的大门降低了教授的音量，让他韵律十足的腔调听起来就像是毫无生气的喃喃自语。

不久后，窗外传来了微弱的钟声，教堂的钟敲了十一下。切片机的声音停了下来，助教看了看表，站起身，双手插着口袋，穿过实验室，缓慢地走向阶梯教室的门口。他站在门口听了一会儿，随后眼光落在了一小册威廉·莫里斯的书上。他拿起书，扫了一眼标题，笑着打开书，看了看衬页上的名字，随手翻了几页，然后把书放回桌面。与此同时，阶梯课室内单调的呢喃止住了，屋内突然响起了铅笔摩擦桌面的沙沙声，嘈杂的脚步声和好几个人说话的声音混在一起。紧接着坚定的脚步声渐渐向门口靠近，门打开了，敞在那儿，而刚进来的人们的注意力似乎被依稀传来的发问声所吸引，停住了脚步。

助教转过身，缓慢地走过切片机，穿过备课室的门走出了实验室。在他走出门外的同时，学生们拿着课本一个接着一个从阶梯教室走回实验室，分散着坐在小桌前，有几个站在门口。这是异常混杂的一个群体，因为当牛津和剑桥还在回避不分阶层的教育方式所带来的窘况时，帝国理工学院先于美国，早在好些年前就采用了阶层混合式教学——社会地位也是一视同仁，因为学院声名在外，而奖学金的申请不受任何年龄限制，比那些苏格兰的大学招生范围更广。这个班上一共有二十一名学生，但有的人还留在教室向教授提问，有的赶在黑板擦干净前把上面的图示抄下来，还有人在仔细查看教授为了演示课

专门准备的标本。走进实验室的九名学生中，有三位女生，其中一位是身材娇小的漂亮女生，她戴着眼镜，衣服是灰绿色的，正盯着窗外的浓雾。其余两位都是看起来健康健康的女生，相貌平平，纷纷解开卷好的围裙，穿在身上。这种棕色的亚麻围裙是解剖时穿的。男生中，有两位直接走到他们在实验室的座位上，其中一位以前是名裁缝，苍白的脸上长着一圈深色的胡子；另一位体格健硕的年轻人二十出头，面色红润，穿着合身的棕色西装——小韦德伯恩，是眼科医生韦德伯恩的儿子。其他几个人在课室门附近挤作一团。一个戴眼镜的小矮子驼着背，坐在横木凳上；另外两位，一个是矮个子、肤色深的年轻人，另一位年轻人长着亚麻色的头发，肤色红彤彤的，他倚在板岩水槽旁；而第四个人面对着大家，是这群人中的主要发言人。

最后一个人名叫希尔，这个身体结实的年轻小伙子，和韦德伯恩年纪相仿，他肤色很白，眼珠是深灰色的，发色说不上来，五官立体，不太对称。他说话声音大于常人，双手深深地插在口袋里，衣领上有磨痕，还有粗心的洗衣女工上浆后留下的蓝色痕迹，他的衣服明显是成衣，靴子靠近脚趾的地方还有一块补丁。当他发表意见或是倾听别人讲话时，时不时地向阶梯教室的门口张望。他们在讨论今天刚上完的那节动物学入门课程，如此冗长，多么让人绝望。“高等脊椎动物的目标是从一个卵子到另一个卵子……”讲师语气忧郁地说着，同时把他画了好久的对比解剖学图画完了。戴眼镜的驼背大声重复了一次，语气中充满了欣赏，并把话题丢向了一头秀发的学生，态度明显带着挑衅。随后便开始了那种含糊不清的讨论，不用说，像这种漫无边界的讨论，相信对全世界的学生来说都非常的熟悉。

“或者，这就是我们的目标——我承认，至少从科学的角度来说，”这是一头秀发的学生对挑衅的回应，“但总有什么是凌驾在科学之上的。”

“科学，”希尔信心十足地说，“是系统的知识。一切系统外的概念，无论如何，肯定是不靠谱的。”只有当听众把他的当回事，他才能确定这话说得到底是高明还是愚蠢。

“我所不能理解的是，”驼背随意说道，“希尔究竟是不是唯物主义者。”

“有一样东西是凌驾于物质之上的，”希尔觉得这次能够更加清楚地表明自己的立场，同时也意识到有人在门背后，于是为了引起她的注意稍稍提高了音量，他迅速回答道，“那就是妄想有什么可以凌驾于物质之上。”

“所以我们终于听完你的传教了。”俊美的学生说，“我们对高于畜生的生活方式的渴求，我们对高于自身的一切所付出的努力，这所有

一切都是妄想，是吧？但看看你是多么前后不一。比如说你的社会主义，为什么还要浪费时间关心种族？为什么还要为生活在贫民窟的乞丐费心？为什么还要自找麻烦把那本书，”他用头指了指威廉·莫里斯的书，“借给实验室的所有人？”

“女生来了。”驼背含糊地嘟囔了一句，紧张地向后瞄了一眼。

那个女孩穿着褐色的衣服，眼睛也是褐色的，她走进实验室，站在桌子的另一侧，也就是驼背身边，一手拿着卷好的围裙，转头听着大家的讨论。她没注意到驼背的存在，因为她的视线游走于希尔以及和他对话的人之间。希尔刻意忽略她的存在，这暴露了自己对她的出现有多在意，女孩读懂了这一点，感到非常满意。“我不需要理由，”他说，“就因为一个人知道没有任何事物凌驾于物质之上，也不期待自己长命百岁，他就要活得像畜生？”

“为什么不呢？”一头秀发的学生问道。

“为什么要呢？”希尔回答。

“那他的奖赏是什么？”

“你们这些信教的人，对你们来说一切都和奖赏有关。难道一个人就不能接受公义，为公义而存在吗？”

现场安静了一会儿，随后秀发男挣扎着用简单的词凑数以争取时间：“但——你看——奖赏——当我说奖赏的时候……”然后驼背突然插入的问题拯救了他。驼背的问题在辩论界是臭名昭著的，因为他的问题总是一个花样——要求对方下定义。“这就是你对公义的定义？”这就是驼背当时的问题。

希尔突然失去了回答这个问题的自信，不过虽然对方把问题丢出来了，可实验室助教布鲁克斯的出现救了场，他提着一批刚宰杀的豚鼠后腿。“这是这节课最后一批材料。”之前一直没开口的年轻人说道。布鲁克斯走向实验室前方，随手把豚鼠丢在每张桌子上。班上其他学生在远处闻到了豚鼠的味道，纷纷从阶梯教室挤回实验室，之前的讨论戛然而止，本来没坐在自己位子上的学生匆忙赶回去抢占实验样品。挂在圈上的钥匙咯咯作响，有人打开了储物柜拿出了解剖器材。希尔本来就站在自己座位旁边，他的解剖刀伸到了口袋外面。褐衣女子向前走了一步，靠着他的桌子，温柔地说：“你看到我把书还给你了吧，希尔先生？”

整个过程中，在希尔的意识里，女孩和书的存在是如此之清晰，可他笨拙地假装自己刚看到那本书。“噢，是的，”他边说边拿起书，“我知道了，你喜欢这本书吗？”

“有时间的话，我想请教你几个关于这本书的问题。”

“当然没问题，”希尔说，“这是我的荣幸。”他尴尬地停顿了一下。

“你喜欢这本书吗？”他问道。

“这本书很精彩。只是有的部分我不太理解。”

突然间，实验室响起了一阵古怪刺耳的声音，随后彻底安静下来。是助教，他已经走到黑板前，准备开始指导当日的解剖。他习惯于使用这种介乎于普通交谈时所发出的“呃”和喇叭发出的巨大声响之间的某种声音来让学生闭嘴。褐衣女子溜回自己的座位，就在希尔的正前方。希尔立刻忽略了她的存在，从桌子抽屉里拿出了笔记本，快速翻开本子，从口袋里拔出一支短胖的铅笔，准备以海量的笔记记录下助教接下来要做的示范。对于大学里的学生来说，示范和讲座是他们神圣而不可侵犯的教材。除了教授的书之外，你可以，甚至最好忽略其他教材。

希尔的父亲是兰德波特的修鞋匠，一次偶然的机会，政府下达给兰德波特技术学院的蓝皮书，让希尔拿到了奖学金。他靠着每周一几尼的零用钱留在了伦敦，发现只要精打细算，这笔钱也足够支付他的置装费——偶尔买个防水衣领，还有像墨水、针线这种城市男士生活的必需品。他第一年和第一学期就是这么过下来的，而黝黑的老头子在兰德波特几处酒馆，因为吹嘘自己的儿子是“教授”而遭到了当地人的厌恶。希尔是个精力旺盛的年轻人，他内心深处暗暗蔑视着所有宗教的神职人员，胸怀着重建世界的远大志向。在他看来，获得奖学金是一次非常好的机会。他七岁就开始读书，自那时起一直坚持着，对于身边能够接触到的书籍，无论好坏都来者不拒。他为人处世的经验仅限于波特西岛，主要是靴子批发工厂。十七岁离开寄宿学校后，他每天都在那儿上班。在演讲方面，他有着很大的天赋，并且已经得到了大学辩论社的认可，集会每次都在楼下冶金学教室碾压机和矿石模型的包围下召开，你可以从希尔每次站起来讲话时，对方拍打课桌的疯狂程度中看得出其他人对他的表现的肯定。而他正处于那个特别让人激动人心的年龄，此时的人生在羊肠小道尽头豁然开朗，就好像这一整片山谷都任其支配，未来等待着他的都是神奇的新发现和巨大的成就。除了知道自己不会拉丁语和法语之外，希尔对于自己的局限一无所知。

一开始，他的兴趣点平均地分配在学校的生物学和构建社会学和神学理论上，他十分热衷于这项工作。夜幕降临的时候，如果大博物馆的图书馆没开门，他就坐在切尔西家中的床上，穿着外套、围着围巾，誊写讲座的笔记、背诵解剖备忘录，直到索普在屋外吹起口哨——房东太太拒绝为阁楼租户的访客开门——他们俩接下来一同游走于街头，那街道在煤气灯的照射下忽明忽暗，他们几乎是照本宣科，

按着刚学会的方式聊着上帝的旨意、公义、卡莱尔以及社会重组。而在所有的过程中，希尔有时赞成索普，有时赞成某个随便经过的路人的观点，但当浓妆艳抹的女性若有所思地看着他走过时，他的思绪也不免为之所动，一时迷乱，失去论点。科学和公义！但这些日子里，有那么一两次征兆，似乎他的生活中出现了第三个让他产生兴趣的事。他发现自己的注意力会从中胚层体节的命运或是胚乳的可能意义上，时不时地，游移到坐在自己前排的褐眼女孩身上。

她是自费学生，光是和他说话，她已是纡尊降贵。一想到她从小到大所接受的教育、所获得的成就，希尔的灵魂就开始感到煎熬。她第一次和希尔说话是因为兔子的翼蝶骨上有她搞不懂的地方，而这使他发现，至少在生物上，不需要自我贬低。自那以后，他们就像所有年轻人一样，随便开个头就能继续闲聊下去，而当希尔在社会主义的问题上攻击她时——本能告诉他不要直接攻击她的宗教信仰——而她则下决心，说服自己去担负起提高他审美品位的重任。她比他大一两年，虽然这对希尔来说，从来都不是问题。在《乌有乡消息》后，他们就开始频繁地把书借给彼此。希尔有个荒谬的首要原则，他从来不在诗歌上“浪费时间”，这对她来说可是很可怕的缺陷。有天在午餐的时候，她偶然撞见希尔躲在放骨架的小博物馆里吃小圆面包——这基本就是他每日的午餐，在这样的情况下被她撞见让他感到十分尴尬。难得有机会独处，她转身走出去，不一会儿，神秘兮兮地拿着一卷勃朗宁回来借给他。他侧着身子面对着她，笨手笨脚地接过了书，因为另一只手还拿着面包。事后想起来，他的语气没能像他所希望表现出来的那么愉悦爽朗。

这一切发生在比较解剖学的考试后，也是学校对外开放的最后一天，在这之后，在圣诞假期前，学校会清理所有在校生，仔细锁好校园。为了用功准备第一学期期末考试，希尔发愤图强地复习，注意力暂时从其他兴趣点上转移开来。在所有人都乐此不疲地预测这次考试以及接下来将要进行的两次考试成绩的时候，他惊奇地发现，没人认为他有竞争哈维纪念勋章的潜力。一直以来，韦德伯恩基本上默默无闻地生活在希尔认知的最边缘地带，也该轮到他以竞争对手的身份登场了。索普和希尔达成协议，在考试前的三周，不再出去夜游。而房东太太指出，以这么低的房价，她无法提供更多的灯油。于是希尔拿着帮助记忆的小纸条，往返行走于学校与住处之间，纸条上列着小龙虾的附肢、兔子的头骨还有脊椎动物的神经体统。而他也成为让反向行人十分头疼的一号人物。

可诗歌和褐眼女孩自然而然地占据了整个圣诞假期。尚未公布的考试成绩变得不再那么重要，希尔甚至为他父亲的激动而感到惊讶。

就算他想学习比较解剖学，这些书在兰德波特也无处可借，而他

太穷了，也买不起新书，但图书馆里囤积了大量诗歌，这充分地满足了希尔的需求。他让自己沉浸于朗费罗和丁尼生流畅的诗篇之中，在莎士比亚身上感受到了勇气，在蒲柏身上找到了似曾相识的灵魂，在雪莱身上见识到了大师的水平，他甚至还浅尝辄止地读了伊莱莎·库克 [1] 和希曼太太 [2] 的诱人辞藻。但他没有读勃朗宁其他的作品，因为他希望回到伦敦后能够继续向希丝曼小姐借阅。

他从住处走到学校，亮闪闪的黑包里装着一卷勃朗宁，满脑子都是和诗歌相关的好话。的确，他构思好了聊天的开场白，还打好了最后用于表达对返校的欣喜的腹稿。以伦敦的标准来说，这个早晨格外怡人，可以清晰地看到厚厚的霜冻和湛蓝的天空，薄雾轻轻地勾勒出世间万物的轮廓，一缕缕阳光洒落在街区间，在向阳那侧的街道上渲染出了琥珀色和金色。到了学校大堂，他摘下手套，手指冻得太僵，以至于他在签名那一栏写出来的，是一条颤抖的黑线。他觉得希丝曼小姐应该就在附近。转身面向楼梯时，他发现在楼梯下面围了一群人，挣扎着挤在通告栏前。这估计就是生物考试的排名。那一刻，他忘记了勃朗宁和希丝曼小姐，加入到人群当中，向中间挤去。终于，在脸快被站在上层楼梯的人的袖子挤扁之时，他看到了排名表——

一等

H.J.萨默思·韦德伯恩

威廉·希尔

随后紧接着是二等成绩的学生，目前这不在我们所关心的范围之内。以他一贯的风格，希尔根本没浪费时间去查看索普在物理班的排名，他退出拥挤的人群，陷入了一种奇怪的情绪当中，这种情绪介乎比普通二等生感到更骄傲和输给韦德伯恩的巨大失落感之间，他带着这种情绪走上了楼。上去后，他在楼道里挂好了自己的大衣，动物学的助教对他表达了衷心的祝贺，这位年轻的助教来自牛津，在此之前，他私下里认为希尔是那种最糟糕的无赖混混。

希尔在实验室门口停顿了几秒，喘了口气，随后推门而入。他的目光穿过实验室，看到五位女学生站在一起，韦德伯恩——之前沉默寡言的韦德伯恩优雅地靠在窗边，把玩着窗帘的流苏，很明显在和那五位女生聊天。好吧，希尔或许能够有勇气，甚至是有些霸气地和一个女生聊天，或者也能在满满一屋的女生面前演讲，但像韦德伯恩这样从容地站在一群女生面前享受谈话、掌握局面、机智应答，希尔知道自己是做不到的。走上楼梯的时候，他对韦德伯恩的态度还是比较慷慨的，或许还带有一丝钦佩，他愿意真心诚意地在大家面前和他握手，就像两人只是结束了第一回合对决那样。但在圣诞节前，韦德伯

恩从来没有走到实验室的那一头去聊天。希尔那一丝模糊的兴奋情绪转瞬即逝，快速地变成了对韦德伯恩明显的嫌恶。也可能是因为他的表情产生了变化。当他走近韦德伯恩时，韦德伯恩漫不经心地向希尔点头示意，其他人转身看了一眼。希丝曼小姐的视线投向了希尔，两人眼神稍作碰撞，很快又错开了。“韦德伯恩先生，我无法认同你的说法。”她说。

“我必须要恭喜你的一等成绩，希尔先生。”戴眼镜穿绿衣服的女生转过身，笑容满面地对他说。

“这没什么。”希尔回答的时候，眼神一直没离开在旁聊天的韦德伯恩和希丝曼小姐，他迫切地想听他们在聊些什么。

“我们这些可怜的二等生可不这么认为啊。”戴眼镜的女生说。

韦德伯恩在说什么？好像是和威廉·莫里斯有关。希尔没有继续回答戴眼镜的女生，脸上的笑容也渐渐消失了。他听不清楚，于是也找不到加入谈话的时机。该死的韦德伯恩！他坐下来，打开包，犹豫了一下是否应该当着全班人的面，立刻把勃朗宁还回去，最后还是决定放弃，取而代之，他拿出了下堂课的笔记本，接下来要上的是基础植物学，这门课是短期课程，二月份就结束了。与此同时，一个肥硕的男人从阶梯教室走进来，穿过实验室，他面带微笑，边走边搓着双手，看起来和蔼可亲。这个肤色白皙、眼珠淡蓝的男人名叫宾顿，是植物学的教授，他从克佑来，上一、二月份的课。

在接下来的六个星期里，希尔体验到了一种快速而异常复杂的情感成长。大多数情况下，他的注意力主要集中在韦德伯恩身上——希丝曼小姐没看出这一点。她告诉希尔（因为博物馆相对来说比较隐蔽，她在那里和希尔聊了很多关于社会主义、勃朗宁还有其他方面的话题）自己在一个熟人家碰到过韦德伯恩，而他“继承了父亲的聪明才智，因为你知道，他的父亲是位出色的眼科医生”。

“我父亲是鞋匠。”希尔回答说，这两者并没有什么关联，可从他的语气中，你能感觉到他的自尊心在作祟。但他那一闪而过的嫉妒没有让她感到不适，她能够想象得到这种情绪源自何方。他从韦德伯恩身上痛苦地感受到了不公，也意识到了自己的缺陷。这个韦德伯恩，他选了一个杰出的男人当父亲，而这个优势不会让他丢分，反而对他来说是公义的。而当希尔只能在实验室的豚鼠残肢前笨拙地和希丝曼小姐搭话时，这个韦德伯恩，已经背着他攀入了她的社交圈，恐怕还能和希丝曼小姐用高雅的上层语言交谈，希尔或许也听得懂他们的对话，但自己绝对无法使用这样的语言。当然，他也并不想使用这种语言。而对于希尔来说，像韦德伯恩这样，每天穿着合身的西服、别着崭新的袖扣、梳着整齐的发型，完美地出现在学校，这本身，就是一

种粗鲁的、轻蔑的行为。此外，韦德伯恩最初鬼鬼祟祟假装低调、假装谦虚的状态，让希尔幻想着自己理所当然能成为今年的头号人物，之后突然之间一跃而起，以这种方式毫无节制地膨胀，这种行径太过于鬼鬼祟祟。除此之外，韦德伯恩还越发表现出对希丝曼小姐的兴趣，无论她出现在哪个讨论组，他都试图加入，冒着风险找准一切时机，表达对社会主义和无神论的诋毁。他以类似某类领袖人物的个性——简洁、肤浅以及超高效率——刺激着希尔，让他变得失去理智，直到最后，希尔就像恨萧伯纳优雅的自负、恨威廉·莫里斯限量奢华的墙纸以及恨沃尔特·克兰对于工人阶级匪夷所思的看法一样，仇恨起韦德伯恩来。

实验室的研讨在上个学期还是希尔大放光彩的时刻，现在却变得危险起来，沦落成和韦德伯恩之间毫不体面的斗争，希尔之所以坚持下来，是因为他产生了这事关自己荣誉的奇怪想法。至于在辩论社，希尔清楚地认识到，伴随着雷鸣般的拍桌声，他可以轻而易举地战胜韦德伯恩。只是韦德伯恩并没有给他在辩论社击垮自己的机会——他“用餐很晚”——多么恶心的故作！

你一定不能认为所有这一切都以如此低级的状态呈现在希尔的认知当中，他天生喜欢概括总结。韦德伯恩在他眼中并不是一个独立的障碍物，而是一类人，是一个阶层突出的那一角。经济学理论经过了发酵，在希尔的脑中已经形成固有姿态，在现实中变得异常具体。这个世界中到处充斥着像韦德伯恩这样轻慢、优雅、衣着高雅、口若悬河的人，姓韦德伯恩的主教、国会议员、教授还有地主们，他们都用着腐朽的洗指碗，引述着强劲辩手们所使用的警句式遁词。在希尔的想象中，任何衣冠不整、装扮邋遢的人，从鞋匠到车夫，都亲如兄弟，是受苦受难的同胞。于是他仿佛成为底层阶级和被压迫人士的拥护者，尽管表面看起来他只是个我行我素的粗鲁年轻人，而且还是个不太成功的拥护者。在下午茶时，一次又一次的小冲突已经开始让女学生丢下希尔一个人在那儿红着脸、发脾气，而辩论社也注意到希尔的讲话中出现了挖苦式嘲讽的新特质。

现在你就能明白，如果是为了人类利益，希尔在下次考试中击垮韦德伯恩，并且在希丝曼小姐眼中把他比下去，是多么有必要的。而且你或许也能察觉，希丝曼小姐误入了某种常见的女性的认知误区。因为韦德伯恩以一种低调的方式应对希尔掩藏不住的敌意，这场希尔和韦德伯恩的争执成为对她无尽魅力的颂词——她就是这场充斥着手术刀和粗短铅笔的竞赛之中的绝世佳人。让希丝曼小姐的密友私下感到为难的是，这甚至让她良心不安，因为她是个好女孩，通过拉斯金和当代小说痛苦地认识到，男人所有的行为都是由女性的态度决定的。而如果万一希尔从未向她提及“爱情”这个话题，她也只会认为他避而不谈，只不过是过于害羞。

紧接着，第二次考试马上就要到了，希尔越发苍白的面容证实了他在发奋学习的谣言。你能在肯辛顿南站附近的加气面包 [3] 店里看到他，掰着面包，小口地嚼着牛奶，眼睛一直没有离开过面前那张记着密密麻麻笔记的纸张。在卧室的镜子周围，他贴满了芽和茎的提示，在洗手池上，如果肥皂没有遮挡的时候，有一张图表可供阅读。他缺席了几次辩论社的聚会，但他还是挤出了和希丝曼小姐碰面的时间，有时在附近宽敞的艺术博物馆里，有时在学校楼上的小博物馆里，更平常的是在学校走廊，这里更安静，不容易受到打扰。他们还特别喜欢在靠近艺术图书馆的一个小画廊里见面，里面到处是铸铁箱子和门。在那里，希尔在她崇拜的眼神鼓励下，谈论着勃朗宁还有自己的雄心壮志。她在他身上发现了一个非比寻常的特质，那就是他一点也不贪婪。他冷静地深思熟虑过，自己未来可以靠年收入一百镑过活。但他立志要出名，在被自己的同类认可的同时，要把世界变得更好。他以布拉德劳和约翰·伯恩斯为领袖和榜样，这两位都是穷困潦倒的伟人。但希丝曼小姐认为这样的生活在审美方面是有缺陷的，虽然她没意识到，但她所指的是美丽的墙纸和室内装潢、精致的书本、优雅的服装、演唱会以及精心准备的食物和恭敬的服务。

最后，第二次考试终于到来了，植物学教授是个挑剔认真的人，他把所有书桌都重新排放在一个狭长的实验室里，为的是防止抄袭。他在桌子上放了把椅子，让自己的助教坐在上面（据助教自己说，坐在上面感觉像个印度神明），这样就能够看到任何作弊的人。他还在门口贴了一张“此门不通”的告示，可根本没什么人能看得到那张告示。整个早上，从十点到下午一点，韦德伯恩的奋笔疾书——手中鹅毛笔摩擦纸张所发出的尖锐响声，就是对希尔的挑衅，教室里的其他人也不屈不挠地追赶着这两个领军人物。随后就到了下午，韦德伯恩比往常安静了一些，而希尔的双颊一整天下来都是滚烫的。他外套口袋塞满了前一分钟还在复习的课本和笔记本。第二天早上和下午都是实操考试，有一门是切片，另外一门是读玻片。希尔早上很郁闷，因为他知道自己切片切得太厚，而神秘的玻片就是在下午出现的。

这是植物学教师一直做的事情。就像报收入税一样，它提供了作弊的诱惑。这是个放在显微镜下的标本，一个小玻片，用金属压夹片固定在显微镜的载物台上，而按照规定不能移动这个玻片。每个学生轮流上去，把看到的画下来，在本子上写下自己认为正确的答案，然后回到自己的座位。好吧，如果有人手指不小心动了一下，在那一瞬间，就有可能移动整个玻片。教授之所以命令大家不能移动玻片，是因为他想让大家辨认的是某种树茎的特征。按照他所摆放的位置，很难认出这是什么植物，可是一旦移动了玻片，看到里面其他的部分后，它的属性就一目了然了。

希尔走过来，上一门考试中和染色试剂的一番搏斗让他满脸通

红。他坐在了显微镜前的小凳子上，移动反光镜寻找最佳光线。随后，只是个习惯性动作，他移动了玻片。他立刻想起来这是禁止的，于是紧接着立刻用手把玻片推了回去，他被自己的行为吓了一跳，坐在那儿一动也不敢动。

随后，他缓缓地转过头。教授在考场外，助教高坐在临时搭建的“神坛”上，读着科学期刊，其他考生背对着他，忙着答题。他是否应该坦白交代这次意外？他现在清楚地知道那个玻片上是什么，这个分类鉴定标本是皮孔，取自接骨木树。他的目光徘徊于专心答题的同学身上，突然之间，韦德伯恩转过头以一种奇怪的眼神瞄了他一眼。让希尔在过去这两天保持着士气高昂状态的精神亢奋突然被奇怪的精神压力取而代之。写答案的本子放在身边，他没有在上面写下答案，但他一边单眼看着显微镜，一边潦草地吧看到的東西画下来。突然之间，关于道德规范的怪诞难题在他脑海中翻江倒海。他到底应该写出答案，还是把这个问题的答案空出来？可如果这样的话，韦德伯恩在第二次考试中恐怕也还会排在第一。他现在怎么知道如果没移动玻片的话，自己是不是能认出里面的东西？当然，韦德伯恩也有可能认不出来。可假如他也移动了玻片呢？他抬头看了看表，还有十五分钟去做最后决定。他收起答题本和画答案用的彩色铅笔，走回到自己的座位上。

他把自己的答案从头到尾检查了一遍，然后坐在那儿思索着，啃着自己的指节。如果现在才跳出来承认，看起来会显得可疑。他必须要打败韦德伯恩。于是他忘记了像约翰·伯恩斯和布拉德劳那样耀眼绅士的榜样。而且在他看来，这种瞥见玻片其余部分的行为毕竟只是场意外，这是强加在他身上的，更像是上天的旨意而并非不公平待遇。对他来说，利用这个机会也并不见得是那么不诚实，因为像布鲁姆就相信祷告的作用，他每天都在祈祷着能够拿到第一名。“还有五分钟。”助教一边说，一边折起文章，开始仔细巡视考场。希尔盯着时钟，直到指针走到还剩两分钟交卷时，他打开答题本，两耳通红、佯装镇定地在画好的皮孔旁边写上了名称。

当第二次考试成绩公布后，韦德伯恩和希尔的排名和上一次对调了。认识助教的穿绿衣服戴眼镜的女生（助教私底下也是个普通人）告诉大家，两次考试成绩加一起，在满分是200分的情况下，希尔得了167分，以一分领先于166分的韦德伯恩。在某种意义上，每个人都佩服希尔，虽然怀疑自己“夺取别人成绩”的想法萦绕在他心头。而且希尔慢慢地发现，无论是别人的恭喜还是希丝曼小姐对他好感加剧，甚至是韦德伯恩在如日中天时明显下滑的地位，都被那不开心的回忆给玷污了。一开始，他感到全身上下充满了能量，辩论词中再次出现了民主主义迈向胜利的语句。他把大量的热情和精力投入在对比解剖学上，也在继续提升自己的审美修养。但在这一切背后，他脑海

中不断地出现这个清晰的画面——一个移动了玻片的卑鄙小人。

没有一个人看到那一幕，而他也确信没有神圣的力量能看到他的所作所为，但尽管如此，他还是很担心。记忆并不是死物，而是有生命的，如果不再碰触，它们会慢慢褪色，可如果时常为之懊恼，它们会茁壮成长成各种可疑的形态。奇怪的是，虽然当时他清楚地意识到移动玻片只是一个意外，可随着时间的流逝，他的记忆开始变得混乱，直到最后，他无法确定——虽然他向自己保证是确定的——移动玻片究竟是否是完全下意识的动作。当然，很有可能希尔的饮食习惯也导致了这种病态的自责。他早餐一般都吃得很草率，午饭吃个面包，为了方便，晚上进餐一般在五点之后，肉的选择由他的收入决定，通常是在远离布朗普顿主路的后街里面的一个小餐馆里解决。偶尔，他犒劳自己，来一份三便士或者九便士的经典套餐，而通常端上来的时候，碟子里不是缺点土豆就是少点排骨。这种自我厌恶的爆发和情绪的复苏，毫无疑问和那段时间生活上物资的匮乏有明显的关系。而抛开这对情绪的影响不算，还有就是兰德波特鞋匠——希尔那亵渎神祇的父亲，在他对希尔从儿时反反复复的暴力教育和语言灌输下，希尔对虚伪深恶痛绝。对于公开宣称自己是无神论者的人，我有一样很确定，那就是他们很可能（通常）都是傻瓜，神经大条，喜欢谩骂神职机构，说话蛮不讲理，是爱捉弄人的恶棍，但他们通常都不善于撒谎。如果他们不是这样，如果他们哪怕能做到有一丝丝的妥协，大概也就变成了自由派教徒。此外，这段记忆还破坏了他对希丝曼小姐的感情。因为比起韦德伯恩，她现在非常明显更喜欢希尔，希尔也确信自己喜欢她，于是开始以腼腆的敬慕方式来回报她对自己的关心。有一次他甚至买了一把紫罗兰，装在口袋里带到铸铁画廊，支支吾吾地解释着把花献给她，而花儿早已凋零枯萎。这记忆同样妨碍了他对于资本家不忠行为的谴责，这一直以来都是他生活的一大乐趣。而最后，它还侵蚀了击败韦德伯恩所带来的喜悦。在此之前，他一直自以为比韦德伯恩高尚，而内心燃起怒火仅仅是因为想要得到认可。现在他开始苦恼，偷偷怀疑这一切是不是源于自卑作祟。他幻想着能从勃朗宁的作品中找到对自己目前情况的辩解，但它们在分析过后就烟消云散了。终于——诡异的是，他被当初让他做出不诚实举动的相同动力所打动——他去找宾登教授，向他坦白了整个事件。因为希尔不是自费学生，宾登教授并没有招呼他坐下，他就这样站在教授的书桌前坦白了一切。

“这件事太奇怪了。”宾登教授说，随后缓慢地意识到自己对这件事的态度，怒火渐渐燃烧起来，“这件事实在太让人震惊了。我不明白你为何会做出这样的事，而我也不明白你为什么要坦白。你是那种学生……剑桥人做梦也不敢……我应该早点想到……你为什么要作弊？”

“我没有作弊。”希尔回答说。

“但你刚刚才告诉我你作弊了。”

“我以为我解释清楚了……”

“你要不就是作弊了，要不就是没有作弊……”

“我说了我的动作是无意识的。”

“我不是个形而上学者，我是科学——也就是事实——的仆人。你得到的命令是不要移动那个玻片。而你的确移动了玻片。如果这不是作弊的话……”

“如果我想作弊”，希尔的声音变得歇斯底里起来，“我为什么要来这里向你坦白？”

“你的忏悔为你挽回了一点，”宾登教授说，“但这并不能改变最初的真相。”

“的确不能，先生。”希尔彻底向自卑举旗投降。

“现在你甚至带来了很大的麻烦。考试排名必须要修正。”

“我想是的，先生。”

“你想是的？当然必须修正。而我不认为我的良心能够过得去，让你通过这次考试。”

“不让我通过？”希尔问，“要给我不及格？”

“这是所有考试的规定。不然我们还能怎么样？你还能期待什么？你不是想逃避自己的所作所为带来的后果吧？”

“我以为，或者……”希尔紧接着说，“让我挂科？我以为，如果我告诉你，你只会把玻片那一题的分数给扣掉。”

“这是不可能的！”宾登说，“而且，扣掉那题的分，你还是排在韦德伯恩前面。只是把那个分扣了？简直荒谬！学院规章制度明确地指出……”

“但我是自己坦白的，先生。”

“规章制度说，无论是什么原因或者以什么方式发现这种行为，他们只不过提供——”

“这会毁了我的，如果我这次考试不及格，他们就不会续发我的奖学金了。”

“你之前就应该想到这一点。”

“但先生，考虑到我的处境……”

“我什么也考虑不了。在这所学校里，教授也只是机器。规章制度甚至不让我们给学生推荐职位。我只是个机器，而你已经让我开始运转了。我必须这么做……”

“这太严苛了，先生。”

“可能是吧。”

“如果我这次考试没法儿通过，那我不如直接回家算了。”

“这就要由你自己考虑清楚了。”宾登的语气软了一点。他意识到自己有点不公平，假如他不是自相矛盾的话，他的确想要改正。“从个人而言，”他说，“我认为你的坦白能够大大地减轻你的过错。但你已经开启了这个机器，现在它只能尽自己的本分。我，我真的很抱歉你把真相说出来了。”

一波强烈的情绪让希尔说不出话来。突然之间，他清晰地看到兰德波特的老鞋匠——他父亲——布满皱纹的脸庞。“我的天！我太蠢了！”他突然之间激动地说道。

“我希望，”宾登说，“这能够让你吸取教训。”

但，诡异的是，他们脑海中所所谓的教训，根本不是一回事。

随后两人都没说话。

“我希望能够考虑一下，先生，之后我会告诉你我的决定——我的意思是，关于回不回家。”希尔边说边走向门口。

第二天，希尔没来上课。穿绿衣服戴眼镜的女生一如既往地抢先得到了消息。她说起这件事的时候，韦德伯恩和希丝曼小姐正在探讨诗乐协会会员的表演。

“你们听说了吗？”她问。

“听说什么？”

“上次考试抓到了作弊。”

“作弊？”韦德伯恩的脸突然红了起来，“怎么会？”

“那个玻片……”

“有人动了？不可能！”

“就是有人动了，那个我们不能动的玻片……”

“一派胡言！”韦德伯恩说，“为什么？他们怎么能发现？他们知道是谁……？”

“是希尔先生。”

“希尔！”

“希尔先生！”

“不，肯定不是那个纯洁的希尔吧？”韦德伯恩慢慢恢复正常。

“我不相信。”希丝曼小姐说，“你是怎么知道的？”

“我之前不知道，”戴眼镜的女生说，“但是现在我知道这是真的。希尔先生自己去宾登教授那儿坦白了。”

“我的天哪！”韦德伯恩说，“偏偏是希尔。不过我一直都不太信得过这些原则上的博爱主义……”

“你敢肯定？”希丝曼小姐呼吸急促地问。

“非常确定。这太可怕了，不是吗？但你知道，不然你以为呢？他父亲是个鞋匠。”

随后希丝曼小姐把戴眼镜的女生吓了一跳。

“我不在乎。我是不会相信的。”她柔和的肤色变得越来越红。“除非他自己当面告诉我，否则我不会相信的。就算那样，我也不太能相信。”然后她突然转身背对着戴眼镜的女生，走回到自己的座位去了。

“但这还是真的。”戴眼镜的女生说，微笑着盯着韦德伯恩。

但韦德伯恩没有回答。她似乎注定是那一类人——说出来的话，总是让人没有回答的欲望。

The Door in the Wall

One confidential evening, not three months ago, Lionel Wallace told me this story of the Door in the Wall. And at the time I thought that so far as he was concerned it was a true story.

He told it me with such a direct simplicity of conviction that I could not do otherwise than believe in him. But in the morning, in my own flat, I woke to a different atmosphere; and as I lay in bed and recalled the things he had told me, stripped of the glamour of his earnest slow voice, denuded of the focused, shaded table light, the shadowy atmosphere that wrapped about him and me, and the pleasant bright things, the dessert and glasses and napery of the dinner we had shared, making them for the time a bright little world quite cut off from everyday realities, I saw it all as frankly incredible. 'He was mystifying!' I said, and then: 'How well he did it! . . . It isn't quite the thing I should have expected him, of all people, to do well.'

Afterwards as I sat up in bed and sipped my morning tea, I found myself trying to account for the flavour of reality that perplexed me in his impossible reminiscences, by supposing they did in some way suggest, present, convey – I hardly know which word to use – experiences it was otherwise impossible to tell.

Well, I don't resort to that explanation now. I have got over my intervening doubts. I believe now, as I believed at the moment of telling, that Wallace did to the very best of his ability strip the truth of his secret for me. But whether he himself saw, or only thought he saw, whether he himself was the possessor of an inestimable privilege or the victim of a fantastic dream, I cannot pretend to guess. Even the facts of his death, which ended my doubts for ever, throw no light on that.

That much the reader must judge for himself.

I forget now what chance comment or criticism of mine moved so reticent a man to confide in me. He was, I think, defending himself against an imputation of slackness and unreliability I had made in relation to a great public movement, in which he had disappointed me. But he plunged suddenly. 'I have,' he said, 'a preoccupation—

'I know,' he went on, after a pause, 'I have been negligent. The fact is — it isn't a case of ghosts or apparitions — but — it's an odd thing to tell of, Redmond — I am haunted. I am haunted by something — that rather takes the light out of things, that fills me with longings . . .'

He paused, checked by that English shyness that so often overcomes us when we would speak of moving or grave or beautiful things. 'You were at Saint Althelstan's all through,' he said, and for a moment that seemed to me quite irrelevant. 'Well' — and he paused. Then very haltingly at first, but afterwards more easily, he began to tell of the thing that was hidden in his life, the haunting memory of a beauty and a happiness that filled his heart with insatiable longings, that made all the interests and spectacle of worldly life seem dull and tedious and vain to him.

Now that I have the clue to it, the thing seems written visibly in his face. I have a photograph in which that look of detachment has been caught and intensified. It reminds me of what a woman once said of him — a woman who had loved him greatly. 'Suddenly,' she said, 'the interest goes out of him. He forgets you. He doesn't care a rap for you — under his very nose . . .'

Yet the interest was not always out of him, and when he was holding his attention to a thing Wallace could contrive to be an extremely successful man. His career, indeed, is set with successes. He left me behind him long ago; he soared up over my head, and cut a figure in the world that I couldn't cut — anyhow. He was still a year short of forty, and they say now that he would have been in office and very probably in the new Cabinet if he had lived. At school he always beat me without effort — as it were by nature. We were at school together at Saint Althelstan's College in West Kensington for almost all our school- time. He came into the school as my co- equal, but he left far above me, in a blaze of scholarships and brilliant performance. Yet I think I made a fair average running. And it was at school I heard first of the 'Door in the Wall' — that I was to hear of a second time only a month before his death.

To him at least the Door in the Wall was a real door, leading through a real wall to immortal realities. Of that I am now quite assured.

And it came into his life quite early, when he was a little fellow between five and six. I remember how, as he sat making his confession to me with a slow gravity, he reasoned and reckoned the date of it. 'There was,' he said, 'a crimson Virginia creeper in it – all one bright uniform crimson, in a clear amber sunshine against a white wall. That came into the impression somehow, though I don't clearly remember how, and there were horse- chestnut leaves upon the clean pavement outside the green door. They were blotched yellow and green, you know, not brown nor dirty, so that they must have been new fallen. I take it that means October. I look out for horse- chestnut leaves every year and I ought to know.

'If I'm right in that, I was about five years and four months old.'

He was, he said, rather a precocious little boy – he learnt to talk at an abnormally early age, and he was so sane and ' old-fashioned', as people say, that he was permitted an amount of initiative that most children scarcely attain by seven or eight. His mother died when he was two, and he was under the less vigilant and authoritative care of a nursery governess. His father was a stern, preoccupied lawyer, who gave him little attention and expected great things of him. For all his brightness he found life grey and dull, I think. And one day he wandered.

He could not recall the particular neglect that enabled him to get away, nor the course he took among the West Ken sington roads. All that had faded among the incurable blurs of memory. But the white wall and the green door stood out quite distinctly.

As his memory of that childish experience ran, he did at the very first sight of that door experience a peculiar emotion, an attraction, a desire to get to the door and open it and walk in. And at the same time he had the clearest conviction that either it was unwise or it was wrong of him – he could not tell which – to yield to this attraction. He insisted upon it as a curious thing that he knew from the very beginning – unless memory has played him the queerest trick – that the door was unfastened, and that he could go in as he chose.

I seem to see the figure of that little boy, drawn and repelled. And it was very clear in his mind, too, though why it should be so was never explained, that his father would be very angry if he went in through that door.

Wallace described all these moments of hesitation to me with the utmost particularity. He went right past the door, and then, with his hands in his pockets and making an infantile attempt to whistle, strolled right along beyond the end of the wall. There he recalls a number of mean dirty shops, and particularly that of a plumber and decorator with a dusty disorder of earthenware pipes, sheet lead, ball taps, pattern books of wallpaper, and tins of enamel. He stood pretending to examine these things, and coveting , passionately desiring, the green door.

Then, he said, he had a gust of emotion. He made a run for it, lest hesitation should grip him again; he went plump with outstretched hand through the green door and let it slam behind him. And so, in a trice, he came into the garden that has haunted all his life.

It was very difficult for Wallace to give me his full sense of that garden into which he came.

There was something in the very air of it that exhilarated, that gave one a sense of lightness and good happening and well- being; there was something in the sight of it that made all its colour clean and perfect and subtly luminous. In the instant of coming into it one was exquisitely glad – as only in rare moments, and when one is young and joyful one can be glad in this world. And everything was beautiful there . . .

Wallace mused before he went on telling me. ‘You see,’ he said, with the doubtful inflection of a man who pauses at incredible things, ‘there were two great panthers there . . . Yes, spotted panthers. And I was not afraid. There was a long wide path with marble- edged flower borders on either side, and these two huge velvety beasts were playing there with a ball. One looked up and came towards me, a little curious as it seemed. It came right up to me, rubbed its soft round ear very gently against the small hand I held out, and purred. It was, I tell you, an enchanted garden. I know. And the size? Oh! it stretched far and wide, this way and that. I believe there were hills far away. Heaven knows where West

Ken sington had suddenly got to. And somehow it was just like coming home.

‘You know, in the very moment the door swung to behind me, I forgot the road with its fallen chestnut leaves, its cabs and tradesmen’s carts, I forgot the sort of gravitational pull back to the discipline and obedience of home, I forgot all hesitations and fear, forgot discretion, forgot all the intimate realities of this life. I became in a moment a very glad and wonder- happy little boy – in another world. It was a world with a different quality, a warmer, more penetrating and mellower light, with a faint clear gladness in its air, and wisps of sun- touched cloud in the blueness of its sky. And before me ran this long wide path, invitingly, with weedless beds on either side, rich with untended flowers, and these two great panthers. I put my little hands fearlessly on their soft fur, and caressed their round ears and the sensitive corners under their ears, and played with them, and it was as though they welcomed me home. There was a keen sense of homecoming in my mind, and when presently a tall, fair girl appeared in the pathway and came to meet me, smiling, and said “Well?” to me, and lifted me and kissed me, and put me down and led me by the hand, there was no amazement, but only an impression of delightful rightness, of being reminded of happy things that had in some strange way been overlooked. There were broad red steps, I remember, that came into view between spikes of delphinium, and up these we went to a great avenue between very old and shady dark trees. All down this avenue, you know, between the red chapped stems, were marble seats of honour and statuary, and very tame and friendly white doves . . .

‘Along this cool avenue my girl- friend led me, looking down – I recall the pleasant lines, the finely- modelled chin of her sweet kind face – asking me questions in a soft, agreeable voice, and telling me things, pleasant things I know, though what they were I was never able to recall . . . Presently a Capuchin monkey, very clean, with a fur of ruddy brown and kindly hazel eyes, came down a tree to us and ran beside me, looking up at me and grinning, and presently leapt to my shoulder. So we two went on our way in great happiness.’

He paused.

‘Go on,’ I said.

‘I remember little things. We passed an old man musing among laurels, I remember, and a place gay with paroquets, and came through a broad shaded colonnade to a spacious cool palace, full of pleasant fountains, full of beautiful things, full of the quality and promise of heart’s desire. And there were many things and many people, some that still seem to stand out clearly and some that are vaguer; but all these people were beautiful and kind. In some way – I don’t know how – it was conveyed to me that they all were kind to me, glad to have me there, and filling me with gladness by their gestures, by the touch of their hands, by the welcome and love in their eyes. Yes—’

He mused for a while. ‘Playmates I found there. That was very much to me, because I was a lonely little boy. They played delightful games in a grass- covered court where there was a sundial set about with flowers. And as one played one loved . . .

‘But – it’s odd – there’s a gap in my memory. I don’t remember the games we played. I never remembered. Afterwards, as a child, I spent long hours trying, even with tears, to recall the form of that happiness. I wanted to play it all over again – in my nursery – by myself. No! All I remember is the happiness and two dear playfellows who were most with me . . . Then presently came a sombre dark woman, with a grave, pale face and dreamy eyes, a sombre woman, wearing a soft long robe of pale purple, who carried a book, and beckoned and took me aside with her into a gallery above a hall – though my playmates were loth to have me go, and ceased their game and stood watching as I was carried away. “Come back to us!” they cried. “Come back to us soon!” I looked up at her face, but she heeded them not at all. Her face was very gentle and grave. She took me to a seat in the gallery, and I stood beside her, ready to look at her book as she opened it upon her knee. The pages fell open. She pointed, and I looked, marvelling, for in the living pages of that book I saw myself; it was a story about myself, and in it were all the things that had happened to me since ever I was born . . .

‘It was wonderful to me, because the pages of that book were not pictures, you understand, but realities.’

Wallace paused gravely – looked at me doubtfully.

‘Go on,’ I said. ‘I understand.’

‘They were realities – yes, they must have been; people moved and things came and went in them; my dear mother, whom I had near forgotten; then my father, stern and upright, the servants, the nursery, all the familiar things of home. Then the front door and the busy streets, with traffic to and fro. I looked and marvelled, and looked half doubtfully again into the woman’s face and turned the pages over, skipping this and that, to see more of this book and more, and so at last I came to myself hovering and hesitating outside the green door in the long white wall, and felt again the conflict and the fear.

‘ “And next?” I cried, and would have turned on, but the cool hand of the grave woman delayed me.

‘ “Next?” I insisted, and struggled gently with her hand, pulling up her fingers with all my childish strength, and as she yielded and the page came over she bent down upon me like a shadow and kissed my brow.

‘But the page did not show the enchanted garden, nor the panthers, nor the girl who had led me by the hand, nor the playfellows who had been so loth to let me go. It showed a long grey street in West Kensington, in that chill hour of afternoon before the lamps are lit; and I was there, a wretched little figure, weeping aloud, for all that I could do to restrain myself, and I was weeping because I could not return to my dear playfellows who had called after me, “Come back to us! Come back to us soon!” I was there. This was no page in a book, but harsh reality; that enchanted place and the restraining hand of the grave mother at whose knee I stood had gone – whither had they gone?’

He halted again, and remained for a time staring into the fire.

‘Oh! the woefulness of that return!’ he murmured.

‘Well?’ I said, after a minute or so.

‘Poor little wretch I was! – brought back to this grey world again! As I realized the fullness of what had happened to me, I gave way to quite ungovernable grief. And the shame and humiliation of that public weeping and my disgraceful homecoming remain with me still. I see again the benevolent-looking old gentleman in gold spectacles who stopped and spoke to me – prodding me first with his umbrella. "Poor little chap," said he; "and are you lost then?" – and me a London boy of five and more! And he must needs bring in a kindly young policeman and make a crowd of me, and so march me home. Sobbing, conspicuous, and frightened, I came back from the enchanted garden to the steps of my father's house.

'That is as well as I can remember my vision of that garden – the garden that haunts me still. Of course, I can convey nothing of that indescribable quality of translucent unreality, that difference from the common things of experience that hung about it all; but that – that is what happened. If it was a dream, I am sure it was a daytime and altogether extraordinary dream . . . H'm! – naturally there followed a terrible questioning, by my aunt, my father, the nurse, the governess – everyone . . .

'I tried to tell them, and my father gave me my first thrashing for telling lies. When afterwards I tried to tell my aunt, she punished me again for my wicked persistence. Then, as I said, everyone was forbidden to listen to me, to hear a word about it. Even my fairy- tale books were taken away from me for a time – because I was too "imaginative". Eh? Yes, they did that! My father belonged to the old school . . . And my story was driven back upon myself. I whispered it to my pillow – my pillow that was often damp and salt to my whispering lips with childish tears. And I added always to my official and less fervent prayers this one heartfelt request: "Please God I may dream of the garden. Oh! take me back to my garden!" Take me back to my garden! I dreamt often of the garden. I may have added to it, I may have changed it; I do not know . . . All this, you understand, is an attempt to reconstruct from fragmentary memories a very early experience. Between that and the other consecutive memories of my boyhood there is a gulf. A time came when it seemed impossible I should ever speak of that wonder glimpse again.'

I asked an obvious question.

'No,' he said. 'I don't remember that I ever attempted to find my way back to the garden in those early years. This seems odd to me now, but I think that very probably a closer watch was kept on my movements after this misadventure to prevent my going astray. No, it wasn't till you knew me that I tried for the garden again. And I believe there was a period – incredible as it seems now –when I forgot the garden altogether – when I was about eight or nine it may have been. Do you remember me as a kid at Saint Althelstan’s?’

‘Rather!’

‘I didn’t show any signs, did I, in those days of having a secret dream?’

He looked up with a sudden smile.

‘Did you ever play North- West Passage with me? . . . No, of course you didn’t come my way!

‘It was the sort of game,’ he went on, ‘that every imaginative child plays all day. The idea was the discovery of a North- West Passage to school. The way to school was plain enough; the game consisted in finding some way that wasn’t plain, starting off ten minutes early in some almost hopeless direction, and working my way round through unaccustomed streets to my goal. And one day I got entangled among some rather low- class streets on the other side of Campden Hill, and I began to think that for once the game would be against me and that I should get to school late. I tried rather desperately a street that seemed a cul- de- sac , and found a passage at the end. I hurried through that with renewed hope. “I shall do it yet,” I said, and passed a row of frowsy little shops that were inexplicably familiar to me, and behold! there was my long white wall and the green door that led to the enchanted garden!

‘The thing whacked upon me suddenly. Then, after all, that garden, that wonderful garden, wasn’t a dream!’

He paused.

‘I suppose my second experience with the green door marks the world of difference there is between the busy life of a schoolboy and the infinite leisure of a child. Anyhow, this second time I didn’t for a moment think of going in straight away. You see—. For one thing, my mind was full of the idea of getting to school in time – set on not breaking my record for punctuality. I must surely have felt some little desire at least to try the door – yes. I must have felt that . . . But I seem to remember the attraction of the door mainly as another obstacle to my overmastering determination to get to school. I was immensely interested by this discovery I had made, of course – I went on with my mind full of it – but I went on. It didn't check me. I ran past, tugging out my watch, found I had ten minutes still to spare, and then I was going downhill into familiar surroundings. I got to school, breathless, it is true, and wet with perspiration, but in time. I can remember hanging up my coat and hat . . . Went right by it and left it behind me. Odd, eh?

He looked at me thoughtfully. 'Of course I didn't know then that it wouldn't always be there. Schoolboys have limited imaginations. I suppose I thought it was an awfully jolly thing to have it there, to know my way back to it; but there was the school tugging at me. I expect I was a good deal distraught and inattentive that morning, recalling what I could of the beautiful strange people I should presently see again. Oddly enough I had no doubt in my mind that they would be glad to see me . . . Yes, I must have thought of the garden that morning just as a jolly sort of place to which one might resort in the interludes of a strenuous scholastic career.

'I didn't go that day at all. The next day was a half- holiday, and that may have weighed with me. Perhaps, too, my state of inattention brought down impositions upon me, and docked the margin of time necessary for the détour. I don't know. What I do know is that in the meantime the enchanted garden was so much upon my mind that I could not keep it to myself.

'I told – what was his name? – a ferrety- looking youngster we used to call Squiff.'

'Young Hopkins,' said I.

'Hopkins it was. I did not like telling him. I had a feeling that in some way it was against the rules to tell him, but I did. He was walking part of the way home with me; he was talkative, and if we had not talked about the enchanted garden we should have talked of something else, and it was intolerable to me to think about any other subject. So I blabbed.

'Well, he told my secret. The next day in the play interval I found myself surrounded by half a dozen bigger boys, half teasing, and wholly curious to hear more of the enchanted garden. There was that big Fawcett – you remember him? – and Carnaby and Morley Reynolds. You weren't there by any chance? No, I think I should have remembered if you were . . .

'A boy is a creature of odd feelings. I was, I really believe, in spite of my secret self- disgust, a little flattered to have the attention of these big fellows. I remember particularly a moment of pleasure caused by the praise of Crawshaw – you remember Crawshaw major, the son of Crawshaw the composer? – who said it was the best lie he had ever heard. But at the same time there was a really painful undertow of shame at telling what I felt was indeed a sacred secret. That beast Fawcett made a joke about the girl in green—'

Wallace's voice sank with the keen memory of that shame. 'I pretended not to hear,' he said. 'Well, then Carnaby suddenly called me a young liar, and disputed with me when I said the thing was true. I said I knew where to find the green door, could lead them all there in ten minutes. Carnaby became outrageously virtuous, and said I'd have to – and bear out my words or suffer. Did you ever have Carnaby twist your arm? Then perhaps you'll understand how it went with me. I swore my story was true. There was nobody in the school then to save a chap from Carnaby, though Crawshaw put in a word or so. Carnaby had got his game. I grew excited and red-eared, and a little frightened. I behaved altogether like a silly little chap, and the outcome of it all was that instead of starting alone for my enchanted garden, I led the way presently – cheeks flushed, ears hot, eyes smarting, and my soul one burning misery and shame – for a party of six mocking, curious, and threatening schoolfellows.

'We never found the white wall and the green door . . .'

'You mean—?'

'I mean I couldn't find it. I would have found it if I could.

'And afterwards when I could go alone I couldn't find it. I never found it. I seem now to have been always looking for it through my schoolboy days, but I never came upon it – never.'

'Did the fellows – make it disagreeable?'

'Beastly . . . Carnaby held a council over me for wanton lying. I remember how I sneaked home and upstairs to hide the marks of my blubbering. But when I cried myself to sleep at last it wasn't for Carnaby, but for the garden, for the beautiful afternoon I had hoped for, for the sweet friendly women and the waiting playfellows, and the game I had hoped to learn again, that beautiful forgotten game .

‘I believed firmly that if I had not told— . . . I had bad times after that – crying at night and wool- gathering by day. For two terms I slacked and had bad reports. Do you remember? Of course you would! It was you – your beating me in mathematics that brought me back to the grind again.’

For a time my friend stared silently into the red heart of the fire. Then he said: ‘I never saw it again until I was seventeen.

‘It leapt upon me for the third time – as I was driving to Paddington on my way to Oxford and a scholarship. I had just one momentary glimpse. I was leaning over the apron of my hansom smoking a cigarette, and no doubt thinking myself no end of a man of the world, and suddenly there was the door, the wall, the dear sense of unforgettable and still attainable things.

‘We clattered by – I too taken by surprise to stop my cab until we were well past and round a corner. Then I had a queer moment, a double and divergent movement of my will: I tapped the little door in the roof of the cab, and brought my arm down to pull out my watch. “Yes, sir!” said the cabman, smartly. “Er – well – it’s nothing,” I cried. “My mistake! We haven’t much time! Go on!” And he went on . . .

‘I got my scholarship. And the night after I was told of that I sat over my fire in my little upper room, my study, in my father’s house, with his praise – his rare praise – and his sound counsels ringing in my ears, and I smoked my favourite pipe – the formidable bulldog of adolescence –and thought of that door in the long white wall. “If I had stopped,” I thought, “I should have missed my scholarship, I should have missed Oxford – muddled all the fine career before me! I begin to see things better!” I fell musing deeply, but I did not doubt then this career of mine was a thing that merited sacrifice.

‘Those dear friends and that clear atmosphere seemed very sweet to me, very fine but remote. My grip was fixing now upon the world. I saw another door opening – the door of my career.’

He stared again into the fire. Its red light picked out a stubborn strength in his face for just one flickering moment, and then it vanished again.

‘Well,’ he said and sighed, ‘I have served that career. I have done – much work, much hard work. But I have dreamt of the enchanted garden a thousand dreams, and seen its door, or at least glimpsed its door, four times since then. Yes – four times. For a while this world was so bright and interesting, seemed so full of meaning and opportunity, that the half-effaced charm of the garden was by comparison gentle and remote. Who wants to pat panthers on the way to dinner with pretty women and distinguished men? I came down to London from Oxford, a man of bold promise that I have done something to redeem. Something – and yet there have been disappointments . . .

‘Twice I have been in love – I will not dwell on that –but once, as I went to someone who, I knew, doubted whether I dared to come, I took a short cut at a venture through an unfrequented road near Earl’s Court, and so happened on a white wall and a familiar green door. “Odd!” said I to myself, “but I thought this place was on Campden Hill. It’s the place I never could find somehow – like counting Stonehenge – the place of that queer daydream of mine.” And I went by it intent upon my purpose. It had no appeal to me that afternoon.

‘I had just a moment’s impulse to try the door, three steps aside were needed at the most – though I was sure enough in my heart that it would open to me – and then I thought that doing so might delay me on the way to that appointment in which my honour was involved. Afterwards I was sorry for my punctuality – I might at least have peeped in and waved a hand to those panthers, but I knew enough by this time not to seek again belatedly that which is not found by seeking. Yes, that time made me very sorry . . .

‘Years of hard work after that, and never a sight of the door. It’s only recently it has come back to me. With it there has come a sense as though some thin tarnish had spread itself over my world. I began to think of it as a sorrowful and bitter thing that I should never see that door again. Perhaps I was suffering a little from overwork –perhaps it was what I’ve heard spoken of as the feeling of forty. I don’t know. But certainly the keen brightness that makes effort easy has gone out of things recently, and that just at a time – with all these new political developments –when I ought to be working. Odd, isn't it? But I do begin to find life toilsome, its rewards, as I come near them, cheap. I began a little while ago to want the garden quite badly. Yes – and I've seen it three times.'

'The garden?'

'No – the door! And I haven't gone in!'

He leant over the table to me, with an enormous sorrow in his voice as he spoke. 'Thrice I have had my chance –thrice ! If ever that door offers itself to me again, I swore, I will go in, out of this dust and heat, out of this dry glitter of vanity, out of these toilsome futilities. I will go and never return. This time I will stay . . . I swore it, and when the time came – I didn't go .

'Three times in one year have I passed that door and failed to enter. Three times in the last year.

'The first time was on the night of the snatch division on the Tenants' Redemption Bill, on which the Government was saved by a majority of three. You remember? No one on our side – perhaps very few on the opposite side – expected the end that night. Then the debate collapsed like eggshells. I and Hotchkiss were dining with his cousin at Brentford; we were both unpaired, and we were called up by telephone, and set off at once in his cousin's motor. We got in barely in time, and on the way we passed my wall and door – livid in the moonlight, blotched with hot yellow as the glare of our lamps lit it, but unmistakable. "My God!" cried I. "What?" said Hotchkiss. "Nothing!" I answered, and the moment passed.

' "I've made a great sacrifice," I told the whip as I got in. "They all have," he said, and hurried by.

'I do not see how I could have done otherwise then. And the next occasion was as I rushed to my father's bedside to bid that stern old man farewell. Then, too, the claims of life were imperative. But the third time was different; it happened a week ago. It fills me with hot remorse to recall it. I was with Gurker and Ralphs – it's no secret now, you know, that I've had my talk with Gurker. We had been dining at Frobisher's, and the talk had become intimate between us. The question of my place in the reconstructed Ministry lay always just over the boundary of the discussion. Yes –

yes. That's all settled. It needn't be talked about yet, but there's no reason to keep a secret from you . . . Yes – thanks! thanks! But let me tell you my story.

'Then, on that night things were very much in the air. My position was a very delicate one. I was keenly anxious to get some definite word from Gurker, but was hampered by Ralphs' presence. I was using the best power of my brain to keep that light and careless talk not too obviously directed to the point that concerned me. I had to. Ralphs' behaviour since has more than justified my caution . . . Ralphs, I knew, would leave us beyond the Kensington High Street, and then I could surprise Gurker by a sudden frankness. One has sometimes to resort to these little devices . . . And then it was that in the margin of my field of vision I became aware once more of the white wall, the green door before us down the road.

'We passed it talking. I passed it. I can still see the shadow of Gurker's marked profile, his opera hat tilted forward over his prominent nose, the many folds of his neck wrap going before my shadow and Ralphs' as we sauntered past.

'I passed within twenty inches of the door. "If I say goodnight to them, and go in," I asked myself, "what will happen?" And I was all a- tingle for that word with Gurker.

'I could not answer that question in the tangle of my other problems. "They will think me mad," I thought. "And suppose I vanish now! – Amazing disappearance of a prominent politician!" That weighed with me. A thousand inconceivably petty worldlinesses weighed with me in that crisis.'

Then he turned on me with a sorrowful smile, and, speaking slowly, 'Here I am!' he said.

'Here I am!' he repeated, 'and my chance has gone from me. Three times in one year the door has been offered me – the door that goes into peace, into delight, into a beauty beyond dreaming, a kindness no man on earth can know. And I have rejected it, Redmond, and it has gone—'

'How do you know?'

'I know. I know. I am left now to work it out, to stick to the tasks that held me so strongly when my moments came. You say I have success – this vulgar, tawdry, irksome, envied thing. I have it.’ He had a walnut in his big hand. ‘If that was my success,’ he said, and crushed it, and held it out for me to see.

‘Let me tell you something, Redmond. This loss is destroying me. For two months, for ten weeks nearly now, I have done no work at all, except the most necessary and urgent duties. My soul is full of inappeasable regrets. At nights – when it is less likely I shall be recognized – I go out. I wander. Yes. I wonder what people would think of that if they knew. A Cabinet Minister, the responsible head of that most vital of all departments, wandering alone – grieving – sometimes near audibly lamenting –for a door, for a garden!’

I can see now his rather pallid face, and the unfamiliar sombre fire that had come into his eyes. I see him very vividly tonight. I sit recalling his words, his tones, and last evening’s Westminster Gazette still lies on my sofa, containing the notice of his death. At lunch today the club was busy with his death. We talked of nothing else.

They found his body very early yesterday morning in a deep excavation near East Kensington Station. It is one of two shafts that have been made in connection with an extension of the railway southward. It is protected from the intrusion of the public by a hoarding upon the high road, in which a small doorway has been cut for the convenience of some of the workmen who live in that direction. The doorway was left unfastened through a misunderstanding between two gangers, and through it he made his way.

My mind is darkened with questions and riddles.

It would seem he walked all the way from the House that night – he has frequently walked home during the past Session – and so it is I figure his dark form coming along the late and empty streets, wrapped up, intent. And then did the pale electric lights near the station cheat the rough planking into a semblance of white? Did that fatal unfastened door awaken some memory?

Was there, after all, ever any green door in the wall at all?

I do not know. I have told his story as he told it to me. There are times when I believe that Wallace was no more than the victim of the coincidence between a rare but not unprecedented type of hallucination and a careless trap, but that indeed is not my profoundest belief. You may think me superstitious, if you will, and foolish; but, indeed, I am more than half convinced that he had, in truth, an abnormal gift, and a sense, something – I know not what – that in the guise of wall and door offered him an outlet, a secret and peculiar passage of escape into another and altogether more beautiful world. At any rate, you will say, it betrayed him in the end. But did it betray him? There you touch the inmost mystery of these dreamers, these men of vision and the imagination. We see our world fair and common, the hoarding and the pit. By our daylight standard he walked out of security into darkness, danger, and death.

But did he see like that?

A Slip under the Microscope

Outside the laboratory windows was a watery- grey fog, and within a close warmth and the yellow light of the green- shaded gas lamps that stood two to each table down its narrow length. On each table stood a couple of glass jars containing the mangled vestiges of the crayfish, mussels, frogs, and guineapigs upon which the students had been working, and down the side of the room, facing the windows, were shelves bearing bleached dissections in spirits, surmounted by a row of beautifully executed anatomical drawings in whitewood frames and overhanging a row of cubical lockers. All the doors of the laboratory were panelled with blackboard, and on these were the half- erased diagrams of the previous day's work. The laboratory was empty, save for the demonstrator, who sat near the preparation- room door, and silent, save for a low, continuous murmur, and the clicking of the rocker microtome at which he was working. But scattered about the room were traces of numerous students: handbags, polished boxes of instruments, in one place a large drawing covered by newspaper, and in another a prettily bound copy of News from Nowhere , a book oddly at variance with its surroundings. These things had been put down hastily as the students had arrived and hurried at once to secure their seats in the adjacent lecture theatre. Deadened by the closed door, the measured accents of the professor sounded as a featureless muttering.

Presently, faint through the closed windows came the sound of the Oratory clock striking the hour of eleven. The clicking of the microtome ceased, and the demonstrator looked at his watch, rose, thrust his hands into his pockets, and walked slowly down the laboratory towards the lecture- theatre door. He stood listening for a moment, and then his eye fell on the little volume by William Morris. He picked it up, glanced at the title, smiled, opened it, looked at the name on the fly- leaf, ran the leaves through with his hand, and put it down. Almost immediately the even murmur of the lecturer ceased, there was a sudden burst of pencils rattling on the desks in the lecture theatre, a stirring, a scraping of feet, and a number of voices speaking together. Then a firm footfall approached the door, which began to open, and stood ajar as some indistinctly heard question arrested the newcomer.

The demonstrator turned, walked slowly back past the microtome, and left the laboratory by the preparation- room door. As he did so, first one, and then several students carrying notebooks entered the laboratory from the lecture theatre, and distributed themselves among the little tables, or stood in a group about the doorway. They were an exceptionally heterogeneous assembly, for while Oxford and Cambridge still recoil from the blushing prospect of mixed classes, the College of Science anticipated America in the matter years ago – mixed socially too, for the prestige of the College is high, and its scholarships, free of any age limit, dredge deeper even than do those of the Scotch universities. The class numbered one- andtwenty, but some remained in the theatre questioning the professor, copying the blackboard diagrams before they were washed off, or examining the special specimens he had produced to illustrate the day's teaching. Of the nine who had come into the laboratory three were girls, one of whom, a little fair woman wearing spectacles and dressed in greyish- green, was peering out of the window at the fog, while the other two, both wholesome-looking, plain- faced schoolgirls, unrolled and put on the brown holland aprons they wore while dissecting. Of the men, two went down the laboratory to their places, one a pallid, dark- bearded man, who had once been a tailor; the other a pleasant- featured, ruddy young man of twenty, dressed in a well- fitting brown suit; young Wedderburn, the son of Wedderburn the eye specialist. The others formed a little knot near the theatre door. One of these, a dwarfed, spectacled figure with a hunchback, sat on a bent wood stool; two others, one a short, dark youngster and the other a flaxen- haired, reddish- complexioned young man, stood leaning side by side against the slate sink, while the fourth stood facing them, and maintained the larger share of the conversation.

This last person was named Hill. He was a sturdily built young fellow, of the same age as Wedderburn; he had a white face, dark grey eyes, hair of an indeterminate colour, and prominent, irregular features. He talked rather louder than was needful, and thrust his hands deeply into his pockets. His collar was frayed and blue with the starch of a careless laundress, his clothes were evidently ready-made, and there was a patch on the side of his boot near the toe. And as he talked or listened to the others, he glanced now and again towards the lecture-theatre door. They were discussing the depressing peroration of the lecture they had just heard, the last lecture it was in the introductory course in zoology. 'From ovum to ovum is the goal of the higher vertebrata,' the lecturer had said in his melancholy tones, and so had neatly rounded off the sketch of comparative anatomy he had been developing. The spectacled hunchback had repeated it with noisy appreciation, had tossed it towards the fair-haired student with an evident provocation, and had started one of those vague, rambling discussions on generalities so unaccountably dear to the student mind all the world over.

'That is our goal, perhaps – I admit it, as far as science goes,' said the fair-haired student, rising to the challenge. 'But there are things above science.'

'Science,' said Hill confidently, 'is systematic knowledge. Ideas that don't come into the system – must anyhow – be loose ideas.' He was not quite sure whether that was a clever saying or a fatuity until his hearers took it seriously.

'The thing I cannot understand,' said the hunchback, at large, 'is whether Hill is a materialist or not.'

'There is one thing above matter,' said Hill promptly, feeling he made a better point this time, aware, too, of someone in the doorway behind him, and raising his voice a trifle for her benefit, 'and that is, the delusion that there is something above matter.'

'So we have your gospel at last,' said the fair student. 'It's all a delusion, is it? All our aspirations to lead something more than dogs' lives, all our work for anything beyond ourselves. But see how inconsistent you are. Your socialism, for instance. Why do you trouble about the interests of the race? Why do you concern yourself about the beggar in the gutter? Why are you bothering yourself to lend that book' – he indicated William Morris by a movement of the head – 'to everyone in the lab?'

'Girl,' said the hunchback indistinctly, and glanced guiltily over his shoulder.

The girl in brown, with the brown eyes, had come into the laboratory, and stood on the other side of the table behind him, with her rolled- up apron in one hand, looking over her shoulder, listening to the discussion. She did not notice the hunchback, because she was glancing from Hill to his interlocutor. Hill's consciousness of her presence betrayed itself to her only in his studious ignoring of the fact; but she understood that, and it pleased her. 'I see no reason,' said he, 'why a man should live like a brute because he knows of nothing beyond matter, and does not expect to exist a hundred years hence.'

'Why shouldn't he?' said the fair- haired student.

'Why should he?' said Hill.

'What inducement has he?'

'That's the way with all you religious people. It's all a business of inducements. Cannot a man seek after righteousness for righteousness' sake?'

There was a pause. The fair man answered, with a kind of vocal padding, 'But – you see – inducement – when I said inducement,' to gain time. And then the hunchback came to his rescue and inserted a question. He was a terrible person in the debating society with his questions, and they invariably took one form – a demand for a definition. 'What's your definition of righteousness?' said the hunchback at this stage.

Hill experienced a sudden loss of complacency at this question, but even as it was asked, relief came in the person of Brooks, the laboratory attendant, who entered by the preparation- room door, carrying a number of freshly killed guineapigs by their hind legs. 'This is the last batch of material this session,' said the youngster who had not previously spoken. Brooks advanced up the laboratory, smacking down a couple of guineapigs at each table. The rest of the class, scenting the prey from afar, came crowding in by the lecture theatre door, and the discussion perished abruptly as the students who were not already in their places hurried to them to secure the choice of a specimen. There was a noise of keys rattling on split rings as lockers were opened and dissecting instruments taken out. Hill was already standing by his table, and his box of scalpels was sticking out of his pocket. The girl in brown came a step towards him, and leaning over his table said softly, 'Did you see that I returned your book, Mr Hill?'

During the whole scene she and the book had been vividly present in his consciousness; but he made a clumsy pretence of looking at the book and seeing it for the first time. 'Oh yes,' he said, taking it up. 'I see. Did you like it?'

'I want to ask you some questions about it –sometime.'

'Certainly,' said Hill. 'I shall be glad.' He stopped awkwardly. 'You liked it?' he said.

'It's a wonderful book. Only some things I don't understand.'

Then suddenly the laboratory was hushed by a curious braying noise. It was the demonstrator. He was at the blackboard ready to begin the day's instruction, and it was his custom to demand silence by a sound midway between the 'Er' of common intercourse and the blast of a trumpet. The girl in brown slipped back to her place: it was immediately in front of Hill's, and Hill, forgetting her forthwith, took a notebook out of the drawer of his table, turned over its leaves hastily, drew a stumpy pencil from his pocket, and prepared to make a copious note of the coming demonstration. For demonstrations and lectures are the sacred text of the College students. Books, saving only the Professor's own, you may – it is even expedient to – ignore.

Hill was the son of a Landport cobbler, and had been hooked by a chance blue paper the authorities had thrown out to the Landport Technical College. He kept himself in London on his allowance of a guinea a week, and found that, with proper care, this also covered his clothing allowance, an occasional waterproof collar, that is; and ink and needles and cotton and such- like necessities for a man about town. This was his first year and his first session, but the brown old man in Landport had already got himself detested in many public- houses by boasting of his son, 'the Professor'. Hill was a vigorous youngster, with a serene contempt for the clergy of all denominations, and a fine ambition to reconstruct the world. He regarded his scholarship as a brilliant opportunity. He had begun to read at seven, and had read steadily whatever came in his way, good or bad, since then. His worldly experience had been limited to the island of Portsea, and acquired chiefly in the wholesale boot factory in which he had worked by day, after passing the seventh standard of the Board school. He had a considerable gift of speech, as the College Debating Society, which met amidst the crushing machines and mine models in the metallurgical theatre downstairs, already recognized – recognized by a violent battering of desks whenever he rose. And he was just at that fine emotional age when life opens at the end of a narrow pass like a broad valley at one's feet, full of the promise of wonderful discoveries and tremendous achievements. And his own limitations, save that he knew that he knew neither Latin nor French, were all unknown to him.

At first his interest had been divided pretty equally between his biological work at the College and social and theological theorizing, an employment which he took in deadly earnest. Of a night, when the big museum library was not open, he would sit on the bed of his room in Chelsea with his coat and a muffler on, and write out the lecture notes and revise his dissection memoranda until Thorpe called him out by a whistle – the landlady objected to open the door to attic visitors – and then the two would go prowling about the shadowy, shiny, gaslit streets, talking, very much in the fashion of the sample just given, of the God Idea and Righteousness and Carlyle and the Reorganization of Society. And in the midst of it all, Hill, arguing not only for Thorpe but for the casual passer-by, would lose the thread of his argument glancing at some pretty painted face that looked meaningly at him as he passed. Science and Righteousness! But once or twice lately there had been signs that a third interest was creeping into his life, and he had found his attention wandering from the fate of the mesoblastic somites or the probable meaning of the blastopore, to the thought of the girl with the brown eyes who sat at the table before him.

She was a paying student; she descended inconceivable social altitudes to speak to him. At the thought of the education she must have had, and the accomplishments she must possess, the soul of Hill became abject within him. She had spoken to him first over a difficulty about the alisphenoid of a rabbit's skull, and he had found that, in biology at least, he had no reason for self-abasement. And from that, after the manner of young people starting from any starting-point, they got to generalities, and while Hill attacked her upon the question of socialism, –some instinct told him to spare her a direct assault upon her religion – she was gathering resolution to undertake what she told herself was his aesthetic education. She was a year or two older than he, though the thought never occurred to him. The loan of News from Nowhere was the beginning of a series of cross loans. Upon some absurd first principle of his, Hill had never 'wasted time' upon poetry, and it seemed an appalling deficiency to her. One day in the lunch hour, when she chanced upon him alone in the little museum where the skeletons were arranged, shamefully eating the bun that constituted his midday meal, she retreated, and returned to lend him, with a slightly furtive air, a volume of Browning. He stood sideways towards her and took the book rather clumsily, because he was holding the bun in the other hand. And in the retrospect his voice lacked the cheerful clearness he could have wished.

That occurred after the examination in comparative anatomy, on the day before the College turned out its students and was carefully locked up by the officials for the Christmas holidays. The excitement of cramming for the first trial of strength had for a little while dominated Hill to the exclusion of his other interests. In the forecasts of the result in which everyone indulged he was surprised to find that no one regarded him as a possible competitor for the Harvey Commemoration Medal, of which this and the two subsequent examinations disposed. It was about this time that Wedderburn, who so far had lived inconspicuously on the uttermost margin of Hill's perceptions, began to take on the appearance of an obstacle. By a mutual agreement, the nocturnal prowlings with Thorpe ceased for the three weeks before the examination, and his landlady pointed out that she really could not supply so much lamp oil at the price. He walked to and fro from the College with little slips of mnemonics in his hand, lists of crayfish appendages, rabbits' skull- bones, and vertebrate nerves, for example, and became a positive nuisance to foot passengers in the opposite direction.

But, by a natural reaction, Poetry and the girl with the brown eyes ruled the Christmas holiday. The pending results of the examination became such a secondary consideration that Hill marvelled at his father's excitement. Even had he wished it, there was no comparative anatomy to read in Landport, and he was too poor to buy books, but the stock of poets in the library was extensive, and Hill's attack was magnificently sustained. He saturated himself with the fluent numbers of Longfellow and Tennyson, and fortified himself with Shakespeare; found a kindred soul in Pope and a master in Shelley, and heard and fled the siren voices of Eliza Cook and Mrs Hemans. But he read no more Browning, because he hoped for the loan of other volumes from Miss Haysman when he returned to London.

He walked from his lodgings to the College with that volume of Browning in his shiny black bag, and his mind teeming with the finest general propositions about poetry. Indeed, he framed first this little speech and then that with which to grace the return. The morning was an exceptionally pleasant one for London; there was a clear hard frost and undeniable blue in the sky, a thin haze softened every outline, and warm shafts of sunlight struck between the house blocks and turned the sunny side of the street to amber and gold. In the hall of the College he pulled off his glove and signed his name with fingers so stiff with cold that the characteristic dash under the signature he cultivated became a quivering line. He imagined Miss Haysman about him everywhere. He turned at the staircase, and there, below, he saw a crowd struggling at the foot of the noticeboard. This, possibly, was the biology list. He forgot Browning and Miss Haysman for the moment, and joined the scrimmage. And at last, with his cheek flattened against the sleeve of the man on the step above him, he read the list –

CLASS I

H. J. Somers Wedderburn

William Hill

and thereafter followed a second class that is outside our present sympathies. It was characteristic that he did not trouble to look for Thorpe on the physics list, but backed out of the struggle at once, and in a curious emotional state between pride over common second- class humanity and acute disappointment at Wedderburn's success, went on his way upstairs. At the top, as he was hanging up his coat in the passage, the zoological demonstrator, a young man from Oxford who secretly regarded him as a blatant 'mugger' of the very worst type, offered his heartiest congratulations.

At the laboratory door Hill stopped for a second to get his breath, and then entered. He looked straight up the laboratory and saw all five girl students grouped in their places, and Wedderburn, the once retiring Wedderburn, leaning rather gracefully against the window, playing with the blind tassel and talking apparently to the five of them. Now, Hill could talk bravely enough and even overbearingly to one girl, and he could have made a speech to a roomful of girls, but this business of standing at ease and appreciating, fencing, and returning quick remarks round a group was, he knew, altogether beyond him. Coming up the staircase his feelings for Wedderburn had been generous, a certain admiration perhaps, a willingness to shake his hand conspicuously and heartily as one who had fought but the first round. But before Christmas Wedderburn had never gone up to that end of the room to talk. In a flash Hill's mist of vague excitement condensed abruptly to a vivid dislike of Wedderburn. Possibly his expression changed. As he came up to his place, Wedderburn nodded carelessly to him, and the others glanced round. Miss Haysman looked at him and away again, the faintest touch of her eyes. 'I can't agree with you, Mr Wedderburn,' she said.

'I must congratulate you on your first class, Mr Hill,' said the spectacled girl in green, turning round and beaming at him.

'It's nothing,' said Hill, staring at Wedderburn and Miss Haysman talking together, and eager to hear what they talked about.

'We poor folks in the second class don't think so,' said the girl in spectacles.

What was it Wedderburn was saying? Something about William Morris! Hill did not answer the girl in spectacles, and the smile died out of his face. He could not hear, and failed to see how he could 'cut in'. Confound Wedderburn! He sat down, opened his bag, hesitated whether to return the volume of Browning forthwith, in the sight of all, and instead drew out his new notebooks for the short course in elementary botany that was now beginning, and which would terminate in February. As he did so, a fat heavy man with a white face and pale grey eyes – Bindon, the professor of botany, who came up from Kew for January and February – came in by the lecture-theatre door, and passed, rubbing his hands together and smiling, in silent affability down the laboratory.

In the subsequent six weeks Hill experienced some very rapid and curiously complex emotional developments. For the most part he had Wedderburn in focus – a fact that Miss Haysman never suspected. She told Hill (for in the comparative privacy of the museum she talked a good deal to him of socialism and Browning and general propositions) that she had met Wedderburn at the house of some people she knew, and ‘he’s inherited his cleverness; for his father, you know, is the great eye specialist’.

‘My father is a cobbler,’ said Hill, quite irrelevantly, and perceived the want of dignity even as he said it. But the gleam of jealousy did not offend her. She conceived herself the fundamental source of it. He suffered bitterly from a sense of Wedderburn’s unfairness, and a realization of his own handicap. Here was this Wedderburn had picked up a prominent man for a father, and instead of his losing so many marks on the score of that advantage, it was counted to him for righteousness! And while Hill had to introduce himself and talk to Miss Haysman clumsily over mangled guineapigs in the laboratory, this Wedderburn, in some backstairs way, had access to her social altitudes, and could converse in a polished argot that Hill understood perhaps, but felt incapable of speaking. Not, of course, that he wanted to. Then it seemed to Hill that for Wedderburn to come there day after day with cuffs unfrayed, neatly tailored, precisely barbered, quietly perfect, was in itself an ill- bred, sneering sort of proceeding. Moreover, it was a stealthy thing for Wedderburn to behave insignificantly for a space, to mock modesty, to lead Hill to fancy that he himself was beyond dispute the man of the year, and then suddenly to dart in front of him, and incontinently to swell up in this fashion. In addition to these things, Wedderburn displayed an increasing disposition to join in any conversational grouping that included Miss Haysman; and would venture, and indeed seek occasion, to pass opinions derogatory to socialism and atheism. He goaded Hill to incivilities by neat, shallow, and exceedingly effective personalities about the socialist leaders, until Hill hated Bernard Shaw’s graceful egotisms, William Morris’s limited editions and luxurious wallpapers, and Walter Crane’s charmingly absurd ideal working men, about as much as he hated Wedderburn. The dissertations in the laboratory, that had been his glory in the previous term, became a danger, degenerated into inglorious tussles with Wedderburn, and Hill kept to them only out of an obscure perception that his honour was involved. In the debating society Hill knew quite clearly that, to a thunderous accompaniment of banged desks, he could have pulverized Wedderburn. Only Wedderburn never attended the debating society to be pulverized, because – nauseous affectation! – he ‘dined late’.

You must not imagine that these things presented themselves in quite such a crude form to Hill’s perception. Hill was a born generalizer. Wedderburn to him was not so much an individual obstacle as a type, the salient angle of a class. The economic theories that, after infinite ferment, had shaped themselves in Hill’s mind, became abruptly concrete at the contact. The world became full of easy- mannered, graceful, gracefully dressed, conversationally dexterous, finally shallow Wedderburns, Bishops Wedderburn, Wedderburn M.P.s, Professors Wedderburn, Wedderburn landlords, all with finger- bowl shibboleths and epigrammatic cities of refuge from a sturdy debater. And everyone ill- clothed or ill- dressed, from the cobbler to the cab- runner, was, to Hill’s imagination, a man and a brother, a fellow- sufferer. So that he became, as it were, a champion of the fallen and oppressed, albeit to outward seeming only a self- assertive, illmannered young man, and an unsuccessful champion at that. Again and again a skirmish over the afternoon tea that the girl students had inaugurated left Hill with flushed cheeks and a tattered temper, and the debating society noticed a new quality of sarcastic bitterness in his speeches.

You will understand now how it was necessary, if only in the interests of humanity, that Hill should demolish Wedderburn in the forthcoming examination and outshine him in the eyes of Miss Haysman; and you will perceive, too, how Miss Haysman fell into some common feminine misconceptions. The Hill–Wedderburn quarrel, for in his unostentatious way Wedderburn reciprocated Hill’s ill- veiled rivalry, became a tribute to her indefinable charm: she was the Queen of Beauty in a tournament of scalpels and stumpy pencils. To her confidential friend’s secret annoyance, it even troubled her conscience, for she was a good girl, and painfully aware, through Ruskin and contemporary fiction, how entirely men’s activities are determined by women’s attitudes. And if Hill never by any chance mentioned the topic of love to her, she only credited him with the finer modesty for that omission.

So the time came on for the second examination, and Hill’s increasing pallor confirmed the general rumour that he was working hard. In the aerated bread shop near South Kensington Station you would see him, breaking his bun and sipping his milk with his eyes intent upon a paper of closely written notes. In his bedroom there were propositions about buds and stems round his lookingglass, a diagram to catch his eye, if soap should chance to spare it, above his washing basin. He missed several meetings of the debating society, but he found the chance encounters with Miss Haysman in the spacious ways of the adjacent art museum, or in the little museum at the top of the College, or in the College corridors, more frequent and very restful. In particular, they used to meet in a little gallery full of wrought-iron chests and gates near the art library, and there Hill used to talk, under the gentle stimulus of her flattering attention, of Browning and his personal ambitions. A characteristic she found remarkable in him was his freedom from avarice. He contemplated quite calmly the prospect of living all his life on an income below a hundred pounds a year. But he was determined to be famous, to make, recognizably in his own proper person, the world a better place to live in. He took Bradlaugh and John Burns for his leaders and models, poor, even impecunious, great men. But Miss Haysman thought that such lives were deficient on the aesthetic side, by which, though she did not know it, she meant good wallpaper and upholstery, pretty books, tasteful clothes, concerts, and meals nicely cooked and respectfully served.

At last came the day of the second examination, and the professor of botany, a fussy, conscientious man, rearranged all the tables in a long narrow laboratory to prevent copying, and put his demonstrator on a chair on a table (where he felt, he said, like a Hindu god), to see all the cheating, and stuck a notice outside the door, 'Door closed', for no earthly reason that any human being could discover. And all the morning from ten till one the quill of Wedderburn shrieked defiance at Hill's, and the quills of the others chased their leaders in a tireless pack, and so also it was in the afternoon. Wedderburn was a little quieter than usual, and Hill's face was hot all day, and his overcoat bulged with textbooks and notebooks against the last moment's revision. And the next day, in the morning and in the afternoon, was the practical examination, when sections had to be cut and slides identified. In the morning Hill was depressed because he knew he had cut a thick section, and in the afternoon came the mysterious slip.

It was just the kind of thing that the botanical professor was always doing. Like the income tax, it offered a premium to the cheat. It was a preparation under the microscope, a little glass slip, held in its place on the stage of the instrument by light steel clips, and the inscription set forth that the slip was not to be moved. Each student was to go in turn to it, sketch it, write in his book of answers what he considered it to be, and return to his place. Now, to move such a slip is a thing one can do by a chance movement of the finger, and in a fraction of a second. The professor's reason for decreeing that the slip should not be moved depended on the fact that the object he wanted identified was characteristic of a certain tree- stem. In the position in which it was placed it was a difficult thing to recognize, but once the slip was moved so as to bring other parts of the preparation into view, its nature was obvious enough.

Hill came to this, flushed from a contest with staining reagents, sat down on the little stool before the microscope, turned the mirror to get the best light, and then, out of sheer habit, shifted the slip. At once he remembered the prohibition, and, with an almost continuous motion of his hands, moved it back, and sat paralysed with astonishment at his action.

Then, slowly, he turned his head. The professor was out of the room; the demonstrator sat aloft on his impromptu rostrum, reading the Q. Jour. Mi. Sci.; the rest of the examinees were busy, and with their backs to him. Should he own up to the accident now? He knew quite clearly what the thing was. It was a lenticel, a characteristic preparation from the elder- tree. His eyes roved over his intent fellow- students and Wedderburn suddenly glanced over his shoulder at him with a queer expression in his eyes. The mental excitement that had kept Hill at an abnormal pitch of vigour these two days gave way to a curious nervous tension. His book of answers was beside him. He did not write down what the thing was, but with one eye at the microscope he began making a hasty sketch of it. His mind was full of this grotesque puzzle in ethics that had suddenly been sprung upon him. Should he identify it? or should he leave this question unanswered? In that case Wedderburn would probably come out first in the second result. How could he tell now whether he might not have identified the thing without shifting it? It was possible that Wedderburn had failed to recognize it, of course. Suppose Wedderburn too had shifted the slide? He looked up at the clock. There were fifteen minutes in which to make up his mind. He gathered up his book of answers and the coloured pencils he used in illustrating his replies and walked back to his seat.

He read through his manuscript, and then sat thinking and gnawing his knuckle. It would look queer now if he owned up. He must beat Wedderburn. He forgot the examples of those starry gentlemen, John Burns and Bradlaugh. Besides, he reflected, the glimpse of the rest of the slip he had had was after all quite accidental, forced upon him by chance, a kind of providential revelation rather than an unfair advantage. It was not nearly so dishonest to avail himself of that as it was of Broome, who believed in the efficacy of prayer, to pray daily for a first- class. 'Five minutes more,' said the demonstrator, folding up his paper and becoming observant. Hill watched the clock hands until two minutes remained; then he opened the book of answers, and, with hot ears and an affectation of ease, gave his drawing of the lenticel its name.

When the second pass list appeared, the previous positions of Wedderburn and Hill were reversed, and the spectacled girl in green, who knew the demonstrator in private life (where he was practically human), said that in the result of the two examinations taken together Hill had the advantage of a mark – 167 to 166 out of a possible 200. Everyone admired Hill in a way, though the suspicion of 'mugging' clung to him. But Hill was to find congratulations and Miss Haysman's enhanced opinion of him, and even the decided decline in the crest of Wedderburn, tainted by an unhappy memory. He felt a remarkable access of energy at first, and the note of a democracy marching to triumph returned to his debating society speeches; he worked at his comparative anatomy with tremendous zeal and effect, and he went on with his aesthetic education. But through it all, a vivid little picture was continually coming before his mind's eye – of a sneakish person manipulating a slide.

No human being had witnessed the act, and he was cocksure that no higher power existed to see it; but for all that it worried him. Memories are not dead things, but alive; they dwindle in disuse, but they harden and develop in all sorts of queer ways if they are being continually fretted. Curiously enough, though at the time he perceived clearly that the shifting was accidental, as the days wore on his memory became confused about it, until at last he was not sure – although he assured himself that he was sure – whether the movement had been absolutely involuntary. Then it is possible that Hill's dietary was conducive to morbid conscientiousness; a breakfast frequently eaten in a hurry, a midday bun, and, at such hours after five as chanced to be convenient, such meat as his means determined, usually in a chop- house in a back street off the Brompton Road. Occasionally he treated himself to threepenny or ninepenny classics, and they usually represented a suppression of potatoes or chops. It is indisputable that outbreaks of self- abasement and emotional revival have a distinct relation to periods of scarcity. But apart from this influence on the feelings, there was in Hill a distinct aversion to falsity that the blasphemous Landport cobbler had inculcated by strap and tongue from his earliest years. Of one fact about professed atheists I am convinced; they may be – they usually are – fools, void of subtlety, revilers of holy institutions, brutal speakers, and mischievous knaves, but they lie with difficulty. If it were not so, if they had the faintest grasp of the idea of compromise, they would simply be liberal churchmen. And, moreover, this memory poisoned his regard for Miss Haysman. For she now so evidently preferred him to Wedderburn that he felt sure he cared for her, and began reciprocating her attentions by timid marks of personal regard; at one time he even bought a bunch of violets, carried it about in his pocket, and produced it with a stumbling explanation, withered and dead, in the gallery of old iron. It poisoned, too, the denunciation of capitalist dishonesty that had been one of his life's pleasures. And, lastly, it poisoned his triumph in Wedderburn. Previously he had been Wedderburn's superior in his own eyes, and had raged simply at a want of recognition. Now he began to fret at the darker suspicion of positive inferiority. He fancied he found justifications for his position in Browning, but they vanished on analysis. At last – moved, curiously enough, by exactly the same motive forces that had resulted in his dishonesty – he went to Professor Bindon, and made a clean breast of the whole affair. As Hill was a paid student, Professor Bindon did not ask him to sit down, and he stood before the professor's desk as he made his confession.

'It's a curious story,' said Professor Bindon, slowly realizing how the thing reflected on himself, and then letting his anger rise, – 'A most remarkable story. I can't understand your doing it, and I can't understand this avowal. You're a type of student – Cambridge men would never dream – I suppose I ought to have thought – Why did you cheat?'

'I didn't cheat,' said Hill.

'But you have just been telling me you did.'

'I thought I explained--'

'Either you cheated or you did not cheat.'--

'I said my motion was involuntary.'

'I am not a metaphysician, I am a servant of science – of fact. You were told not to move the slip. You did move the slip. If that is not cheating--'

'If I was a cheat,' said Hill, with the note of hysterics in his voice, 'should I come here and tell you?'

'Your repentance, of course, does you credit,' said Professor Bindon, 'but it does not alter the original facts.'

'No, sir,' said Hill, giving in in utter self- abasement.

'Even now you cause an enormous amount of trouble. The examination list will have to be revised.'

'I suppose so, sir.'

'Suppose so? Of course it must be revised. And I don't see how I can conscientiously pass you.'

'Not pass me?' said Hill. 'Fail me?'

'It's the rule in all examinations. Or where should we be? What else did you expect? You don't want to shirk the consequences of your own acts?'

'I thought, perhaps' – said Hill. And then, 'Fail me? I thought, as I told you, you would simply deduct the marks given for that slip.'

'Impossible!' said Bindon. 'Besides, it would still leave you above Wedderburn. Deduct only the marks –Preposterous! The Departmental Regulations distinctly say--'

'But it's my own admission, sir.'

‘The Regulations say nothing whatever of the manner in which the matter comes to light. They simply provide–’

‘It will ruin me. If I fail this examination, they won’t renew my scholarship.’

‘You should have thought of that before.’

‘But, sir, consider all my circumstances–’

‘I cannot consider anything. Professors in this College are machines. The Regulations will not even let us recommend our students for appointments. I am a machine, and you have worked me. I have to do–’

‘It’s very hard, sir.’

‘Possibly it is.’

‘If I am to be failed this examination, I might as well go home at once.’

‘That is as you think proper.’ Bindon’s voice softened a little; he perceived he had been unjust, and, provided he did not contradict himself, he was disposed to amelioration. ‘As a private person,’ he said, ‘I think this confession of yours goes far to mitigate your offence. But you have set the machinery in motion, and now it must take its course. I – I am really sorry you gave way.’

A wave of emotion prevented Hill from answering. Suddenly, very vividly, he saw the heavily lined face of the old Landport cobbler, his father. ‘Good God! What a fool I have been!’ he said hotly and abruptly.

‘I hope,’ said Bindon, ‘that it will be a lesson to you.’

But, curiously enough, they were not thinking of quite the same indiscretion.

There was a pause.

‘I would like a day to think, sir, and then I will let you know – about going home, I mean,’ said Hill, moving towards the door.

The next day Hill’s place was vacant. The spectacled girl in green was, as usual, first with the news. Wedderburn and Miss Haysman were talking of a performance of The Meister singers when she came up to them.

‘Have you heard?’ she said.

‘Heard what?’

‘There was cheating in the examination.’

‘Cheating!’ said Wedderburn, with his face suddenly hot. ‘How?’

‘That slide’–

‘Moved? Never!’

‘It was. That slide that we weren’t to move’–

‘Nonsense!’ said Wedderburn. ‘Why! How could they find out? Who do they say–?’

‘It was Mr Hill.’

‘Hill!’

‘Mr Hill!’

‘Not – surely not the immaculate Hill?’ said Wedderburn, recovering.

‘I don’t believe it,’ said Miss Haysman. ‘How do you know?’

‘I didn’t,’ said the girl in spectacles. ‘But I know it now for a fact. Mr Hill went and confessed to Professor Bindon himself.’

‘By Jove!’ said Wedderburn. ‘Hill of all people. But I am always inclined to distrust these philanthropists- on principle’ –

‘Are you quite sure?’ said Miss Haysman, with a catch in her breath.

‘Quite. It’s dreadful, isn’t it? But, you know, what can you expect? His father is a cobbler.’

Then Miss Haysman astonished the girl in spectacles.

‘I don’t care. I will not believe it,’ she said, flushing darkly under her warm- tinted skin. ‘I will not believe it until he has told me so himself – face to face. I would scarcely believe it then,’ and abruptly she turned her back on the girl in spectacles, and walked to her own place.

‘It’s true, all the same,’ said the girl in spectacles, peering and smiling at Wedderburn.

But Wedderburn did not answer her. She was indeed one of those people who seem destined to make unanswered remarks.

明天

在海港小镇科尔布鲁克，汉格伯船长的名声并不好。他本是外乡人，去该地定居的动机，虽荒诞不经，却根本谈不上神秘。毕竟，当初，他很爱对人说起自己为何去该地。此外，汉格伯船长显然有些小钱，因为他买下一块地，雇人用黄砖匆匆盖起两栋难看的简陋小屋：一栋自住，一栋租给乔赛亚·卡尔维。瞎子卡尔维曾是造船工人，现已退休，因对家人专横跋扈而臭名昭著。

这两栋小屋有一堵共同的墙，前后院子分别以铁栅栏和木篱笆相隔。贝茜·卡尔维小姐理直气壮地在那道木篱笆上晾晒擦拭茶具用的茶巾、蓝色的破旧衣服或围裙，仿佛这是她的正当权利。

“贝茜啊，我的孩子，这会使木头腐烂的。”每次撞见贝茜行使此项“特权”，汉格伯船长都会隔着木篱笆，和蔼地提醒。

贝茜个子高挑，而木篱笆低矮，所以她能将胳膊肘支到木篱笆上。其双手因刚洗了东西而变得通红，但小臂白皙且匀称。她一言不发地注视着房东，沉默中透着理解、期待与渴望。

“这会使木头腐烂的。”汉格伯船长重复了一遍，接着说，“我发现这是你唯一一个浪费而粗心的习惯。为什么不在后院拉一根晾衣绳呢？”

对此，卡尔维小姐不做任何回应，只是不以为然地摇摇头。她那边的狭小后院里，有几处以石块垒就、里面是黑土的小花坛。她抽空栽种的那些普通花儿，不知怎的，生机盎然，十分繁茂，仿佛长在热带。木篱笆另一侧，却杂草蔓生。挺拔而硬朗的汉格伯船长，经常从齐膝高的草丛中突然冒出来，从头到脚以一号厚篷帆布蔽体——用这种材料制衣，实在出人意外，而一有谁对此发表意见，他就嘟哝着回道：“暂时凑合一下。”那身行头的颜色和粗粝梆硬的质地，使他整个人看上去，犹如毛糙的花岗石雕像，矗立在荒芜已久、小得连像样的台球室都做不了的院子里。这尊“石像”身材魁梧；红色的脸庞仍显英俊，蓝色的独眼目光恍惚；胡子皓白而浓密，垂至腰间，而且自到科尔布鲁克至今，从未修剪过。

七年前的一天，汉格伯船长走进港湾附近的“新酒馆”，准备购买一盎司烟叶，恰逢当地有名的巧嘴，也是理发师，傲慢地坐在酒吧间。面对理发师以打趣的口吻招徕生意，汉格伯船长一本正经地回答：“下月吧。”最后，他自袖口掏出手帕，又从手帕边角摸出三枚面

值半便士的硬币，付了账并随即离去。一等酒馆的门关闭，理发师便哈哈大笑。“不久，一老一少将胳膊挽着胳膊，一块儿溜达来我店里刮胡子。裁缝、理发师和蜡扦匠都将开始忙碌。科尔布鲁克必将重现往日盛景，绝错不了。以前，一直是‘下周’，现在变成了‘下月’；照此下去，说不定，很快就变成‘下个春天’。”

登时，理发师发现一个陌生人咧着嘴，正一脸茫然地笑着，在听自己说话，于是他边毫无顾忌地舒展双腿，边解释道：那怪老头汉格伯曾是沿海小商船的船长，现已退休，正在此地等儿子回来。那孩子很可能让父母赶出家门，然后跑去当水手，从此杳无音信。这些年中，说不定早已葬身海底。三年前，那老头急匆匆赶来科尔布鲁克：穿一身黑色细平布衣服（当时刚没了老伴），迫不及待地跳下火车三等吸烟车厢，仿佛魔鬼就在身后追赶似的。他之所以来，仅仅是因为一封信。不过，那信很可能是恶作剧。有爱开玩笑的家伙写信告诉他：据传，一位名字相似的水手正在科尔布鲁克或附近，与某个姑娘鬼混。“很可笑，对吧？”此前，那老兄一直通过伦敦各家报纸发布寻找哈里·汉格伯的启事，称对提供任何可信线索者，都会给予酬金。继而，理发师以嘲讽的口吻，兴致勃勃地描述：有人目睹那个身着丧服的外乡老头，或坐运货马车，或步行，遍访周围的乡村；向所有人诉说自己的心事；走进方圆数英里内的每一家旅店和酒馆；当路拦下行人询问；甚至查看几乎每一条沟渠。刚开始，他满怀期待，无比兴奋，后来全凭意念苦苦坚持，行动变得越来越缓慢。而且，他甚至说不清，自己儿子究竟长什么样。曾有两名水手离开一艘木材运输船，估计其中之一便是他儿子。有人看到该水手在追求某个姑娘。可根据那老头的描述，他儿子只有十四岁上下，是“一个看起来既聪明又有冲劲的男孩”。对此，听者往往一笑置之。此时，他会困惑地摸摸自己额头，接着面带愠色，逃之夭夭。自然，那老头没找到任何人，哪怕只是影子——至少，从未打探到任何可靠的消息。但不知为何，他就是待在科尔布鲁克不走。

“也许是因为找儿子未果的打击，加上刚没了老伴，他终于疯了。”理发师做出判断——说话时的神态，俨然一位心理学大师。一段时间以后，那老头不再积极寻找。他儿子显然已离开科尔布鲁克。但那老头住了下来，打算就在此地等。至少有过一次，他儿子曾选择来科尔布鲁克，而不是回家乡。这一定是有原因的，他似乎认为，一定存在什么巨大的诱惑，而这诱惑会让他儿子再次回到科尔布鲁克。

“哈，哈，哈！哎呀，当然会来科尔布鲁克。除此以外，还能去哪儿呢？英国虽大，但所有失踪已久的儿子只会选择来科尔布鲁克。于是，他卖掉在科尔切斯特 ^[1] 的老宅，来到这里。嗨，他绝对疯了，毫无疑问。要是我的哪个孩子离家出走，我绝不会发疯。我可有八个孩子呢。”在声震酒吧间的大笑中，理发师神气地夸耀自己意志

坚强。

不过，奇怪的是，这种疯症似乎具有传染性，理发师坦言——听其口吻，俨然一位聪慧过人的智者。比方说，其理发店位于港湾附近，每逢水手上门理发或刮胡子，假如是一张陌生面孔，他会立即情不自禁地想：“说不定，这人就是汉格伯老头的儿子！”说完，理发师哈哈大笑，以示自嘲。这是一种传染性很强的疯症，一度席卷整个海港小镇。对此，理发师记忆犹新。不过，他对那老兄仍抱有希望，相信能用一系列审慎的玩笑，治愈对方。而且，他一直在密切监控治疗的进展。下周——下月——明年！等那老船长把幻想儿子回来的时间推迟至明年，过不了多久，他将再也不会提及此事。对于别的事情，那老船长神志十分清楚，所以在这件事上，也一定会恢复理智。对此，理发师满怀信心。

理发师从未遭到反驳。自那以后，他的头发逐渐斑白，而汉格伯船长的胡子更是变得皓白而浓密，垂至腰间，同时天天身穿用一号厚篷帆布缝制的衣服。汉格伯船长亲手用浸过柏油的麻线，秘密缝制了那身行头，然后在一个晴朗的早晨，突然穿着那身行头出门。要知道，就在前一晚，有人看到他回家时还穿着之前的细平布丧服。汉格伯船长的这次亮相，在镇中心大街引起了轰动。众店主全部走到店门边，街上居民也纷纷抓起帽子，跑出家门。看到这番情景，汉格伯船长自己反倒大吃一惊，接着开始害怕。不过，面对好奇之人的询问，他一概惊恐而含糊地回答：“暂时凑合一下。”

当时的轰动，早已无人记得。连汉格伯船长本人，大家即便没有遗忘，也已不再理睬。这是习以为常的后果，就像谁也不会留意太阳，除非太阳把人晒得受不了。汉格伯船长的动作，瞧不出丝毫年老体衰的迹象：穿那身帆布行头的他，走起路来，四肢直挺，模样奇特而惹眼；只有目光显得比过去更加恍惚、鬼祟。不过，他举手投足间完全没了当初的兴奋与机警，而是变得困惑且羞怯，似乎在怀疑自己身上出现了有失体面、令人尴尬的怪癖，却又始终无法弄清究竟哪里不对劲。

现在，汉格伯船长不愿再与镇上居民搭话。在生活上，他得了铁公鸡、守财奴的恶名：在店里买什么东西，总要懊悔地嘟哝一阵；犹豫半天，才舍得买一点不好的边角肉。此外，他决不允许任何人提起他的那身行头。一切正如理发师所料。在别人看来，汉格伯船长的病已经痊愈，即不再抱有希望。唯有贝茜·卡尔维小姐知道，汉格伯船长之所以绝口不提等儿子回来的事，是因为在他的幻想中，那个时间已不再是“下周”“下月”甚或“明年”，而是“明天”。

在没有别人的前院或后院相遇时，汉格伯船长总和贝茜搭话，说话过程中不仅如慈父般语重心长，而且通情达理，尽管难免自以为

是，还有点武断。他俩相识，出于毫无保留的信任——表现为汉格伯船长不时满怀关爱地冲对方眨眼睛。渐渐地，贝茜开始有些期待汉格伯船长的这一举动。起初，她对此很不安，认为这个可怜的家伙疯了；后来往往一笑置之，因为对方全无恶意；如今会不由得感到快乐却又不愿相信，并微微脸红。汉格伯船长眨眼睛，毫无猥亵的意味。那张瘦削的红脸，配上高挺的鹰钩鼻，显得气宇不凡，尤其是在与贝茜说话时。因为此时，他的目光会变得更加坚定而睿智。这男人虽胡子皓白，却英俊、硬朗、挺拔、干练，使你不会留意他的年纪。他声称，其儿子打出生就长得非常像自己，和他简直是从一个模子刻出来的。

明年七月，哈里就三十一岁了，汉格伯船长说。正该找个明事理、重家庭的好姑娘结婚。哈里这孩子很有冲劲。有冲劲的丈夫最好管束。至于那些没什么能力的软蛋，你可能觉得在他们嘴里连黄油都不会融化，但其实他们才会让女人过得非常悲惨。另外，没什么能比得上自己的家——有炉火取暖、有结实屋顶的家。有了家，管它什么天气，你都不用被迫离开温暖的被窝。“对吧，亲爱的孩子？”

有一类水手所干的行当，是在看得见陆地的沿海活动。汉格伯船长便是其中之一。其父是农民，子女众多，后来破了产，于是匆匆送他去给某位海滨小商船的船长做学徒。从此，他在海滨度过了整个水手生涯。那种日子，对汉格伯船长而言，刚开始绝非易事：他从未喜欢过海上的漂泊，反而逐渐迷恋陆地、陆地上数不清的房屋和千家万户聚在炉边烤火的平静生活。许多水手基于理性考虑，不喜欢航海，并直言不讳，而汉格伯船长不喜欢航海，却是出于个人情感，且到了深恶痛绝的地步，仿佛对安稳生活的渴慕，是他家代代相传的基因。

“世人不知道，让儿子去海上讨生活，就是把他们往火坑里推。”汉格伯船长对贝茜解释，“与其那样做，还不如立即送他们去坐牢呢。”他决不信，有谁能适应航海生活。相反，年纪越大，就会越感到厌倦。这到底是一种什么行当？入了行，竟大半时间都回不成家？一旦出海，便完全无法了解家里的情况。有人可能认为，汉格伯船长之所以这么说，是因为厌倦了远洋航行。其实，就算他水手生涯最长的一次航行，也仅仅持续了两周，而且大部分时间都在抛锚停泊，躲避恶劣天气。在他妻子从自己叔叔那里继承一所房子和足够维持生计的钱财后（该叔叔生前做煤炭生意赚了一些钱，但打了一辈子光棍），他立即辞去东海岸某运煤船船长职务，并为此感到庆幸，犹如从古罗马舰队眼皮底下死里逃生一般。干了那么多年水手，汉格伯船长看不见英国的日子，两只手就能数得过来。他从未在深度超过六百英尺的深海航行，而且经常吹嘘的其中一句话，便是“我从没离开陆地超过八十英寻 [2]”。

上述这一切，贝茜·卡尔维并非首次听闻。在他们父女租住的小屋前，有一株低矮的白蜡树。夏日午后，她常常搬出椅子，坐在树底草坪上，做针线活儿。此刻，汉格伯船长总会穿着那身帆布行头，拄着铁锹。他天天在自己前院的空地挖土，每年都要把那块空地反复翻整多遍，但“暂时”——他的原话——什么也不种。

对贝茜·卡尔维，汉格伯船长会说得更加明确：“等明天我们的哈里回来再种。”这充满希望的套话，只能唤起贝茜的些许同情，因为她已听那位满怀希望的老人重复过无数遍了。

一切都如这般再三拖延，一切都是为明天而做的准备。汉格伯船长攒了满满一箱品种众多、小袋分装的花籽，以备在前院播种。“选种什么花，他肯定会听取你的意见，亲爱的孩子。”汉格伯船长隔着铁栅栏，向贝茜暗示。

贝茜小姐对此也已听过无数遍，所以仍埋头做针线活儿，不予理睬。不过，她偶尔也会起身，放下手中的活儿，缓步踱向铁栅栏。这些善意的疯话，透着某种魔力。汉格伯船长认定，儿子一旦回来，就不会再走，因为此处有个为其准备好一切的家。多年来，汉格伯船长自住的小屋逐渐塞满各种各样的家具。贝茜想象，那些家具都是崭新的，清漆完好，而且重叠堆放，如在仓库。其中，可能有几张裹着粗麻布的桌子，几捆卷成圆筒状的地毯——又粗又直，好像断柱。此外，在窗帘紧闭、一片昏暗的屋内，某些家具的白色大理石表面可能散发着淡淡的光泽。汉格伯船长每次都向贝茜详细描述购置的家具，仿佛那些也是她的合法财产。过了明天，他还要打理其杂草蔓生的后院，并浇注混凝土……

“我们不妨把木篱笆拆了。这样，你就可以拉一条晾衣绳，又绝不会碰到你的那些花儿。”汉格伯船长说着，眨了眨眼。贝茜不由得微微脸红。

贝茜心地善良，所以汉格伯船长才会对她说些疯言疯语。但这些疯话并非全是无稽之谈。万一哪天，他儿子回来了，该怎么办？但贝茜甚至不太确定，汉格伯船长是否真有儿子。就算真有儿子，那人也已久无音信。汉格伯船长说着，说着，可能变得非常激动。为使他恢复平静，贝茜会假装对他的话深信不疑，并微微一笑，以减轻心中内疚。

唯有一次，贝茜出于同情，试着对那个注定破灭的希望表达了些许疑虑，结果把自己吓了一大跳。只见汉格伯船长顿时露出既万分惊恐又不敢相信的神色，犹如目睹天空开裂。

“你——你——他不会淹死的！”

在贝茜看来，汉格伯船长平时没别人想的那么不正常，但那一

刻，她觉得后者即将彻底发疯。不过，随着失控的情绪逐渐平复，汉格伯船长变得如慈父般和蔼可亲，而且极为谦恭。

“别担心，亲爱的孩子。”汉格伯船长带着一丝狡黠说，“大海无法留住他。他也不属于大海。我们汉格伯家，世代代，从没出过属于大海的人。瞧瞧我——并未淹死在海里。再说，他压根儿不是水手。而如果不是水手，必定会回来。没有什么——”

汉格伯船长的眼神开始变得恍惚。

“——阻碍他明天回来。”

贝茜再未对汉格伯船长的希望表达过任何疑虑，以免他当场发疯。汉格伯船长完全信赖贝茜，认为她是全镇唯一明事理的人，还会当她的面，毫不掩饰地庆幸给儿子物色了这样一个头脑清楚的好妻子。曾有一次，汉格伯船长在气头上向贝茜吐露，镇上其他人脑子都不正常，绝错不了。他们瞧你的眼神、对你说话的口气，暴露无遗！这里的人，从未有谁与自己合得来。他不喜欢他们。显而易见，要不是儿子非常喜欢科尔布鲁克，他决不会离开家乡。

贝茜不做任何反驳，只是默默地站在木篱笆旁，一边耐心听汉格伯船长诉说，一边低垂眉眼，用钩针编织着什么。她面色煞白，脸红起来并不明显；浓密的红褐色头发，胡乱盘在头顶——她父亲的头发就呈橘红色，而且非常红。

贝茜身材丰满，面色总是显得疲倦而没有精神。每逢汉格伯船长大谈有个家是多么必要且应当、在自家炉边烤火又是多么幸福，她只是动动嘴唇，报以微微一笑。在人生最美好的十年，只能守在家里，伺候父亲，这便是家给予她的全部“幸福”。

从楼上窗户会传来犹如野兽发出的咆哮，打断他俩的谈话。一听到那声音，贝茜立即开始收拾手中的编织或针线活儿，但丝毫不显慌张。与此同时，呼喊她名字的咆哮仍在继续。如果恰巧有渔夫在路对面海堤上溜达，他们便会纷纷扭头，望向那两栋小屋。收起手中的活儿后，贝茜慢悠悠地走进自家前门。过了片刻，他们父女租住的小屋便陷入一片沉寂。不久，她再次现身：牵着一个男人的手，引领其走出门来。那男人肥硕而笨拙，活像河马，而且脸色极其阴沉。

那男人已丧偶，曾是造船工人；多年前，正当事业蒸蒸日上时，突然双目失明。他对待女儿的态度，就像眼睛无法治愈全都怪女儿似的。有人曾听到那鳏夫仿佛出于对上帝的藐视，声嘶力竭地吼道：他对失明毫不在乎，因为赚的钱，足够天天早餐吃火腿煎蛋。他为能过这样的生活而感谢上帝，但听其口气，更像恶魔在诅咒。

汉格伯船长极不喜欢这位租客，所以曾对贝茜小姐说：“他是个

毫不节约的家伙，亲爱的孩子。”

那天，贝茜在赶着织完给父亲穿的袜子。在其父看来，做女红是女儿的本分，但贝茜讨厌编织。由于正织到后跟部分，她不得不全神贯注地盯着手中织针。

“当然，他没有儿子需要供养。”汉格伯船长怅然若失，继续说，“女儿需要的东西，自然没那么多，唔——唔。她们也不会离家出走，亲爱的孩子。”

“是的。”贝茜平静地附和。

汉格伯船长站在翻土后形成的土堆中间，咯咯地笑。他穿着那身古怪的帆布行头，配上饱经风霜的面孔和尼普顿^[3]那样的长须，活像一位遭贬下凡、拿三叉戟换了铁锹的海神。

“他肯定认为，对你多少已尽了抚养的义务。这正是生女儿的最大好处。丈夫……”汉格伯船长眨了眨眼。专心织袜子的贝茜小姐，不由得微微脸红。

“贝茜！我的帽子！”卡尔维老头突然吼道。此前，他一直坐在树下，沉默不语，纹丝不动，酷似一尊神像——象征的是某种极为骇人的迷信。他要么不开口，一开口就大声咆哮：喊女儿，吼女儿，偶尔还骂女儿，而且尽用恶毒的词。贝茜的应对方法，是决不搭话。其父会不停地大吼大叫，直至得到回应：贝茜摇动他的胳膊，或把烟斗咬嘴插入他齿间。身为盲人还抽烟，真是少见。感觉帽子落到头顶，卡尔维老头立即停止吼叫。等女儿扶他起身后，两人便一块儿走出院子大门。

卡尔维老头把身体全部重量都压在女儿胳膊上。他俩缓慢而艰难地往前走，看起来就像是贝茜为了给自己赎罪，拖着那具虚弱、肥硕的躯体，负重而行。通常，他俩一出院子便横穿门前小路——两栋小屋坐落在港湾附近的野地里，门前有条小路通往两百码外的大街尽头。过了很久，仍能望见那对父女的身影，尽管瞧不出他俩正沿着通往海堤顶部的木台阶，费力地拾级而上。这条海堤沿英吉利海峡而修，东西横亘，犹如一段废弃已久、在人类记忆中从无列车驶过的铁路路堤。健壮的渔夫会成群结队，从天际冒出来，往前走一走，接着变得越来越矮，越来越矮，直至慢慢消失。一张张棕色渔网，平铺在杂草蔓生的堤坡上，酷似巨大的蛛网。来到大街尽头的镇上居民，抬眼望见那蹒跚而缓慢的步伐，立即便能认出卡尔维父女。在两栋小屋周围闲荡的汉格伯船长，经常抬头眺望，看看那对散步的父女走到哪儿了。

汉格伯船长仍在每逢周日出版的各家报纸发布寻找哈里·汉格伯的启事。他一方面告诉贝茜，这些报纸的读者，遍布全世界各个国家与

地区；一方面却似乎认为，儿子就在英国，离科尔布鲁克非常近，“明天”肯定会到来。对于汉格伯船长的后一念头，贝茜并未直截了当地发表意见，而是说：既然如此，就没必要每周浪费两先令六便士，发布寻人启事，汉格伯船长还不如把那些钱用于自己身上。她还称，自己不知道汉格伯船长靠什么为生。听了贝茜的话，汉格伯船长会陷入苦思，并沮丧好一会儿。“别人都这么做。”他辩解。而且，每家报纸都设有一栏，专用于刊登寻找失踪亲属的启事。他会取来报纸，向贝茜证明自己所说属实。多年来，他们夫妇一直在各家报纸发布寻人启事。可惜，他妻子不是一个有耐心的女人。她头天刚下葬，第二天就从科尔布鲁克传来了消息。要不是那么没耐心，她可能这会儿也在这里，而且顶多再等一天，就能见到儿子。“你是一个有耐心的女人，亲爱的孩子。”

“有时候，我对您真的失去了耐心。”贝茜会说。

汉格伯船长虽仍在各家报纸发布寻找儿子的启事，但对提供线索者，已不再给予任何酬金。因为，出于神志错乱之人自以为理智、实则糊涂的逻辑，他坚信以下这点是明摆着的，即自己已获得通过该途径所能获得的一切线索。他还想了解什么呢？儿子肯定会来科尔布鲁克。知道这一点，便足够了。卡尔维小姐夸其明智，令汉格伯船长大为宽慰。在他看来，贝茜不仅肯定了他那个已成痴心妄想的希望，而且也赞同他的判断——这判断使他看不见事实真相与其他可能，恰如另一栋小屋里的另一名老人，因另一种疾病而双目失明，看不见这个世界的光明与美好。

尽管如此，只要认为自己受到任何怀疑，汉格伯船长都会激动得直抽搐，并用恶毒的眼神斜睨对方：例如，向他表达赞成时口气冷淡，甚或仅仅未留意他那些计划的进展——那些计划的目的，是做好关于家庭生活的各项准备，以便儿子回来后，与儿子、儿媳共叙天伦之乐。他还会把铁锹猛地往地里一插，然后在旁边走过来，走过去。每逢此时，贝茜小姐都认为汉格伯船长在使性子，她便会用食指指着，以示责备。汉格伯船长见状，会气冲冲地远离贝茜。但等贝茜再次来到屋外，他会用眼角余光偷瞥对方，以求发现丝毫表示鼓励的暗示，好走近铁栅栏，恢复两人之间父亲对女儿、长辈对晚辈的关系。

他俩虽相熟已有几年，但每次都隔着木篱笆或铁栅栏交谈。汉格伯船长经常告诉贝茜，自己为将来一家人生活而积攒的各种家当是多么豪华，但从未邀请贝茜过去瞧一瞧。除了哈里，谁也不能先瞧。事实上，从无别人进过汉格伯船长自住的小屋。此外，汉格伯船长不仅自己做所有家务，而且偶尔去镇上买了什么家用小物件，总是揣在帆布外套里，匆匆穿过前院，偷偷带进屋，唯恐别人先于儿子瞧见。从屋里出来后，他会为自己辩解：“不过是一只小烧水壶，亲爱的孩

子。”

假如不是家务干到筋疲力尽，或不堪其父烦扰，贝茜会微微红着脸，冲汉格伯船长笑一笑，说：“没关系，汉格伯船长。我是一个有耐心的女人。”

“唔，亲爱的孩子，你不用等很久了。”汉格伯船长会如此回应，并突然变得羞怯。他不安地东张西望，仿佛早就在怀疑哪里不对劲。

每逢周一，贝茜会隔着铁栅栏，把房租递给汉格伯船长。他会贪婪地一把抓过那些先令。汉格伯船长极不情愿把钱用于必要的生活花销，哪怕仅仅一便士，而且每当告别贝茜去买东西，一到大街上，立即就像换了个人。离开贝茜的同情与鼓励，他觉得自己完全暴露于各种危险之中，所以总是肩膀贴着墙壁，沿街边行走，还认为遇到的人都很可疑。但其实，到了那会儿，就连镇上的孩童都不再追着他大呼小叫，而商店店主接待他时，也往往一言不发。汉格伯船长对自己的衣着尤为敏感：假如有谁提起，哪怕极其委婉，也会令他大感困惑和惊恐，仿佛听到什么毫无道理、匪夷所思之事。

秋天，每逢下起滂沱大雨，硕大的雨滴吧嗒吧嗒，直打在汉格伯船长那身帆布行头上。那身行头湿透后，变得几乎如铁皮般坚硬，而且雨水顺着其表面各处不断往下流淌。假如天气过于恶劣，汉格伯船长只能被迫躲在狭小的门廊下，紧贴屋门而立，眼巴巴地望着插于前院中间的铁锹。整个前院，到处挖了又挖，随着季节推移，逐渐变成一片泥淖。当地面完全冻住，他会变得忧心忡忡。哈里要是见了，会说什么呢？从另一栋小屋紧闭的窗户，不时隐隐传来卡尔维老头在屋里使唤贝茜的咆哮。由于每年这个时节，与贝茜见面的机会大为减少，汉格伯船长就对卡尔维老头的咆哮感到极为恼怒。

“那个毫不节约的家伙，为什么不给你请个用人呢？”汉格伯船长没好气地问贝茜。那天下午挺暖和，贝茜往头上随便搭了样东西，跑出来活动活动。

“我不知道。”贝茜疲惫地回答，并望向别处，眼神里全无期待。她脸色苍白，眼皮耷拉，灰色的眼睛下方总是带着两抹阴影。给人的感觉，她似乎看不到自己的人生会出现任何改变，或存在一个尽头。

“等到结婚，就好了，亲爱的孩子。”贝茜唯一的朋友边缓步走近铁栅栏，边说，“哈里会给你请一个的。”

汉格伯船长盲目乐观的疯症，在绝望的贝茜看来，是对自己赤裸裸的嘲弄。她一时激愤难当，忍不住要当场破口大骂，但最后只是像面对正常人那样自嘲道：“哎呀，汉格伯船长，说不定您儿子连瞧都不想瞧我一眼。”

汉格伯船长把脑袋往后一仰，通过喉咙，沙哑而做作地嘎嘎大笑，以示愤怒。

“什么！那小子？对方圆几英里内唯一明事理的姑娘，连瞧都不想瞧一眼？你认为，我在这里，是为了什么，亲爱的孩子？亲爱的孩子？亲爱的孩子……什么？你等着瞧吧。你等着瞧好了。明天就能见分晓。我很快就将——”

“贝茜！贝茜！贝茜！”卡尔维老头在屋里咆哮，“贝茜！我的烟斗！”那个肥硕的瞎子，懒惰到了衣来伸手、饭来张口的地步。他决不抬一抬手，自己拿女儿事先在他手肘边精心备下的东西；决不动一腿或胳膊；决不自己从椅子上起身；虽然完全能在客厅自由穿梭，犹如双目并未失明一般，但不将女儿唤至身旁，并将肥硕躯体的全部重量压到女儿肩上，决不把一只脚迈到另一只脚前；此外，决不自己吃一口东西，只等女儿去喂。失明确实带来不便，但卡尔维老头故意表现得生活完全不能自理，好尽可能地奴役女儿。黄昏中，贝茜紧咬牙关，纹丝不动地站了一会儿，然后转身，缓步回屋。

汉格伯船长走回铁锹所插之处。从卡尔维父女租住的小屋，不再传出咆哮声。没过一会儿，那栋小屋楼下客厅的窗户里亮起灯光。有个男人迈着坚定而从容的步伐，从大街尽头走来。打两栋小屋前经过时，他似乎瞧见了汉格伯船长，于是又折回来一两步。西边的天空，尚留一抹冷冰冰的白光。来人趴在院子大门上，显得饶有兴趣。

“你一定就是汉格伯船长吧。”那人从容且胸有成竹地说。

听到陌生人的声音，老人大吃一惊，随即原地转了个身，同时顺手从土里拔出铁锹。

“是的，我就是。”老人紧张地回答。

对方边冲老人微笑，边缓缓道：“你一直在报纸上发布寻找儿子的启事，对吧？”

“我儿子哈里，”汉格伯船长嘟哝着，暂时放下戒备，但仅此一次，“他明天就会回家。”

“他会回家才怪！”陌生人既非常惊讶又不以为然地高呼，并用几乎相同的语气继续道，“瞧你留的胡子，都赶上圣诞老人了！”

汉格伯船长缓缓地朝院子大门走了几步，然后拄着铁锹而立，同时身子在铁锹上方微微前倾。“走开。”他说话的语气既愤恨又羞怯，因为一直以来，他生怕遭人嘲笑。无论处于何种精神状态的人，哪怕神志错乱的疯子，皆有自尊。自尊是其保持内心平静的基础；一旦自尊受挫，便会导致不悦。另外，汉格伯船长对生活已形成一系列根深蒂固的观念，而别人的大笑令他对这些观念心生怀疑，并因此感到痛

苦。没错，看到别人冲自己大笑，非常可恶。那是在暗示什么地方不对劲。可究竟哪里不对劲呢？他弄不明白。显而易见，那陌生人正在咧嘴大笑——特意上门来这么做。在各条街上，遇到别人冲自己大笑，汉格伯船长也非常不悦，但从未如此愤怒。

陌生人并未意识到自己的脑袋差点让铁锹劈成两半，严肃地回道：“我站在这里，不算擅闯私宅，对吧？我认为，你得到的消息有误。要不让我进去再说？”

“让你进来？！”汉格伯船长嘟哝道，言语中透着无法形容的恐惧。

“我可以提供一些关于你儿子的真实情况——最新的独家消息，如果你想听的话？”

“不想听！”汉格伯船长嚷着，开始极为激动地走过来，走过去，接着又扛起铁锹，并用另一条胳膊比画各种动作。“这个咧嘴大笑的家伙，说我得到的消息有误。我知道的消息，比你多。我早就知道了所有想要知道的消息。几年前就知道了！几年前！几年前！我不再需要任何消息，只需等待明天到来。让你进来——等着吧！哈里要是知道了，会怎么说呢？”

此时，另一栋小屋楼下客厅的窗户映出贝茜·卡尔维的黑色人影。接着，伴随开门的声响，那人影从小屋前面飞掠而出：全身漆黑，头上却搭着什么白色的东西。突然听见外面这两人的说话声，屋里的贝茜激动得瞠目结舌。

汉格伯船长看上去，活像慌不择路、企图逃离牢笼的困兽。他在一片泥潭里嘎吱嘎吱地乱走——这片泥潭正是他辛勤劳动的结果；在毁坏的草坪上让坑坑洼洼绊得踉踉跄跄；还像瞎子似的乱跑，完全不顾是否撞到铁栅栏。

“喂，冷静一点！”陌生人边说，边慎重地把胳膊伸过院子大门，拽住汉格伯船长的衣袖。“有人想找到并诈骗你。嗨！你身上穿的什么东西啊？还真是厚篷帆布！”那人哈哈大笑，接着道，“哎呀，你果然是怪人！”

汉格伯船长猛地从对方手中挣脱，然后边羞怯地向后退缩，边用颓丧的语气嘟哝：“暂时凑合一下。”

“他怎么回事啊？”陌生人以解释的口吻，极其亲昵、慢条斯理地对贝茜说，“我不是故意要惊吓这老家伙的。”接着，陌生人压低声音，仿佛在和相熟多年的故友说悄悄话。“我顺道拐进一家理发店，花两便士，刮了胡子。店里那些人告诉我，他有点古怪。其实，这老家伙一辈子都是怪人。”

听到对方提及自己的衣着，汉格伯船长羞怯之下，带着铁锹，躲进屋里。冷不防响起重重的关门声，令站在院子大门处的另外两人大吃一惊。紧接着，他俩相继听到门门门的碰撞声、锁门锁的吧嗒声和咯咯的大笑声——这装腔作势的笑声在屋里回荡不止。

“我不是故意要刺激他的。”沉默了片刻，陌生人说，“这一切究竟是什么意思啊？他并未完全发疯呀。”

“这么多年来，他一直在为离家出走的儿子感到担忧。”贝茜以抱歉的口吻，低声回答。

“唔，我就是他儿子。”

“哈里！”贝茜不由得惊呼，但随即紧紧地闭住嘴。

“知道我的名字？和这老家伙是朋友，嗯？”

“他是我们的房东。”贝茜伸手抓住铁栅栏，结结巴巴地回答。

“这两栋兔笼似的小破屋都是他的，对吧？”小汉格伯不屑地说，“能让他引以为傲的，就是这些东西。明天要来的那小子是谁，你能告诉我吗？你对此肯定有所了解。我告诉你，这老家伙遇到了诈骗——绝错不了。”

贝茜一时沉默不语。她完全不知如何回答，惊愕地愣在原地：自知必须做出解释，却不可能也惧怕那么做，因为如果把整件事的来龙去脉解释清楚，似乎难免会让对方觉得，她也是疯子。

“唉——真对不起。”贝茜嗫嚅道。

“怎么回事？”小汉格伯平静地说，“别担心，我不会不高兴。另一个小子才会不高兴，因为事情的结果将完全出乎他意料。我对这事一点也不在乎。不过，明天，等那小子露面，将有好戏上演。我不是为这老家伙着想，但对就是对，错就是错。你等着瞧吧，我会痛揍那骗子，不管他是谁！”

说话过程中，小汉格伯朝贝茜走近了一些。两人隔着铁栅栏而立，男的比女的高出不少。小汉格伯瞥了眼贝茜的双手，感觉她在颤抖，并突然想到：也许，明天算计他父亲的小把戏，眼前这女人也有份。幸亏自己及时赶到，使骗子的诡计无法得逞。想到这，他不免感到一阵得意——嘲笑骗子的诡计实在拙劣，轻而易举就让自己挫败。但有生以来，无论女人耍什么花招，他一直对她们极为宽容。再说，眼前这女人确实颤抖得厉害，连头上的围巾都已滑落。“可怜的女人！”小汉格伯心想，“别管另一个小子了。他明天不一定会来。可我自己该怎么办呢？总不能在院子门口一直晃悠到明天早上吧。”

贝茜突然喊道：“是你——他等的是你！明天要来的那个人是

你！”

小汉格伯木然地嘟哝道：“啊！是我！”接着，两人似乎同时停止了呼吸。看起来，小汉格伯正在琢磨听到的话。过了一会儿，他说：“我不明白。我没给他写过信什么的。我朋友看到报纸上的寻人启事，然后告诉了我——就在今天早晨……嗯？什么？”他说话时并不气恼，但显得非常困惑。

小汉格伯低下头，把耳朵凑向贝茜，听她轻声而飞快地说了一些话。听的过程中，他不时嘟哝着回以“是的”“原来如此”。“可为什么今天不行呢？”最后，他问。

“你没懂我的意思！”贝茜不耐烦地叫道。西边，云层底下那抹明亮的白光已逐渐消失。小汉格伯再次微微低头，以便听得更清楚。这对男女——一个喃喃低语，一个侧耳倾听——完全消失在重重夜幕中。唯一隐约可见的是，两张脸亲昵地挨在一块儿，仿佛他俩正偷偷幽会，相互温存。

小汉格伯挺直肩膀。一顶宽檐帽的黑影，随随便便地搭在他头上。“很可笑，对吧？”小汉格伯对贝茜说，“明天？哈，哈！从没听说过这种事。看起来，永远都会是明天，绝不可能是今天。”

贝茜一动不动，默不作声。

“而你一直纵容他抱着这个可笑的念头。”小汉格伯说。

“我从不反驳他。”

“为什么不？”

“我为什么要反驳？”贝茜辩解，“那只会使他痛苦。他可能会丧失理智的。”

“他还有理智！”小汉格伯嘟哝道。接着，他听到贝茜短促而紧张地笑了笑。

“我不反驳，造成什么危害了吗？难道要我和这位可怜的老人吵架吗？我更愿意对他的话半信半疑。”

“是的，是的。”精明的小汉格伯略作沉思，接着说，“我估计，这老家伙说了什么花言巧语，把你哄得相信了。你心肠可真软。”

黑暗中，贝茜紧张地提起双手。“他的话可能是真的。确实是真的。那一天确实到来了。今天就是。今天就是我们一直等待的‘明天’。”

贝茜说完，深吸一口气。小汉格伯和气地说：“是啊，结果却不让人进门。我不在乎是否……你觉得，能说服他和我相认……嗯？什

么……你能说服他？你说要一星期？唔，也许你是能说服他，可在这无聊透顶的地方，你觉得我能待住一星期吗？我待不住！我希望要么拼命干活，要么恣意玩乐，再要么去比整个英国还要广阔的地方闯荡。不过，我曾来过这里一回，而且待了一个多星期。当时，这老家伙在报纸上发布寻找我的启事。有个和我在一块儿的朋友想出一个主意：写封信，胡说八道地扯上一大通，骗他几英镑。不过，那个玩笑并未得逞。因为我们不得不离开了——那回，我在这里待了好几天。但这回，有个朋友正在伦敦等我，再说……”

贝茜·卡尔维的呼吸变得急促。

“要是我去敲门，会怎么样？”小汉格伯问。

“去试一下吧。”贝茜回道。

汉格伯船长所住小屋的院子大门发出嘎吱嘎吱的声响。小汉格伯的人影在院子里走了几步，接着驻足，再次从喉咙发出低沉的笑声——与老汉格伯的笑声很像，只不过更加温柔、悦耳。贝茜听了，顿感如梦初醒，心神荡漾。

“他不爱闹腾吧？我担心不得不控制住他。大伙总说，我不知道自己的力量有多大。”

“他是有史以来最温和的人。”贝茜插嘴道。

“你要是见过他挥舞粗硬的皮鞭，一路追打我到楼上，你就不会这么说了。”小汉格伯说，“整整十六年来，我一直没忘记这件事。”

小汉格伯说完，又一次发出低沉、悦耳的笑声。贝茜感到一股暖流从头顶蔓延到脚底。随着门环发出嘭嘭嘭的声响，她的心提到了嗓子眼。

“喂，爸！开门。我是哈里，真的。快开门！我提前一天回家了。”

小屋楼上的一扇窗户咔嗒咔嗒地拉了起来。

“一个咧嘴大笑、自称有最新消息的家伙。”从黑乎乎的高处传来汉格伯船长的声音，“别和他扯上任何瓜葛。这会毁了一切的。”

贝茜听到小汉格伯喊了声“喂，爸”，又听到哐当一响。接着，小屋楼上的窗户咔嗒咔嗒地拉下了；与此同时，小汉格伯再次站在贝茜面前。

“和过去一模一样。那会儿，他差点把我活活打死，以阻止我离开家；这会儿，我回来了，他又照着我的脑袋扔下该死的铁锹，不让我进门。那该死的铁锹擦伤了我的肩膀。”

贝茜不由得一阵哆嗦。

“我不在乎。”小汉格伯接着说，“只是我身上最后几先令用来买了火车票，最后两便士又用来刮了胡子——出于对老家伙的尊敬。”

“你真是哈里·汉格伯？”贝茜立刻问，“你能证明吗？”

“我能证明吗？除了我，还有谁能证明？”小汉格伯乐呵呵地说，“用什么证明？我要证明什么？在全世界各个角落，也许英国除外，你都能找到记得我是哈里·汉格伯的人——找到记得我是哈里·汉格伯的女人，可能性更大。我比世上任何活着的人更像哈里·汉格伯。我能当即向你证明，要是你让我走进你家院子的话。”

“进来吧。”贝茜说。

于是，小汉格伯进了卡尔维父女所租小屋的前院。他魁梧的人影，大摇大摆地往前走。贝茜转身背对楼下客厅的窗户，一面等待，一面盯着不断逼近的模糊人影——那人影最真实之处，莫过于其脚步声。窗户透出的灯光中，出现一顶歪戴的帽子、半边势要撞破夜幕的强壮肩膀、一条从黑暗中迈出的腿。小汉格伯突然转身并站定，然后面朝贝茜背后亮着灯光的客厅窗户，边左右摆动脑袋，边自顾自轻声发笑。

“稍微想象一下，要是把老家伙的胡子粘到我的下巴，会是什么样。喂？快说话呀。我打小就长得非常像他，和他简直是从一个模子刻出来的。”

“的确。”贝茜低声嗫嚅道。

“不过，我俩也就外表长得像罢了。他一直都是你们这种恋家的人。哎呀，我至今仍记得，每逢要离开家去南希尔兹^[4]运煤的前三天，他就会整日愁眉苦脸。当时，他持有煤气厂发的长期执照。你可能以为，他是去远洋捕鲸，一走三年多。哈，哈！完全不是。就离家十天而已。‘海上飞掠者’是一艘不错的船。名字不赖，对吧？那艘船属于我妈的叔叔……”

小汉格伯突然转变话题，压低声音问：“我妈怎么没的，他对你提过吗？”

“提过。”贝茜小姐伤感地回答，“说是因为不够耐心。”

小汉格伯沉默片刻，接着粗鲁地说：“他俩生怕我变成一个坏人，结果反而逼得我离家出走。我妈喋喋不休地指责我游手好闲，而这老家伙说，宁可把我杀掉，也不允许我去当水手。哎呀，当时看起来，他可能真会那么做，所以我离家出走了。有时，我觉得自己投错了胎，不该出生在那个同是兔笼似的家。”

“那你本该出生在什么地方，才算投对胎呢？”贝茜不屑地打断小汉格伯。

“我本该在狂风大作的夜晚，出生于旷野之中、海滩之上。”小汉格伯倒豆子般飞快地回答，接着若有所思地缓缓道，“他俩以前就是怪人，真的。过了这么多年，这老家伙丝毫没变，对吧？该死的铁锹——听！谁在大吼大叫啊？‘贝茜，贝茜。’从你住的那栋房子传出来的。”

“那是在喊我。”贝茜漠不关心地说。

小汉格伯往旁边挪了挪，离开窗前明亮处。“你老公？”他问。听其口气，显然是惯于偷情的老手。“声音真洪亮；碰到雷电交加的暴风雨，甲板上正需要这样的人。”

“不，是我爸。我还没结婚呢。”

“你看起来是个好姑娘，亲爱的贝茜小姐。”小汉格伯立刻接嘴道。贝茜把脸转向了别处。

“嘿，我说，怎么回事？谁在谋杀他啊？”

“他想吃傍晚茶 [5] 。”贝茜侧着脑袋，面对父亲，纹丝不动地站在原地，显得十分高挑。她的双手十指交叉地紧握在一起，垂于身前。

“你最好进去一下吧？”小汉格伯说。开口前，他凝视了一会儿贝茜的后颈——一块白得耀眼的皮肤，往下是线条柔和、只见阴影的脖颈儿，再往下是若隐若现的肩膀。贝茜头上的围巾已滑落至手肘处。“不用多久，整个镇子的人都要过来了。我在这里等你一会儿。”

贝茜的围巾掉落在地。等小汉格伯俯身捡起时，贝茜已消失不见。小汉格伯把捡起的围巾往胳膊上一搭，径直走近楼下客厅的窗户，看到一个肥硕男人的庞大身躯、一盏无罩的灯、贝茜小姐的脑袋和胸部；那男人坐在扶手椅中，正张着阔嘴打哈欠，蓬乱的头发披散在大扁脸两侧。屋里的吼叫声停了，窗帘放了下来。小汉格伯不禁陷入沉思，觉得眼下的处境糟糕至极。父亲疯了，无法进门。没钱回去，正在伦敦挨饿的那个朋友，将认为他靠不住。“该死！”小汉格伯嘟哝道。他当然有本事硬闯其父的住所，但警察可能因此不问青红皂白，就把他关进监狱。真是那样，也没什么大不了，只不过他非常惧怕遭到监禁，哪怕纯粹出于误会。想到这，小汉格伯不由得感到一阵寒冷，于是在湿漉漉的草地上跺了跺脚。

“你是干什么的？水手？”一个不安的声音问。

贝茜的人影已从屋里飞掠而出。吸引她出来的，是另一个正在她

家墙角等待、显得非常鲁莽的人影。

“什么都干。包括做一名称职的普通水手。这次正是通过做水手回家的。”

“那你是打哪里来到这里的呢？”贝茜接着问。

“我刚刚恣意快活了一把，”小汉格伯回答，“然后坐从伦敦出发的火车来到这里——知道了吧？呃！我讨厌被关在火车里。不过，我对房子没那么反感。”

“啊，”贝茜说，“幸好。”

“因为在房子里的话，可以随时打开该死的门，然后直接当着你的面走掉。”

“从此再也不回来？”

“至少在十六年里，”小汉格伯大笑着回答，“不会回到一栋兔笼似的小破屋，让该死的铁锹……”

“船也不是很大呀。”贝茜讥讽道。

“是的，可大海无边无际。”

贝茜垂下脑袋。她似乎突然对世间万物的声音变得十分敏感，并听到经历昨天的大风后，波浪不断拍击海堤另一侧的沙滩。伴随阵阵涛声，整个大地都在单调而庄严地颤抖，犹如一口正在敲响的洪钟。

“再说，哎呀，船只是船。你可以随时爱上某艘船，也可以随时离开那艘船；一次航海，不同于一次婚姻。”小汉格伯轻率地引述流行于水手之间的粗话。

“航海确实不同于婚姻。”贝茜喃喃道。

“我向来行不更名，坐不改姓，而且迄今为止，从未对任何女人说过哪怕一次谎话。什么谎话？哎呀，就是：请你选择接受还是离开我；要是接受我，那么……”小汉格伯说完，倚着墙壁，轻声哼起一支水手号子的其中几句。

啊，嗨，嗨，里奥！

再见了，再见了，

年轻漂亮的姑娘，

我们正准备起航，

“这是转动绞盘、拉起船锚时唱的水手号子。”小汉格伯解释道。此时，贝茜的牙齿打了一下颤。

“你很冷吧。”小汉格伯说，“这是你掉的东西。”贝茜感觉到对方的双手在她身上移动，仔细地为她裹好围巾。“抓住前面这两头。”小汉格伯吩咐。

“你来这里干什么呢？”贝茜问着，感觉自己又要打冷战，但竭力克制住了。

“来要五英镑钱。”小汉格伯立即回答，“我们玩乐的时间稍微久了点，结果把钱花光了。”

“你一直在喝酒？”贝茜又问。

“一连三天，喝得烂醉如泥——故意的。不要以为，我是让人灌醉的。世上没有任何人或任何东西能摆布我，除非我愿意。要是不合我心意，我决不屈服。今天早晨，我朋友看到报纸上的寻人启事，于是对我说：‘快去，哈里。你爸很疼你。他肯定会给你五英镑。’于是，我俩翻遍各自的所有衣服口袋，勉强凑了来这里的车费。真是偷鸡不成蚀把米！”

“我恐怕得说，你是个铁石心肠的人。”贝茜叹息道。

“为什么这样说？因为我离家出走？哎呀！他想让我做律师的文书——纯粹为了称他的心。他是家里的老爷；而我那个死去的妈呢，一直对他煽风点火——可能是为了我好吧。好吧，既然如此，那就再见。于是，我离家出走了。不，我告诉你：我离开家当天，浑身上下青一块，紫一块，而这正是拜他那伟大的父爱所赐。啊！他一直都有点古怪。瞧瞧那把铁锹。发疯了？未必。我爸向来就是这么个人。他想让我留在家乡，无非是希望身边有个可以供他呼来喝去的人。不过，眼下，我和朋友手头有点紧，而对他来说，五英镑算得了什么呢？毕竟，在艰难的十六年中，我向他要钱，只此一回。”

“啊，我真为你的遭遇感到难过。你从来没想过回家吗？”

“做律师的文书，最后烂在家乡——烂在一个像这样的地方？”小汉格伯不屑地嚷道，“什么！要是今天这老家伙把我安顿在一个家里，我将把那个家踹成平地；要不然，我会在三天之内活活憋死。”

“除了家里，你还希望自己死在哪里呢？”

“在某处荒野；在大海上；在某个该死的山顶。要是必须选择的话。在家里？好啊！整个世界就是我的家。不过，我估计将来自己会死在医院。那又有什么关系呢？只要来世上走过一遭，死在哪里都

行。而且，我几乎干过你能想到的所有事情，除了做裁缝和当兵。我曾骑马巡视并修补牧场围栏、剪羊毛、背着行囊流浪、用鱼叉捕杀一头鲸鱼；还曾装配船帆、勘探金矿、给死牛剥皮。我舍弃的钱财，可能比这老家伙辛苦攒了一辈子的还要多。哈，哈！”

小汉格伯的话令贝茜大为震惊。她努力恢复镇定，最后勉强开口道：“该休息了。”

小汉格伯离开所倚墙壁，挺直身子，以严肃的口吻说：“我也该走了。”

但说归说，他并未迈动脚步，而是再次靠到墙上，若有所思地哼起一支古怪曲子的其中一两个小节。

贝茜感到自己忍不住要哭了。“你又开始哼你那些令人伤心的歌了。”她说。

“在墨西哥索诺拉 [7] 学的。”小汉格伯从容地说，“这是寻金人唱的歌。你没听过？就是流浪汉唱的歌。没有什么能使那些流浪汉在一个地方长待，哪怕女人也不行。过去，在希拉河以北极远处那片出产金子的地区边缘，你偶尔会遇见他们中的一个。我去过那里。在马萨特兰 [8] 的一位勘探工程师带我去的——让我帮忙照看马车。不管怎么说，身边带个水手，能为你提供许多方便。那片地区尽是沙漠，分布着一道道深不见底的裂口和一座座由岩石构成的悬崖峭壁——那些悬崖峭壁拔地而起，犹如无数高墙和教堂尖塔，只不过大上百倍。此外，各个峡谷中布满巨砾和黑色石块。整片地区，连一片草的叶子都见不着。那里的夕阳，也比我在其他任何地方见过的都要红——像血一样红，而且显得非常愤怒。真是美极了！”

“你不会还想去那里吧？”贝茜结结巴巴地问。

小汉格伯笑了笑。“不会。那片出产金子的地区不是人待的。在那里见到的景象，有时会让我不由得哆嗦。要知道，当时我们是一大帮人结伴同行。但那些寻金人总是独来独往。对于那片地区，早在任何人听说以前，他们就已经知道了。他们仿佛天生就懂勘探，而且也对寻找金子极为狂热，但似乎对金子本身不是很感兴趣。他们总能发现富含金子的地点，接着便转身离去；也许会拣上一些——足够一次玩乐——然后再次出发，寻找更多的金子。他们从不在有房屋的地方长待，他们没有妻子、没有鸡、没有家，也没有朋友。你无法和寻金人做朋友，因为他们永远都在流浪：今天在这里，明天就走了——天晓得去了哪里。他们绝不把发现金子的情况告诉任何人，也从无一个寻金人过上富裕的生活。令他们醉心的，并非金子本身，而是在遍地石头的沙漠一边流浪一边寻找金子的过程。正因为如此，他们永不停歇；也正因为如此，世上尚无任何女人能留住寻金人超过一个星期。

这就是我哼的歌。整首歌讲的是，有个漂亮姑娘想方设法留住情郎——一个寻金人——好让对方带给自己许多金子。绝不可能！最后，寻金人还是走了，而那姑娘再也没见过他。”

“那姑娘后来怎么样了？”贝茜轻声问。

“歌里没说。可能哭了一阵吧。寻金人都这样：亲了某个女人，接着就走了。不过，重点在于寻找某样东西，某样……有时，我觉得自己也是一个寻金人。”

“这么说来，没有女人能留住你。”贝茜用粗重的声音开口道，但尚未说完，她的声音便突然开始打颤。

“不会超过一个星期。”小汉格伯开玩笑地说。他愉快而温柔的笑声，牵动着贝茜的心弦。“不过，我爱她们中的每一个人。我愿意为喜欢的女人付出一切。她们害我陷入各种困境，也帮我摆脱各种困境！我对她们一见钟情。此刻，我已经爱上了你，小姐——你叫贝茜，对吧？”

贝茜微微后退，用颤抖的声音笑着说：“你还没见过我长什么样呢。”

小汉格伯殷勤地倾身向前，说：“脸色有点苍白——有些男人会喜欢。不过，你身材不错，贝茜小姐。”

贝茜的心脏怦怦直跳。从来没人对她说过这么多话。

此时，小汉格伯语气一变，说：“不过，我现在肚子有点饿。今天没吃早饭。我看到你爸在吃傍晚茶，你能弄些面包给我吃吗？或者——”

小汉格伯正想请求贝茜让他进屋，贝茜却已离去。没关系。在哪儿都一样。眼下的处境真是糟透了！他朋友会怎么想呢？

“我不是向你乞讨，”面对贝茜端来的盘子，小汉格伯边从盘中拿起一片涂着黄油的面包，边开玩笑地说，“而是把你当朋友。我爸很有钱，你也知道。”

“因为你，他一直在挨饿。”

“因为他一时的心血来潮，我也挨过饿。”小汉格伯说着，又拿起一片面包。

“他在世上拥有的一切，都是为你而准备的。”贝茜替汉格伯船长辩解。

“是啊，假如我回来，像某个洞里该死的癞蛤蟆一般，坐在他那堆东西上面。谢谢你。那把铁锹又怎么解释呢，嗯？他表达父爱的方

式总是这么古怪。”

“我能用一个星期的时间，说服他和你相认。”贝茜怯怯地说。

小汉格伯饿得只顾狼吞虎咽，并未回话。贝茜顺从地把盘子端近他手边，同时仰起头，开始轻声说话。她的语速极快，而且呼吸急促。小汉格伯听着，听着，变得十分惊奇，吃得也越来越慢，最后嘴巴完全停止了咀嚼。“这是他的诡计，对吧？”他逐渐提高嗓门，刻薄而轻蔑地说，同时不由自主地一挥胳膊，打飞贝茜端着的盘子。最后，他还恶狠狠地咒骂了一句。

贝茜以手扶墙，不断往后退缩。

“不！”小汉格伯发怒道，“他想得美！他盼我回来——好继承他那几个臭钱……谁稀罕他的房子？发疯了——他绝没有发疯！难道你不这么认为吗？他就是想让我任他摆布。过去，他要我做可悲的律师文书；现在，他又想把我关进笼子，使我变成一只该死的乖乖兔。使我变成乖乖兔！使我变成乖乖兔！”小汉格伯说完，发出一阵低沉而愤怒的笑声，令贝茜感到害怕。

“告诉你——叫什么来着——贝茜：全世界加一块儿，也才刚够我打开胳膊肘，更别提一栋小破屋里那该死的客厅了。结婚！他就想让我结婚并安定下来！而且，他很可能已为我选定一个姑娘——天哪！请问，你知道朱迪吗？”

贝茜强忍泪水，无声地抽噎，而且整个身子瑟瑟发抖，显得极为悲伤。但小汉格伯正怒不可遏，焦躁不安，所以并未注意。他咬着自己的大拇指，想着其父的独断专行，感到异常气愤。就在此时，一扇窗户咔嚓咔嚓地拉了起来。

“一个咧嘴大笑、自称有最新消息的家伙。”武断的汉格伯船长，以毫无起伏的语调，一字一顿地说。在贝茜听来，他的声音似乎使黑夜突然发病，似乎将疯病与不幸倾撒到了地面。“现在，我终于明白这里的人为什么不对劲了，亲爱的孩子。哎呀，难怪！就是这个疯子在四处作梗。别和他扯上任何瓜葛，贝茜。贝茜，听到没有！”

小汉格伯与贝茜呆立原地，默不作声，犹如哑巴。楼上窗边的老人焦躁难安，嘟哝不休。突然，他尖厉地喊道：“贝茜——我看见你了。我要告诉哈里。”

贝茜做出似要逃跑的动作，但最后收住了，并把双手举向两边耳鬓。而身影高大、模糊的小汉格伯犹如一尊青铜像，纹丝不动。在他俩头顶，发疯的黑夜借助一名老人之口，时而呜咽，时而咒骂。

“把他赶走，亲爱的孩子。他只是个流浪汉。你想要的，是一个属于自己的家，一个幸福的家。那家伙没有家——他和哈里不同。他

不可能是哈里。哈里明天就回来了。听到了吗？只要再等一天。”汉格伯船长变得更加激动，叽里咕噜地说，“你完全不用担心——哈里一定会娶你的。”

汉格伯船长的声音变得尖厉刺耳、歇斯底里。远处，波浪重重地席卷海堤外侧，发出阵阵低沉而有节奏的哗哗声，在夜空回荡不止。

“他必须娶你。我一定让他娶你。要是他不听，”汉格伯船长发下重誓，“明天，我就立遗嘱剥夺他的继承权，把一切统统留给你。我说到做到。统统留给你。让他饿死去吧。”

窗户咔嗒咔嗒地拉下了。

小汉格伯深吸一口气，接着朝贝茜走近一步。“原来你就是那姑娘。”他用低沉的声音说。贝茜没有动，仍双手夹头，半对着他。“天哪！”小汉格伯嘴角露出似笑非笑但难以觉察的表情，继续说，“我非常想留下来——”

贝茜的胳膊肘抖得厉害。

“——暂住一个星期。”小汉格伯毫不犹豫地说。

贝茜猛地用双手捂住脸。

小汉格伯走到贝茜跟前，轻轻抓住她的两只手腕。贝茜能通过耳朵感觉到对方呼出的气息。

“眼下，我陷入了困境。你必须帮我渡过难关。”小汉格伯试图把贝茜的双手从她脸上扳开，但贝茜坚决不从。于是，小汉格伯放开贝茜的手腕，微微后退。“你有钱吗？”他问，“我必须走了。”

满脸羞愧、浑身颤抖的贝茜飞快地点了点头，随即弯下脖子，开始急急忙忙地摸找连衣裙的口袋。小汉格伯把头转向别处，等待着。

“给你！”贝茜轻声说，“唉，快走！看在上帝的分儿上，快走！要是我有更多——更多——的钱，我会通通给你，好让自己忘记——好让你忘记我。”

小汉格伯伸出手，并说：“绝不可能！我从未忘记你们中的任何一个。有些不止给过我钱——不过，我现在是一个乞丐。你们女人无一例外，必定会帮我摆脱困境。”

小汉格伯大摇大摆地走近楼下客厅的窗户，然后站在从窗帘透出的暗淡灯光中，低头查看掌心的钱：一枚面值半英镑的金币。他随即将之放入衣服口袋。贝茜略微退向窗户边缘。她站在那里，低着脑袋，好像受伤了；双臂无力地垂于体侧，又好像死了。

“别以为用钱就能和我扯上瓜葛。”小汉格伯说，“别以为用钱就能

让你撇清关系。”

小汉格伯轻轻一拍，固定好头上的帽子。紧接着，贝茜发觉对方用强有力的臂膀把她整个人抱了起来，导致她双脚离地，脑袋后仰。小汉格伯对着贝茜的脸一阵狂吻。在此过程中，他一言不发，并表现出令人无力抵挡的激情，仿佛急不可耐地想触及对方的灵魂。贝茜苍白的脸颊、坚硬的额头、耷拉的眼皮、没有血色的嘴唇，他一一吻了个遍。让强有力的臂膀紧紧抱住，感受着无力抵挡的狂吻，听着上涨潮水有节奏的哗哗声：对贝茜来说，仿佛保护全镇所有家庭的海堤已经溃决，一个浪头正朝她劈头盖脸打下来。浪头终于过去了；贝茜踉跄着不断后退，直至双肩碰上墙壁。她感到筋疲力尽，仿佛不幸遭遇暴风雨引发的海难，最后让海浪冲到此地。

过了一会儿，贝茜睁开眼睛。坚定而从容的脚步声逐渐远去，带走一个俘获的灵魂。她开始整理所穿连衣裙的下摆，同时呆呆地凝望前方。突然，她冲出院子大门，冲向无边无际的黑夜和空无一人的大街。

“停下！”贝茜喊道，“别走！”

她侧耳倾听，但分不清究竟是雷鸣般的浪涛声，还是另一人要命的脚步声，在无情地击打她的心。不久，所有声音变得越来越微弱，仿佛她正慢慢化作石头。可怕的寂静逐渐笼罩大地——比死亡更可怕。贝茜聚集不断衰退的力量，喊出最后一声恳求：

“哈里！”

脚步声已经消失，连逐渐减弱的回音也听不见了。什么也听不见。拍打海堤的激浪和波涛汹涌的大海，似乎也都没了声音。万籁俱寂，死气沉沉，仿佛她正独自迷失于刚才小汉格伯提起的、遍地石头的沙漠中：许多疯子在那里一边流浪，一边寻找金子，找到后却对金子不屑一顾。

在漆黑的小屋里，汉格伯船长一直密切留意着外面的动静。一扇窗户咔嚓咔嚓地拉了起来。贝茜头顶高高的夜空中，出现一个不可理喻、充斥谎言、令人绝望却又永远透着希望的声音，打破了在遍地石头的沙漠才有的死寂。“他走了吗——那个自称有最新消息的家伙？你听到他还在附近吗，亲爱的孩子？”

贝茜忍不住流下眼泪。“不！不！不！我没再听到他的动静。”她抽泣着回答。

高处的汉格伯船长咯咯地笑了起来，听着十分得意。“你把他吓跑了。真是好姑娘。现在没事了。不要着急，亲爱的孩子。只要再等一天就好。”

在另一栋小屋里，卡尔维老头皇帝似的安坐在扶手椅中，旁边桌上点着一盏球形灯。他用恶魔般的声音吼道：“贝茜！贝茜！叫你呢，贝茜！”

最后，贝茜终于听到其父的咆哮。仿佛屈服于命运一般，她开始默默而踉跄地返回那处压抑的小小地狱——他们父女租住的小屋。那处地狱既无高耸的入口，也无可怕的铭文——用来明示所有失去的希望。贝茜不明白，自己究竟犯了什么罪。

高处的汉格伯船长吵吵嚷嚷，已乐得忘乎所以。

“进去！别吵了！”泪流满面的贝茜，站在门阶处，突然呵斥汉格伯船长。

汉格伯船长毫不理会。他正为终于摆脱使自己“哪里不对劲”的那个人而欣喜若狂：大喊大叫，对永不会到来的明天满怀希望。在贝茜听来，仿佛世上所有盲目乐观的疯子都聚到了一块儿，并集体发作，以令她感到深深的恐惧。

‘It was as if the

To-morrow

What was known of Captain Hagberd in the little seaport of Colebrook was not exactly in his favour. He did not belong to the place. He had come to settle there under circumstances not at all mysterious – he used to be very communicative about them at the time – but extremely morbid and unreasonable. He was possessed of some little money evidently, because he bought a plot of ground, and had a pair of ugly yellow brick cottages run up very cheaply. He occupied one of them himself and let the other to Josiah Carvil – blind Carvil, the retired boat-builder – a man of evil repute as a domestic tyrant.

These cottages had one wall in common, shared in a line of iron railing dividing their front gardens; a wooden fence separated their back gardens. Miss Bessie Carvil was allowed, as it were of right, to throw over it the tea-cloths, blue rags, or an apron that wanted drying.

‘It rots the wood, Bessie my girl,’ the captain would remark mildly, from his side of the fence, each time he saw her exercising that privilege.

She was a tall girl; the fence was low, and she could spread her elbows on the top. Her hands would be red with the bit of washing she had done, but her forearms were white and shapely, and she would look at her father’s landlord in silence – in an informed silence which had an air of knowledge, expectation, and desire.

‘It rots the wood,’ repeated Captain Hagberd. ‘It is the only unthrifty, careless habit I know in you. Why don’t you have a clothes-line out in your back yard?’

Miss Carvil would say nothing to this – she only shook her head negatively. The tiny back yard on her side had a few stone-bordered little beds of black earth, in which the simple flowers she found time to cultivate appeared somehow extravagantly overgrown, as if belonging to an exotic clime; and Captain Hagberd’s upright, hale person, clad in No. 1 sailcloth from head to foot, would be emerging knee-deep out of rank grass and the tall weeds on his side of the fence. He appeared, with the colour and uncouth stiffness of the extraordinary material in which he chose to clothe himself – ‘for the time being,’ would be his mumbled remark to any observation on the subject – like a man roughened out of granite, standing in a wilderness not big enough for a decent billiard-room. A heavy figure of a man of stone, with a red handsome face, a blue wandering eye, and a great white beard flowing to his waist and never trimmed as far as Colebrook knew.

Seven years before, he had seriously answered, ‘Next month, I think,’ to the chaffing attempt to secure his custom made by that distinguished local wit, the Colebrook barber, who happened to be sitting insolently in the tap-room of the New Inn near the harbour, where the captain had entered to buy an ounce of tobacco. After paying for his purchase with three half-pence extracted from the corner of a handkerchief which he carried in the cuff of his sleeve, Captain Hagberd went out. As soon as the door was shut the barber laughed. ‘The old one and the young one will be strolling arm in arm to get shaved in my place presently. The tailor shall be set to work, and the barber, and the candlestick maker; high old times are coming for Colebrook; they are coming, to be sure. It used to be “next week,” now it has come to “next month,” and so on – soon it will be next spring, for all I know.’

Noticing a stranger listening to him with a vacant grin, he explained, stretching out his legs cynically, that this queer old Hagberd, a retired coastingskipper, was waiting for the return of a son of his. The boy had been driven away from home, he shouldn’t wonder; had run away to sea and had never been heard of since. Put to rest in Davy Jones’s locker this many a day, as likely as not. That old man came flying to Colebrook three years ago all in black broadcloth (had lost his wife lately then), getting out of a thirdclass smoker as if the devil had been at his heels; and the only thing that brought him down was a letter – a hoax probably. Some joker had written to him about a seafaring man with some such name who was supposed to be hanging about some girl or other, either in Colebrook or in the neighbourhood. ‘Funny, ain’t it?’ The old chap had been advertising in the London papers for Harry Hagberd, and offering rewards for any sort of likely information. And the barber would go on to describe, with sardonic gusto, how that stranger in mourning had been seen exploring the country, in carts, on foot, taking everybody into his confidence, visiting all the inns and alehouses for miles around, stopping people on the road with his questions, looking into the very ditches almost; first in the greatest excitement, then with a plodding sort of perseverance, growing slower and slower; and he could not even tell you plainly how his son looked. The sailor was supposed to be one of two that had left a timber ship, and to have been seen dangling after some girl; but the old man described a boy of fourteen or so – ‘a clever-looking, high-spirited boy.’ And when people only smiled at this he would rub his forehead in a confused sort of way before he slunk off, looking offended. He found nobody, of course; not a trace of anybody – never heard of anything worth belief, at any rate; but he had not been able somehow to tear himself away from Colebrook.

‘It was the shock of this disappointment, perhaps, coming soon after the loss of his wife, that had driven him crazy on that point,’ the barber suggested, with an air of great psychological insight. After a time the old man abandoned the active search. His son had evidently gone away; but he settled himself to wait. His son had been once at least in Colebrook in preference to his native place. There must have been some reason for it, he seemed to think, some very powerful inducement, that would bring him back to Colebrook again.

‘Ha, ha, ha! Why, of course, Colebrook. Where else? That’s the only place in the United Kingdom for your long-lost sons. So he sold up his old home in Colchester, and down he comes here. Well, it’s a craze, like any other. Wouldn’t catch me going crazy over any of my youngsters clearing out. I’ve got eight of them at home.’ The barber was showing off his strength of mind in the midst of a laughter that shook the tap-room.

Strange, though, that sort of thing, he would confess, with the frankness of a superior intelligence, seemed to be catching. His establishment, for instance, was near the harbour, and whenever a sailorman came in for a hair-cut or a shave – if it was a strange face he couldn’t help thinking directly, ‘Suppose he’s the son of old Hagberd!’ He laughed at himself for it. It was a strong craze. He could remember the time when the whole town was full of it. But he had his hopes of the old chap yet. He would cure him by a course of judicious chaffing. He was watching the progress of the treatment. Next week – next month – next year! When the old skipper had put off the date of that return till next year, he would be well on his way to not saying any more about it. In other matters he was quite rational, so this, too, was bound to come. Such was the barber's firm opinion.

Nobody had ever contradicted him; his own hair had gone grey since that time, and Captain Hagberd's beard had turned quite white, and had acquired a majestic flow over the No. 1 canvas suit, which he had made for himself secretly with tarred twine, and had assumed suddenly, coming out in it one fine morning, whereas the evening before he had been seen going home in his mourning of broadcloth. It caused a sensation in the High Street – shopkeepers coming to their doors, people in the houses snatching up their hats to run out – a stir at which he seemed strangely surprised at first, and then scared; but his only answer to the wondering questions was that startled and evasive, 'For the present.'

That sensation had been forgotten long ago; and Captain Hagberd himself, if not forgotten, had come to be disregarded – the penalty of dailiness – as the sun itself is disregarded unless it makes its power felt heavily. Captain Hagberd's movements showed no infirmity: he walked stiffly in his suit of canvas, a quaint and remarkable figure; only his eyes wandered more furtively perhaps than of yore. His manner abroad had lost its excitable watchfulness; it had become puzzled and diffident, as though he had suspected that there was somewhere about him something slightly compromising, some embarrassing oddity; and yet had remained unable to discover what on earth this something wrong could be.

He was unwilling now to talk with the townsfolk. He had earned for himself the reputation of an awful skinflint, of a miser, in the matter of living. He mumbled regretfully in the shops, bought inferior scraps of meat after long hesitations; and discouraged all allusions to his costume. It was as the barber had foretold. For all one could tell, he had recovered already from the disease of hope; and only Miss Bessie Carvil knew that he said nothing about his son's return because with him it was no longer 'next week,' 'next month,' or even 'next year.' It was 'to-morrow.'

In their intimacy of back yard and front garden he talked with her paternally, reasonably, and dogmatically, with a touch of arbitrariness. They met on the ground of unreserved confidence, which was authenticated by an affectionate wink now and then. Miss Carvil had come to look forward rather to these winks. At first they had discomposed her: the poor fellow was mad. Afterwards she had learned to laugh at them: there was no harm in him. Now she was aware of an unacknowledged, pleasurable, incredulous emotion, expressed by a faint blush. He winked not in the least vulgarly; his thin red face, with a well-modelled curved nose, had a sort of distinction – the more so that when he talked to her he looked with a steadier and more intelligent glance. A handsome, hale, upright, capable man, with a white beard. You did not think of his age. His son, he affirmed, had resembled him amazingly from his earliest babyhood.

Harry would be one-and-thirty next July, he declared. Proper age to get married with a nice, sensible girl that could appreciate a good home. He was a very high-spirited boy. High-spirited husbands were the easiest to manage. These mean, soft chaps, that you would think butter wouldn't melt in their mouths, were the ones to make a woman thoroughly miserable. And there was nothing like home – a fireside – a good roof: no turning out of your warm bed in all sorts of weather. 'Eh, my dear?'

Captain Hagberd had been one of those sailors that pursue their calling within sight of land. One of the many children of a bankrupt farmer, he had been apprenticed hurriedly to a coasting-skipper, and had remained on the coast all his sea life. It must have been a hard one at first: he had never taken to it; his affection turned to the land, with its innumerable houses, with its quiet lives gathered round its firesides. Many sailors feel and profess a rational dislike for the sea, but his was a profound and emotional animosity, as if the love of the stabler element had been bred into him through many generations.

'People did not know what they let their boys in for when they let them go to sea,' he expounded to Bessie. 'As soon make convicts of them at once.' He did not believe you ever got used to it. The weariness of such a life got worse as you got older. What sort of trade was it in which more than half your time you did not put your foot inside your house? Directly you got out to sea you had no means of knowing what went on at home. One might have thought him weary of distant voyages; and the longest he had ever made had lasted a fortnight, of which the most part had been spent at anchor, sheltering from the weather. As soon as his wife had inherited a house and enough to live on (from a bachelor uncle who had made some money in the coal business) he threw up his command of an East-coast collier with a feeling as though he had escaped from the galleys. After all these years he might have counted on the fingers of his two hands all the days he had been out of sight of England. He had never known what it was to be out of soundings. 'I have never been further than eighty fathoms from the land' was one of his boasts.

Bessie Carvil heard all these things. In front of their cottage grew an under-sized ash; and on summer afternoons she would bring out a chair on the grass-plot and sit down with her sewing. Captain Hagberd, in his canvas suit, leaned on a spade. He dug every day in his front plot. He turned it over and over several times every year, but was not going to plant anything 'just at present.'

To Bessie Carvil he would state more explicitly: 'Not till our Harry comes home to-morrow.' And she had heard this formula of hope so often that it only awakened the vaguest pity in her heart for that hopeful old man.

Everything was put off in that way, and everything was being prepared likewise for to-morrow. There was a boxful of packets of various flower-seeds to choose from, for the front garden. 'He will doubtless let you have your say about that, my dear,' Captain Hagberd intimated to her across the railing.

Miss Bessie's head remained bowed over her work. She had heard all this so many times. But now and then she would rise, lay down her sewing, and come slowly to the fence. There was a charm in these gentle ravings. He was determined that his son should not go away again for the want of a home all ready for him. He had been filling the other cottage with all sorts of furniture. She imagined it all new, fresh with varnish, piled up as in a warehouse. There would be tables wrapped up in sacking; rolls of carpets thick and vertical like fragments of columns; the gleam of white marble tops in the dimness of the drawn blinds. Captain Hagberd always described his purchases to her carefully, as to a person having a legitimate interest in them. The overgrown yard of his cottage could be laid over with concrete . . . after to-morrow.

‘We may just as well do away with the fence. You could have your drying-line out, quite clear of your flowers.’ He winked, and she would blush faintly.

This madness that had entered her life through the kind impulses of her heart had reasonable details. What if some day his son returned? But she could not even be quite sure that he ever had a son; and if he existed anywhere, he had been too long away. When Captain Hagberd got excited in his talk she would steady him by a pretence of belief, laughing a little to salve her conscience.

Only once she had tried pityingly to throw some doubt on that hope doomed to disappointment, but the effect of her attempt had scared her very much. All at once over that man’s face there came an expression of horror and incredulity, as though he had seen a crack open out in the firmament.

‘You – you – you don’t think he’s drowned!’

For a moment he seemed to her ready to go out of his mind, for in his ordinary state she thought him more sane than people gave him credit for. On that occasion the violence of the emotion was followed by a most paternal and complacent recovery.

‘Don’t alarm yourself, my dear,’ he said a little cunningly. ‘The sea can’t keep him. He does not belong to it. None of us Hagberds ever did belong to it. Look at me; I didn’t get drowned. Moreover, he isn’t a sailor at all; and if he is not a sailor, he’s bound to come back. There’s nothing to prevent him coming back . . .’

His eyes began to wander.

‘To-morrow.’

She never tried again, for fear the man should go out of his mind on the spot. He depended on her. She seemed the only sensible person in the town; and he would congratulate himself frankly before her face on having secured such a level-headed wife for his son. The rest of the town, he confided to her once, in a fit of temper, was certainly queer. The way they looked at you – the way they talked to you! He had never got on with any one in the place. Didn’t like the people. He would not have left his own country if it had not been clear that his son had taken a fancy to Colebrook.

She humoured him in silence, listening patiently by the fence; crocheting with downcast eyes. Blushes came with difficulty on her dead-white complexion, under the negligently twisted opulence of mahoganycoloured hair. Her father was frankly carroty.

She had a full figure; a tired, unrefreshed face. When Captain Hagberd vaunted the necessity and propriety of a home and the delights of one's own fireside, she smiled a little, with her lips only. Her home delights had been confined to the nursing of her father during the ten best years of her life.

A bestial roaring coming out of an upstairs window would interrupt their talk. She would begin at once to roll up her crochet-work or fold her sewing, without the slightest sign of haste. Meanwhile the howls and roars of her name would go on, making the fishermen strolling upon the sea-wall on the other side of the road turn their heads towards the cottages. She would go in slowly at the front door, and a moment afterwards there would fall a profound silence. Presently she would reappear, leading by the hand a man, gross and unwieldy like a hippopotamus, with a bad-tempered, surly face.

He was a widowed boat-builder, whom blindness had overtaken years before in the full flush of business. He behaved to his daughter as if she had been responsible for its incurable character. He had been heard to bellow at the top of his voice, as if to defy Heaven, that he did not care: he had made enough money to have ham and eggs for his breakfast every morning. He thanked God for it, in a fiendish tone as though he were cursing.

Captain Hagberd had been so unfavourably impressed by his tenant that once he told Miss Bessie, 'He is a very extravagant fellow, my dear.'

She was knitting that day, finishing a pair of socks for her father, who expected her to keep up the supply dutifully. She hated knitting, and, as she was just at the heel part, she had to keep her eyes on her needles.

'Of course it isn't as if he had a son to provide for,' Captain Hagberd went on a little vacantly. 'Girls, of course, don't require so much - h'm - h'm. They don't run away from home, my dear.'

'No,' said Miss Bessie, quietly.

Captain Hagberd, amongst the mounds of turnedup earth, chuckled. With his maritime rig, his weather-beaten face, his beard of Father Neptune, he resembled a deposed sea-god who had exchanged the trident for the spade.

‘And he must look upon you as already provided for, in a manner. That’s the best of it with the girls. The husbands . . .’ He winked. Miss Bessie, absorbed in her knitting, coloured faintly.

‘Bessie! my hat!’ old Carvil bellowed out suddenly. He had been sitting under the tree mute and motionless, like an idol of some remarkably monstrous superstition. He never opened his mouth but to howl for her, at her, sometimes about her; and then he did not moderate the terms of his abuse. Her system was never to answer him at all; and he kept up his shouting till he got attended to – till she shook him by the arm, or thrust the mouthpiece of his pipe between his teeth. He was one of the few blind people who smoke. When he felt the hat being put on his head he stopped his noise at once. Then he rose, and they passed together through the gate.

He weighed heavily on her arm. During their slow, toilful walks she appeared to be dragging with her for a penance the burden of that infirm bulk. Usually they crossed the road at once (the cottages stood in the fields near the harbour, two hundred yards away from the end of the street), and for a long, long time they would remain in view, ascending imperceptibly the flight of wooden steps that led to the top of the sea-wall. It ran on from east to west, shutting out the Channel like a neglected railway embankment, on which no train had ever rolled within memory of man. Groups of sturdy fishermen would emerge upon the sky, walk along for a bit, and sink without haste. Their brown nets, like the cobwebs of gigantic spiders, lay on the shabby grass of the slope; and, looking up from the end of the street, the people of the town would recognise the two Carvils by the creeping slowness of their gait. Captain Hagberd, pottering aimlessly about his cottages, would raise his head to see how they got on in their promenade.

He advertised still in the Sunday papers for Harry Hagberd. These sheets were read in foreign parts to the end of the world, he informed Bessie. At the same time he seemed to think that his son was in England –so near to Colebrook that he would of course turn up ‘to-morrow.’ Bessie, without committing herself to that opinion in so many words, argued that in that case the expense of advertising was unnecessary; Captain Hagberd had better spend that weekly half-crown on himself. She declared she did not know what he lived on. Her argumentation would puzzle him and cast him down for a time. 'They all do it,' he pointed out. There was a whole column devoted to appeals after missing relatives. He would bring the newspaper to show her. He and his wife had advertised for years; only she was an impatient woman. The news from Colebrook had arrived the very day after her funeral; if she had not been so impatient she might have been here now, with no more than one day more to wait. 'You are not an impatient woman, my dear.'

'I've no patience with you sometimes,' she would say.

If he still advertised for his son he did not offer rewards for information any more; for, with the muddled lucidity of a mental derangement, he had reasoned himself into a conviction as clear as daylight that he had already attained all that could be expected in that way. What more could he want? Colebrook was the place, and there was no need to ask for more. Miss Carvil praised him for his good sense, and he was soothed by the part she took in his hope, which had become his delusion; in that idea which blinded his mind to truth and probability, just as the other old man in the other cottage had been made blind, by another disease, to the light and beauty of the world.

But anything he could interpret as a doubt – any coldness of assent, or even a simple inattention to the development of his projects of a home with his returned son and his son's wife – would irritate him into flings and jerks and wicked side-glances. He would dash his spade into the ground and walk to and fro before it. Miss Bessie called it his tantrums. She shook her finger at him. Then, when she came out again, after he had parted with her in anger, he would watch out of the corner of his eyes for the least sign of encouragement to approach the iron railings and resume his fatherly and patronising relations.

For all their intimacy, which had lasted some years now, they had never talked without a fence or a railing between them. He described to her all the splendours accumulated for the setting-up of their housekeeping, but had never invited her to an inspection. No human eye was to behold them till Harry had his first look. In fact, nobody had ever been inside his cottage; he did his own housework, and he guarded his son's privilege so jealously that the small objects of domestic use he bought sometimes in the town were smuggled rapidly across the front garden under his canvas coat. Then, coming out, he would remark apologetically, 'It was only a small kettle, my dear.'

And, if not too tired with her drudgery, or worried beyond endurance by her father, she would laugh at him with a blush, and say: 'That's all right, Captain Hagberd; I am not impatient.'

'Well, my dear, you haven't long to wait now,' he would answer with a sudden bashfulness, and looking uneasily, as though he had suspected that there was something wrong somewhere.

Every Monday she paid him his rent over the railings. He clutched the shillings greedily. He grudged every penny he had to spend on his maintenance, and when he left her to make his purchases his bearing changed as soon as he got into the street. Away from the sanction of her pity, he felt himself exposed without defence. He brushed the walls with his shoulder. He mistrusted the queerness of the people; yet, by then, even the town children had left off calling after him, and the tradesmen served him without a word. The slightest allusion to his clothing had the power to puzzle and frighten especially, as if it were something utterly unwarranted and incomprehensible.

In the autumn, the driving rain drummed on his sail-cloth suit saturated almost to the stiffness of sheet-iron, with its surface flowing with water. When the weather was too bad, he retreated under the tiny porch, and, standing close against the door, looked at his spade left planted in the middle of the yard. The ground was so much dug up all over, that as the season advanced it turned to a quagmire. When it froze hard, he was disconsolate. What would Harry say? And as he could not have so much of Bessie's company at that time of the year, the roars of old Carvil, that came muffled through the closed windows, calling her indoors, exasperated him greatly.

'Why don't that extravagant fellow get you a servant?' he asked impatiently one mild afternoon. She had thrown something over her head to run out for a while.

'I don't know,' said the pale Bessie, wearily, staring away with her heavy-lidded, grey, and unexpectant glance. There were always smudgy shadows under her eyes, and she did not seem able to see any change or any end to her life.

'You wait till you get married, my dear,' said her only friend, drawing closer to the fence. 'Harry will get you one.'

His hopeful craze seemed to mock her own want of hope with so bitter an aptness that in her nervous irritation she could have screamed at him outright. But she only said in self-mockery, and speaking to him as though he had been sane, 'Why, Captain Hagberd, your son may not even want to look at me.'

He flung his head back and laughed his throaty affected cackle of anger.

'What! That boy? Not want to look at the only sensible girl for miles around? What do you think I am here for, my dear – my dear – my dear? . . . What? You wait. You just wait. You'll see to-morrow. I'll soon –'

'Bessie! Bessie! Bessie!' howled old Carvil inside. 'Bessie! – my pipe!' That fat blind man had given himself up to a very lust of laziness. He would not lift his hand to reach for the things she took care to leave at his very elbow. He would not move a limb; he would not rise from his chair; he would not put one foot before another, in that parlour (where he knew his way as well as if he had his sight), without calling her to his side and hanging all his atrocious weight on her shoulder. He would not eat one single mouthful of food without her close attendance. He had made himself helpless beyond his affliction, to enslave her better. She stood still for a moment, setting her teeth in the dusk, then turned and walked slowly indoors.

Captain Hagberd went back to his spade. The shouting in Carvil's cottage stopped, and after a while the window of the parlour downstairs was lit up. A man coming from the end of the street with a firm leisurely step passed on, but seemed to have caught sight of Captain Hagberd, because he turned back a pace or two. A cold white light lingered in the western sky. The man leaned over the gate in an interested manner.

'You must be Captain Hagberd,' he said, with easy assurance.

The old man spun round, pulling out his spade, startled by the strange voice.

‘Yes, I am,’ he answered nervously.

The other, smiling straight at him, uttered very slowly: ‘You’ve been advertising for your son, I believe?’

‘My son Harry,’ mumbled Captain Hagberd, off his guard for once. ‘He’s coming home to-morrow.’

‘The devil he is!’ The stranger marvelled greatly, and then went on, with only a slight change of tone: ‘You’ve grown a beard like Father Christmas himself.’

Captain Hagberd drew a little nearer, and leaned forward over his spade. ‘Go your way,’ he said, resentfully and timidly at the same time, because he was always afraid of being laughed at. Every mental state, even madness, has its equilibrium based upon self-esteem. Its disturbance causes unhappiness; and Captain Hagberd lived amongst a scheme of settled notions which it pained him to feel disturbed by people’s grins. Yes, people’s grins were awful. They hinted at something wrong: but what? He could not tell; and that stranger was obviously grinning – had come on purpose to grin. It was bad enough on the streets, but he had never before been outraged like this.

The stranger, unaware how near he was of having his head laid open with a spade, said seriously: ‘I am not trespassing where I stand, am I? I fancy there’s something wrong about your news. Suppose you let me come in.’

‘You come in!’ murmured old Hagberd, with inexpressible horror.

‘I could give you some real information about your son – the very latest tip, if you care to hear.’

‘No,’ shouted Hagberd. He began to pace wildly to and fro, he shouldered his spade, he gesticulated with his other arm. ‘Here’s a fellow – a grinning fellow, who says there’s something wrong. I’ve got more information than you’re aware of. I’ve all the information I want. I’ve had it for years – for years – for years – enough to last me till to-morrow. Let you come in, indeed! What would Harry say?’

Bessie Carvil's figure appeared in black silhouette on the parlour window; then, with the sound of an opening door, flitted out before the other cottage, all black, but with something white over her head. These two voices beginning to talk suddenly outside (she had heard them indoors) had given her such an emotion that she could not utter a sound.

Captain Hagberd seemed to be trying to find his way out of a cage. His feet squelched in the puddles left by his industry. He stumbled in the holes of the ruined grass-plot. He ran blindly against the fence.

'Here, steady a bit!' said the man at the gate, gravely stretching his arm over and catching him by the sleeve. 'Somebody's been trying to get at you. Hallo! what's this rig you've got on? Storm canvas, by George!' He had a big laugh. 'Well, you are a character!'

Captain Hagberd jerked himself free, and began to back away shrinkingly. 'For the present,' he muttered, in a crestfallen tone.

'What's the matter with him?' The stranger addressed Bessie with the utmost familiarity, in a deliberate, explanatory tone. 'I didn't want to startle the old man.' He lowered his voice as though he had known her for years. 'I dropped into a barber's on my way, to get a twopenny shave, and they told me there he was something of a character. The old man has been a character all his life.'

Captain Hagberd, daunted by the allusion to his clothing, had retreated inside, taking his spade with him; and the two at the gate, startled by the unexpected slamming of the door, heard the bolts being shot, the snapping of the lock, and the echo of an affected gurgling laugh within.

'I didn't want to upset him,' the man said, after a short silence. 'What's the meaning of all this? He isn't quite crazy.'

'He has been worrying a long time about his lost son,' said Bessie, in a low apologetic tone.

'Well, I am his son.'

'Harry!' she cried – and was profoundly silent.

'Know my name? Friends with the old man, eh?'

'He's our landlord,' Bessie faltered out, catching hold of the iron railing.

‘Owns both them rabbit-hutches, does he?’ commented young Hagberd, scornfully. ‘Just the thing he would be proud of. Can you tell me who’s that chap coming to-morrow? You must know something of it. I tell you, it’s a swindle on the old man – nothing else.’

She did not answer, helpless before an insurmountable difficulty, appalled before the necessity, the impossibility and the dread of an explanation in which she and madness seemed involved together.

‘Oh – I am so sorry,’ she murmured.

‘What’s the matter?’ he said, with serenity. ‘You needn’t be afraid of upsetting me. It’s the other fellow that’ll be upset when he least expects it. I don’t care a hang; but there will be some fun when he shows his mug to-morrow. I don’t care that for the old man’s pieces, but right is right. You shall see me put a head on that coon – whoever he is!’

He had come nearer, and towered above her on the other side of the railings. He glanced at her hands. He fancied she was trembling, and it occurred to him that she had her part perhaps in that little game that was to be sprung on his old man to-morrow. He had come just in time to spoil their sport. He was entertained by the idea – scornful of the baffled plot. But all his life he had been full of indulgence for all sorts of women’s tricks. She really was trembling very much; her wrap had slipped off her head. ‘Poor devil!’ he thought. ‘Never mind about that chap. I daresay he’ll change his mind before to-morrow. But what about me? I can’t loaf about the gate till the morning.’

She burst out: ‘It is you – you yourself that he’s waiting for. It is you who come to-morrow.’

He murmured ‘Oh! It’s me!’ blankly, and they seemed to become breathless together. Apparently he was pondering over what he had heard; then, without irritation, but evidently perplexed, he said: ‘I don’t understand. I hadn’t written or anything. It’s my chum who saw the paper and told me – this very morning . . . Eh? what?’

He bent his ear; she whispered rapidly, and he listened for a while, muttering the words 'yes' and 'I see' at times. Then, 'But why won't to-day do?' he queried at last.

'You didn't understand me!' she exclaimed, impatiently. The clear streak of light under the clouds died out in the west. Again he stooped slightly to hear better; and the deep night buried everything of the whispering woman and the attentive man, except the familiar contiguity of their faces, with its air of secrecy and caress.

He squared his shoulders; the broad-brimmed shadow of a hat sat cavalierly on his head. 'Awkward this, eh?' he appealed to her. 'To-morrow? Well, well! Never heard tell of anything like this. It's all to-morrow, then, without any sort of to-day, as far as I can see.'

She remained still and mute.

'And you have been encouraging this funny notion,' he said.

'I never contradicted him.'

'Why didn't you?'

'What for should I?' she defended herself. 'It would only have made him miserable. He would have gone out of his mind.'

'His mind!' he muttered, and heard a short nervous laugh from her.

'Where was the harm? Was I to quarrel with the poor old man? It was easier to half believe it myself.'

'Aye, aye,' he meditated, intelligently. 'I suppose the old chap got around you somehow with his soft talk. You are good-hearted.'

Her hands moved up in the dark nervously. 'And it might have been true. It was true. It has come. Here it is. This is the to-morrow we have been waiting for.'

She drew a breath, and he said, good-humouredly: 'Aye, with the door shut. I wouldn't care if . . . And you think he could be brought round to recognise me . . . Eh? What? . . . You could do it? In a week you say? H'm, I daresay you could – but do you think I could hold out a week in this dead-alive place? Not me! I want either hard work, or an all-fired racket, or more space than there is in the whole of England. I have been in this place, though, once before, and for more than a week. The old man was advertising for me then, and a chum I had with me had a notion of getting a couple of quid out of him by writing a lot of silly nonsense in a letter. That lark did not come off, though. We had to clear out – and none too soon. But this time I’ve a chum waiting for me in London, and besides . . .’

Bessie Carvil was breathing quickly.

‘What if I tried a knock at the door?’ he suggested.

‘Try,’ she said.

Captain Hagberd’s gate squeaked, and the shadow of the son moved on, then stopped with another deep laugh in the throat, like the father’s, only soft and gentle, thrilling to the woman’s heart, awakening to her ears.

‘He isn’t frisky – is he? I would be afraid to lay hold of him. The chaps are always telling me I don’t know my own strength.’

‘He’s the most harmless creature that ever lived,’ she interrupted.

‘You wouldn’t say so if you had seen him chasing me upstairs with a hard leather strap,’ he said. ‘I haven’t forgotten it in sixteen years.’

She got warm from head to foot under another soft, subdued laugh. At the rat-tat-tat of the knocker her heart flew into her mouth.

‘Hey, dad! Let me in. I am Harry, I am. Straight! Come back home a day too soon.’

One of the windows upstairs ran up.

‘A grinning information fellow,’ said the voice of old Hagberd, up in the darkness. ‘Don’t you have anything to do with him. It will spoil everything.’

She heard Harry Hagberd say, ‘Hallo, dad,’ then a clanging clatter. The window rumbled down, and he stood before her again.

‘It’s just like old times. Nearly walloped the life out of me to stop me going away, and now I come back he throws a confounded shovel at my head to keep me out. It grazed my shoulder.’

She shuddered.

‘I wouldn’t care,’ he began, ‘only I spent my last shillings on the railway fare and my last twopence on a shave – out of respect for the old man.’

‘Are you really Harry Hagberd?’ she asked swiftly. ‘Can you prove it?’

‘Can I prove it? Can any one else prove it?’ he said jovially. ‘Prove with what? What do I want to prove? There isn’t a single corner in the world, barring England, perhaps, where you could not find some man, or more likely a woman, that would remember me for Harry Hagberd. I am more like Harry Hagberd than any man alive; and I can prove it to you in a minute, if you will let me step inside your gate.’

‘Come in,’ she said.

He entered then the front garden of the Carvils. His tall shadow strode with a swagger; she turned her back on the window and waited, watching the shape, of which the footfalls seemed the most material part. The light fell on a tilted hat; a powerful shoulder that seemed to cleave the darkness; on a leg stepping out. He swung about and stood still, facing the illuminated parlour window at her back, turning his head from side to side, laughing softly to himself.

‘Just fancy, for a minute, the old man’s beard stuck on to my chin. Hey? Now say. I was the very spit of him from a boy.’

‘It’s true,’ she murmured to herself.

‘And that’s about as far as it goes. He was always one of your domestic characters. Why, I remember how he used to go about looking very sick for three days before he had to leave home on one of his trips to South Shields for coal. He had a standing charter from the gas-works. You would think he was off on a whaling cruise – three years and a tail. Ha, ha! Not a bit of it. Ten days on the outside. The Skimmer of the Seas was a smart craft. Fine name, wasn’t it? Mother’s uncle owned her . . .’

He interrupted himself, and in a lowered voice, ‘Did he ever tell you what mother died of?’ he asked.

‘Yes,’ said Miss Bessie, bitterly: ‘from impatience.’

He made no sound for a while; then brusquely: ‘They were so afraid I would turn out badly that they fairly drove me away.’

Mother nagged at me for being idle, and the old man said he would cut my soul out of my body rather than let me go to sea. Well, it looked as if he would do it too – so I went. It looks to me sometimes as if I had been born to them by a mistake – in that other hutch of a house.'

'Where ought you to have been born by rights?' Bessie Carvil interrupted him, defiantly.

'In the open, upon a beach, on a windy night,' he said, quick as lightning. Then he mused slowly. 'They were characters, both of them, by George; and the old man keeps it up well – don't he? A damned shovel on the – Hark! who's that making that row? "Bessie, Bessie." It's in your house.'

'It's for me,' she said with indifference.

He stepped aside, out of the streak of light. 'Your husband?' he inquired, with the tone of a man accustomed to unlawful trysts. 'Fine voice for a ship's deck in a thundering squall.'

'No; my father. I am not married.'

'You seem a fine girl, Miss Bessie, dear,' he said at once. She turned her face away.

'Oh, I say, what's up? Who's murdering him?'

'He wants his tea.' She faced him, still and tall, with averted head, with her hands hanging clasped before her.

'Hadn't you better go in?' he suggested, after watching for a while the nape of her neck, a patch of dazzling white skin and soft shadow above the sombre line of her shoulders. Her wrap had slipped down to her elbows. 'You'll have all the town coming out presently. I'll wait here a bit.'

Her wrap fell to the ground, and he stooped to pick it up; she had vanished. He threw it over his arm, and approaching the window squarely he saw a monstrous form of a fat man in an arm-chair, an unshaded lamp, the yawning of an enormous mouth in a big flat face encircled by a ragged halo of hair, Miss Bessie's head and bust. The shouting stopped; the blind ran down. He lost himself in thinking how awkward it was. Father mad; no getting into the house. No money to get back; a hungry chum in London who would begin to think he had been given the go-by. 'Damn!' he muttered.

He could break the door in, certainly; but they would perhaps bundle him into chokey for that without asking questions –no great matter, only he was confoundedly afraid of being locked up, even in mistake. He turned cold at the thought. He stamped his feet on the sodden grass.

‘What are you? A sailor?’ said an agitated voice.

She had flitted out, a shadow herself, attracted by the reckless shadow waiting under the wall of her home.

‘Anything. Enough of a sailor to be worth my salt before the mast. Came home that way this time.’

‘Where do you come from?’ she asked.

‘Right away from a jolly good spree,’ he said, ‘by the London train – see? Ough! I hate being shut up in a train. I don’t mind a house so much.’

‘Ah,’ she said, ‘that’s lucky.’

‘Because in a house you can at any time open the blamed door and walk away straight before you.’

‘And never come back?’

‘Not for sixteen years at least,’ he laughed. ‘To a rabbit-hutch, and get a confounded old shovel . . .’

‘A ship is not so very big,’ she taunted.

‘No, but the sea is great.’

She dropped her head, and as if her ears had been opened to the voices of the world, she heard, beyond the rampart of sea-wall, the swell of yesterday’s gale breaking on the beach with monotonous and solemn vibrations, as if all the earth had been a tolling bell.

‘And then, why, a ship’s a ship. You love her and leave her; and a voyage isn’t a marriage.’ He quoted the sailor’s saying lightly.

‘It is not a marriage,’ she whispered.

‘I never took a false name, and I’ve never yet told a lie to a woman. What lie? Why, the lie –. Take me or leave me, I say: and if you take me, then it is . . .’ He hummed a snatch very low, leaning against the wall.

Oh, ho, ho Rio!

And fare thee well,

My bonnie young girl,

We're bound to Rio Grande.

'Capstan song,' he explained. Her teeth chattered.

'You are cold,' he said. 'Here's that affair of yours I picked up.' She felt his hands about her, wrapping her closely. 'Hold the ends together in front,' he commanded.

'What did you come here for?' she asked, repressing a shudder.

'Five quid,' he answered, promptly. 'We let our spree go on a little too long and got hard up.'

'You've been drinking?' she said.

'Blind three days; on purpose. I am not given that way – don't you think. There's nothing and nobody that can get over me unless I like. I can be as steady as a rock. My chum sees the paper this morning, and says he to me: "Go on, Harry: loving parent. That's five quid sure." So we scraped all our pockets for the fare. Devil of a lark!'

'You have a hard heart, I am afraid,' she sighed.

'What for? For running away? Why! he wanted to make a lawyer's clerk of me – just to please himself. Master in his own house; and my poor mother egged him on – for my good, I suppose. Well, then – so long; and I went. No, I tell you: the day I cleared out, I was all black and blue from his great fondness for me. Ah! he was always a bit of a character. Look at that shovel now. Off his chump? Not much. That's just exactly like my dad. He wants me here just to have somebody to order about. However, we two were hard up; and what's five quid to him – once in sixteen hard years?'

'Oh, but I am sorry for you. Did you never want to come back home?'

'Be a lawyer's clerk and rot here – in some such place as this?' he cried in contempt. 'What! if the old man set me up in a home to-day, I would kick it down about my ears – or else die there before the third day was out.'

'And where else is it that you hope to die?'

'In the bush somewhere; in the sea; on a blamed mountaintop for choice. At home? Yes! the world's my home; but I expect I'll die in a hospital some day. What of that? Any place is good enough, as long as I've lived; and I've been everything you can think of almost but a tailor or a soldier. I've been a boundary rider; I've sheared sheep; and humped my swag; and harpooned a whale. I've rigged ships, and prospected for gold, and skinned dead bullocks – and turned my back on more money than the old man would have scraped in his whole life. Ha, ha!'

He overwhelmed her. She pulled herself together and managed to utter, 'Time to rest now.'

He straightened himself up, away from the wall, and in a severe voice said, 'Time to go.'

But he did not move. He leaned back again, and hummed thoughtfully a bar or two of an outlandish tune.

She felt as if she were about to cry. 'That's another of your cruel songs,' she said.

'Learned it in Mexico – in Sonora.' He talked easily. 'It is the song of the Gambusinos. You don't know? The song of restless men. Nothing could hold them in one place – not even a woman. You used to meet one of them now and again, in the old days, on the edge of the gold country, away north there beyond the Rio Gila. I've seen it. A prospecting engineer in Mazatlan took me along with him to help look after the waggons. A sailor's a handy chap to have about you anyhow. It's all a desert: cracks in the earth that you can't see the bottom of; and mountains – sheer rocks standing up high like walls and church spires, only a hundred times bigger. The valleys are full of boulders and black stones. There's not a blade of grass to see; and the sun sets more red over that country than I have seen it anywhere – blood-red and angry. It is fine.'

'You do not want to go back there again?' she stammered out.

He laughed a little. 'No. That's the blamed gold country. It gave me the shivers sometimes to look at it – and we were a big lot of men together, mind; but these Gambusinos wandered alone. They knew that country before anybody had ever heard of it. They had a sort of gift for prospecting, and the fever of it was on them too; and they did not seem to want the gold very much. They would find some rich spot, and then turn their backs on it; pick up perhaps a little – enough for a spree – and then be off again, looking for more. They never stopped long where there were houses; they had no wife, no chick, no home, never a chum. You couldn't be friends with a Gambusino; they were too restless – here to-day, and gone, God knows where, to-morrow. They told no one of their finds, and there has never been a Gambusino well off. It was not for the gold they cared; it was the wandering about looking for it in the stony country that got into them and wouldn't let them rest; so that no woman yet born could hold a Gambusino for more than a week. That's what the song says. It's all about a pretty girl that tried hard to keep hold of a Gambusino lover, so that he should bring her lots of gold. No fear! Off he went, and she never saw him again.'

'What became of her?' she breathed out.

'The song don't tell. Cried a bit, I daresay. They were the fellows: kiss and go. But it's the looking for a thing – a something . . . Sometimes I think I am a sort of Gambusino myself.'

'No woman can hold you, then,' she began in a brazen voice, which quavered suddenly before the end.

'No longer than a week,' he joked, playing upon her very heartstrings with the gay, tender note of his laugh, 'and yet I am fond of them all. Anything for a woman of the right sort. The scrapes they got me into, and the scrapes they got me out of! I love them at first sight. I've fallen in love with you already, Miss – Bessie's your name – eh?'

She backed away a little, and with a trembling laugh: 'You haven't seen my face yet.'

He bent forward gallantly. 'A little pale: it suits some. But you are a fine figure of a girl, Miss Bessie.'

She was all in a flutter. Nobody had ever said so much to her before.

His tone changed. 'I am getting middling hungry, though. Had no breakfast to-day. Couldn't you scare up some bread from that tea for me, or –'

She was gone already. He had been on the point of asking her to let him come inside. No matter. Anywhere would do. Devil of a fix! What would his chum think?

‘I didn’t ask you as a beggar,’ he said, jestingly, taking a piece of bread-and-butter from the plate she held before him. ‘I asked as a friend. My dad is rich, you know.’

‘He starves himself for your sake.’

‘And I have starved for his whim,’ he said, taking up another piece.

‘All he has in the world is for you,’ she pleaded.

‘Yes, if I come here to sit on it like a dam’ toad in a hole. Thank you; and what about the shovel, eh? He always had a queer way of showing his love.’

‘I could bring him round in a week,’ she suggested timidly.

He was too hungry to answer her; and, holding the plate submissively to his hand, she began to whisper up to him in a quick, panting voice. He listened, amazed, eating slower and slower, till at last his jaws stopped altogether. ‘That’s his game, is it?’ he said, in a rising tone of scathing contempt. An ungovernable movement of his arm sent the plate flying out of her fingers. He shot out a violent curse.

She shrank from him, putting her hand against the wall.

‘No!’ he raged. ‘He expects! Expects me – for his rotten money! . . . Who wants his home? Mad – not he! Don’t you think? He wants his own way. He wanted to turn me into a miserable lawyer’s clerk, and now he wants to make of me a blamed tame rabbit in a cage. Of me! Of me!’ His subdued angry laugh frightened her now.

‘The whole world ain’t a bit too big for me to spread my elbows in, I can tell you – what’s your name – Bessie – let alone a dam’ parlour in a hutch. Marry! He wants me to marry and settle! And as likely as not he has looked out the girl too – dash my soul! And do you know the Judy, may I ask?’

She shook all over with noiseless dry sobs; but he was fuming and fretting too much to notice her distress. He bit his thumb with rage at the mere idea. A window rattled up.

‘A grinning information fellow,’ pronounced old Hagberd dogmatically, in measured tones. And the sound of his voice seemed to Bessie to make the night itself mad – to pour insanity and disaster on the earth. ‘Now I know what’s wrong with the people here, my dear. Why, of course! With this mad chap going about. Don’t you have anything to do with him, Bessie. Bessie, I say!’

They stood as if dumb. The old man fidgeted and mumbled to himself at the window. Suddenly he cried, piercingly: ‘Bessie – I see you. I’ll tell Harry.’

She made a movement as if to run away, but stopped and raised her hands to her temples. Young Hagberd, shadowy and big, stirred no more than a man of bronze. Over their heads the crazy night whimpered and scolded in an old man’s voice.

‘Send him away, my dear. He’s only a vagabond. What you want is a good home of your own. That chap has no home – he’s not like Harry. He can’t be Harry. Harry is coming to-morrow. Do you hear? One day more,’ he babbled more excitedly. ‘Never you fear – Harry shall marry you.’

His voice rose very shrill and mad against the regular deep soughing of the swell coiling heavily about the outer face of the sea-wall.

‘He will have to. I shall make him, or if not’ – he swore a great oath – ‘I’ll cut him off with a shilling to-morrow, and leave everything to you. I shall. To you. Let him starve.’

The window rattled down.

Harry drew a deep breath, and took one step towards Bessie. ‘So it’s you – the girl,’ he said, in a lowered voice. She had not moved, and she remained half turned away from him, pressing her head in the palms of her hands. ‘My world!’ he continued, with an invisible half-smile on his lips. ‘I have a great mind to stop . . .’

Her elbows were trembling violently.

‘For a week,’ he finished without a pause.

She clapped her hands to her face.

He came up quite close, and took hold of her wrists gently. She felt his breath on her ear.

‘It’s a scrape I am in – this, and it is you that must see me through.’ He was trying to uncover her face. She resisted. He let her go then, and stepping back a little, ‘Have you got any money?’ he asked. ‘I must be off now.’

She nodded quickly her shamefaced head, and he waited, looking away from her, while, trembling all over and bowing her neck, she tried to find the pocket of her dress.

‘Here it is!’ she whispered. ‘Oh, go away! Go away for God’s sake! If I had more – more – I would give it all to forget – to make you forget.’

He extended his hand. ‘No fear! I haven’t forgotten a single one of you in the world. Some gave me more than money – but I am a beggar now – and you women always had to get me out of my scrapes.’

He swaggered up to the parlour window, and in the dim light filtering through the blind, looked at the coin lying in his palm. It was a half-sovereign. He slipped it into his pocket. She stood a little on one side, with her head drooping, as if wounded; with her arms hanging passive by her side, as if dead.

‘You can’t buy me in,’ he said, ‘and you can’t buy yourself out.’

He set his hat firmly with a little tap, and next moment she felt herself lifted up in the powerful embrace of his arms. Her feet lost the ground; her head hung back; he showered kisses on her face with a silent and overmastering ardour, as if in haste to get at her very soul. He kissed her pale cheeks, her hard forehead, her heavy eyelids, her faded lips; and the measured blows and sighs of the rising tide accompanied the enfolding power of his arms, the overwhelming might of his caresses. It was as if the sea, breaking down the wall protecting all the homes of the town, had sent a wave over her head. It passed on; she staggered backwards, with her shoulders against the wall, exhausted, as if she had been stranded there after a storm and a shipwreck.

She opened her eyes after a while; and, listening to the firm, leisurely footsteps going away with their conquest, began to gather her skirts, staring all the time before her. Suddenly she darted through the open gate into the dark and deserted street.

‘Stop!’ she shouted. ‘Don’t go!’

And listening with an attentive poise of the head, she could not tell whether it was the beat of the swell or his fateful tread that seemed to fall cruelly upon her heart. Presently every sound grew fainter, as though she were slowly turning into stone. A fear of this awful silence came to her – worse than the fear of death. She called upon her ebbing strength for the final appeal:

‘Harry!’

Not even the dying echo of a footstep. Nothing. The thundering of the surf, the voice of the restless sea itself, seemed stopped. There was not a sound –no whisper of life, as though she were alone and lost in that stony country of which she had heard, where madmen go looking for gold and spurn the find.

Captain Hagberd, inside his dark house, had kept on the alert. A window ran up; and in the silence of the stony country a voice spoke above her head, high up in the black air – the voice of madness, lies and despair – the voice of inextinguishable hope. ‘Is he gone yet – that information fellow? Do you hear him about, my dear?’

She burst into tears. ‘No! no! no! I don’t hear him any more,’ she sobbed.

He began to chuckle up there triumphantly. ‘You frightened him away. Good girl. Now we shall be all right. Don’t you be impatient, my dear. One day more.’

In the other house old Carvil, wallowing regally in his arm-chair, with a globe-lamp burning by his side on the table, yelled for her, in a fiendish voice: ‘Bessie! Bessie! You, Bessie!’

She heard him at last, and, as if overcome by fate, began to totter silently back towards her stuffy little inferno of a cottage. It had no lofty portal, no terrific inscription of forfeited hopes – she did not understand wherein she had sinned.

Captain Hagberd had gradually worked himself into a state of noisy happiness up there.

‘Go in! Keep quiet!’ she turned upon him tearfully, from the doorstep below.

He rebelled against her authority in his great joy at having got rid at last of that ‘something wrong.’ It was as if all the hopeful madness of the world had broken out to bring terror upon her heart, with the voice of that old man shouting of his trust in an everlasting to-morrow.

The Night Is Darkening Round Me

Poems in this book taken from Janet Gezari's edition of The Complete Poems, first published by Penguin Books in 1992. The poem 'Often rebuked, yet always back returning' is now widely felt to be by Charlotte Brontë, but is too wonderful to be excluded. This selection published in Penguin Classics 2015. The moral right of the translator has been asserted. Simplified Chinese translation copyright©齐彦婧. All rights reserved..

让我们说着话，打发夜的愁绪。

“伊尔妮，在我们栖身的四壁周遭，
十一月的狂风正无声地呼啸；
没有一丝微风能闯进这里，
将我爱女的发丝掀动些许，
我望着炉火，心中欢喜，
她的目光也同样光彩熠熠；
我感到她那柔嫩的脸庞，
欢愉而静默地贴在我的胸膛。

“然而，纵使一切如此宁谧，
我心中仍泛起苦涩和忧虑；
绯红的火光欢快地飞舞，
我的思绪却徘徊在冰封的幽谷；
我梦见沼泽，和迷蒙的山岗，
日暮在此没入黑暗与森凉；
因为，在那些凄寒的山间，
我曾钟爱的人们正孤独长眠。
我肝肠寸断，心痛难抑，

惘然的追悔令我身心俱疲，
因为我再也无缘与他们相聚！”

“父亲啊，当我年幼，
当你远在海的那头，
这些思虑曾完全将我左右！
我时常枯坐良久，
熬过凄风苦雨的长夜悠悠，
也曾从枕上抬头，却只窥见
暗月徒然挣扎在天间；
还曾惶然聆听声声巨响，
那是惊涛拍岸，浪碎石上；
我满心惊惧，彻夜警觉，
侧耳倾听，不敢安歇。
人生在世，有如此多的恐惧，
可我的父亲啊，逝者却不必这样忧虑。

“噢！我们不必为他们忧伤，
坟茔凄凉，却实非他们的眠床；
他们的身躯虽已归入尘土，
快乐的灵魂在上帝身侧享福！
你话虽如此，却嗟叹不止，
怅惋你的挚友终有一死。
啊！亲爱的父亲，可否将原因揭示？
因为，如果一切的确如你所述，
如此伤怀岂不毫无用处；
恰似为一粒渺小的种子叹息，
只因它原本结在树上无人注意，

如今却坠入肥沃的土地，
破壳新生，焕发灿烂的生机——
深深扎根，拔地而起，
葱郁的枝条招摇在天际。

“而我，每当念及逝者已矣
却不会恐惧，也不会哭泣，——
我深知彼岸有一片神圣的天地，
 那港口正为我与至亲开启；
我凝望时间之河浩瀚无际，
 心中渴望早日抵达那圣地，
我们诞生在那里，我和你
死后也会在此与至亲相遇；
让痛苦与腐坏远离，
再度与上帝合而为一。”

“甜美可靠的孩子，你所言极是！
 你比你的父亲更加睿智；
尘世的风暴怒号不止，
 却只会增强你渴望的意志——
和你热切的期盼，去穿越风暴与波涛，
 去经受狂风呼号、海浪咆哮，
最终抵达那永恒的家园，
 那岿然不渝的彼岸！”

群星

啊！为何，当夺目的太阳
 让人间重沐欢乐，
你们却纷纷离去，
 在天上徒留荒漠？

整个夜晚，你们灿烂的双眼
 向下望进我的眼眶，
我满怀感激地慨叹，
 祝福那神圣的目光。

我平静地饮下你们的光芒
 如同饮下生命的活力；
变幻的梦境让我欣喜若狂，
 犹如海燕在洋面嬉戏。

思绪连连，星斗满天
 遍布茫茫的无垠之境；
甜蜜的感召，亦近亦远，
 那悸动证明你我心心相印！

晨曦你为何要前来打破
 这崇高而纯粹的魔力；
为何要投下你冷酷的光波，
 以烈焰炙烤那面庞的宁谧。

血红的太阳升起，他如箭的光芒
猛烈地冲击我的眉梢；
自然之灵蠢动而欢畅，
而我的灵魂却陷入了哀伤的低潮！

我垂下眼帘，但这层薄纱，
怎能挡住他炽烈的光芒，
迷蒙的山谷沐浴金色的光华，
太阳在山顶闪闪发亮。

我躺回枕上，
想唤回夜晚，
想再看你们庄严的光芒，
拨动我和我的心弦！

但无济于事——枕头在发亮，
屋顶与地板也都闪耀光辉； 树上的鸟鸣清脆嘹亮，
清风微微掀动门扉；

帘帷翻飞，苏醒的蚊蝇
在我房中振翅低吟，
宛如囚徒，直到我起身，
放它们自由飞行。

噢，星辰、梦境，和温柔的夜晚；
噢，归来吧，群星与暗夜！

来为我遮蔽这不速的光线，
他毫不温暖，唯有灼热；

他将苦难者的鲜血榨干；
饮下的不是甘露，而是泪水；
就让我在他刺目的统治下酣眠，
醒来时只与你们相随！

哲人

“停止思索吧，哲人！

你沉湎幻梦已经太久
闭塞地囿于这暗室阴沉，
不顾夏日的艳阳当头！
环视宇宙的灵魂啊，你的这番思悟
又将以怎样的悲歌结束？”

“噢，因为有朝一日，
我将睡去，湮没无闻，
毫不在意 雨水浸透或冰雪覆身！
天堂的承诺，这些狂烈的火焰
无法完全或一半兑现；
地狱的威胁，和那永恒的烈焰，
无法压抑这不灭的意愿！”

“我曾这样说过，也依然这样坚称；
面对死亡也决不改口——
我小小的躯壳中有三位神明，
日日夜夜交战不休；
他们在天堂无法共容
却在我的心中相聚；
他们将始终寓于我的心胸
直到我遗忘自己的本体！

噢，但愿终有一天，我心间
不再有他们彼此纠缠！
噢，但愿终有一日，我能安眠，
内心不再苦闷忧烦！”

“一小时前，我看见
一个幽灵就站在你这里，
三条河流淌过他脚边，
深度相同，流速相一——
一条金黄——一条红得像血一样；
另一条如宝石般莹蓝；
但在它们汇合的地方，
河流却坠入漆黑的海面。
幽灵将闪烁的目光，
投向脚下暗夜般的海洋
突然间，那美好的深处迸发光芒
把四下照得通明透亮——
它白亮胜似日光
美丽远在它分开的源头之上！”

“即使只为那幽灵、先知，
我也已穷尽一生去观察与找寻；
我在天堂、地狱、人间与空中寻觅他的影子——
无止境地探寻，却始终不得要领！
只要能看到他灿烂的双眼
点亮那蒙蔽我的阴云，
我就不会这样懦弱地呻唤
说要停止思索，放弃生命；

也不会视遗忘为福分，
或急切地向死亡伸出手臂，
祈求用这鲜活的呼吸和敏锐的灵魂
换取毫无知觉的长眠安息——
噢，就让我死去——好让那力量和意愿
停止残酷的交战；
就让失败的正义，与胜利的邪念
消弭在长眠之间！”

追忆

你冰冷地躺在地下——身上白雪堆积，
远远地、远远地离去，冷却在阴郁的墓地！
我唯一的爱人啊，难道说，我已忘记去爱你，
时间横扫一切的浪潮，我是否终究无法抵御？

如今，难道我独自一人时，思绪
已不再飞越崇山，徘徊在北部的海岸，
或收拢双翼，在石楠与蕨叶间小憩
看它们覆盖你高贵的心，直到永远？

你冰冷地躺在地下——而在棕褐的山间，
已有十五个寒冬化为春天：
但那不肯遗忘的灵魂依然痴心不变，
纵然已在变迁与挣扎中熬煎多年！

年少时甜蜜的爱人啊，当世俗的潮汐将我卷去，
请原谅，如果我把你忘记；
困扰我的是别的渴望和别的希冀，
那希望只会蒙蔽，却无法让我辜负于你！

再没有新的光芒照亮我的天际，
再没有第二个清晨为我放亮；
我毕生的幸福都由你宝贵的生命赐予，
我毕生的幸福都已与你一同埋葬。

然而，当时光带走往日金色的美梦，
就连绝望都丧失了摧毁的能力；
我才明白生命该如何去珍重，
去巩固与丰富，即使没有欢愉。

于是我告别枉然的激情，止住了泪滴——
抽离我年轻的灵魂，不再渴慕于你；
我抵御那灼人的渴望，好让灵魂不至随你而去，
钻入那早已被我视为已有的墓地。

即便如此，我仍不敢任心灵受苦，
不敢在记忆醉人的疼痛中沉溺；
一旦深陷那美丽的痛楚，
我又如何再将世间的一切舍弃？

一场死亡

“啊，白昼！他不能死在
你明媚的日光之中！
啊，太阳，你如此平静地消逝在
这光辉灿烂的天空；

“他不能离你而去，
当清新的西风缭绕，
当你的光芒带着欢愉
洒在他青春的眉梢！

“爱德华，醒来吧，醒醒——
黄昏金色的光晕 温暖明亮地投在阿登湖心——
带你走出你的梦境！

“我的挚友！我双膝跪地
在你身边
祈祷你在远渡永恒的重洋之际，
再留一小时给人间：

“我听见波涛喧嚷——
看见白浪滔天；
却还没窥见什么彼岸
能宽慰我疲惫的双眼。

“不要轻信他们的怂恿，
说远方有伊甸园般的岛屿；
回头吧，远离那狂暴的浪涌，
回到你的诞生之地。

“是疼痛，而不是死，
在你胸中挣扎——
不，振作吧，爱德华，再醒来一次；
我不愿让你倒下！”

他用长长的一瞥，将我严厉地责备：
怪我不堪忍受那份伤悲——
他眼中无声的痛苦令我心碎，
我为那些无用的祈祷而惭愧。

此刻，忽然间 翻涌的杂念骤然停止；
再没有一丝悲哀来扰乱
我的灵魂，在这可怕的一日。

美好的日光趋于苍白；
暮色中的微风也渐渐安静：
夏日的露珠轻滴下来，
湿了溪谷、草地，和沉默的树林。

随即他的目光开始黯淡，
在长眠的重压下尽显疲惫；

他的眼珠开始莫名地晦暗，
混浊昏黄，尽管噙满泪水。

但它们没有流泪，没有变换，
不再转动，也不再垂下眼帘；
它们依然彷徨，却停止了流转——
不再顾盼，却尚未安眠！

于是我明白他在死去——
我俯身，捧起他无力的头颅；
没有呼吸，也没有叹息，
于是我明白他已亡故。

歌

红雀掠过嶙峋的幽谷，
野云雀翱翔在高渺的天空，
蜜蜂在石楠丛中飞舞，
我的淑女就藏在花叶之中：

野鹿在她胸口吃草；
野鸟在她身边育雏；
它们都受过她微笑的爱抚，
如今却留她一人孤独！

我相信，当阴暗的坟墓
刚刚把她的形骸殓入；
它们也曾以为自己内心深处
不会再有光明的幸福。

它们也曾以为在未来的岁月
悲伤的潮水将长流不息；
但如今它们可还有痛苦的感觉，
它们的眼泪又在哪里？

好吧，就让它们去争夺荣誉的鼻息，
去追逐欢愉的影迹——
殊不知她居住在这死亡之地
也早已改变，毫不在意。

纵使它们的双眼凝视与哭泣，
直到耗干悲伤的源泉，
她也不会打破沉睡的静谧，
报以哪怕一声叹惋！

吹吧，西风，拂过那孤冢，
仲夏的清溪流水叮咚——
此外再无须别的响动
来抚慰我那淑女的梦。

期望

对于你，人间依旧是多么美好， ——多么充满幸福！
真正的邪恶是那么地少， 也罕有不幸虚妄的幻影！
春日还能给你那么多的荣光，
夏日还能令你那么快地遗忘
十二月阴郁的日子！
你为何紧抓不放，
青春的珍宝，那欢愉的韶光，
 当青春已逝，而你已盛年将至？

当你的同辈，
与你财富、年纪相当的同类，
泪眼看他们的晨晖，
 化作浑噩而沮丧的白昼；
倒不如死时少不更事，
尚未在流浪中迷失心智，
不幸的奴隶，被强烈的激情钳制，
 沦为虚弱而绝望的鱼肉！

“因为，他们享受时我却在希望，
而满足会将希望摧残；
我如孩童般深信不疑地盼望，
等待至福——和珍贵的安眠。

不久，一个善思的灵魂教导了我，
我们必将渴望，直至生命陨落；
 世间的每一种欢愉
 最终都将逝去，终将遭到厌弃！

“这我早已预见——也不会去追赶
 那些倏然飞逝的背弃；
但是，我双脚稳固、面色淡然，
那诱人的角逐，我决不参与，
我凝望冲刷沙滩的波浪，
 融入亘古不变的海洋——
我在此抛下欲望的船锚，
让它深深扎进未知的永恒；
但愿我的心永不疲劳，
始终期待将来的前程！

“如今，在我眼里
是希望的魔力
如青春般，美化了自然界的万般神秘，
 无论可怖还是美丽—— 希望抚慰我的哀愁；
宽解我，当我为他人心忧，
她让我坚强，让我能去承受
 我命中注定的际遇。

“快乐的抚慰者啊！难道我会胆寒，
难道我会畏惧坟墓的黑暗？
难道我不会含笑倾听死亡的狂澜——

只要有你的支持，我的向导？

当下的命运愈是偏倚，

我胸中愈是胀满快意，

我会凭借你赋予的力量，坚强地去希冀

命运的回报！”

囚徒（节选）

我在地牢中悠闲地漫步，
毫不在意在此受苦的人物；
“严厉的狱卒，拉开沉重的铁条吧！开门！”
他不敢不从——铰链转动，发出刺耳的尖声。

“我们的客人身处黑暗。”我低声说道，望向那地牢，
格栅窗外的天空失却了蓝色，变得又灰又小；
（此时正值美好的春日放声大笑，尽显苏醒的骄傲）
“是啊，黑暗至极！”说话的是我阴沉的向导。

请上帝宽恕我那时年少无知，口不择言；
我开始讥诮，当潮湿的石板上响起冰冷的铁链：
“关押在三重墙内，难道你竟如此可怖，
必须被我们捆绑于此，再用脚镣束缚？”

囚徒抬起头来，她的面容是那么柔和温婉
如同大理石雕刻的圣人，或熟睡婴孩的脸；
她的神情是如此温柔和缓、甜美清丽，
没有一丝悲伤的阴影，或痛苦的痕迹！

囚徒抬手按住前额；
“我挨了打，”她说，“我在忍受折磨；
但你们坚实的门闩和铁条毫无用处，
它们纵是钢铁铸就，也无法将我久久困住。”

冷酷的狱卒嘶声大笑：“难道我该听你胡言乱语；
痴心妄想的可怜人，依你所见，你的请求我会同意？
况且，你以为你的呻吟会融化我主人的心？
哈！那你还不如等太阳融化花岗岩的坚硬。

“我的主人说话轻声细气，外表温文和善，
但他背后那个灵魂，却比燧石更坚；
我虽看似凶悍粗野，但要论凶暴乖戾，
却远远无法与我体内的鬼魂相比。”

她唇上浮现一抹轻笑，近乎鄙夷，
“我的朋友，”她柔声说，“你何曾听我哀恸哭泣；
除非与至亲重逢，或重返我往日的的生活，
我才会流泪控诉——但朋友，不到那时我的眼泪绝不掉落！

“不过还请你转告我那位暴君，我不是注定
长年在忧郁、苍凉与绝望中承受厄运；
每个夜晚，希望的信使都会来到我心头，
许我短暂的生命，与永恒的自由。

“他乘着暮色中涌动的清气，带来西风阵阵，
还有天边最明亮的黄昏与最灿烂的星辰。
风儿戚戚低语，星辰放射温柔的光芒，
眼前的景象瞬息万变，令我深陷渴望。

“我渴望的不是壮年所知的景象，
那时，当我细数未来的悲伤，惊惧让欢愉变得疯狂。

那时，纵使我灵魂的天空布满温暖的光芒，
我也不知它们来自何方，是雷暴还是太阳。

“不过，首先，一切归于宁静——安详悄然降临；
绝望的挣扎不再，骇人的焦躁骤停。
无声的音符抚慰我的心，奏响沉默的乐章，
那种和谐，我今生今世都难以想象。

“随后那无形之物出现；揭示它那看不见的真相；
我摆脱了外在的感官，只用内在的精神感知猜想：
它的羽翼近乎自由——找到了它的家园与海港，
它丈量那海峡，俯冲而下，去挑战最后的边疆。

“噢，但受阻是多么可怕——痛苦是多么巨大——
当耳朵开始倾听，眼睛开始观察；
当脉搏开始跳动，大脑重启思考，
灵魂就触到肉体，肉体就触到镣铐。

“但我依然宁愿忍受剧痛，不肯免去煎熬，
疼痛越是剧烈，幸福就越早降临；
无论它身披地狱的烈焰，抑或天堂的璀璨，
若这幻象是死亡的使者，它就神圣非凡！”

她不再说话，我们默然转身离去——
我们的力量再不能令这囚徒恐惧：
她的脸颊和闪光的双眼，似在向我们宣示，
人类擅自的判决，已被天国废止。

希望

希望只是个羞怯的朋友；
她坐在我那牢笼外头，
看我的命运向何处走，
像事不关己的人旁观袖手。

她恐惧起来尤其残酷；
阴郁的一天我透过铁条
向外望去，见她就在近处，
可她倒好，竟别过脸去不把我瞧！

像个冒牌的狱卒，装作把我看得紧紧，
还在争吵，就开始示意和平；
我在哭泣，她却唱个不停；
我若倾听，她又会骤然安静。

她是如此虚伪，如此无情；
当我最后的欢愉散落在地，
可怜的碎片零零星星，
连悲伤见了都唉声叹气；

可希望呢，原本她只需轻声关切
便能安抚我狂烈的剧痛，
但她却振翅高飞，直上天阙，
离我而去，再无影踪！

白日梦

我独自躺在夏日午后
洒满阳光的山坡上；
这正是五月大喜的时候，
她要嫁给她年轻的爱人，六月新郎。

这位新娘中的女王似乎恋恋不舍
不愿离开她母亲的胸膛，
而她父亲却把微笑的喜悦
送给自己膝下最美的姑娘。

繁茂的树枝婆娑摆动，
欢快的鸟儿高声歌唱；
但在所有的宾客当中，
唯有我一人面带惆怅！

人人都想避开我
郁郁寡欢的样子；
灰色的岩石凝望着我，
问我：“你来所为何事？”

我竟答不上来：
其实，我并不知道
自己为何带着满眼悲哀
来看这一派明媚闪耀。

于是，我躺在石楠坡上，
感知我的心灵；
与它一道带着忧伤
沉入异想的梦境。

我们想：“等冬天再度降临，
这些绚烂美景又到何处去寻？
只会消失殆尽，如虚妄的幻影，
化作空洞的笑柄！

“那些鸟儿，别看现在唱得起劲，
等穿越了干冷的沙漠，
它们将如暮春那可怜的幽灵，
忍饥挨饿，成群飞过。

“我们有什么理由欣喜？
如果树叶凋零的痕迹
早在它尚未转绿，
就已如此清晰！”

事实是否真是这样，
我从来无法确定；
但伴着一阵愤怒的悲怆，
我在沼泽上舒展身心。

千千万万簇明灭的火苗
仿佛在空气中燃烧；

千千万万把七弦琴银光闪耀
远远近近奏响仙乐飘飘。

我感到自己的呼吸仿佛
 充溢着神圣的火花，
我感到天光夺目
 织成了我石楠的床榻！

当广袤的大地应和着
 它们神异的曲调，
那些闪光的精灵也对我
 唱起，或似在吟唱歌谣。

“噢，凡人！凡人！让他们消亡；
 让时间与眼泪去摧残，
我们好在天上
 处处撒播笑语欢颜！

“让哀伤去扰乱那受苦之人的心绪，
 让黑夜将他的前路遮盖；
让它们催他早日安息，
 祝他长眠永不醒来。

“这世界于你如同坟冢，
 抑或一片荒芜的沙漠；
于我们，它却是姹紫嫣红，
 一日更比一日灼烁！

“我们若是掀起头巾，
飞快地给你一个眼神，
你就会替生者高兴，
因为他们向死而生。”

音乐戛然而止；午间的梦境，
如夜晚的神游，倏然消逝；
但幻想她不时仍会断定：
自己美好的畅想皆属真实。

致想象

当我厌倦了终日忧伤，
 当我尝尽了世间的苦难，
当我迷失方向心中绝望，
 是你亲切的声音将我呼唤：
噢，我真挚的朋友！我并不孤单，
每当听到你这样细语轻言！

外部的世界已毫无希望；
 内心的世界我加倍珍惜；
你的世界从不会滋长
 诡计、仇恨、顾虑和冰冷的怀疑；
在这里，我、自由与你，
拥有统治全境的绝对权力。

即使被危险、愧疚与黑暗环绕，
 又有什么关系？
只要我们胸怀
 一片澄明的天宇，
那里有千万道光芒撒播温暖，
无数颗太阳驱散冬的严寒。

理智确会抱怨不停
 怪真实的自然太过灰暗，
还会告诉那颗受苦的心灵，

它珍藏的梦是多么无用，注定枉然；
真理也会粗暴地践踏
那刚刚绽放的幻想之花。

但你始终守在一旁，
召回萦绕我心的幻景，
为萎靡的春日注入新的荣光，
从死亡中召唤更加鲜活的生命，
再用美妙的轻声细语，
描述那光明如你的真实天地。

你至福的幻景我并不相信，
但置身傍晚宁静的时光，
我依然怀着永远感恩的心，
欢迎你，仁慈的力量；
你抚慰人类的烦恼忧伤，
当希望枯竭，你就是更好的希望！

她闪耀得多么明亮

她闪耀得多么明亮！

我躺在她守护的光辉之下；

当天堂与人间对我轻唱：

“明天你要醒来，今夜尽情梦吧。”

好了，来吧，幻想，我美好的爱人！

请在我悸动的两鬓上轻吻；

请在我寂寞的卧榻上俯身：

赐我安眠，赐我福分。

世界渐渐远去；黑暗的世界，再见！

严酷的世界啊，请你回避，直到白天；

纵然这颗心有你无法驯服的骁悍，

但它仍需抵抗，若你执意拖延！

你的爱我不愿、不愿分享；

你的仇恨只令我笑容绽放；

你的悲伤教人心痛——你的冤屈让人神伤，

可是，噢，我决不会轻信你说的谎！

我举头凝望繁星点点

闪烁在那永无风浪的海洋，

我唯愿造物所知的一切苦难

都包含在你身上！

这就是我今夜的梦境；

梦中的天堂绚烂光明
沐浴永恒的福祉，历经无尽的光景
在光的轨道上运转不停；
我想象天外另有一重世界，
疲惫的双眼无法企及，
在那里智慧从不对爱情不屑，
恶名无法将美德遮蔽；

在那里，遍体鳞伤的弱者不必强带笑意，
当他被“命运”抽打得痛苦扭曲，
也不必强忍着包容她的恨意，
只将叛逆深埋心底。
在那里欢愉不会铸成大错，
理智不会徒然地劝说；
背叛绝无力量，真理绝不虚弱，
痛苦不是喜悦的必然结果；
在那里平静绝非了无生气的悲叹，
希望，不会是灵魂的幻影；
生命不是一场劳役，空虚而短暂；
死亡不是主宰一切的暴君！

同情

你不该绝望心碎：

当夜空中缀满繁星；

当黄昏悄然降下露水，

当阳光为清晨镀金。

你不该绝望挣扎：

尽管眼泪可能汇成河流，

难道那些最美好的年华

不是永在你心头？

它们哭泣，你也哭泣，想必应是这个道理；

你一感慨，风儿也随你叹息，

冬日将哀愁抖落在雪地，

秋日的落叶在冰雪之下堆积。

但它们终将复生，而你的命运

也与它们紧紧相依。

所以，继续前行吧，即使并不欢愉，

也永远不要心碎不已！

为我辩护

噢，你明亮的眼睛必须立即回应，
当理性用轻蔑的神情，
嘲笑我的不幸！
噢，你如簧的巧舌必须为我辩护，
说明我为何选择与你共度！

严厉的理性前来审判，
她特意穿上一身晦暗：
你，我的辩护人，会否哑口无言？
不，炫目的天使，请你申辩，
我为何将世界疏远。

为何我竟执意想要
与世间众人分道扬镳， 独自走上无人问津的小道，
权力与财富统统不要——
也没有荣誉的桂冠或快乐的花束环绕。

这些于我确曾美好非凡；
它们或许也曾听我许下誓言，
看我将供品呈上它们的祭坛；
但轻率的赠礼常被无视，
我的供品自然受到鄙视。

于是我衷心起誓，
不再寄望它们祭坛的圣石；
改用整个心灵去崇敬
你，无所不在的幻影；
我的奴隶，我的挚友，我的国君，
你是奴隶，因为你依然听我号令；
必须服从我多变的心情，
作用好坏都由我来决定：
你是挚友，因为无论黑夜天明
你总带给我无间的欢欣，——

我亲爱的痛楚，你撕裂灼烧
让我无法感知世俗的烦恼，
再从我的眼泪中榨取祝祷；
你是国君，纵然克己慎行
却将反叛教给了你的子民。

难道我不该去崇尚，
坚定的信仰，和不竭的希望，
只因我能凭自己的灵魂如愿以偿？
开口吧，幻象之神，为我辩护，
诉说我为何选择与你共度！

自问

“黄昏倏然逝去，
已近就寝的时候；
逝去的一天给了你怎样的思绪，
在你心中留下了何种感受？”

“这逝去的一天？它让我感到
仿佛余事未了；
仿佛竭尽心力，却收获甚少，——
总之徒留忧伤烦恼！”

“时间站在死亡的门前，
声色俱厉地将我数落；
良知也始终气势不减，
向我抛来黑暗的指责。

“尽管我说过良知会撒谎，
时间应当去声讨命运；
但可悲的悔恨仍使我两眼迷茫，
迫使我听从它们号令！”

“那么你是否乐意歇息？
是否乐意离开这片海洋，
再把你所有的苦闷失意，
抛入宁静的永恒之乡？”

“没人会为你的离去心痛——
也没人会哭着道声‘再见’， 这里曾让你的心千疮百孔，
你又怎会流连不前？”

“唉！无数强韧的锁链
将我们绑在各自的土壤；
爱的魂魄久久不散，
又迟迟不肯消亡！”

“长眠固然甜美，若桂冠与盛名 能为战士加冕；
但若蒙受污名，那勇敢的心，
则宁愿不懈奋战。”

“唉，你已抗争多年，
战斗贯穿了整个生命，
你已征服了恐惧，击溃了谎言；
还有什么事业未竟？”

“这倒不假，这只手曾戮力图强，
敢为他人之不敢；
我曾建立功勋，慷慨解囊，
却对忍耐毫无经验！”

“看那坟墓，你未来的长眠之地， 你一生之中最后的劲敌；

若把长眠看得如此悲凄，
你将会多么悲伤难抑。

“漫长的征战终将告负，
你静静地承受失败，
但你尚有午夜酣眠的幸福，
你仍会在灿烂的清晨醒来！”

死亡

死亡！它发起了攻击，
正当我对眼前的幸福深信不疑——
紧接着它又是一击，打得时光的枯枝
与鲜活的永恒之根分离！

绿叶曾在时光的枝条上闪亮，
鲜嫩多汁，缀满银色的露珠；
每个深夜，鸟儿在叶底乘凉；
每个白昼，蜜蜂在花间飞舞。

悲伤掠过，摘去金色的花朵；
愧疚剥夺了绿叶的骄傲；
但母树胸中依然流淌着，
生命那生生不息的浪潮。

我并不痛惜失去的欢乐，
也不悲叹巢穴空落，歌谣无人吟唱——
希望就在一旁，笑着鼓舞悲伤的我，
轻声说：“严冬不会久长！”

看啊！春天带着十倍的祝福，
在枝头遍缀美丽的花朵；
风雨和暖流前来爱抚，
为来年五月许下繁花硕果！

它高高耸立——灾难插翅也难波及；
它的光芒让罪恶不敢靠近；
伟大的爱和它强健的活力
能阻挡一切摧折——除了你造成的不幸！

残酷的死亡啊！让嫩叶低垂凋零；
傍晚的微风或许仍能将它们复活——
不！清晨的太阳耻笑我疼痛的心——
对我，时间将永远不再绽放花朵！

快把它折下，让别的枝条茁壮生长
覆盖那枯枝曾经的印痕；
这样，它朽烂的躯壳至少还能滋养
那令它诞生的——永恒。

致——

哎，你的姓名或许被人憎恨、被人轻慢，
还有人会把它忘记；
但我悲伤的心将永远悼念
你被粉碎的希望，和被玷污的声誉！
这是我一小时前的思绪，
我甚至为那可怜的不幸之人哭泣；
但某个词止住了我泉涌的泪滴，
在我眼中注入了寒冷的笑意。
然后，我说：“祝福那善意的尘土，
还肯掩埋你无人缅怀的头颅！
你曾如此虚弱，如此虚荣，
屈服于谎言、骄傲与心痛，——
我的心与你的毫不相似；
你的灵魂无法影响我的意志。”

但是这些思绪也已消亡；
因为它们愚蠢、邪恶，而且虚妄：
我岂能鄙视那胆怯的鹿，
只因它被吓得慌不择路？
我岂能嘲笑豺狼濒死的哀号，
只因他外表丑陋枯槁？
或是幸灾乐祸地聆听野兔悲泣，
只因它没有赴死的勇气？
不！愿怜悯的心怀着温柔的情谊

去将他记忆；

就说：“泥土，请轻轻覆盖那副胸膛

赐那亡灵安息吧，仁慈的天堂！”

荣誉的殉道者

这个冬夜满月当空；
 星辰寥落却明亮；
光芒映在每扇窗中；
 辉映叶露凝成的霜。

甜美的月光透进你的窗格，
 正如白昼把你的房间照亮；
伴着美梦，你在此安然度过，
 安详平静的夜晚时光！

而我，虽已竭力抑制
 疼痛仍在胸中作乱， 我独自徘徊在寂静的斗室，
 全然无法安享睡眠。

那座旧钟在阴暗的大厅
 嘀嗒回响，一刻不停；
它每一次规律的奏鸣
 都留下更加悠长的余音。

噢，那眼尖的孤星是多么迟缓，
 当它追逐天边清冷的灰白！
啊，看哪！还有那么长的时间
 明媚的清晨才会到来！

我站在你的卧房门外；
 爱人，你是否仍在酣眠？
我手按自己寒冷的胸怀，
 心脏几乎停止了震颤。

萧瑟的东风呜咽叹息，
 淹没了塔楼上的钟声，
那悲伤的讯息悄然消逝，
 像我最后的告别湮灭无闻！

明天，蔑视会将我的名字玷污，
 仇恨会对我百般凌辱，
它们会斥我为可耻的懦夫——
 做伪证的叛徒。

佞徒损友会窃窃嗤笑；
 真挚友人会祝我夭亡；
为了我，你会痛苦地哭号，
 仿佛从不曾如此心伤。

届时，别的罪人黑暗的劣迹
 将光芒四射，宛如美德；
与我的罪名两相对比，
 世人会将他们的恶行宽赦。

因为，谁会原谅那可憎的罪恶，
 那怯懦的背信弃义？

反叛，也可以捍卫自由，
在它选择的时机。

复仇能玷污正义之剑，
屠戮也可以正当；
但叛徒、叛徒，——那个字眼
却能吓退一切真挚的胸膛！

噢，我会把心脏献给死亡，
只要我的荣誉无损；
然而，我不会牺牲内心的信仰
去保全荣誉的表象！

即便为了你宝贵的爱情，
亲爱的，我也断然不敢欺瞒；
这背信需由来日验明，
到那时且只在那时，你再信不晚！

前方的道路我看得清楚；
但我毅然上路不惧艰险，
我不会去问严苛的世俗
布下了何等深重的磨难。

敌人追赶，同伴无情，
再没有人将我信任：
就让我在他人眼中背信，
在自己心底忠贞。

诗行

我不会哭泣，若你要离去，
这里本就谈不上什么美好；
黑暗的世界将加重我的悲戚，
当你的心在那里忍受煎熬。

我不会哭泣，因为绚烂的夏日
终有一天会归于颓丧；
因为无论如何，再幸福的故事——
最终都会以坟墓收场！

我已厌倦那痛苦的滋味，
它只让寒冬更加难捱；
也不愿再看那灵魂枯萎，
长年陷于死一般绝望的悲哀。

所以，当你死去，
若我碰巧落下一颗泪滴，
那只是我的灵魂在叹息，
想与你同去，长眠不起。

我的抚慰者

你的话多么漂亮，
 却没带来什么新奇的感想；
只唤起一个潜藏的思想，
让重云遮蔽的太阳
 再度拨开云雾，透出光芒。

那光芒深藏在我心底，
 向来不为人知；
但它的光辉从未熄灭——任阴影翻涌稠密，
它的柔光却不可压抑，
 洒满这阴沉的斗室。

终日在幽暗的道路上独行
 难道我就不曾难受？
在我周围，可怜之人发出谄媚的声音，
抑或为绝望的生活咆哮呻吟，
 人人都有着疯狂的舌头；——

不幸将他们连在一起，
 他们凄楚的笑容有如嗟叹；
他们的疯狂日渐令我歇斯底里，
在我眼前扭曲了幸福，
 把它变作哀痛与苦难！

于是我站这里，既沐浴天堂的日照，
又身临地狱的烈火；
我的心灵饮下那混合的曲调，
六翼天使的歌声掺杂着魔鬼的哀号；
此刻只有我的灵魂自己知道
它究竟承载了什么！

如同风暴搅动，
在海面上掀乱了和风一阵；
那暖风吹拂，悄然消融
冬日草地上的冰雪封冻；
哦不：还有什么能像你这般情浓，
我贴心的抚慰之人？

请你再多说几句，
平复我愤懑的心情；
等狂野的心变得温驯善意，
你不必再找寻别的痕迹，
只需让我用脸上的泪滴 来表明我感激的心！

年老的禁欲者

我对财富毫不崇敬；
我对爱情鄙薄耻笑；
追名逐利不过一场梦境，
黎明到来便云散烟消。

若要祈祷，那么世间仅剩
一句祷词尚能让我开口，
那便是：“让我清静，
给我自由！”

是的，当我飞逝的年华已近黄昏，
这便是我唯一所求； 愿我拥有无拘无束的灵魂，
无论生死，勇敢承受。

22.森林啊，你不必对我蹙额

森林啊，你不必对我蹙额，
诡异的树木，你们不必这样刻薄；
在阴郁的天空下摇着头如此难过，
嘲笑着我。

最美的花朵属于风铃草

最美的花朵属于风铃草，
它在夏日的微风中招摇；
那盛开的花团最能慰疗
我心灵的忧焦。

紫色的石楠有种魔力，
那忧郁太过强烈悲情。
紫罗兰的气息芬芳馥郁，
但香气却不能振奋人心。

树枝空荡，阳光清冷，
太阳是多么、多么难得一见——
天空失却了它金色的四境，
大地遗落了它青翠的衣衫。

浮冰在溪上顺流漂荡，
投下沉沉的阴影；
远处的山丘和谷地好像，
披挂着寒雾轻轻——

风铃草不再令我着迷，
石楠失去了它的绚丽，
此刻，在山下的谷地，
紫罗兰也不再芳香甜蜜。

我虽然为石楠伤感，
但好在与它相隔遥远。
我知道眼泪将是多么难掩，
若我看见它今日的笑靥。

木上的痠是如此害羞，
藏在覆满青苔的石缝里头；
它有沁人的香气和露湿的眼眸，
但那不是我呜咽的理由。

我牵挂的是那纤细却庄严的茎，
是那花朵泛着银光的靛青。
那花蕾藏在翠绿的叶鞘中心，
闪烁着蓝宝石一般的晶莹。

是这些在我心间注入，
那镇静而舒缓的咒语，
它若能让我泪流如注，
也就能抚慰我的心绪。

我为它们哭泣，沉闷的冬日，
将我们长久地分离。
我在渴望中流泪——尤其是
当我不觉走上草木枯萎的河堤。

若是寒冷， 阴沉的天空便会降下光芒，

把一抹转瞬即逝的光明，
投向那堵潮湿黑暗的墙。

我多么向往，多么渴望， 那繁花似锦的时节到来，
让我远离那消逝的光亮，
为家乡的田野致哀——

夜风

夏日醇美的午夜 一轮晴朗的明月 照进我们客厅敞开的窗
照在露湿的玫瑰树上

我静静地坐着冥想——
轻风掀动我的发梢
向我诉说天堂是多么辉煌
沉睡的大地是多么美好

这些我早已知晓
无须它来呢喃
但它仍窃窃私语
“那森林是多么黑暗！——

“浓密的枝叶听了我的低吟
婆娑起舞，胜似梦境，
它们那数不清的声音
仿佛无不充满灵性”

我说：“消停些吧，歌手，
你恳切的声音纵然动听
但别以为它美妙的节奏
有力量触动我的心灵——

“去跟芬芳的花朵嬉戏，
去抚弄小树柔嫩的枝叶——
但别来拨动我人类的情绪，
就让它自由地宣泄”

那位流浪者却不肯离去，
它的亲吻反而更加温暖——
“噢，来吧，”它的叹息如此甜蜜
“我会征服你，即使你不情愿——”

“难道你我不是童年的玩伴？
难道我不曾爱你久长？
长如你对黑夜的爱恋，
那阒寂总鼓动我歌唱。

“等你停止了心跳，
长眠在教堂的墓地，
我将有无尽的时间去哀悼，
你也将拥有无尽的孤寂——”

夜晚在我周围变暗

夜晚在我周围变暗，
寒风狂烈地嘶吼。
一个专横的诅咒却将我羁绊，
不能，我不能走。

参天大树弯下腰来，
沉重的积雪压在赤裸的枝头。
风暴正迅速地到来，
而我，还不能走。

我头上是层云翻涌，
我脚下的荒地没有尽头。
但任何苦闷都无法将我撼动，
我不能，也决不会走。

我会到来，当你心伤，
独自躺在幽暗的房间。
当白天狂浪的欢笑业已消亡，
愉快的微笑也被流放，
不敌傍晚忧郁的清寒。

我会到来，当内心（真实）的情感，

占据公正的绝对支配，
当我悄然将你感染，
而悲伤加剧、快乐凝滞不前，
我会载着你的灵魂远走高飞。

听，就是现在，你已来到
一生中最庄严的时刻。
你难道不觉得灵魂之中，
有异样的情感翻涌。
那是强大力量的先导，
我的使者。

我本想敲击天堂的琴键，
那旋律恍如你与幸福的再现。
我本想唤起那醉人的歌章，
但歌词却在舌尖无声地消亡。
于是我明白那圣洁的旋律，
再也无法诉说欢愉，
再然后，我感受到.....

尘世是否已不再给你灵感

尘世是否已不再给你灵感，
你这孤独的梦想者？
既然激情已无法将你感染，
自然可否不再俯首帖耳？

你的心灵总在
幽暗的未知地带游走；
快让它停止无谓的徘徊——
回来与我厮守——

我知道我山中的清风
仍能让你陶醉安心——
我知道你爱我的艳阳当空
尽管你恣意任性——

当黄昏渗入白昼，
占据了夏日的天空，
我看见你的灵魂，
扭曲在偶像崇拜之中。

我时刻注视着你——
我知道我有力的支配——
和强大的魔力， 能驱散你的伤悲——

世间凡人心中少有 如此强烈的渴望，
但也无人会去奢求，
胜过你那人间的天堂——

就让我用风儿将你轻抚——
就让我成为你的挚友——
既然你身旁无人祝福，
就请回来与我厮守——

我的灵魂并不怯懦

我的灵魂并不怯懦，
我也绝不颤抖，纵使身处风暴肆虐的地狱。
我看见天堂的光辉洒落，
信仰也同样闪烁，帮我战胜恐惧。

噢，我心中的上帝，
无所不能、无处不在的神明，
生命在我体内憩息，
因为我的力量，源自你不朽的生命。

那千百种信条皆为虚妄，
纵使曾打动人心，也必属无谓；
如此无用，像枯萎的芥草一样，
抑或虚浮的泡沫之于无边的海水。

它们妄图动摇的人，
如此笃信你的无限，
如此坚决地锚定，
你岿然的不朽之岩。

你的灵魂博爱广大，
为永恒的岁月注入活力。
它自上而下地弥漫、孵化，
它改变、维系、消融、创造和抚育。

就算地球与月球都已不再，
纵使恒星与宇宙消亡，
你仍会独自存在，
包罗世间万象。

那里没有“死亡”的立足之地，
没有一粒原子会在他的淫威下荒废，
因为你就是生命与呼吸，
永远没有什么能将你摧毁。

室内一片沉静宁谧

室内一片沉静宁谧，
室外——却是疾风骤雨。
但有什么在我心间低语，
穿过雨声，（穿过）风的叹息，
——永远不再。
永远不再？为何永远不再？ 记忆的力量与你同样真实。

屡遭责难，却不断重返

屡遭责难，却不断重返

我与生俱来最初的情感，
放弃追求财富与知识的纷繁，
转而投身不切实际的梦幻。

今天，我不会去探索那黑暗的领域；
它无常的宽广只会徒增凄凉；
幻象升起，一批连着一批，
虚幻的世界近得难以想象。

我将前行，但不会遵循昔日英雄的小路，
也不会选择道德高地上的路线，
更不会与面目不清的人为伍，
在久已逝去的暗影中流连。

我将追随我的本心：
不需要任何别的向导：
那里蕨草丛生的山谷中有觅食的灰色羊群；
那里的山间有狂风猛烈地呼啸。

孤寂的山峦蕴含怎样的启示？
它比我想象中更加荣耀、更加悲情：
那足以唤醒一个人内心情感的世界，
堪为天堂与地狱的中心。

何必要问何时何处

何必要问何时何处，
我们的人性就寓居于此。
对权力的崇拜由来自古，
谄媚地吹捧着罪恶的胜出。
对绝望的可怜人落井下石，
打击正义，赞赏罪恶。
若是后者强大，前者羸弱。

让人流血，教人哭泣，
贪恋悲愁，自作自受。
还用愚蠢的祷告藐视上帝，
为不义者祈求慈悲庇佑。

此时正值金秋，
谷穗渐渐金黄成熟。
日复一日，在每个正午，
八月的太阳如六月那样炽热夺目。
但我们空茫的双眼，
只看见大地荡漾，天空炽燃。
无人手握收割者的镰刀，
田里成熟的谷捆也尚未捆牢。

我们的谷物数月前就已收割，
掺着血块脱粒去壳。

正当谷穗如牛奶般甜美，
马蹄与战靴将它们残暴地踩碎。
我加倍地诅咒，在异乡的草地
战斗，却不为家园抑或上帝。

版本说明

本书收录的诗歌全部选自珍妮特·吉扎里（Janet Gezari）编纂的《艾米莉·勃朗特诗歌全集》（The Complete Poems），企鹅出版社1992年第一版。其中《屡遭责难，却不断重返》一诗如今被普遍认为是夏洛蒂·勃朗特所作，但实属上乘，理当收录。

The Night is Darkening Round Me

N° 18

‘ . . . ever-present, phantom thing;
My slave, my comrade, and my king’

1. Faith and Despondency

'The winter wind is loud and wild,
Come close to me, my darling child;
Forsake thy books, and mateless play;
And, while the night is gathering grey,
We'll talk its pensive hours away; –

'Iernë, round our sheltered hall
November's gusts unheeded call;
Not one faint breath can enter here
Enough to wave my daughter's hair,
And I am glad to watch the blaze
Glance from her eyes, with mimic rays;
To feel her cheek so softly pressed,
In happy quiet on my breast.

'But, yet, even this tranquillity
Brings bitter, restless thoughts to me;
And, in the red fire's cheerful glow,
I think of deep glens, blocked with snow;
I dream of moor, and misty hill,
Where evening closes dark and chill;
For, lone, among the mountains cold,
Lie those that I have loved of old.
And my heart aches, in hopeless pain

Exhausted with repinings vain,
That I shall greet them ne'er again!

‘Father, in early infancy,
When you were far beyond the sea,
Such thoughts were tyrants over me!
I often sat, for hours together,
Through the long nights of angry weather,
Raised on my pillow, to descry
The dim moon struggling in the sky;
Or, with strained ear, to catch the shock,
Of rock with wave, and wave with rock;
So would I fearful vigil keep,
And, all for listening, never sleep.
But this world's life has much to dread,
Not so, my Father, with the dead.

‘Oh! not for them, should we despair,
The grave is drear, but they are not there;
Their dust is mingled with the sod,
Their happy souls are gone to God!
You told me this, and yet you sigh,
And murmur that your friends must die.
Ah! my dear father, tell me why?
For, if your former words were true,
How useless would such sorrow be;
As wise, to mourn the seed which grew
Unnoticed on its parent tree,

Because it fell in fertile earth,
And sprang up to a glorious birth –
Struck deep its root, and lifted high
Its green boughs, in the breezy sky.

‘But, I’ll not fear, I will not weep
For those whose bodies rest in sleep, –
I know there is a blessed shore,
Opening its ports for me, and mine;
And, gazing Time’s wide waters o’er,
I weary for that land divine,
Where we were born, where you and I
Shall meet our Dearest, when we die;
From suffering and corruption free,
Restored into the Deity.’

‘Well hast thou spoken, sweet, trustful child!
And wiser than thy sire;
And worldly tempests, raging wild,
Shall strengthen thy desire –
Thy fervent hope, through storm and foam,
Through wind and ocean’s roar,
To reach, at last, the eternal home,
The steadfast, changeless, shore!’

2. Stars

Ah! why, because the dazzling sun
 Restored our Earth to joy,
Have you departed, every one,
 And left a desert sky?

All through the night, your glorious eyes
 Were gazing down in mine,
And with a full heart's thankful sighs,
 I blessed that watch divine.

I was at peace, and drank your beams
 As they were life to me;
And revelled in my changeful dreams,
 Like petrel on the sea.

Thought followed thought, star followed star,
 Through boundless regions, on;
While one sweet influence, near and far,
 Thrilled through, and proved us one!

Why did the morning dawn to break
 So great, so pure, a spell;
And scorch with fire, the tranquil cheek,
 Where your cool radiance fell?

Blood- red, he rose, and, arrow- straight,
His fierce beams struck my brow;
The soul of nature, sprang, elate,
But mine sank sad and low!

My lids closed down, yet through their veil,
I saw him, blazing, still,
And steep in gold the misty dale,
And flash upon the hill.

I turned me to the pillow, then,
To call back night, and see
Your worlds of solemn light, again,
Throb with my heart, and me!

It would not do – the pillow glowed,
And glowed both roof and floor;
And birds sang loudly in the wood,
And fresh winds shook the door;

The curtains waved, the wakened flies
Were murmuring round my room,
Imprisoned there, till I should rise,
And give them leave to roam.

Oh, stars, and dreams, and gentle night;
Oh, night and stars return!

And hide me from the hostile light,
That does not warm, but burn;

That drains the blood of suffering men;
Drinks tears, instead of dew;
Let me sleep through his blinding reign,
And only wake with you!

3. The Philosopher

‘Enough of thought, philosopher!
Too long hast thou been dreaming
Unenlightened, in this chamber drear,
While summer’s sun is beaming!
Space- sweeping soul, what sad refrain
Concludes thy musings once again?

‘ “Oh, for the time when I shall sleep
Without identity,
And never care how rain may steep,
Or snow may cover me!
No promised heaven, these wild desires,
Could all, or half fulfil;
No threatened hell, with quenchless fires,
Subdue this quenchless will!” ’

‘So said I, and still say the same;
Still, to my death, will say –
Three gods, within this little frame,
Are warring night and day;
Heaven could not hold them all, and yet
They all are held in me;
And must be mine till I forget
My present entity!

Oh, for the time, when in my breast
 Their struggles will be o'er!
Oh, for the day, when I shall rest,
 And never suffer more!'

'I saw a spirit, standing, man,
 Where thou doth stand – an hour ago,
And round his feet three rivers ran,
 Of equal depth, and equal flow –
A golden stream – and one like blood;
 And one like sapphire seemed to be;
But, where they joined their triple flood
 It tumbled in an inky sea.

The spirit sent his dazzling gaze
 Down through that ocean's gloomy night
Then, kindling all, with sudden blaze,
 The glad deep sparkled wide and bright –
White as the sun, far, far more fair
 Than its divided sources were!'

'And even for that spirit, seer,
 I've watched and sought my life- time long;
Sought him in heaven, hell, earth, and air –
 An endless search, and always wrong!
Had I but seen his glorious eye
 Once light the clouds that wilder me,
I ne'er had raised this coward cry

To cease to think, and cease to be;
I ne'er had called oblivion blest,
Nor, stretching eager hands to death,
Implored to change for senseless rest
This sentient soul, this living breath –
Oh, let me die – that power and will
Their cruel strife may close;
And conquered good, and conquering ill
Be lost in one repose!'

4. Remembrance

Cold in the earth – and the deep snow piled above thee,
Far, far, removed, cold in the dreary grave!
Have I forgot, my only Love, to love thee,
Severed at last by Time's all- severing wave?

Now, when alone, do my thoughts no longer hover
Over the mountains, on that northern shore,
Resting their wings where heath and fern- leaves cover
Thy noble heart for ever, ever more?

Cold in the earth – and fifteen wild Decembers,
From those brown hills, have melted into spring:
Faithful, indeed, is the spirit that remembers
After such years of change and suffering!
Sweet Love of youth, forgive, if I forget thee,
While the world's tide is bearing me along;
Other desires and other hopes beset me,
Hopes which obscure, but cannot do thee wrong!

No later light has lightened up my heaven,
No second morn has ever shone for me;
All my life's bliss from thy dear life was given,
All my life's bliss is in the grave with thee.

But, when the days of golden dreams had perished,
And even Despair was powerless to destroy;
Then did I learn how existence could be cherished,
Strengthened, and fed without the aid of joy.

Then did I check the tears of useless passion –
Weaned my young soul from yearning after thine;
Sternly denied its burning wish to hasten
Down to that tomb already more than mine.

And, even yet, I dare not let it languish,
Dare not indulge in memory's rapturous pain;
Once drinking deep of that divinest anguish,
How could I seek the empty world again?

5. A Death- Scene

'O Day! he cannot die
When thou so fair art shining!
O Sun, in such a glorious sky,
So tranquilly declining;

'He cannot leave thee now,
While fresh west winds are blowing,
And all around his youthful brow
Thy cheerful light is glowing!

'Edward, awake, awake –
The golden evening gleams
Warm and bright on Arden's lake –
Arouse thee from thy dreams!

'Beside thee, on my knee,
My dearest friend! I pray
That thou, to cross the eternal sea,
Wouldst yet one hour delay:

'I hear its billows roar –
I see them foaming high;
But no glimpse of a further shore
Has blest my straining eye.

‘Believe not what they urge
Of Eden isles beyond;
Turn back, from that tempestuous surge,
To thy own native land.

‘It is not death, but pain
That struggles in thy breast –
Nay, rally, Edward, rouse again;
I cannot let thee rest!’

One long look, that sore reproved me
For the woe I could not bear –
One mute look of suffering moved me
To repent my useless prayer:

And, with sudden check, the heaving
Of distraction passed away;
Not a sign of further grieving
Stirred my soul that awful day.

Paled, at length, the sweet sun setting;
Sunk to peace the twilight breeze:
Summer dews fell softly, wetting
Glen, and glade, and silent trees.

Then his eyes began to weary,
Weighed beneath a mortal sleep;

And their orbs grew strangely dreary,
Clouded, even as they would weep.

But they wept not, but they changed not,
Never moved, and never closed;
Troubled still, and still they ranged not –
Wandered not, nor yet reposed!

So I knew that he was dying –
Stooped, and raised his languid head;
Felt no breath, and heard no sighing,
So I knew that he was dead.

6. Song

The linnet in the rocky dells,
The moor- lark in the air,
The bee among the heather bells,
That hide my lady fair:

The wild deer browse above her breast;
The wild birds raise their brood;
And they, her smiles of love caressed,
Have left her solitude!

I ween, that when the grave's dark wall
Did first her form retain;
They thought their hearts could ne'er recall
The light of joy again.

They thought the tide of grief would flow
Unchecked through future years;
But where is all their anguish now,
And where are all their tears?

Well, let them fight for honour's breath,
Or pleasure's shade pursue –
The dweller in the land of death
Is changed and careless too.

And, if their eyes should watch and weep
Till sorrow's source were dry,
She would not, in her tranquil sleep,
Return a single sigh!

Blow, west- wind, by the lonely mound,
And murmur, summer- streams –
There is no need of other sound
To soothe my lady's dreams.

7. Anticipation

How beautiful the earth is still,
To thee – how full of happiness!
How little fraught with real ill,
Or unreal phantoms of distress!
How spring can bring thee glory, yet,
And summer win thee to forget
December's sullen time!
Why dost thou hold the treasure fast,
Of youth's delight, when youth is past,
And thou art near thy prime?

When those who were thy own compeers,
Equals in fortune and in years,
Have seen their morning melt in tears,
To clouded, smileless day;
Blest, had they died untried and young,
Before their hearts went wandering wrong,
Poor slaves, subdued by passions strong,
A weak and helpless prey!

'Because, I hoped while they enjoyed,
And, by fulfilment, hope destroyed;
As children hope, with trustful breast,
I waited bliss – and cherished rest.

A thoughtful spirit taught me, soon,
That we must long till life be done;
That every phase of earthly joy
Must always fade, and always cloy:
‘This I foresaw – and would not chase
 The fleeting treacheries;
But, with firm foot and tranquil face,
Held backward from that tempting race,
Gazed o’er the sands the waves efface,
 To the enduring seas –
There cast my anchor of desire
Deep in unknown eternity;
Nor ever let my spirit tire,
With looking for what is to be!

‘It is hope’s spell that glorifies,
Like youth, to my maturer eyes,
All Nature’s million mysteries,
 The fearful and the fair –
Hope soothes me in the griefs I know;
She lulls my pain for others’ woe,
And makes me strong to undergo
 What I am born to bear.

‘Glad comforter! will I not brave,
Unawed, the darkness of the grave?
Nay, smile to hear Death’s billows rave –
 Sustained, my guide, by thee?

The more unjust seems present fate,
The more my spirit swells elate,
Strong, in thy strength, to anticipate
Rewarding destiny!’

8. The Prisoner (A Fragment)

In the dungeon- crypts, idly did I stray,
Reckless of the lives wasting there away;
‘Draw the ponderous bars! open, Warder stern!’
He dared not say me nay – the hinges harshly turn.

‘Our guests are darkly lodged,’ I whisper’d, gazing through The vault, whose grated eye showed heaven more grey than blue;

(This was when glad spring laughed in awaking pride;)
‘Aye, darkly lodged enough!’ returned my sullen guide.

Then, God forgive my youth; forgive my careless tongue;
I scoffed, as chill chains on the damp flag- stones rung:
‘Confined in triple walls, art thou so much to fear,
That we must bind thee down and clench thy fetters here?’

The captive raised her face, it was as soft and mild
As sculptured marble saint, or slumbering unwean’d child;
It was so soft and mild, it was so sweet and fair,
Pain could not trace a line, nor grief a shadow there!

The captive raised her hand and pressed it to her brow;
‘I have been struck,’ she said, ‘and I am suffering now;
Yet these are little worth, your bolts and irons strong,
And, were they forged in steel, they could not hold me long.’

Hoarse laughed the jailer grim: 'Shall I be won to hear;
Dost think, fond, dreaming wretch, that I shall grant thy prayer?

Or, better still, wilt melt my master's heart with groans?
Ah! sooner might the sun thaw down these granite stones.

'My master's voice is low, his aspect bland and kind,
But hard as hardest flint, the soul that lurks behind;
And I am rough and rude, yet not more rough to see
Than is the hidden ghost that has its home in me.'

About her lips there played a smile of almost scorn,
'My friend,' she gently said, 'you have not heard me mourn;
When you my kindred's lives, my lost life, can restore,
Then may I weep and sue, – but never, friend, before!

'Still, let my tyrants know, I am not doomed to wear
Year after year in gloom, and desolate despair;
A messenger of Hope, comes every night to me,
And offers for short life, eternal liberty.

'He comes with western winds, with evening's wandering airs,
With that clear dusk of heaven that brings the thickest stars.
Winds take a pensive tone, and stars a tender fire,
And visions rise, and change, that kill me with desire.

'Desire for nothing known in my maturer years,
When Joy grew mad with awe, at counting future tears.

When, if my spirit's sky was full of flashes warm,
I knew not whence they came, from sun, or thunder storm.

'But, first, a hush of peace – a soundless calm descends;
The struggle of distress, and fierce impatience ends.
Mute music soothes my breast, unuttered harmony,
That I could never dream, till Earth was lost to me.

'Then dawns the Invisible; the Unseen its truth reveals;
My outward sense is gone, my inward essence feels:
Its wings are almost free – its home, its harbour found,
Measuring the gulf, it stoops, and dares the final bound.

'Oh, dreadful is the check – intense the agony –
When the ear begins to hear, and the eye begins to see;
When the pulse begins to throb, the brain to think again,
The soul to feel the flesh, and the flesh to feel the chain.

'Yet I would lose no sting, would wish no torture less,
The more that anguish racks, the earlier it will bless;
And robed in fires of hell, or bright with heavenly shine,
If it but herald death, the vision is divine!'

She ceased to speak, and we, unanswering, turned to go –
We had no further power to work the captive woe:
Her cheek, her gleaming eye, declared that man had given
A sentence, unapproved, and overruled by Heaven.

9. Hope

Hope was but a timid friend;
 She sat without the grated den,
Watching how my fate would tend,
 Even as selfish- hearted men.

She was cruel in her fear;
 Through the bars, one dreary day,
I looked out to see her there,
 And she turned her face away!

Like a false guard, false watch keeping,
 Still in strife, she whispered peace;
She would sing while I was weeping;
 If I listened, she would cease.

False she was, and unrelenting;
 When my last joys strewed the ground,
Even Sorrow saw, repenting,
 Those sad relics scattered round;

Hope, whose whisper would have given
 Balm to all my frenzied pain,
Stretched her wings, and soared to heaven,
 Went, and ne'er returned again!

10. A Day Dream

On a sunny brae, alone I lay
 One summer afternoon;
It was the marriage- time of May
 With her young lover, June.

From her mother's heart, seemed loath to part
 That queen of bridal charms,
But her father smiled on the fairest child
 He ever held in his arms.

The trees did wave their plummy crests,
 The glad birds carolled clear;
And I, of all the wedding guests,
 Was only sullen there!

There was not one, but wished to shun
 My aspect void of cheer;
The very grey rocks, looking on,
 Asked, 'What do you here?'

And I could utter no reply;
 In sooth, I did not know
Why I had brought a clouded eye
 To greet the general glow.

So, resting on a heathy bank,
 I took my heart to me;
And we together sadly sank
 Into a reverie.

We thought, 'When winter comes again,
 Where will these bright things be?
All vanished, like a vision vain,
 An unreal mockery!

'The birds that now so blithely sing,
 Through deserts, frozen dry,
Poor spectres of the perished spring,
 In famished troops, will fly.

'And why should we be glad at all?
 The leaf is hardly green,
Before a token of its fall
 Is on the surface seen!'

Now, whether it were really so,
 I never could be sure;
But as in fit of peevish woe,
 I stretched me on the moor,

A thousand thousand gleaming fires
 Seemed kindling in the air;

A thousand thousand silvery lyres
Resounded far and near:

Methought, the very breath I breathed
Was full of sparks divine,
And all my heather-couch was wreathed
By that celestial shine!

And, while the wide earth echoing rung
To their strange minstrelsy,
The little glittering spirits sung,
Or seemed to sing, to me.

‘O mortal! mortal! let them die;
Let time and tears destroy,
That we may overflow the sky
With universal joy!

‘Let grief distract the sufferer’s breast,
And night obscure his way;
They hasten him to endless rest,
And everlasting day.

‘To thee the world is like a tomb,
A desert’s naked shore;
To us, in unimagined bloom,
It brightens more and more!

‘And could we lift the veil, and give
 One brief glimpse to thine eye,
Thou wouldst rejoice for those that live,
 Because they live to die.’

The music ceased; the noonday dream,
 Like dream of night, withdrew;
But Fancy, still, will sometimes deem
 Her fond creation true.

11. To Imagination

When weary with the long day's care,
 And earthly change from pain to pain,
And lost and ready to despair,
 Thy kind voice calls me back again:
Oh, my true friend! I am not lone,
While thou canst speak with such a tone!

So hopeless is the world without;
 The world within I doubly prize;
Thy world, where guile, and hate, and doubt,
 And cold suspicion never rise;
Where thou, and I, and Liberty,
Have undisputed sovereignty.

What matters it, that, all around,
 Danger, and guilt, and darkness lie,
If but within our bosom's bound
 We hold a bright, untroubled sky,
Warm with ten thousand mingled rays
Of suns that know no winter days?

Reason, indeed, may oft complain
 For Nature's sad reality,
And tell the suffering heart how vain

Its cherished dreams must always be;
And Truth may rudely trample down
The flowers of Fancy, newly- blown:

But, thou art ever there, to bring
The hovering vision back, and breathe
New glories o'er the blighted spring,
And call a lovelier Life from Death,
And whisper, with a voice divine,
Of real worlds, as bright as thine.

I trust not to thy phantom bliss,
Yet, still, in evening's quiet hour,
With never- failing thankfulness,
I welcome thee, Benignant Power;
Sure solacer of human cares,
And sweeter hope, when hope despairs!

12. How Clear She Shines

How clear she shines! How quietly
 I lie beneath her guardian light;
While heaven and earth are whispering me,
 ‘Tomorrow, wake, but, dream tonight.’
Yes, Fancy, come, my Fairy love!
 These throbbing temples softly kiss;
And bend my lonely couch above
 And bring me rest, and bring me bliss.

The world is going; dark world, adieu!
 Grim world, conceal thee till the day;
The heart, thou canst not all subdue,
 Must still resist, if thou delay!

Thy love I will not, will not share;
 Thy hatred only wakes a smile;
Thy griefs may wound – thy wrongs may tear,
 But, oh, thy lies shall ne’er beguile!
While gazing on the stars that glow
 Above me, in that stormless sea,
I long to hope that all the woe
 Creation knows, is held in thee!

And this shall be my dream tonight;

I'll think the heaven of glorious spheres
Is rolling on its course of light

In endless bliss, through endless years;
I'll think, there's not one world above,
Far as these straining eyes can see,
Where wisdom ever laughed at Love,
Or Virtue crouched to Infamy;

Where, writhing 'neath the strokes of Fate,
The mangled wretch was forced to smile;
To match his patience 'gainst her hate,
His heart rebellious all the while.
Where Pleasure still will lead to wrong,
And helpless Reason warn in vain;
And Truth is weak, and Treachery strong;
And Joy the surest path to Pain;
And Peace, the lethargy of Grief;
And Hope, a phantom of the soul;
And Life, a labour, void and brief;
And Death, the despot of the whole!

13. Sympathy

There should be no despair for you
 While nightly stars are burning;
While evening pours its silent dew
 And sunshine gilds the morning.
There should be no despair – though tears
 May flow down like a river:
Are not the best beloved of years
 Around your heart for ever?

They weep, you weep, it must be so;
 Winds sigh as you are sighing,
And Winter sheds his grief in snow
 Where Autumn's leaves are lying:
Yet, these revive, and from their fate
 Your fate cannot be parted:
Then, journey on, if not elate,
 Still, never broken- hearted!

14. Plead for Me

Oh, thy bright eyes must answer now,
When Reason, with a scornful brow,
Is mocking at my overthrow!
Oh, thy sweet tongue must plead for me
And tell, why I have chosen thee!

Stern Reason is to judgment come,
Arrayed in all her forms of gloom:
Wilt thou, my advocate, be dumb?
No, radiant angel, speak and say,
Why I did cast the world away.

Why I have persevered to shun
The common paths that others run,
And on a strange road journeyed on,
Heedless, alike, of wealth and power –
Of glory's wreath and pleasure's flower.

These, once, indeed, seemed Beings Divine;
And they, perchance, heard vows of mine,
And saw my offerings on their shrine;
But, careless gifts are seldom prized,
And mine were worthily despised.

So, with a ready heart I swore
To seek their altar- stone no more;
And gave my spirit to adore
Thee, ever- present, phantom thing;
My slave, my comrade, and my king,

A slave, because I rule thee still;
Incline thee to my changeful will,
And make thy influence good or ill:
A comrade, for by day and night
Thou art my intimate delight, –

My darling pain that wounds and sears
And wrings a blessing out from tears
By deadening me to earthly cares;
And yet, a king, though Prudence well
Have taught thy subject to rebel.

And am I wrong to worship, where Faith cannot doubt, nor hope despair,
Since my own soul can grant my prayer?
Speak, God of visions, plead for me,
And tell why I have chosen thee!

15. Self- Interrogation

'The evening passes fast away,
 'Tis almost time to rest;
What thoughts has left the vanished day,
 What feelings, in thy breast?'

'The vanished day? It leaves a sense
 Of labour hardly done;
Of little, gained with vast expense, –
 A sense of grief alone!

'Time stands before the door of Death,
 Upbraiding bitterly;
And Conscience, with exhaustless breath,
 Pours black reproach on me:

'And though I've said that Conscience lies,
 And Time should Fate condemn;
Still, sad Repentance clouds my eyes,
 And makes me yield to them!'

'Then art thou glad to seek repose?
 Art glad to leave the sea,
And anchor all thy weary woes
 In calm Eternity?

‘Nothing regrets to see thee go –
Not one voice sobs “farewell”,
And where thy heart has suffered so,
Canst thou desire to dwell?’

‘Alas! The countless links are strong
That bind us to our clay;
The loving spirit lingers long,
And would not pass away!

‘And rest is sweet, when laurelled fame
Will crown the soldier’s crest;
But, a brave heart, with a tarnished name,
Would rather fight than rest.’

‘Well, thou hast fought for many a year,
Hast fought thy whole life through,
Hast humbled Falsehood, trampled Fear;
What is there left to do?’

“Tis true, this arm has hotly striven,
Has dared what few would dare;
Much have I done, and freely given,
But little learnt to bear!’

‘Look on the grave, where thou must sleep,
Thy last, and strongest foe;

It is endurance not to weep,
If that repose seem woe.

'The long war closing in defeat,
Defeat serenely borne,
Thy midnight rest may still be sweet,
And break in glorious morn!'

16. Death

Death! that struck when I was most confiding
In my certain faith of joy to be –
Strike again, Time's withered branch dividing
From the fresh root of Eternity!

Leaves, upon Time's branch, were growing brightly,
Full of sap, and full of silver dew;
Birds beneath its shelter gathered nightly;
Daily round its flowers the wild bees flew.

Sorrow passed, and plucked the golden blossom;
Guilt stripped off the foliage in its pride;
But, within its parent's kindly bosom,
Flowed for ever Life's restoring tide.

Little mourned I for the parted gladness,
For the vacant nest and silent song –
Hope was there, and laughed me out of sadness;
Whispering, 'Winter will not linger long!'

And, behold! with tenfold increase blessing,
Spring adorned the beauty-burdened spray;
Wind and rain and fervent heat, caressing,
Lavished glory on that second May!

High it rose – no winged grief could sweep it;
Sin was scared to distance with its shine;
Love, and its own life, had power to keep it
From all wrong – from every blight but thine!

Cruel Death! The young leaves droop and languish;
Evening's gentle air may still restore –
No! the morning sunshine mocks my anguish –
Time, for me, must never blossom more!

Strike it down, that other boughs may flourish
Where that perished sapling used to be;
Thus, at least, its mouldering corpse will nourish
That from which it sprung – Eternity.

17. Stanzas to —

Well, some may hate, and some may scorn,
And some may quite forget thy name;
But my sad heart must ever mourn
Thy ruined hopes, thy blighted fame!
'Twas thus I thought, an hour ago,
Even weeping o'er that wretch's woe;
One word turned back my gushing tears,
And lit my altered eye with sneers.
Then 'Bless the friendly dust,' I said,
'That hides thy unlamented head!
Vain as thou wert, and weak as vain,
The slave of Falsehood, Pride, and Pain, —
My heart has nought akin to thine;
Thy soul is powerless over mine.'

But these were thoughts that vanished too;
Unwise, unholy, and untrue:
Do I despise the timid deer,
Because his limbs are fleet with fear?
Or, would I mock the wolf's death- howl,
Because his form is gaunt and foul?
Or, hear with joy the leveret's cry,
Because it cannot bravely die?
No! Then above his memory

Let Pity's heart as tender be;
Say, 'Earth, lie lightly on that breast
And, kind Heaven, grant that spirit rest!'

18. Honour's Martyr

The moon is full this winter night;
The stars are clear, though few;
And every window glistens bright,
With leaves of frozen dew.

The sweet moon through your lattice gleams
And lights your room like day;
And there you pass, in happy dreams,
The peaceful hours away!

While I, with effort hardly quelling
The anguish in my breast,
Wander about the silent dwelling,
And cannot think of rest.

The old clock in the gloomy hall
Ticks on, from hour to hour;
And every time its measured call
Seems lingering slow and slower:

And oh, how slow that keen- eyed star
Has tracked the chilly grey!
What, watching yet! how very far
The morning lies away!

Without your chamber door I stand;
Love, are you slumbering still?
My cold heart, underneath my hand,
Has almost ceased to thrill.

Bleak, bleak the east wind sobs and sighs,
And drowns the turret bell,
Whose sad note, undistinguished, dies
Unheard, like my farewell!

Tomorrow, Scorn will blight my name,
And Hate will trample me,
Will load me with a coward's shame –
A traitor's perjury.

False friends will launch their covert sneers;
True friends will wish me dead;
And I shall cause the bitterest tears
That you have ever shed.

The dark deeds of my outlawed race
Will then like virtues shine;
And men will pardon their disgrace,
Beside the guilt of mine.

For, who forgives the accursed crime
Of dastard treachery?

Rebellion, in its chosen time,
May Freedom's champion be;

Revenge may stain a righteous sword,
It may be just to slay;
But, traitor, traitor, – from that word
All true breasts shrink away!

Oh, I would give my heart to death,
To keep my honour fair;
Yet, I'll not give my inward faith
My honour's name to spare!

Not even to keep your priceless love,
Dare I, Beloved, deceive;
This treason should the future prove,
Then, only then, believe!

I know the path I ought to go;
I follow fearlessly,
Inquiring not what deeper woe
Stern duty stores for me.

So foes pursue, and cold allies
Mistrust me, every one:
Let me be false in others' eyes,
If faithful in my own.

19. Stanzas

I'll not weep that thou art going to leave me,
 There's nothing lovely here;
And doubly will the dark world grieve me,
 While thy heart suffers there.

I'll not weep, because the summer's glory
 Must always end in gloom;
And, follow out the happiest story –
 It closes with a tomb!

And I am weary of the anguish
 Increasing winters bear;
Weary to watch the spirit languish
 Through years of dead despair.

So, if a tear, when thou art dying,
 Should haply fall from me,
It is but that my soul is sighing,
 To go and rest with thee.

20. My Comforter

Well hast thou spoken, and yet, not taught
 A feeling strange or new;
Thou hast but roused a latent thought,
A cloud- closed beam of sunshine, brought
 To gleam in open view.

Deep down, concealed within my soul,
 That light lies hid from men;
Yet, glows unquenched – though shadows roll,
Its gentle ray cannot control,
 About the sullen den.

Was I not vexed, in these gloomy ways
 To walk alone so long?
Around me, wretches uttering praise,
Or howling o'er their hopeless days,
 And each with Frenzy's tongue; –

A brotherhood of misery,
 Their smiles as sad as sighs;
Whose madness daily maddened me,
Distorting into agony
 The bliss before my eyes!

So stood I, in Heaven's glorious sun,
And in the glare of Hell;
My spirit drank a mingled tone,
Of seraph's song, and demon's moan;
What my soul bore, my soul alone
Within itself may tell!

Like a soft air, above a sea,
Tossed by the tempest's stir;
A thaw- wind, melting quietly
The snow- drift, on some wintry lea;
No: what sweet thing resembles thee,
My thoughtful Comforter?

And yet a little longer speak,
Calm this resentful mood;
And while the savage heart grows meek,
For other token do not seek,
But let the tear upon my cheek
Evince my gratitude!

21. The Old Stoic

Riches I hold in light esteem;
And Love I laugh to scorn;
And lust of fame was but a dream
That vanished with the morn:

And if I pray, the only prayer
That moves my lips for me
Is, 'Leave the heart that now I bear,
And give me liberty!'

Yes, as my swift days near their goal,
'Tis all that I implore;
In life and death, a chainless soul,
With courage to endure.

22.

Woods you need not frown on me
Spectral trees that so dolefully
Shake your heads in the dreary sky
You need not mock so bitterly

23.

The blue bell is the sweetest flower
That waves in summer air
Its blossoms have the mightiest power
To soothe my spirit's care

There is a spell in purple heath
Too wildly, sadly drear
The violet has a fragrant breath
But fragrance will not cheer

The trees are bare, the sun is cold
And seldom, seldom seen –
The heavens have lost their zone of gold
The earth its robe of green

And ice upon the glancing stream
Has cast its sombre shade
And distant hills and valleys seem
In frozen mist arrayed –

The blue bell cannot charm me now
The heath has lost its bloom
The violets in the glen below
They yield no sweet perfume

But though I mourn the heather- bell
'Tis better far, away
I know how fast my tears would swell
To see it smile today

And that wood flower that hides so shy
Beneath the mossy stone
Its balmy scent and dewy eye
'Tis not for them I moan

It is the slight and stately stem
The blossom's silvery blue
The buds hid like a sapphire gem
In sheaths of emerald hue

'Tis these that breathe upon my heart
A calm and softening spell
That if it makes the tear- drop start
Has power to soothe as well

For these I weep, so long divided
Through winter's dreary day
In longing weep – but most when guided
On withered banks to stray

If chilly then the light should fall
Adown the dreary sky

And gild the dank and darkened wall
With transient brilliancy

How do I yearn, how do I pine
For the time of flowers to come
And turn me from that fading shine
To mourn the fields of home –

24. The Night- Wind

In summer's mellow midnight
A cloudless moon shone through
Our open parlour window
And rosetrees wet with dew

I sat in silent musing –
The soft wind waved my hair
It told me Heaven was glorious
And sleeping Earth was fair –

I needed not its breathing
To bring such thoughts to me
But still it whispered lowly
'How dark the woods will be! –

'The thick leaves in my murmur
Are rustling like a dream,
And all their myriad voices
Instinct with spirit seem'

I said, 'Go gentle singer,
Thy wooing voice is kind
But do not think its music
Has power to reach my mind –

‘Play with the scented flower,
The young tree’s supple bough –
And leave my human feelings
In their own course to flow’

The Wanderer would not leave me
Its kiss grew warmer still –
‘O come,’ it sighed so sweetly
‘I’ll win thee ’gainst thy will –

‘Have we not been from childhood friends?
Have I not loved thee long?
As long as thou hast loved the night
Whose silence wakes my song?

‘And when thy heart is laid at rest
Beneath the church- yard stone
I shall have time enough to mourn
And thou to be alone’ –

25.

The night is darkening round me
The wild winds coldly blow
But a tyrant spell has bound me
And I cannot cannot go

The giant trees are bending
Their bare boughs weighed with snow
And the storm is fast descending
And yet I cannot go

Clouds beyond clouds above me
Wastes beyond wastes below
But nothing drear can move me
I will not cannot go

I'll come when thou art saddest
Laid alone in the darkened room
When the mad day's mirth has vanished
And the smile of joy is banished
From evening's chilly gloom

I'll come when the heart's [real] feeling
Has entire unbiased sway

And my influence o'er thee stealing
Grief deepening joy congealing
Shall bear thy soul away

Listen 'tis just the hour
The awful time for thee
Dost thou not feel upon thy soul
A flood of strange sensations roll
Forerunners of a sterner power
Heralds of me

I would have touched the heavenly key
That spoke alike of bliss and thee
I would have woke the entrancing song
But its words died upon my tongue
And then I knew that hallowed strain
Could never speak of joy again
And then I felt

26.

Shall Earth no more inspire thee,
Thou lonely dreamer now?
Since passion may not fire thee
Shall Nature cease to bow?

Thy mind is ever moving
In regions dark to thee;
Recall its useless roving –
Come back and dwell with me –

I know my mountain breezes
Enchant and soothe thee still –
I know my sunshine pleases
Despite thy wayward will –

When day with evening blending
Sinks from the summer sky,
I've seen thy spirit bending
In fond idolatry –

I've watched thee every hour –
I know my mighty sway –
I know my magic power
To drive thy griefs away –

Few hearts to mortals given
On earth so wildly pine
Yet none would ask a Heaven
More like this Earth than thine –

Then let my winds caress thee –
Thy comrade let me be –
Since nought beside can bless thee
Return and dwell with me –

27.

No coward soul is mine
No trembler in the world's storm- troubled sphere
I see Heaven's glories shine
And Faith shines equal arming me from Fear

O God within my breast
Almighty ever- present Deity
Life, that in me hast rest
As I Undying Life, have power in thee

Vain are the thousand creeds
That move men's hearts, unutterably vain,
Worthless as withered weeds
Or idlest froth amid the boundless main

To waken doubt in one
Holding so fast by thy infinity
So surely anchored on
The steadfast rock of Immortality

With wide- embracing love
Thy spirit animates eternal years
Pervades and broods above,
Changes, sustains, dissolves, creates and rears

Though Earth and moon were gone
And suns and universes ceased to be
And thou wert left alone
Every Existence would exist in thee

There is not room for Death
Nor atom that his might could render void
Since thou art Being and Breath
And what thou art may never be destroyed

28.

All hushed and still within the house
Without – all wind and driving rain
But something whispers to my mind
Through rain and [through the] wailing wind
 – Never again
Never again? Why not again?
Memory has power as real as thine

29.

Often rebuked, yet always back returning
 To those first feelings that were born with me,
And leaving busy chase of wealth and learning
 For idle dreams of things which cannot be:

Today, I will seek not the shadowy region;
 Its unsustaining vastness waxes drear;
And visions rising, legion after legion,
 Bring the unreal world too strangely near.

I'll walk, but not in old heroic traces,
 And not in paths of high morality,
And not among the half- distinguished faces,
 The clouded forms of long- past history.

I'll walk where my own nature would be leading:
 It vexes me to choose another guide:
Where the grey flocks in ferny glens are feeding;
 Where the wild wind blows on the mountain side.

What have those lonely mountains worth revealing?
 More glory and more grief than I can tell:
The earth that wakes one human heart to feeling
 Can centre both the worlds of Heaven and Hell.

30.

Why ask to know what date what clime
There dwelt our own humanity
Power- worshippers from earliest time
Foot- kissers of triumphant crime
Crushers of helpless misery
Crushing down Justice honouring Wrong
If that be feeble this be strong

Shedders of blood shedders of tears
Self- cursers avid of distress
Yet Mocking heaven with senseless prayers
For mercy on the merciless

It was the autumn of the year
When grain grows yellow in the ear
Day after day from noon to noon,
That August's sun blazed bright as June

But we with unregarding eyes
Saw panting earth and glowing skies
No hand the reaper's sickle held
Nor bound the ripe sheaves in the field

Our corn was garnered months before,

Threshed out and kneaded- up with gore
Ground when the ears were milky sweet
With furious toil of hoofs and feet
I doubly cursed on foreign sod
Fought neither for my home nor God

在柳园 [1] 旁

在柳园旁，我与我的爱人相遇；
她雪白的小脚，走过柳园。
她要我爱得放松，像绿叶长在树上；
但我，年轻又无知，没能认同。

在河边草地，我和我的爱人站着；
她雪白的手，放在我微倾的肩上。
她要我爱得放松，像青草长在堤岸上；
但我年轻又无知，而现在满是泪水。

[1] 柳园（Salley Gardens），位于爱尔兰斯莱果郡一条小河边。“salley”源自爱尔兰语“saileach”，有“柳树”的意思。此处是年轻恋人约会的地方。（说明：本书脚注均为译者注。）

库丘林 [1] 与大海的战斗

有人从落日中缓缓而来，
走到暗影里染着衣物的爱玛前，
说：“我是那猪倌，你曾让我
看守树林和潮水间的路，
但现在我再也不需看守了。”

爱玛将织布扔在地上，
举起涂满染料的双臂，
张开嘴，突然大喊一声。

猪倌凝视她的脸说：
“没有一个活人，没有一个在死者间，
赢得他的战车带来的黄金。”

“但如果你的主人得胜回家，
为什么你会畏缩，浑身颤抖？”

随后他晃了晃身子，跌坐在
堆着织布的地面上，哭喊着说：
“和他一起的是嗓音甜美像鸟儿的人。”

“你竟敢当着我的面。”于是
她挥着染色的手揍他，踉跄地
走到她儿子放牛的地方，

用愤怒的声音哭叫：“不能
虚度时日啊，一个普通的放牧人。”

“母亲，这句话我已等了很久，
但现在是因为什么？”

“有个男人得死； 你有普天下最强健的臂膀。”

“无论是在日光还是星辰下， 我的父亲都站立在他的战车间。”

“但你必须成长为更高大的男人。”

“但在星光和太阳下的某个地方， 我父亲站立着。”

“战争已让他衰老、疲惫，
在脚下，马背上，或在战车里。”

“我只是在问通往我的旅程的路在哪儿， 因为让你受苦的会让你明智。”

“红枝 ^[2] 的一大群人驻扎
在树林边和大海奔马般的潮水间，
去那儿吧，在林边点燃营火；
但你的名字和血统只能告诉
那个用剑锋逼迫你的人，然后等着直到他们

找到被同样的誓言约束的宴客之人。”

库丘林就在那些宴客的人里，
他年轻的爱人跪着偎依在旁，
凝视他眼中悲哀的惊奇，
仿佛那是古老天空上的春色，
思虑着他荣耀的时日；
周围的琴弦诉说着对他的赞美，
库丘林，众王里的红枝之王，
用手指抚弄着黄铜琴弦。

最后库丘林说：“有人点燃了
夜间的篝火，在树荫间。
我时常听见他来回唱歌，
我时常听见他甜美的弦音。
去看看他是谁。”

有人去了又回来。
“他让我告诉所有人，他只在剑尖
说出他的名字，等到我们找到
被这同样的誓言约束的宴客之人。”

库丘林喊道：“我是那些主人里
唯一从童年起就受如此约束的人。”

在树荫间短暂战斗后，
他对年轻人说：“是因为没有少女
爱你，没有雪白的手臂缠绕你，

或是你渴求那昏暗的长眠之地，
才让你来，敢于当面与我决斗吗？”

“人的命运在上帝的隐匿之所。”

“你长得有点像我曾爱过的 一个女人。”

战斗再次加剧，
但此刻战争的怒火在庫丘林心中觉醒，
借着这怒火，新剑锋的防卫被老的攻破了，
并刺穿了他。

“在你断气前说吧。”

“庫丘林一世，强势的庫丘林的儿子。”
“我再也不能，将你从痛苦中解脱了。”

当白日载着它的重负走向黄昏，
庫丘林静止着，头垂向双膝；
康纳尔王 [3] 派那嗓音甜美的少女过来，
而她，为了让他振作，爱抚他的灰发；
她的手臂没用，她柔软雪白的胸脯没用。
康纳尔王，所有人中最敏锐的人，
让他的德鲁伊 [4] 十个人一排将他围住，
这样说：“庫丘林将在那儿沉思
三日多，在那可怕的寂静里，
然后起身，在狂乱中将我们残杀殆尽。
将魔法的幻觉吟诵进他的耳中，

这样他会与大海奔马般的潮水战斗。”

德鲁伊开始施行他们的秘术，

吟诵了三日的圣歌。

库丘林动了，

凝视大海的奔马，听见

战车和对他名字的呼喊；

与无懈可击的潮水战斗。

[1] 库丘林（Cuchulain），古爱尔兰传说中的英雄。

[2] 红枝（The Red Branch），阿尔斯特国王的侍卫队，库丘林是其重要成员之一。

[3] 康纳尔王（Conchubar），古爱尔兰传说中阿尔斯特国王。

[4] 德鲁伊（Druid），原意为熟悉橡树的人，是凯尔特人的高级祭司、法师、预言者。

当你老了

当你老了，头发灰白，满是睡意，
在炉火旁打盹，请取下这本书，
慢慢读着，怀想你的双眼
曾有过的神情柔和，以及阴影深沉；

多少人爱你绚烂优雅的时刻，
爱你的美丽，带着假意或真心，
但有一人爱你朝圣者的灵魂，
爱你容颜变换的忧伤。

垂下头，在闪光的炉栅旁，
怀着一丝悲伤，轻声诉说
爱如何消逝，如何步入头顶的群山
将他的脸庞掩藏在星辰之间。

漫游者安格斯之歌

我外出走到榛树林，
因有一团火在脑中。
我砍下榛树枝削成杆，
用线钩来一枚浆果；
当白蛾扇动翅膀，
当白蛾似的星辰闪耀而出，
我将浆果扔进溪水，
钓了条银色的小鳟鱼。

我把鱼放在地上，
又去把火吹着了，
但有某物在地上飒飒作响，
有人在以我的名字呼唤我；
它变成透着微光的女孩，
头上戴着苹果花环，
她以我的名字呼唤我，然后
跑开，消失在渐亮的空气里。

我老了，尽管漫游过
峡谷与山丘，
但我会找到她的踪迹，
亲吻她的唇，握住她的手；
沿着斑斓的草地漫步，
去采摘，直到时间终结，

那月亮的银苹果，
那太阳的金苹果。

他想要天国的衣裳

如果我有天国的绣衣，
织着金色和银色的光，
这蓝色、灰色和黑色的衣服
属于夜、白昼和黄昏，
我会将这衣裳铺展在你脚下。
但我，贫穷，只拥有我的梦；
我把我的梦铺展在你脚下；
要轻柔地踩，因为你踩在我的梦上。

听人劝慰的愚蠢

昨日有位良善的人说：

“你挚爱的人发间已有了银丝，
小小的阴影已爬上她的双眼，
时间只能让人更容易明智，
尽管现在似乎不可能，因此
你所需要的，就是耐心。”

我的心喊道：“不，
我没有得到一丝安慰，一粒也没有，
时间只会使她再次美丽，
因她那伟大的高贵，
那身上跳动的火，在她移动时
只会燃烧得更为明净。哦，她不会那样，
当整个狂野的夏日都在她的眼中。”

哦，心！哦，心！只要她一回头， 你就明白听人劝慰的愚蠢。

亚当的诅咒

有一年夏末，我们一起坐着，
有一个美丽文雅的女人，你的密友
还有你和我，在谈论诗歌。

我说：“一行诗也许要花几小时；
但它如果不似灵感迸发的神思，
我们是否打磨都没有用。

擦洗厨房地面，或像老乞丐
去采石，无论在何种天气；
要清晰地发出甜美的声音，
远要比这些困难，然而
我们却被一帮人嘈杂地称为懒人，
那些银行家、校长和教士
殉道者所说的俗世。”

随后

那美丽文雅的女人，为她
很多人因发现她的声音甜美
低沉而悲叹不已，
回答说：“生为女人要知道——
尽管他们在学校里不说—— 变得美丽必须劳作。”

我说：“无疑，自亚当堕落以来，
所有美好的事物都要付出辛劳。

恋人们曾以为爱情应该
大量混杂着高度的殷勤，
他们叹息，带着学者的神色
引用美丽古书里的先例；
而现在看来正是一件闲散的事。”

说到爱，我们都变得沉静；
我们看着白日将尽时的余烬，
在天空颤动着的蓝绿色中，
月亮残损，像被时间之水
冲洗的贝壳，随着星辰
反复起落，在年岁间破碎。

我有个想法，只说给你听：
你是美丽的，而我致力于
以古老高贵的方式爱你；
那看起来很幸福，但我们
已深感倦怠，如那空洞的月亮。

没有第二个特洛伊

我为何要责备她让我的时日
充满痛苦，或者说她最近
教无知的人以最大的暴行，
或让小人物攻击伟人，
只要他们勇气与欲望相当？
有什么能使她平静，既然心智
因其高贵练就得如火一般纯粹，
她的美似绷紧的弓，既然她有
与时代并非协调的品质，诸如
高贵、孤独和坚定？
哦，她得做什么，让她成为这样？
还有第二个特洛伊为她焚毁吗？

对困难之事的迷恋

对困难之事的迷恋，
已榨干我血管里的汁液，收取
我内心自发的愉悦，和天然的
满足。我们的马驹苦恼，
它似乎没有神圣的血统，
不能在奥林匹斯山的云朵间跳跃，
必须在鞭子下战栗、挣扎、流汗、摇晃，
仿佛在拖拽铺路的石子。我诅咒
那些得以五十种方式排演的剧目，
在白日与每个无赖和笨蛋争斗，
剧场事务，人事安排。
我发誓黎明再次来临之前，
我将找到马厩，拔出门闩。

随时间而来的智慧

尽管枝叶繁多，根却只有一个；
穿过我青春所有说谎的日子，
我在日光下摇晃我的花与叶；
现在我可以凋零，进入真理。

在戈尔韦赛马会

那里就是赛马场，
欢乐使众人心意一致，
骑手在奔驰的马背上，
人群紧随其后：
我们，也曾有很好的宾客，
作品的聆听者和激励者；
是啊，将骑手当成同伴，
在商人和店员用怯弱的气息
呼吸这个世界之前。
唱吧：为某地的新月，
我们将认识到睡眠不是死亡，
听见整个大地变换了音调，
它的肌肉狂野，再次
大声呼喊，像这赛马场一样，
而我们找到了激励的人，
在这骑马的人群中间。

一九一三年九月

一旦苏醒，你们所需做的
仅仅是在油腻的钱箱里摸索，
将半便士加到一便士，
颤抖着，祈祷再祈祷，直到
你们已榨干骨头里的髓液；
因为人生来就是为了祈祷和储蓄：
浪漫的爱尔兰已死去、消失，
和奥利里 [\[1\]](#) 一起躺在坟墓里。

但他们是不同的种类，
他们的名字终止了你们幼稚的游戏，
他们像风，走遍世界，
但鲜有时间祈祷，
因刽子手的绳索已为他们转动，
上帝保佑，他们能攒什么钱？
浪漫的爱尔兰已死去、消失，
和奥利里一起躺在坟墓里。

为此，野天鹅展开
灰色的翅膀，在每次的潮汐之上？
所有的血为此而流？
爱德华·菲茨杰拉德为此而死？
还有罗伯特·艾米特和沃尔夫·托尼？
以及所有那些勇士的狂热？

浪漫的爱尔兰已死去、消失，
和奥利里一起躺在坟墓里。

但我们也可以将时间再次倒转，
将他们称为流亡者，当他们
受尽了孤独和伤痛，
你会呼喊“某个女人的黄发
让所有母亲的儿子发狂”：
他们对付出看得那么轻，
但就让他们这样吧，他们死去、消失，
和奥利里一起躺在坟墓里。

[1] 奥利里（O’Leary），即约翰·奥利里，爱尔兰民族主义者，在英格兰囚禁五年，流亡十五年后，1885年返回都柏林。

致一位朋友，其工作已没有意义

如今所有真相显现，
面对任何无耻的喉舌，
保持沉默，接受失败吧，
因你生就高贵，怎能
与那样的人相比？
即使谎言被证实，
他也不会感到羞愧，
更不在意邻人的眼光。
生来就要做比胜利
更困难的事，转身离去，
像大笑的琴弦
被疯狂的手指弹奏
在一堆石头之中。
保持沉默，狂喜吧，
因在所有已知的事中，
那是最困难的。

帕丁 [1]

在他的商店里，愤慨于笨拙的智慧，
我们老帕丁模糊的恶意，我盲目地
在石堆和荆棘丛中蹒跚而行，在晨光之下；
直到一只麻鹞呼叫，另一只麻鹞
在明亮的风中回应；我突然因此想到，
在寂寞的高处，所有一切都在上帝的眼中，
那里，我们声音中的混乱被遗忘，没有一个
单独的灵魂还缺乏甜美的水晶般的叫声。

[1] 帕丁（Paudeen），爱尔兰常见的名字Patrick的昵称，可泛指一般的市民大众。

陷落的王权

尽管她过去一露面，人群就会聚集，
连老人的双眼也变蒙眬，但只有这只手，
像某位最后的臣子，在吉卜赛营地
念叨着陷落的王权，记录消逝的一切。

这容貌，这被笑声炼制甜美的心，
这些，这些都留存着，但我记录消逝的一切。
人们还会聚集，但不会知道他们走过的街上
曾有一样事物走过，像朵燃烧的云。

冰冷的天穹

突然我看见令乌鸦愉悦的寒冷的天穹，
像是焚烧的冰，但不过是更多的冰，
因此，想象和心被牵引得
如此狂野，以至于种种随意的想法
消失了，只剩记忆，而那应当消失，
随青春的热血，以及很久以前受挫的爱；
我丧失所有的情感和理智去承担责任，
直到我呼喊，颤抖，来回摇晃，
被光线击穿得千疮百孔。啊！当鬼魂开始复活，
临终之床的混乱结束，它是否
被赤裸地派到街上，像书里说的，
遭受天空不公正的袭击，以示惩戒？

占星家们 [1]

现在正如我心中时时所见，
苍白的不满的人，穿着他们僵硬、印花的衣服，
在天空的深蓝里显现又消失。
他们古老的面容像被雨水击打的石头，
他们的银头盔在空中来回徘徊，
各各他 [2] 的骚乱并不让他们满意，
他们的双眼仍在凝望，希望再次找到
在兽性的土地上，那不可控的神秘。

[1] 占星家们（Magi），在诗中应该指的是东方三博士。

[2] 各各他（Calvary），耶稣被钉死在十字架上的地方。

外衣

我把我的歌制成外衣，
从头到脚，
缀满了来自古老
神话中的刺绣；
但蠢人拿走了它，
在世人眼前穿着，
仿佛是他们造的。
歌，就让他们拿去吧，
因为裸身走路，
需要更多的雄心。

库尔的野天鹅

树林有了秋日的美丽，
林地的小径干爽，
十月的黄昏下，水面
倒映着静止的天空；
在石子间漫溢的水上
是五十九只天鹅。

自我最初给它们点数，
已是第十九个秋天；
我看见，在我数完前，
它们突然飞起
散开，在大而碎的圆圈里盘旋，
用它们喧闹的翅膀。

我曾望着这些闪耀的造物，
而现在只让我心痛。
全都改变了，自我
踩着更轻盈的步态，
在这黄昏的堤岸，听见它们的翅膀
在头顶拍出钟鸣般的声响。

一对对情侣，仍不知疲倦，
它们在冰冷而友好的
溪水间游动，或攀飞进空中；

它们的心灵未曾老去；
激情或征服，无论它们漫游何方
仍然照料着它们。

而现在它们在平静的水面漂流，
神秘而美丽；
它们将在怎样的灯芯草丛中筑巢，
在怎样的湖边或池边
取悦人们的眼睛，当有一天
我醒来，发现它们已飞逝？

爱尔兰飞行员预见他的死亡

我知道我将遇见我的命运
在这上方的云朵之间；
我所对抗的，我并不憎恨，
我所守卫的，我并不爱；
我的故乡是基尔塔坦岔口，
我的乡亲是基尔塔坦的穷人，
任何结局都不会让他们失去什么，
或者，让他们比以往更幸福。
不是法律也不是职责令我战斗，
不是公众人物，也不是欢呼的民众，
而是孤独的愉悦的冲动
驱使我进入这云间的骚乱；
我权衡一切，思考所有，
未来的年岁似乎是浪费生命，
而身后的年岁也是浪费生命，
就在这生与死的平衡里。

一只野兔的锁骨

我将扬帆在水面上，
那儿众多的国王和众多
国王的女儿已去，
来到秀丽的树林和草地，
吹着笛，跳起舞，
明白最好的事情，
便是在跳舞时更换爱人，
仅用一吻换一吻。

我将在水边找到
一只野兔的锁骨，
它被海水研磨，变得透薄，
然后用锥子刺穿，凝视着
人们在教堂结婚的、那古老而悲惨的世界，
在平静的水面上方，嘲笑
所有在教堂结婚的人，
透过野兔白而薄的骨头。

对她的赞美

我愿在听到的那些赞美里，她排首位。
我在屋里四处走动，上下来回
像一个人出版了一本新书，
或一个年轻的姑娘穿上了新衣，
尽管我竭力转变话题
让对她的赞美成为最高的主题，
一个女人仍在讲述她读过的新书，
一个男人仍在半梦中困惑着，
仿佛别的名字跑进了他的脑海。
我愿在听到的那些赞美里，她排首位。
我将不再谈论书或漫长的战争，
只是在干枯的荆棘旁走着，
直到发现有个乞丐在避风，
她的名字出现在主导的谈话里。
即使衣衫褴褛，他仍会知道她的名字
并且愉快地记得，在旧时
尽管她受年轻人赞美，老年人责难，
但在穷人间，无论老少都对她称赞不已。

一九一六年复活节 [1]

白日结束时，我遇见他们
带着鲜活的面容，
从灰暗的十八世纪房子
那些柜台或办公桌走来。
我路过时，点点头
或者说些客套的闲话，
或者逗留一会儿，说些
客套的闲话，
尽管这之前，我已想到用
讽刺的故事或挖苦的话语
去取悦我的同伴，
在俱乐部的炉火旁，
确信他们和我一样
不过是生活在小丑之地：
一切都变了，完全变了：
一种可怕的美诞生了。

那个女人将白天消耗
在无知的良好意愿里，
她的夜晚用于争论，
直到声音变得尖锐。
还有什么声音比她的更甜美，
当，她年轻美丽
骑马猎兔？

这个男人办了所学校，
骑着我们的飞马 [2] ；
那是他的助手和朋友
正加入他的部队；
他可能最终赢得声名，
他的天性多么敏感，
他的思想多么大胆甜美。
另一个人，我曾认为
是个酒鬼，虚荣自负的蠢人。
他对我某个心爱的人
做过最痛心的错事，
但我将他列入歌中；
他，也放弃了他的角色，
在那偶然的喜剧中。
轮到他时，他也变了，
完全变了：
一种可怕的美诞生了。

众多的心怀着一个目的
历经夏日和冬季，似乎
中了魔法，变成石头
去扰乱活跃的溪流。
从路上而来的马匹，
骑手，在翻滚的云朵间
排列的鸟群，
它们每一分钟都在改变；
一只马蹄滑落到水边，
一匹马在水中泼溅；

一只长腿母鸡俯冲而下
对着公鸡呼叫。 它们每一分钟都在生活：
石头居于这一切的中心。

太漫长的牺牲
能将一颗心造就成石头，
哦，何时才能到头？
只有上天才能回答，我们
只能低声念着一个个名字，
像母亲叫唤他的孩子，
当睡意最终降临
在跑得狂野的四肢之上，
除了夜晚还能是什么？
不，不，这不是夜晚而是死；
这死终究是不必要的吗？
因为英格兰也许会信守承诺
为它做过和说过的一切。
我们知道他们的梦想，知道
他们梦想过然后死了，这就足够；
假如爱的过量
使他们迷惑至死又能怎样？
我在诗中写下——
麦克唐纳和麦克布莱德，
康诺利和皮尔斯，
现在，以及以后，
在任何身着绿装的地方，
一切都变了，完全变了：

一种可怕的美诞生了。

1916年9月25日

[1] 1916年4月24日，复活节的第二天，爱尔兰共和兄弟会在都柏林起义，宣告爱尔兰共和国成立。不久被英格兰镇压，包括诗中提及的麦克唐纳、麦克布莱德、康诺利、皮尔斯等十五位领导人遇害。

[2] 飞马 (winged horse),指的是希腊神话中的飞马珀伽索斯，相传珀伽索斯在赫利孔山上踏过时踩出了泉水，诗人饮之可获灵感，因此它也被视为文艺缪斯的标志。

十六个死者

哦，我们只是谈了很多，
在这十六人被射杀之前，
但谁又能谈论取舍，
什么该存在什么不该，
当那些死者还在徘徊，
搅动着沸腾的锅？

你说我们应保持国土平静，
直到德国人的征服；
但谁还在那儿争论，
既然皮尔斯已聋了瞎了？
而他们的逻辑能压倒
麦克唐纳精瘦的拇指？

你怎能梦想他们会听，
他们的一只耳朵只对
他们找到的新同伴敞开，
爱德华勋爵和沃尔夫·托尼，
或者那些骨与骨的交谈
会干预我们的取舍？

第二次降临

旋转旋转，在扩大的旋涡中，
猎鹰不再听从驯鹰者；
万物四散，中心无法维持；
唯有混乱弥散世间，
暗红的潮流奔涌，每一处
天真的典礼都被淹没；
最好的人缺乏信念，最坏的人
充满极度的狂热。
当然某种启示即将到来；
当然第二次降临即将到来。
第二次降临！这几个词刚说出口，
来自“世界之灵”^[1]的巨大图像
便扰乱了我的视线：沙漠中的某处，
一个狮身人头的形体，
凝视如太阳般空洞无情，
正缓慢地拖着腿，而在它四周
沙漠上愤怒的鸟群投下圈圈阴影。
黑暗再次落下；但我现在知道
坚实沉睡着的二十世纪
在摇晃的发源地旁被扰成了噩梦，
何种粗野的巨兽，它的时刻最终来临，
笨拙地朝着伯利恒去投生？

[1] 世界之灵（spiritus mundi），源自拉丁语spiritusmundi，是储存一切知识和经验的仓库，即所谓的大记忆。

驶向拜占庭

I

那不是老年人的国度。年轻人
在彼此的怀抱中。鸟在树上
这垂死的世代，唱着它们的歌。
鲑鱼的瀑布，鲭鱼群集的海，
鱼，兽，或家禽，整个夏日都在赞颂
这孕育、出生、死去的一切。
所有人沉溺于感官的音乐，忽略了
不朽的理性的纪念碑。

II

老人只是微不足道的事物，
一件拐杖上的破衣烂裳，除非
灵魂拍手歌唱，更响亮地歌唱
那尘世衣裳的每一处破烂，
没有一处音乐学校不研读
它自身辉煌的陈迹；
因此我扬帆远航，来到
这神圣的城市拜占庭。

III

哦，圣人们站在上帝的圣火中
像在墙上的金镶嵌画里，
从圣火中出来吧，在回旋中转动，
做我灵魂的歌唱导师。

耗尽我的心吧；它因欲望成疾，
被绑在垂死的动物身上，
它不知道它所是；请将我纳入
那永恒的技艺里。

IV

一旦脱离自然，我将永不
采用任何自然事物的形体，
而是要希腊金匠用锻金
和镀金制造的那种形态，
以让昏睡的君主清醒；
或者停留在金枝上，为
拜占庭的先生和女士们歌唱
过去、现在以及未来的事物。

1927年

内战时期的沉思（节选）

VI 我窗边的欧椋鸟巢

蜂群筑巢，在松动的墙壁
缝隙里，在那儿
母鸟带来了蛴螬和蝇虫。
我的墙松了，蜜蜂，
来欧椋鸟的空房筑巢吧。

我们关在里面，钥匙转动
在我们的确定之外；某处
有人被杀，或有房子被焚，
但没有清晰的事实去确认：
来欧椋鸟的空房筑巢吧。

石头或木头做的街垒；
内战时期的十四天；
昨夜他们沿路运送
一个浑身是血的年轻士兵：
来欧椋鸟的空房筑巢吧。

我们用幻想喂养心灵，
心因这食粮变得残忍；
相比我们的爱，我们的敌意里
有更多的实质；哦，蜜蜂，
来欧椋鸟的空房筑巢吧。

丽达与天鹅

猛然一击，巨大的双翼仍拍打着
在晃动的女孩上方，她的双腿
被黑色的蹼爱抚，她的颈背叼在他的喙里，
他用他的胸包裹住她无助的胸脯。

那些惊吓未定的手指如何
将多羽的荣耀推离她松开的双腿？
那躺在白色激流中的身体
怎能不感到他身下奇异的心跳？

腰部的一次战栗引发
城墙的坍塌、屋顶和塔楼的焚毁，
以及阿伽门农的死。

被如此捕捉，
被空中野蛮的血如此控制，
她是否从他的力量中吸取了他的知识，
在那冷漠的喙放开她之前？

1923年

在学童中间

I

我走过长长的教室询问；
戴白头巾的和善老修女作答；
孩子们要学习算术和唱歌，
学习阅读和历史，
学习剪裁缝补，以最现代的方式
规整所有事物——孩子们的双眼
带着瞬间的惊奇，凝视着 一个六十岁微笑的公众人物。

II

我梦见一个丽达似的身体，俯身
在沉没的火堆上，她讲一个故事，
有关刺耳的谴责或微小的事件
将稚气的一天变成悲剧——
说完，出于年轻人的同感，
我们两种天性混合为一个球体，
或者，改一下柏拉图的比喻，
成为同一个壳里的蛋黄和蛋清。

III

想起那一阵悲伤或愤怒，
我看着这个或那个小孩，
想知道她在那个年纪是否也这样站过——
因为即使是天鹅的女儿也能分享

每一个涉水者所传承的事物——
是否有那种颜色的脸颊或头发，
因此我的心变得狂野：
她站在我面前，像个鲜活的孩子。

IV

她现在的形象飘进我的心中——
是十五世纪的匠人将它塑造
成脸颊凹陷的模样，像啜饮了风
吞食了大量的阴影？
尽管我从不是丽达的种类，
但也曾有美丽的羽毛——那足够了，
最好是以微笑面对所有微笑，显示出
这是一个知足的老稻草人。

V

什么样年轻的母亲，膝上的身形
已被生殖之蜜背叛，
不得不睡觉、尖叫，挣扎着逃离，
如回忆或药物所决定的那样，
如果看见那身形，头上带着六十个
或更多的严冬，她会认为她的儿子
是一种补偿吗，对生他的剧痛，
或是对他前程的不确定性？

VI

柏拉图认为自然不过是泡沫，
在万物幽灵般的范式上游戏；
更为结实的亚里士多德执鞭
抽打万王之王的下体；

举世闻名的金大腿毕达哥拉斯
用手指拨弄琴弓或琴弦，
演奏一曲星辰之歌，被无心的缪斯听见；
老手杖上的旧衣裳吓坏了一只鸟。

VII

修女和母亲们都崇拜偶像，
但那些烛光所照亮的并不是
赋予母亲的空想以生命的东西，
不过是维护了大理石和青铜像——哦，诸神
那激情、虔诚或喜爱所知道的，
那所有天国的荣耀所象征的——
哦，人类事业自我生长的嘲弄者。

VIII

劳作是开花或舞蹈，在那儿
身体不会因取悦灵魂而挫伤，
美不会诞生于自身的绝望，
老眼昏花的智慧不会出自午夜的油灯。
哦，栗子树，根系粗壮的绽放者，
你是叶子、花朵还是树干？
哦，随音乐摇摆的身体，哦，明亮的眼神，
我们如何能分辨舞蹈和舞者？

最后的独白 一个女人的青春和老年（节选）

在所有睡过的人里
哪个鲜活的少年最能取悦我？
我回答说 我给了我的灵魂
而爱得痛苦。
但给予很多快乐的却是
那我以肉体相爱的少年。

从他的双臂间挣脱，我大笑，
想到他如此激情，
他以为我给了灵魂，
但那不过是肉体相触而已，
我在他怀里大笑，想着
野兽间也能给予这么多。

我给了其他女人能给的，
当她们脱掉了衣裳。
但当肉体脱落，灵魂
从赤裸走向赤裸，
会发现，他在里面找到了
无人知晓的东西。

他在他的权限内支配，
给出他的，也拿走他的；
尽管爱很痛苦，

如此紧紧地贴着身，
但没有一只白日的鸟
敢压制那快乐。

青金石雕

（致哈里·克里夫顿）

我听到那些歇斯底里的女人说，
她们已厌倦了总是很快乐的
诗人的调色板和琴弓，
因为每个人都知道或应该知道
如果没有激烈的事情发生，
飞机和飞艇将会出现，
像比利王 [\[1\]](#) 投掷炸弹，
直到将城镇夷为平地。

所有人都在表演他们的悲剧，
这是高傲的哈姆雷特，这是李尔王，
那是奥菲莉亚，那是科迪莉亚；
但他们到了最后一幕，
巨大的帷幕将会落下，
如果配得上剧中的重要角色，
他们不会中断台词而哭泣。
他们知道哈姆雷特和李尔王是快乐的；
快乐改变了所有那恐惧的。
所有人都有目标，寻找和失落；
终止；天国的光照进头脑：
悲剧行进到高潮。
尽管哈姆雷特在漫步，李尔王在愤怒，
所有的幕布立即垂落，

在一万个舞台上，
它不能增长一英寸或一盎司。

他们来了，步行，坐船，
或骑着骆驼、马、驴、骡，
古老的文明惨遭屠戮。
接着，他们和他们的智慧陷于毁灭。
不再有卡利马科斯 [\[2\]](#) 的手工艺品了，
他雕刻大理石像是在铸造青铜，
塑造看起来飘动的衣物，
仿佛有海风吹过角落，挺立着；
他那长长的灯罩，形状像是
细长棕榈树的枝干，但也只立了一天；
万物崩溃，而又重建，
而那些重建的人是快乐的。

两个中国人，第三个在他们身后，
被刻在青金石雕上，
他们头上，飞过一只长腿的鸟，
象征着长寿；
第三个人，无疑是仆人，
背着一件乐器。

石头上每一处褪色的斑点，
每一处偶然的裂缝或凹痕，
看起来像是一条河或一次雪崩，
或是仍在落雪的高耸的斜坡，
而确切无疑地，李子树或樱桃枝

美化了半途上的小屋。
那些中国人向上爬着，而我
乐于想象他们坐在那儿；
凝望着山和天空，
以及所有悲剧的场景。
其中一个要求听首悲伤的曲子；
娴熟的手指便开始弹奏。
他们的眼睛，四周布满皱纹，他们的眼睛，
他们古老的、闪烁的眼睛，是快乐的。

[1] 比利王（King Billy），即威廉三世，小名比利。

[2] 卡利马科斯（Callimachus），古希腊建筑家、雕塑家。

然后呢？

在校时，他挑选的同伴们认为
他必将成为一个名人；
他也这么想，生活异常规律，
他的第三个十年，布满艰辛；
“然后呢？”柏拉图的幽灵唱，“然后呢？”

他写的所有事情都被传阅，
过了多年，他有了
足够的钱，供他所需，
朋友们倒都是真朋友；
“然后呢？”柏拉图的幽灵唱，“然后呢？”

所有他快乐的梦想都变成现实——
一栋小小的老房子，妻子，女儿，儿子，
地上长着李子树和卷心菜，
诗人和智者被吸引在他四周；
“然后呢？”柏拉图的幽灵唱，“然后呢？”

“工作完成了，”年老时他想， “依照我孩童时的计划；
让蠢人去叫嚣吧，我未背离分毫，
事情进展得很圆满。”
但那幽灵唱得更响了：“然后呢？”

布尔本山下（节选）

VI

在光秃秃的布尔本山顶下，
叶芝躺在德拉姆克利夫墓地里。
很多年前，他的祖先
曾是附近一座教堂的牧师，
路旁还有古老的十字架。
不用大理石，不用惯用的措辞；
在附近采石场的石灰岩上
按他的要求刻下这些话：

投下冷眼，
看着生和死，
骑手，路过！

受抚慰的库丘林

这人身负六处致命伤，这人
残暴、著名，在死者间阔步而行；
双眼自枝叶间凝望，而后离去。

然后某些交头接耳的尸衣
来了又去。他靠在一棵树上
仿佛在沉思伤口和血。

一件看起来很有权威的尸衣
在那些看似鸟儿的事物中走来，
扔下一捆麻布。两三个尸衣

爬上来，因为那人静止不动；
因此那个带来麻布的人说：
“你的生活会更美好，如果你

遵守我们古老的规则，制一件尸衣。
主要是因为我们所知道的仅仅是
那些武器的咯咯响声让我们害怕。

我们穿针引线，我们所做的
必须是我们所有人一起做。”他们做好后，
这人捡起最近的麻布，开始缝制。

“现在我们得吟唱，竭尽所能唱得最好，
但首先我们得向你告知我们的角色：
被亲友杀死，或被赶出家门

在恐惧中死去的，有罪的懦夫。”
他们唱着，但不是用人类的音调或语言，
尽管所做的一切都如之前那般普通；

他们却改变了他们的歌喉，有了鸟群的歌喉。

马戏团动物的逃亡

I

我寻找一个主题，徒劳地寻找，
有六个星期左右，我每天都在找。
可能到最后，我会一无所有，
但我必须满足我的心，尽管
历经冬日和夏季，直至老年开始，
我的马戏团动物都在表演，
那些踩高跷的男孩、油亮的战车，
狮子，以及女士和先生们知道的那些。

II

除了列举古老的主题，我能做什么？
首先是海骑士奥辛牵着我的鼻子
穿过三座迷人的岛，寓言般的梦境，
徒劳的快乐，徒劳的战斗，徒劳的休眠，
诸多怨恨之心的主题，或者看起来是，
用来装饰古老的歌或宫廷表演；
但我让他驰骋又有什么可忧虑的，
我，渴求他仙女般新娘的胸脯？

然后一个相反的事实填入戏剧中，
我给它起名为《凯瑟琳女伯爵》，
她，极度的怜悯，让她放弃了灵魂，
但主宰一切的上天干预，拯救了它。
我以为我亲爱的必将毁灭她的灵魂，

让执着和憎恨奴役它，
而这催生了一个梦，并且很快
这个梦本身就拥有了我所有的思想和爱。

当蠢货和盲人偷走了面包，
库丘林则与不受支配的海战斗；
这就是心的神秘之处，而当所有都已说尽，
是梦本身迷住了我：
角色被一份事业所隔绝
去独占现在，去支配记忆。
演员和多彩的舞台占据了我所有的爱，
而不是那些它们所象征的事物。

III

那些主宰一切的形象因其完整
在纯洁的心智中成长，但又从何开始？
一堆垃圾，或者街道上的残渣，
旧水壶，旧瓶子，和一个破烂的罐子，
老铁，老骨头，老旧的破衣服，那守着
钱柜的疯狂的荡妇。既然我的梯子已被撤去，
我必须躺下，在所有梯子起始的地方，
在我的心，那污秽的破烂商铺里。

政治

在我们的时代，人的命运 在政治范畴内呈现其意义。

——托马斯·曼

女孩站着那儿，我怎能
将心思集中
在罗马或俄罗斯
或西班牙的政治上？
但这儿有位阅遍世事的人，
他知道他谈论的是什么，
那儿有个政治家，
既博学又多思，
也许他们说的是真的
有关战争和战争预警，
但是啊，如果我再次年轻，
会将她拥入怀中。

A terrible beauty is born

N° 19

‘But I, being poor, have only my dreams; I have spread my dreams under your feet . . .’

Down by the Salley Gardens

Down by the salley gardens my love and I did meet;
She passed the salley gardens with little snow- white feet.
She bid me take love easy, as the leaves grow on the tree;
But I, being young and foolish, with her would not agree.

In a field by the river my love and I did stand,
And on my leaning shoulder she laid her snow- white hand.
She bid me take life easy, as the grass grows on the weirs;
But I was young and foolish, and now am full of tears.

Cuchulain's Fight with the Sea

A man came slowly from the setting sun,
To Emer, raddling raiment in her dun,
And said, 'I am that swineherd whom you bid
Go watch the road between the wood and tide,
But now I have no need to watch it more.'

Then Emer cast the web upon the floor,
And raising arms all raddled with the dye,
Parted her lips with a loud sudden cry.

That swineherd stared upon her face and said,
'No man alive, no man among the dead,
Has won the gold his cars of battle bring.'

'But if your master comes home triumphing
Why must you blench and shake from foot to crown?'

Thereon he shook the more and cast him down
Upon the web- heaped floor, and cried his word:
'With him is one sweet- throated like a bird.'

'You dare me to my face,' and thereupon
She smote with raddled fist, and where her son
Herded the cattle came with stumbling feet,

And cried with angry voice, 'It is not meet
To idle life away, a common herd.'

'I have long waited, mother, for that word:
But wherefore now?'

 'There is a man to die;
You have the heaviest arm under the sky.'

'Whether under its daylight or its stars
My father stands amid his battle- cars.'

'But you have grown to be the taller man.'

'Yet somewhere under starlight or the sun
My father stands.'

 'Aged, worn out with wars
On foot, on horseback or in battle- cars.'

'I only ask what way my journey lies,
For He who made you bitter made you wise.'

'The Red Branch camp in a great company
Between wood's rim and the horses of the sea.
Go there, and light a camp- fire at wood's rim;
But tell your name and lineage to him
Whose blade compels, and wait till they have found
Some feasting man that the same oath has bound.'

Among those feasting men Cuchulain dwelt,
And his young sweetheart close beside him knelt,
Stared on the mournful wonder of his eyes,
Even as Spring upon the ancient skies,
And pondered on the glory of his days;
And all around the harp- string told his praise,
And Conchubar, the Red Branch king of kings,
With his own fingers touched the brazen strings.

At last Cuchulain spake, 'Some man has made
His evening fire amid the leafy shade.
I have often heard him singing to and fro,
I have often heard the sweet sound of his bow.
Seek out what man he is.'

One went and came.

'He bade me let all know he gives his name
At the sword- point, and waits till we have found
Some feasting man that the same oath has bound.'

Cuchulain cried, 'I am the only man
Of all this host so bound from childhood on.'

After short fighting in the leafy shade,
He spake to the young man, 'Is there no maid
Who loves you, no white arms to wrap you round,
Or do you long for the dim sleepy ground,

That you have come and dared me to my face?’

‘The dooms of men are in God’s hidden place.’

‘Your head a while seemed like a woman’s head
That I loved once.’

Again the fighting sped,
But now the war- rage in Cuchulain woke,
And through that new blade’s guard the old blade broke,
And pierced him.

‘Speak before your breath is done.’

‘Cuchulain I, mighty Cuchulain’s son.’
‘I put you from your pain, I can no more.’

While day its burden on to evening bore,
With head bowed on his knees Cuchulain stayed;
Then Conchubar sent that sweet- throated maid,
And she, to win him, his grey hair caressed;
In vain her arms, in vain her soft white breast.
Then Conchubar, the subtlest of all men,
Ranking his Druids round him ten by ten,
Spake thus: ‘Cuchulain will dwell there and brood
For three days more in dreadful quietude,
And then arise, and raving slay us all.
Chaunt in his ear delusions magical,
That he may fight the horses of the sea.’

The Druids took them to their mystery,
And chaunted for three days.

Cuchulain stirred,
Stared on the horses of the sea, and heard
The cars of battle and his own name cried;
And fought with the invulnerable tide.

When You are Old

When you are old and grey and full of sleep,
And nodding by the fire, take down this book,
And slowly read, and dream of the soft look
Your eyes had once, and of their shadows deep;

How many loved your moments of glad grace,
And loved your beauty with love false or true,
But one man loved the pilgrim soul in you,
And loved the sorrows of your changing face;

And bending down beside the glowing bars,
Murmur, a little sadly, how Love fled
And paced upon the mountains overhead
And hid his face amid a crowd of stars.

The Song of Wandering Aengus

I went out to the hazel wood,
Because a fire was in my head,
And cut and peeled a hazel wand,
And hooked a berry to a thread;
And when white moths were on the wing,
And moth- like stars were flickering out,
I dropped the berry in a stream
And caught a little silver trout.

When I had laid it on the floor
I went to blow the fire aflame,
But something rustled on the floor,
And some one called me by my name:
It had become a glimmering girl
With apple blossom in her hair
Who called me by my name and ran
And faded through the brightening air.

Though I am old with wandering
Through hollow lands and hilly lands,
I will find out where she has gone,
And kiss her lips and take her hands;
And walk among long dappled grass,
And pluck till time and times are done

The silver apples of the moon,
The golden apples of the sun.

He wishes for the Cloths of Heaven

Had I the heavens' embroidered cloths,
Enwrought with golden and silver light,
The blue and the dim and the dark cloths
Of night and light and the half- light,
I would spread the cloths under your feet:
But I, being poor, have only my dreams;
I have spread my dreams under your feet;
Tread softly because you tread on my dreams.

The Folly of Being Comforted

One that is ever kind said yesterday:

‘Your well- beloved’s hair has threads of grey,

And little shadows come about her eyes;

Time can but make it easier to be wise

Though now it seems impossible, and so

All that you need is patience.’

Heart cries, ‘No,

I have not a crumb of comfort, not a grain.

Time can but make her beauty over again:

Because of that great nobleness of hers

The fire that stirs about her, when she stirs,

Burns but more clearly. O she had not these ways

When all the wild summer was in her gaze.’

O heart! O heart! if she’d but turn her head,

You’d know the folly of being comforted.

Adam's Curse

We sat together at one summer's end,
That beautiful mild woman, your close friend,
And you and I, and talked of poetry.
I said, 'A line will take us hours maybe;
Yet if it does not seem a moment's thought,
Our stitching and unstitching has been naught.
Better go down upon your marrow- bones
And scrub a kitchen pavement, or break stones
Like an old pauper, in all kinds of weather;
For to articulate sweet sounds together
Is to work harder than all these, and yet
Be thought an idler by the noisy set
Of bankers, schoolmasters, and clergymen
The martyrs call the world.'

And thereupon

That beautiful mild woman for whose sake
There's many a one shall find out all heartache
On finding that her voice is sweet and low
Replied, 'To be born woman is to know –
Although they do not talk of it at school –
That we must labour to be beautiful.'

I said, 'It's certain there is no fine thing

Since Adam's fall but needs much labouring.
There have been lovers who thought love should be
So much compounded of high courtesy
That they would sigh and quote with learned looks Precedents out of beautiful old books;
Yet now it seems an idle trade enough.'

We sat grown quiet at the name of love;
We saw the last embers of daylight die,
And in the trembling blue- green of the sky
A moon, worn as if it had been a shell
Washed by time's waters as they rose and fell
About the stars and broke in days and years.

I had a thought for no one's but your ears:
That you were beautiful, and that I strove
To love you in the old high way of love;
That it had all seemed happy, and yet we'd grown
As weary- hearted as that hollow moon.

No Second Troy

Why should I blame her that she filled my days
With misery, or that she would of late
Have taught to ignorant men most violent ways,
Or hurled the little streets upon the great,
Had they but courage equal to desire?
What could have made her peaceful with a mind
That nobleness made simple as a fire,
With beauty like a tightened bow, a kind
That is not natural in an age like this,
Being high and solitary and most stern?
Why, what could she have done, being what she is?
Was there another Troy for her to burn?

The Fascination of What's Difficult

The fascination of what's difficult
Has dried the sap out of my veins, and rent
Spontaneous joy and natural content
Out of my heart. There's something ails our colt
That must, as if it had not holy blood
Nor on Olympus leaped from cloud to cloud,
Shiver under the lash, strain, sweat and jolt
As though it dragged road metal. My curse on plays
That have to be set up in fifty ways,
On the day's war with every knave and dolt,
Theatre business, management of men.
I swear before the dawn comes round again
I'll find the stable and pull out the bolt.

The Coming of Wisdom with Time

Though leaves are many, the root is one;
Through all the lying days of my youth
I swayed my leaves and flowers in the sun;
Now I may wither into the truth.

At Galway Races

There where the course is,
Delight makes all of the one mind,
The riders upon the galloping horses,
The crowd that closes in behind:
We, too, had good attendance once,
Hearers and hearteners of the work;
Aye, horsemen for companions,
Before the merchant and the clerk
Breathed on the world with timid breath.
Sing on: somewhere at some new moon,
We'll learn that sleeping is not death,
Hearing the whole earth change its tune,
Its flesh being wild, and it again
Crying aloud as the racecourse is,
And we find hearteners among men
That ride upon horses.

September 1913

What need you, being come to sense,
But fumble in a greasy till
And add the halfpence to the pence
And prayer to shivering prayer, until
You have dried the marrow from the bone;
For men were born to pray and save:
Romantic Ireland's dead and gone,
It's with O'Leary in the grave.

Yet they were of a different kind,
The names that stilled your childish play,
They have gone about the world like wind,
But little time had they to pray
For whom the hangman's rope was spun,
And what, God help us, could they save?
Romantic Ireland's dead and gone,
It's with O'Leary in the grave.

Was it for this the wild geese spread
The grey wing upon every tide;
For this that all that blood was shed,
For this Edward Fitzgerald died,
And Robert Emmet and Wolfe Tone,
All that delirium of the brave?

Romantic Ireland's dead and gone,
It's with O'Leary in the grave.

Yet could we turn the years again,
And call those exiles as they were
In all their loneliness and pain,
You'd cry, 'Some woman's yellow hair
Has maddened every mother's son':
They weighed so lightly what they gave.
But let them be, they're dead and gone,
They're with O'Leary in the grave.

To a Friend whose Work has come to Nothing

Now all the truth is out,
Be secret and take defeat
From any brazen throat,
For how can you compete,
Being honour bred, with one
Who, were it proved he lies,
Were neither shamed in his own
Nor in his neighbours' eyes?
Bred to a harder thing
Than Triumph, turn away
And like a laughing string
Whereon mad fingers play
Amid a place of stone,
Be secret and exult,
Because of all things known
That is most difficult.

Paudeen

Indignant at the fumbling wits, the obscure spite
Of our old Paudeen in his shop, I stumbled blind
Among the stones and thorn- trees, under morning light;
Until a curlew cried and in the luminous wind
A curlew answered; and suddenly thereupon I thought
That on the lonely height where all are in God's eye,
There cannot be, confusion of our sound forgot,
A single soul that lacks a sweet crystalline cry.

Fallen Majesty

Although crowds gathered once if she but showed her face,
And even old men's eyes grew dim, this hand alone,
Like some last courtier at a gypsy camping- place
Babbling of fallen majesty, records what's gone.

The lineaments, a heart that laughter has made sweet,
These, these remain, but I record what's gone. A crowd
Will gather, and not know it walks the very street
Whereon a thing once walked that seemed a burning cloud.

The Cold Heaven

Suddenly I saw the cold and rook- delighting heaven
That seemed as though ice burned and was but the more ice,
And thereupon imagination and heart were driven
So wild that every casual thought of that and this Vanished, and left but memories, that should be out of season
With the hot blood of youth, of love crossed long ago;
And I took all the blame out of all sense and reason,
Until I cried and trembled and rocked to and fro,
Riddled with light. Ah! when the ghost begins to quicken,
Confusion of the death- bed over, is it sent
Out naked on the roads, as the books say, and stricken
By the injustice of the skies for punishment?

The Magi

Now as at all times I can see in the mind's eye,
In their stiff, painted clothes, the pale unsatisfied ones
Appear and disappear in the blue depth of the sky
With all their ancient faces like rain- beaten stones,
And all their helms of silver hovering side by side,
And all their eyes still fixed, hoping to find once more,
Being by Calvary's turbulence unsatisfied,
The uncontrollable mystery on the bestial floor.

A Coat

I made my song a coat
Covered with embroideries
Out of old mythologies
From heel to throat;
But the fools caught it,
Wore it in the world's eyes
As though they'd wrought it.
Song, let them take it,
For there's more enterprise
In walking naked.

The Wild Swans at Coole

The trees are in their autumn beauty,
The woodland paths are dry,
Under the October twilight the water
Mirrors a still sky;
Upon the brimming water among the stones
Are nine- and- fifty swans.

The nineteenth autumn has come upon me
Since I first made my count;
I saw, before I had well finished,
All suddenly mount
And scatter wheeling in great broken rings
Upon their clamorous wings.

I have looked upon those brilliant creatures,
And now my heart is sore.
All's changed since I, hearing at twilight,
The first time on this shore,
The bell- beat of their wings above my head,
Trode with a lighter tread.

Unwearied still, lover by lover,
They paddle in the cold
Companionable streams or climb the air;

Their hearts have not grown old;
Passion or conquest, wander where they will,
Attend upon them still.

But now they drift on the still water,
Mysterious, beautiful;
Among what rushes will they build,
By what lake's edge or pool
Delight men's eyes when I awake some day
To find they have flown away?

An Irish Airman Foresees his Death

I know that I shall meet my fate
Somewhere among the clouds above;
Those that I fight I do not hate,
Those that I guard I do not love;
My country is Kiltartan Cross,
My countrymen Kiltartan's poor,
No likely end could bring them loss
Or leave them happier than before.
Nor law, nor duty bade me fight,
Nor public men, nor cheering crowds,
A lonely impulse of delight
Drove to this tumult in the clouds;
I balanced all, brought all to mind,
The years to come seemed waste of breath,
A waste of breath the years behind
In balance with this life, this death.

The Collar- Bone of a Hare

Would I could cast a sail on the water
Where many a king has gone
And many a king's daughter,
And alight at the comely trees and the lawn,
The playing upon pipes and the dancing,
And learn that the best thing is
To change my loves while dancing
And pay but a kiss for a kiss.

I would find by the edge of that water
The collar- bone of a hare
Worn thin by the lapping of water,
And pierce it through with a gimlet, and stare
At the old bitter world where they marry in churches,
And laugh over the untroubled water
At all who marry in churches,
Through the white thin bone of a hare.

Her Praise

She is foremost of those that I would hear praised.
I have gone about the house, gone up and down
As a man does who has published a new book,
Or a young girl dressed out in her new gown,
And though I have turned the talk by hook or crook
Until her praise should be the uppermost theme,
A woman spoke of some new tale she had read,
A man confusedly in a half dream
As though some other name ran in his head.
She is foremost of those that I would hear praised.
I will talk no more of books or the long war
But walk by the dry thorn until I have found
Some beggar sheltering from the wind, and there
Manage the talk until her name come round.
If there be rags enough he will know her name
And be well pleased remembering it, for in the old days,
Though she had young men's praise and old men's blame,
Among the poor both old and young gave her praise.

Easter 1916

I have met them at close of day
Coming with vivid faces
From counter or desk among grey
Eighteenth- century houses.
I have passed with a nod of the head
Or polite meaningless words,
Or have lingered awhile and said
Polite meaningless words,
And thought before I had done
Of a mocking tale or a gibe
To please a companion
Around the fire at the club,
Being certain that they and I
But lived where motley is worn:
All changed, changed utterly:
A terrible beauty is born.

That woman's days were spent
In ignorant good- will,
Her nights in argument
Until her voice grew shrill.
What voice more sweet than hers
When, young and beautiful,
She rode to harriers?

This man had kept a school
And rode our wingèd horse;
This other his helper and friend

Was coming into his force;
He might have won fame in the end,
So sensitive his nature seemed,
So daring and sweet his thought.
This other man I had dreamed
A drunken, vainglorious lout.
He had done most bitter wrong
To some who are near my heart,
Yet I number him in the song;
He, too, has resigned his part
In the casual comedy;
He, too, has been changed in his turn,
Transformed utterly:
A terrible beauty is born.

Hearts with one purpose alone
Through summer and winter seem
Enchanted to a stone
To trouble the living stream.
The horse that comes from the road,
The rider, the birds that range
From cloud to tumbling cloud,
Minute by minute they change;
A shadow of cloud on the stream

Changes minute by minute;
A horse- hoof slides on the brim,
And a horse splashes within it;
The long- legged moor- hens dive,
And hens to moor- cocks call;
Minute by minute they live:
The stone's in the midst of all.

Too long a sacrifice
Can make a stone of the heart.
O when may it suffice?
That is Heaven's part, our part
To murmur name upon name,
As a mother names her child
When sleep at last has come
On limbs that had run wild.
What is it but nightfall?
No, no, not night but death;
Was it needless death after all?
For England may keep faith
For all that is done and said.
We know their dream; enough
To know they dreamed and are dead;
And what if excess of love
Bewildered them till they died?
I write it out in a verse –
MacDonagh and MacBride
And Connolly and Pearse

Now and in time to be,
Wherever green is worn,
Are changed, changed utterly:
A terrible beauty is born.

Sixteen Dead Men

O but we talked at large before
The sixteen men were shot,
But who can talk of give and take,
What should be and what not
While those dead men are loitering there
To stir the boiling pot?

You say that we should still the land
Till Germany's overcome;
But who is there to argue that
Now Pearse is deaf and dumb?
And is their logic to outweigh
MacDonagh's bony thumb?

How could you dream they'd listen
That have an ear alone
For those new comrades they have found,
Lord Edward and Wolfe Tone,
Or meddle with our give and take
That converse bone to bone?

The Second Coming

Turning and turning in the widening gyre
The falcon cannot hear the falconer;
Things fall apart; the centre cannot hold;
Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world,
The blood- dimmed tide is loosed, and everywhere
The ceremony of innocence is drowned;
The best lack all conviction, while the worst
Are full of passionate intensity.
Surely some revelation is at hand;
Surely the Second Coming is at hand.
The Second Coming! Hardly are those words out
When a vast image out of Spiritus Mundi
Troubles my sight: somewhere in sands of the desert
A shape with lion body and the head of a man,
A gaze blank and pitiless as the sun,
Is moving its slow thighs, while all about it
Reel shadows of the indignant desert birds.
The darkness drops again; but now I know
That twenty centuries of stony sleep
Were vexed to nightmare by a rocking cradle,
And what rough beast, its hour come round at last,
Slouches towards Bethlehem to be born?

Sailing to Byzantium

I

That is no country for old men. The young
In one another's arms, birds in the trees
– Those dying generations – at their song,
The salmon- falls, the mackerel- crowded seas,
Fish, flesh, or fowl, commend all summer long
Whatever is begotten, born, and dies.
Caught in that sensual music all neglect
Monuments of unageing intellect.

II

An aged man is but a paltry thing,
A tattered coat upon a stick, unless Soul clap its hands and sing, and louder sing
For every tatter in its mortal dress,
Nor is there singing school but studying
Monuments of its own magnificence;
And therefore I have sailed the seas and come
To the holy city of Byzantium.

III

O sages standing in God's holy fire
As in the gold mosaic of a wall,
Come from the holy fire, perne in a gyre,
And be the singing- masters of my soul.

Consume my heart away; sick with desire
And fastened to a dying animal
It knows not what it is; and gather me
Into the artifice of eternity.

IV

Once out of nature I shall never take
My bodily form from any natural thing,
But such a form as Grecian goldsmiths make
Of hammered gold and gold enamelling
To keep a drowsy Emperor awake;
Or set upon a golden bough to sing
To lords and ladies of Byzantium
Of what is past, or passing, or to come.

The STare'S NeST by my WINdoW

The bees build in the crevices
Of loosening masonry, and there
The mother birds bring grubs and flies.
My wall is loosening; honey- bees,
Come build in the empty house of the stare.

We are closed in, and the key is turned
On our uncertainty; somewhere
A man is killed, or a house burned,
Yet no clear fact to be discerned:
Come build in the empty house of the stare.

A barricade of stone or of wood;
Some fourteen days of civil war;
Last night they trundled down the road
That dead young soldier in his blood:
Come build in the empty house of the stare.

We had fed the heart on fantasies,
The heart's grown brutal from the fare;
More substance in our enmities

Than in our love; O honey- bees,
Come build in the empty house of the stare.

Leda and the Swan

A sudden blow: the great wings beating still Above the staggering girl, her thighs caressed
By the dark webs, her nape caught in his bill,
He holds her helpless breast upon his breast.

How can those terrified vague fingers push
The feathered glory from her loosening thighs,
And how can body, laid in that white rush,
But feel the strange heart beating where it lies?

A shudder in the loins engenders there
The broken wall, the burning roof and tower
And Agamemnon dead.

Being so caught up,
So mastered by the brute blood of the air,
Did she put on his knowledge with his power
Before the indifferent beak could let her drop?

1923

Among School Children

I

I walk through the long schoolroom questioning;
A kind old nun in a white hood replies;
The children learn to cipher and to sing,
To study reading books and histories,
To cut and sew, be neat in everything
In the best modern way – the children's eyes
In momentary wonder stare upon
A sixty- year- old smiling public man.

II

I dream of a Ledaean body, bent
Above a sinking fire, a tale that she Told of a harsh reproof, or trivial event
That changed some childish day to tragedy –
Told, and it seemed that our two natures blent
Into a sphere from youthful sympathy,
Or else, to alter Plato's parable,
Into the yolk and white of the one shell.

III

And thinking of that fit of grief or rage
I look upon one child or t'other there
And wonder if she stood so at that age –
For even daughters of the swan can share

Something of every paddler's heritage –
And had that colour upon cheek or hair,
And thereupon my heart is driven wild:
She stands before me as a living child.

IV

Her present image floats into the mind –
Did Quattrocento finger fashion it
Hollow of cheek as though it drank the wind
And took a mess of shadows for its meat?
And I though never of Ledaean kind
Had pretty plumage once – enough of that,
Better to smile on all that smile, and show
There is a comfortable kind of old scarecrow.

V

What youthful mother, a shape upon her lap
Honey of generation had betrayed,
And that must sleep, shriek, struggle to escape
As recollection or the drug decide,
Would think her son, did she but see that shape
With sixty or more winters on its head,
A compensation for the pang of his birth,
Or the uncertainty of his setting forth?

VI

Plato thought nature but a spume that plays
Upon a ghostly paradigm of things;
Solider Aristotle played the taws
Upon the bottom of a king of kings;

World- famous golden- thighed Pythagoras
Fingered upon a fiddle- stick or strings
What a star sang and careless Muses heard:
Old clothes upon old sticks to scare a bird.

VII

Both nuns and mothers worship images,
But those the candles light are not as those
That animate a mother's reveries,
But keep a marble or a bronze repose.
And yet they too break hearts – O Presences
That passion, piety or affection knows,
And that all heavenly glory symbolise –
O self- born mockers of man's enterprise;

VIII

Labour is blossoming or dancing where
The body is not bruised to pleasure soul,
Nor beauty born out of its own despair,
Nor blear- eyed wisdom out of midnight oil.
O chestnut- tree, great rooted blossomer,
Are you the leaf, the blossom or the bole?
O body swayed to music, O brightening glance,
How can we know the dancer from the dance?

A Woman Young and Old from A Woman Young and Old

IX

a LaST CoNfeSSIoN

What lively lad most pleased me
Of all that with me lay?
I answer that I gave my soul
And loved in misery,
But had great pleasure with a lad
That I loved bodily.

Flinging from his arms I laughed
To think his passion such
He fancied that I gave a soul
Did but our bodies touch,
And laughed upon his breast to think
Beast gave beast as much.

I gave what other women gave
That stepped out of their clothes,
But when this soul, its body off,
Naked to naked goes,
He it has found shall find therein
What none other knows,

And give his own and take his own
And rule in his own right;
And though it loved in misery
Close and cling so tight,
There's not a bird of day that dare
Extinguish that delight.

Lapis Lazuli

(for harry CLIfToN)

I have heard that hysterical women say
They are sick of the palette and fiddle- bow,
Of poets that are always gay,
For everybody knows or else should know
That if nothing drastic is done
Aeroplane and Zeppelin will come out,
Pitch like King Billy bomb- balls in Until the town lie beaten flat.

All perform their tragic play,
There struts Hamlet, there is Lear,
That's Ophelia, that Cordelia;
Yet they, should the last scene be there,
The great stage curtain about to drop,
If worthy their prominent part in the play,
Do not break up their lines to weep.
They know that Hamlet and Lear are gay;
Gaiety transfiguring all that dread.
All men have aimed at, found and lost;
Black out; Heaven blazing into the head:
Tragedy wrought to its uttermost.
Though Hamlet rambles and Lear rages,
And all the drop- scenes drop at once

Upon a hundred thousand stages,
It cannot grow by an inch or an ounce.
On their own feet they came, or on shipboard,
Camel- back, horse- back, ass- back, mule- back,
Old civilisations put to the sword.
Then they and their wisdom went to rack:
No handiwork of Callimachus,
Who handled marble as if it were bronze,
Made draperies that seemed to rise
When sea- wind swept the corner, stands;
His long lamp- chimney shaped like the stem
Of a slender palm, stood but a day;
All things fall and are built again,
And those that build them again are gay.

Two Chinamen, behind them a third,
Are carved in lapis lazuli,
Over them flies a long- legged bird,
A symbol of longevity;
The third, doubtless a serving- man,
Carries a musical instrument.

Every discoloration of the stone,
Every accidental crack or dent,
Seems a water- course or an avalanche,
Or lofty slope where it still snows
Though doubtless plum or cherry- branch
Sweetens the little half- way house

Those Chinamen climb towards, and I
Delight to imagine them seated there;
There on the mountain and the sky,
On all the tragic scene they stare.
One asks for mournful melodies;
Accomplished fingers begin to play.
Their eyes mid many wrinkles, their eyes,
Their ancient, glittering eyes, are gay.

What Then?

His chosen comrades thought at school
He must grow a famous man;
He thought the same and lived by rule,
All his twenties crammed with toil;
‘What then?’ sang Plato’s ghost, ‘what then?’

Everything he wrote was read,
After certain years he won
Sufficient money for his need,
Friends that have been friends indeed;
‘What then?’ sang Plato’s ghost, ‘what then?’

All his happier dreams came true –
A small old house, wife, daughter, son,
Grounds where plum and cabbage grew,
Poets and Wits about him drew;
‘What then?’ sang Plato’s ghost, ‘what then?’

‘The work is done,’ grown old he thought,
‘According to my boyish plan;
Let the fools rage, I swerved in nought,
Something to perfection brought’;
But louder sang that ghost, ‘What then?’

Under Ben Bulben

from Under Ben Bulben

VI

Under bare Ben Bulben's head
In Drumcliff churchyard Yeats is laid.
An ancestor was rector there
Long years ago, a church stands near,
By the road an ancient cross.
No marble, no conventional phrase;
On limestone quarried near the spot
By his command these words are cut:

*Cast a cold eye
On life, on death.
Horseman, pass by!*

Cuchulain Comforted

A man that had six mortal wounds, a man
Violent and famous, strode among the dead;
Eyes stared out of the branches and were gone.

Then certain Shrouds that muttered head to head
Came and were gone. He leant upon a tree
As though to meditate on wounds and blood.

A Shroud that seemed to have authority
Among those bird- like things came and let fall
A bundle of linen. Shrouds by two and three

Came creeping up because the man was still;
And thereupon that linen- carrier said:
‘Your life can grow much sweeter if you will ‘Obey our ancient rule and make a shroud.

Mainly because of what we only know
The rattle of those arms makes us afraid.

‘We thread the needles’ eyes and all we do
All must together do.’ That done, the man
Took up the nearest and began to sew.

'Now must we sing and sing the best we can
But first you must be told our character:
Convicted cowards all by kindred slain

'Or driven from home and left to die in fear.'
They sang, but had nor human tunes nor words,
Though all was done in common as before;

They had changed their throats and had the throats of birds.

The Circus Animals' Desertion

I

I sought a theme and sought for it in vain,
I sought it daily for six weeks or so.
Maybe at last being but a broken man
I must be satisfied with my heart, although Winter and summer till old age began
My circus animals were all on show,
Those stilted boys, that burnished chariot,
Lion and woman and the Lord knows what.

II

What can I but enumerate old themes?
First that sea- rider Oisín led by the nose
Through three enchanted islands, allegorical dreams,
Vain gaiety, vain battle, vain repose,
Themes of the embittered heart, or so it seems,
That might adorn old songs or courtly shows;
But what cared I that set him on to ride,
I, starved for the bosom of his faery bride?

And then a counter- truth filled out its play,
The Countess Cathleen was the name I gave it,
She, pity- crazed, had given her soul away
But masterful Heaven had intervened to save it.
I thought my dear must her own soul destroy

So did fanaticism and hate enslave it,
And this brought forth a dream and soon enough
This dream itself had all my thought and love.

And when the Fool and Blind Man stole the bread
Cuchulain fought the ungovernable sea;
Heart mysteries there, and yet when all is said
It was the dream itself enchanted me:
Character isolated by a deed
To engross the present and dominate memory.
Players and painted stage took all my love
And not those things that they were emblems of.

III

Those masterful images because complete
Grew in pure mind, but out of what began?
A mound of refuse or the sweepings of a street,
Old kettles, old bottles, and a broken can,
Old iron, old bones, old rags, that raving slut
Who keeps the till. Now that my ladder's gone
I must lie down where all the ladders start
In the foul rag and bone shop of the heart.

Politics

'In our time the destiny of man presents its meaning in political terms.' –

T homaS MaNN

How can I, that girl standing there,

My attention fix

On Roman or on Russian

Or on Spanish politics?

Yet here's a travelled man that knows

What he talks about,

And there's a politician

That has both read and thought,

And maybe what they say is true

Of war and war's alarms,

But O that I were young again

And held her in my arms.

致《布莱克伍德》杂志编辑书

先生：

我们都听说过“道德腐化促进会”“地狱之火俱乐部”诸如此类的团体。我想，是在布莱顿，有人成立了一个“镇压美德协会”。而这个协会本身已遭镇压。但遗憾的是，伦敦还有一个这样的组织，其邪恶程度更甚。究其脾性，该团体取名为“谋杀促进会”或许更合适。不过，他们采用了雅致的Ευφημισμός（希腊语：婉词），称自己为“谋杀艺术鉴赏家协会”。他们声称，渴望了解杀人的奥秘，业余爱好各种方式的流血艺术，简而言之，就是谋杀发烧友。他们聚在一起，像评判一幅画、一尊雕像或者其他类型的艺术品那样，评价欧洲警察年鉴提供的每一桩新鲜命案。但他们是秉着何种精神展开这些活动的，我毋庸赘述，因为您将读到该协会去年面向全员宣读的“月度讲座系列”中的一个，也能从中更好地领悟这种精神。尽管他们保持警惕尽量避开公众耳目，会刊却意外落入我手。讲座内容的发表将给他们以警告，而我本意正是如此。尽管我更希望通过您引导公共舆论，从而悄然将他们镇压，而不是曝光他们的名字，然后向弓街 [1] 提出上诉；不过，如果公开他们的讲座没有取得应有的效果，我最终必将诉诸法律。因为这种事竟然发生在一个基督教国度里，这是不可原谅的。就算发生在异教徒国家，公众对于谋杀的宽容在某位基督教作家看来，仍是对社会公德最强烈的声讨。这位作家就是拉克唐修 [2]。他的话极适用于当前的情况，用他的话说：“世上有什么能比杀人更恐怖、更有冒犯性？正因此，我们的生命才受到最严厉的法律保护，也正因此，人类掀起可怕的战争。然而，人们通过风俗习惯找到了杀人的办法，不用诉诸战争，也不触犯法律。这是娱乐，却也是犯罪，理应受到惩罚。如果处在谋杀现场，我们就成了共犯，观看罪行，我们就和行凶者同罪；那么在角斗士的谋杀中，观众的手和胜利者的一样血腥；想看血流的人洗不清身上的血渍；未亲手杀人，却为谋杀者鼓掌、求奖励的人也脱不了干系 [3]。”“人的生命，”他说，“受最严厉的法律保护。然而为了谋杀，风俗习惯设计出一套逃避法律责任的办法。不过现在，欢娱（voluptas [4]）和不被约束的罪行一样，要付出同样的代价。”让业余爱好者协会的先生们想想这段话吧，他们要特别注意最后一句，关系如此重大，我必须要用英语表述一下：“现在，如果仅因身处谋杀现场，某人就成了共犯，如果只是目睹了谋杀，我们就要与行凶者同罪，那么同样，在露天竞技场的谋杀中，看台上观众的手和给对方致命一击的角斗士的手一样血腥，支持谋杀者

洗清罪证，为谋杀者鼓掌、求奖励的人也只能是共犯。”虽然我还没有听说伦敦谋杀爱好者男士俱乐部受到“præmia postulavit”（要求奖励谋杀者）的指控，但是他们的活动无疑是有这种倾向的。不过，这个俱乐部的名称以及我寄给您的那个讲座的字里行间均充满“interfectori favil”（为谋杀者鼓掌）的意味。——我是……

X.Y.Z.

（编者按：感谢这位朋友的来信，也感谢他摘引的拉克唐修的话，很好地呼应了他对这个事情的看法。但是坦白地说我们的观点是不同的。我们不能假设主讲人是认真的。他的态度不会比伊拉斯谟写《愚人颂》或者迪恩·斯威夫特提议吃小孩更认真。不过，我们双方都认为应该把这个讲座公布于世。）

[1] 弓街：伦敦的一条街道。弓街治安法庭曾数年主管伦敦的治安事务，相当于伦敦历史上首个警察局。（说明：书中脚注除特别标明的之外，均为译者注。）

[2] 拉克唐修（250—325），早期基督教作家，是第一位基督教徒罗马皇帝康斯坦丁一世的宗教政策顾问。著有《神圣原理》，书中他对异教徒宗教和哲学进行批判，又对基督教的合理性和真实性进行论述。

[3] 原文为拉丁语。

[4] 拉丁语，意为欢乐、欢娱。

讲座内容

先生们，我很荣幸，委员会将如此艰难的任务指派给我，让我朗读威廉姆斯系列“关于谋杀是一门艺术”的讲座。要是在三四个世纪之前，这个任务或许相当好办。那时人们对谋杀知之甚少，也鲜有佳作可当典范。但在当代，职业人士已创作出不少杰作，因而显然，公众必然也期待谋杀的评论方法有相应的提升。实践与理论必须Pari Passu（同步发展）。人们开始意识到，一例精巧的谋杀，在两个蠢人简单的杀与被杀、一把匕首、一只钱包和一条黑灯瞎火的巷子之外，更多的是前期的构思。先生们啊，如今，若要谋杀，构思、选址、光影、诗歌、情绪都是必要元素。威廉姆斯先生已提高了我们所有人心中的谋杀理想，因而让我的任务尤其难上加难。正如埃斯库罗斯或弥尔顿之于诗歌，米开朗基罗之于绘画，威廉姆斯先生已把他的谋杀艺术提升到了极高的境界。如华兹华斯先生所言，某种程度上，他“创造了一种人们可用于品鉴他的作品的审美力”。勾勒这一艺术之历史、批判性地审视其原则，是留给鉴赏家们的职责。他们是另一种“法官”，跟最高巡回法庭 [1] 的就颇为不同了。

在我开始之前，容我对某些自命清高的人说两句，他们说起本俱乐部就好像我们多少是有点不道德的。不道德！愿主保佑我的灵魂。先生们，那些人想表达什么啊？我是拥护道德准则的，永远拥护，拥护一切美德。我坚决认为，永远坚定地认为，（不管结果如何）谋杀是不当的行径，极为不当。但我并不认为，所有谋杀者都得有非常错误的思考方式，或者很不正确的行为准则。某位伟大的德国伦理学家 [2] 说过，把杀害对象的藏身之地告诉谋杀者，协助和支持他是每个善人应尽的本分。我非但不会这么做，相反，我愿意捐出一先令六便士将其逮捕，这比名气最大的道德学家们所捐的数额也要多出十八便士。但那又能怎样呢？世上的一切皆有两个把柄。例如谋杀，它可能要受到道德把柄的控制（就像在所有的布道中，以及老贝利那里 [3]）。这一点，我承认，是谋杀站不住脚的一面。但另外一面，它也可能成为一种审美对象，就像德国人说的，跟好品味有关。

为了证明这个观点，我将郑重地请出三位著名的权威人士，即S.T.科勒律治、亚里士多德和外科医生霍希普先生 [4]。先说科勒律治。多年前的一个夜晚，我和他正在伯尔尼街喝茶（顺便提一句，此街虽然不长，却出奇地人才济济）。在场的除我之外还有其他人。在饮茶配吐司满足口腹之欲的同时，我们都在听科勒律治文雅地谈一篇

关于普罗提诺的论文。突然传来一声：“失火了！失火了！”所有人，不管老师还是学生，柏拉图或是οἱ περὶ τὸν Πλάτωνα（希腊语：他周围的人），全都立刻冲出门外，盼着旁观大火。火情发生在牛津街上的一家钢琴制作商家。当时来看，火势很可能发展成一场可观的大火，所以很遗憾在危急关头到来之前我有事必须离开科勒律治先生的聚会。数天后，我又遇到了那位柏拉图式的聚会主人。我向他提起那场大火，求他告知那场可能的好戏是如何被终止的。“哦，先生，”他说，“那场戏后来太糟了，我们全都骂了起来。”那么有谁认为科勒律治先生（尽管他太胖了，不是一个拥有主动美德的人，但他绝对是名副其实的基督徒），可以说是好人的S.T.C.，是纵火犯吗？或者他会希望可怕的事发生在那个可怜的男人和他的钢琴身上吗（毫无疑问，很多钢琴都增加了额外的琴键 [5]）？相反，我知道他的为人，尽管他是被火灾考验过美德的人中最胖的一个，但我敢用生命打赌，必要时，他会操作消防车参与灭火。但情况到底是怎样的呢？根本就不需要美德。消防车一到，道德就全盘把责任交给了保险公司。事情就是这样，所以他就有权饱眼福。他为此离开了茶桌，难道让他一无所获吗？

我认为，在上述前提下，最高尚的人有权奢侈一回，去享受那场火灾，去发出不满的嘘声，就像对待任何先吊起了人们的胃口，后又让人扫兴的表演一样。接下来，让我们看看另一位伟大的权威人士，那位斯塔吉亚人（亚里士多德）是怎么说的。他（我想应该是在《形而上学》第五卷中）描述了κλεπτήν τέλειον，即，完美的盗贼形象。至于霍希普先生，在一篇关于消化不良的论文中用赞美的口吻谈到他看到的一种溃疡，称其为“一块美丽的溃疡”，也没见其良心不安。那么有人会说，亚里士多德不经大脑就会觉得盗贼品性完美，或者霍希普先生可能迷恋一块溃疡吗？众所周知，亚里士多德本人是个品德非常高尚的人，甚至写了八开纸一卷本的《尼各马可伦理学》也不满足，他后来又写了另外一套伦理学著作，名为*Magna Moralia*，即《大伦理学》。那么只要是撰写伦理学的人，不管是小伦理学还是大伦理学，都不可能赞美偷盗本身。至于霍希普先生，众所周知，他向所有的溃疡开战。他没有被溃疡的魅力蛊惑，相反他正努力将它们从米德尔塞克斯郡消除干净。不过，其实不管本身多么令人讨厌，跟同类相比的话，一个盗贼或者一块溃疡都可能有无数的优点。二者确实都不完美，但是它们本质上的不完美，这种不完美所蕴含的伟大恰恰构成了它们的完美。Spartam nactus es, henc exorna（“斯巴达现在归你了，尽你所有让其生辉”）。像奥托吕科斯 [6] 和巴灵顿先生 [7] 这样的贼，和性状明晰、稳步发展的可怕的崩蚀性溃疡，说他们与从长出蓓蕾直至开出“鲜艳完美的花”都堪称无懈可击的花魁洋蔷薇一样，是同类中的完美典范，也并不过分。或可比作美人中，最雍容华贵的妙龄少女。因此，不光是墨水台有可以想象的完美典范（正如

柯勒律治先生在他那封与布莱克伍德先生著名的信里说明的），尽管也没多少想象的空间，因为墨水台本身就值得赞美，是对社会有用之物。甚至可以想象，不完美本身也可能有自己的典范和完美的状态。

先生们，我真是抱歉，一下子说这么多哲理。现在让我结合实践说明。当谋杀将要发生（不久后的将来时时态），且我们听到了传闻的时候，我们务必以道德的态度视之。但是假定谋杀已完成，你可以说：Τετέλεσαι（谋杀完成了），或者（用美狄亚式的坚定的三步）说：εἴργασαι（结束了）。假定受害者断了气不再痛苦挣扎，恶棍随即逃走，无人知其行踪。假定，最后我们尽力了，在那人逃跑的时候伸腿绊倒了他，可是也于事无补啊：“abiit, evasit”（他离开了，逃走了）……那为什么我说，再多的美德又有什么用呢？我们给道德的已足够多，现在该轮到品味和艺术了。毫无疑问，人被害死是件令人难过的事，非常难过，但我们也无力回天。那么就让这件坏事物尽其用吧。既然拼尽全力也不可能再在道德方面有所作为，就让我们以审美的态度视之，看看能不能加以利用。理智的人一般都是这样想的。那么会怎样呢？我们擦干眼泪，也许会心满意足地发现，一桩在道德上骇人、站不住脚的买卖，若用审美的标准衡量，却会是一场值得赞美的表演。这样一来全世界都高兴了。老谚语还是有道理的，世上没有对人人都不利的事。谋杀爱好者本来因为太在意美德显得暴躁阴郁，现在开始变废为宝，变得欢腾起来。美德的权势日渐衰微，今后谋杀艺术爱好者和鉴赏家们可以满足自己的日常所需。先生们，基于这个原则，我计划引导你们学习从该隐到特尔泰 [8] 以来的谋杀案。就让我们心悦诚服地携手共同漫步于这条伟大的艺术长廊。我会尽力将你们的目光引向有批判价值的作品。

第一例谋杀你们都很熟悉。该隐，这位谋杀的发明人，这门艺术的先祖，必定是位一流的天才。该隐家族都是天才。土八·该隐 [9] 发明了管子，或这类东西，我想。但，不管艺术家多具原创性或多么才华横溢，在那个时代所有艺术都才萌芽，所以要评价那时的作品必须谨记这一时代背景。即使是土八的作品，今天放在设菲尔德 [10] 看，也可能不尽如人意。所以如果说该隐（我是指老该隐）的艺术水平不过尔尔，也并非贬低。然而弥尔顿应该另有想法。从他叙述的方式看，这个作品似乎应该是他心爱的谋杀案，因为在他的诗中明显能感受到他对谋杀场景进行润色想取得生动效果时的焦虑。

为此他内心狂怒，趁谈话之际，

将石块投向对方的腹部，给以致命一击：

他倾倒在地，面色苍白像死了一样，

随着鲜血不断喷涌，呻吟出最后一丝气息。

《失乐园·十一卷》

对于此段描写，擅长鉴赏效果的画家理查德森在《失乐园笔记》中如是评论道：“人们都以为该隐是用一块大石把他弟弟砸死的（按照普遍说法）。弥尔顿算认可这种说法，不过他又增加了一个巨大的伤口。”此处的添加很明智。因为杀人武器简单粗暴，除非用一种温暖的血色提亮和丰富，否则场面就会像野蛮派那样显得过于直白，就仿佛是独眼巨人行凶，他没有技巧，事先也未经构思，只用了一根羊骨。不过，我对这个提升总体上还是满意的，因为这暗示了弥尔顿是个谋杀爱好者。至于莎士比亚，他没能写得更好。《亨利六世》中格洛斯特公爵的谋害，以及邓肯和班科 [11] 的死，都足以证明这一点。

一旦这门艺术奠定了基础，眼见它久久停滞不前，实在是可惜。确切地说，我将不得不跳过接下来所有的谋杀案，不管是宗教的还是世俗的，因为它们毫无价值，一直要到基督诞生很久之后。即使在伯里克利 [12] 的时代，希腊也没能产生任何有丁点价值的谋杀。罗马的谋杀案例几乎没有任何后来艺术的原创性，罗马模式辜负了自己。事实上，拉丁语在表述谋杀思想时意味单薄，词不达意。“这个人被谋杀了。”用拉丁语说是何感觉？Interfectus est, interemptus est（他被杀了，他被消灭了），这仅仅表达出了杀人的行为。因此，中世纪基督教的拉丁语用法只好引入了一个新词，它有单薄的经典词语从未传达出的丰满。Murdratus est [13]，哥特时代更高级的方言这样讲。在这个时期，犹太学派鲜活地保留了尚未被这门艺术了解的知识，而后逐渐传入西方世界。的确，犹太学派素来让人敬佩，甚至在黑暗时期。林肯郡的休一案就说明了这点，这个案子光荣地得到了乔叟的认可，借修道院院长之口，他把案件嵌进了犹太学派的另一场表演中 [14]。

不过，现在让我们暂时回到古典时期。我不由得想到喀提林 [15]、克洛狄乌斯 [16] 以及该小团体的其他人，他们本可以成为一流的艺术家的。令人无比遗憾的是，西塞罗以其迂腐不化剥夺了他的祖国在这个领域里唯一出彩的机会。作为谋杀的对象，没人比他自己更能解释遗憾的原因。主啊！如果西塞罗听到塞西格斯 [17] 躲在他的床下，得怕得喊成什么样啊。要是能听到他的喊声，那一定很有趣。想到他宁愿选择爬着躲进柜子里的vtile（权宜之计），甚至是cloaca（阴沟里），也不敢honestum（保留颜面）地直面无畏的艺术家，先生们，我就感到很满足。

现在时间来到了黑暗时代（我们都是讲求精准的人，所以准确地说黑暗时代是指最卓越的10世纪及前后紧邻的年代），这一时期，就

像对教堂建筑、彩色玻璃等艺术一样，自然也是对谋杀艺术发展有利的时期。所以，临近黑暗时代尾声的时候，我们这门艺术相应地崛起了一位伟大的人物，我指的是“山中老人”^[18]。他就宛若一盏明亮的灯，是的。不用我说，你们都知道，“刺客”这个词正是起源于他。他是如此热爱这门艺术，甚至某次，他中意的一个刺客企图杀他的时候，施展的才华让他如此欣喜，艺术家虽然刺杀失败了，但他当场封刺客做了公爵，赐给他可养三口人的生活津贴，死后爵位可由在世的妻儿继承。刺杀是谋杀这门艺术的一个分支，需要单独注意。我会专门针对刺杀做个讲座，其中，我的分析将会只围绕它的怪异之处：为什么这门艺术的这一分支会出现间歇性的蓬勃发展。刺杀案的发生从不像下雨那样均匀散落，都是如洪水一般倾泻而来。我们当代就有一些不错的范例可以吹嘘一番。而两个世纪前发生的一系列刺杀案则非常出色。显然，我专门提到的就是那五个杰作——奥兰治亲王威廉一世^[19] 刺杀案，法国亨利四世^[20] 刺杀案，白金汉公爵^[21] 刺杀案（大英博物馆的埃利斯先生已发表的信中有精彩的案件描述），古斯塔夫·阿道夫二世^[22] 刺杀案，以及华伦斯坦^[23] 刺杀案。马上就会有很多作家质疑说瑞典国王不是遇刺身亡的，其中就包括哈德^[24]。他是死于谋杀。我认为他的案例是独一无二的杰作，因为他是中午在战场上被谋害，这一点极具原创性，据我所知是其他艺术作品都没有的。是的，所有的这些刺杀案可供高级鉴赏家们研究，是颇有价值的。它们全都是范本，可以说：

Nocturnâ versatâ manu, versate diurne;

翻起书来，日夜兼程。

nocturnâ.（夜晚）尤甚。

这些王公政客遭刺杀，没什么好惊奇的。他们只有死了才会发生重大变化。因为他们身份显赫，所以对恰好迷恋事件效果的艺术家来说，正中下怀。但从17世纪早期就流行的另一种刺杀类型着实让我感到惊讶。我是指哲学家的遇刺案。因为，先生们，实际上在过去两个世纪中，所有杰出的哲学家们要么被谋害，要么至少几近遇害。因此，如果某人自称是哲学家，但却从未被打过谋杀的主意，放心，那他肯定胸无点墨。尤其是洛克^[25]的哲学理论。我认为，否定它的不争事实（如果还需要的话）是，尽管他带着喉咙行走于世七十二年，却从未有人屈尊去切断它。鉴于这些哲学家的谋杀案不太为人所知，而从细节看，它们都很好，构思也不错，那么我就在此附带来讨论一下这方面的案例，主要是为了展现我自己的学识。

17世纪第一位伟大的哲学家（如果不算伽利略的话）是笛卡尔^[26]。如果说曾经有那么一个人差点儿，但没被谋害——就差一丁

点——那个人一定是他。巴耶 [27] 在他的《笛卡尔传》卷一第102页到103页里报告过此事。事情是这样的。1621年，笛卡尔约莫二十六岁的时候，他像往常一样四处旅行（他就像一只不安分的土狼）。他来到易北河 [28]，在格吕克施塔特或者汉堡乘船前往东弗吕斯兰。至于他有何贵干不得而知。也许只有他自己知道，因为一到埃姆登他就决定即刻驶往西弗吕斯兰。无法忍受行程的耽搁，他租了一条三桅帆船，由几个水手负责驾驶。船刚驶进海域，他就获得一个喜人的发现，那就是他把自己关进了一窝杀人犯中。贝耶先生写道，他很快就发现水手都是“恶棍”。先生们，不是我们这样的发烧友，是专业的。那时，他们的最大野心就是切断他的喉咙。因为故事实在太精彩无法删减，所以我就一字不差引述笛卡尔的法语传记：“笛卡尔先生只带了一个仆人，他们正用法语交谈。水手们以为他是外国商贩，不是骑士，断定他身上肯定带钱了。因而，他们做了一个毫不利于笛卡尔钱包的决定。海上的盗贼和森林里的是有区别的，后者因为没有风险，会放过过路人的性命。但是像笛卡尔这样的情况，海盗无法冒着被捕的风险把乘客放生到岸上去。笛卡尔先生的水手们绝不准备冒那样的风险。他们思忖着，这位来自远方的异客在本国又没熟人，万一他没出现，quand il viendrait à manquer（他应该是恰好失踪），也不会有人劳神来东问西问。”想想看，先生们，这些弗吕斯兰恶狗讨论一位哲学家的时候就像在讨论一桶朗姆酒。“他们说，他的性情非常温和且很有耐心，并且，他彬彬有礼，待他们也很客气，想必是初出茅庐的年轻人，所以他们断定解决他的性命应该是轻而易举的。他们毫不顾忌，就在他的面前讨论所有事宜，没想到除了和仆人交谈使用的语言之外，他还懂别的语言。他们的打算是：杀了他，抛尸大海，然后分赃。”

好了，继续讲故事。尽管面对巨大的恐慌，笛卡尔还是表现出了斗志，这让“反笛卡尔（主义）”的恶棍对他心生敬畏。“发现事情不是玩笑，”贝耶先生写道，“笛卡尔顷刻间跳将起来，正颜厉色。这些懦夫万万没想到，他开口说话，用的是他们的语言，威胁要就地刺穿他们所有人，如果他们胆敢对他有丁点不敬的话。”当然了，先生们，像云雀一样穿在笛卡尔之剑上，有这等荣幸太便宜这些一文不值的恶棍了。因此，我很高兴笛卡尔先生没有打劫绞刑架擅自处死威胁者。

尤其是，如果杀了船员，他就无法驾船回港。那样一来，他就得永生在南海航行，也许会被水手们误认为是驶向家乡的鬼船船长 [30]。 “笛卡尔先生展示的精神对这帮恶棍来说有魔法一般的效果。”他的传记作者写道，“突然的惊慌让他们茫然不知所措，忘记了自己的优势，而后他们如他所愿，平静地载着他抵达目的地。”

也许，先生们，你们幻想笛卡尔会像凯撒那样对可怜的船夫说：Caesarem vehis et fortunas ejus（尔载的是凯撒和他的财物），但他只需说：你们这些恶狗，不能杀我，因为你们载的是笛卡尔和他的哲学。这样也许就能有把握地阻止他们采取极端行动。某位德国皇帝也具备这种意识，一次有人让他远离连续炮击的路径以防不测，他回道：嘘！闭嘴。你听过有哪个炮弹炸死个皇帝的？皇帝我说不好，但是稍小的事就足以摧毁一位哲学家。接下来的这位欧洲伟大的哲学家就肯定是被谋杀的。这位就是斯宾诺莎。

我很清楚一般大家都说他死在床上，也许吧，不过就算死在床上，也是被谋杀的。这一点我要用一本题为《斯宾诺莎传》的书证明。此书于1731年在布鲁塞尔出版，作者是让·克罗鲁斯先生。传记里有些附加信息是来自斯宾诺莎一位朋友写的他生平的手稿，并未出版。斯宾诺莎死于1677年2月21日，刚过四十四岁，这本身就很可疑。让先生坦言，在他的传记手稿里，有个说法证明了这个结论：“他的死也并非完全正常。”生活在荷兰这样一个阴湿乏味的国家，一个水手的国度，想来他也本应沉迷格罗格酒 [31] 的，特别是当时刚发掘出来的潘趣酒 [32]。是的，他本可能是这样，但实际上并非如此。让先生称他：“是一个饮食上非常有节制的人。”尽管坊间流传，斯宾诺莎饮曼陀罗草汁 [33]，吸鸦片 [34]，但是这两样东西都没出现在药剂师的账单上。所以，既然他活得这么清醒节制，怎么可能四十四岁就自然死亡了？听听传记作家是怎么说的：“2月21号的周日早晨，还没到做礼拜的时间，斯宾诺莎下楼和房东夫妇交谈。”所以，这个时候，可能是周日早上10点，你看斯宾诺莎还是活着的，而且身体相当好。但是似乎“他已从阿姆斯特丹叫了某位医生过来”，传记作者写道，“要不是L.M.这两个字母，我也没注意到他”。经这位L.M.指导，住在此处的人去买来一只老公鸡，然后立刻炖了，这样斯宾诺莎中午就能喝上一点鸡汤。事实上，他确实喝了，胃口不错，还吃了点老公鸡的肉。这发生在房东夫妇从教堂回来之后。

“下午，L.M.单独和斯宾诺莎待在一起，屋里其他人都回教堂去了。他们一出教堂，就得知斯宾诺莎约在下午3点去世，很是吃惊。去世时，L.M.在场。当天夜晚，L.M.就连夜乘船返回阿姆斯特丹了，对死者一点也不在乎。毫无疑问，他早想好了要免去那些道德义务，因为他把斯宾诺莎的一达克通 [35] 和少量的银币，连同一把银柄匕首全部据为己有，然后带着赃物潜逃了。”到这儿，先生们，你们就明

白，谋杀及其方式都是很清晰的。是L.M.为了钱财杀害了斯宾诺莎。可怜的斯宾诺莎，瘦弱多病。因为现场没有血迹，所以L.M.肯定是将他推倒在床，然后用枕头闷死的。可怜他已经被该死的老公鸡汤噎得半死了。但，L.M.是谁？肯定不可能是林德利·穆雷。1825年我还在约克见过他。而且，我不相信他会干出这种事，至少不会对一位语法家同仁下手。因为大家都知道，斯宾诺莎写了一本非常好的希伯来语语法书。

可为什么或者是根据什么原则，霍布斯没被谋杀？我从来也没想明白。这是17世纪职业人士的重大失误。因为除了瘦得皮包骨头，无论从哪方面看，他都是个优质的谋杀对象。因为我能证明他有钱，而且（非常好笑的是）他无权做出任何反抗。因为，根据他的理论，专制政权产生至高无上的权力，因此当一支具备充足战斗力的军队似乎要杀你的时候，你要是拒绝被杀，就是对政权最大的反叛，罪大恶极。但是，先生们，尽管他没被谋杀，我很高兴地向你们保证（据他自己的描述），他有三次差点被害了。第一次是在1640年的春天。他自称，当时他有一小本手稿在流传，代表君主对抗国会。顺便说一句，他不可能印制这本手稿。但是他说“要是陛下（5月份）还不解散国会的话”，“他的性命就会有危险。”然而，解散国会是没用的。因为同年11月，长期国会成立，霍布斯又一次害怕被谋杀，于是逃去了法国。这看上去就像约翰·丹尼斯的疯狂想法。他认为除非法国将他交于西班牙让其实施报复，不然路易十四不可能和安妮女王和解。而实际上，他就是带着这种想法逃离了海岸。在法国，十年来，霍布斯努力地照看好自己的脖子，效果相当不错。但最后的阶段，为了向克伦威尔示好，他发表了《利维坦》。现在，这个老儒夫开始第三次极度“惊慌”。他幻想着骑士们的剑不断地出现在他的喉咙上，脑海里浮现它们是怎么伺候海牙和马德里的国会大使的。那时，他用蹩脚的拉丁语说：

Tum venit in mentem mihi Dorislaus et Ascham;

Tanquam proscripto terror ubique aderat.

（那时多里斯劳斯和阿斯克姆出现在我的脑海里，

就像被判死刑的人眼里到处都是恐惧。）

因此他逃回英格兰老家去了。当然了，写《利维坦》的人确实应该被棒打一顿，而把五音步结尾写得这么拙劣的应该被打两顿或三顿——“terror ubique aderat”^[36]。可是从未有人想过对他用点棒刑之外的惩罚。而且，事实上，整个故事都是他的自我吹嘘。因为在写给

一位渊博之人（数学家瓦里斯）的一封极具诽谤意味的信中，他给了另外一种颇为不同的说法，他说，他逃回家“是因为他无法将自己的安危托付给法国教会”，言下之意，他可能因为信仰的问题被谋害。这可真是个大笑话 [37]——汤姆会因宗教问题被判刑。

不管是不是自我吹嘘，可以确定的是，霍布斯至死都在担心有人会谋害他。这点，我接下来要讲的故事可以证明。这个故事不是出自某个未出版的手稿，而是（如科勒律治所言）出自和手稿一样好的一本完全被遗忘的书，即《探究霍布斯先生的信仰，一场他与神学学生的讨论》（出版于霍布斯去世十年前）。书是匿名出版的，但是是丁尼生写的，就是那位三十年后，接替迪罗生成为坎特伯雷大主教的丁尼生。书以一则逸事开头：“某位牧师（无疑是丁尼生本人）似乎每年都会花一个月的时间去岛上四处走走。”一次远足（1670年），他来到德贝郡的匹克区，部分原因是读了霍布斯的描述。到了那一带，就不能不去邻近的巴克斯顿看看。就在他刚抵巴克斯顿之时，幸运如他，正好有一群绅士在客栈门口下马，其中一位身形瘦长，正是霍布斯本人。他可能刚从查茨沃斯骑马过来。对于一位寻觅美景的游客来说，偶遇如此伟大的名人，他能做的至少是上前叨扰。他的计划受到了命运眷顾，霍布斯先生的两个同伴突然收到差遣任务被叫走了，所以在巴克斯顿的剩余时光里，利维坦完全属于他，晚上他有幸和他一起痛饮。霍布斯一开始似乎表现得很僵硬，因为他对神学家总是有所畏惧。但这个顾虑逐渐消失，他变得友善风趣起来，之后他们决定一同入浴。丁尼生怎么敢和利维坦 [38] 在同一片水域里嬉戏？我无法解释。然而就是这样。尽管霍布斯已寿比南山，但他们在水中四处嬉戏，宛若两尾海豚。而且“在游泳停下来和再扎入水中的间歇里（也就是潜入水中），他们讨论了很多‘古人沐浴’以及‘溪水之源’的问题”。就这样，一小时过去后，他们出浴了。擦干身体更衣后，他们坐下，满怀期待地等着这种地方会提供的晚餐，计划像《哲人之宴》里写的那样恢复精气神，宁愿多想，不多饮。然而，他们纯真的愿望被一阵骚动打破了。屋里有几个粗人发生了短暂的口角。尽管离那几个人尚有一段距离，但霍布斯似乎特别关注此事。那么，先生们，他为什么关注呢？不错，你会想，从对和平与和谐抱有仁慈而无私的爱看来，那确实是值得一位老人和哲学家关注的。但是，听着：“不一会儿他就不安起来，但他说了一两遍赛克斯图斯·罗修斯晚饭后是怎么在帕拉西那的浴池附近被谋杀的，声音很低很小心，像是在自言自语。”霍布斯怕成这样，刚好可以用西塞罗的话概括。西塞罗对伊壁鸠鲁这位无神论者这样评价：所有人中就属他最害怕自己批判的事物——死亡和上帝。仅仅因为是晚饭时间，在浴池附近，霍布斯就一定会走上赛克斯图斯·罗修斯的老路。这是什么逻辑？除非他老想着被谋杀。这时的利维坦，不再害怕英国骑士的短剑或者法国教会，而是在酒馆里，被德贝郡几个老实巴交的庄稼汉的争吵“吓得失了分寸”。不

过，他自己形容枯槁，老得看起来有几百岁了，可能也会把人家吓得魂飞魄散吧。

马勒伯朗士是被谋杀的。他的故事将给你们带去欢乐。杀他的人很有名，就是伯克利主教。故事大家都熟悉，不过至今还没得到正确理解。伯克利年轻的时候，去巴黎拜访皮埃尔·马勒伯朗士。到了他修道院的房间发现他正在做饭。厨师向来是genus irritabile（脾气暴躁的物种），作家更是如此，而马勒伯朗士身兼这两种角色。他们争吵起来。老神父本来就激动，现在更激动了。厨师的火气加上哲学家的愤怒让他大动肝火：他卧床不起，然后就死了。这是大家熟知的版本，“所以说整个丹麦都被谎言欺辱了”。实际上，出于对伯克利的保护，实情被隐瞒了，因为（正如教皇所言）伯克利是天下最有德之人。否则广为人知的就是这个版本了：伯克利被法国老头的暴躁激怒了，摆开架势，接着就是一场搏斗。马勒伯朗士第一轮便被打倒在地，彻底消除了自负，他也许已经投降了。但是伯克利此时血脉偾张，他坚持要求法国老头收回偶因论学说 [39]。老头太过虚荣拒绝收回。他可笑的固执，加上爱尔兰青年的冲动，最终葬送了自己的性命。

莱布尼茨各方面都在马勒伯朗士之上，所以你可能更有理由指望他被谋杀，但，事实并非如此。我认为，他被这种忽视激怒了，安全度日令他感到耻辱。不然我无法解释他晚年的行为。他下决心，要变得非常贪婪，决定在自己家里囤一大笔金子。他死在了维也纳。他对自己喉咙的安危感到无比焦虑，至今描述他这一焦虑的信件还在。尽管无比焦虑，可他的野心——那种至少也得有人试图加害他的野心——如此之大，导致他不愿放弃危险。来自伯明翰，爱卖弄学问的已故英国教师——帕尔博士 [40]，在同样的情形下，采取了更自私的路线。他囤了数目相当可观的金银餐具，一度存放在他牧师住宅的卧室里。但是他对谋杀的担忧日渐增长，他清楚自己无法忍受这种忧虑（对此，他的确从未有过一丝夸大），就把所有的金银餐具都转移到哈顿的铁匠那里。毫无疑问，他想的是，杀死一个铁匠对于Salus reipublicae（共和政体的安全）打击要比杀老师轻。但我听说这种说法存在很大的争议。似乎现在普遍认为，一个优质马掌的价格值2.25个斯佩尔布道 [41]。

莱布尼茨纵然不是被杀身亡，但可以说他的死，部分源自对谋杀的恐惧，部分是因为没被谋杀恼怒所致。可康德在这方面又没啥野心，却差点死在谋杀者的手里，比上文提到的除笛卡尔之外的任何人都更惊险。真是造化弄人！这个案例，我想，在一本这位伟人的匿名传记中有所记载。为了健康，康德逼自己每天沿着一条大道一气走上六英里。一个因私意欲谋杀的人得知了此事。他在距哥尼斯堡三英里处，等待像邮车一样准时出现的“猎物”。要不是意外发生，康德必

死。不巧，杀手看到路上有个正在玩耍的小孩。出于“道德”的考虑，比起老先验主义者，他更想杀小孩，所以小孩被杀了，康德得以逃脱。这是德国人对此事的描述。但依我看，杀手是个谋杀发烧友，他觉得杀一个形容枯槁面若死灰的老形而上学家，对谋杀的审美事业贡献不大，而且也没有展示的空间，因为康德死了也不会比活着更像干尸。

先生们，至此，我追踪了哲学与我们这门艺术的关系。不觉我已信步走进了我们这个时代。我不用费劲解释它跟之前年代之间的区别，因为实际上这个时代的作品并无鲜明的特征。17世纪、18世纪，以及有很多作品我们还没赏析的19世纪，共同构成了谋杀的黄金时代。毫无疑问，17世纪最好的谋杀作品是埃德蒙贝里·戈弗雷爵士被害案，我完全赞同。同时，我们必须看到，本世纪的谋杀作品数量不多，至少本国艺术家的作品不多。也许是因为我们缺少开明有识的赞助人。Sint Mæcenates, non deerunt, Flacce, Marones (愿我们有很多梅塞纳斯 [42]，那么就不会缺少贺拉斯 [43]、维吉尔 [44] 这样的诗人)。参看葛兰特的《对死亡率表的观察》(第四版，牛津，1665)，我发现17世纪某二十年间死于伦敦的229250人中，只有86个是死于谋杀，即，每年约为4.3个人。先生们，要成立一个学会，这点数字是少了。当然，数量不多的时候，我们就可以期待质量一流。也许这个世纪的谋杀案质量是一流，但我仍然认为17世纪最好的艺术家是无法与18世纪最好的艺术家相提并论的。比如，不管埃德蒙贝里·戈弗雷爵士的案子多令人赞叹(没有人能比我更清楚它好在哪里)，我仍然认为它不能与布里斯托的拉斯康贝夫人谋杀案媲美，不管是构思的原创性，还是风格的大胆和涵盖的广度。这位好夫人的谋杀案发生在乔治三世早期。总的来说乔治三世的统治对艺术发展非常有利。她住在学院绿地，家中只有一个女仆。主仆二人除了从我正在记录的这位伟大艺术家的手艺所收获的，再没有什么是值得让历史注意的。某个晴朗的早晨，整个布里斯托城一片生机盎然。可疑的情况发生了，邻居们闯入拉斯康贝夫人的房屋，发现她被杀害在床，女仆被杀死在楼梯上。这可是中午，而且不到两小时前，还有人看到主仆二人还活着。我如果没记错的话，这事发生在1764年，而今六十多年的时光已消逝，可作案的艺术家仍不知姓甚名谁。后世对于嫌疑犯的猜测落在了两个冒牌货身上：一个面包师和一个扫烟囱的。但他们错了。经验不足的艺术家的不可能有这么大胆的构思，把谋杀时间设在中午，地点还选在了一座大城市的中心地段。先生们，这件作品肯定不是由默默无闻的面包师或者无名的扫烟囱的完成的，这点确信无疑。我知道是谁(这时现场的人们纷纷交头接耳低声讨论，最终大家爆发出一阵掌声，演讲人脸红了，然后一本正经继续讲)。天哪，先生

们，不要误会，不是我做的。我还没自负到以为自己可以取得这样的成就。你们是大大高估了我贫瘠的才华。拉斯康贝夫人的谋杀远超出我有限的能力。不过，我是从一位著名的外科医生那里了解到艺术家的身份的，他参与解剖了他的尸体。这位医生拥有一座私人医学博物馆，在其中一角有一具人体模型，是一个身材比例非常好的男性。

“那具骨骼，”外科医生说，“是著名的兰开夏郡公路大盗的。他有一段时期成功向邻居隐瞒了自己的职业，把羊毛长筒袜套在马腿上，因为往马厩去的巷子里铺的是石板路面，这样就能消掉马走在上面必然会发出的嗒嗒声。他因抢劫被处决的时候，我正在克鲁克山手下学习。盗贼的身材出奇地好，所以刻不容缓，必须要立刻拿到他的尸体，没有多余的金钱和精力浪费在耽搁上。在代理郡长的默许下，刽子手在法定的时间内将他砍倒在地，然后立刻装进四匹马拉的轻便马车，所以当他到达克鲁克山的解剖室的时候，还没死透。当时有个叫某某先生的年轻学生，有幸给了他最后一击，完成了法律的判决。”这段不同寻常的逸事对我震动很大。它似乎暗示了，解剖室里所有的男士们都是我们这种谋杀发烧友。一天，我跟一位兰开夏郡的女士复述此事，她当即告诉我，她就住在那个大家附近，她清楚地记得两件事，这两件事让邻居们认定他就是杀死拉斯康贝夫人的凶手。一是，在谋杀发生前后，他整整消失了两周。二是，谋杀发生之后，很快盗贼家附近到处是五先令硬币。大家都知道拉斯康贝夫人围了两千枚那种硬币。但无论艺术家是谁，这个谋杀案都是展示其天赋的不朽丰碑。这例谋杀案所展现的想象力，让人们一直感到敬畏和震撼，所以直到那时（我听说的时候是1810年），仍没人敢租拉斯康贝夫人的房子。

不过，在我赞颂拉斯康贝案的同时，也不要让别人误会，说我忽略了分布于这一世纪不同时期的其他杰作。但像布兰德小姐的创作，或是唐奈伦上尉谋杀西奥菲勒斯·鲍顿这样的作品，我确实永远也不会认同的。我鄙视这些下毒的人。他们就不能继续沿用割喉这种古老诚实的办法吗？不要从意大利引进这么糟糕的新方法。我认为，跟正统的做法比，所有的毒杀案都显得拙劣，效果堪比雕塑旁边的蜡像或者摆在精致的沃尔帕托雕刻品旁边的平版印刷品。不过，尽管这些作品不值得玩味，但还是有很多风格纯正的优秀作品的，凡公正的鉴赏家都会承认，所以有这样的风格也不必觉得丢人。注意，我说的是，公正。因为人们必须要充分考虑这些案子的难处，没有哪位艺术家能确定可以顺利完成预先精心的构思。中间会出各种状况。人们不会乖乖地任由自己被切断喉咙的。他们会逃，会踢，会咬。当肖像画家时不时总要抱怨模特太没生气的时候，对我们这行的艺术家而言，总的来说，难的地方恰恰在于模特太有生气。而且，不管艺术家本人多不顺心，谋杀过程中往往让模特兴奋的做法，对这个世界来说绝对是它的

一个优点。我们不该忽视这个优点，因为它会促进潜能的发展。杰里米·泰勒就满是赞赏地注意到，人在恐惧的作用下会跳得特别远。最近艾姆金德兄弟的作品中就有一个引人注目的例子。男仆情急之下跳过的高度，他这辈子到死也再不可能跳过去了。而且，顶尖的重拳手，他们天分的发展有时就是受到这种常伴我们艺术家的恐慌的刺激。实际上对于所有运动项目的顶尖选手来说皆是如此。否则，他们的才华就会被埋没，锋芒被遮蔽，不为人知，亦不自知。我想起一个有趣的例证，是我在德国听说的一个案例。

某天，我骑马走在慕尼黑一带，追上了我们协会一个著名发烧友，名字我就不说了。这位先生告诉我，他已厌倦了这种索然无味的发烧友娱乐方式（按照他的说法）。所以他就离开英格兰前往欧洲大陆，想稍试身手。为此他选择了德国，他以为在整个欧洲此地的警察最笨重呆滞。他的从业处女秀创作于曼海姆。因为知道我是同道中人，他也未加掩饰，就把首次历险和盘托出。他说：“我对面住着一个面包师。他为人相当吝啬，所以基本上独自生活。不知是因为他那张沾着面粉的大脸，还是其他原因，我也不清楚，但我就是‘迷’他，决定拿他的咽喉开张，而他总是敞着脖子，这点非常刺激我的欲望。我观察到，他每晚八点整准时关上所有的窗户。一天夜晚，我见他在关窗户，迅速随他进屋，锁上门，然后非常温文尔雅地对他说话，让他熟悉我此行的目的，同时也建议他不要做任何反抗，不然双方都不会愉快。说着，我掏出了工具，准备开始动手。我刚开口表明来意的时候，面包师像僵硬症发作一动不动。这时，他回过神来，狂躁不安。‘我不要被杀死！’他大声尖叫道，‘我为什么要失去宝贵的生命？’‘为什么？’我说，‘如果不为别的，就是为这个，你在面包里加了明矾。但不管有没有明矾（因为我决定先发制人不给他反驳的机会），你要知道，我是谋杀艺术的鉴赏家，我渴望在细节上提升自己，你粗大的咽喉让我迷恋，我决定一定要享受一番。’‘是吗？’他说，‘但我看你先享受下别的服务吧。’说着，他摆出了拳击的姿势。他居然有搏击的想法，这让我觉得很荒唐。不错，伦敦有个面包师在拳坛赫赫有名，人称筋斗大师，可人家年轻体健。而这人本身就像一大床丑陋的羽毛床垫，五十岁了，身体完全不行。但，尽管如此，跟我这种拳击高手打的时候，他拼死防守，有很多次我都害怕他会反败为胜，然后我这个谋杀发烧友，反可能会被一个无赖的面包师杀了。情况十分危急！心思细腻的人会感受我当时的焦虑。有多严峻呢？这么说吧，前十三回合，面包师是占上风的。第十四回合，我右眼挨了一拳，合上了。我认为，最终是这一拳救了我，因为它大大激怒了我，所以这一回合以及随后的三个回合，我都把面包师打倒在地。”

“第十八回合。面包师打上来，虚弱地哼唧了一声，明显疲惫不堪。前四回合被打趴下对他没有好处。不过，当我向他面若死灰的大

脸发送拳头的时候，他还是展现了某些阻击的技巧。我出拳的时候，脚打滑，摔倒了。

“第十九回合。我仔细打量面包师，心想自己居然被这么一大块不成形的面团扰乱这么久，真是可耻。于是我出击猛烈了起来，给了他重重的几拳。出现逆转，双方均被击倒，面包师次数更多，对发烧友比分为10：3。

“第二十回合。面包师跳了起来，惊人地敏捷。考虑到他浑身汗湿，腿部运用得的确一流，打得也精彩。但是他的光芒已不再，打比赛不过是惊恐使然。现在他明显不可能坚持多久了。本回合中，我们尝试了移动闪躲技巧，我大大占了上风，不断地击中他的鼻子。我这么打的原因是，他的鼻子长满了疖子，我想我这么随便地动他的鼻子，他应该会很恼火，结果正如所料。

“接下来三个回合，筋斗大师踉跄得就像冰上行走的奶牛。眼见胜负已分，第二十四回合时，我在他耳边小声嘀咕几句，他随即倒下。我说的不过是我对他这条命还能值多少年金的个人看法罢了。这个小小的亲密私语大大影响了他。他脸上的汗凝住了，接下来的两个回合，任我处置。而当我宣布第二十七回合时间已到的时候，他直挺挺地躺在地上像根木头。”

发烧友说完后，我对他说：“可以推断你应该完成了你的目标。”“你说的没错，”他和善地说，“我完成了，而且很满足。你要知道，对我来说，这种方式是一石二鸟。”也就是说他既拳打了面包师，又杀了他。可是，不管怎样，我是不明白的。因为，在我看来，正相反，他似乎是一鸟二石，先不得不用拳头去除他的自负，然后再用工具杀他。但也无所谓他的逻辑了。他的故事的寓意是好的，因为其证明了，只要对被谋杀的情景进行合理的想象，就可以激发出惊人的潜能。在谋杀的刺激下，曼海姆一个肥胖笨拙、身体半僵硬的面包师都能和技艺高超的英国拳击手大战二十六个回合。是谋杀者的出现和他和蔼可亲的态度，让面包师的天赋得到如此高的提升。

真的，先生们，大多数人谈到谋杀都是苛责的态度，所以听说了这样的事，也许，不再那么苛责就变成了大家的某种义务。听人们说，你会以为被人杀害是最不利、最不便的事，而对于没被害的人来说，这些都不存在。但审慎的人不这么看。“当然，”杰里米·泰勒说，“倒在粗暴的刀剑和斧头之下，比经受发烧的折磨来得痛快（他也许还加了造船工的木锤和铁撬棍）。”“比痛性尿淋漓的折磨好太多。”说得非常对。主教大人讲起话来像智者一般，也像个谋杀发烧友，他的确是。另一位伟大的哲人马可·奥勒留在这个问题上的见解也同样高于世俗的偏见。他声称，“理智最高贵的功能”之一“就是知道是否到了离开世界的时候”。没有哪种知识比此更珍贵，当然这种人必

定是非常博爱的物种，会无偿指导别人去了解这方面的知识，而自己却冒着不小的风险。不过，我抛出这些说法，是留给未来的道德家思考的。同时，我要发表我个人的看法，即很少有人杀人是基于博爱或者爱国的道义的，我要重申此前说过至少一次的话，即，多数杀人凶手都是不对的。

威廉姆斯的谋杀作品的高度和完整度都是史无前例的。我不允许自己随口聊几句他的作品就完事。要想详细讲解它们的优点，不花上一整个讲座，或者甚至一系列讲座，是不够的。但是他的案子有一处奇怪的地方，我要讲一下，因为那一点似乎暗示了，他的天才光芒太耀眼，让司法人员一时也难辨方向。你们一定都记得他创作第一个伟大作品（玛尔一家谋杀案）时使用的工具，是一把造船工的木锤和一把匕首。这把木锤属于一个瑞典老人，叫约翰·皮特森，木锤上有他名字的首字母。威廉姆斯把工具落在了玛尔家的屋里，后来落到了地方法官手中。注意，先生们，实际上首字母的细节一经公布，威廉姆斯就立刻被捕，而且，如果早公布的话，本来是可以阻止他完成第二件伟大作品（威廉姆森一家谋杀案）的，正好是十二天之后。然而地方法官把首字母的事向公众隐瞒了整整十二天，直至第二件作品完成。作品完成，他们公布名字，显然是因为觉得威廉姆斯的成就足以不朽，也已经证明他的荣誉也绝非偶然所得。

至于特尔泰先生的案件，我不知道要说什么。很显然我这个现任协会主席是非常尊重前任主席的。我承认他的讲座是很完美。但是，坦率地说，我认为作为艺术家，他最重要的表演真的被高估了。我承认一开始我自己也被大家的狂热带跑了。谋杀案公布的那个早晨，伦敦聚集了自威廉姆斯时代以来我认识的所有发烧友，有史以来最齐的一次。长期卧床的老鉴赏家们，动不动就脾气暴躁，嘲讽加抱怨说：“没事干。”现在他们都蹒跚下床来到我们俱乐部。这样的狂欢，大家这么良好地表达满足之情，我是很少目睹的。随处可见人们握着手，向彼此表示祝贺，相约晚上一聚。除了得意扬扬的疑问，听不见其他的话：“那么！这件如意吗？”“这件对了吗？”“你总算满意了吧？”但是，在这之中，我记得，当听到愤世嫉俗的老发烧友L.S.，laudator temporis acti（这位逝去时光的歌颂者），拖着他那条木腿进来的时候，大家都安静了下来。他像往常一样满脸怒色，一边走，一边嘴里不停地嘟哝，断断续续说了一路。“整个作品没有一个原创的点子，全都是剽窃，卑劣地抄袭我说的点子！而且，他的风格和阿布布莱希特·丢勒 [45] 的一样硬气，和菲斯利 [46] 的一样粗糙。”很多人以为他纯属嫉妒，就是普通的刻薄。但是我要说的是，当第一丝狂热退却，我发现大部分明智的评论家都认为特尔泰的风格中含有虚假的成分。实际上，因为他是我们俱乐部的成员，所以我们的评判自然会友好地偏袒他。再加上伦敦佬都熟悉他这个人，所以一时之间他受

到了整个伦敦的欢迎，但是这种欢迎是他的虚假无法长久维系的，因为 opinionum commenta delet dies, naturae judicia confirmat（时间会抹去人的意见，却会让真理的判定更清晰）。不过，特尔泰有一个未完成的计划，是要用一副哑铃 [47] 杀人。我非常钦佩他这个想法，但却只是一个他未竟的草稿。不过在我看来，再怎么样也比他的主要作品好。我记得一些发烧友对这样的草稿竟未能完成深表遗憾。这一点我是无法赞同的，因为对于原创艺术家来说，作品片段和开头大胆的构思往往都蕴含一种精妙，这种精妙通常会在处理细节时消失。

艾姆金德兄弟的作品在我看来远高于特尔泰被大肆吹嘘的表演，的确令人赞叹不已。实际上，它仿照了威廉姆斯不朽的杰作，就像《埃涅阿斯纪》仿照了《伊利亚特》。

不过，现在我要讲讲谋杀的原则，并非要规范你们的实际操作，而是要规范你们的赏析判断。老年妇女和看报纸的乌合之众，只要够血腥，对什么都满意。但这无法满足感知力敏锐的心灵。下面，让我们来讲一讲，一、哪类人适合成为谋杀对象；二、地点的选择；三、时间的选择，以及其他的小条件。

关于人的选择，我想很明显他应当是个好人。因为如果他不是好人，很可能他自己被杀的时候也正在盘算杀别人。而且，这种棋逢对手的争斗尽管足够有趣，最是激动人心，但真的不是评论家会允许自己称之为谋杀的东西。我可以举某些被杀死在漆黑巷子里的人的例子（我不说名字）。乍一看似乎没什么问题，但再细看案情，公众就注意到了，当时被害方自己是打算，轻则抢劫，重则杀掉凶手，前提是他自己够强壮。只要这种情况发生，或者人们这样想了，那这门艺术就得跟一切真诚的效果作别。因为谋杀这门艺术的最终目的与悲剧完全一致，用亚里士多德的话说，即，“通过唤起悲悯和畏惧来净化人心”。而现在，畏惧可能是有，但如果只是两恶相争死了一个，如何能有悲悯可言？

同样，选择的谋杀对象显然不应该是公众人物。比如，明智的艺术家都不会选择谋杀亚伯拉罕·纽伦。因为实际上，虽然大家都读过很多关于亚伯拉罕·纽伦的事，见过他的人却很少，以至于人们形成了一个固定的看法：他是一个抽象的概念。记得某次，我正好说到和亚伯拉罕·纽伦一起在一家咖啡馆吃饭，所有人都轻蔑地看着我，就好像我自称和祭司王约翰一起打过台球，或者和教皇决斗过。顺便提一句，教皇是非常不合适的谋杀人选，因为他作为基督教世界之父几乎无处不在，而且就像布谷鸟一样，人们如此频繁地听说，却从未真正见过，所以我怀疑大多数人也当他是抽象的概念。如果某个公众人物经常举办宴会，宴会上“满是时下的美味佳肴”，情况就会大为不同。

大家都确信他不是个抽象的概念，因此谋杀他也就没什么不合适，只不过他的谋杀就要被归类成刺杀。这方面，我尚未做讨论。

还有，所选的谋杀对象应当身体健康，因为谋杀病人是极其野蛮的行径。一般病人也不撑不了多久。因此，就不要选二十五岁以上的伦敦佬了，因为过了二十五岁，伦敦佬肯定都有胃病。如果非要去街道狭窄人口密集的伦敦寻找猎物，他应该一次起码杀掉两个人。万一选中的是个裁缝，他心里当然清楚，根据早就算好的等式，他得杀掉十八个裁缝 [48] 才算尽了本分。现在，考虑到病人需要慰藉，你们将在谋杀中看到一门艺术通常会取得的效果：感化人心。先生们，总的来说，世人是残忍的。他们想看到的谋杀不过是血浆喷涌的场面。只要花哨地展示这种场面对他们来说就足够了。但是有见识的鉴赏家可不行，他们的品味要高雅得多。和所有的人文教育一样，我们这门艺术，经过全面细致的研修后，也能增加同情心，使人更具人情味。千真万确，正如古语所说：

Ingenuas didicisse fideliter artes,

Emollit mores, nec sinit esse feros.

真正的人文教育使人举止高雅，

让人不再野蛮无情。

有位良友，因为博爱和一贯的善举而被熟知，他建议，选择的作案对象也应是那种家中有很多小孩完全靠他生活的人，以此来强化悲剧的效果。这的确是一个明智的提醒。但我不想过于强调这个条件。一丝不苟的好品味肯定会这样要求，不过，只要选中的人道德和健康方面无可厚非，我不想再去苛求这个条件，这样可能会缩小艺术家的选择范围。

谋杀对象就讲到这里。关于谋杀时间、地点和工具，我有很多要讲，但是今天暂时没有机会了。好的艺术直觉通常会指导从业者选择夜晚和隐蔽的地方，但也不乏背离这条原则却卓有成效的案例。在作案时间上，拉斯康贝夫人案是个漂亮的例外，我已经说过了。在作案时间和地点这两个方面，爱丁堡年报（1805年）上就有一个不错的例外，爱丁堡的儿童人人都知道此案，但不知何故，它在英格兰的谋杀迷中却被遗漏，没能获得应有的名声。我说的是一个银行搬运工的谋杀案，被害的时候，搬运工正在搬一袋钱，就在光天化日之下，一出高街的拐弯处，而此街是欧洲最有名的街道之一。凶手是谁到现在也不知道。

Sed fugit interea, fugit irreparabile tempus,

Singula dum capti circumvectamur amore.

但此时，时光飞逝，去而不返，

而我们，迷恋细节，徘徊不前。

那么，先生们，最后，让我再次严肃声明，我绝不是什么职业人士。除了1801年在一只公猫身上行凶之外，我此生再未有过任何杀戮。杀猫的结果和我的打算相去甚远。我本来只是想杀死他。“什么？我毕生只能做一名听众吗？”我说，“我永远不能把话讲出来吗？”在一个漆黑的夜晚，凌晨1点，我下楼找公猫，我满心歹意，肯定一脸谋杀者凶狠的模样。可当我找到他时，他正在偷袭食品储存室，里面有面包和其他东西。这就让事情发生了新的变化。在一个物资匮乏的时期，连基督徒们都只能吃马铃薯面包、米粉面包之类的东西，一只公猫居然这样浪费优质的小麦面包，这是十足的叛国。处死他立刻变成了一种应尽的爱国义务。当我高高举起并挥动闪闪发光的刀时，我幻想自己像布鲁图斯^[49]一样站起来，在一群爱国者中间格外耀眼。当我刺向他时，我

大声呼叫图利^[50]的名字，

向他的国父致以敬意！

从此，我就会有些杂念，像杀一头老母羊，或者杀一只不能再生蛋的老母鸡。这些“小鹿”们都被锁进我胸中的秘密里。至于这门艺术更高阶的知识范畴，坦白地说是完全不适合我的。我的野心没长那么大。没有，先生们，用贺拉斯的话说——

fungos vice cotis, ex cutum Reddere ere quæferrum valet, exsorsipsasecandi.

我就充当磨石的角色，它磨快铁器，自己却不能用于切割。

To The ediTor of Blackwood's Magazine

Sir,

We have all heard of a Society for the Promotion of Vice, of the Hell- Fire Club, &c. At Brighton I think it was that a Society was formed for the Suppression of Virtue. That Society was itself suppressed – but I am sorry to say that another exists in London, of a character still more atrocious. In tendency, it may be denominated a Society for the Encouragement of Murder; but, according to their own delicate εὐφημισμὸς[euphemism], it is styled – The Society of Connoisseurs in Murder. They profess to be curious in homicide; amateurs and dilettanti in the various modes of bloodshed; and, in short, Murder- Fanciers. Every fresh atrocity of that class, which the police annals of Europe bring up, they meet and criticise as they would a picture, statue, or other work of art. But I need not trouble myself with any attempt to describe the spirit of their proceedings, as you will collect that much better from one of the Monthly Lectures read before the Society last year. This has fallen into my hands accidentally, in spite of all the vigilance exercised to keep their transactions from the public eye. The publication of it will alarm them; and my purpose is that it should. For I would much rather put them down quietly, by an appeal to public opinion through you, than by such an exposure of names as would follow an appeal to Bow- street; which last appeal, however, if this should fail, I must positively resort to. For it is scandalous that such things should go on in a Christian land. Even in a heathen land, the public toleration of murder was felt by a Christian writer to be the most crying reproach of the public morals. This writer was Lactantius; and with his words, as singularly applicable to the present occasion, I shall conclude: – ‘Quid tam horribile,’ says he, ‘tam tetrum, quam hominis trucidatio? Ideo severissimis legibus vita nostra munitur; ideo bella execrabilia sunt. Invenit tamen consuetudo quatenus homicidium sine bello ac sine legibus faciat: et hoc sibi voluptas quod scelus vindicavit. Quod si interesse homicidio sceleris conscientia est, – et eidem facinori spectator obstrictus est cui et admissor; ergo et in his gladiatorum caedibus non minus cruore profunditur qui spectat, quam ille qui facit: nec potest esse immunis à sanguine qui voluit effundi; aut videri non interfecisse, qui interfectori et favit et proemium postulavit.' 'Human life,' says he, 'is guarded by laws of the uttermost rigour, yet custom has devised a mode of evading them in behalf of murder; and the demands of taste (voluptas) are now become the same as those of abandoned guilt.' Let the Society of Gentlemen Amateurs consider this; and let me call their especial attention to the last sentence, which is so weighty, that I shall attempt to convey it in English: – 'Now, if merely to be present at a murder fastens on a man the character of an accomplice, – if barely to be a spectator involves us in one common guilt with the perpetrator; it follows of necessity, that, in these murders of the amphitheatre, the hand which inflicts the fatal blow is not more deeply imbrued in blood than his who sits and looks on; neither can he be clear of blood who has countenanced its shedding; nor that man seem other than a participator in murder who gives his applause to the murderer, and calls for prizes in his behalf.' The 'proemia postulavit' ['call for prizes'] I have not yet heard charged upon the Gentlemen Amateurs of London, though undoubtedly their proceedings tend to that; but the 'interfectori favit' ['applause to the murderer'] is implied in the very title of this association, and expressed in every line of the lecture which I send you. – I am, &c.

(Note of the Editor . – We thank our correspondent for his communication, and also for the quotation from Lactantius, which is very pertinent to his view of the case; our own, we confess, is different. We cannot suppose the lecturer to be in earnest, any more than Erasmus in his Praise of Folly, or Dean Swift in his proposal for eating children. However, either on his view or on ours, it is equally fit that the lecture should be made public.)

Lecture

Gentlemen, – I have had the honour to be appointed by your committee to the trying task of reading the Williams' Lecture on Murder, considered as one of the Fine Arts – a task which might be easy enough three or four centuries ago, when the art was little understood, and few great models had been exhibited; but in this age, when masterpieces of excellence have been executed by professional men, it must be evident, that in the style of criticism applied to them, the public will look for something of a corresponding improvement. Practice and theory must advance pari passu ['with an equal step']. People begin to see that something more goes to the composition of a fine murder than two blockheads to kill and be killed – a knife – a purse – and a dark lane. Design, gentlemen, grouping, light and shade, poetry, sentiment, are now deemed indispensable to attempts of this nature. Mr Williams has exalted the ideal of murder to all of us; and to me, therefore, in particular, has deepened the arduousness of my task. Like Aeschylus or Milton in poetry, like Michael Angelo in painting, he has carried his art to a point of colossal sublimity; and, as Mr Wordsworth observes, has in a manner 'created the taste by which he is to be enjoyed.' To sketch the history of the art, and to examine its principles critically, now remains as a duty for the connoisseur, and for judges of quite another stamp from his Majesty's Judges of Assize.

Before I begin, let me say a word or two to certain prigs, who affect to speak of our society as if it were in some degree immoral in its tendency. Immoral! –God bless my soul, gentlemen, what is it that people mean? I am for morality, and always shall be, and for virtue and all that; and I do affirm, and always shall,(let what will come of it,) that murder is an improper line of conduct – highly improper; and I do not stick to assert, that any man who deals in murder, must have very incorrect ways of thinking, and truly inaccurate principles; and so far from aiding and abetting him by pointing out his victim's hiding- place, as a great moralist [\[1\]](#) of Germany declared it to be every good man's duty to do, I would subscribe one shilling and sixpence to have him apprehended, which is more by eighteen- pence than the most eminent moralists have subscribed for that purpose. But what then? Everything in this world has two handles. Murder, for instance, may be laid hold of by its moral handle, (as it generally is in the pulpit, and at the Old Bailey;) and that , I confess, is its weak side; or it may also be treated aesthetically , as the Germans call it, that is, in relation to good taste.

To illustrate this, I will urge the authority of three eminent persons, viz. S. T. Coleridge, Aristotle, and Mr Howship the surgeon. To begin with S.T.C. – One night, many years ago, I was drinking tea with him in Berners' Street, (which, by the way, for a short street, has been uncommonly fruitful in men of genius.) Others were there besides myself; and amidst some carnal considerations of tea and toast, we were all imbibing a dissertation on Plotinus from the attic lips of S.T.C. Suddenly a cry arose of 'Fire – fire !' –upon which all of us, master and disciples, Plato and οἱ περί τον Πλάτωνα [‘those around Plato’], rushed out, eager, for the spectacle. The fire was in Oxford Street, at a piano- forte maker's; and, as it promised to be a conflagration of merit, I was sorry that my engagements forced me away from Mr Coleridge's party before matters were come to a crisis. Some days after, meeting with my Platonic host, I reminded him of the case, and begged to know how that very promising exhibition had terminated. ‘Oh, sir,’ said he, ‘it turned out so ill, that we damned it unanimously.’ Now, does any man suppose that Mr Coleridge, –who, for all he is too fat to be a person of active virtue, is undoubtedly a worthy Christian, – that this good S.T.C., I say, was an incendiary, or capable of wishing any ill to the poor man and his piano- fortes (many of them, doubtless, with the additional keys)? On the contrary, I know him to be that sort of man that I durst stake my life upon it he would have worked an engine in a case of necessity, although rather of the fattest for such fiery trials of his virtue. But how stood the case? Virtue was in no request. On the arrival of the fire- engines, morality had devolved wholly on the insurance office. This being the case, he had a right to gratify his taste. He had left his tea. Was he to have nothing in return?

I contend that the most virtuous man, under the premises stated, was entitled to make a luxury of the fire, and to hiss it, as he would any other performance that raised expectations in the public mind, which afterwards it disappointed. Again, to cite another great authority, what says the Stagyrte? He (in the Fifth Book, I think it is, of his Metaphysics,) describes what he calls κλεπτήν τέλειον, i.e. a perfect thief ; and, as to Mr Howship, in a work of his on Indigestion, he makes no scruple to talk with admiration of a certain ulcer which he had seen, and which he styles ‘a beautiful ulcer.’ Now will any man pretend, that, abstractedly considered, a thief could appear to Aristotle a perfect character, or that Mr Howship could be enamoured of an ulcer? Aristotle, it is well known, was himself so very moral a character, that, not content with writing his Nichomachean Ethics, in one volume octavo, he also wrote another system, called Magna Moralia , or Big Ethics. Now, it is impossible that a man who composes any ethics at all, big or little, should admire a thief per se , and, as to Mr Howship, it is well known that he makes war upon all ulcers; and, without suffering himself to be seduced by their charms, endeavours to banish them from the county of Middlesex. But the truth is, that, however objectionable per se , yet, relatively to others of their class, both a thief and an ulcer may have infinite degrees of merit. They are both imperfections, it is true; but to be imperfect being their essence, the very greatness of their imperfection becomes their perfection. Spartam nactus es, hanc exorna ['Sparta is yours: adorn it!']. A thief like Autolycus or Mr Barrington, and a grim phagedaenic ulcer, superbly defined, and running regularly through all its natural stages, may no less justly be regarded as ideals after their kind, than the most faultless moss-rose amongst flowers, in its progress from bud to 'bright consummate flower;' or, amongst human flowers, the most magnificent young female, apparelled in the pomp of womanhood. And thus not only the ideal of an inkstand may be imagined, (as Mr Coleridge demonstrated in his celebrated correspondence with Mr Blackwood,) in which, by the way, there is not so much, because an inkstand is a laudable sort of thing, and a valuable member of society; but even imperfection itself may have its ideal or perfect state.

Really, gentlemen, I beg pardon for so much philosophy at one time, and now, let me apply it. When a murder is in the paulo- post-futurum tense, and a rumour of it comes to our ears, by all means let us treat it morally. But suppose it over and done, and that you can say of it, Τετέλεισται ['it is completed'] or (in that adamantine molossus of Medea) εἰργασται ['it is done']; Suppose the poor murdered man to be out of his pain, and the rascal that did it off like a shot, nobody knows whither; suppose, lastly, that we have done our best, by putting out our legs to trip up the fellow in his flight, but all to no purpose – 'abiit, evasit' ['he has left, escaped'], &c. – why, then, I say, what's the use of any more virtue? Enough has been given to morality; now comes the turn of Taste and the Fine Arts. A sad thing it was, no doubt, very sad; but we can't mend it. Therefore let us make the best of a bad matter; and, as it is impossible to hammer anything out of it for moral purposes, let us treat it aesthetically, and see if it will turn to account in that way. Such is the logic of a sensible man, and what follows? We dry up our tears, and have the satisfaction perhaps to discover, that a transaction, which, morally considered, was shocking, and without a leg to stand upon, when tried by principles of Taste, turns out to be a very meritorious performance. Thus all the world is pleased; the old proverb is justified, that it is an ill wind which blows nobody good; the amateur, from looking bilious and sulky, by too close an attention to virtue, begins to pick up his crumbs, and general hilarity prevails. Virtue has had her day; and henceforward, Vertu and Connoisseurship have leave to provide for themselves. Upon this principle, gentlemen, I propose to guide your studies, from Cain to Mr Thurtell. Through this great gallery of murder, therefore, together let us wander hand in hand, in delighted admiration, while I endeavour to point your attention to the objects of profitable criticism.

The first murder is familiar to you all. As the inventor of murder, and the father of the art, Cain must have been a man of first- rate genius. All the Cains were men of genius. Tubal Cain invented tubes, I think, or some such thing. But, whatever were the originality and genius of the artist, every art was then in its infancy; and the works must be criticised with a recollection of that fact. Even Tubal's work would probably be little approved at this day in Sheffield; and therefore of Cain (Cain senior, I mean,) it is no disparagement to say, that his performance was but so so. Milton, however, is supposed to have thought differently. By his way of relating the case, it should seem to have been rather a pet murder with him, for he retouches it with an apparent anxiety for its picturesque effect: –

Whereat he inly raged; and, as they talk'd,

Smote him into the midriff with a stone

That beat out life: he fell; and, deadly pale,

Groan'd out his soul with gushing blood effus'd.

Par. Lost, B. XI.

Upon this, Richardson the painter, who had an eye for effect, remarks as follows, in his Notes on Paradise Lost, p. 497: – ‘It has been thought,’ says he, ‘that Cain beat (as the common saying is,) the breath out of his brother's body with a great stone; Milton gives in to this, with the addition, however, of a large wound.' In this place it was a judicious addition; for the rudeness of the weapon, unless raised and enriched by a warm, sanguinary colouring, has too much of the naked air of the savage school; as if the deed were perpetrated by a Polypheme without science, premeditation, or anything but a mutton bone. However, I am chiefly pleased with the improvement, as it implies that Milton was an amateur. As to Shakspeare, there never was a better; as his description of the murdered Duke of Gloucester, in Henry VI., of Duncan's, Banquo's, &c. sufficiently proves.

The foundation of the art having been once laid, it is pitiable to see how it slumbered without improvement for ages. In fact, I shall now be obliged to leap over all murders, sacred and profane, as utterly unworthy of notice, until long after the Christian era. Greece, even in the age of Pericles, produced no murder of the slightest merit; and Rome had too little originality of genius in any of the arts to succeed, where her model failed her. In fact, the Latin language sinks under the very idea of murder. 'The man was murdered;' – how will this sound in Latin? Interfectus est, interemptus est [he was killed, he was destroyed] –which simply expresses a homicide; and hence the Christian Latinity of the middle ages was obliged to introduce a new word, such as the feebleness of classic conceptions never ascended to. Murdratus est, says the sublimer dialect of Gothic ages. Meantime, the Jewish school of murder kept alive whatever was yet known in the art, and gradually transferred it to the Western World. Indeed the Jewish school was always respectable, even in the dark ages, as the case of Hugh of Lincoln shows, which was honoured with the approbation of Chaucer, on occasion of another performance from the same school, which he puts into the mouth of the Lady Abbess.

Recurring, however, for one moment to classical antiquity, I cannot but think that Catiline, Clodius, and some of that coterie, would have made first- rate artists; and it is on all accounts to be regretted, that the priggism of Cicero robbed his country of the only chance she had for distinction in this line. As the sub-ject of a murder, no person could have answered better than himself. Lord! how he would have howled with panic, if he had heard Cethegus under his bed. It would have been truly diverting to have listened to him; and satisfied I am, gentlemen, that he would have preferred the utile [expediency] of creeping into a closet, or even into a cloaca [sewer], to the honestum [honourable thing] of facing the bold artist.

To come now to the dark ages – (by which we, that speak with precision, mean, par excellence, the tenth century, and the times immediately before and after) – these ages ought naturally to be favourable to the art of murder, as they were to church-architecture, to stained- glass, &c.; and, accordingly, about the latter end of this period, there arose a great character in our art, I mean the Old Man of the Mountains. He was a shining light, indeed, and I need not tell you, that the very word ‘assassin’ is deduced from him. So keen an amateur was he, that on one occasion, when his own life was attempted by a favourite assassin, he was so much pleased with the talent shown, that notwithstanding the failure of the artist, he created him a Duke upon the spot, with remainder to the female line, and settled a pension on him for three lives. Assassination is a branch of the art which demands a separate notice; and I shall devote an entire lecture to it. Meantime, I shall only observe how odd it is, that this branch of the art has flourished by fits. It never rains, but it pours. Our own age can boast of some fine specimens; and, about two centuries ago, there was a most brilliant constellation of murders in this class. I need hardly say, that I allude especially to those five splendid works, – the assassinations of William I. of Orange, of Henry IV. of France, of the Duke of Buckingham, (which you will find excellently described in the letters published by Mr Ellis, of the British Museum,) of Gustavus Adolphus, and of Wallenstein. The King of Sweden’s assassination, by the by, is doubted by many writers, Harte amongst others; but they are wrong. He was murdered; and I consider his murder unique in its excellence; for he was murdered at noon- day, and on the field of battle, – a feature of original conception, which occurs in no other work of art that I remember. Indeed, all of these assassinations may be studied with profit by the advanced connoisseur. They are all of them exemplaria, of which one may say, –

Nocturnâ versatâ manu, versate diurne;

[‘Let these be your models by day and by night’]

Especially nocturnâ.

In these assassinations of princes and statesmen, there is nothing to excite our wonder: important changes often depend on their deaths; and, from the eminence on which they stand, they are peculiarly exposed to the aim of every artist who happens to be possessed by the craving for scenical effect. But there is another class of assassinations, which has prevailed from an early period of the seventeenth century, that really does surprise me; I mean the assassination of philosophers. For, gentlemen, it is a fact, that every philosopher of eminence for the two last centuries has either been murdered, or, at the least, been very near it; insomuch, that if a man calls himself a philosopher, and never had his life attempted, rest assured there is nothing in him; and against Locke's philosophy in particular, I think it an unanswerable objection, (if we needed any) that, although he carried his throat about with him in this world for seventy- two years, no man ever condescended to cut it. As these cases of philosophers are not much known, and are generally good and well composed in their circumstances, I shall here read an excursus on that subject, chiefly by way of showing my own learning.

The first great philosopher of the seventeenth century (if we except Galileo,) was Des Cartes; and if ever one could say of a man that he was all but murdered – murdered within an inch, one must say it of him. The case was this, as reported by Baillet in his Vie De M. Des Cartes , tom. I. pp. 102– 3. In the year 1621, when Des Cartes might be about twenty- six years old, he was touring about as usual, (for he was as restless as a hyaena,) and, coming to the Elbe, either at Gluckstadt or at Hamburg, he took shipping for East Friezland: what he could want in East Friezland no man has ever discovered; and perhaps he took this into consideration himself; for, on reaching Embden, he resolved to sail instantly for West Friezland; and being very impatient of delay, he hired a bark, with a few mariners to navigate it. No sooner had he got out to sea than he made a pleasing discovery, viz. that he had shut himself up in a den of murderers. His crew, says M. Baillet, he soon found out to be ‘des scélérats,’ – not amateurs , gentlemen, as we are, but professional men – the height of whose ambition at that moment was to cut his throat. But the story is too pleasing to be abridged – I shall give it, therefore, accurately, from the French of his biographer: 'M. Des Cartes had no company but that of his servant, with whom he was conversing in French. The sailors, who took him for a foreign merchant, rather than a cavalier, concluded that he must have money about him. Accordingly they came to a resolution by no means advantageous to his purse. There is this difference, however, between sea- robbers and the robbers in forests, that the latter may, without hazard, spare the lives of their victims; whereas the other cannot put a passenger on shore in such a case without running the risk of being apprehended. The crew of M. Des Cartes arranged their measures with a view to evade any danger of that sort. They observed that he was a stranger from a distance, without acquaintance in the country, and that nobody would take any trouble to inquire about him, in case he should never come to hand, (quand il viendrait à man-quer .)' Think, gentlemen, of these Friezland dogs discussing a philosopher as if he were a puncheon of rum. 'His temper, they remarked, was very mild and patient; and, judging from the gentleness of his deportment, and the courtesy with which he treated themselves, that he could be nothing more than some green young man, they concluded that they should have all the easier task in disposing of his life. They made no scruple to discuss the whole matter in his presence, as not supposing that he understood any other language than that in which he conversed with his servant; and the amount of their deliberation was – to murder him, then to throw him into the sea, and to divide his spoils.'

Excuse my laughing, gentlemen, but the fact is, I always do laugh when I think of this case – two things about it seem so droll. One is, the horrid panic or 'funk,' (as the men of Eton call it,) in which Des Cartes must have found himself upon hearing this regular drama sketched for his own death – funeral – succession and administration to his effects. But another thing, which seems to me still more funny about this affair is, that if these Friezland hounds had been 'game,' we should have no Cartesian philosophy; and how we could have done without that, considering the worlds of books it has produced, I leave to any respectable trunk- maker to declare.

However, to go on; spite of his enormous funk, Des Cartes showed fight, and by that means awed these Anti- Cartesian rascals. 'Finding,' says M. Baillet, 'that the matter was no joke, M. Des Cartes leaped upon his feet in a trice, assumed a stern countenance that these cravens had never looked for, and addressing them in their own language, threatened to run them through on the spot if they dared to offer him any insult.' Certainly, gentlemen, this would have been an honour far above the merits of such inconsiderable rascals – to be spitted like larks upon a Cartesian sword; and therefore I am glad M. Des Cartes did not rob the gallows by executing his threat, especially as he could not possibly have brought his vessel to port, after he had murdered his crew; so that he must have continued to cruise for ever in the Zuyder Zee, and would probably have been mistaken by sailors for the Flying Dutchman, homeward-bound. 'The spirit which M. Des Cartes manifested,' says his biographer, 'had the effect of magic on these wretches. The suddenness of their consternation struck their minds with a confusion which blinded them to their advantage, and they conveyed him to his destination as peaceably as he could desire.'

Possibly, gentlemen, you may fancy that, on the model of Caesar's address to his poor ferryman, – 'Cae-sarem vehis et fortunas ejus,' ['You carry Caesar and his fortunes'] – M. Des Cartes needed only to have said, – 'Dogs, you cannot cut my throat, for you carry Des Cartes and his philosophy,' and might safely have defied them to do their worst. A German emperor had the same notion, when, being cautioned to keep out of the way of a cannonading, he replied, 'Tut! man. Did you ever hear of a cannon- ball that killed an emperor?' As to an emperor I cannot say, but a less thing has sufficed to smash a philosopher; and the next great philosopher of Europe undoubtedly was murdered. This was Spinoza.

I know very well the common opinion about him is, that he died in his bed. Perhaps he did, but he was murdered for all that; and this I shall prove by a book published at Brussels, in the year 1731, entitled, La Via de Spinoza; par M. Jean Colerus, with many additions, from a MS. life, by one of his friends. Spinoza died on the 21st February 1677, being then little more than forty- four years old. This of itself looks suspicious; and M. Jean admits, that a certain expression in the MS. life of him would warrant the conclusion, 'que sa mort n'a pas été tout- à- fait naturelle.' Living in a damp country, and a sailor's country, like Holland, he may be thought to have indulged a good deal in grog, especially in punch, [2] which was then newly discovered. Undoubtedly he might have done so; but the fact is that he did not. M. Jean calls him 'extrêmement sobre en son boire et en son manger.' And though some wild stories were afloat about his using the juice of mandragora (p. 140,) and opium, (p. 144,) yet neither of these articles appeared in his druggist's bill. Living, therefore, with such sobriety, how was it possible that he should die a natural death at forty- four? Hear his biographer's account: – 'Sunday morning the 21st of February, before it was church- time, Spinoza came down stairs and conversed with the master and mistress of the house.' At this time, therefore, perhaps ten o'clock on Sunday morning, you see that Spinoza was alive, and pretty well. But it seems 'he had summoned from Amsterdam a certain physician, whom,' says the biographer, 'I shall not otherwise point out to notice than by these two letters, L. M. This L. M. had directed the people of the house to purchase an ancient cock, and to have him boiled forthwith, in order that Spinoza might take some broth about noon, which in fact he did, and ate some of the old cock with a good appetite, after the landlord and his wife had returned from church.'

'In the afternoon, L. M. staid alone with Spinoza, the people of the house having returned to church; on coming out from which they learnt, with much surprise, that Spinoza had died about three o'clock, in the presence of L. M., who took his departure for Amsterdam the same evening, by the night- boat, without paying the least attention to the deceased. No doubt he was the readier to dispense with these duties, as he had possessed himself of a ducatoon and a small quantity of silver, together with a silver-hafted knife, and had absconded with his pillage.' Here you see, gentlemen, the murder is plain, and the manner of it. It was L. M. who murdered Spinoza for his money. Poor S. was an invalid, meagre, and weak: as no blood was observed, L. M., no doubt, threw him down and smothered him with pillows, –the poor man being already half suffocated by his infernal dinner. – But who was L. M.? It surely never could be Lindley Murray; for I saw him at York in 1825; and besides, I do not think he would do such a thing; at least, not to a brother grammarian: for you know, gentlemen, that Spinoza wrote a very respectable Hebrew grammar.

Hobbes, but why, or on what principle, I never could understand, was not murdered. This was a capital oversight of the professional men in the seventeenth century; because in every light he was a fine subject for murder, except, indeed, that he was lean and skinny; for I can prove that he had money, and (what is very funny,) he had no right to make the least resistance; for, according to himself, irresistible power creates the very highest species of right, so that it is rebellion of the blackest die to refuse to be murdered, when a competent force appears to murder you. However, gentlemen, though he was not murdered, I am happy to assure you that (by his own account,) he was three times very near being murdered. – The first time was in the spring of 1640, when he pretends to have circulated a little MS. on the king's behalf, against the Parliament; he never could produce this MS., by the by; but he says that, 'had not his Majesty dissolved the Parliament,' (in May,) 'it had brought him into danger of his life.' Dissolving the Parliament, however, was of no use; for, in November of the same year, the Long Parliament assembled, and Hobbes, a second time, fearing he should be murdered, ran away to France. This looks like the madness of John Dennis, who thought that Louis XIV. would never make peace with Queen Anne, unless he were given up to his vengeance; and actually ran away from the sea-coast in that belief. In France, Hobbes managed to take care of his throat pretty well for ten years; but at the end of that time, by way of paying court to Cromwell, he published his Leviathan. The old coward now began to 'funk' horribly for the third time; he fancied the swords of the cavaliers were constantly at his throat, recollecting how they had served the Parliament ambassadors at the Hague and Madrid. 'Tum,' says he, in his dog-Latin life of himself,

Tum venit in mentem mihi Dorislaus et Ascham;

Tanquam proscripto terror ubique aderat.

['Then I began thinking about Dorislaus and Ascham

Terror was all around, as for someone condemned to death']

And accordingly he ran home to England. Now, certainly, it is very true that a man deserved a cudgelling for writing Leviathan; and two or three cudgellings for writing a pentameter ending so villainously as – 'terror ubique aderat!' But no man ever thought him worthy of any thing beyond cudgelling. And, in fact, the whole story is a bounce of his own. For, in a most abusive letter which he wrote 'to a learned person,' (meaning Wallis the mathematician,) he gives quite another account of the matter, and says(p. 8.), he ran home 'because he would not trust his safety with the French clergy;' insinuating that he was likely to be murdered for his religion, which would have been a high joke indeed – Tom's being brought to the stake for religion.

Bounce or not bounce, however, certain it is, that Hobbes, to the end of his life, feared that somebody would murder him. This is proved by the story I am going to tell you: it is not from a manuscript, but, (as Mr Coleridge says), it is as good as manuscript; for it comes from a book now entirely forgotten, viz. – 'The Creed of Mr Hobbes Examined; in a Conference between him and a Student in Divinity,'(published about ten years before Hobbes's death.) The book is anonymous, but it was written by Tennison, the same who, about thirty years after, succeeded Tillotson as Archbishop of Canterbury. The introductory anecdote is as follows: – 'A certain divine, it seems, (no doubt Tennison himself,) took an annual tour of one month to different parts of the island. In one of these excursions (1670) he visited the Peak in Derbyshire, partly in consequence of Hobbes's description of it. Being in that neighbourhood, he could not but pay a visit to Buxton; and at the very moment of his arrival, he was fortunate enough to find a party of gentlemen dismounting at the inn door, amongst whom was a long thin fellow, who turned out to be no less a person than Mr Hobbes, who probably had ridden over from Chatsworth. Meeting so great a lion, – a tourist, in search of the picturesque, could do no less than present himself in the character of bore. And luckily for this scheme, two of Mr Hobbes's companions were suddenly summoned away by express; so that, for the rest of his stay at Buxton, he had Leviathan entirely to himself, and had the honour of bowsing with him in the evening. Hobbes, it seems, at first showed a good deal of stiffness, for he was shy of divines; but this wore off, and he became very sociable and funny, and they agreed to go into the bath together.' How Tennison could venture to gambol in the same water with Leviathan, I cannot explain; but so it was: they frolicked about like two dolphins, though Hobbes must have been as old as the hills; and 'in those intervals wherein they abstained from swimming and plunging themselves,' (i.e. diving) 'they discoursed of many things relating to the Baths of the Ancients, and the Origine of Springs. When they had in this manner passed away an hour, they stepped out of the bath; and, having dried and cloathed themselves, they sate down in expectation of such a supper as the place afforded; designing to refresh themselves like the Deipnos-ophilae, and rather to reason than to drink profoundly. But in this innocent intention they were interrupted by the disturbance arising from a little quarrel, in which some of the ruder people in the house were for a short time engaged. At this Mr Hobbes seemed much concerned, though he was at some distance from the persons.’ – And why was he concerned, gentlemen? No doubt you fancy, from some benign and disinterested love of peace and harmony, worthy of an old man and a philosopher. But listen – ‘For a while he was not composed, but related it once or twice as to himself, with a low and careful tone, how Sextus Roscius was murdered after supper by the Balneae Palatinae. Of such general extent is that remark of Cicero, in relation to Epicurus the Atheist, of whom he observed that he of all men dreaded most those things which he contemned – Death and the Gods.’ – Merely because it was supper-time, and in the neighbourhood of a bath, Mr Hobbes must have the fate of Sextus Roscius. What logic was there in this, unless to a man who was always dreaming of murder? – Here was Leviathan, no longer afraid of the daggers of English cavaliers or French clergy, but ‘frightened from his propriety’ by a row in an ale-house between some honest clod-hoppers of Derbyshire, whom his own gaunt scare-crow of a person that belonged to quite another century, would have frightened out of their wits.

Malebranche, it will give you pleasure to hear, was murdered. The man who murdered him is well known: it was Bishop Berkeley. The story is familiar, though hitherto not put in a proper light. Berkeley, when a young man, went to Paris and called on Père Malebranche. He found him in his cell cooking. Cooks have ever been a genus irritabile; authors still more so: Malebranche was both: a dispute arose; the old Father, warm already, became warmer; culinary and metaphysical irritations united to derange his liver: he took to his bed, and died. Such is the common version of the story: ‘So the whole ear of Denmark is abused.’ – The fact is, that the matter was hushed up, out of consideration for Berkeley, who (as Pope remarked) had ‘every virtue under heaven:’ else it was well known that Berkeley, feeling himself nettled by the waspishness of the old Frenchman, squared at him; a turn-up was the consequence:

Malebranche was floored in the first round; the conceit was wholly taken out of him; and he would perhaps have given in; but Berkeley's blood was now up, and he insisted on the old Frenchman's retracting his doctrine of Occasional Causes. The vanity of the man was too great for this; and he fell a sacrifice to the impetuosity of Irish youth, combined with his own absurd obstinacy.

Leibnitz, being every way superior to Malebranche, one might, a fortiori, have counted on his being murdered; which, however, was not the case. I believe he was nettled at this neglect, and felt himself insulted by the security in which he passed his days. In no other way can I explain his conduct at the latter end of his life, when he chose to grow very avaricious, and to hoard up large sums of gold, which he kept in his own house. This was at Vienna, where he died; and letters are still in existence, describing the immeasurable anxiety which he entertained for his throat. Still his ambition, for being attempted at least, was so great, that he would not forego the danger. A late English pedagogue, of Birmingham manufacture, viz. Dr Parr, took a more selfish course, under the same circumstances. He had amassed a considerable quantity of gold and silver plate, which was for some time deposited in his bedroom at his parsonage house, Hatton. But growing every day more afraid of being murdered, which he knew that he could not stand, (and to which, indeed, he never had the slightest pretension,) he transferred the whole to the Hatton blacksmith; conceiving, no doubt, that the murder of a blacksmith would fall more lightly on the salus reipublicae [the safety of the republic], than that of a pedagogue. But I have heard this greatly disputed; and it seems now generally agreed, that one good horse-shoe is worth about 2¼ Spital sermons.

As Leibnitz, though not murdered, may be said to have died, partly of the fear that he should be murdered, and partly of vexation that he was not, – Kant, on the other hand – who had no ambition in that way – had a narrower escape from a murderer than any man we read of, except Des Cartes. So absurdly does Fortune throw about her favours! The case is told, I think, in an anonymous life of this very great man. For health's sake, Kant imposed upon himself, at one time, a walk of six miles every day along a highroad. This fact becoming known to a man who had his private reasons for committing murder, at the third milestone from Königsberg, he waited for his 'intended,' who came up to time as duly as a mailcoach. But for an accident, Kant was a dead man. However, on considerations of 'morality,' it happened that the murderer preferred a little child, whom he saw playing in the road, to the old transcendentalist: this child he murdered; and thus it happened that Kant escaped. Such is the German account of the matter; but my opinion is – that the murderer was an amateur, who felt how little would be gained to the cause of good taste by murdering an old, arid, and adust metaphysician; there was no room for display, as the man could not possibly look more like a mummy when dead, than he had done alive.

Thus, gentlemen, I have traced the connexion between philosophy and our art, until insensibly I find that I have wandered into our own era. This I shall not take any pains to characterise apart from that which preceded it, for, in fact, they have no distinct character. The 17th and 18th centuries, together with so much of the 19th as we have yet seen, jointly compose the Augustan age of murder. The finest work of the 17th century is, unquestionably, the murder of Sir Edmondbury Godfrey, which has my entire approbation. At the same time, it must be observed, that the quantity of murder was not great in this century, at least amongst our own artists; which, perhaps, is attributable to the want of enlightened patronage. Sint Maecenates, non deerunt, Flacce, Marones ['Let there be a patron like Maecenus, Flaccus, and your lands will give you a poet like Virgil.'] Consulting Grant's 'Observations on the Bills of Mortality,' (4th edition, Oxford, 1665,) I find, that out of 229,250, who died in London during one period of twenty years in the 17th century, not more than eighty- six were murdered; that is, about 4 three- tenths per annum. A small number this, gentlemen, to found an academy upon; and certainly, where the quantity is so small, we have a right to expect that the quality should be first-rate. Perhaps it was; yet, still I am of opinion that the best artist in this century was not equal to the best in that which followed. For instance, however praiseworthy the case of Sir Edmondbury Godfrey may be (and nobody can be more sensible of its merits than I am,) still I cannot consent to place it on a level with that Mrs Ruscombe of Bristol, either as to originality of design, or boldness and breadth of style. This good lady's murder took place early in the reign of George III. – a reign which was notoriously favourable to the arts generally. She lived in College Green, with a single maid-servant, neither of them having any pretension to the notice of history but what they derived from the great artist whose workmanship I am recording. One fine morning, when all Bristol was alive and in motion, some suspicion arising, the neighbours forced an entrance into the house, and found Mrs Ruscombe murdered in her bed- room, and the servant murdered on the stairs: this was at noon; and, not more than two hours before, both mistress and servant had been seen alive. To the best of my remembrance, this was in 1764; upwards of sixty years, therefore, have now elapsed, and yet the artist is still undiscovered. The suspicions of posterity have settled upon two pretenders – a baker and a chimney- sweeper. But posterity is wrong; no unpractised artist could have conceived so bold an idea as that of a noon- day murder in the heart of a great city. It was no obscure baker, gentlemen, or anonymous chimney- sweeper, be assured, that executed this work. I know who it was. (Here there was a general buzz, which at length broke out into open applause; upon which the lecturer blushed, and went on with much earnest-ness.) For Heaven's sake, gentlemen, do not mistake me; it was not I that did it. I have not the vanity to think myself equal to any such achievement; be assured that you greatly overrate my poor talents; Mrs Ruscombe's affair was far beyond my slender abilities. But I came to know who the artist was, from a celebrated surgeon, who assisted at his dissection. This gentleman had a private museum in the way of his profession, one corner of which was occupied by a cast from a man of remarkably fine proportions.

'That,' said the surgeon, 'is a cast from the celebrated Lancashire highwayman, who concealed his profession for some time from his neighbours, by drawing woollen stockings over his horse's legs, and in that way muffling the clatter which he must else have made in riding up a flagged alley that led to his stable. At the time of his execution for highway robbery, I was studying under Cruickshank: and the man's figure was so uncommonly fine, that no money or exertion was spared to get into possession of him with the least possible delay. By the connivance of the under- sheriff he was cut down within the legal time, and instantly put into a chaise and four; so that, when he reached Cruickshank's, he was positively not dead. Mr —, a young student at that time, had the honour of giving him the coup de grace – and finishing the sentence of the law.' This remarkable anecdote, which seemed to imply that all the gentlemen in the dissecting- room were amateurs of our class, struck me a good deal; and I was repeating it one day to a Lancashire lady, who thereupon informed me, that she had herself lived in the neighbourhood of that highwayman, and well remembered two circumstances, which combined in the opinion of all his neighbours, to fix upon him the credit of Mrs Ruscombe's affair. One was, the fact of his absence for a whole fortnight at the period of that murder: the other, that, within a very little time after, the neighbourhood of this highwayman was deluged with dollars: now Mrs Ruscombe was known to have hoarded about two thousand of that coin. Be the artist, however, who he might, the affair remains a durable monument of his genius; for such was the impression of awe, and the sense of power left behind, by the strength of conception manifested in this murder, that no tenant (as I was told in 1810) had been found up to that time for Mrs Ruscombe's house.

But, whilst I thus eulogize the Ruscombian case, let me not be supposed to overlook the many other specimens of extraordinary merit spread over the face of this century. Such cases, indeed, as that of Miss Bland, or of Captain Donnellan, and Sir Theophilus Boughton, shall never have any countenance from me. Fie on these dealers in poison, say I: can they not keep to the old honest way of cutting throats, without introducing such abominable innovations from Italy? I consider all these poisoning cases, compared with the legitimate style, as no better than wax- work by the side of sculpture, or a lithographic print by the side of a fine Volpato. But, dismissing these, there remain many excellent works of art in a pure style, such as nobody need be ashamed to own, as every candid connoisseur will admit. Candid, observe, I say; for great allowances must be made in these cases; no artist can ever be sure of carrying through his own fine preconception. Awkward disturbances will arise; people will not submit to have their throats cut quietly; they will run, they will kick, they will bite; and, whilst the portrait painter often has to complain of too much torpor in his subject, the artist, in our line, is generally embarrassed by too much animation. At the same time, however disagreeable to the artist, this tendency in murder to excite and irritate the subject, is certainly one of its advantages to the world in general, which we ought not to overlook, since it favours the developement of latent talent. Jeremy Taylor notices with admiration, the extraordinary leaps which people will take under the influence of fear. There was a striking instance of this in the recent case of the M'Keands; the boy cleared a height, such as he will never clear again to his dying day. Talents also of the most brilliant description for thumping, and indeed for all the gymnastic exercises, have sometimes been developed by the panic which accompanies our artists; talents else buried and hid under a bushel to the possessors, as much as to their friends. I remember an interesting illustration of this fact, in a case which I learned in Germany.

Riding one day in the neighbourhood of Munich, I overtook a distinguished amateur of our society, whose name I shall conceal. This gentleman informed me that, finding himself wearied with the frigid pleasures (so he called them) of mere amateurship, he had quitted England for the continent – meaning to practise a little professionally. For this purpose he resorted to Germany, conceiving the police in that part of Europe to be more heavy and drowsy than elsewhere. His debut as a practitioner took place at Mannheim; and, knowing me to be a brother amateur, he freely communicated the whole of his maiden adventure. ‘Opposite to my lodging,’ said he, ‘lived a baker: he was somewhat of a miser, and lived quite alone. Whether it were his great expanse of chalky face, or what else, I know not – but the fact was, I “fancied” him, and resolved to commence business upon his throat, which by the way he always carried bare – a fashion which is very irritating to my desires. Precisely at eight o’clock in the evening, I observed that he regularly shut up his windows. One night I watched him when thus engaged – bolted in after him – locked the door – and, addressing him with great suavity, acquainted him with the nature of my errand; at the same time advising him to make no resistance, which would be mutually unpleasant. So saying, I drew out my tools; and was proceeding to operate. But at this spectacle, the baker, who seemed to have been struck by catalepsy at my first announce, awoke into tremendous agitation. “I will not be murdered!” he shrieked aloud; “what for will I lose my precious throat?” – “What for?” said I; “if for no other reason, for this – that you put alum into your bread. But no matter, alum or no alum, (for I was resolved to forestall any argument on that point) know that I am a virtuoso in the art of murder – am desirous of improving myself in its details – and am enamoured of your vast surface of throat, to which I am determined to be a customer.” “Is it so?” said he, “but I’ll find you custom in another line;" and so saying, he threw himself into a boxing attitude. The very idea of his boxing struck me as ludicrous. It is true, a London baker had distinguished himself in the ring, and became known to fame under the title of the Master of the Rolls; but he was young and unspoiled: whereas this man was a monstrous feather-bed in person, fifty years old, and totally out of condition. Spite of all this, however, and contending against me, who am a master in the art, he made so desperate a defence, that many times I feared he might turn the tables upon me; and that I, an amateur, might be murdered by a rascally baker. What a situation! Minds of sensibility will sympathize with my anxiety. How severe it was, you may understand by this, that for the first 13 rounds the baker had the advantage. Round the 14th, I received a blow on the right eye, which closed it up; in the end, I believe, this was my salvation: for the anger it roused in me was so great that, in this and every one of the three following rounds, I floored the baker.

'Round 18th. The baker came up piping, and manifestly the worse for wear. His geometrical exploits in the four last rounds had done him no good. However, he showed some skill in stopping a message which I was sending to his cadaverous mug; in delivering which, my foot slipped, and I went down.

'Round 19th. Surveying the baker, I became ashamed of having been so much bothered by a shapeless mass of dough; and I went in fiercely, and administered some severe punishment. A rally took place – both went down – Baker undermost – ten to three on Amateur.

'Round 20th. – The baker jumped up with surprising agility; indeed, he managed his pins capitally, and fought wonderfully, considering that he was drenched in perspiration; but the shine was now taken out of him, and his game was the mere effect of panic. It was now clear that he could not last much longer. In the course of this round we tried the weaving system, in which I had greatly the advantage, and hit him repeatedly on the conk. My reason for this was, that his conk was covered with carbuncles; and I thought I should vex him by taking such liberties with his conk, which in fact I did.

'The three next rounds, the master of the rolls staggered about like a cow on the ice. Seeing how matters stood, in round 24th I whispered something into his ear, which sent him down like a shot. It was nothing more than my private opinion of the value of his throat at an annuity office. This little confidential whisper affected him greatly; the very perspiration was frozen on his face, and for the next two rounds I had it all my own way. And when I called time for the twenty- seventh round, he lay like a log on the floor.'

After which, said I to the amateur, 'It may be presumed that you accomplished your purpose.' – 'You are right,' said he mildly, 'I did; and a great satisfaction, you know, it was to my mind, for by this means I killed two birds with one stone;' meaning that he had both thumped the baker and murdered him. Now, for the life of me, I could not see that ; for, on the contrary, to my mind it appeared that he had taken two stones to kill one bird, having been obliged to take the conceit out of him first with his fists, and then with his tools. But no matter for his logic. The moral of his story was good, for it showed what an astonishing stimulus to latent talent is contained in any reasonable prospect of being murdered. A pursy, unwieldy, half cataleptic baker of Mannheim had absolutely fought six- and- twenty rounds with an accomplished English boxer merely upon this inspiration; so greatly was natural genius exalted and sublimed by the genial presence of his murderer.

Really, gentlemen, when one hears of such things as these, it becomes a duty, perhaps, a little to soften that extreme asperity with which most men speak of murder. To hear people talk, you would suppose that all the disadvantages and inconveniences were on the side of being murdered, and that there were none at all in not being murdered. But considerate men think otherwise. 'Certainly,' says Jer. Taylor, 'it is a less temporal evil to fall by the rudeness of a sword than the violence of a fever: and the axe' (to which he might have added the ship- carpenter's mallet and the crow- bar) 'a much less affliction than a strangury.' Very true; the Bishop talks like a wise man and an amateur, as he is; and another great philosopher, Marcus Aurelius, was equally above the vulgar prejudices on this subject. He declares it to be one of 'the noblest functions of reason to know whether it is time to walk out of the world or not.' (Book III. Collers' Translation.) No sort of knowledge being rarer than this, surely that man must be a most philanthropic character, who undertakes to instruct people in this branch of knowledge gratis, and at no little hazard to himself. All this, however, I throw out only in the way of speculation to future moralists; declaring in the meantime my own private conviction, that very few men commit murder upon philanthropic or patriotic principles, and repeating what I have already said once at least – that, as to the majority of murderers, they are very incorrect characters.

With respect to Williams's murders, the sublimest and most entire in their excellence that ever were committed, I shall not allow myself to speak incidentally. Nothing less than an entire lecture, or even an entire course of lectures, would suffice to expound their merits. But one curious fact, connected with his case, I shall mention, because it seems to imply that the blaze of his genius absolutely dazzled the eye of criminal justice. You all remember, I doubt not, that the instruments with which he executed his first great work (the murder of the Marrs), were a ship-carpenter's mallet and a knife. Now the mallet belonged to an old Swede, one John Petersen, and bore his initials. This instrument Williams left behind him, in Marr's house, and it fell into the hands of the Magistrates. Now, gentlemen, it is a fact that the publication of this circumstance of the initials led immediately to the apprehension of Williams, and, if made earlier, would have prevented his second great work, (the murder of the Williamsons,) which took place precisely twelve days after. But the Magistrates kept back this fact from the public for the entire twelve days, and until that second work was accomplished. That finished, they published it, apparently feeling that Williams had now done enough for his fame, and that his glory was at length placed beyond the reach of accident.

As to Mr Thurtell's case, I know not what to say. Naturally, I have every disposition to think highly of my predecessor in the chair of this society; and I acknowledge that his lectures were unexceptionable. But, speaking ingenuously, I do really think that his principal performance, as an artist, has been much overrated. I admit that at first I was myself carried away by the general enthusiasm. On the morning when the murder was made known in London, there was the fullest meeting of amateurs that I have ever known since the days of Williams; old bed-ridden connoisseurs, who had got into a peevish way of sneering and complaining 'that there was nothing doing,' now hobbled down to our club-room:

such hilarity, such benign expression of general satisfaction, I have rarely witnessed. On every side you saw people shaking hands, congratulating each other, and forming dinner- parties for the evening; and nothing was to be heard but triumphant challenges of – ‘Well! will this do?’ ‘Is this the right thing?’ ‘Are you satisfied at last?’ But, in the midst of this, I remember we all grew silent on hearing the old cynical amateur, L. S——, that laudator temporis acti [a praiser of time past], stumping along with his wooden leg; he entered the room with his usual scowl, and, as he advanced, he continued to growl and stutter the whole way – ‘Not an original idea in the whole piece – mere plagiarism, – base plagiarism from hints that I threw out! Besides, his style is as hard as Albert Durer, and as coarse as Fuseli.’ Many thought that this was mere jealousy, and general waspishness; but I confess that, when the first glow of enthusiasm had subsided, I have found most judicious critics to agree that there was something falsetto in the style of Thurtell. The fact is, he was a member of our society, which naturally gave a friendly bias to our judgments; and his person was universally familiar to the cockneys, which gave him, with the whole London public, a temporary popularity, that his pretensions are not capable of supporting; for opinionum commenta delet dies, naturae judicia confirmat [‘Time erases the fictions of opinion, but it confirms the judgements of nature’]. –There was, however, an unfinished design of Thurtell’s for the murder of a man with a pair of dumb- bells, which I admired greatly; it was a mere outline, that he never completed; but to my mind it seemed every way superior to his chief work. I remember that there was great regret expressed by some amateurs that this sketch should have been left in an unfinished state: but there I cannot agree with them; for the fragments and first bold outlines of original artists have often a felicity about them which is apt to vanish in the management of the details.

The case of the M’Keands I consider far beyond the vaunted performance of Thurtell, – indeed above all praise; and bearing that relation, in fact, to the immortal works of Williams, which the Aeneid bears to the Iliad.

But it is now time that I should say a few words about the principles of murder, not with a view to regulate your practice, but your judgment: as to old women, and the mob of newspaper readers, they are pleased with anything, provided it is bloody enough. But the mind of sensibility requires something more. First, then, let us speak of the kind of person who is adapted to the purpose of the murderer; secondly , of the place where; thirdly , of the time when, and other little circumstances.

As to the person, I suppose it is evident that he ought to be a good man; because, if he were not, he might himself, by possibility, be contemplating murder at the very time; and such ‘diamond- cut-diamond’ tussles, though pleasant enough where nothing better is stirring, are really not what a critic can allow himself to call murders. I could mention some people (I name no names) who have been murdered by other people in a dark lane; and so far all seemed correct enough; but, on looking farther into the matter, the public have become aware that the murdered party was himself, at the moment, planning to rob his murderer, at the least, and possibly to murder him, if he had been strong enough. Whenever that is the case, or may be thought to be the case, farewell to all the genuine effects of the art. For the final purpose of murder, considered as a fine art, is precisely the same as that of Tragedy, in Aristotle’s account of it, viz. ‘to cleanse the heart by means of pity and terror.’ Now, terror there may be, but how can there be any pity for one tiger destroyed by another tiger?

It is also evident that the person selected ought not to be a public character. For instance, no judicious artist would have attempted to murder Abraham Newland. For the case was this: everybody read so much about Abraham Newland, and so few people ever saw him, that there was a fixed belief that he was an abstract idea. And I remember that once, when I happened to mention that I had dined at a coffee- house in company with Abraham Newland, everybody looked scornfully at me, as though I had pretended to have played at billiards with Prester John, or to have had an affair of honour with the Pope. And, by the way, the Pope would be a very improper person to murder: for he has such a virtual ubiquity as the Father of Christendom, and, like the cuckoo, is so often heard but never seen, that I suspect most people regard him also as an abstract idea. Where, indeed, a public character is in the habit of giving dinners, ‘with every delicacy of the season,’ the case is very different: every person is satisfied that he is no abstract idea; and, therefore, there can be no impropriety in murdering him; only that his murder will fall into the class of assassinations, which I have not yet treated.

Thirdly , The subject chosen ought to be in good health: for it is absolutely barbarous to murder a sick person, who is usually quite unable to bear it. On this principle, no Cockney ought to be chosen who is above twenty- five, for after that age he is sure to be dyspeptic. Or at least, if a man will hunt in that warren, he ought to murder a couple at one time; if the Cockneys chosen should be tailors, he will of course think it his duty, on the old established equation, to murder eighteen – And, here, in this attention to the comfort of sick people, you will observe the usual effect of a fine art to soften and refine the feelings. The world in general, gentlemen, are very bloody- minded; and all they want in a murder is a copious effusion of blood; gaudy display in this point is enough for them . But the enlightened connoisseur is more refined in his taste; and from our art, as from all the other liberal arts when thoroughly cultivated, the result is – to improve and to humanize the heart; so true is it, that –

– Ingenuas didicisse fideliter artes,

Emollit mores, nec sinit esse feros.

[‘A careful study of the liberal arts refines manners and prevents them from being savage’]

A philosophic friend, well- known for his philanthropy and general benignity, suggests that the subject chosen ought also to have a family of young children wholly dependent on his exertions, by way of deepening the pathos. And, undoubtedly, this is a judicious caution. Yet I would not insist too keenly on this condition. Severe good taste unquestionably demands it; but still, where the man was otherwise unobjectionable in point of morals and health, I would not look with too curious a jealousy to a restriction which might have the effect of narrowing the artist’s sphere.

So much for the person. As to the time, the place, and the tools, I have many things to say, which at present I have no room for. The good sense of the practitioner has usually directed him to night and privacy. Yet there have not been wanting cases where this rule was departed from with excellent effect. In respect to time, Mrs Ruscombe's case is a beautiful exception, which I have already noticed; and in respect both to time and place, there is a fine exception in the Annals of Edinburgh, (year 1805), familiar to every child in Edinburgh, but which has unaccountably been defrauded of its due portion of fame amongst English amateurs. The case I mean is that of a porter to one of the Banks, who was murdered whilst carrying a bag of money, in broad daylight, on turning out of the High Street, one of the most public streets in Europe, and the murderer is to this hour undiscovered.

Sed fugit interea, fugit irreparabile tempus,

Singula dum capti circumvectamur amore.

['But meanwhile time is flying, flying beyond recall, while we linger, captivated by our love of detail']

And now, gentlemen, in conclusion, let me again solemnly disclaim all pretensions on my own part to the character of a professional man. I never attempted any murder in my life, except in the year 1801, upon the body of a tom- cat; and that turned out differently from my intention. My purpose, I own, was downright murder. 'Semper ego auditor tantum?' said I, 'nunquamne reponam?' ['Am I always to be a listener? And never get a word in?'] And I went down stairs in search of Tom at one o'clock on a dark night, with the 'animus,' and no doubt with the fiendish looks, of a murderer. But when I found him, he was in the act of plundering the pantry of bread and other things. Now this gave a new turn to the affair; for the time being one of general scarcity, when even Christians were reduced to the use of potato- bread, rice- bread, and all sorts of things, it was downright treason in a tom- cat to be wasting good wheaten- bread in the way he was doing. It instantly became a patriotic duty to put him to death; and as I raised aloft and shook the glittering steel, I fancied myself rising like Brutus, effulgent from a crowd of patriots, and, as I stabbed him, I called aloud on Tully's name,

And bade the father of his country hail!

Since then, what wandering thoughts I may have had of attempting the life of an ancient ewe, of a superannuated hen, and such 'small deer,' are locked up in the secrets of my own breast; but for the higher departments of the art, I confess myself to be utterly unfit. My ambition does not rise so high. No, gentlemen, in the words of Horace,

———fungar vice cotis, acutum

Reddere quae ferrum valet, exsors ipsa secandi.

[‘I’ll play the part of a whetstone, which sharpens iron, but is itself unable to cut.’]

[1] Kant – who carried his demands of unconditional veracity to so extravagant a length as to affirm, that, if a man were to see an innocent person escape from a murderer, it would be his duty, on being questioned by the murderer, to tell the truth, and to point out the retreat of the innocent person, under any certainty of causing murder. Lest this doctrine should be supposed to have escaped him in any heat of dispute, on being taxed with it by a celebrated French writer, he solemnly reaffirmed it, with his reasons.

[2] ‘June 1, 1675. – Drinke part of 3 boules of punch, (a liquor very strange to me,)’ says the Rev. Mr Henry Teonge, in his Diary lately published. In a note on this passage, a reference is made to Fryer’s Travels to the East Indies, 1672, who speaks of ‘that enervating liquor called Paunch, (which is Indostan for five,) from five ingredients.’ Made thus, it seems the medical men called it Diapente; if with four only, Diatessaron. No doubt, it was its Evangelical name that recommended it to the Rev. Mr Teonge.

杰克与爱丽丝

谨将本篇小说敬献给在陛下之舰坚毅号上服役的海军候补少尉弗朗西斯·威廉·奥斯汀 [1] 先生。

他恭顺卑微的仆人

作者敬上

曾几何时，约翰逊先生还不到五十三岁；那之后又过了十二个来月，他就五十四岁了。这事让他欢喜得紧，于是他决定，下一回过生日时他要举行一次化装舞会，邀请孩子们和朋友们来参加，以兹庆祝。因此，在他跨进人生第五十五个年头的这天，庆生化装舞会的入场券便送到了他那些邻居的手中。在他住的这个地方，和他相熟的人并不算多，统共也只有威廉斯夫人、琼斯先生和琼斯太太、查尔斯·亚当斯以及辛普森家三位小姐。住在帕米迪德尔 [2] 的就是这么几位，来参加化装舞会的也是这么几位。

在开始讲述这天晚上发生的事情之前，我应当向读者说一说，您刚刚认识的这些人物有着怎样的尊容，化装舞会上的那些角色又是个什么模样。

琼斯先生和太太的身材都很高大，性情也有些暴躁，不过，就其他方面而言，他俩倒还称得上平易近人、彬彬有礼。查尔斯·亚当斯是个和蔼可亲的小伙子，他不仅多才多艺，长相更是迷人；他的美貌如此耀眼，只有老鹰才敢直视他的面孔。

辛普森家大小姐的模样、举止和性格都很讨喜，唯一的毛病就是野心太大。她的二妹苏姬为人善妒，阴险恶毒，又矮又胖，很难相处。小妹塞西莉亚的相貌倒是无可挑剔，可惜太会装模作样，所以没人喜欢她。

集一切美德于一身的威廉斯夫人是个寡妇，她仁慈而坦率，慷慨且真诚；她虔诚又善良，敬神又可亲；她优雅可爱，斯文风趣。风韵犹存的她继承了丈夫留下的丰厚遗产。

约翰逊这一家人感情很好，尽管有一点贪杯和嗜赌，但他们优点也是不少的。

在约翰逊宅邸那间陈设讲究的起居室里，这么一帮子人齐聚一堂。在一众戴着女性面具的人当中，最引人注目的当数一位苏丹女眷的窈窕身姿。而在男性当中，倾倒众生的则是一个戴着太阳面具的人，他两眼射出的光芒正如阳光一般灿烂，且有过之而无不及，炽烈无比，谁也不敢冒险靠近这双眼睛半英里 [3] 之内；于是乎，在这间不过半英里宽、3/4英里长的屋子里，最好的位置便被他一人所独占。这位先生最后终于发现，自己的光芒太过刺眼，给众人带来极大不便，逼得他们只能一窝蜂挤在房间一角，于是他把眼睛半闭起来，人们才看出原来这是查尔斯·亚当斯，穿着他那件素色的绿外套，什么面具都没戴。

大家的惊讶之情稍稍平息之后，注意力却又被两个兴冲冲往前赶的面具客给吸引过去；这两人的个子都很高，除此之外还有不少其他优点。“这两位，”睿智的查尔斯说道，“是琼斯先生和琼斯太太。”事实也的确如此。

谁都想不到那位苏丹女眷是谁！直到最后，她对着一位装模作样斜倚在沙发上的美丽女花神说道：“哦，塞西莉亚，我真希望自己扮谁就是谁。”听到这话，查尔斯·亚当斯认出她就是风度优雅、野心勃勃的卡罗琳·辛普森，他的聪明才智可真是战无不胜。至于她亲自开口与之打招呼的那位，则是她那漂亮又做作的妹妹塞西莉亚，这又让查尔斯给猜中了。

众人现在向赌桌走去，那儿有三位面具客（每人手里都拿着一个酒瓶），正赌得起劲儿呢；不过，有一位扮成美德的女性看到这触目惊心的场面便脚步匆匆地逃走了，而一位化装成嫉妒、略有些胖的女性却轮番坐在那三个赌棍的前头。查尔斯·亚当斯还是一如既往地机智伶俐，他很快就发现赌博的那几个是约翰逊家里的三位，嫉妒是苏姬·辛普森，美德则是威廉斯夫人。

于是所有人都摘下面具，去了另一个房间，那儿已经备好一桌精美的菜肴，大家吃吃喝喝，随后约翰逊一家三口又积极地给大伙儿倒起酒来，结果这帮子人喝得烂醉如泥，全都是给抬回家的，就连美德也不例外。

二

这次化装舞会为帕米迪德尔的居民们提供了足足三个月的谈资；不过大家说得最多最细的人物还要数查尔斯·亚当斯。他那举世无双的容貌、他那光芒四射的双眼、他那聪明睿智的头脑以及其人本身给人留下的整体印象俘获了许多年轻姑娘的芳心，参加化装舞会的六位女士当中总共只有五位不曾被他征服。爱丽丝·约翰逊正是那倒霉的第六个，她没能抵挡住他的巨大魅力，已然对他倾心钟情。读者诸君恐怕

要觉得奇怪了，既然他如此出类拔萃、如此值得爱慕，为何单单只有这一位姑娘爱上他？可你们要知道，辛普森家那三位小姐之所以没有倒在他的魅力之下，是因为大小姐有野心，二小姐爱嫉妒，三小姐太自恋。

卡罗琳心心念念想的都是嫁个有爵位的丈夫；对于苏姬而言，要是人家比她优越得太多，那非但不会激起她的爱意，反而会使她嫉恨；至于塞西莉亚，她对自己爱恋至深，旁人都没法儿叫她中意。还有威廉斯夫人和琼斯太太——前者头脑太过清醒，不会爱上一个比自己年纪小这么多的人；后者虽然个子又高、性子又急，不过她很爱自己的丈夫，自然不会去想这档子事。

然而，尽管约翰逊小姐尝尽一切努力想要看出他对自己有感情，可查尔斯·亚当斯那颗冷酷淡漠的心却似乎依然如同原先那般自由自在；他对谁都彬彬有礼、一视同仁，还是那个漂亮活泼、无动于衷的查尔斯·亚当斯。

有天晚上，爱丽丝喝了点酒（这种情形并不罕见），头脑有点发热，于是决定去找冰雪聪明的威廉斯夫人说说话，从而调剂一下她那乱糟糟的头脑，安慰安慰她那饱受相思之苦的心灵。

和平日一样，她在夫人家里见到了她，威廉斯夫人不喜欢外出。她就像那位了不起的查尔斯·格兰迪森爵士 [4]，在家时是不屑于谎称自己不在的。现在时兴把不讨人喜欢的客人拒之门外，然而在威廉斯夫人看来，这种行为跟彻头彻尾的重婚罪可是不相上下。

虽然喝了酒，但可怜的爱丽丝情绪却异常低落，她满脑子想的都是查尔斯·亚当斯，说起话来也是一句都离不开他。总而言之，她说得如此直白，威廉斯夫人很快就发现她是在单恋着他，于是对她大为怜悯、深感同情，便说出下面这一番话来。

“亲爱的约翰逊小姐，我听得再明白不过了，你没能抵挡住这个年轻人的迷人魅力，你的心已经为之倾倒，我是真心实意地替你感到可惜。这是你的初恋吗？”

“是的。”

“听你这么说，我就更难过了；我自己就是一个悲惨的例子，伴随着初恋而来的往往都是痛苦，所以我下定决心，将来一定要避免类似的不幸发生。但愿你现在这么做还为时不晚；亲爱的孩子，初恋非常危险，要是来得及的话，你还是尽力抽身而退吧。第二次恋爱就很少会引起什么严重后果了，所以我对此并不反对。你要保护自己免遭初恋的伤害，却无须担心第二次的到来。”

“夫人，您刚刚提起您曾身受此种不幸所害，所以您好心希望我

能得以幸免。不知您是否愿意跟我讲讲您的经历和故事？”

“乐意之至，亲爱的。”

三

“家父是伯克郡一名相当富有的绅士，膝下只得我和其他几个孩子。我年仅六岁时，母亲便不幸离世。当时我年纪尚幼，少不更事，所以父亲并没有送我去学校，而是请了一位能干的家庭女教师，让她在家里教我。我的兄弟们依着年龄进了相应的学校，而我的几个妹妹都比我小，所以依然由她们的保姆照看着。

“迪金斯小姐是一位优秀的家庭女教师，是她指引我走上修习德行之路。在她的教导之下，我的性格变得日益温厚，可是在我十七岁那年，这位可敬的导师却被人从我身边夺走，要不是如此，恐怕我如今已经达到了近乎完美的境界。我从来不曾忘怀她对我说的最后一句话。她说：‘我亲爱的姬蒂，晚安了。’从那以后，我就再也没有见过她。”威廉斯夫人擦了擦眼睛，继续说道：“那天夜里，她跟着管家私奔了。”

“次年冬天，家父的一位远亲邀请我去城里和她小住一阵，这位沃特金斯太太出身显赫，非常富有，还很时髦；人人都说她是美女，不过我却从不觉得她有多漂亮。在我看来，她的额头太高，眼睛太小，肤色又太重。”

“这怎么可能呢？”约翰逊小姐气得面红耳赤，打断她道，“你觉得可能会有人肤色太重吗？”

“我觉得会，亲爱的爱丽丝，我来告诉你我为什么会这么想；要是人的脸色红得过了头，那么我就会认为他们的脸看起来太红了。”

“可是，夫人，人的脸有可能会太红吗？”

“当然会，亲爱的约翰逊小姐，我告诉你怎么会这样。要是面色太红呢，这人的长相看起来就不如皮肤苍白一些的时候那么好看。”

“夫人，还是请您接着往下讲吧。”

“好的，正如我先前所说，这位夫人邀请我去城里和她小住几个星期。很多上流社会的先生都觉得她很漂亮，可是在我看来，她的额头太高，眼睛太小，肤色又太重。”

“夫人，关于这一点，我先前已经说过，您肯定是弄错了。沃特金斯太太的肤色不可能太重，因为没人会这样。”

“亲爱的，在这一点上，恕我不能同意你的观点。请容我解释清楚，对于这种情况，我的看法是这样的：要是女人脸颊上红色的

部分太大，那么她的肤色就太重了。”

“可是，夫人，我认为这是不可能的，任何人脸颊上的红色部分都不会太大。”

“亲爱的，如果有人偏偏就是肤色很重呢？”

约翰逊小姐现在已经失去了耐心，威廉斯夫人越是继续这么强硬冷静，恐怕约翰逊小姐就越是不耐烦。不过，毕竟夫人在某个方面比爱丽丝要强多了；我的意思是，她没有喝酒，要是酒精上头，再一激动，她也是要控制不住脾气的。

她俩到最后越吵越凶，爱丽丝“从动口发展到几乎要动手了”。万幸的是，约翰逊先生来了，虽然费了点力气，但总算把她从威廉斯夫人这里拉走了，没再继续让她们就沃特金斯太太以及她的红脸蛋纠缠不休。

四

读者诸君也许会以为，经过这么一番吵闹，约翰逊一家跟威廉斯夫人是再也不能亲密无间了，但是你们错了。夫人深明大义，她不会看不出，爱丽丝之所以会这样，自然是喝醉酒的缘故，所以她并不恼火；而爱丽丝是诚心诚意地敬重威廉斯夫人，又非常爱喝夫人的红酒，所以尽力做出了一切让步。

她俩和好几天之后，威廉斯夫人前来拜访约翰逊小姐，提议两人去一处香橼树林里散散步，那树林的一头是夫人家的猪圈，另一头则是查尔斯·亚当斯家的饮马池。爱丽丝觉得威廉斯夫人提议这一趟散步是出于好意，想到最后能看见查尔斯家的饮马池，她是非常满意的，于是便兴高采烈地接受了邀请。她俩走出去没有多远，爱丽丝尚且沉浸在即将降临的幸福之中，威廉斯夫人却开了口，将她从沉思当中唤醒。

“亲爱的爱丽丝，我一直克制着没有将自己的经历说下去，是因为我不愿叫你忆起往事，毕竟当时的情景还是忘记的好（那事可没给你争光，而是让你丢了脸）。 ”

爱丽丝的脸已经红了，她张口欲言，夫人却看出她的不悦，于是继续说道：“亲爱的姑娘，恐怕我刚才的话对你多有冒犯，不过我向你保证，我之所以旧事重提，并非是有意要让你难受，毕竟往事已矣，无可挽回；总的来说，我并不像许多人那样认为这事是你不好，人在喝醉的时候是没法儿对自己的所作所为负责的。”

“夫人，您说这话我就不能忍了，我坚持认为——”

“亲爱的孩子，别再为此自寻烦恼了，你放心，关于此事我已经

全不计较。其实当时我并没有生气，因为我一直都看得出，你几乎是烂醉如泥了，我知道你说出那些奇谈怪论是身不由己。我瞧着你听得太难过了，那我就换个话题吧，希望这事永远也别再提起。你要记住，我已经全都忘了——现在我就接着讲自己的故事。不过我必须要强调一下，我不会再对你描述沃特金斯太太的长相，这只会让往事重演罢了，既然你与她从未谋面，那么无论她的额头是不是太高、眼睛是不是太小，又或者肤色是不是太重，这都与你不相干了。”

“又来了！威廉斯夫人，这可真是太过分了——”

一提起旧事，可怜的爱丽丝又被激得冒了火，要不是她俩的注意力被另一桩事吸引了过去，我真不知道此事会如何收场。有个漂亮的年轻女子躺在一棵香橼树下，看起来非常痛苦，这着实耐人寻味，不由得她们不去注意。于是乎，她俩忘记了自己的争吵，同情地向她走去，和气地跟她搭话。

“这位美丽的姑娘，你似乎正身受某种不幸，我们很乐意把你解救出来，不知你是否愿意告知我们这是怎么一回事。你能给我们讲讲你的经历和故事吗？”

“当然可以，太太小姐们，劳驾您二位坐下吧。”她俩坐了下来，她便开了口。

五

“我出生在北威尔士，也在那里长大，家父是当地一名顶顶出色的裁缝。我们家孩子很多，刚好家母有个姐妹是寡妇，在我们隔壁的村里经营一家啤酒坊 [5]，家境很富裕，所以父亲很容易便被说动了心，让我把我带走并抚养长大。因此过去这八年来，我都是与她同住，在此期间，她请了几位一流的大师来给我授课，凡是我这种地位的女子所应当具备的才艺，我全都学过。在他们的教导下，我学习了舞蹈、音乐、绘画以及好几种语言，如此一来，威尔士没有哪个裁缝的女儿比我更加多才多艺了。谁都不如我这般快活，直到半年以前——不过我本应先告诉你们，在我住的那一片，最重要的一处产业属于查尔斯·亚当斯，您看，也就是那边那栋砖房的主人。”

“查尔斯·亚当斯？”爱丽丝吃惊地喊道，“你认识查尔斯·亚当斯？”

“是的，小姐，我正是为此而伤心。大约在半年前，他来收租金，就是我刚刚提到的那处产业。这是我第一次见到他；小姐，您看来也是认识他的，我就不必向您描述他有多么迷人了。我无法抵挡他的诱惑……”

“唉！谁又能抵挡得了呢？”爱丽丝说着深深地叹了一口气。

“我的姨妈跟他家厨娘关系极好，于是，在我的请求之下，她决定去找这位朋友打探一下，看看他是否可能也对我有情。为此有天晚上她去跟苏珊太太一起喝茶，苏珊太太在谈话中说起她这职位如何如何好、她那主人如何如何好。我的姨妈便借机开始套她的话，我姨妈是很会套话的，没一会儿工夫苏珊就承认说，她觉得她家主人永远都不会结婚，‘因为（她说）他常常对我说无论他的妻子是谁，都必须年轻貌美、出身良好、聪明睿智、人品高洁、钱财丰厚。我曾多次（她继续说道）想要劝他改变心意，让他明白他是不可能遇到这样一位小姐的，可是我说的道理他一点也没听，他的决心丝毫不曾动摇。’太太小姐们，你们也许能想象出我听到这番话时的痛苦心情；尽管我年轻貌美、聪明睿智、人品高洁，而且还有可能继承我姨妈的房子和生意，可我却担心他会觉得我的出身不够高贵，因而不配成为他的妻子。

“不过，我还是决定要大胆一搏，于是我言辞恳切地写了一封信给他，带着浓情蜜意对他说，我愿将自己的人和心都交给他。可他在回信中却怒气冲冲地断然拒绝了我，我想他这恐怕只是谦逊之词罢了，便再度就此事敦促于他，然而他再也没有给过我回音，而且没过多久便离开了乡下。我一听说他离去的消息，就把信写到了这儿，告诉他我期待着不久之后能有幸在帕米迪德尔与他相见，这封信他仍然没有回复，于是我当作他已经默许，就瞒着我的姨妈离开了威尔士，一番长途跋涉之后，今早才到达此地。我向人打听他家住何处，有人告诉我要穿过这片树林，也就是你们所看到的这一处。我满心欢喜地踏进树林，期待着与他见面的幸福时刻，一路走到这里，却感觉到我的腿似乎突然被人给抓住了，查看以后才发现，原来我踩中了一个捕兽夹，这种东西在绅士老爷们的地界上很是常见。”

“哎，”威廉斯夫人喊道，“我们是何其幸运，竟然遇到了你；不然的话，我们也可能是和你同样的下场。”

“千真万确，太太小姐们，你们真是走运，我只比你们早到了一小会儿。你们不难想象，当时我尖叫起来，一直喊到林子里响起回声，这无情的坏蛋才派个仆人来向我施以援手，将我从这可怕的禁锢中解放出来，然而我有一条腿已经彻底断了。”

六

听到她这伤心的故事，威廉斯夫人那对美丽的眼睛里盛满泪水，爱丽丝也忍不住大声说道：“哦！查尔斯真是狠心，这么美丽的一个人儿，竟然被他伤心又伤腿。”

威廉斯夫人打断她的话，说这位年轻女士的腿应当马上接好，一刻也不能再耽搁。她仔细察看了骨折的情况，然后立刻娴熟地开始接

骨，考虑到她以前从未做过这样的事，她的技艺就更显高超了。露西随后从地上站起身来，发现自己已经可以走动，而且毫不费力，在威廉斯夫人的特别请求之下，她便同她们一起来到夫人的宅邸。

露西身材匀称，容颜秀丽，举止优雅，待到夜宵 [6] 结束与爱丽丝作别的时候，她已经赢得了后者的好感。爱丽丝向她保证，在这世上，除了她的父亲、哥哥、叔伯、舅舅、姑妈、姨母、堂亲、表亲以及其他亲戚，还有威廉斯夫人、查尔斯·亚当斯和另外几十个特别的朋友之外，她最喜欢的就是露西了。

她如此信誓旦旦地表达了自己的喜爱之情，作为被器重的对象，露西本该觉得不胜荣幸，然而露西却清清楚楚地看到，这位性子和善的爱丽丝喝起威廉斯夫人的红酒来可是毫不客气。

夫人（她的洞察力厉害得很）从露西那一脸了然的表情看出她对此事的想法，所以约翰逊小姐刚一告辞离去，她便对露西说道：“露西，等到你和我们爱丽丝更亲近熟悉一些以后，再看到这可爱的人儿多喝了一点酒，你就不会觉得吃惊了，因为她天天都是这样的。她身上有好些招人喜爱的难得品质，可是却没法儿管住自己喝醉酒。他们一家子根本就是一帮糟糕的醉鬼。尽管很痛心，可我还是要说，我没见过比他们三个更加烂赌的人，尤其是爱丽丝。可她很讨人喜欢。诚然，我见过她大发脾气的模样，她的性情也许不是世上最温柔的，但她依然是个可爱的姑娘。我相信你一定会喜欢她的。我简直不曾见过比她更和气的人。——哦！你是没见到她有天晚上是什么样儿！为了那么一点鸡毛蒜皮的小事，她便破口大骂！她真是个讨人喜欢的孩子！我永远都爱她！”

“照夫人您这么说，她似乎是有很多优点的。”露西回应道。“哦！千好万好，”威廉斯夫人答道，“不过我对她太偏心，兴许是被这份喜爱蒙住了眼，所以对她真正的缺点都视而不见了。”

七

第二天早晨，辛普森家的三位小姐前来拜访威廉斯夫人，夫人极有礼貌地接待了她们，并将露西介绍给她们认识。辛普森家的大小姐对她非常喜欢，到临别时甚至宣称，自己唯一的心愿就是露西次日一早能陪伴她同去巴斯，因为她们姐妹三人正准备去那里小住几周。

“露西，”威廉斯夫人说道，“是完全可以自己做主的，如果她选择接受如此盛情的邀请，那么我希望她绝不要因为对我有任何顾虑而犹豫不决。真不知道我如何能够与她分别。她从未去过巴斯，我觉得她一定会非常享受这次旅行。亲爱的，”她转过头对着露西继续说道，“你愿意跟这几位小姐做个伴吗？你走了我会很难过，不过这趟远足一定会让你非常开心——我希望你能去；要是你去了，我肯定会

死的——请你千万要听我的劝。”

露西恳请婉拒这份荣幸，她就不陪她们去了，同时她也向辛普森小姐充分表达了感激之情，感谢她这么客气地邀请自己。

对于她的拒绝，辛普森小姐似乎大失所望。威廉斯夫人坚持要她去——宣称如果她不去，那她就永远不会原谅她，可要是她去了，她也绝不会独活。总之，夫人用如此具有说服力的理由让事情最终有了定论——露西会去的。次日上午十点，辛普森家的几位小姐来接走了她，不久之后，威廉斯夫人便收到她这位年轻朋友传来的好消息，心满意足地得知她们已经平安抵达巴斯。

现在该言归正传说说这篇小说的主人公了，也就是爱丽丝的哥哥。想来我一直都没什么机会提起他，这恐怕在一定程度上要归罪于他那令人遗憾的嗜好——贪杯使得他完全荒废了上天赋予他的才能，所以他从未做出什么值得一提的事情。露西离开之后没过多长时间，他便一命呜呼了，似他那般有百害而无一利的活法，这也是自然而然的结果。他一死，他妹妹便成了一大笔财产的唯一继承人，这让她重新燃起希望，觉得自己又够格做查尔斯·亚当斯的妻子了。想到这一点，她无疑是满意至极的——既然结果这么让人高兴，那起因也就不怎么叫人伤心了。

她发觉自己对查尔斯的爱慕之情一天更比一天强烈，最后终于向父亲吐露了实情，希望他能够向查尔斯建议他们两家结一门亲事。她的父亲欣然同意，于是有天早上便动身去向这位年轻人表明此事。约翰逊先生是个沉默寡言的人，很快就说完了自己该说的话，他得到的答复是这样的——

“先生，您恐怕曾以为，听到您提出的建议，我应当表现得兴高采烈、感激不尽，但我要告诉您，我认为您的提议是一种冒犯。先生，在我自己看来，我是个毫无瑕疵的美男子——您在哪儿见过有人比我的体形更加优美、容貌更加迷人？还有，先生，我认为自己的举止与言谈也是最为优雅的，这样的温文尔雅和独有的温柔可亲无法言表，我从未见过有谁能与我匹敌。撇开这些偏爱不谈，我在各种语言、各类科学、各门艺术以及一切事情上的成就都是无可否认的欧洲第一人。我性情温和，优点无数，无与伦比。先生，既然我有着这样的品格，那么您说希望我娶您的女儿为妻，究竟是什么意思呢？容我简要地描述一下您和她是何等样人。先生，我认为您大体上是个很好的人，诚然您是个老醉鬼，不过我对此倒是无所谓。至于您的女儿，先生，对我而言她既不够美丽也不够温顺，既不够聪明也不够富有。我妻子将会发现我是个完美无缺的人，我希望她也是个完美无缺的人。先生，这就是我的想法，我以此为荣。我有一个朋友，但令我骄傲的是，我只有这么一个朋友。现时她正在为我准备晚餐，如果您愿

意见见她的话，她就会来到这里，并且告诉您，我的想法一贯如此。”

约翰逊先生觉得很满意，他对亚当斯先生的赐教表示万分感激，感谢他让他知道了自己和女儿是什么样的人，随后便告辞了。

不幸的爱丽丝从父亲那里听到这桩伤心事，晓得父亲此去是无功而返，她失望得简直不能自己，于是赶紧去借酒浇愁，很快就将这事抛到了脑后。

八

帕米迪德尔的人正在处理这些事情的时候，露西却在巴斯赢得了所有人的喜欢。在那里住了两个礼拜，她几乎已将查尔斯那令人神魂颠倒的模样从记忆中抹消得一千二净——她想起自己从前因为被他迷住所吃的苦头，又记得自己的腿为他的捕兽夹所伤，因而要忘记他也并非难如登天，她便下定决心要把他给忘了；为了达到这个目标，她每天都花上五分钟将他从记忆里赶出去。

在写给威廉斯夫人的第二封信里，她传来喜报说自己已经完成这项任务，她对此十分满意；她还在信中提及某公爵向她求了婚。那位公爵年事已高，极为富有，健康却欠佳，他来巴斯主要是为了疗养身体。她继续写道：

我痛苦地发现，自己也不清楚是想答应他还是拒绝他。嫁给公爵的好处数不胜数，除了地位和财富这些次要因素，这桩婚事能给我一个家，这才是我最大的渴望，其他一切都比不上它。夫人您希望我能永远留在您身边，您这番好意既高尚又慷慨，可我如此地爱您、敬您，我无法想象自己成为您的沉重负担。我们即使要承担责任，这责任也只能来自那些为我们所不齿的人——这是我自小就被我那可敬的姨妈所灌输的观点，我在心中一直谨遵她的教诲。我姨妈是一名很出色的女性，我听说她因为我贸然离开威尔士而大发雷霆，故而不欢迎我再回去了。我无比衷心地希望能离开我所陪伴的这几位小姐。辛普森小姐（抛开她的野心来看）待人确实非常亲切，可她那位善妒又恶毒的二妹苏姬太难相处。我在此地这些大人物的圈子里广受崇拜，相信这已经引起了她的痛恨与妒忌，这并非我的凭空想象，她经常威胁说要杀了我，有几次还试图要动手割我的喉咙。所以，夫人您一定会同意我的观点，认为我想要离开巴斯、想要有个家容身并没有错，我也确有此意。迫切盼望您能就公爵一事给我建议。

对您感激不尽的露西敬上

威廉斯夫人将自己对此事的看法写信告诉了她，信上是这么说

的：

我最最亲爱的露西，对公爵的求婚，你干吗还要有片刻犹豫？我打听过他的人品，发现他既无耻又无知。我的露西可不能嫁给这么一个人！他富可敌国，而且财富与日俱增。这钱要是由你来花，那该有多么体面！在众人眼里，你会给他带来多大荣光！人们对他的尊敬会有多少是看着他妻子的面子！不过，亲爱的露西，为了给此事一个了断，你为什么不一立刻回到我身边永不离开呢？你关于责任的高尚情怀令我钦佩，可是我请求你不要因此就不再给我带来快乐。如果让你永远留在我身边，我肯定要付出一大笔开销——我承受不起这笔花费，但这跟有你陪伴带给我的幸福如何能够相提并论？我知道这会让我倾家荡产——所以，这些理由一定可以说服你回到我身边的。

你最亲爱的C.威廉斯敬上

九

如果露西收到信，夫人的建议会对她产生何种影响，我们已经无从得知了，因为就在这封信到达巴斯的几个钟头之前，露西已经咽下最后一口气，沦为嫉妒与恶毒的牺牲品。苏姬妒忌她魅力超群，于是对她下了毒，让她在十七岁的年纪便离开了倾心爱慕着她的人们。

可爱可亲的露西就这么香消玉殒了，她此生从不曾犯下罪过，除了离开姨妈这一鲁莽之举，她的人生再无瑕疵，认识她的人都诚心诚意地为她的死感到悲伤。在她的朋友当中，最为痛苦的当数威廉斯夫人、约翰逊小姐以及那位公爵；后面这两位对她的关切可是最最真心的，尤以爱丽丝为甚，毕竟她曾经跟露西相处了整整一个晚上，而且从那之后就再也没有想起过她。公爵大人的苦痛也同样不难理解，过去这十天来，他感受到露西的温柔怜爱与真切关心，如今却失去了她。对露西的死，他忠贞不渝地哀悼了两个礼拜，随后却让卡罗琳·辛普森野心得偿，抬举她当了公爵夫人。辛普森小姐最期盼的事情终于做成，自是十分地称心如意。至于她的妹妹——那位背信弃义的苏姬，在此后不久也同样被大伙儿吹捧了几天，她倒也受之无愧，而且就她的所作所为来看，这根本就是她一向的渴望。她的残忍谋杀行为被人发现，尽管亲朋好友纷纷求情，她还是很快被送上了绞刑架。还有美丽动人却装模作样的塞西莉亚，她觉得自己的魅力无人能敌，更何况如果就连卡罗琳都能勾搭上一位公爵，那么她有志要赢得某位王子的青睐也就无可厚非了，不过她知道自己祖国的那些王子基本上都已经“名花有主”，所以她离开了英格兰。据我所知，她如今是莫卧儿[7]大帝最为宠爱的妃子。

与此同时，帕米迪德尔的住户们也大大地吃了一惊，而且好奇得

紧，因为有传言说，查尔斯·亚当斯打算要成婚了。但那位小姐的芳名却仍旧无人知晓。琼斯先生和琼斯太太猜测是约翰逊小姐；不过约翰逊小姐比他们要清楚，她只担心他要娶他的厨娘。可是叫所有人意外的是，他竟公然娶了威廉斯夫人。

[2] Pammydiddle, 据William Baker (威廉·贝克) 所著的*Critical Companion to Jane Austen* (《简·奥斯汀的重要伴侣》) 中122页所述,该地名是作者将“Pam”与“diddle”这两个词合并在一起生造而成,前者是一种以梅花J (即Pam) 作为王牌的纸牌游戏,后者则是“欺骗”的意思。

[3] 半英里约为805米,后文的3/4英里大约是1207米,作者在此处似乎是用(极为)夸张的修辞手法。

[5] alehouse (啤酒坊), 多为女性经营,出售自酿的啤酒。

[6] 据William Baker (威廉·贝克) 所著的*Critical Companion to Jane Austen* (《简·奥斯汀的重要伴侣》) 中537页所述, supper指的是一天中最后一餐,并不需要非常丰盛,尤其是已经吃过盛大晚餐 (dinner) 的情况下。故而本书中supper统一译为夜宵, dinner则一律译为晚餐。

亨利与伊丽莎

谨将本篇小说献给库珀 [8] 小姐。

她恭顺又卑微的仆人

作者敬上

这天，乔治爵爷和哈考特夫人在监督晒干草的工人干活，见着勤快的便赞许地笑笑，对着偷懒的就打几棍子。恰在此时，他俩看见一垛干草堆底下躺着个漂亮的小女孩，最多不过三个月大，差点就被那茂密的草叶给挡住了。

夫妇俩自己并没有孩子，看到她那可爱秀美的面容，听到她活力十足的儿语，似在回答他俩那许许多多的疑问，不禁深受感动、大为欣喜，于是决定把她带回家，悉心照料，供她念书。

这夫妻俩本身都是好人，所以他俩认为，最首要也是最主要的就是激励她热爱美德、憎恨恶行，在这一点上，他们做得非常成功（伊丽莎的天性本就如此）。待到她长大以后，凡是认识她的人，都觉得她很讨人喜欢。

哈考特夫人宠着她，乔治爵爷疼着她，全世界都爱着她，这孩子一直过得快快乐乐，从未吃过一点苦，直到她十八岁这年。有一天，她那冷酷无情的恩主夫妇发现她偷了一张五十英镑的钞票，便将她逐出家门。对于那些没有伊丽莎这般伟大高尚思想的人而言，要是他们遭逢如此剧变，肯定就只有死路一条，不过伊丽莎知道自己是出类拔萃之人，于是开开心心地自娱自乐起来。她坐在一棵树下，现编现唱了下面这段歌词。

歌

尽管我双脚踏进不幸的阴影，

可我希望自己永远不会缺了友情，

只因我将永葆心灵的无邪，

绝不背离美德的疆界。

她唱着这支歌儿，愉快地想着心事，如此消遣了几个钟头才站起

身来，走上通往M镇的那条公路。M是一个小小的集镇，她最要好的朋友就在那里，经营着一家名叫红狮 [9] 的小酒馆。

她径直来到朋友这里，向她讲述了自己新近的不幸遭遇，同时表明心愿，说她想要去人家家里做个卑微的女伴。

要伊丽莎说，这世上最可亲的人，那就是威尔逊太太了。她刚一知晓伊丽莎的愿望，便在酒馆里坐下来，给她最为敬重的F公爵夫人修书一封，信中这样写道：

F公爵夫人 敬启

恳请贵府收留一名年轻女子，她的人品高洁无瑕，不想去做女佣，却愿意与您做伴。请快些将她从我的怀抱里带走吧。

萨拉·威尔逊敬上

这位公爵夫人和威尔逊太太友谊深厚，就算为她付出一切代价也在所不惜，现如今这么一个大好机会摆在面前，让她能够为威尔逊太太效劳，公爵夫人自是大喜过望。因此，收到信以后她即刻就启程上路，当天晚上便到了红狮酒馆。F公爵夫人年约四十五六，很容易激动，交了朋友便死心塌地，结了仇恨也绝不会回心转意。她是个寡妇，唯一的女儿眼下正在跟一个极为富有的年轻人谈婚论嫁。

公爵夫人一看到咱们的女主角，就张开双臂搂住她的脖子，宣称自己对她十分喜欢，并决定今后和她永不分离。听到她这一番友情宣言，伊丽莎很是欣喜，她洒泪挥别亲爱的威尔逊太太，次日一早陪着公爵夫人来到了她位于萨里郡的宅第。

公爵夫人将她介绍给女儿哈丽雅特小姐 [10] 认识，言辞之间尽显殷殷关切。哈丽雅特小姐非常喜欢她的相貌，于是恳求与她以姐妹相待，伊丽莎纡尊降贵地答应了。

哈丽雅特小姐的恋人塞西尔先生常常到公爵夫人家里来，因而也就经常见到伊丽莎。他和伊丽莎互生情愫，塞西尔先开口表白了自己的爱，并劝说伊丽莎跟他私订终身。他没费什么力气便得到伊丽莎的应允，而且，他俩确信，公爵夫人的牧师也深爱着伊丽莎，只要是为她效劳，他什么都愿意做。

有天晚上，公爵夫人和哈丽雅特小姐去参加一个集会，他俩便趁着她们离家的大好机会，在那位倾心于伊丽莎的牧师主持下结为夫妻。

夫人和小姐回到家才大吃一惊地发现，伊丽莎不见了，只留下一张便条，上面写道：

夫人：

我们结婚了，就此别过。

亨利·塞西尔和伊丽莎·塞西尔

这封信已经足以将整件事情解释得一清二楚，夫人读完之后勃然大怒，用尽了她盛怒之下所能想到的一切难听字眼大骂他们，舒舒服服骂了半小时。随后派出三百人带着武器去追他们，同时下令说，活要见人，死要见尸，决不允许空手而归。夫人的打算是，如果这些人真的将他俩活着带回来了，她就先把他俩关上几年，再折磨至死。

与此同时，逃跑在外的塞西尔和伊丽莎来到了欧洲大陆。他俩认为在这里比在祖国要安全一些，可以免遭公爵夫人的可怕报复——他们的担心是极有道理的。

他俩在法兰西先后生下两个男孩，只是结婚才三年伊丽莎就成了寡妇，无力养活她自己 and 两个孩子。自从结婚以来，他们几乎是挣多少花多少，没存下几个钱来。他们每年的花销是一万两千磅，可是塞西尔先生留下的遗产却连这个数字的二十分之一都不到。

伊丽莎深知这摊子事是没法儿理清爽了，丈夫一死，她便乘着一艘装有五十五门大炮的军舰回到英格兰，这军舰还是他俩当初手头比较宽裕的时候建造的。可是她一手牵着一个孩子刚刚踏上多佛尔的海岸，就被公爵夫人派来的军官抓住，送进了地牢。这里地方虽小，倒也温暖舒适，恰似夫人私家的新门 [11] 监狱，是公爵夫人专为款待她的秘密囚犯而建。

进了地牢之后，伊丽莎第一桩想到的事就是如何离开这里。

她来到门口，门是锁着的。她看看窗户，窗上有铁条。两条路都不通，她好生沮丧，觉得逃跑无望，正在万念俱灰之际，居然瞧见监房一角摆着一把小锯子和一架绳梯，这可真是鸿运当头。她立刻就拿起锯子动起了手，几个礼拜之后，她已经锯掉了所有的铁条，只留下一根用来拴绳梯。

接下来又遇到的一个难题，她想了好些时候才找到解决的法子。她的孩子们年纪还太小，没法儿自己从绳梯上爬下去，而她下去的时候又不可能抱着他俩一起。最后她决定，先把她所有的衣物都扔下去——她多的就是衣服，再严令孩子们切不可伤了自己，然后把他们也扔下去。她自己则轻轻松松地顺着绳梯往下爬，到了底下，她满意地发现两个小家伙都完好无损、睡得正香。

如今她觉得，她和孩子们要想活下去，这些衣服就非卖不可了。挥泪告别昔日辉煌仅存的遗迹之后，她用所得的钱财去买了些其他更

有用处的东西——给孩子们买了些玩具，又给她自己买了块金表。

上述这些生活必需品刚刚拿到手，她就开始觉得饥肠辘辘，并且有理由相信她的两个孩子也差不多是同样的情形，因为他们正要啃下她的两根手指头。

眼见得大难临头、躲避不过，为了做些补救，她只好下定决心，仍旧回去找她的老朋友——乔治爵爷和哈考特夫人，他二人慷慨大度，她曾多次亲身体会，只盼着如今也能再度亲历。

他们那舒适宜人的大宅距此还有四十英里，她马不停蹄地走了三十英里，发现前方是一座小镇。在从前那段幸福的时光，她常常陪着乔治爵爷和哈考特夫人来到这里，在其中一家客栈里吃顿冷餐。

往事历历涌上心头，她记起自己最后一次开心地这样吃吃喝喝，记起自己从那以后所经历的桩桩奇遇，一时间想出了神，便在一位先生家门前的台阶上坐下了。往昔忆完，她立起身，决心就在那家给她留下愉快回忆的客栈安营扎寨，指望着从进进出出的宾客那里讨些赏钱。

她刚刚在客栈院子里选定位置站好，一辆马车便驶将出来，在转过她所站的角落时停下，以便车夫能有机会欣赏一番她美丽的芳容。伊丽莎于是走到车旁，打算向他们乞求施舍，可是一看到车里的那位夫人，她便惊叫起来。

“哈考特夫人！”

听到这话，那位夫人答道：“伊丽莎！”

“是的，夫人，我正是可怜的伊丽莎。”

乔治爵爷也在马车里，吃惊得说不出话来，他正要请伊丽莎说说她眼下这是什么处境，哈考特夫人却喜不自胜地喊道：“乔治爵爷，乔治爵爷，伊丽莎不仅是咱们的养女，她还是咱们的亲生女儿。”

“咱们的亲生女儿！哈考特夫人，你这话从何说起？你也知道自己从未生过一男半女，求你说说清楚吧。”

“乔治爵爷，你一定还记得，当初你乘船去往美洲的时候，我已经怀孕了。”

“我记得，我记得，请继续说吧，亲爱的波莉。”

“你离开四个月之后，我生下了这个女孩，可我害怕你会不高兴，因为你想要的是男孩。于是我带着她来到一垛干草堆旁，将她放在那里。又过了几个礼拜，你回来了，万幸的是，你并未向我问起此事。我以为自己的孩子过得很好，觉得心满意足，很快就忘了自己曾有过孩子。所以，不久之后咱们在那垛干草底下发现她时，不仅你没

想到她是我的孩子，就连我自己都没有想到，尽管我当初正是在那里把她放下的。冒昧地说，本来没什么会让我想起此事，但是刚才偶然间听到她的声音，我忽然意识到，这跟我自己那孩子的声音正是一模一样。”

“这事的来龙去脉你解释得合情合理，令人信服，”乔治爵爷说道，“毫无疑问，她就是咱们的女儿，既是如此，对她当年犯下的盗窃罪行，我便既往不咎了。”

双方就此言归于好，伊丽莎带着她的两个孩子登上马车，回到她已阔别近四年的那个家。

伊丽莎在哈考特庄园重拾往日威势，随即便募集了一支军队，带着他们将公爵夫人那温暖舒适的监狱夷为平地，此举为她赢得了千万人的称道，她心里也觉得自己做得极好。

漂亮的卡桑德拉

经奥斯汀小姐 [12] 许可，特将本小说敬献于她，共十二章。

献词

小姐：

您就如同凤凰 [13] 一般。您品位高雅、情怀高尚、美德无数。您容颜秀丽、体形优美、风姿绰约。您举止优雅、言谈理性、相貌出众。如果下面这篇小说能供您消遣一时，我也就再无所求了。

您最最恭顺卑微的仆人

作者敬上

卡桑德拉是邦德街 [14] 上一位著名女帽制造商的独生女儿。她的父亲出身高贵，和某某公爵夫人的管家是近亲。

二

到了十六岁这年，卡桑德拉已经出落得美丽动人，性子也很和气。她刚巧看上了一顶精致优雅的帽子——这是一位伯爵夫人订做的，她的母亲才刚刚做好。她将这顶帽子戴在自己那漂亮的脑袋上，然后走出她母亲的商店，出门闯荡去了。

三

她遇见的第一个人是一位子爵，这个大名鼎鼎的年轻人不仅德才兼备，而且风度翩翩、相貌英俊。她对他屈膝一礼，随后继续前进。

四

她走进一家糕点店，风卷残云般吞下六份冰激凌，却拒绝付钱，将糕点师打倒在地，然后扬长而去。

五

接下来，她登上了一辆出租马车，命车夫前往汉普斯特德，可是

刚到那里，她却又命令车夫掉转车头送她回来。

六

回到了出发时的同一条街、同一个地点，车夫向她索要车钱。

七

她在衣兜里搜了一遍又一遍，却一无所获，一分钱也找不到。车夫强横起来，她便将帽子往他头上一戴，拔腿跑了。

八

跑过一条又一条街道，她一直平安无事，直到经过布鲁斯伯里广场的转角，在这里她遇见了玛丽亚。

九

卡桑德拉吓了一跳，玛丽亚似乎也大吃一惊；她俩颤抖着，脸色由红转白，然后一语不发地擦肩而过。

十

有人和卡桑德拉搭讪，那人是个寡妇，跟卡桑德拉是朋友。她的脑袋小，窗户却更小，她便将脑袋从窗户里挤出来，向卡桑德拉问好。卡桑德拉屈膝一礼，然后继续前进。

十一

又走过四分之一英里，卡桑德拉回到了邦德街上的家里，此时她已经离家近七小时了。

十二

她走进家门，被母亲紧紧拥在怀里。这真是位贤妻良母。卡桑德拉微微一笑，低声自语道：“今天过得可真充实。”

[12] Cassandra-Elizabeth Austen (卡桑德拉-伊丽莎白·奥斯汀，1773—1845)，作者的姐姐。本篇作品很可能创作于1787年至1788年之间，因为作者一家曾于1788年8月到访过作品中的背景地伦敦。

[13] 作者在献词中将姐姐卡桑德拉喻为“凤凰”，这一点颇令人费解。据R. W.查普曼编纂的《简·奥斯汀作品集第六卷：次要作品》，这可能是指卡桑德拉像凤凰一样以虚构的形式重现在这篇由十二个章

节构成的小说里。

一位处境困难的年轻女子写给友人的信 [15]

几天以前，我去参加阿什伯纳姆先生举办的一场私人舞会。因为家母从不出去交际，她便将我托付给格雷维尔夫人照顾，夫人赏光同意顺道来接我，并且允许我面向前方坐着——对于这一优待，我倒是无所谓，尤其是我深知夫人将之视为赐予我的莫大恩惠。“哎，玛丽亚小姐”（夫人看见我朝着马车车门走来，便开口说道），“今天晚上你看起来特别漂亮——我可怜的女儿们在你身旁可就被比下去了。但愿你妈妈别因为让你出门而担心。你这是穿了一件新礼服吗？”

“是的，夫人。”我尽量不动声色地答道。

“对嘛，我也觉得这件挺好（她用手摸了摸，因为我是蒙她恩准坐在她旁边的），我敢说这礼服非常时髦，不过我得直说——你知道我总是想到什么就说什么，我觉得这钱花得冤枉。你为什么不能穿你那件条纹的旧礼服呢？我这人不会因为人家穷就横加挑剔，我一向认为，穷人应该被人瞧不起，被人可怜，但不该受人责备，特别是那些身不由己的穷人。可是另一方面我也得说，在我看来，你那件条纹的旧礼服穿在你身上就已经很不错了，跟你说实话吧（我这人向来想到什么就说什么），我想舞会上恐怕有一半的人压根儿就不会知道你有没有礼服，不过我估摸着你是打算今天晚上钓个金龟婿。嗯，那就是越快越好了，祝你成功。”

“夫人，其实我并无此意——”

“谁听过哪位年轻姑娘承认自己想嫁个有钱人啊？”格雷维尔小姐大笑着说，不过我相信埃伦肯定是同情我的。

“你走之前，你母亲已经睡下了吗？”夫人问道。

“亲爱的夫人，”埃伦说，“现在才九点。”

“话是不假，埃伦，但蜡烛是要花钱买的，威廉斯夫人这么明智，她可不会铺张浪费。”

“夫人，我走的时候，她刚刚坐下来准备吃夜宵。”

“她夜宵吃什么？”“我没看到。”“我猜是面包和奶酪吧。”“我觉得这就是最好的夜宵了。”埃伦说道。“这话真没道理，”她母亲反驳道，“你哪天吃得都比这个好。”格雷维尔小姐夸张地大笑起来，她听见她妈妈说俏皮话时总是这个反应。

这便是我乘坐夫人的马车时被迫面临的屈辱境地。我却不敢失礼，母亲总是告诫我，要想立足于世，就须谦卑忍耐。她坚持认为，只要格雷维尔夫人开口相邀，我就不可拒绝。若非如此，我是断然不会踏进她家一步的，也绝不会登上她的马车，因为肯定会不愉快——她总是对我恶语相向，缘由不过是我穷罢了。我们到达阿什伯纳姆府上时已近十点，比预期晚了一个半小时；不过格雷维尔夫人是个时髦的人（或者说她自以为很时髦），自然是不会守时的。舞会尚未开始，专为等着格雷维尔小姐。进屋之后不久，伯纳德先生便来邀我跳舞，我们正要起身，他却记起自己的白手套还在仆人那里，于是立刻跑出去取。就在此时，舞会开始了，走向另一个房间的格雷维尔夫人刚好从我面前经过，她看见我，随即停下脚步，也不管近旁还有好几个人，开口说道：

“你好啊，玛丽亚小姐！找不到舞伴吗？可怜的姑娘！我看你的新礼服怕是白穿了。不过别灰心，今天晚上这舞会结束前，没准你还能跳上一支舞的。”她一边这么说，一边继续走，尽管我一再保证已经有人邀请过我，她却根本不听，让我因为她在人前如此说我而大为光火——不过伯纳德先生很快就回来了，他一进房间就来到我身边，当着那些老夫人的面带我走向跳舞的人群。这些人刚才可都是听见了她那一席话的，但愿格雷维尔夫人对我人品所泼的脏水可以就此洗清。没过多久，跳舞的乐趣就使我忘却了一切烦恼，我拥有全场的最佳舞伴，并且他还是一大笔财产的继承人。我看得出格雷维尔夫人似乎很不高兴，因为她发现伯纳德先生竟然选了我做舞伴。她打定主意要给我难堪，于是当我们在跳舞间隙坐下休息时，她便带着梅森小姐朝我走来，比平日更加盛气凌人，大声开了口，全场有一半人都能听到她的声音：“请问，玛丽亚小姐，令祖是做哪个行当的？梅森小姐和我对此有点分歧，不知道他究竟是杂货商还是订书匠。”我明白她是想羞辱我，便决心尽量不让她的奸计得逞。“夫人，都不是；他是一名红酒商人。”“是了，我就知道他的工作低贱得很——他破产了不是吗？”“夫人，我想他并不曾破产。”“难道他没有潜逃吗？”“此事我闻所未闻。”“总之他死的时候还欠着债吧？”“从没有人如此说过。”“怎么，难道令尊不是穷得叮当响吗？”“我认为不是。”“他有一回是不是被人给告了？”“我倒不曾见过他出入法庭。”她狠狠地看了我一眼，怒气冲冲地转身走了；我却是喜忧参半，喜的是我没有对她恭敬有礼，忧的是怕旁人会觉得我太过粗鲁。格雷维尔夫人被我气极了，一晚上都不再搭理我了，不过，即便她对我青眼有加，也同样会无视我的存在，因为她喜欢跟一群大人物待在一起，除非是实在找不到人说话了，否则她可不会理睬我。吃夜宵时，格雷维尔小姐跟她母亲那一帮人坐在一起，不过埃伦更愿意和我以及伯纳德一家待在一块儿。我们跳舞跳得很开心，回家的路上格雷维尔夫人一直在睡觉，所以这一路我还是挺自在的。

第二天我们吃晚餐的时候，格雷维尔夫人的马车来到门口停下了，她一般认为就该这个时候来。她叫仆人进来传话，说她“不能下车，但有话要对玛丽亚小姐讲，所以请小姐务必去到马车门口，而且要赶紧去、马上去”！“妈妈，这话可真是太无礼了！”我说。她却答道：“去吧，玛丽亚。”于是我只得出去，被迫听凭夫人摆布，顶着刺骨的狂风站在那里。

“玛丽亚小姐，我怎么觉得你没有昨晚那么漂亮了——不过我不是来查看你穿了什么衣裳的，只是想告诉你一声，后天你可以来和我们共进晚餐。不是明天。记好了，明天别来，因为我们要宴请克莱蒙特勋爵和夫人以及托马斯·斯坦利爵爷一家。我后天不会派马车来接你，所以你得委屈一下，要是下雨的话，你就把伞带上——”听到她恩准我不让自己淋湿，我差点就忍不住大笑起来。“还有，请你务必记住要准时，我可不会等着你。我讨厌食物被煮过头。不过你倒也不必提前来。你母亲还好吗？她在吃晚餐是吧？”“是的，夫人，您大驾光临的时候，我们刚好在用晚餐。”“玛丽亚，你恐怕很冷吧。”埃伦说。“是很冷，这东风 [16] 吹得真是吓人——”她母亲说道，“实话对你说，这窗子开着我都要受不了了。不过，玛丽亚小姐，你已经被风吹习惯了吧，所以你的肤色才会如此红润粗糙。你们这些不常有马车坐的年轻姑娘从来就不在意辛苦赶路时是什么天气，也无所谓风吹起裙子露出了腿。我是不会让我的女儿们在这种天气像你这样站在外头的。可是有一种人，要么就是感觉不到冷，要么就是不知道体贴别人。好了，别忘记礼拜四下午五点钟到我们家里来。你千万要叫女仆晚上来接你，那天不会有月光，你走回家这一路会很可怕。替我向你的母亲问好。恐怕你的晚餐都要凉了。赶车走吧。”她就这么走了，我却被她气得怒火中烧。她每次都是如此。

一位热恋中的年轻女子写给友人的信 [17]

我叔叔越来越小气，我婶婶越来越挑剔，而我却一天比一天爱恋更深。如此发展下去，到了年底不知会是何等光景！今天早晨，我有幸收到亲爱的默斯格罗夫写来的信，内容如下：

萨克维尔街：1月7日

自我初见美丽的亨丽埃塔那天起，迄今已有整整一月，这是个神圣的纪念日，必须以某种与之相称的方式记录下来，所以我便写信给她。我永远也不会忘记她的美貌第一次展露在我眼前的那一刻——如您所知，时间绝不可能将此刻从我记忆中抹去。我和她相遇在斯库达摩尔夫人家里。夫人何其有幸，住处竟与亨丽埃塔女神的居所相距不足一英里！当这可爱的人儿踏进房间之时，哦！我的感觉是怎样的？见到您，我惊为天人，一脸爱慕地注视着您，您的魅力似乎每一刻都有增无减。不幸的默斯格罗夫未及环顾左右便为您的妩媚所俘虏。是的，小姐，我爱上了您，这是我的幸运，亦是我的不幸，对此我却只有无尽感激。我扪心自问：“默斯格罗夫，你凭着哪一点能为亨丽埃塔牺牲呢？你这令人羡慕的凡夫俗子！你为伊人憔悴，伊人却不只为你一人所独钟，有位上校也倾心于她，还有位准男爵为了她举杯祝酒！”迷人的亨丽埃塔，您是多么美丽！我宣布，您就是女神！您并非一介凡人，您是天使，维纳斯就是您。总而言之，小姐，我此生从未见过比您更漂亮的姑娘。您允许默斯格罗夫爱您，给我以希望，您在我眼中便更加美丽动人。

啊！天使般的亨丽埃塔小姐，我是多么热切地期盼着您那可憎的叔父和缺德的婶娘早赴黄泉，此心此情，苍天可鉴。我的佳人非要等他们死了才肯答应嫁给我，因为他们的遗产可以让她过上富足的生活，而我的财产却不足以做到。尽管我的产业还是有可能增加的，可是狠心的亨丽埃塔决意如此，不肯动摇！我目前和姐姐住在一起，我自己的房子虽好，眼下却有些破败失修，在修葺完毕可以住人之前，我打算一直住在姐姐家里。再见了，我心中温柔可亲的公主，我用这颗心颤抖着签下自己的名字。

您最狂热的崇拜者以及忠实卑微的仆人

T.默斯格罗夫

玛蒂尔达，这就是一封典型的情书啊！如此富有见地，如此充满感情，思想如此纯洁，语言如此流畅，如此情真意切，全都集于这一张纸上。你从前可曾读过这样的杰作？不，这个问题我可回答不了，像默斯格罗夫这样的人是可遇不可求的。哦！我多么想和他在一起！我打算明天把下面这封信寄给他作为回复。

最最亲爱的默斯格罗夫，来信收到，吾心甚喜，无以言表；我以为自己会喜极而泣，因我爱你胜过这世上任何人。在我眼中，你是英格兰最可亲、最英俊的男人，你肯定就是如此。这是我此生读过的最甜蜜的来信，再像这样给我写一封吧，把字里行间都写满你对我的爱。我迫不及待想要见你。咱们怎么才能设法见上一面？我们是如此相爱，分离会要了我们的命。哦！亲爱的默斯格罗夫，你无法想象我是多么盼望叔父和婶娘快点死，简直都等不及了。我对你的爱恋与日俱增，如果他们不早点死的话，我想我一定会发疯的。你的姐姐何其幸福，能够享受到你在家中与她为伴的乐趣；伦敦的众人何其幸福，因为有你在那里。亲爱的默斯格罗夫，希望能很快再次收到你的信，我以前可从未读到过如此甜蜜的来信。

永远最忠于您的亨丽埃塔·霍尔顿敬上

但愿他会喜欢我的回信，我也只能写到这样了，不过跟他的信还是不能相提并论；事实上，我一贯听人说他很会写情书。你知道，我跟他第一次见面是在斯库达摩尔夫人的家里。后来我见到夫人的时候，她便问我对她的表弟默斯格罗夫印象如何。

“哎，不瞒您说，”我说道，“我觉得他是个非常英俊的年轻人。”

“你这么想，我很高兴，”她答道，“因为他已经疯狂地爱上了你。”

“天哪！斯库达摩尔夫人，”我说，“您怎么能说出如此荒唐的话来？”

“这话不仅不荒唐，而且是千真万确，”她答道，“我敢担保，他从见到你的那一刻起就爱上你了。”

“但愿如此，”我说，“一见钟情还是有些道理的，对于其他的种种爱情，我都不屑一顾。”

“好啦，恭喜你，这就把他给征服了，”斯库达摩尔夫人说道，“我相信他已经完全没有招架之力。我表弟是个很迷人的小伙子，见过许多世面，还很会写情书，我读过最好的情书都是他写的，所以你这也算是一场大胜了。”

听了这话，我非常高兴，对我的爱情俘虏更是极为满意。不过我

觉得自己还是应该摆摆架子，于是我对她说：“斯库达摩尔夫人，这当然好，不过您也知道，我们这些将要继承大笔遗产的年轻小姐可万万不能委身下嫁身无分文的男人。”

“亲爱的霍尔顿小姐，”她说，“关于这一点，我和你一样确信无疑。而且，我向你保证，不管是谁，要是他没有指望发财，我是断然不会怂恿你嫁给他的。默斯格罗夫先生远远谈不上身无分文，他继承了一笔遗产，每年大约有几百镑的收入，将来可能还会大大增加，他还有一处极好的房产，只是眼下仍需要修葺一番就是了。”

“如果是这样的话，”我答道，“那我就说不出什么来反对他了。要是如您所言，他是个见多识广的年轻人，又写得一手好情书，我相信我没有道理因为他倾慕于我而对他挑三拣四。不过，斯库达摩尔夫人，我恐怕不会因此就嫁给他。”

“你当然不是非得嫁给他不可，”夫人说道，“不过你会心甘情愿听凭爱情的摆布。要是我猜得差不离的话，此刻你已经对他情根深种，只是还不自知罢了。”

“啊呀，斯库达摩尔夫人，”我红着脸答道，“您怎么会想到那儿去呢？”

“因为你的眼神、言谈无一不在泄露你的心事，”夫人说道，“得啦，亲爱的亨丽埃塔，把我当作朋友，跟我实话实说吧，在所有认识的男子当中，你是不是最喜欢默斯格罗夫先生？”

“斯库达摩尔夫人，请不要问我此类问题，”我背过脸说道，“我是不好回答的。”

“才不是呢，我的宝贝，”她答道，“现在你已经证实了我的猜测。可是，亨丽埃塔，你既然是爱得其所，却又为何羞于承认，为何不肯向我吐露实情？”

“我并没有羞于承认，”我鼓起勇气说道，“也并非不肯向你吐露实情，厚着脸皮说一句，我确实爱着您的表弟默斯格罗夫先生，这是真心诚意的爱恋，爱上一个相貌英俊的男子并不丢脸。要是他平平无奇，我也许还有理由对这份感情感到羞耻，因为所爱之人不值得，所以这爱情本身也必定低贱。可是您的表弟有着这样的身材与面孔，还有那么漂亮的头发，如此出众的品质令我印象深刻，我为何要羞于承认呢？”

“我的好姑娘（斯库达摩尔夫人说着就热情洋溢地来拥抱我），在这些事情上头，你的看法可真是周到细致，像你这个年纪的人倒很少有这般机敏的洞察力！哦！你这高尚的情怀令我肃然起敬！”

“夫人，果真如此吗？”我说道，“您真是太热心了。不过，斯库达

摩尔夫人，请您告诉我，是您的表弟亲口对您说他爱慕我的吗？如果是这样，那我就会更喜爱他几分，要是连个红颜知己都没有，那他还算哪门子的情郎呢？”

“哦！我的宝贝，”她答道，“你们俩简直是天生的一对。你说的每一个字都让我更加深刻地确信，你们俩意气相投，你们的头脑仿佛受到一股无形的力量驱使，因为你们俩的想法和观点竟是分毫不差。不，就连你们头发的颜色都很相近。是的，亲爱的姑娘，正是可怜又绝望的默斯格罗夫本人对我透露了他的情事。我倒是没觉得吃惊，虽然不知道为什么会这样，但我有种预感，他一定会爱上你。”

“那么，他是如何对您说的？”

“那是在用完元宵之后，我们围坐在炉火旁，聊着无关紧要的话题，其实基本上都是我一个人在说，他心事重重、一言不发，可就在我说到一半的时候，他突然打断了我，用一种夸张至极的语气喊道——

‘是的，我恋爱了，现在我才明白我已拜倒在亨丽埃塔·霍尔顿的石榴裙下——’”

“哦！他这表白的方式，”我说道，“还真是甜蜜！竟然为我作了如此动听的两句诗！只可惜并不押韵！”

“看到你喜欢这两句诗，我也很欣慰，”她答道，“这里头肯定是值得好好品味一番的。‘那么你爱她吗，表弟？’我说道，‘我真替你感到惋惜，尽管你方方面面都无懈可击，有一笔可能大幅增加的可观财产，又有一栋破败失修的漂亮房子，可她是迷人的亨丽埃塔，有位上校向她求过婚，还有位准男爵曾为她举杯祝酒，谁能指望抱得美人归呢？’”

“我曾——”我喊道。

斯库达摩尔夫人却还在往下说。“啊，亲爱的表姐，”他答道，‘有这么多人爱慕着她，我也相当确信自己不大可能赢得她的芳心，不需要您再来泼冷水。不过，我想要为她赴死，成为她迷人魅力的牺牲品，相信无论是您还是美丽的亨丽埃塔本人，肯定都会成全我这美好的心愿。待我死后’他继续说道——”

“哦，斯库达摩尔夫人，”我擦着眼睛说，“这么一个漂亮的人儿竟然会说死！”

“此情此景，的确感人至深。”斯库达摩尔夫人答道，“待我死后，’他说，‘请将我抬去放在她的脚边，也许她会收起不屑，在我那可怜的尸体上洒下一滴同情的泪水。’”

“亲爱的斯库达摩尔夫人，”我打断她道，“快别说这个叫人伤心的话题了，我受不了。”

“哦！我可真喜欢你这温柔可人的性子，无论如何我都不会让你太过伤心的，那我就不说了。”

“还请您接着说吧。”我说道。她便继续说了下去。

“到了那时，’他又说道，‘啊！表姐，想象一下吧，当我感觉到那宝贵的泪水一滴滴落在我脸上，我该会是何等激动！为了一尝这般狂喜的滋味，谁会不愿赴死呢！等我下葬之后，但愿某个比我幸运的年轻人能得到亨丽埃塔女神的青睐，但愿他亦如不幸的默斯格罗夫一般对她一往情深，待我化为尘土之时，但愿他俩成为幸福夫妻的楷模！”

“你可曾听过如此感伤的话语？等他死后叫人将他抬到我的脚边，多么可爱的心愿啊！哦！能怀有这样一个心愿，他的思想必然崇高无比！”

斯库达摩尔夫人接着说道：“‘啊！亲爱的表弟，’我对他说，‘任何女人见到你这高尚的行为，无论她生来是怎样的铁石心肠，也一定会被你融化的；要是亨丽埃塔女神听到你这一番对她幸福的慷慨祝愿，似她那般心软的人，我想她定会怜惜你的情意，努力回报于你。’”哦，表姐，’他答道，‘请不要试图用这种安慰人的好听话来给我希望。不，我不敢奢望能讨得这天使般女子的欢心，除了一死，我已别无他法。’真爱总是叫人意志消沉的，’我答道，‘可是，亲爱的汤姆，我还要给你更大的希望，你是有望征服佳人芳心的。你且放心，我密切关注了她整整一天，我看得明明白白，她心中已然对你情根深种，只是她还不自知罢了。’”

“亲爱的斯库达摩尔夫人，”我喊道，“这事就连我都不知道呢！”

“我适才不是说了吗？你对此尚不自知。我继续对他说：‘我可没有一开始就把这事说出来给你鼓劲儿，意外之喜才更让人高兴。’”不，表姐，’他说道，声音无精打采的，‘你说什么我都不会相信自己能够令亨丽埃塔·霍尔顿心动，要是你在欺骗自己，就请你不要试图来欺骗我。’总而言之，亲爱的，我劝了这灰心丧气的可怜年轻人好几个小时，说你真的喜欢他；到了最后，他终于不再否认我那强有力的论据，相信了我的话，那一刻他激动不已、欣喜若狂，我简直没法形容。”

“哦！亲爱的人儿，”我大声地说，“他爱我爱得多么深情！可是，亲爱的斯库达摩尔夫人，你有没有对他说，我是完全依赖叔父和婶娘过活的？”

“当然，我什么都对他说了。”

“那他怎么说？”

“他大喊大叫，把所有的叔伯姑婶都刻毒抨击了一通；又指责英格兰的法律有问题，明明侄儿侄女缺钱，法律却容许当长辈的将财产抓住不放，还说他要是下议院的议员，就要改革立法机关，消除其一切弊病。”

“哦！这个大好人！他多么有志气啊！”我说。

“他还说，就算他的房子已经一切就绪待你入住，他也不敢自作多情，以为美丽的亨丽埃塔会为他自降身份，放弃已经习以为常的奢华与尊荣，却只换得他那有限的收入所能负担的舒适雅致。我对他说，她是不可能这么做的，如今她有权有势且行事高贵，用手中的权力对同胞中的贫穷民众广施善行，要是你认为她能够仅仅为了成全你和她自己而放弃权势，这对她可不公平。”

“那是当然，”我说，“我确实时不时地会做点善事。默斯格罗夫先生听了这话怎么说？”

“他回答说，他虽然忧伤，却不得不承认我所说的就是事实，所以如果他有这个福分，注定要和美丽的亨丽埃塔结为夫妻，那么不论他有多么迫不及待，他都得下定决心等下去，等待那幸运的日子来临，等到她脱离那些坏亲戚的辖制，等到她能够嫁与他为妻的那一天。”

他是多么高尚的人啊！哦！玛蒂尔达！我是何其幸运，竟然将要成为他的妻子！我的婶婶在喊我过去做馅饼了。再见，我亲爱的朋友。

一位年轻女子的来信 [18]

(她的感情过于强烈，判断力却不足，因而犯下许多违心之过)

亲爱的埃莉诺，我曾有过许多烦恼，也曾历经浮浮沉沉，虽然吃了苦头，但唯一令我感到安慰的就是，在仔细审视自己的所作所为之后，我相信这些完全是我咎由自取。我很小的时候便谋害了自己的父亲，其后又害死了母亲，现在我打算要去谋杀自己的姐姐了。我的宗教信仰经常变来变去，如今我也不知道自己还相信什么。过去这十二年来，我在每一场公开审判中都做了伪证，还伪造了我自己的遗嘱。总而言之，几乎没有哪一种罪行是我不曾犯过的，不过现在我要改过自新了。皇家骑兵卫队的马丁上校向我求婚了，我们不日即将完婚。我俩的恋爱颇不寻常，我来给你讲一讲。马丁上校是已故约翰·马丁爵士的次子。爵爷过世的时候富可敌国，却将大部分财产——大约八百万英镑——都留给了现任的托马斯爵士，只给三位幼子留下每人十万英镑遗产。凭着他这一点点微薄的收入，上校过了近四个月还算惬意的生活，然后他突然心血来潮，决意将长兄的财产全都夺来。他伪造了一份新遗嘱在法庭上出示，可是除了他自己，再没有别人愿意宣誓，保证这才是真遗嘱，然而他发了太多誓，没人相信他。当时我刚好从法庭门口经过，法官便召我进去，他对上校说我是一位淑女，愿意为了正义的目标见证一切，所以建议他来请求我。简而言之，这桩事件很快便妥善解决。上校和我宣誓说这份遗嘱属实，托马斯爵士只得交出他非法获得的财富。满怀感激的上校隔天便来拜访我，向我求了婚。现在我要去谋杀我姐姐了。

少女奥斯汀——《漂亮的卡桑德拉》译后记

《漂亮的卡桑德拉》这本小集子收录了简·奥斯汀少女时代的六篇作品，其中前三篇勉强可算完整的短篇小说，后三篇就只能算作练笔片段了。这些作品全都创作于1787年至1793年之间，彼时奥斯汀才不过是个尚未成年的小姑娘，大约相当于如今的中学生。记得曾经看过一部传记电影——《成为简·奥斯汀》，如果说这部电影试着还原了奥斯汀的感情生活，那么这个小小的选集则让读者可以一窥她在创作方面的成长历程。

说实话，翻译时我是吃了一惊的，尤其是前三篇的荒谬与幼稚，其中有些地方甚至不合逻辑到令人难以置信的地步。比如在《杰克与爱丽丝》一文中，作者描写约翰逊家的起居室有“半英里宽、3/4英里长”，这相当于八百多米宽、一千两百多米长，即便是用了夸张的修辞手法，恐也有过度之嫌。再比如在《亨利与伊丽莎》一文中，奥斯汀大笔一挥，让公爵夫人派了三百人带着武器去追捕私奔的亨利与伊丽莎。还有《漂亮的卡桑德拉》，虽然由十二章构成，然而每章只有短短一句话，就连正文之前的献词都比任何一个章节要长。看到这三篇小说里漏洞百出的情节，再想想这些乃是出自一个十二三岁的小女孩之手，我不由得暗笑自己太过较真。她写作一是因为自己热爱，二是为了娱乐家人，不过是些练笔之作，有多少人在这个年纪还在努力消除语法错误呢，她却已经刻画出了个性鲜明的众多人物。

后三篇的书信体片段写作时间略晚一些，笔触也稍显成熟。其中《一位处境困难的年轻女子写给友人的信》是全书我最爱的篇章，格雷维尔夫人身上可不就能看见《傲慢与偏见》中凯瑟琳·德波夫人的影子？她势利专横，自以为是，允许玛丽亚小姐在马车上面朝前方坐着便觉得这是赐予她的莫大恩惠；她认为穷人就不该穿新衣，晚上也不应该吃夜宵，而应当为了节省蜡烛早早睡下；她明知人家家里正是用餐时间，却特地赶在此时到访，可是又不肯下车，叫玛丽亚冒着刺骨寒风听她在马车里絮絮叨叨，还说出了这样的话：“我是不会让我的女儿们在这种天气像你这样站在外头的。可是有一种人，要么就是感觉不到冷，要么就是不知道体贴别人。”鲜活生动的人物形象跃然纸上，对话中的讽刺意味读来令人忍俊不禁，稍加改动便能拍出一集精彩的好剧。

“世界上这一半人的乐趣，那一半的人不会懂。”（One half of the world cannot understand the pleasures of the other.）年届四旬

的简·奥斯汀在《爱玛》一书中借由双十年华的女主角之口说出了这句至理名言。不经历少女时代的那些稚嫩可笑，何来成熟之后的睿智洞明？从译近十载，这是我译得最开心的一本书。得遇才华横溢的少女奥斯汀，并穿越时空与她同行一段，我何其幸运。

a novel

Is respectfully inscribed to Francis William Austen Esq^r Midshipman on board his Majesty's Ship the Perseverance

Servant The Author

CHAPTER THE FIRST

Mr Johnson was once upon a time about 53; in a twelve-month afterwards he was 54, which so much delighted him that he was determined to celebrate his next Birth day by giving a Masquerade to his Children and Freinds. Accordingly on the Day he attained his 55th year tickets were dispatched to all his Neighbours to that purpose. His acquaintance indeed in that part of the World were not very numerous as they consisted only of Lady Williams, Mr and Mrs Jones, Charles Adams and the 3 Miss Simpsons, who composed the neighbourhood of Pammydiddle and formed the Masquerade.

Before I proceed to give an account of the Evening, it will be proper to describe to my reader, the persons and Characters of the party introduced to his acquaintance.

Mr and Mrs Jones were both rather tall and very passionate, but were in other respects, good tempered, wellbehaved People. Charles Adams was an amiable, accomplished and bewitching young Man; of so dazzling a Beauty that none but Eagles could look him in the Face.

Miss Simpson was pleasing in her person, in her Manners and in her Disposition; an unbounded ambition was her only fault. Her second sister Sukey was Envious, Spitefull and Malicious. Her person was short, fat and disagreeable. Cecilia (the youngest) was perfectly handsome but too affected to be pleasing.

In Lady Williams every virtue met. She was a widow with a handsome Jointure and the remains of a very hand-some face. Tho'Benevolent and Candid, she was Generous and sincere; Tho'Pious and Good, she was Religious and amiable, and Tho'Elegant and Agreeable, she was Pol-ished and Entertaining.

The Johnsons were a family of Love, and though a little addicted to the Bottle and the Dice, had many good Qualities.

Such was the party assembled in the elegant Drawing Room of Johnson Court, amongst which the pleasing figure of a Sultana was the most remarkable of the female Masks. Of the Males a Mask representing the Sun, was the most universally admired. The Beams that darted from his Eyes were like those of that glorious Luminary tho'infinately superior. So strong were they that no one dared venture within half a mile of them; he had therefore the best part of the Room to himself, its size not amount-ing to more than 3 quarters of a mile in length and half a one in breadth. The Gentleman at last finding the feirce-ness of his beams to be very inconvenient to the concourse by obliging them to croud together in one corner of the room, half shut his eyes by which means, the Company discovered him to be Charles Adams in his plain green Coat, without any mask at all.

When their astonishment was a little subsided their attention was attracted by 2 Dominos who advanced in a horrible Passion; they were both very tall, but seemed in other respects to have many good qualities. 'These,' said the witty Charles, 'these are M^r and M^{rs} Jones,' and so indeed they were.

No one could imagine who was the Sultana! Till at length on her addressing a beautifull Flora who was reclining in a studied attitude on a couch, with 'Oh Cecilia, I wish I was really what I pretend to be', she was discovered by the never failing genius of Charles Adams, to be the elegant but ambitious Caroline Simpson, and the person to whom she addressed herself, he rightly imagined to be her lovely but affected sister Cecilia.

The Company now advanced to a Gaming Table where sat 3 Dominos (each with a bottle in their hand) deeply engaged; but a female in the character of Virtue fled with hasty footsteps from the shocking scene, whilst a little fat woman representing Envy, sate alternately on the fore-heads of the 3 Gamesters. Charles Adams was still as bright as ever; he soon discovered the party at play to be the 3 Johnsons, Envy to be Sukey Simpson and Virtue to be Lady Williams.

The Masks were then all removed and the Company retired to another room, to partake of an elegant and well managed Entertainment, after which the Bottle being pretty briskly pushed about by the 3 Johnsons, the whole party not excepting even Virtue were carried home, Dead Drunk.

CHAPTER THE SECOND

For three months did the Masquerade afford ample subject for conversation to the inhabitants of Pammydiddle; but no character at it was so fully expatiated on as Charles Adams. The singularity of his appearance, the beams which darted from his eyes, the brightness of his Wit, and the whole tout ensemble of his person had subdued the hearts of so many of the young Ladies, that of the six present at the Masquerade but five had returned uncap-tivated. Alice Johnson was the unhappy sixth whose heart had not been able to withstand the power of his Charms. But as it may appear strange to my Readers, that so much worth and Excellence as he possessed should have conquered only hers, it will be necessary to inform them that the Miss Simpsons were defended from his Power by Ambition, Envy, and Selfadmiration.

Every wish of Caroline was centered in a titled Husband; whilst in Sukey such superior excellence could only raise her Envy not her Love, and Cecilia was too tenderly attached to herself to be pleased with any one besides. As for Lady Williams and M^{rs} Jones, the former of them was too sensible, to fall in love with one so much her Junior and the latter, tho' very tall and very passionate was too fond of her Husband to think of such a thing.

Yet in spite of every endeavour on the part of Miss Johnson to discover any attachment to her in him; the cold and indifferent heart of Charles Adams still to all appearance, preserved its native freedom; polite to all but partial to none, he still remained the lovely, the lively, but insensible Charles Adams.

One evening, Alice finding herself somewhat heated by wine (no very uncommon case) determined to seek a relief for her disordered Head and Love-sick Heart in the Con-versation of the intelligent Lady Williams.

She found her Ladyship at home as was in general the Case, for she was not fond of going out, and like the great Sir Charles Grandison scorned to deny herself when at Home, as she looked on that fashionable method of shut-ting out disagreeable Visitors, as little less than downright Bigamy.

In spite of the wine she had been drinking, poor Alice was uncommonly out of spirits; she could think of nothing but Charles Adams, she could talk of nothing but him, and in short spoke so openly that Lady Williams soon discovered the unreturned affection she bore him, which excited her Pity and Compassion so strongly that she addressed her in the following Manner.

‘I perceive but too plainly my dear Miss Johnson, that your Heart has not been able to withstand the fascinating Charms of this Young Man and I pity you sincerely. Is it a first Love?’

‘It is.’

‘I am still more greived to hear that ; I am myself a sad example of the Miseries, in general attendant on a first Love and I am determined for the future to avoid the like Misfortune. I wish it may not be too late for you to do the same; if it is not endeavour my dear Girl to secure yourself from so great a Danger. A second attachment is seldom attended with any serious consequences; against that therefore I have nothing to say. Preserve yourself from a first Love and you need not fear a second.’

‘You mentioned Madam something of your having yourself been a sufferer by the misfortune you are so good as to wish me to avoid. Will you favour me with your Life and Adventures?’

‘Willingly my Love.’

CHAPTER THE THIRD

‘My Father was a gentleman of considerable Fortune in Berkshire; myself and a few more his only Children. I was but six years old when I had the misfortune of losing my Mother and being at that time young and Tender, my father instead of sending me to School, procured an able handed Governess to superintend my Education at Home. My Brothers were placed at Schools suitable to their Ages and my Sisters being all younger than myself, remained still under the Care of their Nurse.

‘Miss Dickins was an excellent Governess. She instructed me in the Paths of Virtue; under her tuition I daily became more amiable, and might perhaps by this time have nearly attained perfection, had not my worthy Preceptress been torn from my arms, e’er I had attained my seventeenth year. I never shall forget her last words. “My dear Kitty” she said. “Good night t’ye.” I never saw her afterwards,’ continued Lady Williams wiping her eyes, ‘She eloped with the Butler the same night.

‘I was invited the following year by a distant relation of my Father’s to spend the Winter with her in town. M^{rs} Watkins was a Lady of Fashion, Family and fortune; she was in general esteemed a pretty Woman, but I never thought her very handsome, for my part. She had too high a forehead, Her eyes were too small and she had too much colour.’

‘How can that be?’ interrupted Miss Johnson reddening with anger; ‘Do you think that any one can have too much colour?’

‘Indeed I do, and I’ll tell you why I do my dear Alice; when a person has too great a degree of red in their Complexion, it gives their face in my opinion, too red a look.’

‘But can a face my Lady have too red a look?’

‘Certainly my dear Miss Johnson and I’ll [tell] you why. When a face has too red a look it does not appear to so much advantage as it would were it paler.’

‘Pray Ma’am proceed in your story.’

‘Well, as I said before, I was invited by this Lady to spend some weeks with her in town. Many Gentlemen thought her Handsome but in my opinion, Her forehead was too high, her eyes too small and she had too much colour.’

‘In that Madam as I said before your Ladyship must have been mistaken. M^{rs} Watkins could not have too much colour since no one can have too much.’

‘Excuse me my Love if I do not agree with you in that particular. Let me explain myself clearly; my idea of the case is this. When a Woman has too great a proportion of red in her Cheeks, she must have too much colour.’

‘But Madam I deny that it is possible for any one to have too great a proportion of red in their Cheeks.'

'What my Love not if they have too much colour?'

Miss Johnson was now out of all patience, the more so perhaps as Lady Williams still remained so inflexibly cool. It must be remembered however that her Ladyship had in one respect by far the advantage of Alice; I mean in not being drunk, for heated with wine and raised by Pas-sion, she could have little command of her Temper.

The Dispute at length grew so hot on the part of Alice that 'From Words she almost came to Blows' When M^r Johnson luckily entered and with some difficulty forced her away from Lady Williams, M^{rs} Watkins and her red cheeks.

CHAPTER THE FOURTH

My Readers may perhaps imagine that after such a fracas, no intimacy could longer subsist between the Johnsons and Lady Williams, but in that they are mistaken for her Ladyship was too sensible to be angry at a conduct which she could not help perceiving to be the natural consequence of inebriety and Alice had too sincere a respect for Lady Williams and too great a relish for her Claret, not to make every concession in her power.

A few days after their reconciliation Lady Williams called on Miss Johnson to propose a walk in a Citron Grove which led from her Ladyship's pigstye to Charles Adams's Horsepond. Alice was too sensible of Lady Williams's kindness in proposing such a walk and too much pleased with the prospect of seeing at the end of it, a Horsepond of Charles's, not to accept it with visible delight. They had not proceeded far before she was roused from the reflection of the happiness she was going to enjoy, by Lady Williams's thus addressing her.

'I have as yet forborn my dear Alice to continue the narrative of my Life from an unwillingness of recalling to your Memory a scene which (since it reflects on you rather disgrace than credit) had better be forgot than remembered.'

Alice had already begun to colour up and was begin-ning to speak, when her Ladyship perceiving her displeasure, continued thus.

‘I am afraid my dear Girl that I have offended you by what I have just said; I assure you I do not mean to dis-tress you by a retrospection of what cannot now be helped; considering all things I do not think you so much to blame as many People do; for when a person is in Liquor, there is no answering for what they may do.’

‘Madam, this is not to be borne; I insist—’

‘My dear Girl don’t vex yourself about the matter; I assure you I have entirely forgiven every thing respecting it; indeed I was not angry at the time, because as I saw all along, you were nearly dead drunk. I knew you could not help saying the strange things you did. But I see I distress you; so I will change the subject and desire it may never again be mentioned; remember it is all forgot-I will now pursue my story; but I must insist upon not giving you any description of M^{rs} Watkins; it would only be reviving old stories and as you never saw her, it can be nothing to you, if her forehead was too high, her eyes were too small, or if she had too much colour.’

‘Again! Lady Williams : this is too much—’

So provoked was poor Alice at this renewal of the old story, that I know not what might have been the consequence of it, had not their attention been engaged by another object. A lovely young Woman lying apparently in great pain beneath a Citron-tree, was an object too interesting not to attract their notice. Forgetting their own dispute they both with sympathizing Tenderness advanced towards her and accosted her in these terms.

‘You seem fair Nymph to be labouring under some misfortune which we shall be happy to relieve if you will inform us what it is. Will you favour us with your Life and adventures?’

‘Willingly Ladies, if you will be so kind as to be seated.’ They took their places and she thus began.

CHAPTER THE FIFTH

‘I am a native of North Wales and my Father is one of the most capital Taylors in it. Having a numerous family, he was easily prevailed on by a sister of my Mother’s who is a widow in good circumstances and keeps an alehouse in the next Village to ours, to let her take me and breed me up at her own expence. Accordingly I have lived with her for the last 8 years of my Life, during which time she provided me with some of the first rate Masters, who taught me all the accomplishments requisite for one of my sex and rank. Under their instructions I learned Dan-cing, Music, Drawing and various Languages, by which means I became more accomplished than any other Tay-lor's Daughter in Wales. Never was there a happier Creature than I was, till within the last half year-but I should have told you before that the principal Estate in our Neighbourhood belongs to Charles Adams, the owner of the brick House, you see yonder.'

'Charles Adams!' exclaimed the astonished Alice; 'are you acquainted with Charles Adams?'

'To my sorrow madam I am. He came about half a year ago to receive the rents of the Estate I have just men-tioned. At that time I first saw him; as you seem ma'am acquainted with him, I need not describe to you how charming he is. I could not resist his attractions;—'

'Ah! who can,' said Alice with a deep sigh.

'My Aunt being in terms of the greatest intimacy with his cook, determined, at my request, to try whether she could discover, by means of her freind if there were any chance of his returning my affection. For this purpose she went one evening to drink tea with Mrs Susan, who in the course of Conversation mentioned the goodness of her Place and the Goodness of her Master; upon which my Aunt began pumping her with so much dexterity that in a short time Susan owned, that she did not think her Master would ever marry, "for (said she) he has often and often declared to me that his wife, whoever she might be, must possess, Youth, Beauty, Birth, Wit, Merit, and Money. I have many a time (she continued) endeavoured to reason him out of his resolution and to convince him of the improbability of his ever meeting with such a Lady; but my arguments have had no effect and he continues as firm in his determination as ever." You may imagine Ladies my distress on hearing this; for I was fearfull that tho'possessed of Youth, Beauty, Wit and Merit, and tho'the probable Heiress of my Aunts House and business, he might think me deficient in Rank, and in being so, unworthy of his hand.

'However I was determined to make a bold push and therefore wrote him a very kind letter, offering him with great tenderness my hand and heart. To this I received an angry and peremptory refusal, but thinking it might be rather the effect of his modesty than any thing else, I pressed him again on the subject. But he never answered any more of my Letters and very soon afterwards left the Country. As soon as I heard of his departure I wrote to him here, informing him that I should shortly do myself the honour of waiting on him at Pammydiddle, to which I received no answer; therefore choosing to take, Silence for Consent, I left Wales, unknown to my Aunt, and arrived here after a tedious Journey this Morning. On enquiring for his House I was directed thro' this Wood, to the one you there see. With a heart elated by the expected happiness of beholding him I entered it and had proceeded thus far in my progress thro' it, when I found myself suddenly seized by the leg and on examin-ing the cause of it, found that I was caught in one of the steel traps so common in gentlemen's grounds.'

'Ah,' cried Lady Williams, 'how fortunate we are to meet with you; since we might otherwise perhaps have shared the like misfortune—'

'It is indeed happy for you Ladies, that I should have been a short time before you. I screamed as you may easily imagine till the woods resounded again and till one of the inhuman Wretch's servants came to my assistance and released me from my dreadful prison, but not before one of my legs was entirely broken.'

CHAPTER THE SIXTH

At this melancholy recital the fair eyes of Lady Williams, were suffused in tears and Alice could not help exclaiming,

'Oh! cruel Charles to wound the hearts and legs of all the fair.'

Lady Williams now interposed and observed that the young Lady's leg ought to be set without farther delay. After examining the fracture therefore, she immediately began and performed the operation with great skill which was the more wonderfull on account of her having never performed such a one before. Lucy, then arose from the ground and finding that she could walk with the greatest ease, accompanied them to Lady Williams's House at her Ladyship's particular request.

The perfect form, the beautifull face, and elegant man-ners of Lucy so won on the affections of Alice that when they parted, which was not till after Supper, she assured her that except her Father, Brother, Uncles, Aunts, Cousins and other relations, Lady Williams, Charles Adams and a few dozen more of particular freinds, she loved her better than almost any other person in the world.

Such a flattering assurance of her regard would justly have given much pleasure to the object of it, had she not plainly perceived that the amiable Alice had partaken too freely of Lady Williams's claret.

Her Ladyship (whose discernment was great) read in the intelligent countenance of Lucy her thoughts on the subject and as soon as Miss Johnson had taken her leave, thus addressed her.

'When you are more intimately acquainted with my Alice you will not be surprised, Lucy, to see the dear Creature drink a little too much; for such things happen every day. She has many rare and charming qualities, but Sobriety is not one of them. The whole Family are indeed a sad drunken set. I am sorry to say too that I never knew three such thorough Gamesters as they are, more particu-larly Alice. But she is a charming girl. I fancy not one of the sweetest tempers in the world; to be sure I have seen her in such passions! However she is a sweet young Woman. I am sure you'll like her. I scarcely know any one so amiable. - Oh! that you could but have seen her the other Evening! How she raved! and on such a trifle too! She is indeed a most pleasing Girl! I shall always love her!'

'She appears by your ladyship's account to have many good qualities', replied Lucy. 'Oh! a thousand,' answered Lady Williams; 'tho'I am very partial to her, and perhaps am blinded by my affection, to her real defects.'

CHAPTER THE SEVENTH

The next morning brought the three Miss Simpsons to wait on Lady Williams, who received them with the utmost politeness and introduced to their acquaintance Lucy, with whom the eldest was so much pleased that at parting she declared her sole ambition was to have her accompany them the next morning to Bath, whither they were going for some weeks.

'Lucy,' said Lady Williams, 'is quite at her own disposal and if she chooses to accept so kind an invitation, I hope she will not hesitate, from any motives of delicacy on my account. I know not indeed how I shall ever be able to part with her. She never was at Bath and I should think that it would be a most agreeable Jaunt to her. Speak my Love,' continued she, turning to Lucy, 'what say you to accompanying these Ladies? I shall be miserable without you - t'will be a most pleasant tour to you - I hope you'll go; if you do I am sure t'will be the Death of me-pray be persuaded'—

Lucy begged leave to decline the honour of accompanying them, with many expressions of gratitude for the extream politeness of Miss Simpson in inviting her.

Miss Simpson appeared much disappointed by her refusal. Lady Williams insisted on her going - declared that she would never forgive her if she did not, and that she should never survive it if she did, and inshort used such persuasive arguments that it was at length resolved she was to go. The Miss Simpsons called for her at ten o'clock the next morning and Lady Williams had soon the satisfaction of receiving from her young freind, the pleasing intelligence of their safe arrival in Bath.

It may now be proper to return to the Hero of this Novel, the brother of Alice, of whom I beleive I have scarcely ever had occasion to speak; which may perhaps be partly oweing to his unfortunate propensity to Liquor, which so compleatly deprived him of the use of those faculties Nature had endowed him with, that he never did anything worth mentioning. His Death happened a short time after Lucy's departure and was the natural Consequence of this pernicious practice. By his decease, his sister became the sole inheritress of a very large fortune, which as it gave her fresh Hopes of rendering herself acceptable as a wife to Charles Adams could not fail of being most pleasing to her - and as the effect was Joyfull the Cause could scarcely be lamented.

Finding the violence of her attachment to him daily augment, she at length disclosed it to her Father and desired him to propose a union between them to Charles. Her father consented and set out one morning to open the affair to the young Man. M^r Johnson being a man of few words his part was soon performed and the answer he received was as follows—

'Sir, I may perhaps be expected to appear pleased at and gratefull for the offer you have made me : but let me tell you that I consider it as an affront. I look upon myself to be Sir a perfect Beauty - where would you see a finer figure or a more charming face. Then, sir I imagine my Manners and Address to be of the most polished kind; there is a certain elegance a peculiar sweetness in them that I never saw equalled and cannot describe—. Partiality aside, I am certainly more accomplished in every Language, every Science, every Art and every thing than any other person in Europe. My temper is even, my virtues innumerable, my self unparalleled. Since such Sir is my character, what do you mean by wishing me to marry your Daughter? Let me give you a short sketch of yourself and of her. I look upon you Sir to be a very good sort of Man in the main; a drunken old Dog to be sure, but that's nothing to me. Your daughter sir, is neither sufficiently beautiful, sufficiently amiable, sufficiently witty, nor sufficiently rich for me—. I expect nothing more in my wife than my wife will find in me - Perfection. These sir, are my sentiments and I honour myself for having such. One friend I have and glory in having but one—. She is at present preparing my Dinner, but if you choose to see her, she shall come and she will inform you that these have ever been my sentiments.'

Mr Johnson was satisfied; and expressing himself to be much obliged to Mr Adams for the characters he had favoured him with of himself and his Daughter, took his leave.

The unfortunate Alice on receiving from her father the sad account of the ill success his visit had been attended with, could scarcely support the disappointment - She flew to her Bottle and it was soon forgot.

CHAPTER THE EIGHTH

While these affairs were transacting at Pammydiddle, Lucy was conquering every Heart at Bath. A fortnight's residence there had nearly effaced from her remembrance the captivating form of Charles - The recollection of what her Heart had formerly suffered by his charms and her Leg by his trap, enabled her to forget him with tolerable Ease, which was what she determined to do; and for that purpose dedicated five minutes in every day to the employment of driving him from her remembrance.

Her second Letter to Lady Williams contained the pleasing intelligence of her having accomplished her undertaking to her entire satisfaction; she mentioned in it also an offer of marriage she had received from the Duke of——an elderly Man of noble fortune whose ill health was the chief inducement of his Journey to Bath. 'I am distressed (she continued) to know whether I mean to accept him or not. There are a thousand advantages to be derived from a marriage with the Duke, for besides those more inferior ones of Rank and Fortune it will pro-cure me a home, which of all other things is what I most desire. Your Ladyship's kind wish of my always remaining with you, is noble and generous but I cannot think of becoming so great a burden on one I so much love and esteem. That One should receive obligations only from those we despise, is a sentiment instilled into my mind by my worthy Aunt, in my early years, and cannot in my opinion be too strictly adhered to. The excellent woman of whom I now speak, is I hear too much incensed by my imprudent departure from Wales, to receive me again—. I most earnestly wish to leave the Ladies I am now with. Miss Simpson is indeed (setting aside ambition) very ami-able, but her 2d Sister the envious and malvolent Sukey is too disagreeable to live with. - I have reason to think that the admiration I have met with in the circles of the great at this Place, has raised her Hatred and Envy; for often has she threatened, and sometimes endeavoured to cut my throat. - Your Ladyship will therefore allow that I am not wrong in wishing to leave Bath, and in wishing to have a home to receive me, when I do. I shall expect with impatience your advice concerning the Duke and am your most obliged etc etc - Lucy.'

Lady Williams sent her, her opinion on the subject in the following Manner.

'Why do you hesitate my dearest Lucy, a moment with respect to the Duke? I have enquired into his Character and find him to be an unprincipaled, illiterate Man. Never shall my Lucy be united to such a one! He has a princely fortune, which is every day encreasing. How nobly will you spend it!, what credit will you give him in the eyes of all! How much will he be respected on his Wife's account! But why my dearest Lucy, why will you not at once decide this affair by returning to me and never leav-ing me again? Altho'I admire your noble sentiments with respect to obligations, yet, let me beg that they may not prevent your making me happy. It will to be sure be a great expence to me, to have you always with me - I shall not be able to support it - but what is that in comparison with the happiness I shall enjoy in your society?—'twill ruin me I know- you will not therefore surely, withstand these arguments, or refuse to return to yours most affectionately-etc etc.

C. Williams'

CHAPTER THE NINTH

What might have been the effect of her Ladyship's advice, had it ever been received by Lucy, is uncertain, as it reached Bath a few Hours after she had breathed her last. She fell a sacrifice to the Envy and Malice of Sukey who jealous of her superior charms took her by poison from an admiring World at the age of seventeen.

Thus fell the amiable and lovely Lucy whose Life had been marked by no crime, and stained by no blemish but her imprudent departure from her Aunts, and whose death was sincerely lamented by every one who knew her. Among the most afflicted of her freinds were Lady Wil-liams, Miss Johnson and the Duke; the 2 last of whom had a most sincere regard for her, more particularly Alice, who had spent a whole evening in her company and had never thought of her since. His Grace's affliction may likewise be easily accounted for, since he lost one for whom he had experienced during the last ten days, a tender affection and sincere regard. He mourned her loss with unshaken constancy for the next fortnight at the end of which time, he gratified the ambition of Caroline Simpson by raising her to the rank of a Dutchess. Thus was she at length rendered compleatly happy in the gratification of her favourite passion. Her sister the perfidious Sukey, was likewise shortly after exalted in a manner she truly deserved, and by her actions appeared to have always desired. Her barbarous Murder was discovered and in spite of every interceding freind she was speedily raised to the Gallows—. The beautifull but affected Cecilia was too sensible of her own superior charms, not to imagine that if Caroline could engage a Duke, she might without censure aspire to the affections of some Prince - and knowing that those of her native Country were chiefly engaged, she left England and I have since heard is at present the favourite Sultana of the great Mogul—.

In the mean time the inhabitants of Pammydiddle were in a state of the greatest astonishment and Wonder, a report being circulated of the intended marriage of Charles Adams. The Lady's name was still a secret. M^r and M^{rs} Jones imagined it to be, Miss Johnson; but she knew better; all her fears were centered in his Cook, when to the astonishment of every one, he was publicly united to Lady Williams—

Henry and Eliza

a novel

Is humbly dedicated to Miss Cooper by her obedient

Humble Servant

The Author

As Sir George and Lady Harcourt were superintending the Labours of their Haymakers, rewarding the industry of some by smiles of approbation, and punishing the idleness of others, by a cudgel, they perceived lying closely concealed beneath the thick foliage of a Haycock, a beautifull little Girl not more than 3 months old.

Touched with the enchanting Graces of her face and delighted with the infantine tho'sprightly answers she returned to their many questions, they resolved to take her home and, having no Children of their own, to edu-cate her with care and cost.

Being good People themselves, their first and principal care was to incite in her a Love of Virtue and a Hatred of Vice, in which they so well succeeded (Eliza having a natural turn that way herself) that when she grew up, she was the delight of all who knew her.

Beloved by Lady Harcourt, adored by Sir George and admired by all the World, she lived in a continued course of uninterrupted Happiness, till she had attained her eighteenth year, when happening one day to be detected in stealing a banknote of 50£, she was turned out of doors by her inhuman Benefactors. Such a transition to one who did not possess so noble and exalted a mind as Eliza, would have been Death, but she, happy in the conscious knowledge of her own Excellence, amused herself, as she sate beneath a tree with making and singing the following Lines.

SONG.

Though misfortunes my footsteps may ever attend

I hope I shall never have need of a Freind

as an innocent Heart I will ever preserve and will never from Virtue's dear boundaries swerve.

Having amused herself some hours, with this song and her own pleasing reflections, she arose and took the road to M.a small market town of which place her most intim-ate freind kept the red Lion.

To this freind she immediately went, to whom having recounted her late misfortune, she communicated her wish of getting into some family in the capacity of Hum-ble Companion.

Mrs Wilson, who was the most amiable creature on earth, was no sooner acquainted with her Desire, than she sate down in the Bar and wrote the following Letter to the Dutchess of F., the woman whom of all others, she most Esteemed.

‘TO THE DUTCHESS OF F.’

Receive into your Family, at my request a young woman of unexceptionable Character, who is so good as to choose your Society in preference to going to Service. Hasten, and take her from the arms of your Sarah Wilson.

The Dutchess, whose freindship for M^{rs} Wilson would have carried her any lengths, was overjoyed at such an opportunity of obliging her and accordingly sate out immediately on the receipt of her letter for the red Lion, which she reached the same Evening. The Dutchess of F. was about 45 and a half; Her passions were strong, her freindships firm and her Enmities, unconquerable. She was a widow and had only one Daughter who was on the point of marriage with a young Man of considerable fortune.

The Dutchess no sooner beheld our Heroine than throwing her arms around her neck, she declared herself so much pleased with her, that she was resolved they never more should part. Eliza was delighted with such a pro-testation of freindship, and after taking a most affecting leave of her dear M^{rs} Wilson, accompanied her grace the next morning to her seat in Surry.

With every expression of regard did the Dutchess introduce her to Lady Harriet, who was so much pleased with her appearance that she besought her, to consider her as her Sister, which Eliza with the greatest Condescension promised to do.

Mr Cecil, the Lover of Lady Harriet, being often with the family was often with Eliza. A mutual Love took place and Cecil having declared his first, prevailed on Eliza to consent to a private union, which was easy to be effected, as the Dutchess's chaplain being very much in love with Eliza himself, would they were certain do anything to oblige her.

The Dutchess and Lady Harriet being engaged one evening to an assembly, they took the opportunity of their absence and were united by the enamoured Chaplain.

When the Ladies returned, their amazement was great at finding instead of Eliza the following Note.

‘Madam

We are married and gone.

Henry and Eliza Cecil.’

Her Grace as soon as she had read the letter, which sufficiently explained the whole affair, flew into the most violent passion and after having spent an agreeable half hour, in calling them by all the shocking Names her rage could suggest to her, sent out after them 300 armed Men, with orders not to return without their Bodies, dead or alive; intending that if they should be brought to her in the latter condition to have them put to Death in some torture-like manner, after a few years Confinement.

In the mean time Cecil and Eliza continued their flight to the Continent, which they judged to be more secure than their native Land, from the dreadful effects of the Dutchess's vengeance, which they had so much reason to apprehend.

In France they remained 3 years, during which time they became the parents of two Boys, and at the end of it Eliza became a widow without any thing to support either her or her Children.

They had lived since their Marriage at the rate of 12 , 000£ a year, of which M^r Cecil's estate being rather less than the twentieth part, they had been able to save but a trifle, having lived to the utmost extent of their Income.

Eliza, being perfectly conscious of the derangement in their affairs, immediately on her Husband's death set sail for England, in a man of War of 55 Guns, which they had built in their more prosperous Days. But no sooner had she stepped on Shore at Dover, with a Child in each hand, than she was seized by the officers of the Dutchess, and conducted by them to a snug little Newgate of their Lady's which she had erected for the reception of her own private Prisoners.

No sooner had Eliza entered her Dungeon than the first thought which occurred to her, was how to get out of it again.

She went to the Door; but it was locked. She looked at the Window; but it was barred with iron; disappointed in both her expectations, she despaired of effecting her Escape, when she fortunately perceived in a Corner of her Cell, a small saw and Ladder of ropes. With the saw she instantly went to work and in a few weeks had dis-placed every Bar but one to which she fastened the Ladder.

A difficulty then occurred which for some time, she knew not how to obviate. Her Children were too small to get down the Ladder by themselves, nor would it be possible for her to take them in her arms, when she did. At last she determined to fling down all her Cloathes, of which she had a large Quantity, and then having given them strict Charge not to hurt themselves, threw her Children after them. She herself with ease descended by the Ladder, at the bottom of which she had the pleasure of finding Her little boys in perfect Health and fast asleep.

Her wardrobe she now saw a fatal necessity of selling, both for the preservation of her Children and herself. With tears in her eyes, she parted with these last reliques of her former Glory, and with the money she got for them, bought others more usefull, some playthings for her Boys and a gold Watch for herself.

But scarcely was she provided with the above-mentioned necessities, than she began to find herself rather hungry, and had reason to think, by their biting off two of her fin-gers, that her Children were much in the same situation.

To remedy these unavoidable misfortunes, she deter-mined to return to her old freinds, Sir George and Lady Harcourt, whose generosity she had so often experienced and hoped to experience as often again.

She had about 40 miles to travel before she could reach their hospitable Mansion, of which having walked 30 without stopping, she found herself at the Entrance of a Town, where often in happier times, she had accom-pa-nied Sir George and Lady Harcourt to regale themselves with a cold collation at one of the Inns.

The reflections that her adventures since the last time she had partaken of these happy Junketings , afforded her, occupied her mind, for some time, as she sate on the steps at the door of a Gentleman's house. As soon as these reflections were ended, she arose and determined to take her station at the very inn, she remembered with so much delight, from the Company of which, as they went in and out, she hoped to receive some Charitable Gratuity.

She had but just taken her post at the Innyard before a Carriage drove out of it, and on turning the Corner at which she was stationed, stopped to give the Postilion an opportunity of admiring the beauty of the prospect. Eliza then advanced to the carriage and was going to request their Charity, when on fixing her Eyes on the Lady, within it, she exclaimed,

‘Lady Harcourt!’

To which the lady replied,

‘Eliza!’

‘Yes Madam it is the wretched Eliza herself.’

Sir George, who was also in the Carriage, but too much amazed to speak, was proceeding to demand an explan-ation from Eliza of the Situation she was then in, when Lady Harcourt in transports of Joy, exclaimed.

‘Sir George, Sir George, she is not only Eliza our adopted Daughter, but our real Child.’

‘Our real Child! What Lady Harcourt, do you mean? You know you never even was with child. Explain your-self, I beseech you.’

‘You must remember Sir George that when you sailed for America, you left me breeding.’

‘I do, I do, go on dear Polly.’

‘Four months after you were gone, I was delivered of this Girl, but dreading your just resentment at her not proving the Boy you wished, I took her to a Haycock and laid her down. A few weeks afterwards, you returned, and fortunately for me, made no enquiries on the subject. Satisfied within myself of the wellfare of my Child, I soon forgot I had one, insomuch that when, we shortly after found her in the very Haycock, I had placed her, I had no more idea of her being my own, than you had, and nothing I will venture to say would have recalled the cir-cumstance to my remembrance, but my thus accidentally hearing her voice, which now strikes me as being the very counterpart of my own Child’s.’

‘The rational and convincing Account you have given of the whole affair,’ said Sir George, ‘leaves no doubt of her being our Daughter and as such I freely forgive the robbery she was guilty of.’

A mutual Reconciliation then took place, and Eliza, ascending the Carriage with her two Children returned to that home from which she had been absent nearly four years.

No sooner was she reinstated in her accustomed power at Harcourt Hall, than she raised an Army, with which she entirely demolished the Dutchess’s Newgate, snug as it was, and by that act, gained the Blessings of thousands, and the Applause of her own Heart.

Austen.

DEDICATION.

Madam

You are a Phoenix. Your taste is refined, your Sentiments are noble, and your Virtues innumerable. Your Person is lovely, your Figure, elegant, and your Form, magestic. Your Manners are polished, your Conversation is rational and your appearance singular. If therefore the following Tale will afford one moment's amusement to you, every wish will be gratified of your most obedient humble Servant

The Author

CHAPTER THE FIRST

Cassandra was the Daughter and the only Daughter of a celebrated Millener in Bond Street. Her father was of noble Birth, being the near relation of the Dutchess of——'s Butler.

CHAPTER THE 2^D

When Cassandra had attained her 16th year, and amiable and chancing to fall in love with an elegant Bonnet, her Mother had just compleated bespoke by the Countess of——she placed it on her gentle Head and walked from her Mother's shop to make her Fortune.

CHAPTER THE 3^D

The first person she met, was the Viscount of——a young Man, no less celebrated for his Accomplishments and Virtues, than for his Elegance and Beauty. She curtseyed and walked on.

CHAPTER THE 4TH

She then proceeded to a Pastry-cooks where she devoured six ices, refused to pay for them, knocked down the Pastry Cook and walked away.

CHAPTER THE 5TH

She next ascended a Hackney Coach and ordered it to Hampstead, where she was no sooner arrived than she ordered the Coachman to turn round and drive her back again.

CHAPTER THE 6TH

Being returned to the same spot of the same Street she had sate out from, the Coachman demanded his Pay.

CHAPTER THE 7TH

She searched her pockets over again and again; but every search was unsuccessfull. No money could she find. The man grew peremptory. She placed her bonnet on his head and ran away.

CHAPTER THE 8TH

Thro'many a street she then proceeded and met in none the least Adventure till on turning a Corner of Blooms-bury Square, she met Maria.

CHAPTER THE 9TH

Cassandra started and Maria seemed surprised; they trem-bled, blushed, turned pale and passed each other in a mutual silence.

CHAPTER THE 10TH

Cassandra was next accosted by her freind the Widow, who squeezing out her little Head thro'her less window, asked her how she did? Cassandra curtseyed and went on.

CHAPTER THE 11TH

A quarter of a mile brought her to her paternal roof in Bond

Street from which she had now been absent nearly 7 hours.

CHAPTER THE 12TH

She entered it and was pressed to her Mother's bosom by that worthy woman. Cassandra smiled and whispered to herself 'This is a day well spent.'

Letter the third

From A young Lady in distress'd Circumstances to her freind

A few days ago I was at a private Ball given by M^r Ashburnham. As my Mother never goes out she entrusted me to the care of Lady Greville who did me the honour of calling for me in her way and of allowing me to sit for-wards, which is a favour about which I am very indifferent especially as I know it is considered as conferring a great obligation on me. 'So Miss Maria' (said her Ladyship as she saw me advancing to the door of the Carriage) 'you seem very smart to night - My poor Girls will appear quite to disadvantage by you - I only hope your Mother may not have distressed herself to set you o^r. Have you got a new Gown on?'

'Yes Ma'am,' replied I with as much indifference as I could assume.

'Aye, and a fine one too I think—' (feeling it, as by her permission I seated myself by her) 'I dare say it is all very smart - But I must own, for you know I always speak my mind, that I think it was quite a needless peice of expence - Why could not you have worn your old striped one? It is not my way to find fault with people because they are poor, for I always think that they are more to be despised and pitied than blamed for it, especially if they cannot help it, but at the same time I must say that in my opinion your old striped Gown would have been quite fine enough for its Wearer - for to tell you the truth (I always speak my mind) I am very much afraid that one half of the people in the room will not know whether you have a Gown on or not - But I suppose you intend to make your fortune tonight— : Well, the sooner the better; and I wish you success.'

'Indeed, Ma'am, I have no such intention—'

'Who ever heard a Young Lady own that she was a Fortune-hunter?' Miss Greville laughed, but I am sure Ellen felt for me.

‘Was your Mother gone to bed before you left her?’ said her Ladyship—

‘Dear Ma’am,’ said Ellen, ‘it is but nine o’clock.’

‘True, Ellen, but Candles cost money, and M^{rs} Williams is too wise to be extravagant.’

‘She was just sitting down to supper, Ma’am—’

‘And what had she got for Supper?’ ‘I did not observe.’ ‘Bread and Cheese I suppose.’ ‘I should never wish for a better supper,’ said Ellen. ‘You have never any reason’ replied her Mother, ‘as a better is always provided for you.’ Miss Greville laughed excessively, as she constantly does at her Mother’s wit.

Such is the humiliating Situation in which I am forced to appear while riding in her Ladyship’s Coach - I dare not be impertinent, as my Mother is always admonishing me to be humble and patient if I wish to make my way in the world. She insists on my accepting every invitation of Lady Greville, or you may be certain that I would never enter either her House, or her Coach, with the disagreeable certainty I always have of being abused for my Poverty while I am in them. - When we arrived at Ash-burnham, it was nearly ten o’clock, which was an hour and a half later than we were desired to be there; but Lady Greville is too fashionable (or fancies herself to be so) to be punctual. The Dancing however was not begun as they waited for Miss Greville. I had not been long in the room before I was engaged to dance by M^r Bernard, but just as we were going to stand up, he recollected that his Servant had got his white Gloves, and immediately ran out to fetch them. In the mean time the Dancing began and Lady Greville in passing to another room went exactly before me - She saw me and instantly stopping, said to me though there were several people close to us;

‘Hey day, Miss Maria! What cannot you get a partner? Poor Young Lady! I am afraid your new Gown was put on for nothing. But do not despair; perhaps you may get a hop before the Evening is over.’ So saying, she passed on without hearing my repeated assurance of being engaged, and leaving me very provoked at being so exposed before every one - M^r Bernard however soon returned and by coming to me the moment he entered the room, and leading me to the Dancers, my Character I hope was cleared from the imputation Lady Greville had thrown on it, in the eyes of all the old Ladies who had heard her speech. I soon forgot all my vexations in the pleasure of dancing and of having the most agreeable partner in the room. As he is moreover heir to a very large Estate I could see that Lady Greville did not look very well pleased when she found who had been his Choice - She was determined to mortify me, and accordingly when we were sitting down between the dances, she came to me with more than her usual insulting importance attended by Miss Mason and said loud enough to be heard by half the people in the room, 'Pray, Miss Maria, in what way of business was your Grandfather? for Miss Mason and I cannot agree whether he was a Grocer or a Bookbinder.' I saw that she wanted to mortify me, and was resolved if I possibly could to prevent her seeing that her scheme succeeded. 'Neither Madam; he was a Wine Merchant.' 'Aye, I knew he was in some such low way - He broke did not he?' 'I beleive not Ma'am.' 'Did not he abscond?' 'I never heard that he did.' 'At least he died insolvent?' 'I was never told so before.' 'Why, was not your Father as poor as a Rat?' 'I fancy not.' 'Was not he in the King's Bench once?' 'I never saw him there.' She gave me such a look, and turned away in a great passion; while I was half delighted with myself for my imperti-nence, and half afraid of being thought too saucy. As Lady Greville was extremely angry with me, she took no further notice of me all the Evening, and indeed had I been in favour I should have been equally neglected, as she was got into a party of great folks and she never speaks to me when she can to any one else. Miss Greville was with her Mother's party at Supper, but Ellen pre-ferred staying with the Bernards and me. We had a very pleasant Dance and as Lady G——slept all the way home, I had a very comfortable ride.

The next day while we were at dinner Lady Greville's Coach stopped at the door, for that is the time of day she generally contrives it should. She sent in a message by the Servant to say that 'she should not get out but that Miss Maria must come to the Coach-door, as she wanted to speak to her, and that she must make haste and come immediately—' 'What an impertinent Message Mama!' said I—' Go Maria—' replied She - Accordingly I went and was obliged to stand there at her Ladyship's pleasure though the Wind was extremely high and very cold.

'Why I think, Miss Maria, you are not quite so smart as you were last night - But I did not come to examine your dress, but to tell you that you may dine with us the day after tomorrow - Not tomorrow, remember, do not come tomorrow, for we expect Lord and Lady Clermont and Sir Thomas Stanley's family - There will be no occasion for your being very fine for I shan't send the Carriage - If it rains you may take an umbrella—' I could hardly help laughing at hearing her give me leave to keep myself dry - 'And pray remember to be in time, for I shan't wait - I hate my Victuals overdone - But you need not come before the time-How does your Mother do? She is at dinner is not she?' 'Yes, Ma'am, we were in the middle of dinner when your Ladyship came.' 'I am afraid you find it very cold, Maria,' said Ellen. 'Yes, it is an horrible East wind'—said her Mother—'I assure you I can hardly bear the window down - But you are used to be blown about the wind, Miss Maria, and that is what has made your Complexion so ruddy and coarse. You young Ladies who cannot often ride in a Carriage never mind what weather you trudge in, or how the wind shews your legs. I would not have my Girls stand out of doors as you do in such a day as this. But some sort of people have no feelings either of cold or Delicacy - Well, remember that we shall expect you on Thursday at 5 o'clock - You must tell your Maid to come for you at night - There will be no Moon - and you will have an horrid walk home - My Compliments to your Mother - I am afraid your dinner will be cold - Drive on —'And away she went, leaving me in a great passion with her as she always does.

Maria Williams

From a Young Lady very much in love to her Freind

My Uncle gets more stingy, my Aunt more particular, and I more in love every day. What shall we all be at this rate by the end of the year! I had this morning the happiness of receiving the following Letter from my dear Musgrove.

Sackville St : Janry 7th

It is a month to day since I beheld my lovely Henrietta, and the sacred anniversary must and shall be kept in a manner becoming the day-by writing to her. Never shall I forget the moment when her Beauties first broke on my sight - No time as you well know can erase it from my Memory. It was at Lady Scudamore's. Happy Lady Scudamore to live within a mile of the divine Henrietta! When the lovely Creature first entered the room, Oh! what were my sensations? The sight of you was like the sight of a wonderful fine Thing. I started-I gazed at her with Admiration - She appeared every moment more Charming, and the unfortunate Musgrove became a Cap-tive to your Charms before I had time to look about me. Yes Madam, I had the happiness of adoring you, an unhappiness for which I cannot be too grateful. 'What,' said he to himself, 'is Musgrove allowed to die for Hen-rietta? Envious Mortal! and may he pine for her who is the object of universal Admiration, who is adored by a Colonel, and toasted by a Baronet! —' Adorable Henrietta how beautiful you are! I declare you are quite divine! You are more than Mortal. You are an Angel. You are Venus herself. Inshort, Madam, you are the prettiest Girl I ever saw in my Life - and her Beauty is encreased in her Mus-grove's Eyes, by permitting him to love her and allowing me to hope. And Ah! Angelic Miss Henrietta, Heaven is my Witness how ardently I do hope for the death of your villanous Uncle and his Abandoned Wife, Since my fair one will not consent to be mine till their decease has placed her in affluence above what my fortune can procure—. Though it is an improvable Estate—. Cruel Henrietta to persist in such a resolution! I am at present with my Sister where I mean to continue till my own house which tho'an excellent one is at present somewhat out of repair, is ready to receive me. Amiable princess of my Heart farewell-Of that Heart which trembles while it signs itself your most ardent Admirer and devoted humble Servt

T. Musgrove

There is a pattern for a Love-letter Matilda! Did you ever read such a masterpeice of Writing? Such Sense, Such Sentiment, Such purity of Thought, Such flow of Language and such unfeigned Love in one Sheet? No, never I can answer for it, since a Musgrove is not to be met with by every Girl. Oh! how I long to be with him! I intend to send him the following in answer to his Letter tomorrow.

My dearest Musgrove—. Words can not express how happy your Letter made me; I thought I should have cried for Joy, for I love you better than any body in the World. I think you the most amiable, and the handsomest Man in England, and so to be sure you are. I never read so sweet a Letter in my Life. Do write me another just like it, and tell me you are in love with me in every other line. I quite die to see you. How shall we manage to see one another? for we are so much in love that we cannot live asunder. Oh! my dear Musgrove you cannot think how impatiently I wait for the death of my Uncle and Aunt-If they will not die soon, I beleive I shall run mad, for I get more in love with you every day of my Life. How happy your Sister is to enjoy the pleasure of your Company in her house, and how happy every body in London must be because you are there. I hope you will be so kind as to write to me again soon, for I never read such sweet Letters as yours. I am, my dearest Musgrove, most truly and faithfully yours for ever and ever

Henrietta Halton

I hope he will like my answer; it is as good a one as I can write, though nothing to his; Indeed I had always heard what a dab he was at a Love-letter. I saw him you know for the first time at Lady Scudamore's - And when I saw her Ladyship afterwards she asked me how I liked her Cousin Musgrove?

'Why upon my word'said I, 'I think he is a very hand-some young Man.'

'I am glad you think so,' replied she, 'for he is distract-edly in love with you.'

'Law! Lady Scudamore,' said I, 'how can you talk so ridiculously?'

'Nay,' tis very true,' answered She, 'I assure you, for he was in love with you from the first moment he beheld you.'

'I wish it may be true,' said I, 'for that is the only kind of love I would give a farthing for - There is some Sense in being in love at first sight.'

'Well, I give you Joy of your conquest,' replied Lady Scudamore, 'and I beleive it to have been a very complete one; I am sure it is not a contemptible one, for my Cousin is a charming young fellow, has seen a great deal of the World, and writes the best Love-letters I ever read.'

This made me very happy, and I was excessively pleased with my conquest. However I thought it was proper to give myself a few Airs - So I said to her—

‘This is all very pretty, Lady Scudamore, but you know that we young Ladies who are Heiresses must not throw ourselves away upon Men who have no fortune at all.’

‘My dear Miss Halton,’ said She, ‘I am as much con-vinced of that as you can be, and I do assure you that I should be the last person to encourage your marrying any one who had not some pretensions to expect a fortune with you. M^r Musgrove is so far from being poor that he has an estate of Several hundreds an year which is capable of great Improvement, and an excellent House, though at present it is not quite in repair.’

‘If that is the case,’ replied I, ‘I have nothing more to say against him, and if as you say he is an informed young Man and can write good Love-letters, I am sure I have no reason to find fault with him for admiring me, tho’perhaps I may not marry him for all that, Lady Scudamore.’

‘You are certainly under no obligation to marry him,’ answered her Ladyship, ‘except that which love himself will dictate to you, for if I am not greatly mistaken you are at this very moment unknown to yourself, cherishing a most tender affection for him.’

‘Law, Lady Scudamore,’ replied I blushing, ‘how can you think of such a thing?’

‘Because every look, every word betrays it,’ answered She; ‘Come, my dear Henrietta, consider me as a freind, and be sincere with me - Do not you prefer M^r Musgrove to any man of your acquaintance?’

‘Pray do not ask me such questions, Lady Scudamore,’ said I turning away my head, ‘for it is not fit for me to answer them.’

‘Nay my Love,’ replied she, ‘now you confirm my sus-picions. But why, Henrietta, should you be ashamed to own a well-placed Love, or why refuse to confide in me?’

‘I am not ashamed to own it;’ said I taking Courage. ‘I do not refuse to confide in you or blush to say that I do love your cousin M^r Musgrove, that I am sincerely attached to him, for it is no disgrace to love a handsome Man. If he were plain indeed I might have had reason to be ashamed of a passion which must have been mean since the Object would have been unworthy. But with such a figure and face, and such beautiful hair as your Cousin has, why should I blush to own that such Superior Merit has made an impression on me.'

'My sweet Girl' (said Lady Scudamore embracing me with great affection) 'what a delicate way of thinking you have in these Matters, and what a quick discernment for one of your years! Oh! how I honour you for such Noble Sentiments!'

'Do you, Ma'am?' said I; 'You are vastly obliging. But pray, Lady Scudamore, did your Cousin himself tell you of his affection for me? I shall like him the better if he did, for what is a Lover without a Confidante?'

'Oh! my Love'replied She, 'you were born for each other. Every word you say more deeply convinces me that your Minds are actuated by the invisible power of sim-pathy, for your opinions and Sentiments so exactly coincide. Nay, the colour of your Hair is not very differ-ent. Yes, my dear Girl, the poor despairing Musgrove did reveal to me the story of his Love—. Nor was I surprised at it-I know not how it was, but I had a kind of presen - timent that he would be in love with you.'

'Well, but how did he break it to you?'

'It was not till after supper. We were sitting round the fire together talking on indifferent subjects, though to say the truth the Conversation was chiefly on my side, for he was thoughtful and silent, when on a sudden he inter-rupted me in the midst of something I was saying, by exclaiming in a most Theatrical tone—

"Yes I'm in love I feel it now

And Henrietta Halton has undone me—"

'Oh! What a sweet Way'replied I, 'of declaring his Passion! To make such a couple of charming Lines about me! What a pity it is that they are not in rhyme!'

'I am very glad you like it,' answered She; 'To be sure there was a great deal of Taste in it. "And are you in love with her, Cousin?" said I. "I am very sorry for it, for unex-ceptionable as you are in every respect, with a pretty Estate capable of Great improvements, and an excellent House tho'somewhat out of repair, Yet who can hope to aspire with success to the adorable Henrietta who has had an offer from a Colonel and been toasted by a Baronet—" "That I have—" cried I. Lady Scudamore continued. "Ah, dear Cousin," replied he, "I am so well convinced of the little Chance I can have of winning her who is adored by thousands, that I need no assurances of yours to make me more thoroughly so. Yet surely neither you or the fair Henrietta herself will deny me the exquisite Gratification of dieing for her, of falling a victim of her Charms. And when I am dead" - continued he—'

'Oh Lady Scudamore,' said I wiping my eyes, 'that such a sweet Creature should talk of dieing!'

'It is an affecting Circumstance indeed,' replied Lady Scudamore. "When I am dead," said he, "Let me be car-ried and lain at her feet, and perhaps she may not disdain to drop a pitying tear on my poor remains."

'Dear Lady Scudamore' interrupted I, 'say no more on this affecting Subject. I cannot bear it.'

'Oh! how I admire the sweet Sensibility of your Soul, and as I would not for Worlds wound it too deeply, I will be silent.'

'Pray go on'said I. She did so.

"And then," added he, "Ah! Cousin, imagine what my transports will be when I feel the dear precious drops trickle o'er my face! Who would not die to taste such extacy! And when I am interred, may the divine Henrietta bless some happier Youth with her affection, May he be as tenderly attached to her as the hapless Musgrove and while he crumbles to dust, May they live an example of Felicity in the Conjugal state!"

'Did you ever hear any thing so pathetic? What a charming wish, to be lain at my feet when he was dead! Oh! what an exalted mind he must have to be capable of such a wish!' Lady Scudamore went on.

"Ah! my dear Cousin," replied I to him, "Such noble behaviour as this, must melt the heart of any Woman however obdurate it may naturally be; and could the divine Henrietta but hear your generous wishes for her happiness, all gentle as is her Mind, I have not a doubt but that she would pity your affection and endeavour to return it." "Oh! Cousin," answered he, "do not endeavour to raise my hopes by such flattering Assurances. No, I cannot hope to please this angel of a Woman, and the only thing which remains for me to do, is to die." "True Love is ever desponding," replied I, "but I, my dear Tom, will give you even greater hopes of conquering this fair one's heart, than I have yet given you, by assuring you that I watched her with the strictest attention during the whole day, and could plainly discover that she cherishes in her bosom though unknown to herself, a most tender affection for you."

'Dear Lady Scudamore,' cried I, 'This is more than I ever knew!'

'Did not I say that it was unknown to yourself? "I did not," continued I to him, "encourage you by saying this at first, that Surprise might render the pleasure Still Greater."' "No, Cousin," replied he in a languid voice, "nothing will convince me that I can have touched the heart of Henrietta Halton, and if you are deceived yourself, do not attempt deceiving me." Inshort my Love it was the work of some hours for me to persuade the poor despairing Youth that you had really a preference for him; but when at last he could no longer deny the force of my arguments, or discredit what I told him, his transports, his Raptures, his Extacies are beyond my power to describe.'

'Oh! the dear Creature,' cried I, 'how passionately he loves me! But, dear Lady Scudamore, did you tell him that I was totally dependant on my Uncle and Aunt?'

'Yes, I told him every thing.'

'And what did he say?'

'He exclaimed with virulence against Uncles and Aunts; Accused the Laws of England for allowing them to possess their Estates when wanted by their Nephews or Neices, and wished he were in the House of Commons, that he might reform the Legislature, and rectify all its abuses.'

'Oh! the sweet Man! What a spirit he has!' said I.

'He could not flatter himself, he added, that the adorable Henrietta would condescend for his Sake to resign those Luxuries and that Splendor to which She had been used, and accept only in exchange the Comforts and Elegancies which his limited Income could afford her, even supposing that his house were in Readiness to receive her. I told him that it could not be expected that she would; it would be doing her an injustice to suppose her capable of giving up the power she now possesses and so nobly uses of doing such extensive Good to the poorer part of her fellow Creatures, merely for the grat-ification of you and herself.'

'To be sure,' said I, 'I am very Charitable every now and then. And what did Mr Musgrove say to this?'

'He replied that he was under a melancholy Necessity of owning the truth of what I said, and therefore if he should be the happy Creature destined to be the Husband of the Beautiful Henrietta he must bring himself to wait, however impatiently, for the fortunate day, when she might be freed from the power of worthless Relations and able to bestow herself on him.'

What a noble Creature he is! Oh! Matilda what a for-tunate one I am, who am to be his Wife! My Aunt is calling to me to come and make the pies. So adeieu my dear freind, and beleive me yours etc. - H. Halton

Finis

A Letter from a Young Lady, whose feelings being too Strong for her Judgement led her into the commission of Errors which her Heart disapproved

Many have been the cares and vicissitudes of my past life, my beloved Ellinor, and the only consolation I feel for their bitterness is that on a close examination of my con-duct, I am convinced that I have strictly deserved them. I murdered my father at a very early period of my Life, I have since murdered my Mother, and I am now going to murder my Sister. I have changed my religion so often that at present I have not an idea of any left. I have been a perjured witness in every public tryal for these last twelve Years, and I have forged my own Will. In short there is scarcely a crime that I have not committed - But I am now going to reform. Colonel Martin of the Horse guards has paid his Addresses to me, and we are to be married in a few days. As there is something singular in our Courtship, I will give you an account of it. Colonel Martin is the second son of the late Sir John Martin who died immensely rich, but bequeathing only one hundred thousand pound apiece to his three younger Children, left the bulk of his fortune, about eight Million to the present Sir Thomas. Upon his small pittance the Colonel lived tolerably contented for nearly four months when he took it into his head to determine on getting the whole of his eldest Brother's Estate. A new will was forged and the Colonel produced it in Court - but nobody would swear to it's being the right Will except himself, and he had sworn so much that Nobody beleived him. At that moment I happened to be passing by the door of the Court, and was beckoned in by the Judge who told the Colonel that I was a Lady ready to witness anything for the cause of Justice, and advised him to apply to me. In short the affair was soon adjusted. The Colonel and I swore to its'being the right will, and Sir Thomas has been obliged to resign all his illgotten Wealth. The Colonel in gratitude waited on me the next day with an offer of his hand—. I am now going to murder my Sister.

Yours Ever,

Anna Parker

Chapter 1

Chapter 2

作者自述 [1]

我请求读者们原谅，在本期《作家日记》 [2] 中，我没有采取以往的编排形式，而是只刊登了一部中篇小说。虽然这篇小说的写作占用了我将近一个月的时间，但无论如何，我还是希望大家能够谅解我的做法。

现在我们来谈谈小说中的故事。虽然我称这篇小说是“幻想的”，但我认为故事本身是非常现实的。由于小说写作过程中确实有幻想的成分，因此我认为，在这里做一些预先说明还是有必要的。

事实上，这篇小说既不是一个完整的故事，也不是一篇手记。试想一下，有这么一位丈夫，他的妻子几小时前跳楼自杀了，现在尸体就放在他旁边的桌子上。他心烦意乱，无法集中精力思考。他在自己的房间里走来走去，试图将刚才发生的事情解释清楚，他想“把自己的注意力集中到一点上”。与此同时，他又是个严重的疑病患者，还常常自言自语。因此，大家会看到他在自己给自己描述这件事，向自己解释事情的前因后果。尽管他的话看似具有一定的连贯性，但无论在逻辑上还是感受上，都存在一些自相矛盾的地方。他为自己辩护，同时又指责妻子，而且还给出一些与此事毫无关系的解释：其中既有思想和心灵的粗鄙，又有深切的体验。他的确一步步地给自己解释清楚了事情的来龙去脉，也把自己的注意力“集中到了一点上”。他的一连串回忆最终把他引向了真理，而真理又升华了他的思想和心灵。与杂乱无章的故事开头相比，到最后，他的论调都发生了变化。至少他自己认为，对于他这个不幸的人来说，真理已经非常地清晰与明确了。

这就是故事的主题。当然，整个故事的发展持续了几个小时，中间断断续续，形式上也不连贯：他有时是自言自语，有时又好像是在讲给一位不在场的听众或一位法官听。这种情形在现实中也是存在的。如果有一位速记员能听到他的话，并把它们都记录下来，那么这篇记录读起来可能比我写的还要晦涩和不通顺，但我认为，他的心理发展脉络应该不会有太大变化。类似关于速记员记录他讲话（之后我再对记录进行加工）的假设，就是我称这篇小说具有“幻想”特点的主要原因。其实这种创作手法在文学作品中并不鲜见，例如，维克多·雨果在自己的名著《一个死囚的末日》中就使用过几乎相同的方法，虽然没有采用速记员视角，但他进行了更大胆的假设。他想象一个被判处死刑的囚犯不仅在自己最后一天，甚至在最后一小时、最后一分钟

都能（而且有时间）写手记。如果他不进行这种幻想的话，大概也就不会有这部在他创作生涯中最贴近现实的杰作了。

[1] 本章节收录于《温顺的女人》同期期刊之前，做解释说明之用，因感觉有助于读者理解作家的创作缘由，所以从俄文译出一并收录，英文部分没有此章节。——编者注

[2] 《作家日记》是陀思妥耶夫斯基自费出版发行的一份期刊，内容涉及国家政治、外交、战争、法律、宗教、家庭、青年以及文学艺术与往事回忆等。其中，《温顺的女人》刊载于1876年11月号，占了当期的全部篇幅。（说明：书中脚注除特别标明之外，均为译者注。）

1.我是谁，她又是谁

.....只要她现在在这儿，就一切都好：我可以每隔几分钟就走去去看看她，但她明天就要被人抬走了，一想到就要剩下我一个人，我就有些不知所措。现在她正躺在客厅里由两张牌桌拼起来的桌子上，可是明天，棺材就要来了，一副白色的、铺着雪白那不勒斯绸 [3] 的棺材。不过我想说的并不是这件事.....我在屋子里走来走去，想给自己一个解释，可就是无法集中注意力.....六个小时过去了，我仍然在走、走、走.....事情是这样的。我会按照先后顺序给你们讲。（按顺序！）先生们，你们可能看出来，我不是作家，不过没关系，我会把我知道的全都讲出来。不过对于我来说可怕的地方就在于，我全都明白。

如果你们想知道，或者说，如果咱们从头开始捋，她只是来我这里当东西，据说是为了付《呼声报》的广告费。她在报纸上登了一条求职广告，广告内容大致是要找一份家庭女教师之类的工作，愿意外出或家内授课等诸如此类的话。起初我没太在意她，感觉她和别的客人没有什么不同之处。但过了一会儿，我发现有些地方不太对劲。她身材瘦削，有一头淡黄色的头发，比一般人稍高点。也许是害羞，她和我说话时，总是显得有点儿迟钝（我猜她在陌生人面前就是这样，不言而喻，我和其他人没什么不同，可能她把我也当作一个陌生人，而不是当铺掌柜）。其他人来当东西时总是不停地吵闹、哀求、讨价还价，就是为了多当些钱，而她则不是，给多少就是多少，拿了钱转身就走，一句话都不说.....搞得我一头雾水.....嗯.....首先，她当的东西很奇怪：一对镀了层金的银耳环和一个破破烂烂的小铜牌，总共只值二十戈比 [4] 。她自己也很清楚，这两样东西值不了多少钱，但我从她的神情中能看出来，对她来说，它们是很珍贵的。后来我才知道，这些就是她父母留给她仅有的遗物。有一次我嘲笑她当的东西。也只有这么一次，你们看出来了吧，其实我从不允许自己这样放肆，我跟人说话时总是带着一种绅士般的口吻：话不多，有礼貌，又很严谨。“严谨、严谨、再严谨”。但这次她居然拿来了一件兔皮袄的“残片”（说是残片毫不夸张），我没忍住，突然对她说了些貌似讽刺挖苦的话。天哪，她好像发怒了。她那双淡蓝色的大眼睛总是若有所思的样子，但现在仿佛要燃烧起来似的。可她还是没有开口，带着“残片”离开了。正是这次经历让我开始对她有了“特别”的关注，而

且还想到了关于她的一些事情，就是那种特别的事情。对了，我对她还有一个印象，你们想听吗？这个印象最重要，能概括其他一切印象：就是说，她真的很年轻，看上去就像十四岁。但实际上她那时还差三个月就十六岁了。不过我想说的那个能概括一切的印象不在于此。第二天，她又来了。后来我才知道，她带着那件兔皮袄还去过多布龙拉沃夫和莫泽尔两家当铺，但人家除了金子什么都不要，也懒得和她说话。相对地，有一次，我收了她的一块玉石（也是那种不值钱的玩意），但事后想起来，也觉得奇怪：我的当铺也是除了金银什么都不收啊，而我居然让她在我这儿当了那块石头。这应该是当时能让我想到她的第二个念头了，我记得这事儿。

这一次，从莫泽尔当铺出来后，她又来到我这里想当一支琥珀烟嘴，小玩意马马虎虎，喜欢这类东西的人有可能瞧瞧，但对我们来说它毫无价值，因为我们只要金子。由于昨天她带来的那场“骚乱”，我在接待她的时候，显得有点严肃。我的严肃实质上就是冷淡。但在付给她两卢布后，我还是没忍住，说了一句可能刺激到她的话：“我只对您开这个特例，要知道，莫泽尔是绝不会收您这类东西的。”我说话时，特意在“对您”两个字上加重了语气，似乎有了某种“特殊含义”。这么做确实有些恶毒。她听到这句“对您”后，又发怒了，但依然默不作声，也没有扔掉两个卢布，她把钱收下了——这就是人穷志短啊！我还记得，她是那么生气！我知道，我的话刺痛了她。她离开后，我问自己：“花两卢布战胜她，这划算吗？”嘿、嘿、嘿！而且我记得，这个问题我问了两次：“划算吗？划算吗？”我笑着给出了肯定的答案。那一刻真是太美妙了，我并没有什么负罪感：我是故意这么做的，我想试探试探她，因为当时我脑子里掠过了一些关于她的念头。这是能让我想到她的第三个念头。

……好吧，从那时起，我们的故事就算正式开头了。不用说，我开始努力从侧面打听有关她的所有情况，然后急不可耐地期盼她的到来。你瞧，我总是能预感到，她很快就要来啦。只要她一过来，我就会极其礼貌地和她攀谈一番。要知道，我受过良好的教育，也很注意举止风度。哼哼，那时我感觉她既善良，又温顺。善良和温顺的人不会总是拒人千里之外，虽然她们不太可能完全敞开心扉，但也不会拒绝一次谈话：她们回答时会非常谨慎，但只要您愿意和她们交谈，而且不会感到厌烦的话，那么她们的话会越来越说越多。不过她当时并没有和我多说什么。关于《呼声报》和其他事情都是我后来才知道的。那个时候，为了在报纸上登求职广告，她几乎倾尽所有，起初的广告词中还带有一丝高傲的口吻：“兹有家庭女教师愿外出工作，条件随函递送”，但没过多久，就变成了“可做任何工作，授课、女伴、管家、病人护理，能缝纫”等众人所熟悉的常见写法！不消说，这些都是不同阶段分别添加进广告内容中的。直到最后，她实在走投无路，

连“不求薪酬，只需膳食”这样的字眼也都用上了。但即便如此，她依然找不到事做。那个时候，我决定对她进行最后一次试探：我突然拿出一张当日的《呼声报》，给她看上面的一条广告：“青年女子求职，本人孤儿，可做幼儿家庭教师，中老年鳏夫家庭雇用更佳，可料理家务。”

“您看，这是今天早上登出的广告，晚上大概就能找到工作。广告词就应该这样写！”

她又发怒了，眼睛似乎又要喷出火焰来，一句话没说，转身就离开了。我反倒很高兴。因为此时我已有十足的把握了，一点儿也不害怕：才不会有谁会收她的烟嘴，更何况她现在连烟嘴也已经当出去了。果不其然，三天后她又来了，面色苍白，焦虑不安。我看得出来，她家里应该是出了什么事，而且也的确是出事了。我一会儿再解释到底出了什么事，现在我只想说当时我是如何在她面前优雅地表现自己，进而提升在她心目中的地位的。这个想法也是突然从我脑子里冒出来的。事情经过是这样的，她拿来了一尊圣像（一看就是下了狠心）……唉，听听！听听！到这里故事才真正开始，我又把它讲得一团糟……我总是想回忆所有事情，每个细节。我本来是想把注意力集中在一点上的，但好像办不到，我脑子里总是千头万绪的……

那是一尊圣母像，圣母抱着圣婴，就是普通人家里供奉的那种，看上去有点儿年头了，披着镀金的衣饰——这东西值……嗯，值六卢布。看得出来，圣像对她来说很珍贵，她没有把圣像上的衣饰拿掉，完整地拿来典当了。我对她说，最好是把衣饰摘下来留在我这儿，圣像拿回去，毕竟那是尊圣像啊。

“难道典当圣像是被禁止的吗？”

“不，可以当，只是您自己可能……”

“那就把衣饰摘下来吧。”

“不，还是别那么做了，我都收下吧，我会把它放在神龛里，”我边想边说，“和其他圣像放在一起，在神灯下面（自从我开当铺起，就一直点着神灯）。”“我直接给您十卢布，就这么简单。”

“我不要十卢布，五卢布就行，我一定把圣像赎回来。”

“您不想要十卢布吗？这圣像值这么多钱。”因为看到她眼睛里一闪而过的亮光，我便补了这么一句。她没作声。我给了她五卢布。

“您可别瞧不起任何人，我也在困境中挣扎过，而且比这还要糟，您别看我现在干这行……我也是经历了种种苦难……”

“那您是在报复社会，对吗？”她突然打断我，言语中带着一丝嘲

讽，不过这种嘲讽并无恶意，反倒带着些许的天真无邪（之所以这么说，是因为她当时认为我和其他人没有区别，因而对我说这句话并无恶意）。“啊哈！”我心里想，“原来你是这样的人，性格会自己显露出来的、属于新派的那类人。”

“您看，”我马上半开玩笑又故作神秘地跟她说，“我——我是那常欲作恶，却永远为善的力量的一部分……”

她快速地看了我一眼，眼神中带着孩童般的好奇：

“等等，这是什么意思？是谁说的？我好像在哪儿听过……”

“别费脑筋了，这是梅菲斯特 [5] 向浮士德做自我介绍时说的话。《浮士德》读过吗？”

“没……没仔细读过。”

“那就是根本没读过。应该读读。不过我看您又面带讥讽地笑话我了。您别以为我没品位到会为了往自己当铺掌柜的身份上贴金，而试图在您面前把自己比作是梅菲斯特。开当铺的就是开当铺的。我们都懂，小姐。”

“您真奇怪……我从来都没那么想过……”

她其实想说的是：我没想到您是一个受过教育的人。虽然她没说出口，但我知道，她就是这么想的；我令她非常满意。

“您看，”我说，“无论干哪一行，人都可以做好事。当然，我不是说我自己，除了坏事，我好像什么都没做过，不过……”

“当然了，无论在何种地位，人都可以做好事。”她一边说，一边用锐利的目光飞快地看了我一眼。“不管处在什么地位，确实如此。”她又突然补充了一句。

啊，我记得，我记得每一个瞬间！我想多说一句，当一个年轻人，一个可爱的年轻人想要说一句睿智而又深刻的话时，她的脸上就会立刻浮现出过于真诚和天真的神情，仿佛是在告诉你：“现在，我，有一句睿智又深刻的话要说给你听。”这不是虚荣心在作祟，和我们不一样。你能看得出来，她自己极为珍视这一切，相信又尊重这一切。而且她会认为，我们和她一样，也尊重这一切。啊，真诚！年轻人就是用真诚来征服别人的，这在她身上得到了完美的体现。

我记得很清楚，什么都没忘！她离开后，我当机立断。就在那天，我进行了最后一次调查，把有关她的其余所有情况都打听得一清二楚，包括眼下的各种细节；过去的事情我早已从卢克里娅那里打听到了。卢克里娅那时还是她家里的用人，几天前我就买通了她。她的情况听上去非常可怕，我不明白，身处这样的恶劣环境中，她还

能像刚才那样笑得出来，而且还对梅菲斯特的话充满好奇。但她毕竟是个年轻人啊！我想她的时候，总能感到骄傲和兴奋，正是因为年轻人这种豁达坦荡的态度：即使处在崩溃的边缘，歌德的伟大诗句依然光芒万丈。青春就是这样的豁达坦荡，即使它极其短暂又充满曲折。你们知道，我说的是她，只有她。更重要的是，那个时候我已经认为她是我的了，而且我毫不怀疑自己的能力。要知道，当你不再有任何怀疑时，每个念头都充满了诱人的魅力。

我这是怎么了？这样下去的话，什么时候我才能集中注意力呢？快点儿，快点儿——这些根本不是重点，我的天啊！

2.求婚

我打听到的“底细”可以用一句话讲清楚：她父母三年前去世了，她和两个名声并不太好的姨妈一起生活。说她们名声不好都是客气的。其中一个为寡妇，带着六个孩子，一个比一个小，另一个是让人厌恶的老处女。两个人都不怎么样。她父亲当过公务员，但只是做文书工作，还有一个非世袭的贵族头衔。总之，一句话：我完全驾驭得了。我的社会地位似乎更高一些：毕竟我是一个退伍上尉，曾在一个有光荣历史的团里服役，我还是世袭贵族，经济独立，等等。至于我的当铺，她那两个姨妈也只有仰视的份儿了。她和姨妈们一起生活的三年过得和奴隶一样，即便如此，她还是坚持了下来，并在某个地方通过了一个考试。她试图从每日残酷无情的劳役中尽力挤出所有的时间来准备考试。这意味着，在她看来，还是有某种更美好的生活值得去追求！可我为什么要娶她呢？不过我的事不重要，一会儿再说吧……问题也不在这儿！她要教姨妈的孩子们识字，要缝补内衣，后来就不仅是内衣了，而且尽管她的肺不好，却还得擦洗地板。她们甚至还动手打她，说她是吃闲饭的。最后，打算把她卖了。呸！那些肮脏的细节我就不讲了。后来，她把自己所有的经历都详细地告诉我了。她家邻居中有个胖老板，他不是个普通的店铺老板，而是两家食品杂货店的老板。他观察了一年，把她们家的基本情况都掌握了。他的两个老婆都被他折磨死了，现在又想找第三个，于是就看上了她，说她“安静，出身清贫，可以照顾好我家里那些孤儿”。他家里确实有孤儿。他上门求婚，和姨妈们商量。但毕竟他都五十岁了，把她吓坏了。从那时起，她就不断到我这儿来当东西，急着要在《呼声报》上登广告。最后，她央求姨妈们，给她一点儿时间来考虑一下。她们答应了，但给她的时间也不是太多，等她再请求时，她们没有再给，还假惺惺地说：“就算没你这张多余的嘴，我们自己也不知道吃啥。”这些事我都知道了，就在她来当圣像的那天上午，我做了决定。当天晚上，胖老板从杂货店里拿了值半卢布的一磅糖果去了她家。她陪他坐着，我把卢克里娅从厨房里叫出来，让她进屋传话，就说我在大门口

等她，有急事要见她。我对自己的决定和行动非常满意。总的来说，那一整天我都对自己感到极其满意。

首先，把她叫出来，在大门口当着卢克里娅的面，对着已经惊呆了的她表白，我觉得这是一种幸福和荣耀……其次，我不想让她对我的举动感到诧异，我对她说：“我这个人直性子，我考虑好了。”我没撒谎，我确实是直性子。嗨，先别管这个了。我说话的时候不但彬彬有礼，显出我是一个有教养的人，而且更重要的是，我说的话都不落俗套。我这么做不对吗？我是想评判一下自己，而且我也这么做了。赞成与反对 [6] 我都想说，我也这么说了。回想起当时的情况，我觉得很满意，虽然这看上去有点儿蠢：我当时直接表白，并不觉得这有什么不妥。首先我说，我没有什么过人的才能，也不太聪明，可能也不是太善良，而且我还是个非常庸俗的利己主义者（我记得这句话是在去她家的路上想出来的，当时觉得非常得意）。这些非常、非常有可能让我在其他那里不受待见。说这些话的时候我觉得非常自豪——这种感觉你们都明白。当然咯，我还没有高尚到只坦白自己的缺点，不说优点的地步，我说：“但另一方面，我也有很多优点，如此这般，这般如此……”我发现，她这时依然很惊慌，但我并没有因为她的情绪而缓和语气；相反，看到她被吓到，我说得更直接了：我告诉她，我能让她吃喝不愁，但出席盛装舞会，去剧院听歌看戏，这些暂时还做不到，除非以后我能达到自己的目标。我缓缓，接着说，显得随意的样子，我干这一行，开这个当铺，只有一个目的，就是……我似乎有些话中有话。但我有权这么说啊，我确实有自己的目标，但也确实有隐情。稍等，先生们，要知道，我一辈子都厌恶我那个当铺，这方面谁能比得过我，虽然自言自语的时候还故弄玄虚确实有点儿可笑，但我实质上就是在“报复社会”啊，千真万确！所以，她早上嘲笑我“报复”的那句俏皮话并不是不恰当。你们看出来了吧，要是我直接对她说“对，我就是在报复社会”，估计她会哈哈大笑，就像她那天早上一样，不过这也确实可笑。但用一句神秘兮兮的话来进行间接暗示，确实能激发想象力。况且，当时我也什么都不怕了：我知道，无论在哪方面，她都更厌恶那个胖老板，而出现在大门口我，简直就如同救星一般。这一点我当然明白。唉，人更容易理解那些卑鄙的事！但哪些事是卑鄙的呢？如何去评判一个人呢？那时候我不是已经爱上她了吗？

别急，我还没说完……那个时候我当然不会说什么我有恩于她的话，半句都不会有；相反，我当时说的是：“是我，我是那个蒙恩之人，而不是您。”我本来不应该这么说，但没控制住，可能这句话听上去有点儿蠢，因为我注意到她皱了皱眉头。但总的来说，我还是如愿以偿。好吧，既然我把这些肮脏的事情都讲了，那就干脆把我那最后一丁点儿龌龊行为也告诉你们吧：我站在那里，脑子里冒出一句话

——你身材高挑又匀称，还受过教育……还有……长相也不难看。这就是当时我脑子里想的。当然咯，最后她在门口答应了我。不过……不过我还得说一句：她在门口想了好久才说“好”。她就在那儿想啊想……想得太久了，我真想问一句：“喂，你怎么想的？”当然，我最后还是没忍住，但很优雅地问了一句：“小姐，您意下如何？”

“等一下，让我想想。”

她那张小脸儿是那么严肃，严肃到我都能读懂她在想什么！我当时有种被冒犯的感觉，我想：“难道她还要在我和那个老板之间进行选择吗？”唉，那时候我还不明白！那时候我真是一点儿都不明白！直到现在我也不明白！我记得，我转身离开后，卢克里娅在后面追了上来，在街上拦住我，气喘吁吁地说：“先生，您要是能娶了我们家这位好小姐，上帝会保佑您的，只是您别和她这么说，她就是太清高了。”

哦，清高！我就喜欢清高的人。清高的人特别好，只要……嗯……只要你能镇得住她们，是吧？唉，我这低贱又愚蠢的人啊！我这是多么地小人得志啊！当初她站在大门口犹豫着是否答应求婚时，我还挺奇怪的，可你们知道吗，说不定那时她就在想：“既然怎么选择都是不幸的，那还不如干脆就选那个最差的，那个胖老板，让他喝多了赶紧把我打死算了！”你们说呢？你们是怎么想的，她有过这样的念头吗？

我现在还是不明白，我现在什么都不明白！我刚刚说她可能想选择最差的，就是说，那个老板。但是那个时候对于她来说，谁才是最坏的选择——我，还是他？是杂货店的胖老板，还是读过歌德的当铺掌柜？这也是一个问题！这是什么问题？看看吧，答案不就在桌子上躺着嘛，你还在想什么“问题”呢！其实我没那么重要！问题也完全不在于我……况且，现在对于我来说，问题是不是出自我这里又有什么意义呢？我根本就解决不了这个问题。还是躺下睡觉吧。我的头好疼……

3.最高贵的人，但我自己却不相信

我没睡着，感觉脑子里有东西一跳一跳的，就像脉搏那样。我想把这一切肮脏的事情弄明白。唉，这些事啊！唉，是我把她从那肮脏的烂泥里拉出来的啊！她应该明白的，她应该对我感激不尽啊！我喜欢我脑子里的各种想法，例如我已经四十一岁了，而她才十六岁。这种差距感让我着迷，多么幸福，多么甜蜜啊。

再比如说，我想举办一场英式 [7] 婚礼，只有我们两个人，再加上两个证婚人，其中一个应该是卢克里娅，婚礼结束我们就立刻跳上火车，可以去莫斯科（正好我在那儿有事要办），订一家旅馆，在那

儿住上两个星期。但她不同意这个想法，她也不让我这么做。她要我恭恭敬敬地去见她两个姨妈，就像见岳父母那样，然后从她们那里把她娶走。好吧，我妥协了，她那两个姨妈也拿到了应得的东西。我甚至还给了那两个娘儿们每人一百卢布，还做了些承诺。当然，这件事我没有告诉她，以免她为自己曾经的处境而难过。姨妈们拿了钱立刻变得服服帖帖。在嫁妆问题上还是有些争议的：她几乎是一无所有，但她什么都不想要。不过我还是成功地说服她，一点儿嫁妆都没有是不行的，嫁妆可以由我来准备，因为还有谁能给她置办嫁妆呢？好，先不说我了。当时我把我的很多想法都跟她讲了，至少让她心里有个数。这么做可能有点儿操之过急了。但更重要的是，从求婚成功的那一刻开始，虽然她表面上依旧矜持，但却已满怀爱意地投入我的怀抱了。每次傍晚时分我去看她时，她总是兴高采烈地接待我，少女呢喃般地和我聊天，（多么迷人的天真啊！）讲她小时候的事，讲她老家，讲她父亲和母亲。而我却给她的愉悦浇了一盆冷水。我是故意那样做的。我用沉默，一种善意的沉默来回应她的欣喜，当然……她很快就看懂了，我和她不太一样，我就是个谜。对，我就是打算要做那个谜！但我这谜面设得是多么愚蠢啊！首先，我太严肃了，严肃地把她娶回了家。虽然我心满意足，但还是定下了一套规矩。这事我做得毫不费力，这规矩是多么天经地义啊！退一步讲，考虑当时的情况，这规矩我能不定吗？这规矩理所应当，我没必要诋毁自己啊！不，听我说，如果你要评判一个人，就要把事情的来龙去脉搞清楚……别说话！

从何说起呢，这事也挺复杂的。而且，当你要开始自我辩护时，就更难了。你们知道，年轻人都鄙视金钱，但我不一样，我更重视金钱，也追逐金钱，这使她变得越来越沉默。她睁着那双大眼睛，看着、听着、沉默着。你们也知道，优秀的年轻人都道德高尚，又充满激情，但有时候不够宽容，一言不合就怒目相对。而我认为，年轻人应该更加开朗豁达，我要让她有海纳百川的心胸，对不对？举个通俗点儿的例子吧，比如说，我是怎么描述我那个当铺的呢？我当然不会直接描述个没完，那样的话，好像我是在请求别人原谅似的。我说过，我为人清高，我用沉默来讲述。我善于通过沉默的方式来表达自己，来讲述我的生活，讲述我承受的种种不幸。我是多么不幸啊！我被大家抛弃，我被人们遗忘，这一切又有谁能理解呢！然而，这个十六岁的姑娘从一些小人的那里捕风捉影，听到了一些关于我的事情，她就以为掌握了我的全部情况，但隐情只能藏在这个人的心里！我仍然保持沉默，特别是在她面前，直到昨天——我为什么要沉默呢？因为我是一个清高的人啊！我希望她能够自己去了解这个人，不要来问我，也不要听那些小人的胡言乱语，她应该自己来读懂他，真正地理解他！既然我把她娶进家门，就希望她能充分尊重我。我希望她能为我的痛苦祈祷——这是我应得的。我总是这样清高，要么拥有一切，

否则什么都不想要。这就是我无法与人分享幸福的原因，我要完全占有，这也正是为何我要强迫自己如此表现的原因：让她自己来读懂我、尊重我！你们也一定会同意我的想法，如果我自己去跟她解释，然后吞吞吐吐地暗示她要尊重我，这难道不就是在乞求施舍吗……可是……可是，我干吗要说这个呀！

愚蠢、愚蠢、愚蠢，太愚蠢了！我当时对她说的几句话简直是直截了当且残酷无情（再怎么强调也不为过）：年轻人志向高远，这很好，但它一文不值。为什么这么说呢？因为“志向高远”太容易做到了，它并非来自生活的打磨，而只是“生命的第一印象”，但让我们看看你都做了些什么事？廉价的志向似乎让一切事情看起来都很容易做到，甚至连献出生命也变得很容易了。因为那只是你热血沸腾、精力旺盛，又充满对美的渴望！不信的话，你们可以尝试去做一件高尚的、艰难的、无声无息的事情，它无人喝彩，却有人诽谤，要做出巨大牺牲，又得不到一点儿荣誉。而且当一个光明磊落的人这么做时，当你是这个世界上最真诚的人时，大家将你视为卑鄙下流之徒。您可以试试看，不，我的小姐，您会拒绝的！而我，我就是这么做的，我一辈子都在这样高尚行事。一开始，她还和我激烈争论，但后来就渐渐不作声了，一言不发，只是瞪大了眼睛在那里听着，全神贯注，眼睛越瞪越大。而且……而且我还突然发现她脸上浮现出一丝质疑、冷漠、不怀好意的微笑。这种微笑在我娶她进门的那天也见过。的确，她那时也是无处可去……

4. 计划，全是计划

当初我们俩是谁先开始的？

谁都没有。是这件事自己迈出的第一步。我说过，我娶她进门时很严肃，但其实从一开始我就有所和缓了。她还是我未婚妻的时候，我就对她说过，以后要帮我打理当铺生意，由她来收抵押物和付款，她当时什么也没说（这里提醒大家注意），而且工作起来也是满怀热情。还有，我们的房子和家具也都没有变化，和从前一样。房子有两个房间：一间是前厅，很宽敞，跟当铺柜台是隔开的；另一间是我们的房间，做起居室和卧室，也很大。我的家具很少，甚至还没有她姨妈家的多。我的神龛和神灯放在当铺里；我们的房间里有一个橱柜，里面有一些书，有一个小箱子，钥匙在我这儿；房间里还有一张床，几张桌子和几把椅子。她还是我未婚妻时，我就说过，我要在三年内攒到三万卢布，我、她和卢克里娅（我把她也带过来了），我们每天包括生活费在内的花销不能超过一卢布，否则的话是攒不到这个数的。她不反对，但后来我又把每天的花销标准提高了三十戈比。还有剧院的事。她是我未婚妻的时候我就说过，我们是不会去剧院看戏的，不过后来我还是决定，每个月去一次，而且是预订更体面的池

座。我们一起去过三次，看的好像是《追求幸福》和《会唱歌的小鸟》。（这个无所谓！）我们来去的路上都沉默不语。为什么，为什么我们一开始就是这样？要知道，我们刚开始生活时并没有吵过架，但依然是相对无言。我记得，她那时总是偷偷看我，可她越是这样，我就越加沉默。是的，保持沉默的是我，而不是她。她有那么一两次激情迸发，扑过来拥抱我；但我认为这种情绪是病态的，歇斯底里的，我想要的是稳定的幸福，要的是她的尊重，所以我冷漠地回应了她。我的判断没错，每次她激情过后，第二天就是一顿争吵。

要想不争吵，那就只有彼此保持沉默了，但她的样子却越来越放肆。“叛逆与独立”——这大概就是她想要的，只不过她不知道应该如何表现出来。是的，这张温顺的脸变得越来越放肆了。你们相信吗，我在她眼里变得越来越可恶了，这一点我当然清楚。她有时也会为此情绪爆发，这也是自然而然的事。例如，像她这种刚刚摆脱肮脏与贫贱的生活，不需要再刷地板的人，有时竟会突然抱怨起我们太穷了！您知道吗，这不是贫穷，这是节俭，我们的家饰，哪样不是又高级又整洁？因为我以前一直认为，丈夫整洁更能讨妻子欢心。不过，她抱怨的似乎不是贫穷，而是嫌弃我太吝啬了，她仿佛想说的是：“人家可是有坚定目标的。”她突然不再去剧院了，脸上也越来越多嘲讽的神情……而我则继续沉默，更加沉默。

我怎么可以为自己辩解呢？主要的问题是我那个当铺。这么说吧，先生们：我知道，作为一个女人，而且是一个十六岁的姑娘，不可能完全不屈从于男人的意志。女性缺乏独立的见解，这是最简单不过的道理，即使是现在，即使是对于现在的我来说，它都是千真万确的。她就在那儿，躺在前厅里，那又怎样呢，真理就是真理，即便是密尔 [8] 本人在这里，他也不能否认这一点！一个被爱情冲昏了头脑的女人，唉，这种女人会把她所爱的人加以神化，神化他的缺陷，甚至是他的罪恶。她为他的恶行所找的借口，他自己是想不出来的。这是女人的宽容与豁达，并不是什么独立见解。缺少独立见解只会毁掉女人。你们指给我看那个躺在桌子上的人吗？我再重复一遍，“那又怎样呢？”难道那就是有独立见解的体现吗？唉！

听我说：那时候我坚信她是爱我的。她有时候会扑到我身上，抱住我的脖子。她爱我，更准确地说——她希望爱我。不错，当时的确就是这样：她希望爱我，努力尝试着来爱我。更重要的是，我身上没有任何罪恶需要她来找理由为之辩护。当然，你们会说“你是个当铺掌柜”，你们所有人都会这么说。当铺掌柜又怎么了？这只能说明，一定有某种原因，让一个心胸最为坦荡的人成了当铺掌柜。你们瞧，先生们，有些想法……你们知道，有些想法如果用语言能够表达出来，那听上去会是非常愚蠢的。那会让你自己都感到害臊。为什么呢？不为什么。因为我们所有人都烂透了，我们不愿接受真理，如果

这都不是原因的话，那我就真知道了。我刚才说过的那句“心胸最为坦荡的人”听上去有点儿可笑，但事实就是这样的。要知道，这就是真理，千真万确的道理。那个时候我有权开这个当铺给自己的生活提供一个保障，是的，我这么做：“你们，就是你们，你们全都排斥我，用你们那轻蔑的沉默驱赶我。我对你们满腔热忱，而你们却用对我的羞辱来回应。现在我要和你们一刀两断，我有权这么做，我会攒够三万卢布，去克里米亚终老一生：在南方的海岸边，在山脚的葡萄园，在我自己购买的宅邸中。最重要的是，这能让我远离你们这些人，但我不会怨恨你们，我的灵魂中长存信念，我的心中有挚爱的伴侣，如果上帝赐福，我还会有一个家庭，还要去帮助周围的邻人。”我把这些想法说给自己听是好的，如果当初把这些都绘声绘色地给她描述一遍的话，那就太愚蠢了。这也正是我一直保持清高与沉默，又同她相对无言的原因所在。她怎么会明白我的理想呢？她只有十六岁，如此年轻，我的辩白、我的痛苦，她又理解多少呢？她鲁莽，不懂生活，拥有年轻人那种廉价的信念，反而对“美好心灵”视而不见，更重要的是——我的当铺，够了！（难道我是个开当铺的恶人吗，难道她不了解我的为人吗，我取过不义之财吗？）啊，世上的真理是多么可怕！这个女人迷人、温顺，如天使一般圣洁，但她却是个暴君，让人无法忍受的暴君，奴役并折磨着我的灵魂。我必须要这么说，否则我就是在诋毁自己！你们认为我不爱她吗？谁能说我不爱她？你们看到了吧，这就是一种嘲弄，是来自命运和造化的恶意嘲弄！我们都是被诅咒的，人类的生命被诅咒了！（特别是我！）我现在终于知道了我错在何处！这里的确存在问题。一切都已明朗，我的计划就像天空一样清晰：“刚毅、高傲，不需要任何道德上的慰藉，默默地承受苦难。”事实如此，我没有撒谎，我没有撒谎！“她以后会明白，这就是宽宏大量，但现在她还不具备读懂这一切的能力——如果未来某一天她能醒悟的话，她将会倍加珍惜我，双膝跪地，对我顶礼膜拜。”这就是我的计划。这里我好像忘了什么东西，或是漏掉了其中一项。有什么事情我没能做成，但够了，已经足够完美了。现在还需要请求别人的谅解吗？都结束了。你勇敢一点儿，不要低头！不是你的错！……

好吧，我要实话实说，我不害怕面对真相：是她的错，她的错！……

5. 温顺的女人反叛了

我们之间的争吵源于她一时兴起，竟然要自己决定付给客人多少钱，而且还高估抵押物的价值，甚至有那么两次还赏脸和我争论起这个问题。我自然是不会同意她那么做。但就在这时，来了一位上尉的遗孀。

老太太拿来了一个吊坠——是她已故丈夫留下的礼物，一看就是件纪念品。我付了她三十卢布。她一边诉着苦，一边央求我们要保管好这东西——我们当然会好好保管咯。但五天后，她又突然回来，想用一个八卢布都不值的手镯把吊坠换回去；我当然是不会同意了。不过她当时可能从我妻子的眼神中看出了什么，后来趁我不在时又来了，换走了吊坠。

我知道这事后，说了她几句，给她讲了这其中的道理，语气温和，但又不失严厉。她坐在床边，眼睛盯着地板，右脚尖敲打着地毯（她习惯的姿势），嘴角边挂着一丝坏笑。我没有提高嗓门，依然心平气和地对她讲，钱是我的，我有权从自己的角度来看待生活；我还告诉她，当初我把她娶进家门时，就没对她隐瞒什么。

她突然跳了起来，浑身颤抖——你们猜怎么着——她居然在我面前跺脚；这是头野兽，这是在发作，这是兽性的发作。我惊呆了，从没想到她会做出这样出格的举动。但我没有失态，我甚至都没有动，依然如往常一样，心平气和地对她讲，从今以后不许她再参与当铺的生意了。她冲我哈哈大笑，走出了家门。

事实上，她无权离开这间公寓。她还是我未婚妻时，我就和她定好了规矩，没有我，她哪也不许去。傍晚时分，她回来了；我一句话也没和她说。

第二天一大早，她又离开了，第三天也是这样。我关了当铺，去她姨妈那儿找她。婚礼结束后我就和她们断了联系——再也没有互相来往过。但她并不在那里。她们好奇地听着我讲的事，然后还当面嘲笑我：“您这就是活该了。”对此我并不感到意外。我私下里买通了二姨妈，就是那个老处女，答应给她一百卢布，先付二十五。两天后，她来到我家，告诉我：“我听说有一个中尉军官，叶菲莫维奇，过去和您在一个团里服役，他和你们的事有牵连。”我大吃一惊。在军队服役的时候，这个叶菲莫维奇就把我害得够惨。一个月前，他还以当东西为名，恬不知耻地来过我这儿几次，那时他就开始和我妻子有说有笑。我当时就过去警告他，不要再到我当铺来了，还提醒他我和我妻子之间的关系；但我从来没想过会发生这种事，我仅仅以为这人就是个无赖。现在她姨妈突然告诉我，他们早就见过面了，从中撮合的是一个叫尤莉娅·萨姆索诺夫娜的寡妇，曾是一位上校的夫人，是姨妈们从前的老相识。“您家那位太太现在应该就在她那儿。”她说。

长话短说。我为这事儿一共花了三百卢布，两天之内已经做好了安排，我会在隔壁房间虚掩的门后，听我妻子和叶菲莫维奇的第一次单独约会 [9]。但在这前一天的晚上，我和她发生了一次小争吵，这对我来说意义重大。

临近傍晚，她回来了，坐在床边，用略带嘲弄的眼神看着我，一只脚敲着地毯。我看着她，突然想起来一件事，在最近整整一个月里，更准确地说是最近的两个星期，她的性格发生了很大变化，甚至可以说完全变了一个人——一反常态：脾气暴躁，无理取闹，行为虽谈不上不知羞耻，但也是毫无规矩，而且还意挑衅。但她温顺的本性还是会在她想变本加厉的时候妨碍到她。她胡搅蛮缠的时候，即使行为再出格，也明显能看得出，她是在有意逼迫自己这样做，天生的纯良品性让她无法克服自己行为本身带来的羞耻感。也正因如此，这样的人有时会控制不住自己行为的尺度，她们的越轨行为可能让你无法相信自己看到的一切。反倒是那些骨子里荒淫无度的人，常常表现得温文尔雅，这种人越是做坏事，就越表现得循规蹈矩、彬彬有礼，而且在别人面前总觉得高人一筹。

“您被军队开除，是因为您不敢和别人决斗，是吗？”她突然问道，眼里还闪闪发光。

“是的，按照长官们的裁决，我必须离开军队，不过，在这之前我就已经递交了退伍申请。”

“是因为贪生怕死才被赶出来的吗？”

“他们是这么认为的。但我拒绝决斗不是因为贪生怕死，而是不愿意屈从那些专横的裁决，我当时并没有觉得自己受辱。您要明白，”说着说着，我有点儿激动，“用行动来反抗专横，并承担一切后果——这要比任何决斗都更需要勇气。”

她又不怀好意地笑了。我有点儿控制不住自己了，这句话好像是在为自己辩解，而她这么做只是想变本加厉地羞辱我。

“之后这三年您就像个流浪汉一样在彼得堡大街上游荡，讨点儿小钱，然后在台球桌下过夜，是吗？”

“实际上我甚至经常干草广场的维亚泽姆斯基大院 [10] 过夜。的确，是真的，退伍后我的生活就是那样的，饱尝羞辱，也堕落过，但不是道德上的堕落，因为那个时候连我自己都很厌恶我的所作所为。其实这只是意志和心灵的颓废，是对当时处境的绝望。但这一切都过去了……”

“哦，现在您是个大人物了——是个金融家啦！”

这是在说我的当铺。但我已经冷静下来了。我知道，她非常想让我亲口说出一些自取其辱的话，但我没有给她这个机会。这时，有人摇响了当铺的铃铛，我去了前厅招呼客人。一个小时后，她突然穿戴好准备出门，还在我面前说：

“您结婚前从来没对我说过这些，对吧？”

见我没回应，她就走了。

于是第二天，我站到了那房间的门外，揣着一把左轮手枪，听一听我的命运将如何做出安排。她打扮得漂漂亮亮，坐在桌子旁，叶菲莫维奇坐在她对面，装腔作势。虽然之前我没意识到自己有什么预感，但事情还是和我的事先判断丝毫不差（这里要夸奖一下我自己）。我不知道，我说明了没有。

事情经过就是这样。我听了整整一个小时，在这一个小时里，我仿佛见证了一位世界上最高贵的女性和一个庸俗的、堕落的、愚蠢的、灵魂卑微的无耻之徒间的决斗。我非常惊讶，我想，这个天真、温顺、沉默寡言的女人是从哪里学会这些话的？上流社会最有幽默感的喜剧作家恐怕都创作不出那种极具讽刺效果的剧本，里面充满了天真无邪的大笑与美德对丑恶的神圣鄙视。她说出的词句是多么华丽，敏捷的回应是多么机智，她的责备声中又饱含着多少真理啊！即便如此，她的话语里也完全不失少女的纯真。她嘲笑他的爱情表白，嘲笑他的腔调，嘲笑他的求婚。他没预料到她会抗拒，因此一上来就表现得十分鲁莽，这下他完全呆住了。起初我还认为，她就是在那儿卖弄风情——“这种行为虽然放荡，但能显得她俏皮可爱，这样可以提高她自己的身价。”但事实并非如此，真相就如同太阳的光芒一样，让猜忌无处容身。她的心智还没有完全成熟，决定赴这次约会只是出于对我的怨恨，突发奇想，有意为之。不过一旦事情开始，她就会立刻清醒过来。她苦思冥想，就是要找出一个能羞辱我的方法来，但真要开始做那种龌龊事时，她又忍受不了。如她这般纯洁无邪又充满理想的人，真的能被叶菲莫维奇或其他上流社会的无耻之徒引诱吗？绝不可能，他只能让她发笑。真理会从她的心灵中涌现，愤怒会激起她发自心底的嘲讽。我再说当时的情况，那个跳梁小丑最后十分尴尬，皱着眉头坐在那里，几乎一句话也说不出，以至于我有点儿担心，他会不会出于卑鄙的报复心理去直接羞辱她一番。我还要补充一下：我内心毫无波澜地听完了这场戏，我的表现还不赖。这场面我仿佛似曾相识，我去的原因似乎也正是要重温这一场景。我虽然带了一把枪，但我什么都不相信，什么说辞都不想听——这是真的！我怎么能把她想象成另外一种样子呢？我为什么爱她，我为什么欣赏她，我为什么要和她结婚？当然，那个时候我太执迷不悟了，认为她讨厌我，但我也坚信她是贞洁的。我终止了这场表演，推门走了进去。叶菲莫维奇吓了一跳，我抓住她的手，请求她和我回去。叶菲莫维奇回过神来，高声大笑。

“啊，我不能侵犯神圣的夫权，带她走吧，带她走吧！您知道，”他在我身后喊，“虽然一个正派的人不应该和您决斗，但看在您夫人的面子上，如果您自己愿意冒险尝试……我一定奉陪……”

“听见了吧！”在出门的一刹那我叫住她说道。

回家的路上我们一句话都没说。我挽着她的手，她并没有拒绝。相反地，她看上去有些惊慌，但这也只是在回家的路上。回家后，她就坐在椅子上盯着我看。她面色十分苍白，虽然略带嘲讽地抿着嘴唇，但眼神中已然带着一股郑重其事的挑战意味。似乎她真的相信，我马上会用左轮枪打死她。但我只是默默地从口袋中取出枪，放在了桌子上。她看了看我，又看了看枪。（请注意：她对这把枪并不陌生。当铺刚开张的时候，我就买了这把枪，装好了子弹。从准备开当铺时起，我就决定不养烈性犬，不雇像莫泽尔家的那种壮丁。如果家里有客人来，厨娘会去开门。但是干我们这一行的是不可能不有所防备的，所以我买了这支左轮枪，装上了子弹。她刚嫁到我家时，对这把枪非常感兴趣，缠着我问这问那，我甚至给她讲解了枪的原理和构造，而且还说服她做了一次打靶射击。请注意我说的这些。）我没理会她惊恐的神情，脱了外衣躺在床上，我感到筋疲力尽。已经将近十一点了，她还坐在那里一动不动，大约又过了一个小时，她熄了灯，没脱衣服，躺在了墙边的沙发上。这是她第一次没有和我一起睡——这也应该注意。

6. 可怕的回忆

现在来说一说这段可怕的回忆吧.....

我早上醒来时，大概不到八点，房间里早已大亮。我一下子清醒过来，猛地睁开双眼。她当时就站在桌子旁边，手里握着枪。她没注意到我已经醒了，而且还在看着她。我突然发现，她拿着枪朝我走了过来。我赶紧闭上眼，假装熟睡。

我听见她走到床边，站在那里。此时我什么都听见了，虽然房间里一片死寂，但我却能听到这寂静的声音。我突然抽搐了一下，不由自主地睁开了眼睛。她直勾勾地盯着我，看着我的眼睛，左轮枪已经指向了我的太阳穴。刹那间我们四目相对，但很快又移开了眼神。我竭尽全力把眼睛重新闭上，在那一瞬间，我下定决心，不论发生什么，我都不会动，也不会睁开眼睛。

在一般情况下，一个熟睡的人突然睁开眼睛，甚至抬起头看了一眼房间，然后又马上睡过去，这一过程应该是完全无意识的，他什么都不会记住。我和她四目相对，感觉到枪指着我的太阳穴，然后又突然闭上眼睛，一动不动，如同熟睡一样——她一定会认为，我实际上根本没醒过来，什么也没看到。而且，如果一个人看到了当时我眼前的情形，还能那样重新闭上眼睛，是完全不可思议的事。

这的确不可思议。但她可能还是弄不明白，这到底是怎么回事——其实，这就是当时我脑中瞬间闪现的念头。啊，在那一刹那，我

脑中的想法和感受如旋风般疾驰而过，如闪电般的人类思维是多么伟大！面对这种情况（我切身感受到的），如果她能认识到我当时已经清醒的话，那么我这种从容赴死的勇气一定会让她感到无比震撼，她的手可能仍旧在发抖。这种非凡的印象可能会改变一个人过去的决断。有这样一种说法，人们站在高处时，总会感觉到好像有一股力量在把他们向下拉，拉向深渊。我想，很多自杀或杀死别人的人完全就是因为他们有枪在手。无底深渊也好，四十五度的斜坡也罢，人们站在这上面不可能不向下滑落，就如同你手中拿着枪，总会有某种不可阻挡的力量促使你扣动扳机。但也许她当时已经意识到，我看见了她在做什么，也意识到我是清醒的，我是在默默等待死亡的到来——正是这种意识阻止了她继续滑向深渊。

房间里的寂静仍在蔓延，而我却突然感觉到一个冰冷的铁器碰触到了我的鬓发，你们会问：当时我真的认为自己不会死吗？上帝见证，我要告诉你们：那一刻我真的不抱任何希望，除非有奇迹发生。我为什么要接受死亡？我也要问问你们：我挚爱的人举着左轮枪对着我，即使她不开枪，我之后的人生还有什么意义？而且，我非常了解我这个人，我知道，那一瞬间，我们是在进行一场战斗，是关乎生死的一场可怕对决，其中一方正是那个被视为懦夫，被赶出军队的人。这一点我很清楚，而且，如果她能看出来我当时并没睡着的话，那么她也会明白的。

可能实际情况并非完全如此，也有可能我当时并不是那样想的，但即使我没有那样想，那一刻发生的事也确实是存在的，因为日后我还能经常回想起当时做的一切。

可你们还会问：为什么你没有把她从罪恶中拯救出来？是啊，我也不不断地问自己这个问题——每次一想起那一刻，我就脊背发凉。但那时我的灵魂已深陷绝望之中：如果连我自己都死了，我还能拯救谁？你们凭什么说，我那时还能想到拯救别人？你们怎么会知道我当时的感受？

那一刻，我思绪翻腾。时间在一秒秒地流逝，房间里依然一片死寂。我感觉她一直站在我旁边——过了一会儿，心底的一丝希望让我突然浑身一颤！我马上睁开眼睛。她已经不在房间里了。我从床上坐起来：我赢了——她永远被我征服了！

我起床去喝茶。我们家的茶炊总是放在前屋，每次都是由她来斟茶。我默默地坐到桌边，从她手里接过一杯茶。五分钟后，我看了她一眼。她面色十分苍白，甚至比昨天还要严重。她也在看着我。突然，突然间——当她发现我看她时，苍白的嘴唇间露出冷冷的一笑，怯生生的眼神里似乎充满了疑问。她好像还是拿不准刚才发生的事，并在问自己：他到底是知道还是不知道，看见还是没看见？我不动声

色地避开了她的眼神。喝完茶后，我关了当铺，去市场上买了张铁床和一扇屏风。回家后，我吩咐把床放在前厅里，用屏风把它围上。床是给她买的，但我并没和她说什么。看到这张床，不用说她也应该明白，我“都看见了，也知道了”，她也不用再猜疑了。晚上我照旧把左轮枪放在桌子上，她也一声不响地睡到了自己的新床上。婚姻关系解除了，“她被征服了，但没得到宽恕”。夜里她不断呓语，第二天早上热病发作，卧床了六个星期。

1.高傲的梦

卢克里娅刚才跟我说，等太太下葬后，她不想继续在我这儿待着了，她也准备走。我已经跪着祷告五分钟了，我原本打算祷告一个小时，但我脑子里一直安静不下来，一直在想各种各样的问题，全是些病态的想法，想得我头疼——在这里祈祷有什么用呢？只不过是罪过！说来也奇怪，我竟然不想睡觉：一般说来，人在极度悲伤的情况下，特别是在经历了最初的强烈刺激后，总是想睡觉。据说，被判处死刑的人在行刑前夜会睡得非常踏实。这也可以理解，符合人的本性，否则的话那人是熬不住的……我躺在沙发上，但睡不着……

在她生病的六个星期里，我雇了一位受过专业训练的助理护士，加上我和卢克里娅，我们三人日夜照料她。我不心疼钱，甚至想在她身上多花一点儿。我请来的施罗德医生每次的出诊费是十卢布。她清醒过来后，我就很少出现在她面前了。我说这些干吗呢？基本康复后，她就常常坐在我房间里一张专门为她买的桌子旁，一言不发……是的，我们俩基本上不说话；后来才慢慢开始有了些交流，但也仅限于一些日常杂事。我当然是有意不去多说话的，但我很清楚，不用和我说过多的废话让她也很高兴。我认为，她的这些表现都是很正常的：毕竟她受到了极大的震撼，又在和我的斗争中惨败。但我认为，她需要时间去忘记这些事，而且要习惯现在的这种状态。因此，我们就这样彼此保持着沉默，但我时时刻刻都在为自己的未来做着准备。我想她应该也是如此吧，那个时候我最大的兴趣就是猜测她的想法，猜测她心里是怎么看我的。

还有……唉，你们谁也想不到，我为她的病忍受了多少折磨。但所有的一切我都只在内心默默承受，从未表露过，甚至连卢克里娅都察觉不到。我无法想象，甚至不敢去假设，她在一无所知的情况下死去会是种什么情形。在她脱离危险、逐渐康复后，我知道，我也会很快平静下来。而且，我想让现在的状态暂时维持下去，我们的未来终会降临，但我想尽量把它推后。的确，当时我的心理状态有点儿奇怪，总有种特别的感觉……这么说吧，我觉得我胜利了，对于我来说，只要一想到这件事，我就十分满足。整个冬天就这么过去了。而我，从来没有像这个冬天那样，觉得一切如此完美。

你们要知道，在我妻子的惨剧发生前，我的人生中还有过一次可

怕的经历——被迫从军队退役，这件事无时无刻不在困扰我，使我声誉受损。总之，我受到了蛮横无理的对待。是的，我的同事们不喜欢我，他们认为我性格阴郁，甚至有些可笑。事情往往就是这样的，有些东西您觉得它是高尚的，值得尊重，您把它深藏心底，但不知为什么，这竟会让有些人发笑。是啊，人们从来都不喜欢我，甚至在学校里就是这样。我总是处处不受欢迎。连卢克里娅都不喜欢我。在团里服役时，有件事可以证明我不受欢迎，虽然它是偶然发生的。有的时候厄运会像飘来的浮云一样凑到一块儿，可能发生也可能不发生的意外都会让一个人毁掉，没有什么事比这更令人反感和难以接受的了。对于一个睿智的人来说，这简直就是有辱尊严。事情的经过是这样的：

有一次我去剧院看戏，幕间休息时去了趟茶点部。这时一个叫阿×的骠骑兵突然走了进来，当着在场军官和其他观众的面，对另外两个骠骑兵大声说，我们团的别祖姆采夫上尉刚才在走廊里大吵大闹，“好像是喝多了”。他们的交谈没了下文，说的也不是真事，别祖姆采夫上尉并没有喝多，也没像他说的那样大吵大闹。几个骠骑兵又闲聊了几句，然后就走了。但第二天，这事传到了我们团里，立刻有人说，当时我们团在茶点部的只有我一人，而且骠骑兵阿×在污蔑别祖姆采夫上尉时，我也没有上去制止他。可我为什么要那样做呢？如果他对别祖姆采夫有恶意的话，那也是他们之间的私事，我干吗要踉这浑水呢？但军官们认为，这并非只是私人恩怨，而是牵涉到了我们团，因为当时团里的军官中只有我一人。我的做法就等于在向其他军官和观众们证明，我们团里可能有军官不重视自己和团队的荣誉。我不同意这样的定论。有人告诉我，虽然现在有点儿晚了，但还是有机会补救的，只要我正式向阿×解释清楚当时的情况就可以了。我不想这么做，而且觉得很气愤，所以就一口回绝了。不久之后，我就退役，离开了军队。这就是事情的整个经过。我高傲地离开，但心理却崩溃了。之后便一蹶不振。恰巧这时，我在莫斯科的姐夫挥霍掉了我们本就不多的财产，其中也包括我的那一小份，致使我身无分文，流落街头。我本可以在私人机构谋个职位，但我没那样做：脱下闪亮的军装，我不想随便到铁路上的什么地方去工作。就这样吧，羞愧、耻辱、堕落，要来就来吧，越坏越好——这就是我当时的选择。种种幽暗的记忆与维亚泽姆斯基大院，填满了我接下来三年的生活。一年半之前，我的教母，一位有钱的老妇人，在莫斯科去世了，有些意外的是，在她的遗嘱中有三千卢布是留给我的。经过一番考虑，我做出了改变自己命运的决定。我打算开一家当铺，这并不需要别人的理解：等赚够了钱，我会去找一个能安身的角落，开始新的生活，远离从前的记忆——这就是我的计划。然而，那段黑暗的往事和永远洗刷不清的羞辱却在时时刻刻折磨着我。后来我结婚了，这是不是偶然的事情——我也不知道。但娶她进家门时，我想，我是给自己找了一

位朋友，我太需要朋友了。但我也清楚，朋友间是需要磨合的，甚至是需要征服的。我能立刻向这位对我抱有成见的十六岁姑娘解释清楚所有事情吗？比如说，如果没有那次可怕的“左轮枪事件”，我能使她相信，我并非懦夫，被军队除名也是不公正的吗？但这件事来得是多么及时啊！在经受住了左轮枪的考验后，我彻底洗刷掉了那段屈辱与黑暗的历史。虽然不会有人知道这些故事，但只要她能明白就够了，这对我来说就是一切，因为她对于我来说就是一切，是我理想中未来的全部希望所在。她是我唯一想要的人，不需要别人了——她应该是都懂了，至少她清楚，投奔我的敌人对我来说是不公平的。这种想法让我无比欣慰。她现在可能还会觉得我是个怪人，但起码不会再认为我是个卑鄙下流之徒了。而且，经历了这一切之后，我更加认同：性格古怪并不是缺点；相反，有时候它更能打动女性的心。总之，我是把这件事暂时放下了，并不急于去解决。我感觉自己非常平静，对于我的理想来说，有太多的图景和素材可以利用。我是个幻想家，但这也是我的问题所在：我总是在幻想自己的未来，但对她呢，再等等吧。

整个冬天就在某种期待中过去了。我喜欢悄悄地看着她坐在桌边的样子。她会做一些针线活儿，缝缝补补，晚上有时会从我柜子里拿一本书读读。我的藏书基本上可以证明我的品位和兴趣。她几乎哪也不去。每天午饭后或黄昏前，我会带她出去散步，做些户外运动，我们也不像从前那样互不说话了。我尽量做出我们相处和睦的样子，但正如我前面说过的，我们俩都不会让自己和对方过于亲近。我是有意这样做的，而她呢，我想，还是应该再“给她些时间吧”。让我感到奇怪的是，我自己竟然从来都没仔细想过这种情况。整个冬天里，我一直喜欢悄悄地看她，但直到冬天结束，她都没看过我一眼！我只是认为，她还是太羞怯了，而且病后的虚弱无力让她看上去更加腼腆温顺。不，最好还是再等等吧——“说不定她会突然自己走过来……”

这个想法总是让我兴奋不已。再补充一句：有时我好像是故意让自己这么激动，这似乎也让我完全受制于她。就这样又过了一段时间。我对她的怨恨并没有越积越深，也没有在心底根深蒂固。我自己感觉这就像一场游戏。不错，那个时候我是解除了婚姻关系，给她买了床和屏风，但我从来没把她当成一个有罪之人来看待啊。这并不是因为我对她的过错认识肤浅，而是因为从第一天起，甚至在买床之前，我就决定要宽恕她。这听起来确实有点儿奇怪，因为无论如何，在道德要求上，我是个很严格的人。然而，在我眼中，她已经被征服了，受到了应有的惩罚，精神彻底崩溃，虽然有时候我对她充满怜悯，但有时候也对这种结果感到非常满意。我很喜欢我们之间这种不平等的感觉……

这个冬天里，我有意做了几件善事。我免去了两笔应收的债务，

还在没有任何抵押物的情况下，放了一些钱给一个贫穷的女人。我没把这些事告诉我妻子，我这么做也不是为了让她知道；但那个女人自己上门来道谢，就差没给我跪下了。这事传了出去，我想，她也应该很高兴我这么做吧。

春天马上就到了，已经是四月中旬了，双层窗户已经被拿掉，明媚的阳光照进了我们安静的房间。似乎曾有一块障眼布挡在我的眼前，蒙蔽了我的头脑。这致命又可怕的障眼布啊！但不知为什么，我眼前的遮蔽物突然落下了，瞬间一切都变得明朗起来，我恍然大悟！这一天的到来是偶然的吗，是注定的吗，是太阳的光芒让我愚钝的头脑瞬间开悟的吗？不，并不存在什么顿悟，而是那根筋脉，那根已经僵死了的筋脉突然间又跳动了起来，它摇晃着我沉寂的心灵和骇人的高傲，它们复活了，它们又放射出了光芒。我突然感觉到像是从地上跳起来一样。是的，它来得太突然，太出人意料。事情发生在那天下午五点钟，临近傍晚……

2.障眼布突然落下了

在这之前，我先交代两句。早在一个月之前，我就发现她经常莫名其妙地陷入沉思之中，注意，是沉思，不是沉默。我也是突然发现的。我看她的时候，她总是坐在那里低头缝纫，看也不看我一眼。有时她坐在那里的样子会突然让我感到惊讶，纤细、瘦弱、面色苍白，嘴唇也毫无血色，如果再加上她若有所思的神情，那可真是一幅让人震撼的画面。在这之前，我就常常在夜里听到她小声干咳。有一次，我又听到她在咳嗽，我没和她打招呼，马上起床去请施罗德医生过来。

施罗德是第二天来我家的。她惊讶地看了看医生，又看了看我。

她随即面无表情地冷笑着说：“我没生病。”

施罗德没有太仔细检查病情（这种医生总是端着架子，有时看病马马虎虎），只是把我叫到另一个房间，对我说，她这是大病初愈后的常见情况，春天时最好能去海边疗养一下，如果不行的话，去乡间休息一段时间也可以。总之，他也没说出什么来，就是告诉我，她现在身体虚弱，需要休息之类的。施罗德走后，她非常严肃地看着我，还是说：

“我真的一点儿病都没有。”

但说着说着，突然脸红了起来，很明显，她觉得很惭愧。不说我也明白：她之所以觉得惭愧，是因为她知道，我还是她的丈夫，仍然像个真正的丈夫那样在关心她。但当时我没能彻底看清的是，她脸上那一抹红晕可绝不是温顺与谦卑的象征。（那就是一块障眼布！）

就这样，一个月之后，在四月一个阳光明媚的下午，我在当铺里结账，她在房间里干着活儿。当时已经五点多，我突然听见我们的房间里传出了歌声……是她，她在那儿轻声地唱了起来。这是我第一次听到她唱歌，以至于那歌声给我留下的深刻印象，到现在我都无法完全理解。在那之后我几乎没有听到她唱过歌了，除了她刚嫁到我家的時候，我们还有说有笑，有时候我们会用左轮枪去打靶。那个时候，她的声音还很响亮、清脆，虽然有时忽高忽低，但非常悦耳，而且气力十足。但现在她的歌声是那样的微弱，虽然听上去并不忧郁（她唱的是首抒情歌曲），但她的嗓子就好像被撕裂、折断了一样，似乎不太适合用来歌唱，给人的感觉就像那首歌也生病了一样。她轻轻地唱着，唱到高音时，那虚弱的声音就会挣扎着断开，然后咳嗽一下，继续轻轻地往下唱……

有些人可能会嘲笑我太激动了，但可能永远都不会有人理解，我为什么要那么动情！不，我并不只是为她感到惋惜，除此之外，还有其他原因。起码在刚听到她的歌声时，我觉得有点儿莫名其妙，进而是惊讶不已，感到既可怕又怪异，到最后几乎是一种病态的报复心理：她在唱歌，居然在我面前唱歌！难道她忘了我的存在吗？

我浑身发抖地坐在那里，然后猛地站了起来，不假思索地拿上帽子准备出门，但我根本不知道要去哪里，要做什么。卢克里娅帮我穿好了大衣。

“她在唱歌？”我随口对卢克里娅说。但她没明白我的意思，看了看我，还是没搞懂；我这话说得的确有点儿含糊不清。

“这是她第一次唱歌吗？”

“不，您不在的时候，她偶尔会唱。”卢克里娅回答。

我明白了。我走下楼梯，上了街，开始漫无目的地游荡。我走到一处拐角，站下来想一想我要去哪儿。那里人来人往，不时会有人撞到我，但我毫无感觉。我叫下了一个马车夫，让他带我去“警察大桥”，我也不知道为什么要去那里。可不一会儿我就放弃了这个想法，并塞给他二十戈比。

“打扰了，这些钱你拿着吧。”我冲他茫然地笑了笑，但心里却突然开始一阵狂喜。

我加快脚步，转身回了家。那个颤抖、虚弱、撕裂的歌声又突然在我脑海里响起，几乎让我窒息。障眼布终于落了下来！假如她还能在我面前唱歌的话，那么说明她已经不在乎我了——这一点是很明确的，同时又很可怕。我能感受得到。但我心中的狂喜战胜了恐惧。

这真是命运对我的捉弄！要知道整个冬天我的心里全是这种喜悦

的感觉，根本容不下其他任何东西，可我自己在哪里呢？我和我的心灵是融为一体了吗？我匆匆忙忙地跑上楼梯，我不知道，我进门的时候是不是看上去怯生生的。我只记得，地板仿佛波浪一样起起伏伏，而我则像是在水面上漂浮。我走进房间，她还是坐在原来的地方，低头做着针线活，但没有唱歌。她有意无意地朝我这边看了一眼，但目光并没有落在我身上，只是做了个动作而已，平淡又冷漠，无论谁来她都是这个样子。

我直接走了过去，坐在紧挨着她的椅子上。可能是我的举动有点儿反常，她似乎是被吓了一跳，飞快地看了我一眼。我握住她的手，但忘记了和她说的是什麼，因为我当时已经完全语无伦次了。我已经控制不住我的声音了，我不知道我说了什麼，只记得当时快要窒息了。

“我们聊聊吧……你知道……随便说点儿什么都行！”我好像是说了一些蠢话，可这时候又怎么能仔细思考呢？她哆嗦了一下，立刻把手抽了回去。她吓得不敢地看着我，但眼神中却满是严肃的惊讶神情。没错，惊讶又严肃的神情，它立刻将我击得粉碎。虽然她没有开口，但眼神却在突然发问：“爱情？你也想要爱情？”我能读懂她的眼神，我能读出她眼中的一切。这一切都让我激动不已，我扑倒在了她的脚边。是的，我在她面前崩溃了。她一下子跳了起来，但我用尽全力握住了她的双手。

我完全记得我当时绝望的感觉，对，完全记得！但你们相信吗，也正是在那个时候，我的心中翻滚沸腾，感受到了难以抑制的狂喜，我想，我快要死了。我如痴如醉地亲吻着她的双脚，沉浸在无边无际的幸福之中。没错，这难以言表的幸福就出现在彻底的绝望面前。我一边哭泣，一边想要说些什么，但根本说不出话来。她刚才那惊恐的神情突然变成了一副忧虑的样子，她看我的眼神有些怪异，甚至带有一丝野性，她似乎有一个非同寻常的问题，但很快又把它想清楚了，继而微微一笑。我继续亲吻着她的双脚，她羞涩地把脚移开，我便亲吻她脚下的地板。她看着眼前发生的这一幕，突然笑了（你们也见过羞涩的笑吧）。她笑得越来越厉害，甚至近乎歇斯底里，我看见她的双手在颤抖，但这些我都毫不在意，只是在那不停地对她低语，说我爱她，说我愿意永远匍匐在她面前，“让我吻你的裙子吧……我一辈子都会这样对你顶礼膜拜……”她突然开始号啕大哭，浑身不停地抽搐，犹如陷入可怕的癫狂中一般。是我把她吓到了。

我把她抱到床上。过了一会儿，她逐渐冷静下来，但神色却十分憔悴。她坐在床边，拉着我的手，请求我一定要冷静：“够了，您不要再折磨自己，冷静一点儿吧！”——说完，她又哭了起来。那天晚上我一直陪在她身边，寸步不离。我一直在和她说话，说我要带她去

布洛涅 [11]，去洗海水浴，马上出发，再过两星期就走；说我听到她的声音还像不久前那样虚弱；说我要关了当铺，把它卖给多布龙拉沃夫；还说要开始新的生活，这是最重要的，要去布洛涅，去布洛涅！她听了讲的这些，觉得有些害怕，而且越来越害怕。但我并没有太在意她的感受，对于我来说，更重要的是，我发疯似的想要再跪倒在她的脚边，再亲吻她的双脚，亲吻她脚下的地板，膜拜她，我不停地对她说：“我再也不会向你索要什么了，不要回应我，不要在乎我，完全不要，我只请求你允许我在一个角落里默默地看着你，把我当成你的一件东西就好，把我当成一条狗……”她又哭了。

“我还以为您不会再理我了。”她脱口而出，说得那么突然，那么不经意，仿佛她自己都没有意识到她说了什么。但对于我来说，这是那天晚上最重要的一句话，无比清晰，正中要害，让我心如刀绞。这句话让我彻底醒悟了，只有她在我身边，在我眼前，我才能对未来充满渴望，我才能感到无比的幸福。啊，那天晚上我让她筋疲力尽，我能理解，但我也不断在想，我要马上做出改变。最后，她终于撑不住了，我劝她休息，她倒头便睡。夜里，我不停地起来，穿上鞋走到她床边，静静地看着她。和我想象的一样，她有时会在梦中低声呓语。我一边搓着手，一边看着她，看着这个躺在我花三卢布买来的小铁床上的病人。我跪了下来，但没有亲吻她的脚。（会弄醒她的！）我祈祷了一会儿，然后站了起来。这时，卢克里娅从厨房走了出来，看到了我。我走到她跟前，告诉她可以去睡觉了，从明天开始，就是“另一番光景”了。

我对这一点坚信不疑，甚至到了迷狂的程度。虽然我的眼前不再有任何障碍遮挡我的视线，但当时我正沉浸在那种无边无际的喜悦之中，久久不能平静下来，以至于完全不去理会灾祸降临的某种征兆。我只期待明天马上到来，对，就是明天！要知道，那个时候她还活着，她就在那里，就在我的眼前，就像我在她的眼前一样，一想到这些，我如何能平静得下来呢？“等她明天醒来，我要把这一切都告诉她，她会理解的。”这就是我当时的想法，简单而又明确，我为此狂喜不已！更重要的是去布洛涅的旅行。不知为什么，我总是想着布洛涅，似乎那就是一切，似乎在布洛涅会有某种终极存在的东西。“到布洛涅去，到布洛涅去！……”我狂躁地等待着明天。

3.我了解得太清楚了

这件事的的确确就发生在几天前，五天，总共只过去了五天，就在上星期二。不、不，如果她能再多等一会儿，用不了多长时间，我就可以驱散阴霾了！难道她的心还没有平静下来吗？第二天她听我说话时，虽然看上去有些心神不定，但脸上已经挂着微笑了……但在过去的整整五天里，她时而心神不宁，时而羞愧难当。她仍然感到害

怕，非常害怕。我不会去争辩，也不想反驳，我没有丧失理智，她感到恐惧是可以理解的，她怎么能不害怕呢？要知道，我们彼此早已是陌生人了，相互生疏，形同陌路，但却突然发生了这一切……我并没有注意到她的恐惧，我只看到了美好的新生活！……的确，千真万确，我犯了一个错误。也可能是很多错误。第二天一觉醒来（已是星期三了），一大早我就犯了个错误：我竟然把她当成了自己的一位朋友。我向她坦白了我的过去，甚至连一生中自己都不想直面的事也没有隐瞒，虽然这是有必要的，但我过于着急了——这哪里只是坦白啊！我直接对她说，在这整整一个冬天里，我始终坚信她是爱我的。我向她解释，我当时开这个当铺只是由于意志和心灵的颓废，它既是对我个人意志的鞭挞，也是一种自我夸耀。我还向她承认，当初在茶点部时，我的确是害怕了，这是我的性格所致，我的神经过于脆弱：当时的氛围让我惶恐不安，连茶点部也让我惊慌失措，我甚至在纠结，我要不要赶紧离开，我是不是表现得很愚蠢？我害怕的不是决斗本身，而是在这一过程中被人嘲笑……后来我也一直不愿承认，我是在折磨所有人，我也因此在折磨她，我娶她就是想让她为此感到痛苦。我发疯似的跟她说了这些话。她抓住我的手，哀求我不要再说了：“您这说的什么话……您不要再折磨自己了。”说完，又开始号啕大哭，差点再次歇斯底里！她不停地求我什么都别说了，不要再想这些事了。

我没太理会她的请求，继续和她说关于春天，关于布洛涅的事。那里有太阳，那里有我们的新太阳，这就是我要说的！我要关了当铺，把它转让给多布龙拉沃夫。我又突然向她提议，把我们所有的财产都分发给穷人，只留下我从教母那里继承的三千卢布，我们用这笔钱去布洛涅，等回来后再靠我们的双手开始新的生活。事情就这么定了，她没有反对，因为她什么也没说……只是笑了笑。她的笑似乎更像是出于安慰，只是为了不让我伤心。我看得出来，我让她很为难，你们别以为我又愚蠢又自私，什么都不懂。其实我什么都明白，我比谁都看得透，我已经处在彻底绝望的边缘了！

我把所有事都和她讲了，关于我的、关于她的，乃至关于卢克里娅的。我告诉她，我也哭过……唉，我当然不会多说关于我哭的事，而且有些事情我也是尽量不去提及。我记得，有那么一两次，她和我交谈时也表现得兴致勃勃，对，我记得！你们怎么可以说我什么都不在意呢？如果这件事没有发生的话，那一切都将大不一样。要知道，两天前她还笑着和我讲这个冬天她读过的书，讲吉尔·布拉斯和格林纳达大主教的片段 [12]。那是多么纯真、可爱的笑容啊，和她还是我未婚妻的时候一模一样。（时间真是过得飞快！）看到这笑容我是多么高兴啊！不过，她在讲到大主教时的那种状态倒是让我很惊讶：很显然，她在冬天里读那本文学经典的时候获得了内心的宁静和幸福，以

至于让她面露笑容。难道她那时真的已经心如死灰，完全确信我将抛弃她吗？因为她星期二的时候还说过：“我还以为您会抛弃我呢！”唉，这可真是十岁小女孩的想法！实际上，她那时的确完全相信，未来的一切事情都会是像她想的那样：我们两个人各自坐在自己的桌子旁，就这么一直坐下去，直到六十岁。但突然有一天，我走到她面前，我是她的丈夫，一个需要爱的丈夫！这是多么深的误解啊，我是多么糊涂啊！

我欣喜若狂地看着她，但这样做不太好，可能会把她吓到，我应该再克制一点。其实我已经很克制了，我控制住自己没再去亲吻她的脚。我从来没表现出过那种样子……就是……我作为一个丈夫的样子——我脑子里从来就没想过那应该是什么样子，我只想膜拜她！但我已经无法再沉默下去了，让我一言不发是完全不可能的。我突然对她说，和她交谈是一种愉悦的享受，我认为她的教养和见识都要远远超过我。她的脸涨得通红，慌忙说，我这是言过其实了。但处在狂喜中的我犯了一个愚蠢的错误，我情不自禁地和她提起了当初躲在门后，听她和那个无耻之徒论战的事，那次清白的论战。而且我还告诉她，我是多么地欣赏她的智慧、机敏和孩童般的纯真。她听了我的话，身体微微颤抖了一下，依然说我言过其实了，但这次声音更轻，而且脸色一下子阴沉了下来，随后使用双手捂着脸失声痛哭……这下我也控制不住自己了：我又跪倒在她身边，亲吻她的双脚，最后又是以一阵歇斯底里般的发作收场，那场景和星期二时一模一样。这是昨天晚上，但到了第二天早上……

第二天早上？！天啊，那不就是今天早上吗，就在不久前，就是刚才！

你们仔细想想：就在我们刚才一起喝茶的时候（就是在昨天的那阵发疯后），她还对我说，她冬天时让我惊讶的那种平静心态是真实的！而我却整夜在为昨天的事担惊受怕。但她突然走到我面前，双手紧紧握在一起，（就在刚才！）对我说，她知道，她是有罪之人，整个冬天她的罪孽都在折磨着她，而且现在也没有停止……她说她非常敬佩我高尚的情操和坦荡的胸襟……“我要做您忠诚的妻子，我会一直尊敬您……”我一下子跳了起来，发疯似的抱住了她！我亲吻着她，吻她的脸颊，吻她的嘴唇，就像一位久别归家的丈夫一样。可我才刚才为什么要出门，我就离开了两个小时……我去办理我们的出国护照……哦，我的天啊！我要是早回来五分钟，就那五分钟！……我回来时一群人围在大门口，那些人盯着我，那些目光……啊，主啊！

卢克里娅说（我现在无论如何也不能让卢克里娅走，她了解所有细节，整个冬天她都在，她会把一切都告诉我），大约在我回来前的二十分钟左右，她走进房间去问我妻子一件事，我记不起来是什么事

了。她当时看到，圣像（就是前面提到过的圣母像）已被取了出来，就放在桌子上，好像我妻子刚刚祈祷过。“您怎么了，太太？”“没什么事，卢克里娅，你去吧……等等，卢克里娅。”我妻子走到她跟前，吻了她一下。“您现在觉得开心吗，太太？”“是的，卢克里娅。”“先生早就该向您道歉，太太……感谢上帝，你们终于和好了。”“好，卢克里娅，你去吧。”她笑了笑，但看上去有些怪异，怪异到卢克里娅总觉得有什么地方不对劲，十分钟后又返回房间去看她，“她当时站在墙边，离窗户很近，一只手贴着墙，头贴在手上，好像在想着什么事情。她想得太出神了，都没注意到我在门外看她。我看见，她好像在笑，站在那儿一边笑，一边想心事。我站了一会儿，就悄悄走开了，我正在纳闷儿的时候，突然听见窗户被打开的声音。我急忙走回去说，‘外面冷，太太，您可别着凉了’，就在这时我突然看到，她站到了窗台上，窗户开着，她背对着我站在窗户中间，手里握着圣像。我的心扑通一下，赶紧喊‘太太，太太’，她听见了，我以为她会转过身来看看我，但她没有，而是把圣像按在胸前，向前跨了一步，跳了下去！”

我只记得，我刚走进大门时，她还有体温。主要是他们都在看我。一开始他们还在吵吵嚷嚷，但一看到我立刻安静了下来，给我让出了一条路，我看见……她躺在那里，抱着圣像。我记得，当时感觉周围一团漆黑，我默默地走过去，站在那儿看了好久，大家围在我身边，好像在对我说着什么。卢克里娅当时也在，但我没看见她。听别人说，她还和我说话了。我记得，有一个人一直在冲我嚷嚷：“从嘴里流出一小摊血，就一小摊，一小摊！”他还指给我看地面上的血。我的一根手指好像沾到了血，有些弄脏了，我看了看我的手指（这个我记得），而那个人就一直在旁边对我说：“一小摊，一小摊！”

“什么‘一小摊’，你是什么意思？”我用尽全力冲他喊（据说是），然后抡起拳头朝他扑了过去……

啊，荒唐，荒唐！这是个误会！这不正常！这怎么可能！

4.只晚了五分钟

难道不是这样吗？难道这会是真的吗？难道你们觉得这是有可能的吗？为了什么，究竟是什么原因让这个女人选择了死亡？

你们要相信，我是知道原因的；但她为了什么而死——仍然是个谜。她对我的爱感到恐惧，她一定是认真地问过自己：是否应该接受这种爱？既然回答不了这个问题，那就只好选择死亡。我知道，我知道，其实这没有什么值得伤脑筋的地方：她对自己做了太多的承诺，她害怕无法兑现——就是这样。但有些情况是非常可怕的。

现在我仍然弄不明白的是，她是为了什么目的而死的？这个问题

一直在我脑子里挥之不去。实际上，无论她想要过怎样的生活，我都会让她得偿所愿。但她不相信我会那样做，这就是问题所在！不、不，我在撒谎，完全不是这么回事。原因其实很简单，和我在一起就应该坦诚相待：她选择爱我，就会全心全意地爱，而不是像她爱那个杂货店老板那样敷衍行事。她是那么纯洁，那么真诚，她无法接受那位老板想要的那种爱情。她不想欺骗我，她不想用二分之一、四分之一的爱来装模作样地骗我。她就是这样的诚实，就是这样，先生们！那个时候我还想让她更加豁达一些，你们记得吗？多么奇怪的想法。

有些问题我非常想知道答案：她尊敬我吗？我不知道。她鄙视我吗？我不认为她会鄙视我。但奇怪的是，为什么我从来没想过这个问题，整个冬天我都从来没考虑过，她是不是在鄙视我。在她用那种严肃而又惊讶的目光看我之前，我一直都坚信她不会鄙视我。没错，严肃。正是那份严肃让我彻底明白，她鄙视我。但现在为时已晚，一切都无法重来了！啊，让她鄙视我吧，哪怕鄙视一辈子都没关系，只要她活着！刚才她还能走路，还能说话呢。我真想不通，她是怎么从窗户跳下去的！我哪曾想到，这事就发生在五分钟前。我叫来卢克里娅。我现在决不能让卢克里娅走，决不能！

我们还有很多事要商量呢。我们只是在这个冬天才开始彼此疏远的，难道就不能重归于好吗？为什么，为什么我们不能在一起重新开始新的生活呢？我是个坦荡又豁达的人，她也是——这不就是我们之间的契合点吗？我们只要再谈一谈，不需要多久，也许再过两天她就能彻底理解我了。

最让人无法接受的就是这样的事——简单、野蛮、愚昧，让人无法预料。这多么遗憾啊！五分钟，我就晚来了五分钟！我要是能提前回来五分钟，这事就不会发生了，她脑子里也再不会出现这样的念头了。到最后，她一定会理解我所做的一切。可现在，房间又变得空空荡荡，又只有我一个人了。钟摆还在那里嘀嗒作响，它无所牵挂，也没有遗憾。我身边一个人都没有——这就是我的不幸！

我一直在房间里走来走去。我知道，我知道，你们不用提醒我：我抱怨这件不可预料的事，我还抱怨那五分钟，你们觉得可笑吗？但你们要知道，这是很明显的。你们想想：出现这种情况时，一般人都不会留一张字条，写着“我的死和任何人无关”，但她什么都没留下。难道她没想过，有的人可能会怀疑到卢克里娅吗？人们会说：“当时只有你和她在一起，一定是你把她推下去的。”如果不是当时有四个人在院子里和厢房窗户中看到她怀抱圣像，自己跳下去的话，那卢克里娅即便无罪，至少也要受一些刁难了。但其他人不也是偶然看到她跳下去的吗？是的，这一瞬间发生的事，完全就是无意识的本能冲动。这就是一场意外，这是毫无理性的行为！但你们会问，她在这之前不

是还对着圣像祈祷来着吗？但这并不代表她做的就是死前祈祷。很有可能她就是在十分钟前才做出这种决定的——就站在墙边，头靠手上，面带微笑时。那一刻一定有某种想法钻进了她的脑子，让她神魂颠倒，最终屈服。

你们的想法都存在明显的误解。她是可以和我们一起生活的。就算她贫血又怎样呢？难道这是贫血或生命力枯竭所致吗？她从冬天开始就已经很虚弱了，就是这么回事……

我来晚了！

躺在棺材里的她是那样的纤细，连她的小鼻子都变得尖瘦了！她的睫毛像平放着的箭一样。她坠落地面后，哪里都没有摔破，哪里都没有折断！只有那“一小摊血”，一个勺子那么多。她是内脏破裂。我又冒出一个奇怪的想法：如果她不下葬会怎样？因为如果她被抬走，那么……不，她几乎不可能被抬走！我当然知道，她应该被抬走，我没疯，也没说胡话，相反，我现在比任何时候都要清醒——只不过家里又要冷冷清清了，又只剩那两个房间，又只有我一个人和那些抵押物在一起了。胡话、胡话，这就是在说胡话！我让她痛苦不堪，就是这样！

走到这一步，你们的那些法律对我来说算得了什么？你们的习俗、你们的文化、你们的生活、你们的国家、你们的信仰对我来说又算得了什么？把我送上法庭吧，让你们的法庭来公开审判我吧，我要说，我没什么好招认的。法官会冲我大喊：“肃静，军官！”我也会回应他：“你有什么权力让我服从你？为什么阴暗的守旧势力要打碎这世上最珍贵的东西？你们的法律为什么要这样对待我？我已经和那些条条框框一刀两断了。”我现在什么都不怕了！

盲目，她太盲目了！她死了，听不到我说话了！她不会知道，我把她置身在怎样的天国之中。天国就在我心里，但愿她已经身在其中！她不会再爱我了——好吧，不过那又怎样呢？万物本该如此，也终将如此。她本可以把我当成一个朋友——那样我们都会快乐，我们会看着对方开心大笑。我们本应这样去生活。如果她爱上了别人——好吧，去爱吧，去爱吧！她会和他走在一起开心地笑，而我会站在街角望着他们……啊，不管什么都可以，只要她睁开眼睛，哪怕一次也好！睁开一会儿吧，就一会儿！看看我，就像刚才一样，像她站在我面前发誓要做一个忠诚的妻子那样！只要看一眼她就会全明白了！

旧势力啊！这世界啊！人类孤零零地活在这世界中——这就是不幸！俄罗斯的勇士们在呼喊：“有人活着吗？”我不是勇士，我也这么呼喊，可是无人应答。人们说，太阳赋予万物生命。太阳升起来了，你们看看它，难道它有生命吗？一切都没有生命，到处是一片死气沉

沉。只有人是活着的，可他们周围却是一片沉寂——这就是我们的世界！“人们啊，彼此相爱吧！”——这是谁说的？这是谁的训诫？钟摆还在那里漠然地嘀嗒作响，令人厌恶。现在已经夜里两点了。她的靴子还立在床边，仿佛在等着她……不，说正经的，明天她就要被抬走了，我该怎么办？

Chapter 1

I. WHO I WAS AND WHO SHE WAS

... Now as long as she's here - everything is still all right : I'm constantly going over and looking at her; but tomorrow they'll take her away and - how will I ever stay behind all on my own? Now she's on the table in the sitting room, on two card tables that were put together, and the coffin will come tomorrow, a white one, with white gros de Naples , how-ever, that's not i ... I keep pacing and want to make sense of it for myself. Now it's six hours that I've been trying to make sense of it and I still can't collect my thoughts to a T. The fact of the matter is that I keep pacing, pacing, pacin ... Here's how it was. I'll simply tell it in order. (Order!) Gen-tlemen, I'm far from being a literary man, as you'll see, well, so be it, but I'll tell it as I myself understand it. That's the horror of it for me, that I understand everything!

If you want to know, that is, if we take it from the very beginning, then quite simply she used to come to me to pawn things in order to pay for advertising in the Voice , say-ing, well, that there's a governess, willing to travel and give lessons in the home and so forth and so on. That was in the very beginning and of course I didn't single her out from the others : she came like all the others and so forth. But afterwards I began to single her out. She was so thin, fair, a bit taller than average; with me she was always awkward, as if she were embarrassed (I think that she was exactly the same with all strangers, and, it goes without saying, I was no different than anyone else, that is, if taken not as a pawn-broker but as a man). As soon as she received her money she would immediately turn around and leave. And all in silence. Others argue, beg, haggle to be given more; but not this one, whatever she was give ... It seems to me that I keep getting muddle ... Yes; first of all, I was struck by her things : silver gilt earrings, a worthless little locket - things worth twenty kopecks. She herself knew that they were worth all of ten kopecks, but I could see from her face that for her they were objects of great value - and indeed, as I learned later, this was all that she had left from her papa and mama. Only once did I permit myself to smile at her things. That is, you see, I never permit myself that, I maintain a gentlemanly tone with the public : a few words said respectfully and sternly. 'Sternly, sternly and sternly.' But she suddenly permitted herself to bring the remnants (quite literally, that is) of an old rabbit-skin jacket - and I couldn't resist and suddenly said something to her in the way of a witticism, as it were. Goodness gracious, how she flared up! Her eyes were blue, large, thoughtful, but how they blazed! But she didn't let drop a single word, she picked up her 'remnants' and left. That was the first time that I noticed her particularly and thought something of that sort about her, that is, precisely something of that particular sort. Yes; I recall yet another impression, that is, if you wish, the main impression, the synthesis of everything : namely, that she was terribly young, so young, as if she were fourteen years old. Whereas she was then three months shy of sixteen. However, that wasn't what I wanted to say, that wasn't the synthesis at all. She came again the next day. I later learned that she had been to Dobronravov and Mozer with that jacket, but they don't take anything except gold and didn't even bother to talk to her. I, on the other hand, had once taken a cameo from her (a worthless little thing) - and when I gave it some thought later on I was surprised : I also don't buy anything except gold and silver and yet I had taken a cameo. That was my second thought about her then, I remember that.

This time, that is, after going to Mozer, she brought an amber cigar holder - a so-so little piece, for the connoisseur, but something of no worth to us, because we deal only in gold. Since she had come after yesterday's rebellion, I greeted her sternly. Sternness for me means dryness. However, as I was giving her the two roubles, I couldn't resist and said with some irritation, as it were : 'I'm doing this only for you, Mozer wouldn't take a thing like this from you.' I particularly emphasized the words 'for you', and precisely with a certain insinuation . I was angry. Once again she flared up, upon hearing that 'for you ', but she held her tongue, didn't throw down the money, took it - that's what poverty is! But how she flared up! I understood that I had wounded her. But when she had gone, I suddenly asked myself : So is this triumph over her really worth two roubles? Hee-hee-hee! I remember that I asked precisely that very question twice : 'Is it worth it? Is it worth it?' And, laughing, I answered this question to myself in the affirmative. Then I really cheered up. But this wasn't a nasty feeling : I had a plan, a purpose; I wanted to test her, because suddenly I began to have some thoughts about her. That was my third particular thought about her.

...Well, it was from that time that it all started. It goes without saying, I immediately tried to find out all her cir-cumstances indirectly and waited for her arrival with particular impatience. You see, I had a feeling that she would come soon. When she came, I launched into an amiable conversation with unusual politeness. You see, I wasn't badly brought up and have manners. Hmm. That was when I guessed that she was kind and meek. The kind and meek don't resist for long, and although they are by no means very open, they don't at all know how to avoid a conversation : they answer grudgingly, but they answer and the longer it goes on, the more they answer; but if this is what you want, you can't let yourself get tired. It goes without saying that she didn't explain anything to me then. It was later that I learned about the Voice and about everything else. She was then mustering every last bit she had to advertise - at first, it goes without saying, presumptuously : 'Governess, willing to travel, send terms by post'; but later : 'Willing to do any-thing, tutor, be a companion, housekeeping, care for the sick, can sew' and so forth and so on. The usual! It goes without saying that all this was added to the advertisement at different stages, and towards the end, when despair had set in, there was even 'without salary, for board'. No, she didn't find a position! I made up my mind then to test her for the last time : I suddenly picked up today's Voice and showed her an advertisement : 'Young female, orphan, seeks position as governess of small children, preferably with an elderly widower. Willing to do light housework.'

'There, you see, this was published this morning and by evening she's sure to have found a job. That's the way to advertise!'

Again she flared up, again her eyes blazed; she turned around and immediately walked out. I was very pleased. However, by then I was already sure of everything and had no fears : nobody would take her cigar holders. Besides, she had already run out of cigar holders. And so it was, two days later she comes, such a pale, agitated little thing - I understood that something had happened at home, and indeed something had happened. I'll explain straight away what happened, but now I merely wish to recall how I suddenly did something chic and rose in her eyes. A plan suddenly occurred to me. The fact of the matter is that she brought this icon (she had steeled herself to bring it) ... Oh, listen! Listen! This is where it began, but I keep getting muddle ... The fact of the matter is that I now want to recall everything, every trifle, every little detail. I still want to collect my thoughts to a T and - I can't, and now there are these little details, these little detail ...

An icon of the Mother of God. The Mother of God with Child, a family heirloom, an antique, with a silver gilt frame - worth - well, worth about six roubles. I see that the icon is dear to her, and she's pawning the whole icon, with-out removing the mounting. I tell her that it would be better if she removed the mounting and took the icon with her, because after all it's an icon.

'Surely you're not forbidden?'

'No, it's not that it's forbidden, but just that, perhaps, you yourself ... '

'Well, remove it.'

'You know what, I won't remove it, but I'll put it over there in the icon case,' I said, after giving it some thought, 'with the other icons, under the lamp.' (I've always had the lamp burning ever since I opened my shop.) 'And I'll give you ten roubles - it's as simple as that.'

'I don't need ten, give me five; I'll redeem it without fail.'

'But don't you want ten? The icon is worth it,' I added, after observing that her little eyes had flashed once again. She held her tongue. I brought her five roubles.

'Don't despise anybody - I've been in tight squeezes myself, and even a bit worse, and if you now see me in such an occupatio ... well, you see, after all that I've endure ... '

'You're taking revenge on society? Is that it?' she suddenly interrupted me with a rather sarcastic gibe, in which, how-ever, there was a good deal of innocence (that is, of a general sort, because she certainly did not single me out from the others then, so it was said almost inoffensively) . 'Aha!' I thought, 'so that's what you're like, your character is show-ing itself, you belong to the new movement.'

'You see,' I immediately observed, half-jokingly, half-mysteriously. 'I - I am part of that part of the whole that desires to do evil, but creates goo ...'

She looked at me quickly and with great curiosity, in which, however, there was a great deal of childishness :

'Wait a moment ... What's that saying? Where's it from? I've heard it somewhere ...'

'Don't rack your brains : Mephistopheles recommends himself to Faust in those words. Have you read Faust ?'

'N ... not carefully.'

'That is, you haven't read it at all. You should read it. However, once again I see a sardonic grin on your lips. Please, don't suppose that I have so little taste that I wished to paint over my role as a pawnbroker by recommending myself to you as Mephistopheles. Once a pawnbroker, always a pawnbroker. We know that, miss.'

'You're such a strange person ... I didn't in the least want to say anything of the kind ...'

She wanted to say : I didn't expect that you were an educated man, but she didn't say it, though I knew that she had thought it; I had pleased her terribly much.

'You see,' I observed, 'one can do good in any walk of life. Of course, I'm not speaking of myself; let's suppose that I do nothing but bad things ...'

'Of course, one can do good in any position,' she said, looking at me with a quick and penetrating glance. 'Precisely in any position,' she added suddenly.

Oh, I remember, I remember all those moments! And I also want to add that when these young people, these dear young people, want to say something intelligent and penetrating, then their faces suddenly show you all too sincerely and naively : 'Here I am, I'm telling you something intelligent and penetrating.' And it's not at all from vanity, as is the case with the likes of us, but you see that she herself sets great store on all this terribly, and she believes, and respects and thinks that you, too, respect all this just as she does. Oh, sincerity! That's what they win you over with! And it was so charming in her!

I remember, I have forgotten nothing! When she left, I made up my mind at once. That same day I made my final enquiries and learned absolutely everything else there was to know about her present particulars; all the particulars of her past I already knew from Lukerya, who was then their servant and whom I had bribed several days earlier. These circumstances were so horrible that I don't understand how it had been possible for her to laugh, as she had that day, and be curious about Mephistopheles' words, when she herself was faced with such horrors. But youth! That's precisely what I thought about her then with pride and joy, because, you see, there was also magnanimity about it, as if she were to say : the great works of Goethe shine even on the brink of ruin. Youth is always magnanimous, if only ever so slightly and ever so distortedly. That is, I'm speaking of her, you see, her alone. And the main thing, I then looked upon her as mine and did not doubt my power. You know, that's a most voluptuous thought, when you no longer have any doubt.

But what's wrong with me? If I keep going on like this, then when will I collect everything to a T? Quickly, quickly-this isn't the point at all, oh God!

II. A MARRIAGE PROPOSAL

The 'particulars' I learned about her I can set forth in a few words : her father and mother had died a long time ago, three years previously, and she had been left with her disreputable aunts. That is, it's saying too little to call them disreputable. One aunt was a widow with a large family, six children, each one smaller than the next; the other was a spinster, old and nasty. Both of them were nasty. Her father had been a government official, but only a clerk, and a non-hereditary nobleman-in a word : everything played into my hands. I appeared as if from some higher world : after all, I was a retired staffcaptain of a brilliant regiment, a nobleman by birth, independent and so on, and as far as the pawnshop went, the aunts could only look at it with respect. She had been slaving for her aunts for three years, but nevertheless she had passed an examination somewhere-she had managed to pass it, snatched a free minute to pass it, despite relentless work day in and day out - and that meant some-thing about aspirations for the noble and the sublime on her part. After all, why did I want to get married? But who cares about me, we'll save that for late ... As if that were the point! She taught her aunt's children, she sewed their under-clothes, and towards the end she washed not only these underclothes, but she, with her bad chest, also washed the floors. To put it bluntly, they even beat her, reproaching her for every crumb. It ended with them intending to sell her. Ugh! I'll omit the dirty details. Later she told me everything in detail. A neighbour, a fat shopkeeper, had been observing all this for a whole year, and he wasn't just an ordinary shop-keeper, but the owner of two grocery stores. He had already beat two wives to death and was looking for a third, and had cast his eye on her : 'She's a quiet one,' he thought, 'she grew up in poverty and I'm marrying for the sake of my orphans.' Indeed, he did have orphans. He began to seek her hand, started negotiations with the aunts, and on top of that-he's fifty years old; she's horri fied. And that's when she started coming to me to get money for advertisements in the Voice . In the end, she began asking the aunts to give her just the littlest bit of time to think it over. They gave her that little bit, but only one, they didn't give her another; they badgered her : 'We don't know where we'll get our next meal, even without an extra mouth to feed.' I already knew all this, and on that same day, after her visit in the morning, I made up my mind. That evening the merchant came, he had brought from the shop a pound of candies worth fifty kopecks; she's sitting with him, and I summon Lukerya from the kitchen and tell her to go to her and whisper that I'm standing by the gate and wish to tell her something most urgently. I remained pleased with myself. And in general I was terribly pleased with myself that entire day.

Right there at the gate, already dumbfounded that I had summoned her, I explained to her, in Lukerya's presence, that I would consider myself happy and honoure ... Sec-ondly, she was not surprised by my manner or by the fact that this was taking place by the gate : 'I am a straightforward man,' I said, 'and have studied the circumstances of the mat-ter.' And I wasn't lying that I'm straightforward. Well, to hell with it. I spoke not only decently, that is, by showing myself to be a person of good breeding, but originally as well, and that's the main thing. Wat, is it a sin to acknowledge this? I want to judge myself and am doing so. I must speak both pro and contra , and I am doing so. I recalled it with delight afterwards, even though it was stupid : I announced straight out then, without any embarrassment, that, in the first place, I wasn't particularly talented, not particularly intelligent, and perhaps not even particularly kind, that I was a rather cheap egoist (I remember this expression, I had composed it on my way there and remained pleased with it) and that-very, very likely - there was much that was unpleasant about me in other respects as well. All this was said with a particular kind of pride - we know how these sorts of things are said. Of course, I had sufficient good taste, after nobly declaring my deficiencies, not to launch into a declaration of my virtues : 'But to make up for this, I have this, that and the other.' I could see that she was still terribly afraid, but I didn't soften anything; instead, seeing that she was afraid I deliberately intensified it : I said straight out that she wouldn't go hungry, but as for fancy clothes, the theatre and balls-there would be none of that, though perhaps later, when I had achieved my goal. I was definitely carried away by this stern tone. I added, and as casually as possible, that if I had taken up such an occupation, that is, keeping this pawnshop, it was for one purpose only - that is, there was a certain circumstance, so to speak ... But you see I had a right to speak like that : I really did have such a purpose and such a circumstance. Wait a moment, gentlemen, all my life I have been the first to hate this pawnbroking business, but in essence, you see, even though it's ridiculous to talk to oneself in mysterious phrases, I was 'taking revenge on society', you see, I really, really, really was! Therefore, her joke about the fact that I was 'taking revenge' was unfair. That is, you see, if I had said to her straight out in so many words : 'Yes, I'm taking revenge on society', and she had burst out laughing, the way she did that morning, it would indeed have come out ridiculous. But with an indirect hint and by dropping a mysterious phrase it turned out that it was possible to engage her imagination. Moreover, I wasn't afraid of anything then : you see, I knew that in any event the fat shopkeeper was more repulsive than I and that I, standing by the gate, was her liberator. I understood that, you see. Oh, man understands baseness particularly well! But was it baseness? How is one to judge a man in a case like this? Didn't I love her already even then?

Wait a moment : it goes without saying that I didn't say a word to her about doing a good deed : on the contrary, oh, on the contrary : 'It is I,' I said, 'who am being done the favour, and not you .' So that I even expressed this in words, I couldn't help myself, and perhaps it came out stupidly, because I noticed a fleeting grin on her face. But on the whole I had definitely won. Wait a moment, if I'm going to recall all this filth, then I'll recall this final bit of swinishness : I was standing there and this is what was going through my head : You're tall, fit, educated and - and finally, to speak without any boasting, you're not bad looking. That's what was running through my head. It goes without saying, she said 'yes'there and then by the gate. Bu ... but I should add : she thought it over for a long time, right there and then by the gate, before she said 'yes'. She was so deep in thought, so deep in thought that I was on the verge of asking, 'Well, what is it going to be?' - and I couldn't even help myself from asking with a certain sense of chic : 'Well, what is it going to be, Miss?' - adding the 'Miss'for good measure.

'Wait, I'm thinking.'

And her little face was so serious, so serious - that even then I might have read it! But instead I was offended : 'Is she really,' I thought to myself, 'choosing between me and the merchant?' Oh, I still didn't understand then! I still didn't understand anything, anything then! I didn't under-stand until today! I remember Lukerya ran after me when I was already walking away, stopped me in the street and said, catching her breath : 'God will reward you, sir, for taking our dear young lady - only don't say anything about it to her, she's proud.'

Well now, proud! I like them proud, I said to myself. The proud ones are particularly nice, whe ... well, when you no longer harbour any doubts about your power over them. Eh? Oh, base, awkward man! Oh, how pleased I was! Do you know, while she was standing there by the gate deep in thought about whether to say 'yes'to me, and I was sur-prised, do you know, that she might even have been thinking : 'If it's to be misfortune either way, isn't it better to choose the worst straight away, that is, the fat shopkeeper; let him get drunk, the sooner the better, and beat me to death!' Eh? Wat do you think, could that have been what she was thinking?

And even now I don't understand, even now I don't understand anything! I just now said that she might have been thinking that she should choose the worse of the two mis-fortunes, that is, the merchant. But who was worse for her then - the merchant or I? The merchant or the pawnbroker who quotes Goethe? That's still a question! What question? You don't understand even that : the answer is lying on the table, and you say 'what question'! But to hell with me! I'm not the point here at al ... And at the same time, what do I care now - whether I'm the point or not? That's something I'm utterly incapable of deciding. I'd better go to bed. I have a headach ...

III. THE NOBLEST OF MEN, BUT I DON'T BELIEVE IT MYSELF

I didn't fall asleep. And how could I with that pulse hammering away in my head. I want to absorb all this, all this filth. Oh, the filth! Oh, the filth I dragged her out of then! She should have realized that, you know, she should have appreciated my deed! I was pleased, too, by various thoughts, for example, that I was forty-one years old and that she was only sixteen. That fascinated me, this sense of inequality, it was very sweet, very sweet.

I, for example, wanted to have the wedding à l'anglaise, that is, just the two of us, perhaps with two witnesses, one of whom would be Lukerya, and then at once to the train, for example, if only to Moscow (it so happened that I had business there), to a hotel for a fortnight or so. She was against it, she wouldn't have it and I was forced to visit her aunts and pay my respects to them as the relatives from whom I was taking her. I gave in, and the aunts were rendered their due. I even made a present of a hundred roubles each to those creatures and promised more, of course, without saying a word to her, so as not to distress her with the baseness of the situation. The aunts at once became as soft as silk. There was an argument about the trousseau as well : she didn't have anything, almost literally, but she didn't want anything either. However, I managed to convince her that it wasn't possible to have absolutely nothing, and so I arranged for the trousseau myself, because who else would do any-thing for her? Well, but to hell with me! Various ideas of mine, however, I nevertheless did manage to convey to her then, so that she would at least know. Perhaps I was even too hasty. The main thing is that from the very beginning, however much she tried to hold out, she would throw herself at me with her love; she would meet me when I came home in the evening with rapture, she would tell me in her prattle (the charming prattle of innocence!)

all about her child-hood, youth, about her parental home, about her father and mother. But I immediately threw cold water on all these ecstasies right then and there. That was the whole point of my idea. I answered her raptures with silence, gracious, of cours ... but she nevertheless quickly saw that we were different and that I was - a riddle. And the main thing is that I had set my sights on this riddle! You see, it was in order to pose this riddle perhaps that I committed all this foolishness! First of all, sternness - it was with sternness that I took her into my house. In a word, even though I was quite pleased with things as they were, I began to create a complete system. Oh, it took shape on its own, without any effort. And it couldn't have been otherwise, I had to create this system on account of one incontrovertible circumstance - really, what is this? I'm slandering myself! The system was genuine. No, listen, if you're going to judge a person, then you should judge him knowing the cas ... Listen.

How should I begin this, because it's very difficult. Wen you begin justifying yourself - that's when it gets difficult. You see : young people despise money, for example - I ham-mered away about money; I pressed home about money. And I hammered away so that she began to fall silent more and more. She would open her big eyes, listen, look and fall silent. You see : young people are magnanimous, that is, the good ones are magnanimous and impetuous, but they have little tolerance, as soon as something's not quite right - you get their contempt. But I wanted breadth, I wanted to instil breadth right into her heart, to instil it into her heart's vista, isn't that so? I'll take a trivial example : How could I explain, for example, my pawnshop to a person like that? It goes without saying that I didn't bring it up directly, or it would have looked like I was asking her forgiveness for the pawn-shop; instead I acted, so to speak, with pride - I spoke almost silently. And I'm a master of speaking silently - all my life I've spoken silently and I've lived through entire tragedies in silence. Oh, and I too have been unhappy! I was cast aside by everyone, cast aside and forgotten, and no one, no one knows it! And suddenly this sixteen-year-old girl got hold of details about me afterwards from vile people and thought that she knew everything, but meanwhile the secret remained only in this man's breast! I went on being silent, and I was particularly, particularly silent with her until just yesterday - why was I silent? Because I'm a proud man. I wanted her to find out on her own, without me, but not from stories told by scoundrels, but that she should guess herself about this man and comprehend him! When I received her into my house, I wanted her complete respect. I wanted her to stand before me beseechingly, on account of my suffering - and I was worthy of that. Oh, I've always been proud, I've always wanted all or nothing! And that's precisely why I'm not for half-measures in happiness, but wanted everything - and that's precisely why I was forced to act as I did then, as if to say : 'Figure it out for yourself and appreciate me!' Because, you must agree, if I had begun by explaining and prompting, being evasive and asking for respect - then, you see, it would have been as if I were asking for charit ... Howeve ... However, why am I talking about this!

Stupid, stupid, stupid, stupid! I straight away and ruth-lessly (and I want to emphasize that it was ruthlessly) explained to her then, in a few words, that the magnanimity of young people was lovely, but not worth a brass button. Why not? Because it comes cheap, they get it without having lived; it's all, so to speak, the 'first impressions of existence', but let's see you do some work! Cheap magnanimity is always easy, and even to give your life-even that's easy, because that's just a matter of the blood boiling and an over-abundance of energy, one passionately longs for beauty! No, take an act of magnanimity that is difficult, quiet, muted, without splendour, where you're slandered, where there's much sacrifice and not a drop of glory - where you, a shining man, are brought forward before everyone as a scoundrel, when you are the most honest man in the world - come on, try your hand at that sort of deed, no, sir, you'll give it up! While I - all I've done my whole life is to shoulder that sort of deed. In the beginning she would argue - and how! But then she began to fall silent, completely and totally, she would just open her eyes terribly wide as she listened, such big, big eyes, and so attentive. An ... and besides that I suddenly saw a smile, a mistrustful, silent, bad smile. It was with that smile that I brought her into my house. And it's also true that she had nowhere else to g ...

IV. PLANS AND MORE PLANS

Which of us was the first to begin then?

Neither. It began on its own from the very first. I have said that I had brought her into my house with sternness; how-ever, I softened it from the very first. When she was still my fiancée it had been explained to her that she would assist in taking in the pledges and paying out the money, and she didn't say anything then (note that) . And what's more, she even took to the business with zeal. Well, of course, the apartment, the furniture - everything remained the same as before. The apartment has two rooms : one is a large room in which the shop is partitioned off from the rest, and the other one is also a large room in which we have our sitting room and bedroom. My furniture isn't much; even her aunts had better. My icon-stand with the lamp is in the room with the shop; in the other room I have my bookcase with some books and a trunk to which I have the keys; and there's a bed, tables, chairs. When she was still my fiancée I told her that one rouble a day and no more was allotted for our board, that is, food, for me, her and Lukerya, whom I had enticed away : 'I need 30 , 000 in three years,' I told her, 'otherwise I won't be able to save up enough money.' She didn't stand in the way, but I myself added to our board by thirty kopecks. It was the same thing with the theatre. When she was still my fiancée I told her that there wouldn't be any theatre; however, I decided that we should go to the theatre once a month, and decently at that, in the orchestra. We went together, three times, and saw In Pursuit of Happiness and Songbirds , I think. (Oh, to hell with it, to hell with it!) We went in silence and returned in silence. Why, why did we from the very beginning choose to be silent? After all, there weren't any quarrels in the beginning, but there was silence then, too. As I recall, she somehow kept looking at me then on the sly; when I noticed that I increased my silence. True, I was the one who insisted upon silence, and not she. On her part there were outbursts once or twice, when she would rush to embrace me; but since these outbursts were unhealthy and hysterical, and what I required was steadfast happiness, together with her respect, I received them coldly. And I was right to do so : each time the outburst was followed the next day by a quarrel.

That is, there weren't any quarrels, but there was silence and - and on her part a more and more insolent look. 'Rebel-lion and independence' - that's what it was, only she didn't know how. Yes, that meek face was becoming more and more insolent. Can you believe it? I was becoming repulsive to her - I came to understand that. And there could be no doubt about these outbursts that came over her. For example, after leaving behind such filth and beggary, after scrubbing floors, how could she suddenly begin to grumble about our poverty! You see, gentlemen : it wasn't poverty, it was econ-omy, and where necessary there was some luxury, when it came to linens and cleanliness, for example. I had always dreamed before that cleanliness in a husband attracts a wife. However, it wasn't poverty, but my supposed miserly econ-omy that bothered her : 'He has goals, he's showing his firm character.' She suddenly declined to go to the theatre. And there was more and more of that sardonic gri ... Wile I intensified my silence, I intensified my silence.

Surely there was no need to justify my actions? The main thing here was the pawnshop. Come now, sirs : I knew that a woman, especially one who was sixteen years old, couldn't help but submit completely to a man. Women have no ori-ginality, that's-that's an axiom, even now it's an axiom for me! Never mind what's lying there in the front room : truth is truth, and even Mill himself can't do anything about it! But a loving woman, oh, a loving woman idolizes even the vices, even the villainy of her beloved being. He would not seek such justifications for his villainy as she will find for him. That's magnanimous but not original. It is this lack of originality alone that has been the undoing of women. And what, I repeat, what are you pointing to there on the table? Is there really anything original about what's there on the table? Oh-h-h!

Listen : I was certain of her love then. You see, she would throw herself on my neck then. That meant she loved me, or rather - she wished to love me. Yes, that's what it was : she wished to love, she sought to love. But the main thing, you see, is that there weren't any villainies for which she needed to find justifications. You say a 'pawnbroker' and that's what everyone says. But what if I am a pawnbroker? That means there are reasons, if the most magnanimous of men became a pawnbroker. You see, gentlemen, there are idea ... that is, you see, when some ideas are said out loud, put into words, they come out terribly stupid. They come out so that you're ashamed of them yourself. But why? For no reason at all. Because we're all good-for-nothings and can't bear the truth, or I don't know why else. I said just now 'the most magnanimous of men'. That's ridiculous, you see, and yet that's how it was. You see, it's the truth, that is, it's the most truthful truth of all! Yes, I had the right then to want to pro-vide for myself and open this shop : 'You, that is, you people, have spurned me, you have driven me away with your con-temptuous silence. You have answered my outbursts of passion with an insult that I will feel for the rest of my life. Consequently, I now am within my rights to protect myself from you with a wall, to amass those 30 , 000 roubles and end my days somewhere in the Crimea, on the southern shore, amidst mountains and vineyards, on my own estate pur-chased with that 30 , 000, and the main thing, far away from you all, but without malice towards you, with an ideal in my soul, with my beloved woman at my heart, with a family if God should send one, and - helping out the neighbouring peasants.' It goes without saying that it's good that I'm tell-ing this to myself now, but what could have been more stupid than if I had described all this out loud to her then? That was the reason behind my proud silence, and that was the reason we sat in silence. Because what would she have understood? Just sixteen years old, so very young - what could she have understood of my justifications, of my suf-fering? I was dealing with straightforwardness, ignorance of life, cheap, youthful convictions, the blindness of 'beautiful hearts', and the main thing, the pawnshop and-basta ! (But was I a scoundrel in the pawnshop, didn't she see how I conducted myself and did I charge more than I should?) Oh, how terrible is truth on this earth! This charming one, this meek one, this heaven - she was a tyrant, the unbearable tyrant of my soul and my tormentor! I'd be slandering myself, you see, if I didn't say that! You think I didn't love her? Wo can say that I didn't love her? You see : there was irony here, the malicious irony of fate and nature! We are accursed, the life of people in general is accursed! (And mine in particular!) I understand now, you see, that I made some mistake here! Something didn't come out the way it was supposed to. Everything was clear, my plan was as clear as the sky : 'Severe, proud, requires no moral consolation, suffers in silence.' That's how it was, I wasn't lying, I wasn't lying! 'She'll see for herself later on that there was magna-nimity here, but she just wasn't able to see it now-and when she does fathom it some day, she'll appreciate it ten times more and will fall down in the dust with her hands folded in supplication.' That was the plan. But I forgot something here or failed to take it into account. I wasn't able to do something here. But enough, enough. And of whom can I ask forgiveness now? Wat's done is done. Take courage, man, and be proud! It's not you who are to blame!...

Now then, I'll tell the truth, I won't be afraid to stand face to face with the truth : she is to blame, she is to blame!...

V. THE MEEK ONE REBELS

The quarrels began when she suddenly took it into her head to pay out money as she saw fit, to appraise things for more than they were worth, and a couple of times she even thought fit to enter into an argument with me on the subject. I didn't agree. But then this captain's widow turned up.

An old lady, the widow of a captain, came with a locket - a present from her late husband, well, you know, a keepsake. I gave thirty roubles. She started to whine plaintively, begging me to keep the thing for her; it goes without saying that we keep it. Well, in a word, suddenly she comes five days later to exchange it for a bracelet that's not worth even eight roubles; it goes without saying that I refused. She must have guessed then something from my wife's eyes, but in any case she came when I wasn't there, and my wife exchanged the locket.

When I learned about it that very same day, I began by speaking meekly, but firmly and reasonably. She was sitting on the bed, looking at the floor, tapping the rug with the toe of her right shoe (her gesture) ; an unpleasant smile played on her lips. Then without raising my voice at all I announced calmly that the money was mine , that I had the right to look at life with my own eyes and that when I invited her into my house I had not concealed anything from her.

She suddenly jumped up, suddenly began trembling all over and-what do you think-she suddenly began stamp-ing her feet at me; this was a wild animal, this was a fit, this was a wild animal having a fit. I froze in astonishment : I had never expected such an outburst. But I didn't become flus-tered, I didn't even move a muscle, and once again in the same calm voice I declared plainly that from that time for-ward I refused to let her take part in my affairs. She laughed in my face and walked out of the apartment.

The fact of the matter is that she had no right to leave the apartment. Nowhere without me, that was the agreement we made when she was still my fiancée. She returned towards evening; I didn't say a word.

The next day, too, she went out in the morning, and it was the same thing the following day. I locked up the shop and set off to see her aunts. I had broken off relations with them from the day of the wedding - I hadn't invited them to visit me, we didn't visit them. Now it turned out that she wasn't with them. They heard me out with curiosity and laughed in my face. 'Serves you right,' they said. But I had expected their laughter. I then and there bribed the younger aunt, the spinster, with a hundred roubles, and gave her twenty-five in advance. Two days later she comes to me : 'An officer,' she says, 'a Lieutenant Yefimovich, a former comrade of yours from the regiment, is mixed up in this.' I was quite astonished. This Yefimovich had done me more harm than anyone else in the regiment, and a month ago he stopped by my shop a couple of times, and being the shameless fellow that he is, under the pretence of pawning something, I remember, he began laughing with my wife. I went up to him then and told him that, considering our relations, he should not pre-sume to visit me; but no idea of anything like that crossed my mind, I simply thought that he was an insolent fellow. But now suddenly her auntie informs me that she had made an appointment to see him and that this whole affair is being handled by a certain former acquaintance of the aunts, Yuliya Samsonovna, a widow, and a colonel's widow at that- 'It's her that your spouse goes to visit now,' she says.

I'll cut this story short. This business cost me almost 300 roubles, but in two days it was arranged that I would stand in the adjoining room, behind closed doors, and listen to my wife's first rendezvous alone with Yefimovich. Mean-while, the previous evening a brief but for me very significant scene between myself and my wife took place.

She returned towards evening, sat down on the bed, looked at me mockingly and thumped the rug with her foot. Suddenly, as I was looking at her, the idea flew into my head then that all this past month, or, rather, for the past two weeks, she had not been herself at all - one could even say that she had been exactly the opposite : a wild, aggressive being had made its appearance; I can't say shameless, but disorderly and looking for trouble. Asking for trouble. Meekness, however, held her back. When a girl like that starts creating an uproar, even if she does cross the line, it's nevertheless plain to see that she's only hurting herself, that she's egging herself on and that she will be the first who is unable to cope with her feelings of modesty and shame. That's why girls like that sometimes go too far, so that you don't believe your own eyes when you witness it. A soul accustomed to debauchery, on the contrary, always softens it, making it more vile, but in a guise of decorum and decency that claims to be superior to you.

'And is it true that you were driven out of your regiment, because you were too cowardly to fight a duel?' she asked suddenly, out of the blue, and her eyes flashed.

'It's true; the officers rendered the verdict that I was to be asked to leave the regiment, although I had in any case already tendered my resignation.'

'You were driven out as a coward?'

'Yes, they judged me a coward. But I refused to duel not because I was a coward, but because I didn't wish to submit to their tyrannical verdict and issue a challenge to a duel when I did not consider myself to be insulted. You should know,' I couldn't restrain myself here, 'that flying in the face of such tyranny through my actions and accepting all the consequences took far more courage than any duel would have done.'

I couldn't contain myself, with this phrase I launched into self-justifications, as it were, and that was all she needed, a fresh instance of my humiliation. She burst out in malicious laughter.

'And is it true that for the next three years you wandered the streets of Petersburg like a tramp, and begged for kopecks, and slept under billiard tables?'

'I even spent some nights in the Vyazemsky House on Haymarket Square. Yes, it's true; in my life after leaving the regiment there was much shame and degradation, but not moral degradation, because I was the first to loathe my actions even then. It was merely the degradation of my will and mind, and it was brought about only by the desperation of my situation. But this passe ...'

'Oh, now you're an important person - a financier!'

That is, a hint at my pawnshop. But I had already managed to hold myself in check. I saw that she thirsted for explanations that would be humiliating for me and - I didn't give them. Fortunately, a client rang the bell just then and I went to see him in the front room. Afterwards, an hour later, when she had suddenly dressed to go out, she stopped in front of me and said :

'You didn't tell me anything about this before the wedding, however.'

I didn't answer, and she left.

And so, the next day I stood in this room behind the door and listened to my fate being decided, and in my pocket there was a revolver. She was dressed up, sitting at the table, and Yefimovich was putting on airs. And what do you know : it turned out (I say this to my credit), it turned out exactly as I had foreseen and supposed, though without realizing that I had foreseen and supposed this. I don't know whether I'm expressing myself clearly.

This is what happened. I listened for a whole hour and for that hour I witnessed a duel between the most noble and lofty woman and a worldly, depraved, dim-witted creature with a grovelling soul. And how, I thought to myself in amazement, how does this naive, this meek, this reserved girl know all this? The cleverest author of a high-society comedy could not have created this scene of ridicule, the most naive laughter and the holy contempt of virtue for vice. And such brilliance in her words and little turns of speech; what wit in her quick replies, what truth in her censure! And at the same time what almost girlish ingenuousness. She laughed in his face at his declarations of love, at his gestures, at his proposals. Coming straight to the matter with a crude assault and not foreseeing any opposition, all of a sudden he had the wind taken out of his sails. at first I might have thought that it was simply coquetry on her part - the 'coquetry of a clever though depraved creature in order to show herself more lavishly'. But no, the truth shone through like the sun and it was impossible to have any doubts. It was only out of hatred for me, affected and impetuous though it was, that she, inexperienced as she was, could have decided to undertake this meeting, but as soon as it had become reality - her eyes were opened at once. Here was a creature who was simply flailing about so as to insult me no matter what, but once she had decided on such filth she couldn't bear the disorder. And could she, blameless and pure, with ideals, have been attracted to Yefimovich or any of those other high-society brutes? On the contrary, he aroused only laughter. The whole truth rose up from her soul, and indignation called forth sarcasm from her heart. I repeat, towards the end this fool was utterly dazed and sat scowling, barely responding, so that I even began to fear that he would venture to insult her out of mean-spirited revenge. And I repeat once again : to my credit I heard this scene out almost without astonishment. It was as though I had encountered something familiar. It was as though I had gone in order to encounter it. I had gone, believing nothing, no accusation, although I did put a revolver in my pocket-that's the truth! And could I have really imagined her otherwise? Wasn't that why I loved her, wasn't that why I cherished her, wasn't that why I had married her? Oh, of course, I was all too convinced that she hated me then, but I was also convinced of her purity. I brought the scene swiftly to a close by opening the door. Yefimovich jumped to his feet, I took her by the hand and invited her to leave with me. Yefimovich found his bearings and suddenly burst out in resounding peals of laughter.

'Oh, I have no objections to sacred conjugal rights, take her away, take her away! And you know,' he shouted after me, 'even though a respectable person can't fight you, yet out of respect for your lady, I am at your service ... If you, however, want to risk it ... '

'Do you hear that!' I stopped her for a second on the threshold.

Then not a word all the way home. I led her by the hand, and she didn't resist. On the contrary, she was utterly dumb-founded, but only until we got home. On our arrival, she sat down on a chair and fastened her gaze on me. She was extraordinarily pale; though her lips had at once formed a mocking smile, she was already regarding me with a solemn and severe challenge, and, I believe, she was seriously convinced those first few moments that I was going to kill her with the revolver. But I took the revolver out of my pocket in silence and laid it on the table. She looked at me and at the revolver. (Note : she was already familiar with this revolver. I had acquired it and kept it loaded ever since opening the shop. When I was getting ready to open the shop I had decided not to keep hulking dogs or a burly lackey like Mozer did, for example. The cook opens the door for my visitors. But people who engage in my trade cannot deprive themselves of self-defence, just in case, and I kept a loaded revolver. During those first days when she had come to live in my house she showed a lot of interest in this revolver, she asked a lot of questions, and I even explained the mechanism and how it worked; moreover, I persuaded her once to shoot at a target. Note all that.) Paying no notice of her frightened look, I lay down on the bed half-undressed. I was very tired; it was already almost eleven o'clock. She went on sitting in the same place, without moving, for almost another hour, then she put out the candle and lay down, also dressed, on the sofa by the wall. It was the first time that she didn't come to bed with me - note that as well ...

VI. A TERRIBLE MEMORY

Now, this terrible memory ...

I woke up in the morning, between seven and eight, I think, and it was already almost completely light in the room. I woke up all at once fully conscious and suddenly opened my eyes. She was standing by the table, holding the revolver. She didn't see that I was awake and watching. And suddenly I saw that she had started to move towards me, holding the revolver. I quickly shut my eyes and pretended to be fast asleep.

She came up to the bed and stood over me. I heard everything; although a dead silence had fallen, I heard even that silence. Then there came a convulsive movement - and I suddenly, uncontrollably, opened my eyes against my will. She was looking me right in the eyes, and the revolver was already by my temple. Our eyes met. But we looked at each other for no more than a moment. I forced myself to shut my eyes again and at the same moment I resolved with every fibre of my being that I would not stir or open my eyes, no matter what awaited me.

In fact, it does happen sometimes that a person who is sound asleep suddenly opens his eyes, even raises his head for a second and looks about the room, then, a moment later, he lays his head on the pillow again and falls asleep without remembering a thing. Well, after meeting her gaze and feeling the revolver at my temple, I suddenly shut my eyes again and didn't stir, like someone sound asleep, she certainly could have supposed that I indeed was asleep and that I hadn't seen anything, particularly since it was altogether incredible that having seen what I saw I would shut my eyes again at such a moment.

Yes, incredible. But she still might have guessed the truth - that was what suddenly flashed through my mind, at that very same moment. Oh, what a whirlwind of thoughts, sensations raced through my mind in less than a moment; long live the electricity of human thought! In that case (I felt) , if she had guessed the truth and knew that I wasn't sleeping, then I had already crushed her with my readiness to accept death and her hand might now falter. Her former resolve might be shattered by this new extraordinary impression. They say that people standing on a height are drawn downwards, as it were, of their own accord, to the abyss. I think that a lot of suicides and murders have been committed merely because the revolver was already in hand. There's an abyss here as well, there's a forty-five-degree slope down which you can't help but slide and something relentlessly challenges you to pull the trigger. But the awareness that I had seen everything, that I knew everything and that I was awaiting my death from her in silence-might hold her back from that slope.

The silence continued, and suddenly I felt on my temple, at my hairline, the cold touch of iron. You will ask : did I firmly hope that I would be saved? I will answer you as if I were before God himself : I had no hope whatsoever, except perhaps one chance in a hundred. Wy, then, did I accept death? But I will ask : Wat need would I have of life after the revolver was raised against me by the being whom I adored? Moreover, I knew with all the force of my being that a struggle was going on between us at that very moment, a terrible duel for life and death, a duel of that same coward of yesterday, driven out by his comrades. I knew it, and she knew it, if only she had guessed the truth that I wasn't sleeping.

Perhaps it wasn't like that, perhaps I didn't think that then, but still it must have been like that, even without thought, because all I've done since is think about it every hour of my life.

But you'll ask me the question again : why didn't I save her then from this treachery? Oh, I have asked myself that question a thousand times since-each time when, with a shiver down my spine, I recalled that second. But my soul then was plunged in dark despair : I was lost, I myself was lost, so whom could I have saved? And how do you know whether I still wanted to save somebody then? How can you know what I might have been feeling then?

My consciousness, however, was seething; the seconds passed, there was dead silence; she was still standing over me - and then suddenly I shuddered with hope! I quickly opened my eyes. She was no longer in the room. I got up from the bed : I had defeated her - and she was forever defeated!

I went out to the samovar. We always had the samovar brought to the outer room and she was always the one to pour the tea. I sat down at the table in silence and took a glass of tea from her. About five minutes later I glanced at her. She was terribly pale, even paler than yesterday, and she was looking at me. And suddenly - and suddenly, seeing that I was looking at her, she gave a pale smile with her pale lips, a timid question in her eyes. 'That means that she still has doubts and is asking herself : does he know or not, did he see or didn't he?' I indifferently turned my eyes away. After tea I locked up the shop, went to the market and bought an iron bed and a screen. When I returned home, I had the bed installed in the front room with the screen around it. This bed was for her, but I didn't say a word to her. Even without words she understood from this bed alone that I 'had seen everything and knew everything' and that there was no longer any doubt about this. I left the revolver on the table for the night as always. At night she silently got into her new bed : the marriage was dissolved, 'she had been defeated but not forgiven'. During the night she became delirious, and by morning she had a fever. She was confined to bed for six weeks.

Chapter 2

I. A DREAM OF PRIDE

Lukerya just announced that she won't stay with me and that she'll leave as soon as the mistress is buried. I prayed on my knees for five minutes, and I had wanted to pray for an hour, but I keep thinking, and thinking, and they're all such aching thoughts and my head aches - what's the use of praying - it's nothing but a sin! It's also strange that I don't want to sleep : in great, in such great sorrow, after the first violent outbursts, one always wants to sleep. They say that people who are condemned to death sleep extremely soundly on their last night. As they should, it's only natural, otherwise they wouldn't have the strength to endure i ... I lay down on the sofa, but I didn't fall aslee ...

...For the six weeks of her illness we took care of her day and night-Lukerya and I and a trained nurse from the hos-pital, whom I had hired. I didn't begrudge the money, and even wanted to spend money on her. I called in Dr Schroeder and paid him ten roubles a visit. Wen she regained con-sciousness, I started to show myself less often. But why am I describing this? Wen she was completely on her feet again, she sat quietly and silently in my room at a special table, which I had also bought for her at the tim ... Yes, it's true, we were perfectly silent; that is, we began to talk later on, but only about the usual things. Of course, I delib-erately refrained from becoming expansive, but I could see very well that she also was happy not to say a word more than was necessary. This seemed perfectly natural on her part : 'She is too shaken and too defeated,' I thought, 'and of course she needs time to forget and get used to things.'And so it was that we were silent, but every minute I was secretly preparing myself for the future. I thought that she was doing the same as well, and it was terribly entertaining for me to guess : Exactly what is she thinking about now?

I'll say one more thing : Oh, of course, nobody knows what I endured as I grieved over her during her illness. But I kept my grief to myself and kept the grieving in my heart even from Lukerya. I couldn't imagine, I couldn't even suppose that she would die without learning everything. When she was out of danger and her health started to return, I remember this, I quickly calmed down and very much so. What's more, I decided to postpone our future for as long as possible, and for the present to leave everything as it was now. Yes, then something happened to me that was strange and peculiar, I don't know what else to call it : I had triumphed and this thought alone proved to be quite sufficient for me. And that's how the whole winter passed. Oh, I was pleased as I had never been before, and that for the whole winter.

You see : in my life there had been one terrible external circumstance, which until then, that is, until the catastrophe with my wife, weighed heavily on me every day and every hour, namely, the loss of my reputation and leaving the regiment. To put it in a nutshell : this had been a tyrannical injustice against me. True, my comrades disliked me on account of my difficult and, perhaps, ridiculous character, although it often happens that what you find sublime, what you hold dear and esteem, for some reason at the same time makes a group of your comrades laugh. Oh, I was never liked, even in school. I've never been liked anywhere. Even Lukerya cannot like me. The incident in the regiment, though a consequence of this dislike for me, without a doubt bore an accidental character. I mention this because there's nothing more exasperating and intolerable than to be ruined by an incident that might or might not have happened, by an unfortunate chain of circumstances that might have passed over, like a cloud. It's humiliating for an educated man. The incident was as follows.

During the intermission at the theatre I went to the bar. Hussar A—v came in suddenly and began talking loudly with two of his fellow hussars in the presence of all the officers and public gathered there about how Bezumtsev, the captain of our regiment, had just caused a scandal in the corridor 'and he seems to be drunk'. The conversation moved on to other things; besides, there had been a mistake, because Captain Bezumtsev wasn't drunk, and there hadn't really been a scandal. The hussars began talking about something else, and that was the end of it, but the next day the story made its way to our regiment, and at once they began saying how I was the only person at the bar from our regiment and that when Hussar A—v spoke insolently of Captain Bezumtsev I had not gone over to A—v and put a stop to it by reprimanding him. But why on earth should I have done that? If he had it in for Bezumtsev, then it was their personal affair, and why should I get involved? Meanwhile, the officers began to take the position that the affair was not personal but concerned the regiment, and that since I was the only officer of our regiment present, I had proved by my conduct to all the officers at the bar as well as the public that there might be officers in our regiment who were not overly scrupulous concerning their honour and the regiment's. I could not agree with this verdict. I was given to understand that I might still set everything right even now, belatedly, if I should wish to demand a formal explanation from A—v. I did not wish to do so and since I was annoyed, I refused with pride. I then at once resigned my commission - and that's the whole story. I left proud, but with my spirit crushed. My mind and will both foundered. It was just then that my sister's husband squandered our little fortune and my portion of it, a tiny portion, so I was left on the street without a kopeck. I could have found employment in a private business, but I didn't : after wearing my splendid regimental uniform I couldn't go work on some railroad. And so - if it's shame, let it be shame, if it's disgrace, let it be disgrace, if it's degradation, let it be degradation, and the worse, the better - that's what I chose. There followed three years of gloomy memories, even of the Vyazemsky House. A year and a half ago a rich old lady, my godmother, died in Moscow and among other bequests unexpectedly left me 3 , 000 in her will. I gave it some thought and then decided my fate. I settled on the pawnshop, with no apologies to anyone : money, then a corner and - a new life far away from my former memories - that was the plan. Nevertheless, my gloomy past and the reputation of my honour, forever ruined, tormented me every hour, every minute. But then I married. By chance or not - I don't know. But when I brought her into my house, I thought that I was bringing a friend, I greatly needed a friend. But I saw clearly that my friend had to be prepared, given the finishing touches, and even defeated. And could I have explained anything straight off like that to this sixteen-year-old girl with her prejudices? For example, how could I, without the accidental assistance of the terrible catastrophe with the revolver, have convinced her that I wasn't a coward and that I had been unjustly accused by the regiment of being a coward? But the catastrophe arrived just at the right moment. Having stood up to the revolver, I had avenged all of my gloomy past. And even though nobody knew about it, she knew about it, and that was everything for me, because she was everything to me, all my hopes for the future in my dreams! She was the only person whom I was preparing for myself, and I didn't need another-and now she knew everything; at least she knew that she had unjustly hurried to join my enemies. This thought delighted me. In her eyes I could no longer be a scoundrel, but merely a peculiar person, and even this thought, after everything that had happened, did not at all displease me : peculiarity is not a vice; on the contrary, it sometimes attracts the fem-inine character. In a word, I deliberately postponed the finale : what had taken place was more than sufficient, for the time being, for my peace of mind and contained more than enough pictures and material for my dreams. That's the nasty thing about this-I'm a dreamer : I had enough material; as for her, I thought that she would wait .

And so the whole winter passed in some sort of expectation of something. I liked to steal looks at her, when she happened to be sitting at her little table. She would be busy with her needlework, with the linen, and in the evenings she would sometimes read books which she would take from my book-case. The choice of books in the bookcase should also have spoken in my favour. She hardly ever went out. Every day after dinner, before dusk, I would take her for a walk and we would go for our constitutional, but not completely in silence, as before. I precisely tried to make it look as though we weren't being silent and were speaking harmoniously, but as I've already said we both avoided getting carried away talking. I was doing this on purpose, while she, I thought, needed to be 'given time'. Of course, it's strange that it did not once occur to me until almost the very end of the winter that though I liked to look at her on the sly, I never once caught her looking at me that whole winter! I thought that it was timidity on her part. Moreover, she had an air about her of such timid meek-ness, such weakness after her illness. No, better to bide one's time and-'and she will suddenly come to you on her ow ... '

That thought delighted me irresistibly. I will add one thing : sometimes it was as if I had deliberately inflamed myself and really brought my heart and mind to the point that I would feel that I had been wronged by her. And so it continued for some time. But my hatred could never ripen and take root in my soul. And I even felt that it was only some sort of game. And even then, although I had dissolved our marriage by buying the bed and screen, never, never could I see her as a criminal. And not because I judged her crime lightly, but because it made sense to forgive her completely, from the very first day, even before I bought the bed. In a word, this was a strange move on my part, for I am morally stern. On the contrary, in my eyes she was so defeated, so humiliated, so crushed that I sometimes felt tormenting pity for her, even though at the same time I sometimes definitely found the idea of her humiliation pleasing. The idea of our inequality pleased m ...

That winter it so happened that I deliberately performed several good deeds. I forgave two debts, I gave money to one poor woman without any pledge. And I didn't tell my wife about this, and I hadn't done this so that she would find out; but the woman came to thank me herself, she was practically on her knees. And that was how it became known; it seemed to me that she was truly pleased to find out about the woman.

But spring was approaching, it was already the middle of April, the storm windows had been taken down, and the sun began to light up our silent rooms with its bright pencils of light. But scales hung before my eyes and blinded my reason. Fateful, terrible scales! How did it come about that they suddenly fell from my eyes and that I suddenly could see clearly and understand everything! Was it chance, was it that the appointed day had come, was it a ray of sunshine that had kindled the thought and conjecture in my benumbed mind? No, it wasn't a matter of a thought but rather a nerve began to play up, a nerve that had grown numb began to quiver and came to life and illuminated my entire benumbed soul and my demonic pride. It was as if I had suddenly jumped up from my seat then. And it happened suddenly and unexpectedly. It happened towards evening, at about five o'clock, after dinner ...

II. THE SCALES SUDDENLY FALL

A couple of words first. A month earlier I had noticed a strange pensiveness in her, not just silence, but pensiveness. I had also noticed this suddenly. She was sitting at her work at the time, her head bent over her sewing, and she didn't see that I was looking at her. And suddenly I was struck by how delicate and thin she had become, that her face was pale, her lips were drained of colour - all this as a whole, taken together with her pensiveness, shocked me all at once in the extreme. I had already heard earlier a little dry cough, particularly at night. I got up at once and set off to ask Schroeder to pay us a visit, without saying anything to her.

Schroeder came the following day. She was very surprised and looked first at Schroeder and then at me.

‘But I’m fine,’ she said with an uncertain smile.

Schroeder didn’t examine her very thoroughly (these medical men sometimes are condescendingly off hand) , and merely told me in the other room that it was the remnants of her illness and that come spring it wouldn’t be a bad idea to take a trip somewhere to the sea or if that were not possible, then simply to find a place in the country. In a word, he didn’t say anything other than that there was some weakness or something of the sort. When Schroeder had gone, she suddenly said to me again, looking at me terribly seriously :

‘I’m really, really fine.’

But after saying this, she then and there suddenly flushed, apparently from shame. Apparently, it was shame. Oh, now I understand : She was ashamed that I was still her husband , that I was taking care of her as if I were still her real husband. But I didn’t understand then and ascribed her blush to humility. (The scales!)

And then, a month later, between five and six o’clock, in April, on a bright sunny day I was sitting in the shop and doing the accounts. Suddenly I heard her in our room, at her table, over her work, singing ever so softly ... This new development made a tremendous impression on me, and to this day I don’t understand it. Until then I had almost never heard her sing, except perhaps in the very first days when I brought her into my house and we could still have some fun, target shooting with the revolver. Then her voice was still rather strong, ringing, though a bit off -key, but terribly pleasant and healthy. But now her little song sounded so feeble - oh, not that it was doleful (it was some romance) , but it was as if there was something cracked, broken, in her voice, as if the little voice couldn’t cope, as if the song itself were ailing. She was singing under her breath, and suddenly, after rising, the voice broke - such a poor little voice, it broke so pitifully; she cleared her throat and started singing again, ever so softly, you could barely hear he ...

My agitation may be laughable, but no one will ever understand why I had become so agitated! No, I didn't feel sorry for her yet; it was still something altogether different. At the beginning, for the first moments at least, I suddenly felt bewilderment and terrible surprise, terrible and strange, painful and almost vindictive : 'She is singing and in my presence!Has she forgotten about me, is that it?'

Completely shaken, I stayed where I was, then I suddenly rose, took my hat and left, without thinking it through, as it were. At least I didn't know why or where I was going. Lukerya started helping me on with my coat.

'She sings?' I said to Lukerya unintentionally. She didn't understand and looked at me, still not understanding; but I really had been incomprehensible.

'Is this the first time that she's been singing?'

'No, she sometimes sings when you're not here,' Lukerya replied.

I remember everything. I walked down the stairs, went out into the street and set off for nowhere in particular. I walked as far as the corner and began to stare off into the distance. People passed by me, jostled me, but I didn't feel it. I hailed a cab and told him to take me to the Police Bridge, I don't know why. But then I suddenly changed my mind and gave him a twenty-kopeck piece.

'That's for your trouble,' I said, laughing senselessly, but some sort of rapture had suddenly begun to fill my heart.

I turned around and went home, quickening my step. The cracked, poor, broken little note suddenly rang out in my heart again. It took my breath away. The scales were falling, falling from my eyes! If she'd started singing in my presence, then she had forgotten about me - that's what was clear and terrible. My heart sensed this. But rapture shone in my soul and overcame my fear.

Oh, the irony of fate! You see, there had been nothing else and there could not have been anything else in my soul all winter except this very rapture, but where had I myself been all winter long? Had I been there with my soul? I ran up the stairs in a great hurry, I don't know whether I walked in timidly or not. I remember only that the entire floor seemed to be rippling and it was as if I were floating down a river. I walked into the room, she was sitting in the same place, sewing, with her head bent, but no longer singing. She threw me a fleeting and incurious glance, but it wasn't even a glance, merely the usual, indifferent gesture one makes when somebody enters a room.

I walked straight up to her and sat down on a chair right beside her, like a madman. She gave me a quick look, as though she were frightened : I took her by the hand and I don't remember what I said to her, that is, what I wanted to say, because I couldn't even speak properly. My voice kept breaking and wouldn't obey me. And I didn't know what to say, I just kept gasping for breath.

'Let's tal ... you kno ... say something!' I suddenly babbled something stupid-oh, but was I capable of making sense? She flinched again and recoiled, badly frightened, looking at my face, but suddenly - stern surprise appeared in her eyes. Yes, surprise, and stern . She was looking at me wide-eyed. This sternness, this stern surprise came crashing down on me all at once : 'So you still want love? Love?'that surprise seemed to ask suddenly, although she was silent as well. But I could read it all, all of it. My whole being was shaken and I simply fell to the ground at her feet. Yes, I collapsed at her feet. She quickly jumped up, but I restrained her by taking hold of both her hands with extraordinary force.

And I fully understood my despair, oh, I understood! But would you believe it, rapture was seething in my heart so irrepressibly that I thought I would die. I kissed her feet in ecstasy and happiness. Yes, in happiness, immeasurable and infinite, yet understanding nonetheless all my hopeless despair! I wept, said something, but couldn't speak. Her fright and surprise suddenly gave way to some anxious thought, some extreme question, and she looked at me strangely, wildly even-she wanted to understand something quickly, and she smiled. She was terribly ashamed that I was kissing her feet, and she kept moving back, but I would at once kiss the spot on the floor where she had been standing. She saw this and suddenly began to laugh from shame (you know how people laugh from shame) . Hysterics weren't far off, I saw that, her hands quivered - I didn't give it a thought and kept muttering that I loved her, that I wouldn't get up, '...let me kiss your dress ... I'll worship you like this for as long as you live...' I don't know, I don't remember - and suddenly she burst out into sobs and started trembling; a terrible fit of hysteria had set in. I had frightened her.

I carried her over to the bed. When the fit had passed, she sat up on the bed and with a terribly distraught look, seized me by the hands and pleaded with me to calm myself : 'Enough, don't torment yourself, calm yourself!' and she began to weep again. I didn't leave her side all that evening. I kept telling her that I'd take her to Boulogne to bathe in the sea, now, right away, in two weeks, that she had such a cracked little voice, I had heard it earlier that day, that I would close the pawnshop, sell it to Dobronravov, that everything would begin afresh, and the main thing, to Boulogne, to Boulogne! She listened and was still afraid. She was more and more afraid. But that wasn't the main thing for me, but rather that I more and more irrepressibly wanted to lie down again at her feet, and once again, to kiss, to kiss the ground on which her feet stood, and to idolize her and - 'I'll ask nothing more of you, nothing,' I kept repeating every minute. 'Don't answer me anything, don't take any notice of me at all, and only let me look at you from the corner, turn me into your thing, into your little do ... ' She wept.

'But I thought that you were going to leave me like that,' suddenly burst forth from her involuntarily, so involuntarily that perhaps she didn't notice at all how she had said it, and yet - oh, it was the most important, her most fateful word and the most comprehensible for me that evening, and it was as if it had slashed my heart like a knife. It explained everything to me, everything, but as long as she was there beside me, before my eyes, I went on hoping irrepressibly and was terribly happy. Oh, I wore her out terribly that evening and I understood that, but I kept thinking that I would change everything at once. Finally, towards nightfall, she broke down completely; I persuaded her to go to sleep, and she immediately fell sound asleep. I expected delirium, and there was delirium, but it was very mild. I got up during the night every few minutes, and would quietly go in my slippers to look at her. I wrung my hands over her, as I looked at this sick being lying on that pathetic little cot, the iron bedstead that I had bought for her then for three roubles. I got down on my knees but I didn't dare kiss her feet while she was sleeping (against her wishes!) . I would start praying to God, and then jump up again. Lukerya watched me closely and kept coming out of the kitchen. I went to her and told her to go to bed and that tomorrow 'something quite different' would begin.

And I believed that blindly, madly, terribly. Oh, I was surging with rapture, rapture. I couldn't wait for tomorrow. The main thing, I didn't believe in any misfortune, despite the symptoms. My powers of understanding had not yet fully returned, even though the scales had fallen, and for a long, long time would not return - oh, not until today, not until this very day! And how, how could my understanding have returned then : you see, she was still alive then, you see, she was right there before me, and I before her. 'She'll wake up tomorrow, and I'll tell her all this, and she'll see it all.' That was my reasoning then, clear and simple, hence the rapture! The main thing was this trip to Boulogne. For some reason I thought that Boulogne was everything, that there was something final about Boulogne. 'To Boulogne, to Boulogne!...' I waited for morning in a state of madness.

III. I UNDERSTAND ALL TOO WELL

But this was only a few days ago, you see, five days, only five days ago, just last Tuesday! No, no, if only there had been a little more time, if only she had waited just a little bit longer and - and I would have dispelled the darkness! And hadn't she calmed down? The very next day she listened to me with a smile even, despite her confusion. The main thing was that during all this time, all five days, she was either confused or ashamed ... She was also afraid, very afraid. I don't dispute it, I won't deny it, like some madman : there was fear, but then how could she not be afraid? You see, we'd been strangers to each other for so long, we had grown so far apart from one another, and suddenly all thi ... But I didn't pay attention to her fear - something new was shin-ing!... Yes, it's undoubtedly true that I'd made a mistake. And perhaps even many mistakes. And as soon as we woke up the next day, when it was still morning (this was on Wed-nesday), I suddenly made a mistake right away : I suddenly made her my friend. I was in a hurry, much too much of a hurry, but a confession was necessary, essential - and much more than a confession! I didn't even conceal that which I had concealed from myself all my life. I told her straight out that I had done nothing all winter long but be certain of her love. I explained to her that the pawnshop had been merely the degradation of my will and mind, my personal idea of self-flagellation and self-exaltation. I explained to her that I had indeed turned coward that time at the bar, and that it was owing to my character, my touchiness : I was struck by the surroundings, I was struck by the bar; I was struck by how I would end up looking in all this and wouldn't it end up looking stupid? I didn't turn coward on account of the duel, but because it would end up looking stupi ... And then later I didn't want to admit it, and tormented everyone, and tormented her for it as well, and then I married her so that I could torment her on account of it. In general, for the most part I spoke as though I were in a fever. She herself took me by the hands and begged me to stop : 'You're exag-geratin ... you're tormenting yourself', and the tears would begin again, and again there'd almost be a fit of hysteria. She kept pleading with me not to say or remember any of this.

I paid little or no attention to her pleas : spring, Boulogne! There was the sun, there was our new sun, that was all I talked about! I locked up the shop, handed over the busi-ness to Dobronravov. I suddenly suggested to her that we give away everything to the poor, except for the initial 3 , 000 I had received from my godmother, which we would use to travel to Boulogne, and then we'd come back and begin our new working life. And so it was decided, because she didn't say anythin ... she merely smiled. And I believe she smiled more out of a sense of delicacy, so as not to upset me. Of course, I saw that I was a burden to her, don't think that I was so stupid or such an egoist that I didn't see that. I saw everything, everything, right down to the last detail, I saw and knew better than anyone else; my despair was there for all to see!

I told her everything about myself and about her. And about Lukerya. I told her that I had wep ... Oh, I'd change the subject, you see, I was also trying not to remind her of certain things at all. And, you see, she even livened up once or twice, you see, I remember, I remember! Wy do you say that I looked and saw nothing? And if only this had not hap-pened, everything would have been resurrected. You see, it was she who told me the day before yesterday, when the conversation turned to reading and what she had read that winter - you see, it was she who told me and laughed, when she recalled that scene between Gil Blas and the Archbishop of Granada. And what a childish laugh, sweet, just like when she was still my fiancée (an instant! an instant!) ; I was so happy! I was terribly struck, however, by the archbishop : you see, that meant she had found enough peace of mind and happiness to laugh at that masterpiece while she sat there that winter. That means that she had already begun to find herself wholly at peace, that she had already begun to be wholly persuaded that I would leave her like that . ‘ I thought that you were going to leave me like that ’ - that’s what she had said then on Tuesday! Oh, the thought of a ten-year-old girl! And you see, she believed, believed that everything would in fact remain like that : she at her table, I at mine, and that’s how it would be for both of us until we were sixty. And suddenly - here I come forward, her husband, and her husband needs love! Oh, the incompre-hensibility, oh, my blindness!

It was also a mistake to look at her with rapture; I should have exercised restraint, because the rapture frightened her. But you see, I did exercise restraint, I didn’t kiss her feet anymore. Not once did I make a show of the fac ... well, that I was her husband - oh, and it didn’t even cross my mind, I only worshipped her! But you see, I couldn’t be completely silent, I couldn’t say nothing at all, you see! I suddenly told her that I enjoyed her conversation and that I considered her incomparably, incomparably more educated and developed than I. Embarrassed, she blushed bright red and said that I was exaggerating. At this point, unable to contain myself, I foolishly told her what rapture I’d felt when I stood behind the door and listened to her duel, a duel of innocence with that beast, and how I had taken pleasure in her intelligence, her sparkling wit, combined with such childlike simple-heartedness. She seemed to shudder all over, murmured again that I was exaggerating, but suddenly her whole face darkened, she covered it with her hands and burst into sob ... Here I was unable to hold myself back : I again fell down before her, I again started to kiss her feet and again it ended in a fit, just as it had on Tuesday. That was yesterday evening, but the next mornin ...

Next morning?! Madman, but that morning was today, just now, only just now!

Listen and consider carefully : you see, when we met just now (this was after yesterday’s attack) , she even struck me with her calmness, that's how it was! While all night long I had been trembling with fear over what had happened yesterday. But suddenly she comes up to me, stands before me and with her arms folded (just now, just now!), began by telling me that she's a criminal, that she knows this, that the crime has tormented her all winter long, and is tormenting her now ... that she values my magnanimity all too much ... 'I'll be your true wife, I'll respect you ...' Here I jumped up and embraced her like a madman! I kissed her, I kissed her face, her lips, like a husband, for the first time after a long separation. But why did I go out just now, for only two hours ... our foreign passport ... Oh, God! If only I had returned five minutes earlier, just five minutes!...And now there's this crowd at our gate, these eyes fixed on me ... Oh, Lord!
